A bill which so states the plaintiff's rights as thereby to negative all interest on his part, makes a sufficient statement. State Ins. Co. v. Gennett, 2 Tenn. Ch. 82.

The bill must show the parties defendant to be in rerum natura. Metcalf v. Hervey, 1 Ves. 248.

4. The claims should be specifically set forth, so as to show that they are of the same nature and character, and a fit subject for a bill of interpleader, otherwise the bill is demurrable. Story Eq. Pl., § 293.

Hence, where the bill stated that one of the defendants claimed as administrator and also as interested in the estate, but did not state what the interest was, nor how it was obtained, the bill was dismissed. Varrian v. Berrien, 42 N. J. Eq. 1.

A bill which shows a doubtful quessafely recognize either of them.¹ The interpleader must be distinctly asked for, as, also, if the proceeding be in equity, or of that nature, an injunction against actions at law.² The applicant must offer to pay or deliver the subject matter of the claims into court;³ or to dispose of it as the court may direct;⁴ and he must make affidavit that he is not colluding with either of the claimants.⁵

tion between the defendants, about which the plaintiff should not be compelled to act at his peril, states their claims sufficiently. State Ins. Co. v. Gennett, 2 Tenn. Ch. 82.

1. See ante, p. 501, n. 2.

An allegation that the plaintiff "is informed" of a certain claim by one of the defendants, but "is uncertain as to the fact," is fatally defective. State Ins. Co. v. Gennett, 2 Tenn. Ch. 82.

In New York, an allegation of the defendant's doubt as to the rights of the plaintiff and the third party is not indispensable. Tanton v. Groh, 4 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 358.

2. Story Eq. Pl., § 297.

3. In view of this requirement it is perhaps superfluous to state that the property in dispute must be in the possession of the party seeking the interpleader. He must be an actual, not a theoretical, stakeholder.

Where an interpleader is asked for, the better practice is to order the money to be paid into court, but if the defendant has distinctly offered to do so, the court can frame an interpleader without such order. Bechtel v. Sheaffer, 21 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 65.

The fact that the money is not paid into court with a bill of interpleader, nor offered to be paid, is not ground for demurrer, but the court should refuse to allow the plaintiff to proceed until he pays in the money. Blue v. Watson, 59 Miss. 619.

A bill which offers to pay what is due is not bad because the plaintiff brings into court less money than is in fact due. Ketcham v. B. B. Coal Co., 88 Ind. 515.

Where money has been paid into court on the filing of a bill of interpleader, the court must dispose of it, although, as between the defendants in the bill, each is in pari delicto to an extent which would preclude the court from passing upon their rights in a suit instituted by one of them. Gilmore v. Devlin, 4 MacA. (D. C.) 306.

An affidavit by a defendant that the money in controversy is claimed by a person not a party to the suit, and payment into court, form a conclusive admission of all material allegations of the complaint, and the plaintiff is entitled to the amount paid in though he may have suffered a nonsuit or have had a verdict against him or judgment on a verdict in his favor may have been arrested. Johnson v. Maxey, 43 Ala. 521.

If a suit for the same cause of action be pending in another State, the defendant, though admitting his liability, will not be required to make payment into court as a condition of his being exonerated from costs. Barry v. Equit. L. A. Soc., 14 Abb. (N. S.) 385, n.

4. Where land is in controversy, the plaintiff should execute deeds of the same, ready for delivery to either claimant. Where this is not done, and the bill offers to deliver a deed, the court will order the deed to be made, and filed with the court clerk. Farley v. Blood, 30 N. H. 354.

5. Collusion.—Where the defendant had collected certain dividends at the request of his nephew, the claimant, it was held that he had placed himself in the position he then occupied, with a view to his nephew's interest, and the rule for an interpleader was discharged. Belcher v. Smith, 9 Bing. 82; s. c., 2 Moore & S. 184.

So where the defendant had so far identified himself with the claimant's interests as to take an indemnity from him for not delivering the property to the plaintiff, it was held that he must be content with that. Tucker v. Morris, 1 Dow. 639.

But in Thompson v. Wright, L. R., 13 Q. B. D. 632, these cases were held not to apply where the objection came from the party who gave the indemnity, and it seems to have been the opinion of the judges that the act of taking an indemnity would not usually be a collusion.

The Affidavit.—It should be entitled in the original clause. Periente v. Pennell, 7 Scott N. R. 834.

Where there are several plaintiffs,

If any of the defendants fail to interplead, judgment may be entered against them by default.¹ At the hearing it is usual to determine merely whether an interpleader will lie; and if it is granted, to discharge the plaintiff from all liability on his making payment into court, the issue between the defendants being reserved for a later hearing.² If the defendants agree that the bill is properly filed, the same results follow.³ The inquiry as to the rights of the claimants is usually confined to ascertaining which one has the exclusive proprietary interest in or right of possession of the thing in controversy.⁴ Costs are not a matter of right, but rest in the discretion of the court.⁵

the affidavit must be made by all of them. Nelson v. Barker, 2 H. & M. 334.

A bill unaccompanied by such an affidavit is demurrable. Blue v. Watson, 56 Miss. 619.

The affidavit cannot be contradicted after the order to interplead has been made. Fahie v. Lindsey, 8 Oreg. 474.

In Kentucky, the affidavit is held to take the place of the formal pleading required in equity. It should state absence of collusion and readiness to pay the money as the court may direct. Starling v. Brown, 7 Bush. (Ky.) 164.

1. Such default amounts to a confession that he has no claim, and prevents the plaintiff from disputing the claim of the other party. Cogswell v. Armstrong, 77 Ill. 139.

So at law, if the claimant fail to propound his claim, the plaintiff can take the money out of court. Johnson v. Maxey, 43 Ala. 521.

2. A decree that the bill is properly filed is the only decree that the plaintiff is interested in obtaining. Atkinson v. Manks, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 691.

A decree in an interpleader suit, appointing a trustee to receive a fund, and referring the claims upon such fund to an auditor for determination, is necessarily an interlocutory decree subject to revision and alteration, and any phraseology which tends to give it the effect of a final decree settling the rights of the parties is to be rejected. Owings v. Rhodes, 65 Md. 408.

The whole controversy may, however, be submitted to one trial, including as well the issue between the plaintiff and defendants as those between the several defendants. Cullen v. Dawson, 24 Minn. 66.

If sufficient appear on the pleadings to decide the case, the court will do so; otherwise it will frame an issue or order a reference to a master. Farley v. Blood, 30 N. H. 354.

The bill is ripe for hearing when the facts are found or agreed upon. If they are not, the court will frame a hearing or find the facts at its own discretion. Goddard v. Leech, Wright (Ohio) 476.

After payment has been made into court, and the defendants have interpleaded, the plaintiff cannot further interfere in the case. St. L. L. I. Co. v. Alliance etc. L. I. Co., 23 Minn. 7.

But until he has fully rendered the thing or duty required of him, he continues a substantial and necessary party. George v. Pilcher, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 299.

3. State Ins. Co. v. Gennett, 2 Tenn. Ch. 100.

Where one defendant demurs and the other confesses, this is not a relinquishment of the latter's right in favor of the demurrant. The court, on sustaining the bill, should order payment into court, and the framing of an issue between the defendants. First Nat. Bk. v. W. Riv. R. Co., 46 Vt. 643.

4. But where the defendants consent to interplead, and do not object to a decree to that effect, the court, having the fund under its control, may, at the final hearing, fasten upon it, in whole or in part, any equitable lien or trust which one of the parties may have established, though the proprietary legal title is in the other. The court should so shape its decree and distribute the fund as to do complete equity between the parties. Whitney v. Cowan, 55 Miss. 626.

5. Costs will not be allowed the plaintiff if the bill be filed unnecessarily. Bedell v. Hoffman, 2 Pai. (N. Y.) 199.

It is fair that the plaintiff should have his costs, because he has no interest in the issue; and also that the winning party in the interpleader should have costs from the loser. It is otherwise with a bill in the nature of an interpleader. Laing v. Zeden, L. R., 9 Ch. App. 736.

2. In Sheriff's Interpleader.—To warrant the application, an actual claim must have been made,¹ as the mere existence of a lien is insufficient.² The sheriff's application should be accompanied with a schedule of the goods, which schedule is amendable.³ The sheriff must act promptly in applying for the rule.⁴ If, on the return of the rule, either or both of the parties fail to appear, the court will make such order as the case requires.⁵ It is within the court's discretion to award or refuse an issue.⁶ When the issue is framed, and the claimant's bond has been approved, the sheriff gives him possession,⁷ but if he has already sold the goods, the sheriff will be directed to pay the proceeds into court.⁸ A verdict and judgment on the issue are final and conclusive on the parties and their privies as to the questions decided.⁹

A sheriff's interpleader is no exception to this rule. Haines v. Heppe, 20 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 502. See also Pennypacker's App., 57 Pa. 114.

1. Bently v. Hook, 2 Dow. 339.

An action of trespass against the sheriff is a sufficient claim. (Pa.) 1 Tr. & Ha. Prac., § 1137.

If the claim be made by affidavit, it need not be sworn to by the claimant himself. Webster v. Delafield, 7 C. B. 187.

The claimant should aver that he had title at the time of the delivery of the execution to the sheriff. Lafferty v. Cormick, 1 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 267.

But he need not set forth the source of his title. Kurtz v. Malony, 1 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 84.

If the defendant in an execution for a personal debt, claims to hold the goods solely as trustee, an interpleader will be granted. Fenwick v. Laycock, 2 A. & E. N. S. 108.

If the plaintiff abandon his process in favor of the claimant, this does not affect the sheriff's rights. Baynton v. Harvey, 3 Dow. P. C. 344.

2. The sheriff must sell subject to the claimant's rights, if any. Brice v. West End P. R. Co., 4 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 139.

A claim that the goods are partnership property is treated in the same way. Holmes v. Mentze, 4 A. & E. 127.

3. 1 Tr. & Ha. Prac., § 1137.

4. Mutton v. Young, 4 C. B. 371.

The sheriff need not wait till an action has been brought against him. Green v. Brown, 3 Dow. P. C. 337.

The fact that the goods are in the possession of a stranger is no ground for delay. Allen v. Gibbon, 2 Dow. P. C. 292.

Nor need the sheriff apply first to the different parties for an indemnity first. Crossly v. Ebers, 1 Har. & W. 216.

But if he has already exercised a discretion his application comes too late. Crump v. Day, 4 C. B. 760.

5. If the plaintiff fail to appear, the court will order the sheriff to withdraw from the possession of the goods, and also that the plaintiff take no proceedings against the sheriff in respect of the execution. Doble v. Cummins, 7 A. & E. 580.

If the claimant abandons, the sheriff may still show that the goods belong to a third person who has not joined issue under the interpleader. 1 Tr. & Ha. Prac., § 1139.

If neither party appear, the sheriff will be ordered to sell enough of the goods to satisfy his charges, and to abandon the rest. Eveleigh v. Salisbury, 3 Bing. N. C. 298.

6. And a discharge of the rule, and order on the sheriff to proceed and sell, do not prejudice the claimant's rights. Bain v. Funk, 61 Pa. St. 185; Hanbest v. Larzelere, 15 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 190.

7. Darby v. Waterlow, L. R., 3 C. P. 453. But they are still considered in the custody of the law, and, pending the issue, are not subject to another execution. 1 Tr. & Ha. Prac., § 1143.

8. Barker v. Dynes, 1 Dow. 160.

9. And if the issue be decided against the claimant, the sheriff will

6. Bill in the Nature of a Bill of Interpleader.—Equity recognizes many cases where a party in interest is entitled to seek relief for himself by a bill, in the nature of a bill of interpleader, to ascertain and establish his own rights, where there are other and conflicting rights between third persons.¹

INTERPOSE.—To present or put forward as an obstruction or interruption.²

proceed to sell the goods, even if in the hands of a vendee of the claimant. Bain v. Lyle, 68 Pa. 60.

1. Story Eq. Pl., § 297 b; Story Eq. Jur., § 824; Schneider v. Seibert, 50 Ill. 284; Heath v. Hurless, 73 Ill. 323; Stevens v. Warren, 101 Mass. 564.

E. g., if a plaintiff be entitled to equitable relief against the owner of property, the legal title to which is in dispute between two or more persons, he may file a bill in the nature of a bill of interpleader. M. & H. R. Co. v. Clute, 4 Pa. (N. Y.) 384.

So where one is assessed at different amounts for the same personal property by the assessors of different taxing districts. Thompson v. Ebbets, Hop. (N. Y.) 272.

So where a purchaser under contract has entered into actual possession, and made improvements, and it is necessary to settle the right to the unpaid purchase money as between the vendor and his assignee, and creditors seeking to avoid the assignee's title. Parks v. Jackson, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 442, 450.

So in the case of personality. Darden v. Burns, 6 Ala. 362.

So where a mortgagor wishes to redeem, and the title to the mortgage money is claimed by different parties. Mitchell v. Hayne, 2 S. & S. 63; Bedell v. Hoffman, 2 Pa. (N. Y.) 199.

So where a reward has been offered for money stolen, proportionate to the amount recovered, or for evidence to secure a conviction, and there are several claimants, some of whom have brought suit. City Bk. v. Bangs, 2 Pa. (N. Y.) 570; Fargo v. Arthur, 43 How. (N. Y.) 193.

In an action to have an instrument, alleged to have been obtained from the plaintiff by fraud, delivered up and cancelled, it appeared that two persons claimed the instrument by independent assignments, and had begun suits upon it against the plaintiff. It was held that, the fraud being proved, he should be relieved from the obligation in a suit against both plaintiffs. McHenry v. Hazard, 45 N. Y. 580.

Where the purchaser of a farm, upon which there was an attachment in favor of a creditor of a former owner, gave the vendor a note for part of the purchase money, the note to be void in case the attachment should be valid, and the attaching creditor obtained judgment and levied execution on the land, the holder of the note was held entitled to file a bill in equity against the maker and the attaching creditor, to compel them to effect a determination of their respective rights. Hodges v. Griggs, 17 Vt. 280.

The relief sought by such a bill must be strictly equitable relief. Killian v. Ebbinghaus, 110 U. S. 568, reversing 1 Mack. (D. C.) 247; M. & H. R. Co. v. Clute, 4 Pa. (N. Y.) 384; Parks v. Jackson, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 442; McHenry v. Hazard, 45 N. Y. 580.

And will not be given where the plaintiff has failed to fulfil his legal obligations in the matter. Dohnert's App., 64 Pa. St. 311.

Authorities.—All standard treatises on equity; English authority—Cabane on Interpleader.

2. In holding that by the New York statute of 1850, ch. 172, contracts of corporations whereby they agree to pay more than seven per cent. upon money borrowed are legal and binding upon them, and that therefore the guarantors of such contracts are liable upon their contracts of guaranty. DAVIS, J., said: "In my judgment these cases turn altogether upon the construction to be given to that act, and I refrain, therefore, from the consideration of any other proposition. The act of 1850 is entitled, 'An act to prohibit corporations from interposing the defence of usury in any action. The first section, which is the only one necessary to be referred to in these cases, is in these words: '§ 1. No corporation shall' hereafter interpose the defence of usury in any action.' (Sess. Laws, 1850, ch. 172, p. 234.) Plain as the language of this section may appear to be, it is on its face suggestive of several constructions. In a strictly

INTERPRETATION.—(See also ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS; AMBIGUITY; AUTHORITY; BILLS OF LADING; BONDS; BY-LAWS; CODICILS; CONFLICT OF LAWS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; CONTRACTS; COVENANTS; DEEDS; INTENT; INTERPRETER; LAW; MORTGAGES; PENALTIES; STATUTES; TRUSTS; WILLS; WORDS; WRITTEN INSTRUMENTS.)

1. Definition, 507.
2. Rules of Evidence Govern in Determining What Is the Matter to be Interpreted, 508.
3. Effect of Admissibility of Evidence Outside of Instrument Upon Interpretation, 509.
Some Important Rules, 4-10.
4. The Law of the Land to be Construed with Every Matter, 510.
5. The Intention of Parties, if Legal, Governs, 511.
6. The Condition of Parties and Surrounding Circumstances to be Considered, 512.
7. The Whole Writing Should be Considered in Determining the Meaning of Any or of All Its Parts, 514.
8. Words Are to be Understood in Their Literal Meanings, 515. [516.
9. Written Words Control Printed,
10. Words Construed Most Strongly Against the Party Using Them, 517.
11. The Province of Court and Jury in Duty of Interpretation, 518.
12. The Practical Interpretation Put Upon an Instrument by the Parties Themselves, Entitled to Great Weight in Case of Doubt, 518.
13. The Law of Domicil, Place of Contract, and Place of Performance, 520.
14. Punctuation as a Means of Interpretation, 521.
15. The Rules of Interpretation for Contracts, Wills and Statutes Almost Identical—Some Points of Difference, 522.

1. Definition.—Interpretation is the act of making intelligible what was before not understood, ambiguous, or not obvious. It is the method by which the meaning of language is ascertained.¹

narrow sense, to interpose a defence in an action is to plead it or to set it up by answer. In that sense the section would be construed simply to debar a corporation from thereafter pleading usury as a defence, thus reducing it to a rule of pleading, but operating effectively to prevent proof of usury under the settled rule which excludes the evidence whenever the fact is not pleaded. In that view it would apply only to pleas or answers thereafter to be interposed, and not to issues already joined. But the courts have not hesitated to reject this construction, and to hold that to interpose the defence of usury within the meaning of the act was to set it up or insist upon it in any manner at any stage of the action; and so have rejected it as a defence on the hearing of appeals where it had long before been pleaded, and its effect on the case depended upon the application of the law to conceded facts. It was thus held to be retrospective; and to prohibit any step subsequently to its passage, by a corporation defendant, which amounted to an assertion of usury in defence of its obligations." Rosa v. Butterfield, 33 N. Y. 665.

1. There is no distinction in law between the meaning of the term "interpretation" and the term "construction." Jones on the Construction of Commercial and Trade Contracts, p. 3: "Throughout the present volume interpretation and construction are used as synonymous words."

Abbott in his law dictionary, under "interpret," says: "The words 'interpretation' and 'construction' are used interchangeably by many law writers, but some authorities warrant a distinction."

Dr. Lieber (Leg & Pol. Hermen) defines interpretation as the art of finding out the true sense of any form of words; that is, the sense which their author intended. Professor Parsons (2 Contr. 491, n. (a)) says that interpretation properly precedes construction, but it does not go beyond the written text "

It is evident, therefore, that the sub-

2. Rules of evidence govern in determining what is the matter to be interpreted. The matter to be interpreted must either be in writing or not in writing. If it is not in writing and there is a dispute as to its terms, testimony must be adduced to show what the true terms of the contract are. In adducing this testimony, the rules of evidence about capacity, relevancy, hearsay, best evidence, etc., are applied.¹ If the matter is in writing, it must be proved to be the writing in question. The identity of the parties is sometimes a necessary matter to be proved. If a letter or word is indistinct, testimony as to handwriting by those familiar with it and by experts is competent.² In exceptional cases, ject of interpretation runs through every branch of the law, and that it cannot well be treated of under one head. Reference should be made to the article on the subject about which particular information is desired.

Kent says: "The rules which have been established for the better interpretation of contracts are the conclusions of good sense and sound logic applied to the agreement of the parties. Their object is to ascertain with precision the mutual understanding of the contract in a given case." Kent's Com., vol. 2, p. 553.

Jones on the Construction of Commercial and Trade Contracts, p. 6: "A large portion of the agreements which come before the courts for construction are ambiguous in their meaning, because of the nature of language. The uncertainty, inexactness and ambiguity inherent in words themselves, the foresight and discrimination necessary in order to combine them so that the language employed will clearly express the intention which the parties desire to disclose, the difficulties which come from the ignorance of men, the carelessness with which they use language, and the complexity of the agreements which they attempt to embody in words, all make it evident that the language alone will not always disclose the will of the parties. In such case the aim of construction is to obtain the real sense in which the words were used, and the effort to do so is made in every way which the law deems advisable, considering always the good of the many."

"With the view of clearly understanding the subject under discussion, it is essential to distinguish between mere legal presumptions and rules of construction; because while the former may be rebutted, and if rebutted, supported also, by parol testimony, no evidence can be received on either side, if the court by construction can arrive at a conclusion respecting the meaning of the instrument. Yet, important as it is to mark this distinction, it is by no means easy on all occasions to do so; and the difficulty is increased by the loose manner in which the word "presumption" has occasionally been used. . . . Among the rules of construction which have been occasionally mistaken for legal presumptions may be mentioned the one now clearly established, which awards to a stranger legatee as many legacies as are bequeathed to him by separate instruments, unless the instruments themselves contain intrinsic evidence that the legacies were not intended to be cumulative, or unless the double coincidence of the same amounts and the same expressed motives appearing in each instrument, induces the court to presume that repetition, and not accumulation, was intended. Extrinsic evidence cannot be received to impugn this rule; for to admit it would be to construe a writing by parol evidence." Taylor on Evidence, § 1113; 2 Parsons on Contr., n. (a), p. *491; Lee v. Bain, 4 Hare 216.

1. "Evidence," says Greenleaf, "includes all the means by which any alleged matter of fact, the truth of which is submitted to investigation, is established or disproved." Greenleaf on Evidence, § 1.

"For the proof of a contract made by word of mouth is a part of the general law of evidence." Anson on Contracts, p. 231.

2. In regard to the proof of the formal execution of deeds, bills of exchange, and other written documents, it was formerly the right of the adverse party to require precise proof of all signatures and documents making part of the chain proof is allowed of writings lost or destroyed.¹ If there is an ambiguity in the writing apparent or patent on the face of the instrument, parol evidence is inadmissible to show what was the true intention.² Evidence explaining what is written is admissible, but not to show what was intended to have been written.³ (See AMBIGUITY.)

3. Effect of Admissibility of evidence outside of instrument, upon interpretation. It is an elementary rule of our law that oral evidence shall not be given to add to, subtract from, alter or vary any description of written contract.⁴

of title in the party producing them. But the great and unnecessary expense of this course, as well as the inconvenience and delay which it occasioned, have led to the adoption of salutary rules restricting the exercise of the right to cases where the genuineness of the instrument is actually in controversy, being either put in issue by the pleadings or by actual notice given pursuant to the rules of the court. 2 Greenleaf on Evidence, § 16.

Where a signature is disputed and another signature is offered in proof as a standard, the court should first find, as a fact, that the latter is genuine, and then submit it to the jury in comparison with the one in contention. Rowell v. Fuller, 59 Vt. [1887] 688.

Upon the trial of an issue as to the genuineness of a certain handwriting, other instruments admitted to be genuine, but not otherwise relevant, may be received in evidence for the purpose of comparison. Morrison v. Porter, 35 Minn. 425 [1887]; McKay et al. v. Lasher, 42 Hun [1886] N. Y. 272.

"Opinions are to be given by experts as well on the question of handwriting as on any other questions. Persons, other than experts, are to testify to facts not opinions. If one, who was not an expert, were permitted to give his opinion as to genuineness of handwriting, based merely on the comparison, at the trial, of the disputed writing with one proved to be genuine, he would be usurping the duty of the jury." See articles 51 and 52, title EVIDENCE, p. 81, vol. 7, of this work; title HANDWRITING, vol. 9.

1. To let in oral evidence of the contents of a lost paper, it is sufficient if the witness can state the substance of its contents. Camden v. Belgrade, 78 Me. [1886] 204.

A mere search for a lost paper is not enough to render secondary evidence of its contents admissible. The search must be diligent, and must be at every place where the paper would be likely to be found. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Riley, 80 Ala. [1886] 314.

A search for a letter received by a firm since dissolved, which did not include an inquiry of the principal member of the firm, was held insufficient to admit secondary evidence of its contents. Hill v. Aultman, 68 Iowa 630 [1886].

Plaintiff testified that he received a letter, and sent it to a friend in another State, and that all that he knew about it afterwards was that his friend wrote that he had mislaid the letter and could not find it. It was held that the plaintiff might testify to the contents of the letter. Stevens v. Miles, 142 Mass. 571 [1886]. (See § 16). See title, LOST INSTRUMENTS.

2. In Vandevort v. Dewey, 42 Hun N. Y. [1886], at p. 271, it was said: "The defect in the lease is in the omission to insert in the blank the amount that was to be paid to the defendant to terminate the lease at the decease of Dewey. This defect is a patent and not a latent ambiguity, and consequently cannot be corrected by parol evidence. 2 Pars. on Cont., 557, 563; The Blossburg & Corning R. Co. v. The Tioga R. Co., 1 Keyes (N. Y.) 486." See AMBIGUITY; EVIDENCE.

3. Where, in a deed, a name is sometimes written Eliza, and sometimes Elizabeth, parol evidence is admissible to show that one person only was meant. Hanrick v. Patrick, 119 U. S. 156.

So, in a bill of sale where property was described as the "Wolfe houses," it was held that parol evidence was admissible on the question of whether a certain barn was embraced in the description. Claffey v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 68 Cal. 169 (1887). See article on EVIDENCE, vol. 7 of this work, for full discussion. Also Greenleaf on Evidence; Taylor on Evidence.

4. Hubbard v. Marshall, 50 Wis. 322.

But it is also a well established rule, that where all the terms have not been put into writing, evidence of supplementary terms is then admissible, not to vary but to complete the writing.¹

Evidence of a verbal agreement collateral to the written undertaking is admissible if not contrary to the meaning of the writing.

The effect, therefore, of the admission of evidence outside the instrument is to enlarge to that extent the matter to be interpreted.

4. The law of the land to be construed with every matter. Everybody is presumed to know the law; hence all writings and all contracts must be interpreted in accordance with it.² No writing or contract of any description can be valid if contrary to good morals or public policy.³ Where public policy is opposed

"If the parties have reduced their contract, and the whole of it, to writing, and the instrument is free from ambiguity or uncertainty, the courts have universally applied the rule and excluded parole testimony to vary the terms of the contract."

Whitford v. Laidler, 94 N. Y. 145. "Upon the interpretation of contracts the language of the instrument itself must determine, unless some ambiguity appears upon its face, or unless phrases of doubtful meaning are employed therein, requiring explanation, in which case resort may be had to parole evidence and proof of the attendant circumstances to discover the real meaning and intent of the parties."

See also Kendell v. Harriman, 75 Me. 497; Gross v. Ellison, 136 Mass. 503; Brunhild v. Freeman, 77 N. Car. 128; Taft v. Schwab, 80 Ill. 289; MacLeod v. Skiles, 81 Mo. 595; Merriam v. Pine City Lumber Co., 23 Minn. 314.

In Gilbert v. Moline Plough Co., 119 U. S. (1886), at p. 493, the court said: "The court held that the letter of credit was complete within itself and that the defendants could not import into it by parole any additional agreement as to the time and character of the credit to be given to Gillman, and instructed the jury to that effect. This is the principal error relied upon to reverse the judgment, which we think is no error."

1. Brown v. Bowen, 90 Mo. (1886) 189. "The rule which prohibits the introduction of parole contemporaneous evidence does not apply when the original contract was verbal and entire, and a part only was reduced to writing. 1 Greenl. Ev., § 284a; Rollins v. Claybrook, 22 Md. 405; Moss v. Green, 41 Mo. 389. Nor where a district collateral contemporaneous agreement, independent of and not varying the written agreement, is offered in evidence, though it relates to the same subject matter. Bonney v. Morrill, 57 Me. 368; Bashor v. Forbes, 36 Md. 154.

Nor does the prohibitory rule apply when a complete contract in writing is entered into, which is subsequently varied by a parole agreement. Bunce v. Beck, 43 Mo. 266. See articles on EVIDENCE and WRITTEN INSTRUMENTS in this work.

2. Balto. & Susq. R. R. Co. v. Faunce, 6 Gill (Md.) at p. 79: "The law properly and consistently withholds its aid when parties ask to enforce an illegal contract—all are presumed to know the law, and if a contract be made to violate it, whether it be a contract to perpetrate a crime malum in se, such as murder or arson, or to violate a municipal enactment, such as the act prohibiting the issue of small notes, and a remedy is sought either to enforce such contract or to obtain compensation for a breach of it, the parties are properly told the law will neither assist you to coerce another to violate its provisions nor suffer you to recover against another for refusing to do so."

3. Anything which is in violation of positive statutes, or anything immoral, or which will retard progress, or may be a bad precedent, is against public policy. The following examples illustrate it, but do not, even in a small degree, touch upon all matters which have been held to be against public policy.

A contract to waive all damages for to private rights, the latter must yield; but a very plain case is necessary to justify holding the matter to be against public policy. If there are two interpretations of the same thing, the one legal and the other illegal, the legal is to be preferred.¹ It is the law in force at the time the writing was entered into and not later enactments, which governs in interpretation.²

5. The intention of the parties, if legal, governs. If the language of the instrument is free from doubt, there is no need to apply the rules of interpretation.³ Every paper is written to accomplish a purpose; if that purpose is expressed clumsily, it is the task of interpretation to discover and unravel it. "Greater regard is to be had to the clear intention of the parties than to any particular words which they may have used in the expression of their intent." Ford vs. Beech, 11 Q. B. 866.⁴

injuries resulting from criminal negligence was, in Cook v. Western & Atlantic R. R. Co., 72 Ga. 48 (1885), held void as against public policy.

Where, in a contract for the sale of wheat, it is the mutual understanding and intention of the parties that the transaction shall be closed by a settlement of differences in the value of the article sold according to the fluctuations of the market, and not by its delivery, such contract is one of wager, and is void as being against public policy. Cockrell v. Thompson, 85 Mo. 510 (1885). On same subject see McCormick v. Nichols, 19 Ill. App. 334; Lyons Bank v. Oskaloosa Packing Co., 66 Iowa 41; Stewart v. Schall, 65 Md. 289; Beadles v. Ownby, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 424.

A secret partnership agreement to stifle or diminish competitive bidding on public works is void. Hunter v. Pfeiffer, 108 Ind. 197 (1885).

An agreement by one rival candidate for a public office to pay to the other, in case of his own election, one-half the net profits of the office for the term is against public policy, and will not be enforced. Glover v. Taylor, 38 La. An. 634. See CONTRACTS in restraint of trade, etc.; GAMBLING CONTRACTS, vol. 8 hereof; ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9.

1. In Clay v. Allen, 63 Miss. 426, it was said that where it is doubtful whether a contract for the delivery of cotton was a gambling contract in futures or a legal contract, the presumption is in favor of its legality. See 2 Parsons' Contracts, p. 500.

2. In Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall., U. S., (1872) 610, in discussing the provision of the constitution prohibiting legislation impairing the obligation of contracts, the Supreme Court said: "The legal remedies for the enforcement of a contract, which belong to it at the time and place where it is made, are a part of its obligation. A State may change them, provided the change involves no impairment of a substantial right. If the . . . act fall within the category last mentioned it is to that extent utterly void." See also Caldwell v. Carrington, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 86; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 175, 206; The Miantinomi, 3 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 46; O'Kelly v. Williams, 84 N. Car. 281; Gilliland v. Phillips, 1 S. Car. 152. In Lessley v. Phipps, 49 Miss. 790, there is a very able opinion reviewing a great many cases on the subject.

For instances in which the general law has been deemed to form part of a contract, etc., see State v. Allis, 18 Ark. 269; Webster v. Rees, 23 Iowa 269; Rogers v. Allen, 47 N. H. 529; Smith v. Elliott, 39 Tex. 201.

3. "Technical rules of construction are not to be resorted to where the meaning of the parties is obvious." Noyes v. Nichols, 28 Vt. 159.

4. "The intention of the parties is to prevail, if not incompatible with some rule or maxim of law; this is considered as the polar star in expounding." Howard v. Rogers, 4 H. & J. (Md.) 278, 281; Church v. Hulbart, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 187; Bradley v. Steam Packet Co., 13 Pet. (U. S.) 89; Mauran v. Bullus, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 528.

In Field v. Leiter, 118 Ill. (1886) 17, 26, it is observed: "There are a few rules of construction commonly ob-

The courts will not make an agreement for the parties, but will ascertain what their agreement was, if not by its general purport, then by the literal meaning of its words. It is the common intention of the parties, and not that of either individually, which is to be ascertained.¹ Great regard must be given to the objects which the writing was to accomplish.² When the language of a writing is ambiguous, the practical interpretation put upon it by the parties is entitled to great, if not controlling, influence.³

6. The condition of the parties and surrounding circumstances to be considered. He who interprets should as far as possible put himself in the position of the parties at the time the writing was executed.⁴ This is only another way of saying that the intention served in construing all written instruments, whether specialties, simple contracts or wills. One is, it is the duty of the court, where it is practicable to do so, to discover and give effect to the intention of the parties so that performance of the contract or other instrument may be enforced according to the sense in which it was mutually understood at the time it was made, and greater regard is to be had to the clear intent, when ascertained, than to any particular words which may have been used in the expression of that intent." See also Whitehurst v. Boyd, 8 Ala. 375; Steele v. Branch, 40 Cal. 3; Brown v. Slater, 16 Conn. 192; People v. Gosper, 3 Neb. 285; Den v. Camp, 19 N. J. L. 148.

1. Brunhild v. Freeman, 77 N. Car. (1878) 128, 130. "The defendant chiefly relied upon his honor's refusal to give the following charge: 'That the question was not what the plaintiff thought, but what the defendant thought, and if the defendant did not intend to assume the payment of the $400 save upon a delivery to him of the eight notes, the plaintiff could not recover.' His honor very properly refused to so charge, but did charge that it was not what either thought but what both agreed." Briggs v. Vanderbilt, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 222; Rogers v. Broadnax, 27 Tex. 238.

2. Robinson v. Fiske, 25 Me. 401, 405. "Every contract must have an interpretation governed in some measure by the subject matter to which it relates; and at the same time with reference to any known usage connected therewith. If a surveyor be hired to survey a lot of boards, it is expected he will do something more than merely ascertain the number of feet each board may contain. He would be expected to ascertain whether they were of one class or another, whether they were clear, refuse or merchantable. . . . This results from the nature of the employment, and is in accordance with a well known usage." Strong v. Gregory, 19 Ala. 146; Conwell v. Pumphrey, 9 Ind. 135; Springstreen v. Sawson, 32 N. Y. 703; Lacy v. Green, 84 Pa. St. 514.

3. In Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 50, 54, MR. JUSTICE NELSON said: "In cases where the language used by the parties to the contract is indefinite or ambiguous, and hence of doubtful construction, the practical interpretation of the parties themselves is entitled to great, if not controlling, influence. The interest of each generally leads him to a construction most favorable to himself, and when the difference has become serious and beyond amicable adjustment, it can be settled only by the arbitrament of the law. But in an executory contract, and where its execution necessarily involves a practical construction, if the minds of both parties concur, there can be no great danger in the adoption of it by the court as the true one." Mathews v. Danahy, 26 Mo. App. 460; Butler v. Moses, 43 Ohio St. 166; Fogg v. Fire Ins. Co., 10 Cush (Mass.) 337; Lyles v. Leshner (Ind.), 7 W. Rep. 51 (1887).

But where the meaning of the instrument is clear, and the parties have put an erroneous construction upon it, such conduct does not control the interpretation. Citizens' Fire Ins. Co. v. Doll, 35 Md. 89.

4. Balto. & Ohio R. v. Brydon, 65 Md. 198, 215 (1885). "We cannot form a just opinion of the rights of the parties under this contract, unless we take a view of the circumstances under which it was made. We must consider of the parties should govern. Regard must be given to the occasion which gave rise to it, the relative position of the parties, and their obvious designs as to the object to be accomplished. But if the meaning and intention of the parties cannot be ascertained from the language of the instrument when thus illustrated, it is void for uncertainty.¹ Where there are two interpretations, that one will be followed which is consistent with the conduct of all the parties.² In all cases attention must be given to the subject matter in the light of contemporaneous facts and circumstances.³

7. The whole writing should be considered in determining the meaning of any or of all its parts. This is evidently a fundamental rule of interpretation, and the mere statement of it should be sufficient to convince all of its truth and great importance.⁴

the subject matter of the agreement and the knowledge of it which the parties possessed; the objects which they sought to accomplish and the inducements which they had for dealing with each other as they did. 'Courts, in the construction of contracts, look to the language employed, the subject matter, and the surrounding circumstances. They are never shut out from the same light which the parties enjoyed when the contract was executed, and in that view they are entitled to place themselves in the same situation as the parties who made the contract, so as to view the circumstances as they viewed them, and so as to judge of the meaning of the words and of the correct application of the language to the things described.' Nash v. Towne, 5 Wall. 683."

Pratt v. Canton Cotton Co., 51 Miss. 470; Lacy v. Green, 84 Pa. St. 514; Pollard v. Maddox, 28 Ala. 321; Robinson v. Stow, 39 Ill. 568; Karmuller v. Krotz, 18 Iowa 352; Sumner v. Williams, 8 Mass. 214; Dodge v. Gardiner, 31 N. Y. 239.

1. In Brown v. Slater, 16 Conn. 192, at 196, it is said: "If by this is only meant that parol evidence of intention is not to be given to explain a contract ambiguous on its face, it is correct." Fruin v. Crystal R. R. (Mo.), 4 West. Rep. (1886) 606, 608.

"Surrounding circumstances are to be considered only when the meaning of the instrument is affected with uncertainty. Kimball v. Brawner, 47 Mo. 399. When the terms are clear and unambiguous, the party can relieve himself of the liability they impose by proving fraud or mistake, or that by custom they were used in these contracts in a sense different from their ordinary import. . . . It was the duty of the court to construe the contract in this instance by its terms, there being no testimony tending to prove that the words 'solid rock' were used in any other than their plain and popular sense."

2. "In order to arrive at the intention of parties to a written instrument, the court must view it by the light of surrounding circumstances, and if the conduct of all the parties is consistent with one construction of the agreement and wholly inconsistent with another, the former must be preferred, even though the latter is the more natural." Price v. Evans, 26 Mo. 30.

3. Phelps v. Bostwick, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 314, 317. "Whether the defendant was a mere depositary of the $200 specified in his receipt, or had an interest in the money, was a question of fact upon the true construction of the receipt, in view of the extrinsic circumstances existing at the time it was given. Such facts are always admissible in evidence, not to contradict the instrument, but to aid in its interpretation. Contracts must always be construed in reference to the subject matter to which they relate, and in the light of the contemporaneous facts and circumstances."

4. Jones on Construction of Commercial and Trade Contracts, § 210. "It does not, however, need argument to sustain it, for to disregard certain portions of a contract and to exclusively follow others when the object to be attained is the discovery of the intent of the parties to the entire contract, would be apparent folly."

Smith on Contracts, p. 542. "In the first place, it is the most important of all the rules of construction that the whole of the agreement is to be consid-

As one sentence may vary the meaning of another sentence, so the true meaning of a paragraph may depend upon the proper interpretation of another paragraph. The intentions of the writer have not been expressed until he has entirely finished, hence to interpret those intentions reference must be had to the whole writing. Agreements made at the same time between the same parties and in relation to the same subject will be held to constitute but one contract, though contained in several instruments.¹ Where a reference is made to another paper, and it is clear that that paper was considered by them at the time of contracting and was an inducement for that act, that paper will become a part of the contract.²

ered. This is so reasonable and clear that no explanation is required of it, for obviously it cannot be the intention of the parties to an agreement with stipulations or qualifications, that some of them should be altogether disregarded and a part of the agreement magnified into an equality with the whole; but, on the contrary, such meaning is to be given to particular parts as will, without violence to the words, be consistent with all the rest, and with the evident object and intention of the contracting parties."

Parsons on Contracts, vol. 2, p. 502. "The same parties make all the contract and may be supposed to have had the same purpose and object in view in all of it, and if this purpose is more clear and certain in some parts than in others, those which are obscure may be illustrated by the light of others." Stewart v. Lang, 37 Pa. St. 201; Rose v. Roberts, 9 Minn. 119; Varmin v. Thurston, 17 Md. 470, 496. See also Goosey v. Goosey, 48 Miss. 210; Salmon Mfg. Co. v. Portsmouth Co., 46 N. H. 249.

1. Gaffney v. Hicks, 131 Mass. 124. "A conveyed to B by deed certain land subject to two mortgages, then overdue, both of which mortgages, and the notes secured thereby and interest thereon, the said grantee by the acceptance of this deed assumes and agrees to pay and save one harmless therefrom, the same forming a part of the consideration." Contemporaneously with the execution of this deed, B agreed in writing, under seal with A, to save A harmless from certain promissory notes, amounting to a certain sum, and, upon payment of that sum by A at any time within one year, to reconvey to A the land in question free from all encumbrances, except the two mortgages named in the deed from A to B. During the year, the holder of the second mortgage foreclosed the mortgage and sold the land for a sum insufficient to pay that mortgage. Held, in an action by A against B for the balance due on the second mortgage, that the deed and the agreement to reconvey, taken together, constituted a third mortgage on the land, from which A was entitled to redeem upon the payment to B of the amount secured thereby, and that the action could not be maintained." See also Wilson v. Randall, 67 N. Y. 338; Livingston v. Story, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 386; Galena R. R. v. Barrett, 95 Ill. 467; Ganimon v. Freeman, 31 Me. 243; Cummings v. Antes, 19 Pa. St. 257; Kenyon v. Nichols, 1 R. I. 411; Reed v. Field, 15 Vt. 672; Casey v. Holmes, 10 Ala. 776; Odiorne v. Sargent, 6 N. H. 401.

2. William Edwards v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 74 Ill. 84, at 86. "The policy refers to the application for a 'more particular description' of the property insured and by apt words makes it a part of this contract of insurance. The application having thus been made a 'part of the policy,' the two instruments must be construed together." See also Wilson v. Randall, 67 N. Y. 338; Smith v. Turpin, 22 Ohio St. 478.

From the fact that two instruments were executed by the same parties on the same day, it does not necessarily follow that they were both executed at the same time, and were a part of the same transaction. Mann v. Witteck, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 388.

In Jones, § 12: "In order to determine whether writings refer to one transaction, the nature and terms of the contract, the circumstances surrounding the parties, the subject matter of their agreement, and all appropriate

It may be identified by parol evidence.¹ If possible, effect should be given to every expression in the contract; for people are not supposed to use language for an idle purpose.²

8. Words are to be understood in their literal meaning. Words have certain definite meanings, and when people desire to convey an idea they intentionally select their words to accomplish that purpose. This rule cannot be better expressed than by quoting the language of LORD ELLENBOROUGH, in Robertson v. French, 4 East 137. Words in a contract "are to be understood in their plain, ordinary and popular sense unless they have generally, in respect to the subject matter, as by the known usage of trade or the like, acquired a peculiar sense distinct from the popular sense of the same words."³ But to add to the difficulty of interpretation, the same words have various meanings. POLLOCK, C. B., in Reg. v. Skeen, Bell, C. C. 97, 134, said: "There is no word in the English language which does not admit of various interpretations."⁴

When words have acquired an exact and technical meaning in any trade or business, and are used in a contract relating to such trade or business, they will be given that meaning and not the meaning the words have in a more popular use.⁵

extrinsic matters, must be considered."

1. Ex parte Washington Park, 52 N. Y. 131.

2. See 1 Addison on Contracts, 181; Coyne v. Weaver, 84 N. Y. 386; Washburn v. Gould, 3 Story (U. S.) 162; Smith v. National L. Ins. Co., 103 Pa. St. 177.

In Barhydt v. Ellis, 45 N. Y. 107, the court said: "Effect must be given, if possible, to every part of an agreement, and it is only when there is an inconsistency or repugnancy which is totally irreconcilable, that a discrimination will be made as to which part will be made to yield to the other."

3. Rubey v. Coal & Mining Co. [1886], 21 Mo. App. 159, 167. "The terms of every written instrument are to be understood in their plain, ordinary and popular sense unless they have generally, in respect to the subject matter, as by the known usage of trade or the like, acquired a peculiar sense distinct from the popular sense of the same words; or unless the context evidently points out, that, in the particular instance and in order to effectuate the immediate intention of the parties they must be understood in some other and peculiar sense." Greenl. Ev., § 278; Burnham v. Banks, 45 Mo. 350; 2 Phillips Ev. 632." After quoting the above rules the court held that the word "equipment" used by a mining company included mules among the means of operating the mine.

Dwight et al. v. Germania L. Ins. Co., 103 N. Y. [1886] 341, 347. "Such contracts are open to construction like all other contracts needing interpretation. . . . In Parkhurst v. Smith (Willes, 332), WILLES, J., says: 'I admit that though the intent of the parties be never so clear it cannot take place contrary to the rules of law, nor can we put words in a deed which are not there, nor put a construction on the words of a deed directly contrary to the plain sense of them.'" The court also quotes a passage in Addison on Contracts, p. 165, to the same effect.

4. In Bouvier's Law Dictionary, under the head of Construction, will be found a very long and complete list of words whose meanings have been passed upon by the courts.

5. Jones on Construction of Commercial and Trade Contracts, §§ 54-68, treats thoroughly of this subject.

Note to p. 99: "The object is to get at the real effect to the parties of the terms used, and if they have acquired secondary meanings in connection with particular kinds of transactions it is as important to have them translated as if the contract were in a foreign language." Carver's Carriage of Goods by Sea, § 169. So in Smith v. Clayton, 29 N. J. L. 357, where evidence was improp-

The rules of grammar will be upheld and applied, unless it is clear that all the parties to the transaction used the words or expressions incorrectly.¹

9. Written Words Control Printed.—In case of conflict or repugnance between the printed and the written parts of an instrument partly printed and partly in writing, the invariable rule of interpretation is that the written part shall prevail.²

But if by any possible construction the written and printed parts can be reconciled, such construction must be adopted; and the surrounding and particular circumstances of such case will be erly given as to the ordinary meaning of the word 'grain,' the New Jersey supreme court said: 'The word is not a technical term, the signification of which is only known to those of the trade. In such a case, parol evidence is admitted of necessity for the same reason that an interpreter must be employed to translate a paper written in an unknown tongue, and it has always been admitted. Sleight v. Hartshorne, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 542; Gobert v. Busby, 3 Sim. 34; Mechanics' Bank v. Columbia, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 336; Smith v. Wilson, 3 Barn. & Ad. 728; Richardson v. Watson, 4 Barn. & Ad. 789. An usage may be shown by parol evidence, and some of the cases go so far as to permit evidence that an English word, not a term of art or peculiar to a particular trade or occupation, has a peculiar provincial signification different from its natural meaning, as that a dozen means thirteen."

1. "The law prefers a construction according to the strict, accurate and precise use of language." Jones on Construction of Commercial and Trade Contracts, p. 302. See also Parsons on Contracts, vol. 2, p. 591; Addison on Contracts, vol. 1, p. 182. But the intention of the parties is to be given effect.

2. Where a printed form of instrument is used with blanks to be filled in with writing, the written part will control in construing the instrument. Am. Express Co. v. Pinckney, 29 Ill. 392. BREESE, J.: "The principle applicable in all such cases is, that a writing must be construed according to the clear intent of the parties, if that can be collected from the face of the instrument. . . . In a case where the agreement is partly written and in part printed, the preference is always given to the written part. What is printed is intended to apply to large classes of contracts and not to any one exclusively; the blanks are left purposely that the special statements or provisions should be inserted, which belong to the particular contract and not to others, and thus to discriminate this from others. So LORD ELLENBOROUGH held, in the case of Robertson & Thomasson v. French, 4 East 360, when he said that words superadded in writing are entitled, if there should be any reasonable doubt upon the sense and meaning of the whole, to have a greater effect attributed to them than to the printed words, inasmuch as the written words are the immediate language and terms selected by the parties themselves for the expression of their meaning, and the printed words are a general formula adapted equally to their case, and that of all other contracting parties upon similar occasions and subjects."

Clark v. Woodruff, 83 N. Y. 518. "Resort may also be had to the further rule that in the interpretation of the language of an instrument, greater weight should be given to the written than to the printed words, where they lead different ways and tend to contrary results. The language of printed blanks is easily assumed to be appropriate without careful examination, while the written words more safely and more nearly indicate the intention of the contracting parties."

1 Addison on Contracts, Abbott & Wood ed., 1888, p. *181; 2 Parsons on Contracts, 516; Harper v. N. Y. City Ins. Co., 22 N. Y. 441; Report N. Y. Civil Code, § 816; Rush v. Carpenter, 54 Iowa 132; Joyce v. Realm Ins. Co., L. R., Q. B. 580; Cushman v. N. W. Ins. Co., 34 Me. 487; Russell v. Bondie, 51 Mich. 76; Germania Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio St. 33; Alsager v. St. Katharine's Dock Co., 14 M. & W. 796; Weisser v. Maitland, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 322.

looked to in order to bring them into accord.¹

In regard to public contracts prepared by the government on printed blanks, it has been held that the unchanging printed portion should receive a uniform and unvarying construction.²

10. Words Construed Most Strongly Against the Party Using Them.

—Another well settled rule of construction is that in cases of doubt the words of an instrument are to be construed most strongly against the person using them; or, as it is sometimes otherwise expressed, the construction of an instrument is to be fortius contra proferentem.³

1. Miller v. The H. & St. J. R. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 430; ANDREWS, CH. J.: "It is no doubt a principle of construction that in case of repugnancy between written and printed clauses of an instrument, the written clauses will prevail over the printed. But this is a rule that is only resorted to from necessity when the printed and written clauses cannot be reconciled, and in that respect is like the rule applied in the construction of wills, where two clauses are repugnant and irreconcilable, in which case the first will be rejected and the subsequent clause will be regarded as indicating the final intention in the absence of any other clue to the interpretation. . . . The construction is to be made upon a consideration of the whole instrument, and not upon one or more clauses detached from the others; and this principle applies as well to instruments partly printed and partly written as to those wholly printed or wholly written." Shepherd v. Naylor, 71 Mass. 591; Chadsey v. Guion, 97 N. Y. 333.

2. Yates v. United States, 15 Ct. of Claims, 120.

3. "It is a salutary rule, applicable, as we think, to all such instruments as those above set forth, that a written instrument is to be construed most strongly against the maker; that when he has used in its language of doubtful or double import, it is to be taken in its strongest sense against him; and that if it is capable of two constructions, it should receive that which is most unfavorable to him." Livingston v. Arrington, 28 Ala. 424.

"So, in questions of doubt, it is equally well settled that the contract is to be construed most strongly against the party who stipulates the payment of a debt, or the performance of a duty." Evans v. Sanders, 8 Port. (Ala.) 497; Union Bank v. Guice, 2 La. An. 249; Hoover v. Miller, 6 La.

An. 204; Noonan v. Bradley, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 394; Barney v. Newcomb, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 46; Marion v. Stone, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 781; Pike v. Munroe, 36 Me. 309.

"But this rule is one of dernier resort, applicable only where the language of the instrument will equally admit of either of two or more interpretations; in such a case that effect will be given which is most unfavorable to the grantor." Falley v. Giles, 24 Ind. 119; Adams v. Warner, 23 Vt. 395.

"Nor does it seem that it is permitted to affect the construction when a third party would be thereby injured." 2 Pars. Contr. 510.

This rule is applicable also to cases where by the terms of an instrument an election of one of two things is given to one of the parties. In such cases the instrument will be construed in favor of the party having the election. Story on Contr. (5th ed.), § 815; Edis v. Bury, 6 B. & C. 433; Miller v. Thompson, 4 Scott N. R. 204; Block v. Bell, 1 Mood. & Rob. 149.

Exceptions in carrier's contracts exempting them from liability, will in cases of doubt be construed against the interests of the carrier. Nicholas v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. Co., 89 N. Y. 370; Mynard v. Syracuse, Bingh. & N. Y. R. R. Co., 71 N. Y. 180; Georgia R. R. Co. v. Gann, 68 Ga. 350.

"The reason of the rule contra proferentem is that men may be supposed to take care of themselves, and that he who gives and chooses the words by which he gives, ought to be held to a strict interpretation of them rather than he who only accepts. But the reason is not a very strong one, nor is the rule of special value." 2 Pars. Contr. 508.

It is reasonable to conclude that where one of the parties to a contract,

11. The Province of the Court and Jury in Duty of Interpretation.—The general rule is well settled that the construction or interpretation of all written instruments belongs to the court alone.¹ (See CONTRACTS, p. 867.)

12. The Practical Interpretation Put Upon an Instrument by the Parties Themselves, Entitled to Great Weight in Cases of Doubt.—In cases where the language used by the parties to an instrument is indefinite or ambiguous, and hence of doubtful construction, the practical interpretation put upon it by the parties themselves, as shown by their acts and conduct, is entitled to great, if not con-

in describing his own obligations, uses language susceptible of more than one interpretation, the person with whom he is contracting will understand this language in the sense which is most favorable to his own interests. Jones on Interpretation of Commercial and Trade Confs., p. 315.

The opposite rule holds in the interpretation of public instruments. In the case of Jackson v. Reeves, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 293, where a grant of lands under a patent was susceptible of two constructions, it was held that that construction which was most favorable to the government must be adopted. Mohawk Bridge Co. v. Utica & S.R.R. Co., 6 Pai. (N. Y.) 554.

A government contract which was suggested by an officer of the government, and signed by another officer of the government, without being signed by the contractor on the other side, and which is obscure in its terms, is to be construed against the interests of the government. Garrison v. U. S., 7 Wall. (U. S.) 688.

STORY, J., in delivering a dissenting opinion in respect to the construction of public grants, says: "It is a well known rule in the construction of private grants, if the meaning of the words be doubtful, to construe them most strongly against the grantor. But it is said that an opposite rule prevails in cases of grants by the king; for where there is any doubt, the construction is made most favorably for the king, and against the grantee. The rule is not disputed."

In construing an ambiguous contract for carrying the mails, prepared at the post office, and leaving to the contractor no choice as to form or phraseology, that construction should be adopted which favors the contractor, as, for instance, where the question is whether additional service can or cannot be demanded without additional compensation. Otis v. U. S., 20 Ct. of Cl. 315.

1. Neilson v. Harford, 8 M. & W. 806, 823: "The construction of all written instruments belongs to the court alone, whose duty it is to construe all such instruments as soon as the true meaning of the words in which they are couched, and the surrounding circumstances, if any, have been ascertained as facts by the jury; and it is the duty of the jury to take the construction from the court, either absolutely, if there be no words to be construed as words of art, or phrases used in commerce, and no surrounding circumstances to be ascertained; or conditionally, when those words or circumstances are necessarily referred to them. Unless this were so, there would be no certainty in the law; for a misconstruction by the court is the proper subject by means of a bill of exceptions, for redress in a court of law; but a misconstruction by the jury cannot be set right at all effectually." Rogers v. Colt, 21 N. J. L. 659; Brown v. Hatton, 9 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 319; Mason v. Rowe, 16 Vt. 525; Eaton v. Smith, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 150; Brown v. Orland, 36 Me. 376; Rapp v. Rapp, 6 Pa. St. 45; Arnold v. Bailey, 24 S. Car. 494; Dwight v. Germania Life Ins. Co., 103 N. Y. 341; Levy v. Gadsby, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 180; Globe Works v. Wright, 106 Mass. 207; Emery v. Owings, 6 Gill (Md.) 191; Hooper v. Webb, 27 Minn. 485; McAvoy v. Long, 13 Ill. 147; Lewiston v. Junction R.R. Co., 7 Ind. 597; Worcester Med. Inst. v. Harding, 65 Mass. 285; Southain v. Miller, 85 Ind. 161.

"The meaning of words and the grammatical construction of the English language, so far as they are established by the rules and usages of the language, are prima facie matter of law to be construed and passed upon by the court. Brown v. Brown, 49 Mass. 573.

"It is well settled that questions as to trolling, weight.¹ This rule, though, does not mean that an er-the meaning of particular words used in a special sense in a written instrument, are for the jury." Pitney v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 65 N. Y. 6.

In cases where an instrument is to be construed by a foreign law, it is for the jury to find the existence of the law as a fact, but it is the duty of the court to construe and apply it. Ames v. McComber, 124 Mass. 85; Ingraham v. Hart, 11 Ohio 255.

"It is the province of the court to construe, interpret and determine the legal effect of all contracts. When the contract is in writing, and its execution duly proved, the court must determine the legal effect of the language used. When it is verbal, the question of what the terms of the contract are, as established by the evidence, is for the jury. In the latter case, the court must still determine the legal effect, and his instructions to the jury must necessarily be based upon facts assumed and upon the existence of which the jury are to find from the evidence." Barton v. Gray, 57 Mich. 622.

"It would be a dangerous principle to establish, where parties have reduced their contracts to writing, and defined their meaning by plain and unequivocal language, to subject their interpretation to the arbitrary and capricious judgment of persons unfamiliar with legal principles and settled rules of construction." Brady v. Cassidy, 104 N. Y. 147.

In the case of Hutcheson v. Bawker, 5 M. & W. 535, an offer to sell "good barley" was made by letter. The letter in answer, after stating the offer, went on to say: "of which offer we accept, expecting you to give us fine barley." The court, through PARKE, B., said: "The law I take to be this, that it is the duty of the court to construe all written instruments; if there are peculiar expressions used, which have in particular places or trades a known meaning attached to them, it is for the jury to say what the meaning of these expressions was, but for the court to decide what the meaning of the contract was. It was right, therefore, to leave it to the jury to say whether there was a peculiar meaning attached to the word 'fine' in the corn market; and the jury having found what it was, the question whether there was a complete acceptance by the written document was a question for the judge."

"If a contract at all, they are a contract in writing. As such, the question of their interpretation—of their legal effect—was a question of law for the court. Nor is such interpretation the less a question of law because the construction may be aided by the use of extrinsic evidence, including what may be called the practical construction put upon the contract by the conduct and acts of the parties. The court, by the aid of extrinsic evidence, may put themselves in the situation of the parties, and look at the contract from their standpoint. But from whatever source light may be thrown upon the contract, what is its meaning, what promises it makes, what duties or obligations it imposes, is a question of law for the court. It is, after all, the legal reading and interpretation of what is written." Smith v. Faulkner, 12 Gray (Mass.) 255.

1. "In cases where the language used by the parties to the contract is indefinite or ambiguous, and hence of doubtful construction, the practical interpretation of the parties themselves is entitled to great, if not controlling, weight. . . . But in an executory contract, and where its execution necessarily involves a practical construction, if the minds of both parties concur, there can be no great danger in the adoption of it by the court as the true one." Per JUSTICE MATTHEWS, Toppliff v. Toppliff, 122 U. S. 121.

"And although it is very true, as contended by the appellee, that where an agreement is plain and free from all ambiguity, it will not be construed by the acts and admissions of the parties in reference to it, yet, where the intention is obscure or doubtful, and extrinsic evidence can be invoked, no evidence is more reliable or entitled to greater consideration, as manifesting what their intention was, than the acts and conduct of the parties themselves." Ins. Co. v. Doll, 35 Md. 89; Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 50; Williamson v. McHatton, 16 La. Ann. 196; Stopenhorst v. Wolff, 35 N. Y. Super. Ct. 25; Vinton v. Baldwin, 95 Ind. 433; Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Nexsen, 84 Ind. 347; St. Louis Gas Light Co. v. St. Louis, 46 Mo. 121; Coleman v. Grubb, 23 Pa. St. 393; Butler v. Moses, 43 Ohio St. 166; Price v. Evans, 26 Mo. 30;

roneous construction by them will control its effect, where its meaning is clear.¹

13. The Law of Domicil ; Place of Contract ; Place of Performance ; and Place of Trial in Questions of Construction.—The intention of the parties as to what law they desired to govern the construction of their contract, if ascertainable, must be followed.² Though, as a general rule, it is undoubted that the law of the country where an instrument is made is to be considered in construing

1 Add. on Contr. (8th ed., Abbott & Wood), p. 293; District of Columbia v. Gallaher, 124 U. S. 505; Mathews v. Danahy, 26 Mo. App. 660.

1. This rule does not mean that an error of the parties as to the effect of the instrument will bind them, if the meaning is clear. Thus it was said in Ins. Co. v. Doll, 35 Md. 89: "As was said by the supreme court, in the case of the Railroad Co. v. Trimble, 10 Wall. 367, where there is doubt as to the proper meaning of an instrument, the construction which the parties to it have themselves put upon it is entitled to great consideration; but where its meaning is clear, an erroneous construction of it by them will not control its effect. The same principle of construction was fully stated by CHIEF JUSTICE SHAW in the case of Fogg v. The Middlesex Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 10 Cush. 337."

Where an agreement had been reduced to writing, purporting to be between certain individuals, in relation to the transfer of shares in a bank, but not signed by all the parties, their rights must depend, not upon what they considered them to be, nor upon the fact that the parties considered the agreement to be closed, and one party claimed the benefit thereof, but upon the application of the principles of law to the facts proved. Agricultural Bank v. Burr, 24 Me. 256; Spencer v. Millsack, 52 Iowa 31.

The fact that a party to a contract for three years paid interest which, on a proper and obvious construction of the contract, he did not owe, should have no weight on the question of the construction of the contract. Garard v. Monongahela College, 114 Pa. St. 337.

So where by mutual understanding certain meanings have been assigned to particular words or terms in an instrument by the parties, such meanings will be adopted in the construction of the instrument. Conover v. Wardell, 20

N. J. Eq. 266; Haddock v. Woods, 46 Iowa 433; 1 Add. Contr. (8th ed., Abbott & Wood), p. 293, note.

"But the parties can review their decision and arrive at a different construction, and if the different conclusion be acted on, it will in its turn become conclusive, unless the parties review it." Add. Contr. (8th ed., Abbott & Wood), p. 294, note; Reading v. Gray, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 79.

In construing a statute, the construction put upon it for a long time by the executive department charged with its execution, is entitled to great weight. Chaffee's Appeal, 56 Mich. 244 (1886); United States v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52; United States v. Hill, 120 U. S. 169.

2. Jones on the Construction of Commercial and Trade Contracts, p. 32. "In order to ascertain the intent of the parties as to the law they desired to govern their contract, the court must consider the terms of the agreement, the subject matter of the contract, the domicile of the parties, and every circumstance surrounding its execution, which may shed light upon the question. It seeks for evidence of positive intention, and if, in the particular case before the court, circumstances are developed indicating that the special contract under consideration should be construed in an exceptional manner, in order to carry out the intention of the parties, the court will so construe it."

In the case of Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, MR. JUSTICE MATTHEWS said: "The law we are in search of, which is to decide upon the nature, interpretation and validity of the engagement in question, is that which the parties have either expressly or presumptively incorporated into their contract as constituting its obligation. It has never been better described than it was incidentally by MR. CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL in Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheaton 148, where he defined it as a principle of universal law: 'The prin-

the instrument.¹ But when a contract is made in one place, but to be performed in another, it is to be governed in its construction by the law of the place of performance.² When an instrument affecting personal property is executed by a party domiciled in a different country from that in which the property is situated, it is governed in its interpretation by the laws of that domicile.³ The construction put upon a statute by the courts of the country where the statute was enacted will generally be adopted.⁴ These rules owe their existence to comity. (See CONFLICT OF LAWS.)

14. Punctuation as a Means of Interpretation.—Punctuation in written instruments may sometimes, in cases of ambiguity, shed light upon the meaning of the parties, but it is never allowed to overturn what seems the plain meaning of the whole instrument. It may be resorted to when all other means fail.⁵

ciple that, in every form, a contract is governed by the law with a view to which it was made.”

1. When no place of performance is designated by a contract, it must be governed in its interpretation by the lex loci contractus. Thus, in an action for money paid for the use of an infant, but not for necessities, it appeared that the cause of action accrued in Scotland, and that the defendant was under age; but it did not appear from the evidence what was the law of Scotland in regard to the defendant's liability. And LORD ELDON said: “I hold myself not warranted in saying that such a contract is void by the law of Scotland, because it is void by the law of England. The law of the country where the contract arose must govern the contract; and what that law is should be given in evidence to me as a fact. No such evidence has been given, and I cannot take the fact of what that law is without evidence.” Male v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 163; Brown v. Richardson, 13 Martin (La.) 202; Aymar v. Sheldon, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 439; Peck v. Hibbard 26 Vt. 703; Walker v. Forbes, 31 Ala. 9; Barney v. Newcomb, 9 Cush (Mass.) 46; Partee v. Silliman, 44 Miss. 272; French v. Hall, 9 N. H. 271; 2 Kent Comm 453.

2. Where contract made in one place, but to be performed in another, it is to be governed in its construction by law of place of performance. “Thus, a bill of exchange payable in France is a foreign bill, although it be actually made in England; and due notice of dishonor being parcel of the contract, it is sufficient, to entitle a party to recover on such a bill in this country, to show that he gave sufficient notice of dishonor according to the law of France.” Chitty on Contr., p. 96, quoting Rothschild v. Currie, 1 Q. B. 43; Pittsburgh & St. Louis R. Co. v. Rothschild (Pa.), 4 Cent. Rep. 109; Lewis v. Headly, 36 Ill. 433; McDaniel v. Chicago & N. W. R. R. Co., 24 Iowa 417; Dorsey v. Hardesty, 9 Mo. 157; Thompson v. Ketcham, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 285.

3. An instrument relating to or affecting personal property, when executed by a party domiciled in a different country from that in which the property is situated, the laws of that domicile govern as to the interpretation of that instrument. See CONFLICT OF LAWS.

Solemnities.—As to form, authentication etc., of contracts, see CONFLICT OF LAWS, 3 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 558.

4. In construing statutes of the various States or of foreign countries, the supreme court of the United States adopts the construction put upon them by the courts of the state or country by whose legislature the statute was enacted. Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 280; Metropolitan R. Co. v. Moore, 112 U. S. 558.

5. “Punctuation is a most fallible standard by which to interpret a writing; it may be resorted to when all other means fail.” Ewing v. Burnet, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 54.

“Punctuation in written contracts may sometimes shed light upon the meaning of the parties, but it must never be allowed to overturn what

15. The Rules of Interpretation for Contracts, Wills and Statutes Almost Identical—Some Points of Difference.—In the preceding sections, the rules have been laid down for the interpretation of written instruments. It makes very little difference whether the instrument in question be a contract, will or statute, for obviously the cardinal rule to be observed in them all is to ascertain the intention of the writers.¹ But from the very nature of these instruments there has always been a difference in the degree of strictness employed by courts in their interpretation. Thus wills have never been subjected to as strict rules in their inter-seems the plain meaning of the whole contract." Osborn v. Farwell, 87 Ill. 89.

"The want of proper punctuation is, if objectionable at all, no more allowable in vitiating the contract, or destroying its effect, than bad grammar, the rule against which is a maxim of the law. To allow the contractor to punctuate in mitiori sensu of his own words, would be something of a novelty. I think no case can be found upon which the sense of a contract has depended upon the absence of punctuation marks; words are the most usual evidence of intent, and formed into sentences, are to be taken to express the meaning of the party using them. Punctuation may aid in ascertaining the true reading of a production, but the production may be read and interpreted without such aids." White v. Smith, 33 Pa. St. 186.

"Punctuation may perhaps be resorted to when no other means can be found of solving an ambiguity, but not in cases where no real ambiguity exists, except what the punctuation itself creates. In such cases it will not be allowed to confuse a construction otherwise clear." Weatherly v. Mister, 39 Md. 620; Sanford v. Raikes, 1 Merivale 650; Arcularius v. Geisenhainer, 3 Brad. (N. Y.) 64; Arcularius v. Sweet, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 406.

The court will sometimes supply punctuation marks in order to ascertain the meaning of the parties.

In the case of In re Denny's Estate, 8 Ir. R. Eq. 427, CHRISTIAN, L. J., after inserting punctuation marks of his own in a deed which he was construing, said: "It would be no answer to this to say that the deed contains no such punctuation or supposed pauses as I have used; it is perfectly legitimate to assume them as a means of showing what construction the words are capable of; and in doing so I am only following what was done by the judges in one of the cases cited, Galley v. Barrington, 2 Bing. 387; and if by such aid we are enabled to see that the language can bear an interpretation which will make the whole instrument rational and self-consistent, we are bound to adopt that interpretation in preference to another which would attribute to the parties an intention utterly capricious, insensible and absurd. English's Exr. v. McNair's Admrs., 34 Ala. 40; Doe v. Martin, 4 T. R. 65.

"The statutes in England are not punctuated in the original rolls; but more or less marks of punctuation appear in them as printed by authority. With us, the punctuation is the work of the draftsman, the engrosser, or the printer. In the legislative body, the bill is read; so that the ear, not the eye, takes cognizance of it. Therefore the punctuation is not, in either country, of controlling effect in the interpretation. Still a judge cannot avoid seeing the marks, and they seem to have been permitted to turn the scale in an evenly balanced case." Bishop on the Written Laws, § 78; Shriedly v. State, 23 Ohio St. 130, 149; United States v. Isham, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 496; Randolph v. Bayne, 44 Cal. 366; Morrill v. State, 38 Wis. 428.

1. "A statute is a writing, equally with a will or contract. And to a considerable extent the rules for the one class are those also for the other." Bishop on the Written Law, § 4. For example, the rule in contracts that the interpretation put upon them by the parties themselves is entitled to great weight, a principle which would appear to have little application to statutes, finds a close analogy in the interpretation of statutes in the rule that the construction adopted by the executive department charged with its execution, is entitled to great weight. Chaffee's Appeal, 56 Mich. 244 (1886).

pretation as contracts,¹ and neither of these to as strict rules as are employed in the interpretation of statutes.² (See CONTRACTS; STATUTES; WILLS.)

INTERPRETER.

1. Definition, 523.
2. Appointment, 523.
3. Translation Must be Under Oath, 524.
4. Competency, 525.
5. Accuracy May be Impeached, 525.
6. Interpreter Not an Agent of Witness, 525.
7. Privileged Communications, 526.
8. No Judicial Power, 526.

1. Definition.—An interpreter is one by whom a translation is made.³ A court interpreter is a person sworn at a trial to interpret the evidence of a foreigner, or of a deaf and dumb person, to the court.⁴

2. Appointment.—The appointment of interpreters for the courts is provided for in many States by statute.⁵ In the ab-

1. "There are certain rules of construction common to both deeds and wills; but as in the disposition of property by deed, an adherence to settled forms of expression is either rigidly exacted by the courts or maintained by the practice of the profession, the rules to which the construction of deeds has given rise are comparatively few and simple. But the peculiar indulgence extended to testators, who are regarded as inops consilii, has exempted the language of wills from all technical restraint, and withdrawn them in some degree from professional influence. By throwing down these barriers, a wide field is laid open to the caprices of language; though at certain points, as we have seen, its limits are ascertained by rules sufficiently definite, and we are guided through its least beaten tracks by general principles." 3 Jarman on Wills, p. 697.

When there are two repugnant clauses in a deed which cannot stand together, the first prevails. With a will the reverse is the case. Bouv. Law Dict., Interpretation; 1 Jorman on Wills, pp. 411-425.

2. In wills, as in contracts, evidence of all the surrounding circumstances is admissible to explain a latent ambiguity, but this rule is not applicable in the interpretation of statutes. Thus in the case of State v. Rebecca Partlow, 91 N. Car. 550 (1884), an act of assembly prohibited the sale of liquor "within three miles of Mt. Zion church in Gaston county," and it appeared, on trial of an indictment for its violation, that there were two churches of that name in the county. Held, that evidence was not admissible to show which church was meant; and the court in its opinion, as a reason, says: "A member of the legislature might say one thing or person was meant; another might say another thing or person was meant; a third might say yet another thing or person was meant; and thus the legislative will might entirely fail."

"The more the text partakes of a solemn compact, the stricter should be its construction." Bouv. Law Dict., Interpretation.

There is a difference in the degree of strictness with which different kinds of statutes are construed. Thus penal statutes are strictly and remedial statutes liberally construed. Bishop on the Written Law, §§ 119, 120.

3. Bouv. L. Dict., tit. Interpreter.

4. Whart. L. Lex., tit. Interpreter.

5. In Schall v. Eisner, 58 Ga. 192, the court said that this power of appointment, founded in common sense, and absolutely necessary for the administration of justice, had always existed, and was merely re-enacted in Ga. Code, § 3858.

In Pennsylvania, where a court interpreter was appointed under the act of March 27th, 1865, Pamph. L. 795, which provides for the appointment by the governor, of a competent interpreter, whose duty it is to make "verbal or written translations of foreign invoices, manifests and other documents, which translation shall be duly certified;" and which in a subsequent clause authorizes the courts of common pleas to appoint "a competent interpreter of foreign languages for the court and from sence of a regularly appointed officer, the courts may order an interpreter to be sworn to interpret.¹

3. Translation Must be Under Oath.—An unsworn translation will not be received in evidence. Interpreters are always sworn.²

time to time to fill vacancies as they occur;" and where a subsequent statute (act February 18th, 1869, Pamph. L. 198) establishes the office of interpreter (in the singular) for the city of Philadelphia; on a quo warranto proceeding against the court interpreter appointed under the first act, on the ground that the act of 1869 repealed that of 1865, AGNEW, J., said: "The argument for an implied repeal is drawn from the 3d section of the act of 1869, in these words: 'That no witness shall be produced, sworn or examined in any court of justice of said city of Philadelphia to interpret the testimony of any witness who testifies in a foreign language, or to translate any written paper, instrument of writing or document in a foreign language who shall not produce the certificate of said officer as to his fitness and competency for that purpose, bearing date of the day of his examination.' If we take this section literally it does not apply to an official interpreter who is examined and sworn upon his entering into the office to perform the duties faithfully, but only to an interpreting witness called to the stand pro hac vice and then sworn and examined. To give it a wider scope and apply it to the official interpreter of the court whenever he came to the stand to interpret, would produce consequences so monstrous and destructive of the due administration of justice, as would cause it to infringe directly on the bill of rights declaring that 'the courts shall be open' and 'right and justice administered without sale, denial or delay.' Its effect would be that no witness speaking a foreign language could possibly be examined until the parties have called on the city interpreter and paid him for a certificate; a sale of justice totally uncalled for and unnecessary. . . . We say, therefore, that the third section of the act of 1869 does not refer to the official interpreter appointed by the court when he comes to the stand to interpret in the ordinary course of his duty as interpreter." Commonwealth ex rel. Girard v. Sanson, 67 Pa. St. 322.

1. Norberg's Case, 4 Mass. 81; Amory v. Fellows, 5 Mass. 219; Schall

v. Eisner, 58 Ga. 190; Hout v. Hout, Wright (Ohio) 156.

Appointment Not Reviewable.—The appointment of an interpreter is not reviewable on appeal. People v. Ramirez, 56 Cal. 533; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 73.

When Not Necessary.—There is no necessity of an interpreter to explain the contents of a mortgage on a homestead if it is established to the satisfaction of the court and jury that the wife understands English. Pfeiffer v. Kiehne, 13 Cal. 644.

When Appointment at Expense of County.—A Wisconsin circuit court, having a general jurisdiction in both civil and criminal cases, has power to appoint an interpreter whenever it may deem one necessary for the furtherance of its business, and to impose the expense thereof upon the county; but a county court has no such power except it be in criminal cases coming within its jurisdiction. In other cases the parties litigant must pay the expense incurred in the employment of an interpreter. Supervisors of Crawford Co. v. Le Clerc, 4 Chand. (Wis.) 56.

Foreign Commissions.—A commission was sent to Bremen and returned with the answers in German annexed to a German translation of the questions. A sworn interpreter who knew the German language was allowed to translate the answers viva voce to the jury. Kuhtman v. Brown, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 479.

2. Vandervoort v. Ins. Co., 2 Cal. (N. Y.) 155; Norberg's Case, 4 Mass. 81; Amory v. Fellows, 5 Mass. 219. Where a deposition does not, upon its face, show that an interpreter was employed, but by oral proof it is shown that one was employed and properly sworn, it cannot be objected that there is nothing to show that the interpreter was sworn to interpret truly. People v. Dowdigan (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 920.

The translation of a writing, to be admissible, must be accompanied by the document translated. In Bixby v. Bent, 51 Cal. 590, it was held that a translation of the expediente of a Mexican grant of land, unaccompanied by the original, or a certified copy of the same, is not admissible in evidence. 2 Whart. Ev., § 174.

4. Competency.—A person who on oath declares that he is acquainted with the language in which records are written will be permitted to translate them.¹ A witness is competent to act as interpreter before the grand jury.² A next friend³ or the wife⁴ of a party is not incompetent. One not an adept in the sign language may nevertheless be sworn to interpret the evidence of a deaf and dumb person.⁵

5. Accuracy May be Impeached.—The accuracy of a translation may be impeached by one who understands the language. The question is for the jury.⁶

6. Interpreter Not an Agent of Witness.—An interpreter is deemed a witness and not an agent of the party whose testimony he interprets. His testimony given on a former trial cannot be admitted as evidence, unless satisfactory reasons are shown for his absence.⁷

1. Davis v. Police Jury, 19 La. 541. A judge is not bound to appoint a regular sworn interpreter. If there be none, any person competent to translate the evidence may be appointed as such. Farar v. Warfield, 8 Martin N. S. (La.) 697.

2. People v. Ramirez, 56 Cal. 533; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 73.

3. Where the common law rules excluding parties from testifying have been done away with, the next friend of a party may, at the discretion of the court, act as interpreter. Swift v. Applebore, 23 Mich. 253; Comm. v. Kepner, 114 Mass. 278.

4. Schutter v. Williams (Ohio), 1 West. L. J. 319.

5. Skaggs v. State, 108 Ind. 533.

But in People v. Gelabert, 39 Cal. 663, it was held that a witness who has a very imperfect knowledge of the language employed in a conversation, and who did not understand the whole of the conversation, in which a supposed confession was made to him by an accused person, is incompetent to testify as to such confession. Referring to 1 Greenl. Ev., § 218, where it is stated as a rule that the whole of what a prisoner said on the subject, at the time of making a confession, should be taken together. See also 1 Gr. Ev., § 214, etc. But the same court held that this rule did not prevent proof of a conversation between a person indicted for murder, and his victim, while alive, the conversation having been partly in Chinese and partly in English, and being proved, that part of it in English by persons present who understood English only, and that part of it in Chinese by persons present who understood Chinese, provided that both the accused and his victim understood both languages.

Deaf and Dumb Witness.—A deaf and dumb witness may be sworn and give evidence by means of tokens and signs through an interpreter. Ruston's Case, 1 Leach (Eng.) 408; Steels' Case, 1 Leach 451; State v. DeWolf, 8 Conn. 93; Snyder v. Nations, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 295.

In Morrison v. Lennard, 3 C. & P. (Eng.) 127, it was observed by BEST, C. J., that where a deaf and dumb witness could write, it would be better to make him write his answers than to take his testimony in the sign language through an interpreter.

6. U. S. v. Gilbert, 2 Sumn. (U.S.) 19; Schnier v. People, 23 Ill. 17.

Where a conversation partly in a foreign language has been testified to and interpreted by a witness on cross-examination, it is not error to refuse to allow it to be again detailed, to test the correctness of the translation where that is not seriously questioned. Ulrich v. People, 39 Mich. 245.

7. Shearer v. Harber, 36 Ind. 536; People v. Lee Fat, 54 Cal. 527; People v. Ah Yute, 56 Cal. 119. The last two cases disapprove in part, at least, of 1 Whart. Ev., § 174. MR. WHARTON there says that the interpreter's rendition in court of the foreigner's testimony given at the same time is not hearsay.

Interpreters Between Parties.—That is the rule as to the interpreter of a witness in court, but it does not apply to

7. Privileged Communications.—An interpreter is not allowed to disclose the confidential communications made through him between attorney and client.¹

8. No Judicial Power.—The court in appointing an interpreter cannot confer judicial power upon him.²

INTERROGATORIES.—See also BILLS OF DISCOVERY; DEPOSITIONS; EQUITY PLEADINGS.

1. Definition, 526.

2. In Equity, 527.

a. Origin and Purpose, 527. [527.

b. Averments Necessary as Bases,

c. Necessity of Interrogatories, 530

d. In Cases of Demurrer or Amendment to Bill, 530.

e. Filing and Serving of Inter- rogatories, 531.

f. Who May be Interrogated; Principals; Rules of Privilege, 532.

g. Subject Matter, 534. [534.

1. Matter Material to Plaintiff,

2. Matter Relating to Defence,

3. At Law, 534. [534.

1. Definition.—Interrogatories are defined as material and pertinent questions, in writing, to necessary points, not confessed, exhibited for the examination of witnesses or persons who are to give testimony in the cause. This article treats of interrogatories to parties.³

an interpreter between parties. An interpreter's statements of what a party said are treated as identical with those of the party himself; and therefore may be proved by any person who heard them, without calling the interpreter. Fabrigas v. Mostyn, 11 St. Tr. (Eng.) 171; McCormick v. Fuller, 56 Iowa 43; Camerlin v. Palmer Co., 10 Allen (Mass.) 541.

Declarations.—Declarations made in another language may be interpreted and given in evidence through one who heard them. People v. Ah Wee, 48 Cal. 236.

Admissions.—Where the plaintiff cannot speak English and the defendant cannot speak German, and the plaintiff's wife, understanding both languages, acts as interpreter between them, the wife's statements, while acting as such interpreter, may be given in evidence as admissions of the husband. Schutter v. Williams (Ohio), 1 West. L. J. 319.

When Agent.—If an interpreter is employed to communicate an offer, which is accepted, the offer as communicated by him is admissible in evidence against his principal, for the purpose of proving the contract, without proof that he truly interpreted the offer which he was authorized by his principal to communicate. Camerlin v. Palmer Co., 10 Allen (Mass.) 539.

In Wisconsin, it was held that the mere fact that parties contract through an interpreter does not of itself make him their agent, so as to bind them by his false translation of their language. Diener v. Sehley, 5 Wis. 483.

1. Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf. (Va.) 273; Jackson v. French, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 337; Andrews v. Solomon, 1 Pet. (C. C.) 356; Du Barre v. Livette, Peake's Cas. 77, explained in Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 756.

2. Where the court, during the trial of a criminal case, instructs the interpreter that whenever the witness undertakes to state something that somebody else has told him, he should inform the court, it would be error warranting a reversal of the judgment if it appear that such instructions were acted upon, and that the interpreter merely reported to the court that the witness had stated something that had been told him by somebody, and the court had acted on the bare statement without requiring the interpreter to repeat what the witness had said; but if it does not so appear the judgment should not be disturbed. People v. Wong Ah Bang, 65 Cal. 305.

3. Bouvier's Law Dict. A statute providing that an insolvent, applying for discharge, shall be examined on interrogatories, does not thereby require that the interrogatories shall be in writing, although it was said that the best and safest course is to interrogate

Not many years after the authorization of interrogatories in the actions at law, the legislation began which removed the disqualification of parties as witnesses. The reader is therefore referred to the article DEPOSITIONS. The article BILL OF DISCOVERY should also be given attention, particularly the part relating to statutory provisions. See also EQUITY PLEADINGS.

2. In Equity—a. Origin and Purpose.—The practice of putting special interrogatories seems to have been derived from the civil law;¹ and its object is the prevention of evasion by literal answers to the bill;² and, by detailed questioning, the refreshing of the respondent's recollection.³

in writing. And this decision was made, although at a somewhat earlier time there had been a statute in force requiring the insolvent to be examined upon interrogatories in writing. State v. Ludlow, 2 Southard (N. J.) 772, SOUTHARD, J., said: "What are interrogatories? The usual technical meaning of the word, in the court of chancery, is a question in writing; its ordinary meaning, in common discourse, is a question. I do not know of any fixed, certain and invariable meaning in common law courts."

"It is the seventh part of a bill in equity. It prays that the parties complained of may answer all the matters contained in the former parts of the bill, not only according to their positive knowledge of the facts stated, but also according to their remembrance, to the information they may have received, and to the belief they are enabled to form on the subject. One of the principal ends of an answer upon the part of the defendant is, to supply proof of the matters necessary to support the case of the plaintiff; and it is therefore required of the defendant, either to admit or to deny all the facts set forth in the bill, with their attending circumstances, or to deny having any knowledge or information on the subject, or any recollection of it, and also to declare himself unable to form any belief concerning it. And this he ought to do fully and explicitly, even though no special interrogatories should follow in the bill." Story Eq. Pl. (2nd ed.), § 35.

Costs of Interrogatories.—The costs of preparing interrogatories, which were not used owing to admissions being put in, will be allowed on taxation as between party and party.

1. Story Eq. Pl. (2nd ed.), § 39. Chief Baron Gilbert, in his History and Practice of Chancery, said: "By the civil law, when the plaintiff had put in his positions before the judge, the defendant was to put in his contestations or negations of such positions, and the plaintiff had liberty to examine the defendant upon interrogatories, to supersede the necessity of proof; and these were called the libellus articulatus, and was generally put in after the first act, where the defendant had answered the positions.

"We also flung the positions and the libellus articulatus into one bill; and hence it is that the interrogatories must arise out of the facts alleged in the bill; that if the interrogatories do not arise from the facts alleged in the bill, but are totally foreign to it, the defendant may refer them for impertinence; but if he does not, but submits to answer them as pertinent, the court will, generally speaking, oblige him to answer the bill, unless the interrogatories are totally foreign and not at all pertinent to the bill." Gilbert's Forum Romanum 89.

2. Tyler's Mitford's Eq. Pl. (ed. of 1876), p. 142; Story Eq. Pl. (2nd ed.), § 35. The language in Mitford is as follows: "But as experience has proved that the substance of the matters stated and charged in a bill may frequently be evaded by answering according to the letter only, it has become a practice to add to the general requisition that the defendants should answer the contents of the bill, a repetition, by way of interrogatory, of the matters most essential to be answered, adding to the enquiry after each fact an enquiry of the several circumstances which may be attendant upon it, and the variations to which it may be subject, with a view to prevent evasion, and compel a full answer."

3. Tyler's Mitford's Eq. Pl. 142 (ed. of 1876).

Particular interrogatories must be

b. Averments Necessary as Bases.—The interrogating part should coincide with the stating and charging part of the bill. For a plea following negatively the charging part, will be sufficient, although the interrogatories question beyond what the bill charges.¹

The rule is that complainant is not only to question in the interrogatory part, but he must make charges in the charging part; otherwise he cannot except. But it seems to be a general rule that if defendant, though not bound to answer, do so, the plaintiff by replying puts the matter in issue properly; consequently that informality in the manner of charging (for it is no more) is supplied by the answering to it; for a matter may be put in issue by the answer, as well as by the bill; and if replied to, either party may examine with respect to it.² But there are exceptions. Some relaxation under the act of parliament of the strict rule is noted below.³ If a distinct fact is alleged in the bill, plaintiff answered, although defendant make a general denial of plaintiff's case. 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. 726; Hibbert v. Durant, 1 Bro. C. C. 503, cited in Prout v. Underwood, 2 Cox Ch. 135; Hepburn v. Durand, 1 Bro. C. C. 503; Ld. Red. 310.

1. Thus in Clayton v. Winchelsea, 3 Y. & Coll. 688, a bill for tithings stated that defendant had cut and carried away timber, and the interrogatories were whether defendant had not cut and whether he had not carried away. Defendant merely pleaded that defendant had not cut any wood which he had carried away. LORD ABINGER, Ch. B., while feeling hesitation, held the plea sufficient. See also Re Morgan, 39 Ch. Div. 316.

For other rules, see BILL OF DISCOVERY, 2 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 202, 203.

The bill should set forth in particular the matters upon which the discovery is desired. Vague and loose surmises do not demand answer. Story Eq. Pl., § 325. See Newkerk v. Willett, 2 Caine's Cas. (N. Y.) 296.

Interrogatories need not be answered unless founded on averments in the bill. Story Eq. Pl., § 36; BILL IN EQUITY, 2 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 213, n. 5, 8.

2. Attorney General v. Whorwood, 1 Ves. Sr. 538.

Though under the allegation of a fact by bill the plaintiff may interrogate to incidental circumstances, he cannot as to a distinct subject. Bullock v. Richardson, 11 Ves. 373.

Where a bill in chancery was filed for an account, and the defendant, in his answer, set up an agreement under seal between the parties, in defence, it was held that the complainant could not prove the agreement to be fraudulent, as there was no allegation of fraud in his bill. James v. McKernon, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 543.

Every material matter should be put in issue by the pleadings; and no interrogatories can be filed which do not arise from or relate to some fact charged in the complainant's bill. Woodcock v. Bennet, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 734; James v. McKernon, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 543. See also Story Eq. Pl., §§ 28, 853; Jordon v. Jordon, 3 Swanst. 472.

Interrogatories cannot compel discovery on distinct matters not included in allegation or charge. 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. 377; Mechanics' Bank v. Levy, 3 Pai. (N. Y.) 606; Consequa v. Fanning, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 596; Johnhan v. Child, 1 Bro. C. C. 94. All beyond such are idle. Kisor v. Stancifer, Wright (Ohio) 323.

What, in an answer in chancery, is responsive to the bill, is to be determined by the allegations in the bill, and not by the interrogatories. The interrogatories can neither limit nor extend the defendant's obligation to answer. McDonald v. McDonald, 16 Vt. 630. A defect in the charging part cannot be supplied by a subsequent interrogatory. Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf. (Va.) 273; Barton's Eq. Prac. (Richmond, 1881) 264.

3. Parliament (15 and 16 Vict., ch. 86) having required plaintiff to state in his bill the facts on which he relied, it may enquire into everything incidental; what, how, when, etc.¹ And it is sufficient if an interrogatory is founded upon a statement in the bill which is inserted therein merely as evidence in support of the main charges.² If the complainant conceives, from any matter offered by the plea or answer, that his bill is not properly adapted to his case, he may obtain leave to mend his bill, and suit it to the defence, or he may file a supplemental bill.³

was held that as to matters not issuable, and on which plaintiff does not "rely," defendant could now be required to answer interrogatories, although no statement of those matters was made in the bill. A bill contained no charge of documents in defendant's possession; nevertheless he was required to answer fully interrogatories respecting them. Exception to his answer for insufficiency was sustained. Terry v. Turpin, Kay, app. 49; s. c., 18 Jur. 584.

So in Parkinson v. Chambers, 1 K. & J. 72, it was held that documents must be produced by defendant that plaintiff may prove that the statute of limitations has not run against the instrument in suit, although the bill contained no charge of documents.

"In the present case the bill does not contain the charge of books and papers, it being the settled practice of the court, since the act of parliament which requires the bill to contain only statements of fact, to regard charges of the evidence relied on as unnecessary, except when they are required to point to particular evidence, as in the case of admissions and the like. Upon the statement of facts contained in the bill, interrogatories are exhibited, and the court has not been very precise in limiting the extent of them; and I have myself held that the charge of books and papers is not necessary to give a right to interrogate as to the point, the act pointing out that it was desirable to omit from the bill all extrinsic matters not constituting facts in the cause." Mansell v. Feeney, 2 Johns. & Hem. 313.

Interrogatories as to particular documents must, however, be answered. Catt v. Tourle, 18 Weekly Rep. (Eng.) 966. The fact of a general affidavit, in the usual form, as to documents, having been filed, is not a sufficient reason for refusing to answer an interrogatory inquiring as to particular documents. See also, as to documents, ANSWER, 1 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 602, par. 5 and note.

VICE-CHANCELLOR KINDERSLEY went further still. He said that the non-sense of the old forms was meant to be gotten rid of by the act. And he held that it is no longer necessary to introduce charges suggesting imagined facts to found an interrogatory; so that where a bill charged the existence of a mortgage known to the plaintiff, but did not charge that there were others, an interrogatory, "whether there were others, was held to be correct. Marsh v. Keith, 1 Drew & Sm. [1860] 342; s. c., Jur. N. S. 1182. See also Hudson v. Grenfell, 3 Giff. (Eng.) 388; s. c., 8 Jur. (N. S.) 878.

The practice in England now is to produce documents at chambers, as being cheaper and more summary than the old interrogatory way of getting at them. Piffard v. Beeby, L. R., 1 Eq. 623; s. c., 12 Jur. N. S. 117.

1. Bulloch v. Richardson, 11 Ves. 375; Faulder v. Stuart, 11 Ves. 296; note to Clarke v. Turton, 11 Ves. 240; note to Muckleston v. Brown, 4 Ves. 52. Under the general charge as to the fact of payment, the plaintiff may interrogate as to all the circumstances that go to prove or disprove the truth of the fact, as when, where, etc., without particular charges. Faulder v. Stuart, 11 Ves. 296; Story Eq. Pl., § 37; Cooper Eq. Pl. 12.

2. Mechanics' Bank v. Levy, 3 Pal. Ch. (N. Y.) 606.

In action to recover land, plaintiff may interrogate upon what is relevant to his own case, notwithstanding the rule that forbids plaintiff in ejectment from recovering on the weakness of his adversary's title. Where plaintiff claimed as assignee of certain coheir-esses, he was permitted to interrogate defendant as to the pedigree of the heiresses, and as to certain declarations of defendant that the latter held as trustee for the late owner and her heirs, even though plaintiff had other means of proving the same things. Lyell v. Kennedy, 8 App. Cas. 217.

3. KENT, C. J., in James v. McKer-

c. Necessity of Interrogatories.—The interrogating part of the bill is not absolutely necessary. Full answers or full denials by defendant accomplish the object of interrogatories, though these be omitted. In the old forms of bills there were no special interrogatories.¹ Their use in sifting the conscience and refreshing the memory of respondent has already been mentioned, and in practice they are said to be almost universal, except in amicable suits.²

In Vermont, a bill containing no interrogatories was said to be defective.³ But in Pennsylvania interrogatories were said not to be indispensable to a bill in equity.⁴ In Massachusetts, the interrogatory as part of a bill has been regarded as necessary,⁵ but in the case in which this was said, the court said also that they would grant relief upon plaintiff's correcting the defect.⁶ And a prayer that defendant answer to the matters alleged has been held a good general interrogatory.⁷ It was held by CHANCELLOR KENT that the general interrogatory was enough to satisfy the rule, and that special interrogatories were not indispensable.⁸ And this would appear to be the law, especially in view of the fact that the bills in old times did not contain special interrogatories, which came into use because it was found that defendants artfully confined themselves to the letter of the general interrogatory, or else did honestly forget things whereof the special interrogatory served to remind them.⁹

d. In Cases of Demurrer or Amendment to Bill.—Demurrer to the bill does not relieve plaintiff from the necessity of seeing that his interrogatories are filed within the time limited.¹⁰ It seems that a defendant cannot protect himself from answering a non, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 564. And see Thomas v. Graham, Walk. (Mich.) 117.

1. LORD ELDON, in Partridge v. Haycraft, 11 Ves. Jr. 574; Story Eq. Pl., § 38; Cooper Eq. Pl., 11, 12.

2. See Story's Eq. Plead. (2nd ed.), § 38, note 3.

3. Shed v. Garfield, 5 Vt. 39.

4. Eberly v. Groff, 21 Pa. St. 256.

5. Belknap v. Stone, 1 Allen (Mass.) 572.

6. See infra, this title, FILING AND SERVING INTERROGATORIES.

7. Ames v. King, 9 Allen (Mass.) 258, where also the "conclusion" was held sufficient though the interrogatory was coupled with prayer for process, and was followed by a prayer for specific and general relief. Plaintiff may propose specific interrogatories in a proper case. Mass. Chanc. Pr., rule 4.

8. Methodist Church v. Jaques, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 75.

9. Under Chancery rules in Maine, "A general interrogatory only shall be introduced, and it shall be sufficient to require a full answer to all the matters alleged." Rule 1, app. 581, 37 Me. Rep.

When the practice in England was to put the interrogatories in the bill, the particular ones each defendant was to answer were specified in a note at the foot of the bill. And such is the rule adopted by the United States supreme court. 1 Dan. Ch. Pl., *376, n.

See generally Story Eq. Pl. (2nd ed.), § 38; Methodist etc. Church v. Jaques, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 65; Hagthorp v. Hook, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 270; Salmon v. Claggett, 3 Bland (Md.) 125; Bank of Utica v. Messereau, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 517; Cugler v. Bogert, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 186; Parkinson v. Trousdale, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 380; Mass. Chanc. Rules, rule 5. See also Kisor v. Stancifer, Wright (Ohio) 324; Ames v. King, 9 Allen (Mass.) 258; Perry v. Turpin, 18 Jur. 594; Attorney General v. Rees, 12 Beav. 54; Jordan v. Jordan, 16 Ga. 446; Pitts v. Hooper, 16 Ga. 442.

10. Harding v. Pingey, 10 Jur. N. S. 873.

particular interrogatory on the ground that had he chosen he could have demurred to the whole bill.¹ Where he amends his bill, interrogatories may be filed in due time as to the amendments; but this does not enable plaintiff to go back to the original—if the time for interrogating as to it has gone by—and question as to it.² Plaintiff cannot oppress defendant by requiring him, after amendment to bill, to reanswer interrogatories already answered in the interrogatories to the original bill.³ Special application for leave to interrogate original defendants as to the original bill is necessary where that examination is desired.⁴ In the case of new defendants, added by amendments, the interrogatories may extend to the whole bill, the bill being, as to them, original; but a new set of interrogatories must be filed, as the old ones, if any, cannot be amended as to the new defendants.⁵

c. Filing and Serving of Interrogatories.—Where a written bill was filed, it was held that the interrogatories could be filed without waiting for the printed bill.⁶ A second set of interrogatories to the same bill may be filed if the time for filing interrogatories has not expired, without order, as against defendants who were not previously interrogated.⁷ If the time has expired, an order is necessary.⁸ If the interrogatories first filed have not been answered, plaintiff may obtain an order amending them so as to reach such other defendants.⁹

1. Marsh v. Keith, 6 Jur. N. S. 1182.

2. Harding v. Pingey, 10 Jur. N. S. 873; Southampton Boat & Pier Co. v. Rawlins, 12 Week. Rep. (Eng.) 285. Plaintiff filed no interrogatories to the amended bill within the time in that behalf limited. The defendant put in a voluntary answer. Then the plaintiff amended the bill, and filed interrogatories extending to the whole bill as amended, and not to the amendments alone. The defendant put in an answer to the interrogatories on the amendments only, and put in no answer to the interrogatories which went to the matter in the original bill, insisting that his voluntary answer must be taken to be a complete and sufficient answer to everything in the original bill. The plaintiff excepted. Held, that the answer to the amendments only was sufficient. But the court has power, in such case, on special application, to give the plaintiff leave to file interrogatories, and compel a full answer to the original bill. Denis v. Rochussen, 4 Jur. N. S. 298.

3. Drake v. Symes, 2 De G. F. & J. 81. See also Attorney General v. Rees, 12 Beav. 50.

Where the statement of a bill employs a word or phrase according to a certain meaning, and the interrogatory accompanying the statement is responded to according to such sense, and afterwards amendment is made of the bill wherein the language is used for a different meaning, the defendant can only be made to answer as to the new meaning, by a special requirement by plaintiff so to do. Attorney General v. Rees, 12 Beav. 50.

4. Denis v. Rochussen, 4 Jur. N. S. 298; Southampton Steamboat Co. v. Rawlins, 12 Week. Rep. (Eng.) 285; Attorney General v. Rees, 12 Beav. 50, 54.

5. Quoting 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. *485, which cites Braithwaite's Pr. 310.

6. Lambert v. Lomas, 9 Hare app. 291.

7. Quoting 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. *485; Braithwaite's Pr. 35.

8. 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. *486.

9. 1 Dan. *486; Braithwaite's Manual 183. Daniell also states that the order to amend must express the object, and that the defendant as against whom the interrogatories were first filed must be served with a copy of the interrogatories as amended.

The English general orders provide for service of interrogatories on defendants without the jurisdiction, the decree of the court to limit a time within which defendant must plead, answer, or demur, or obtain from the court further time to make defence to the bill.¹ The application for leave to serve abroad is ex parte, and the English practice requires affidavit.²

f. Who May be Interrogated—Principals—Rules of Privilege.—A guardian ad litem of an idiot or lunatic cannot be compelled to answer interrogatories.³

A party is not excused from answering interrogatories on the ground that they are as to matters which are not within such party's own knowledge, but are only within the knowledge of his servants or agents, if derived in the course of their employment; and he is bound to obtain the information from such agents or servants, unless he show that it would be unreasonable to require him to do so, as that either such agents or servants have left his employment, or it would occasion unreasonable expense or an unreasonable amount of detail or the like.⁴ But it is advisable

"And, generally, interrogatories may be amended under an order as of course, to be obtained on motion, or on petition at the rolls, at any time before an answer is put in." 1 Dan. *486; citing Braithwaite's Pr. 309.

Cross Suits.—Where plaintiff in the original suit fails to file interrogatories in the time limited, and the cross plaintiff files interrogatories in due time, the original plaintiff loses his right to answer before he answers the cross bill. For when the interrogatory time has expired, defendant is in the position of a person not called on to answer; and this is not altered by the court's indulgence giving plaintiff further time to file his interrogatories. Garwood v. Curteis 10 Jur., N. S. 199, Sir W. P. Wood, V. C.

So under the old rule, plaintiff amending bill after cross bill filed, thereby lost priority regarding the new matter. Garwood v. Curteis, 10 Jur. N. S. 199.

The original bill is to be first answered; but if the plaintiff after the cross bill filed, amend his bill, he loses his priority. Steward v. Roe, 2 P. Wms. 435; Child v. Frederick, 1 P. Wms. 266; Long v. Burton, 2 Atk. 218; Noel v. King, 2 Madd. 392.

And this is so, although the amendment is made after an order extending original plaintiff's time to answer cross bill until after original defendant has answered original bill; but as such order, when made, was regular, and is only discharged because of the amendment, it is to be discharged without costs. Johnson v. Freer, 2 Cox Ch. 371.

In New Jersey, a statute provides that a cross bill need not be answered by the original plaintiff till his own bill has been answered by the cross plaintiff. Williams v. Carle, 2 Stockt. Ch. (N. J.) 544.

But where the amendment is before notice of the cross bill, the priority is not lost. Gray v. Haig, 13 Beav. (Eng.) 65.

1. Ord. 10, 7 (1), (2); 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. *481.

2. 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. *481. This is no doubt the universal rule.

3. Vol. 2, p. 203, etc.; vol. 1, p. 604, note; 608 notes; Ingram v. Little, 11 Q. B. Div. 251; Leving v. Calverly, Prec. Ch. 229, is not followed in this respect.

4. 2 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 204. In an action by cargo owners against the owners of a ship, for a loss alleged to have arisen from negligence in the navigation of such ship by which she was run ashore and was stranded, an answer by the defendants to interrogatories as to what was done by those on board with regard to such navigation at the time of the accident, which stated in substance that the defendants were not on board at the time and had no knowledge or information respecting the matters enquired into, except as appeared by the protest of which the plaintiffs had had inspection, was held insufficient, as it did not appear that there was any difficulty in the defend-to interrogate expressly as to the servants' knowledge, if this is wanted.¹

Of course, the universal rule that a party cannot be compelled to criminate himself or expose himself to penalties, holds good here. Nor can he be deprived of the other rules as to privilege.²

The English practice is, however, to allow these interrogatories, leaving to defendant the option of answering, except that if they do not appear to be put bona fide for information in the action, but with the ulterior object of showing that the party interrogated has committed a criminal offence, the court will, in the exercise of its discretion, disallow them.³

ants' obtaining the required information from those who were in charge of the ship at the time of the accident. Bolkow v. Fisher, 10 Q. B. D. 161, decided, it is true, under the new English supreme court rules of 1883, but the old chancery practice was discussed, and stated to be in accordance with this decision.

In Attorney General v. Rees, 12 Beav. 50, the question regarded the working of a mine. It was held that defendant, the mine owner, was bound to answer not only with respect to his own knowledge, but to obtain information from the persons by whom, as his agent, the act inquired of was done.

1. Rasbotham v. Shropshire Union Ry., 48 L. T. N. S. 902.

2. Vol. 1, p. 601; Marsh v. Keith, 6 Jur. N. S. 1182; Wich v. Parker, 22 Beav. 59; s. c., 2 Jur. N. S. 582; Webb v. East, 5 Ex. Div. 108; Martin v. Treacher, 16 Q. B. Div. 507; Orme v. Crockford, 13 Price 376; United States v. McRae, L. R., 3 Ch. 79; Sloman v. Kelly, 4 G. & C. 169; Boteles v. Allington, 3 Atk. 457; Adams v. Porter, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 170; Mahanke v. Cleland, 76 Ia. 401; Northrop v. Hatch, 6 Conn. 363; Skinner v. Judson, 8 Conn. 533; Marshall v. Riley, 7 Ga. 367.

It was held in one case that a plaintiff is entitled to an answer as to whether or not certain documents (claimed by the defendant in his affidavit to be privileged) relate to a certain deed, and as to what are the grounds on which such privilege is claimed. Catt v. Touble, 18 Week. Rep. (Eng.) 966.

Where one defendant claims privilege, averring that the information came to him, "by virtue of my employment as the solicitor of [another] defendant," this was held not enough, for it was not equivalent to an assertion that the information came to him from the client, or in some other way conferring privilege. Marsh v. Keith, 6 Jur. N. S. 1182.

Usury.—The New York statute of 1837 allowing discovery of usury, so as to deprive lender of the money actually loaned, as well as the legal and the usurious interest, was in one case held constitutional. Perrine v. Striker, 7 Pal. Ch. (N. Y.) 598. Before the statute, the discovery would have been refused. Perrine v. Striker, 7 Pal. Ch. (N. Y.) 598; Mauran v. Lamb, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 174; opinion by SIR P. YORK, afterwards LORD HARDWICKE, in Sel. Cas. by a Solicitor, 19; Hogshead v. Baylor, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 99.

3. Kerr on Discovery, 270. That they will be allowed. Bartlett v. Lewis, 104 E. C. L. 249; Fisher v. Owen, 8 Ch. Div. 645.

In Tupling v. Ward, 6 H. & N. 749, the exchequer refused to allow such an interrogatory. The discretion of the court, thus exercised, was in regard to questions in libel suit, whether defendant was the author, etc.

That they will not be allowed where the offensive design alluded to in the text exists: Baker v. Lane, 3 H. & C. 544, explained in Bickford v. Darcy, L. R. 1 Exch. 357.

Nor will they be allowed, where the very end of the suit is to inflict penalty. Chadwick v. Chadwick, 22 L. J. (Ch.) 329. A common informer cannot have interrogatory allowed. Hunnings v. Williamson, 102 B. D. 459; Martin v. Treacher, 16 Q. B. Div. 507. So that Society of Apothecaries v. Nottingham, W. N. for 1875, 259, must be regarded as overruled.

Perhaps in actions for exemplary damages, defendant might make the same objection.

g. Subject Matter.—1. Matter Material to Plaintiff.—Plaintiff may exact discovery as to all matters of fact which, being well pleaded in the bill, are material to the plaintiff's case, and which defendant does not, by his pleading, admit.¹ In foreclosure bills, the practice prevails of interrogating as to encumbrances other than that of plaintiff, in order that if there are any others, the owners may be made parties.²

Where certain stenographic notes, which defendant moved should be produced by plaintiff, were taken in proceedings forming part of the very dispute between the parties, although in another stage or action, it was held that the notes must be produced, although they had been taken at plaintiff's own expense and in anticipation of other proceedings by him.³

2. Matter Relating to Defence.—But the right is limited to discovery of such material facts as relate to "plaintiff's case;" it does not extend to discovery of the manner in which defendant's case is to be exclusively established.⁴

But while the adversary cannot be made to expose his case, it would seem that he must give some idea as to its nature, to prevent surprise.⁵

3. At Law—(See BILL OF DISCOVERY ; DEPOSITIONS ;

The question whether the defendant or the court is the judge whether the answer will criminate him is not discussed here. The authorities at hand at the instant are Osborn v. London Dock Co., 10 Exch. 698; Fisher v. Ronalds, 12 C. B. 762; 74 E. C. L. R.; Short v. Mercier, 3 Mac. & G. 205; Best on Ev. (2nd ed.) 162; 2 Phill. Ev. 488; Taylor Ev., § 1071; Parkhurst v. Lowden, 2 Swanst. 203; Chambers v. Thompson, 4 Bro. C. C. 433; People v. Mather, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 253; Garbetts' Case, 1 Den. C. C. 236. In Lamb v. Munster, 10 Q. B. Div. 110, it was held that the defendant would not be held to any form of words in his affidavit that the tendency of his answer, if given, would tend to criminate him, if from the question and the circumstances such tendency seemed likely. And held, in an action of libel, where defendant was asked, in effect, whether he published the libel, that the answer here quoted was sufficient, viz: "I decline to answer all the interrogatories upon the ground that my answer to them 'might' tend to criminate me." See also Adams v. Bartley, 18 Q. B. Div. 625; Malone v. Fitzgerald, 18 L. R. (Ir.) 187.

1. Bidder v. Bridges, 29 Ch. Div. 29; Lyell v. Kennedy, 8 App. Cas. 223; Commissioners of Sewers v. Glassey, L. R., 15 Eq. 302. Compare Ivy v. Keke- wich, 2 Ves. 679; Lowndes v. Davies, 6 Sim. 468; Eades v. Jacobs, 3 Exch. Div. 335; Hoffman v. Postill, L. R., 4 Ch. 673; Wigram on Discovery, 286.

2. 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. *277, n. 6; Story's Eq. Pl., § 193, n.

Interrogatories filed in a foreclosure suit instituted by mortgage bondholders of a railroad company, respecting the acts, plans, intentions or papers of companies or organizations formed for the purpose of buying the road, should it be offered for sale, are irrelevant, and need not be answered. Robinson v. Phila. R. Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 340.

3. Stenographic Notes of Evidence.—Rawstone v. Preston Corporation, 30 Ch. Div. 116.

But this is not to be extended so as to allow discovery of documents, shorthand notes, of proceedings against other parties in a distinct action. Nordon v. Defries, 8 Q. B. Div. 508.

4. Wigram on Discovery, 286; Sto. Eq. Pl., § 572; 2 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 203.

But in Adams v. Porter, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 170, it was said that the rule prohibiting prying into the adversary's title was inapplicable in Massachusetts. See also Haskell v. Haskell, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 543.

5. See Cayley v. Sandycroft Brick etc. Co., 33 W. R. (Eng.) 577; PEARSON, J.

EQUITY PLEADINGS)—Compelling of Answers—Default.—The courts have exerted several powers to compel answers to the statutory interrogatories. The practice probably is first to enter a rule or order on the adversary to answer,¹ unless this has already been done at the filing of the interrogatories. This order having been made, on noncompliance, attachment of the adversary's person upon order of court therefor seems to be one authorized mode, or default.² In Alabama, the legislature has authorized attachment, or continuance, or the entry of judgment as by default.³ An order directing dismissal of plaintiff's suit

1. See Rapalje on Contempt, 3 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, tit. CONTEMPT. Compare DEPOSITIONS, 5 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 600, n. Under Georgia act 1847, order made in open court was requisite to require adversary's answer. By act 1850, the order could be obtained either in term time, or in vacation from a judge of the superior or justice of the inferior court, neither to have jurisdiction, however, to act in a case pending in a court of the other. Tillinghast v. Nourse, 14 Ga. 641.

Interrogatories cannot be taken as confessed on default in answer without order of court directing them to be answered within a given time, and notice of such order given to the party interrogated. Lapene v. Riche, 15 La. An. 612.

In Louisiana, no order to answer is requisite unless the answers are to be made in open court; and the interrogatories, if unanswered without cause shown, will be taken for confessed at the trial without further notice. Seaman v. Babington, 11 La. An. 173.

In Louisiana, order on garnishee to answer is not essential; service of petition, containing the interrogatories and citation, is sufficient warning. Parmerly v. Bradbury, 13 La. 353; Sturgis v. Kendall, 2 La. An. 565; Henry v. Brice, 11 La. An. 691. See 8 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 1211.

A party, required to answer or produce a book in open court, must be notified of the day which must be fixed for that purpose, unless present at the trial or when the order is made; he is not otherwise in default. The designation of the day of trial as that for answering or producing the book is insufficient, unless named in the order notified to the party. Nor is the usual weekly notice, posted in the court room, of the days for which cases are fixed, sufficient. Weathersby v. Huddleston,

2 La. An. 845; Spears v. Nugent, 2 La. An. 11.

In Georgia, the statute provides that the court, or judge, in vacation, before ordering answer to interrogatories, must be satisfied, by the party's oath or otherwise, 1, 2, that the interrogatories are pertinent and that the answers will be material evidence; and thirdly, such as plaintiff or defendant would be compelled to disclose in answer to a bill for discovery. Thornton v. Adkins, 19 Ga. 464.

2. Cleveland v. Hughes, 12 Ind. 512. See Robbins v. Holman, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 26; Iowa R. S., § 2992, (McClain, § 2700), authorizes process of contempt, or dismissal of petition or quashing of answer; R. S., § 2991 provides for taking subject of interrogatories supported by affidavit, as true. But judgment is not to be entered without trial, and in the meantime the party failing to answer may, if he wish, have his case nonsuited, although the other party object. Perry v. Heighton, 26 Ia. 451. Nor can the demand for judgment for want of answer be made for the first time in the appellate court. Sully v. Wilson, 44 I. 394.

Florida: Party or officer of corporation which is party, not answering, may be proceeded against as for contempt. McClellan's Florida Digest of Statutes, p. 516, § 18.

It is discretionary with the presiding judge whether nonsuit shall be ordered for refusal of plaintiff to answer. Stern v. Filene, 14 Allen (Mass.) 9; Townsend v. Gibbs, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 158; Harding v. Noyes, 125 Mass. 572; Harding v. Morrill, 136 Mass. 291.

Whether he order the nonsuit, or allow further time, no appeal lies to the supreme court. Harding v. Noyes, 125 Mass. 572; Harding v. Morrill, 136 Mass. 291.

3. A statute providing that in case on failure to answer within a time named is not a final order, but may be modified or vacated at a subsequent time.¹

Vague or Irrelevant Interrogatories.—The object of testimony, whether obtained from witnesses or extorted from the party, is to establish facts. If, then, an interrogatory is vague, and fails to call for special matter of fact, it is hard to see how omission to answer can be regarded as confession. "What matter of fact," it was asked, "would be established by taking this interrogatory as confessed?"²

Interrogatories Bad in Part.—Where a single interrogatory embraces both matters which should be answered, were they alone inquired of, and other matters which are not proper subjects of inquiry, the adversary is not bound to take the risk of separating the two; and is not to be defaulted without a specific order of court as to particulars in which his answers are insufficient, and opportunity to amend them.³ But his neglect to answer interrogatories which themselves are entirely proper, although other distinct interrogatories are bad, exposes him to default.⁴

of evasive answer or failure to answer at all, the court may attach the party so in default, or continue the case, and require more explicit answers; or give judgment as by default, places it within the option of the party interrogating, subject to control of court, which of the courses shall be pursued. Goodwin v. Harrison, 6 Ala. 438.

It is entirely competent for the court, on a sufficient showing, to extend the time for the answer, or even to set aside the default. Goodwin v. Harrison, 6 Ala. 438.

Nor is this discretion reviewable. Goodwin v. Harrison, 6 Ala. 441; Pool v. Harrison, 18 Ala. 515.

But this discretion ought never to be exercised, unless a satisfactory reason is shown for the omission to answer in proper time; and this, in all cases where it is practicable, should be accompanied with full and explicit answers. Goodwin v. Harrison, 6 Ala. 438.

The court is not required to dismiss plaintiff's suit on his failure to answer; but it may resort to the other steps indicated in the code,—attachment, continuance, etc. Ex parte McLendon, 33 Ala. 276.

Mandamus will certainly not lie to compel discovery under statutory interrogatories when the same are irrelevant; whether it would lie in any case, quære. Ex parte Grantland, 29 Ala. 69.

1. Ex parte McLendon, 33 Ala. 276. See also Reese v. Billing, 9 Ala.

263. See FINAL JUDGMENTS AND DECREES, 7 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 966.

Such order does not become effectual, until the default has been judicially ascertained at the next ensuing term; it is not effectual on the occurrence of the contingency in vacation. Ex parte McLendon, 33 Ala. 276; ex parte Remson, 23 Ala. 25; Edwards v. Lewis, 18 Ala. 494; Reese v. Billing, 9 Ala. 263.

2. Harrison v. Knight, 7 Tex. 52. Compare DEPOSITIONS, 5 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 615.

To prove admission of indebtedness, an interrogatory whether defendant gave a legacy to claimant conditioned that the latter would not claim against his estate, need not be answered; it is irrelevant, and only to be regarded as an offer to purchase peace. Ex parte Grantland, 29 Ala. 69; Phill. Ev., pt. 1, p. 218; Cowen & Hill's Notes.

3. Wetherbee v. Winchester, 128 Mass. 293; Hare on Discovery (2nd ed.), 105.

4. The proper course is to answer such as are pertinent, and take the judgment of the court on such as are claimed to be impertinent. Neglect to answer any subjects a plaintiff in such default to be nonsuited, in the discretion of the court. Harding v. Morrill, 136 Mass. 291.

Interrogatories are not to be treated with unnecessary strictness. And where one is too broad, and includes

Substantial answer is enough, unless the court direct further answer.¹

Evasive Answers.—Where answers are insufficient or evasive, nonsuit or default is not to be entered without further proceedings upon exceptions to such answers.² In Louisiana, where answers were manifestly evasive, the court allowed the interrogatories to be taken as confessed without application to that effect.³

In Massachusetts, a supplemental statute provides that the party answering may reply beyond the scope of the interrogatory, provided his answer relate to the issue.⁴

matter irrelevant to the pleading, the party interrogated is not bound to answer the irrelevant part, and may confine his answer to what is relevant. Hancock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 107 Mass.

113.

1. Amherst & B. R. Co. v. Watson, 8 Gray (Mass.) 529.

Answers which do not answer fully are not to be disregarded, so far as they are responsive. Meyer v. Claus, 15 Tex. 516.

2. (See DEPOSITIONS, 5 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 598). "Questions of great difficulty often arise as to how far a party is bound to answer interrogatories proposed by the adverse party, and it was not the intention of the statute to compel a party to decide such questions at the risk, if he decides erroneously, of a nonsuit or default.

Fels v. Raymond, 139 Mass. 98. The interrogating party should file a motion setting forth his objections to the answers, and praying that they be made more full and clear; and it is for the court to determine upon such motion how far the answers are imperfect, and which of the interrogatories require fuller answers. If the answers are adjudged to be imperfect, the interrogated party ought to have the opportunity to amend them, after the particulars in which they are insufficient are pointed out. If he refuses to amend or to answer more fully, according to the order of the court, a nonsuit or default may be entered. Amherst etc. R. Co. v. Watson, 8 Gray (Mass.) 529; Wetherbee v. Winchester, 128 Mass. 293; Fels v. Raymond, 139 Mass. 101.

Where there is a total neglect to answer interrogatories, then the court, in its discretion, may enter nonsuit or default. Fels v. Raymond, 139 Mass. 100; Harding v. Noyes, 125 Mass. 572; Harding v. Morrill, 136 Mass. 291.

The court must act on a motion to take answers for confessed on ground of their being evasive; the motion cannot be referred to the jury to determine on the merits of the cause. Knox v. Thompson, 12 La. An. 114.

3. An answer manifestly evasive creates a violent presumption that, if direct and true, it would destroy the party's claim or defence, and is such a neglect as authorizes the interrogatory to be taken for confessed without an application to that effect. Whiting v. Ivey, 3 La. An. 649; Graham v. Benjamin, 5 La. An. 186; Hoover v. Miller, 6 La. An. 204; Commercial Bank v. Routh, 7 La. An. 128; Walker v. Wingfield, 16 La. An. 300.

Where a creditor, interrogated to ascertain how much has been paid him by his debtor, whom he is fraudulently endeavoring to shield, answers evasively to different sums suggested, he will be considered as admitting the largest sum named. Prater v. Pritchard, 6 La. An. 730.

A factor whose answers touching various items of his account sued on are evasive and unsatisfactory, will, on such items, be nonsuited. Brander v. Lum, 11 La. An. 217.

4. Under the Massachusetts act of 1851, the party answering was confined to an answer to the interrogatory propounded, and matters explanatory thereof, but could not go further and introduce statements which, though relevant to the issue, were not relevant to the interrogatory. No decision to that effect was ever rendered by the supreme court; but such was the holding of the common pleas. Hand v. Hughes, 14 L. Rep. 393; Higbee v. Bacon, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 484; s. c., 14 L. Rep. 518. See also L. Rep. 575. But, says HOAR, J., the unfairness of the rule was the subject of much complaint,

INTERRUPT—INTERRUPTION—INTERSECT.

INTERRUPT.¹

INTERRUPTION—(See. EASEMENTS; PRESCRIPTION).—The effect of some act or circumstance which stops the course of a prescription or act of limitations.²

INTERSECT.—To cross.³

and it was altered by the legislature of the next year, in Gen. St. ch. 129, § 51, which provides: "The party interrogated may introduce into his answer any matter relevant to the issue to which the interrogatory relates." That is to say, "issue to which the interrogatory" relates, not issue raised by the interrogatory. The court therefore interpret the statute as meaning, "the issue in the cause, between the parties, upon which the interrogatory calls for a fact which may be used by the party interrogating as evidence." Baxter v. Massasoit Ins. Co., 13 Allen (Mass.) 320. And see Williams v. Cheyney, 3 Gray (Mass.) 220, where the act of 1852 was alluded to, with the remark that it was meant to prevent partial and garbled disclosures by artful interrogatories.

And under Iowa Rev., §§ 2985, 2986, it is held that the answer may embrace not merely that responsive to interrogatories, but new matter concerning the same cause of action. Gwyer v. Figgins, 37 I. 517.

1. In a prosecution, under statute, for disturbing religious worship, the court charged that "the word 'interrupt,' as used in the statute . . . means anything done by the defendants or any other persons which takes the attention of the hearers from the services or the discourse of the minister. This was held to be erroneous, as withdrawing the attention of the jury from the essence of the offence, the intention, it being necessary that, the interruption should be wilful. Brown v. State, 46 Ala. 175.

2. Bouv. L. Dict., Co. Litt. 114 b. It is the breaking of the continuity of the enjoyment of an easement. "Interruption of the possession is where the right is not enjoyed or exercised continuously; interruption in the right is where the person having or claiming the right ceases the exercise of it in such a manner as to show that he does not claim to be entitled to exercise it." It may arise from the act of the person having or claiming the right, from the act of the servient owner or of another person. Repalje & L. Law Dict.

"Interruptions are of two kinds, natural and civil. The first consisted in entering into and upon immovable things, in taking away such as were movable; civil interruption was the interruption of a legal claim, in a court of justice. 1 Brown's Civ. Law, 248; Muerarity v. Heirs of Mims, 1 Ala. 674. "Civil interruption is that which takes place by some judicial act. Natural interruption is an interruption in fact." Bouv. Law Dict.

"'Interruption' means obstruction, not a cesser or intermission, or anything denoting a mere breach in time." There must be an overt act, indicating that the right is disputed." Carr v. Foster, 3 Q. B. 581.

3. A Connecticut statute provided that whenever it should be necessary for the construction of a railroad to intersect or cross any water course or highway, it should be lawful for the company to construct the railroad across or upon the same; but that it should restore the stream or road thus intersected to its former state, or in a sufficient manner not to impair its usefulness. In applying this act, the court said: "The railroad does not cross this highway. The word 'intersect' ordinarily means the same as to cross; literally to cut into or between. The two words seem to be used in the same sense, as is apparent from the fact that the word intersected only is used in the latter part of the quotation, whereas, if they were used in different senses, we should find the words 'or crossed' also used. But if it be conceded that the word 'intersect' is to be understood in the sense of touching, or coming in contact with, we think it cannot be extended so as to embrace a case like this, where the layout of the railroad covers a portion of the layout of the highway, without disturbing or interfering with the traveled part of the highway." State v. N. H. & N. Co., 45 Conn. 331.

Where a petition was filed for a road "to begin in the G turnpike at a point where the road from the F road intersects the said turnpike," and the viewers reported a road "beginning at a point

INTERSTATE COMMERCE¹—(See BRIDGES; CARRIERS OF GOODS; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS; CARRIERS OF STOCK; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; FOREIGN CORPORATIONS; FREIGHT; NAVIGATION; RAILROADS; TELEGRAPH COMPANIES; TICKETS OF PASSENGERS).

1. Definition, 539.
2. Power of Congress Over Interstate Commerce, 540.
 - a. In General, 540.
 - b. When Exclusive and When Not, 543.
3. Restrictions Upon the Power of the States, 548.
 - a. As to Discrimination, 548.
 - b. As to Taxation, 548.
 - c. As to Regulation, 552.
4. The Interstate Commerce Act, 559.

1. Definition.—Interstate commerce, or commerce “among the in the middle of the G turnpike where the same is intersected by the middle line of the road leading from the F road,” there was held to be no variance. “The viewers, in laying out a road, do not fix its width; nor run and mark the outside lines of the road on the ground. They run and mark but one line—the center line of the road. The point of intersection of two roads as laid out and marked on the ground by the viewers is then the point where the middle or center lines of the two roads intersect—the very point at which the viewers in this case commenced. But if this be not so, it is wholly immaterial whether they commenced at the intersection of the outside or the middle line of the turnpike and public road.” Springfield Road, 73 Pa. St. 127.

1. Peculiarity of the Decisions.—The decisions of the one ultimate judicial authority on questions of interstate commerce, the supreme court of the United States, have not been altogether uniform. There is probably no subject in which we find dissenting opinions in such a proportion of the cases, and even the views of the majority that have from time to time decided them have been influenced in one direction and another, not only by changes in the means by which, and the conditions under which, commerce is carried on, but by diversities of view as to “State rights,” “strict construction,” and the like. This lack of uniformity and stability (inevitable, perhaps, with so new a subject, where precedents had to be made, not followed) has been admitted by the court itself (see Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 240; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 648), and will probably be much less marked in the future, as of late there has been an evident determination to decide all questions in accordance with the comprehensive doctrine first announced by MARSHALL, C. J., in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wh. (U. S.) 1. As was recently said by BRADLEY, J.: “A great number and variety of cases involving the commercial power of congress have been brought to the attention of this court during the past fifteen years which have frequently made it necessary to re-examine the whole subject with care; and the result has sometimes been that in order to give full and fair effect to the different clauses of the constitution, the court has felt constrained to recur to the fundamental principles stated and illustrated with so much clearness and force by CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL and other members of the court in former times, and to modify to some degree certain dicta and decisions that have occasionally been made in the intervening period.” Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 648.

It will be seen that an extraordinary number of State court decisions have been reversed at Washington, a circumstance due both to the lack of uniformity above mentioned and to the fact that, when the limits of State authority were in question, it was inevitable that, in case of any doubt in the mind of a State court, the scale should turn in favor of the State. Ex parte Asher, 23 Tex. App. 662, is a special instance of this. The treatment of cases similar to those reversed has involved some difficulty, and where, from the peculiarity of the facts involved, the overruling was not absolutely certain, they have been cited, but only to indicate the views of the State courts, not as authorities.

several States" of the American Union, is commerce which concerns more States than one.¹

2. Power of Congress Over Interstate Commerce—a. In General.—To protect the commercial interests of the various States from interference from any one of them, the constitution has given congress the power "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes."² The only form of commerce within the limits of the United States which is not subject to this vast power is the purely internal commerce of each State, which is reserved to each by direct im-

1. "Among the Several States."—The word 'among' means 'intermingled with.' A thing which is among others is intermingled with them. Commerce among the States cannot stop at the external boundary line of each State, but may be introduced into the interior. It is not intended to say that these words comprehend that commerce which is completely internal, which is carried on between man and man in a State, or between different parts of the same State, and which does not extend to or affect other States. . . . Comprehensive as the word 'among' is, it may very properly be restricted to that commerce which concerns more States than one." Gibbons v. Ogden, 1 Wh. (U. S.) 1, 194.

Whenever a commodity has begun to move as an article of trade from one State to another, commerce in that commodity has commenced." The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 557, 565.

"Any carriage of goods which crosses a State line is interstate commerce." Ex parte Koehler, 30 Fed. R. 869.

The question has recently been raised whether a continuous carriage between points in the same State, but by a route lying partly in another State, is interstate commerce or not. By analogy with Lord v. S. S. Co., 102 U. S. 541 (deciding that carriage between ports in the same State, but over the high seas, was foreign commerce), it would seem that the question must be answered affirmatively, and it is so answered in N. O. Cot. Exch. v. N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 2 Int. Com. R. 375; State v. C. St. P. M. & O. R. Co. (Minn.), 41 N. W. R. 1047. Shortly before the decisions in these cases, it was answered the other way, in Com. v. L. V. R. Co. (Pa.), 17 Atl. R. 179.

It may happen that commerce which is unquestionably internal, and confined to one State, is so closely connected with interstate commerce as to require its being to some extent subject to the same control. Thus it was recently held that the interests of interstate commerce on the navigable waters of the United States require that all steamboats plying thereon, even those engaged in intrastate commerce only, should be a like subject to certain regulations of congress, in regard to number of passengers carried, etc. The City of Salem, 37 Fed. Rep. 846.

The "Act to Regulate Commerce," commonly called the "Interstate Commerce act" (U. S. Sts. 1886-7, ch. 103), is not limited in its operation to interstate carriage only, but regulates certain classes of international carriage, and even where only one State or Territory in the United States is concerned.

2. U. S. Const., art. 1, § 8, cl. 3.

"The design and object of that power, as evinced in the history of the constitution, was to establish a perfect equality amongst the several States as to commercial rights, and to prevent unjust and invidious distinctions, which local jealousies, or local and partial interests, might be disposed to introduce and maintain." Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. (U. S.) 568, 574.

"It may be doubted whether any of the evils proceeding from the feebleness of the federal government contributed more to that great revolution which introduced the present system than the deep and general conviction that commerce ought to be regulated by congress." Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wh. (U. S.) 419, 446. See also Gloucester Fer. Co. v. Penna., 114 U. S. 196.

"So vast is the subject of this power, and so much does it comprise, that its limits cannot well be defined without the risk of excluding something which may in some form, or at some time, deserve to be included. It is given in the largest and most liberal terms, and has been interpreted and applied with ade-plication.¹ With reference to the scope of this power, the term "interstate commerce" must be understood in the widest sense to denote not traffic only, but every species of commercial intercourse, including all the means by which it is carried on, both such as were in use when the constitution was adopted, and those which have since been developed.² Navigation³ (and as incident quate, if not with equal liberality." 2 Hare's Am. Const. Law., p. 1257.

1. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wh. (U. S.) 1, 194; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 557.

In this respect the position of congress differs from that of the Canadian parliament under section 91 of the British North America act, which gives it the power to "regulate trade and commerce." This applies to domestic and internal as well as foreign and external commerce. It includes "political arrangements in regard to trade requiring the sanction of parliament, regulations of trade in matters of interprovincial concern, and it may be . . . general regulations of trade affecting the whole dominion." It does not include the regulation of the contracts of a particular business or trade. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Parsons, 7 App. Cas. 96 (see s. c., 4 Can. S. C. 215); Russell v. Queen, 7 App. Cas. 829 (affg. Mayor of Fredericton v. Queen, 3 Can. S. C. 505); Severn v. Queen, 2 Can. S. C. 70.

2. Congress has "the power to regulate; that is, to prescribe the rule by which commerce is to be governed. This power, like all others vested in congress, is complete in itself, may be exercised to its utmost extent, and acknowledges no limitations, other than are prescribed in the constitution." Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wh. (U. S.) 1-196.

"The same case established once and for all the broad doctrine that commerce is intercourse, and that the power to regulate it includes the power to regulate the means by which it is carried on. (See next note.) Navigation was the only means of intercourse under consideration in Gibbons v. Ogden, but the doctrine applies to every form of traffic, transportation and communication. These powers of congress, as was said in a later case, are not confined to the instrumentalities of commerce, or the postal service, known or in use when the constitution was adopted, but they keep pace with the progress of the country, and adapt themselves to the new developments of time and circumstances. They extend from the horse with its rider to the stage coach, from the sailing vessel to the steamboat, from the coach and the steamboat to the railroad, and from the railroad to the telegraph, as these new agencies are successively brought into use to meet the demands of increasing population and wealth. They were intended for the government of the business to which they relate at all times and under all circumstances. As they were entrusted to the general government for the good of the nation, it is not only the right, but the duty, of congress to see that intercourse among the States and the transmission of intelligence are not obstructed or unnecessarily encumbered by State legislation." Pensacola Tel. Co. v. W. U. Tel. Co., 96 U. S. 1. See also Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 280.

Penal Authority.—The power to regulate commerce includes that of punishing all offences against commerce, e. g., larceny of merchandise from a ship, though committed on shore. U. S. v. Coombs, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 72. And see the penal clauses of the various acts relating to commerce.

3. Navigation.—The leading case on interstate commerce is Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wh. (U. S.) 1, decided in 1824, and contemporaneous with the beginning of that immense development of commercial intercourse which has marked this century. In the infancy of steam navigation, certain States sought to encourage its inventors and promoters by granting the exclusive right to navigate their waters by boats moved by fire or steam. One Ogden, the assignee of this right for navigation between New York city and certain places in New Jersey, found his monopoly infringed by the owner of steamboats duly licenced by the national government for the coasting trade. Ogden obtained an injunction in the New York court of chancery, but this was dissolved by the U. S. supreme court on the ground that the monopoly granted by New York was an interference with interstate commerce. The thereto, all the navigable waters of the United States,¹ the vessels employed upon them,² and the bridges which cross comprehensive meaning of the term "commerce," as used in the constitution, was established by MARSHALL, C. J., on incontrovertible grounds. Almost at the outset of his long and masterly opinion, he said: "The subject to be regulated is commerce; and our constitution being, as was aptly said at the bar, one of enumeration, and not of definition, to ascertain the extent of the power it becomes necessary to settle the meaning of the word. The counsel for the appellee would limit it to traffic, to buying and selling, or the interchange of commodities, and do not admit that it comprehends navigation. This would restrict a general term applicable to many objects to one of its significations. Commerce undoubtedly is traffic, but it is something more, it is intercourse. It describes the commercial intercourse between nations and parts of nations, in all its branches, and is regulated by prescribing rules for carrying on that intercourse. The mind can scarcely conceive a system for regulating commerce between nations, which shall exclude all laws concerning navigation, which shall be silent on the admission of the vessels of the one nation into the ports of the other, and be confined to prescribing rules for the conduct of individuals, in the actual employment of buying and selling, or of barter. . . . All America understands, and has uniformly understood, the word 'commerce' to comprehend navigation. It was so understood, and must have been so understood, when the constitution was framed. The power over commerce, including navigation, was one of the primary objects for which the people of America adopted their government, and must have been contemplated in forming it. The convention must have used the word in that sense, because all have understood it in that sense; and the attempt to restrict it comes too late."

Embarking and Landing.—The business of receiving and landing freight and passengers at a wharf is incident to, and in fact a part of, their transportation by water. Transportation implies the taking up of persons or property at some point and putting them down at another. A tax upon such receiving and landing of passengers and freight is a tax upon their transportation, i. e., if the transportation be from one State to another, a tax upon interstate commerce. Gloucester Fer. Co. v. Penna., 114 U. S. 196.

Ferries across a river or channel separating two States are a means of interstate commerce, and cannot be interfered with by State taxation. St. Louis v. Fer. Co., 11 Wall. U. S. 432; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Penna., 114 U. S. 196, 216. But congress has never exercised the right to establish them, but has hitherto left this to the States. Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. U. S. 524; Conway v. Taylor's Ex., 1 Bl. (U. S.) 603; Wiggins Fer. Co. v. E. St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, affirming s. c., 102 Ill. 560; Chilvers v. Peop., 11 Mich. 43.

1. Control of Navigable Waters.—"The power to regulate commerce comprehends the control for that purpose, and to the extent necessary, of all navigable waters of the United States which are accessible from a State other than those in which they lie. For this purpose they are the public property of the nation and subject to all the requisite legislation of congress." Gilman v. Phila., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 724.

This power "authorizes appropriate legislation for the protection of either interstate or foreign commerce, and for that purpose such legislation as will insure the convenient or safe navigation of all navigable waters of the United States, whether that legislation consists in regulating the removal of obstructions to their use, in prescribing the form and size of vessels employed upon them, or in subjecting the vessels to inspection and licence in order to insure their proper construction and equipment." The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 556, 564.

Rivers and harbors may be regulated by congress, and the navigation therein improved, even if it be necessary to close one or more channels to accomplish the result. No agreement between States that such channels shall remain open for the use of the citizens of both, can affect the matter. South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S. 4.

2. Control of Vessels.—Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wh. (U. S.); The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 557, 564; Phila. & S. M. S. S. Co. v. Penna., 122 U. S. 326.

them¹), railroads,² and all other modes of interstate transportation and communication,³ are, therefore, subject to the control of congress; but this does not extend to the manner in which goods are put up for transportation, nor, apparently, to the genuineness or quality of the goods themselves.⁴ Such control may also be ex-

It has recently been held in the Oregon circuit court that the federal law forbidding a steamboat to carry more passengers than her certificate of inspection allows, being intended to insure the convenient and safe navigation of all navigable waters of the United States, applies to all steamboats navigating the same, even to those plying between ports of the same State only. Were this otherwise, the safety and interests of other vessels, engaged in interstate commerce on the same waters, might be endangered thereby. The City of Salem, 37 Fed. Rep. 846.

The sale and mortgage of vessels, being incidental to commerce, is within the power of congress to regulate. White's Bank v. Smith, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 646; Shaw v. McCandless, 36 Miss. 206; Richardson v. Montgomery, 49 Pa. St. 203.

1. Bridges Over Navigable Waters.—These may, if stretching from one State to another, be themselves means of interstate commerce. They may also, wherever situated, be obstructions to interstate commerce. In either case, they come within the control of congress by its constitutional power. Penna. v. Wheeling Br. Co., 18 How. (U. S.) 421. And see n. 2, p. 545; title BRIDGES, 2 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law.

2. Railroads, Construction of.—In regard to railroads, it was said in a recent case, "the power to construct, or to authorize individuals or corporations to construct, national highways and bridges from State to State, is essential to the complete control and regulation of interstate commerce. Without authority in congress to establish and maintain such highways and bridges, it would be without authority to regulate one of the most important adjuncts of commerce. This power in former times was exercised to a very limited extent, the Cumberland or National road being the most notable instance. Its exertion was but little called for, as commerce was then mostly conducted by water, and many of our statesmen entertained doubts as to the existence of the power to establish ways of communication by land. But since, in consequence of the expansion of the country, the multiplication of its products, and the invention of railroads and locomotion by steam, land transportation has so vastly increased, a sounder consideration has prevailed and led to the conclusion that congress has plenary power over the whole subject." California v. C. P. R. Co., 127 U. S. 1.

Regulation of.—The act of July 15th, 1866 (Rev. Sts., § 5258), authorizes railroads transporting property from one State to another to "connect with roads of other States so as to form continuous lines for the transportation of the same to the place of destination." This has been declared constitutional in R. R. Co. v. Richmond, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 584; Council Bluffs v. K. C. etc. R. Co., 45 Iowa 338, 351; Hardy v. A. T. & S. F. R. Co., 32 Kan. 608, 717.

The act of March 3rd, 1873 (Rev. St., §§ 4386-4390), regulates the carriage of cattle, etc., on cars or vessels, from one State to another. The constitutionality of this act has been sustained in U. S. v. B. & A. R. Co., 15 Fed. R. 209; U. S. v. L. & N. R. Co., 18 Fed. R. 480; but does not apply to transportation between points in the same State. U. S. v. E. T. V. & G. R. Co., 13 Fed. R. 642.

For the Interstate Commerce act of 1887, the greatest exercise of the power of congress over the subject, see § 4, p. 559.

3. Telegraph Lines.—See Pen. Tel. Co. v. W. U. T. Co., 96 U. S. 1; W. U. T. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640.

A telegraph company occupies the same relation to commerce, as a carrier of messages, that a railroad company does as a carrier of goods. Tel. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 480.

By the act of August 7th, 1888 (Sts. 1887-88, ch. 772), companies operating telegraph lines constructed to any extent by government aid are required to give equal facilities to all connecting lines, and to this end are put under the control of the interstate commerce commission.

4. Every species of property which is the subject of commerce, or which is exercised over all forms of interstate traffic, i. e., the purchase, sale and exchange of commodities,¹ including, perhaps, such accessories as bills of exchange and bills of lading,² but not policies of insurance.³ This control attaches whether the commerce be transacted by individuals or corporations,⁴ by one agency or by many.⁵ It is, moreover, all pervading, operating in every part of used or even essential in commerce, is not within the control of congress. The barrels and casks, the bottles and boxes in which alone certain articles of commerce are kept for safety, and by which their contents are transferred from the seller to the buyer, do not thereby become subjects of congressional legislation more than other property. U. S. v. Steffens, 100 U. S. 82. Hence, as seems to be indicated in that case, though the point was not decided, congress could not undertake to regulate brands or trade marks.

1. Traffic.—E. g., the sale by itinerant venders, in one State, of the goods, wares and merchandise of other States (Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275), and the negotiation of sales of goods which are in another State for the purpose of introducing them into the State in which the negotiation is made. Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 489; Corson v. Maryland, 120 U. S. 502; Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129.

2. Bills of Exchange and Bills of Lading.—"It may be inferred from the dicta in Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 168, and in Nathan v. Louisiana, 8 How. (U. S.) 73, that bills of exchange drawn on another State or a foreign country may be the subject of State legislation, prescribing the place and time at which demand must be made and notice given to charge the drawer with damages for nonpayment. The point actually decided in Nathan v. Louisiana, however, was that a tax on the business of an exchange broker is not a tax on commerce, though he is principally or exclusively engaged in the purchase and sale of foreign bills of exchange; and it does not follow from these decisions that such bills may not be regulated by congress, or that a State may subject them to restrictions which will injuriously affect trade with foreign nations or among the States. It is by means of such instruments that the merchant anticipates the sale of the goods which he has purchased for exportation, and is enabled to make an immediate payment, and they are consequently an indispensable aid to commerce, which should be free from local taxation.

"Whatever be the rule as to bills of exchange, it results from the case of Almy v. California, 24 How. (U. S.) 169, as interpreted in Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 123, 137, that bills of lading are so far instruments of commerce that the States cannot subject them to a tax that will impede exportation or operate hostilely on interstate or foreign commerce." 1 Hare's Am. Const. Law, 479.

3. Policies of insurance are contracts of indemnity. They "are not articles of commerce in any proper meaning of the word. They are not subjects of trade and barter offered in the market as something having an existence and value independent of the parties to them. . . . Such contracts are not interstate transactions, though the parties may be domiciled in different States." Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 168-183; Phila. Fire Ass'n v. N. Y., 119 U. S. 110. The same view of policies of insurance has been taken in Canada, where they have been held not within the authority of the Dominion parliament to regulate trade and commerce. The privy council left the point undecided, however. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Parsons, 4 Ont. App. 103; 4 Can. S. C. 215; 7 App. Cas. 96. See FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

4. Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 168, 182; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275; Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691; Gloucester Fer. Co. v. Penna., 114 U. S. 196; Phila. & S. M. S. v. Penna., 122 U. S. 326, 342; Stockton v. B. & N. Y. R. Co., 32 Fed. R. 9.

5. "The fact that several different and independent agencies are employed in transporting the commodity, some acting entirely in one State and some acting through two or more States, does not in any respect affect the character of the transaction. To the extent to which each agency acts in that transportation, it is subject to the regulation of commerce." The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 557, 565.

"Any carriage of goods which crosses.

the Union;¹ but its exercise cannot affect existing private contracts based on previous legislation and circumstances.²

b. When Exclusive and When Not.—This power of congress does not, however, affect all matters of interstate commerce to the same extent. It is exclusive as to all subjects which are in their nature national or admit only of one uniform system of regulation,³ a State line is interstate commerce; and the fact that transportation from one State to another is transacted in whole or in part through the agency of independent and unrelated carriers up to and from the State line, does not affect the character of the transaction in this respect. For, whenever an article destined to a place without the State is shipped or started therefor, it becomes the subject of interstate commerce, and the carriers employed in the transportation thereof, although neither of them may pass from one State to the other, are subject, as instruments of such commerce, to national legislation and control." Ex parte Kochler, 30 Fed. R. 869.

In Iowa, it has been held that if a railroad company takes goods destined for a point outside the State, but contracts that its liability shall cease when it has delivered them to another carrier at a point within the State, such carriage by the first company is not interstate commerce. Heiserman v. C. B. & Q. R. Co., 63 Iowa 732.

1. As was said in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wh. (U. S.) 1, 195, "In regulating commerce with foreign nations, the power of congress does not stop at the jurisdictional lines of the several States. It would be a very useless power, if it could not pass those lines. . . . This principle is, if possible, still more clear when applied to commerce 'among the several States.' They either join each other, in which case they are separated by a mathematical line, or they are remote from each other, in which case other States lie between them. What is commerce 'among' them; and how is it to be conducted? Can a trading expedition between two adjoining States commence and terminate outside of each? And if the trading intercourse be between two States remote from each other, must it not commence in one, terminate in the other, and probably pass through a third? Commerce among the States must, of necessity, be commerce with the States. . . . The power of congress, then, whatever it may be, must be exercised within the territorial jurisdiction of the several States."

See also Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 446; Penna. v. Wheeling Bridge Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 518; s. c., 18 How. (U. S.) 421, 431; Guy v. Baltimore, 100 U. S. 434.

2. Hence a contract for the handling, at a stipulated price, of all grains brought by a railroad to a certain place, was not affected by the building, under authority of congress, of an interstate bridge which made such handling a useless expense to one of the parties. The enforcement of this contract was not an interference with the power of congress over interstate commerce. R. R. Co. v. Richmond, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 584; followed in K. & I. Br. Co. v. L. & N. R. Co., 37 Fed. R. 567, 633; and see C. & A. R. Co. v. V. & W. Coal Co., 79 Ill. 121, 127.

3. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wh. (U. S.) 1; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wh. (U. S.) 419; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. (U. S.) 299; Almy v. California, 24 How. (U. S.) 169; Gilman v. Phila., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 731; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 232; Cannon v. New Orleans, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 577; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275; R. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465; Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691; Cardwell v. Bridge Co., 113 U. S. 205; Gloucester Fer. Co. v. Penna., 114 U. S. 196; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446; Pickard v. Pull. South. C. Co., 117 U. S. 34; W. St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557; Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 489; Council Bluffs v. K. C. etc. R. Co., 45 Iowa 336; Hardy v. A. T. & S. F. R. Co., 32 Kan. 698.

The distinction between the exclusive and nonexclusive powers of congress, and the fact that it turns on the nature of the subjects in regard to which the power is exercised, is made very clear by CURTIS, J., in Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. (U. S.) 299, 318.

"The grant of commercial power to and the nonexercise of this power as to any such subject indicates an intention that no restrictions should be imposed, and does not warrant any action in the matter by the State.¹ As to subjects of minor or local importance, the power of congress is not exclusive till exercised.² To the first class belong transportation, communication and traffic,³ strictly considered, and as distinguished from matters incidental thereto, which come within the second class.⁴ congress does not contain any terms which expressly exclude the States from exercising an authority over its subject matter. If they are excluded it must be because the nature of the power thus granted to congress requires that a similar authority should not exist in the States. . . . When the nature of a power like this is spoken of, when it is said that the nature of the power requires that it should be exercised exclusively by congress, it must be intended to refer to the subjects of that power, and to say they are of such a nature as to require exclusive regulation by congress. Now the power to regulate commerce embraces a vast field, containing not only many but exceedingly various subjects, quite unlike in their nature; some imperatively demanding a single uniform rule, operating equally on the commerce of the United States in every port; and some as imperatively demanding that diversity which alone can meet the local necessities of navigation.

"Either absolutely to affirm or to deny that the nature of this power requires exclusive legislation by congress, is to lose sight of the nature of the subjects of this power, and to assert concerning all of them what is really applicable but to a part. Whatever subjects of the power are in their nature national, or admit only of one uniform system or plan of regulation, may justly be said to be of such a nature as to require exclusive legislation by congress. That this cannot be affirmed of laws for the regulation of pilots and pilotage is plain. The act of 1789 contains a clear and authoritative declaration by the first congress that the nature of this subject is such that until congress should find it necessary to exert its power, it should be left to the legislation of the States; that it is local and not national; that it is likely to be the best provided for, not by one system or plan of regulations, but by as many as the legislative discretion of the several States should deem applicable to the local peculiarities of the ports within their limits."

To the same effect is the more recent case of Cardwell v. Bridge Co., 113 U. S. 205. After citing the earlier cases the court said that they "illustrate the general doctrine, now fully recognized, that the commercial power of congress is exclusive of State authority only when the subjects upon which it is exerted are national in their character and admit and require uniformity of regulations affecting all the States; and that when the subjects within that power are local in their nature or operation, or constitute mere aids to commerce, the States may provide for their regulation and management until congress interferes and supersedes their action."

1. "The fact that congress has not seen fit to prescribe any specific rules to govern interstate commerce does not affect the question. Its inaction on this subject, when considered with reference to its legislation with respect to foreign commerce, is equivalent to a declaration that interstate commerce shall be free and untrammelled." Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275; and see the cases cited in the last note.

2. See the cases cited in §. 2, p. 545.

3. It will not be denied that that portion of commerce with foreign countries and between the States which consists in the transportation and exchange of commodities is of national importance, and admits and requires uniformity of regulation. The very object of investing this power in the general government was to insure this uniformity against discriminating State legislation." Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275. To the same effect, Gloucester Fer. Co. v. Penna., 114 U. S. 196. As to traffic, Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 489. As to communication, W. U. T. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347.

4. Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. (U. S.) 299.

Bridges Over Navigable Waters.—These form a good illustration of the nonexclusive power of congress, whether they obstruct or facilitate commerce. In the first instance the general power of congress to regulate commerce includes the power to determine what shall or shall not be deemed such an obstruction in judgment of law. Hence congress can legalize a bridge across a navigable stream, and compel vessels to be regulated so as not to interfere with it. Penna. v. Wheeling Br. Co., 18 How. (U. S.) 421; Miller v. Mayor of N. Y., 109 U. S. 388.

It has been indicated, though not decided, that if a bridge, erected by State authority only, prove an obstruction to navigation, congress may order it abated without compensation. Bridge Co. v. U. S., 105 U. S. 470.

Again, bridges may be means of interstate commerce, and it has recently been decided in the United States circuit courts in New Jersey and New York that congress can grant to a private corporation the right to occupy navigable waters within a State, and the soil underneath the same, in order to erect and maintain a bridge from one State to another, to be used for the purposes of interstate commerce, though such grant be without the consent and notwithstanding the protest of the State; and in such a case cession of the soil by the State in which it lies is not necessary to the exercise of the privilege. Decker v. B. & N. Y. R. Co., 30 Fed. R. 723; Stockton v. Same, 32 Fed. R. 9; Penna. R. Co. v. Same, 37 Fed. R. 129. In the second of these cases, BRADLEY, J., said:

"The power to regulate commerce is the basis of the power to regulate navigation and navigable waters and streams, and these are so completely subject to the control of congress, as subsidiary to commerce, that it has become usual to call the entire navigable waters of the country the navigable waters of the United States. It matters little whether the United States has or has not the theoretical ownership and dominion in the waters or the land under them; it has what is more, the regulation and control of them for the purposes of commerce. So wide and extensive is the operation of this power that no State can place any obstruction in or upon any navigable waters against the will of congress, and congress may summarily remove such obstructions at its pleasure. And all this power is derived from the power 'to regulate commerce.' Is this power stayed when it comes to the question of erecting a bridge for the purposes of commerce across a navigable stream? We think not. We think that the power to regulate commerce between the States extends not only to the control of the navigable waters of the country, and the lands under them, for the purposes of navigation, but for the purpose of erecting piers, bridges, and all other instrumentalities of commerce which, in the judgment of congress, may be necessary or expedient."

Congress may prescribe the rates of toll upon bridges over its navigable waters. C. S. R. Co. v. Int. Br. Co., 8 Fed. Rep., 190.

Where congress has exercised no authority, a State can authorize and regulate the erection of bridges over navigable streams which are entirely within its limits. Gilman v. Phila., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 713; Escanaba v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 687; Cardwell v. Am. Br. Co., 113 U. S. 205. If, however, the stream flows through more than one State, or from the boundary between States, the right of States in regard to bridges is not so certain. According to a recent writer this right "should seemingly depend, not on whether the river flows through one or many States, but on how far it is navigable, the size and number of the vessels which pass up and down the channels, and the kind and value of their cargoes. If the regulation of the Schuylkill can safely be left to the local authorities, and the Hudson is exclusively under the control of congress, it is not because the entire course of the former river is in the State of Pennsylvania, while the latter divides New York from New Jersey, but because the traffic on the Hudson much exceeds that on the Schuylkill. A river flowing through two or more States may be so far common property that no one of them can sanction any structure that will obstruct the channel; but if, as we may infer from Gilman v. Phila., a State may bridge rivers which, like the Penobscot, are important avenues of commerce, there would seem to be no sufficient reason why New York and New Jersey should not unite in throwing a bridge over the Hudson. The test seemingly should be: Is the river of such importance to interstate and foreign commerce that it should be exclusively regulated by the general government, and cannot safely be trusted to local legislation, subject to

3. Restrictions Upon the Power of the States—a. As to Discrimination.—No State can, by taxation or otherwise, discriminate against nonresidents—citizens of the United States—as to the business carried on by them in the State,¹ nor against the products of other States.²

b. As to Taxation.—No State, even without discrimination, can the intervention of congress? and the question whether the entire course of the stream is in the State is a circumstance that may deserve consideration, but is not of itself conclusive. A river which has its source in one State and its mouth in another, is, so far as its course through the former is concerned, as entirely local as if it did not enter the latter; and the Hudson above Newburgh should therefore be as much under the control of New York as is the Schuylkill at Philadelphia, especially if the latter be viewed in its true aspect as a branch of the Delaware." 1 Hare's Am. Const. Law, 500.

1. Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 418; See vol. 6, title DRUMMERS; vol. 3, titles COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; also note 2, p. 549. But here, under a general law, a specific tax is assessed upon "every sewing machine company selling or dealing in sewing machines, by itself or its agents, in this State." This embraces domestic as well as foreign companies and is not a regulation of interstate commerce, although, as a matter of fact, no domestic companies may exist. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 33 Fed. Rep. 121.

Foreign Corporations.—While a State may exclude foreign corporations, or prescribe terms or impose a licence fee for their transacting business within her limits (Bk. of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 519; Paul v. Virginia, 8 (Wall.) U. S. 168; Penna. v. Standard Oil Co., 101 Pa. 119), yet this power must not be so exercised as to hinder, burden, or regulate interstate commerce. Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727; Pembina Min. Co. v. Penna., 125 U. S. 181.

Hence the circuit court for Louisiana has held that an article of the constitution of that State, providing that no foreign corporation shall do any business therein without having one or more known places of business and authorized agents on whom process can be served in the State, is void as an attempt to restrict navigation. N. O. & M. P. Co. v. James, 32 Fed. Rep. 21.

In Alabama, a similar constitutional provision has been sustained by the State Court as against a telegraph company. A. U. T. Co. v. W. U. T. Co., 56 Ala. 26. Similar legislative provision has been upheld by the United States Supreme Court. Fire Assoc. of Phila. v. New York, 119 N. Y. See FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, 8 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law.

In Iowa, the State court sustained (though rather as a matter of form, and with much doubt) a statute requiring foreign corporations, other than mercantile or manufacturing, to take out permits before exercising any corporate functions whatever, which permits should be forfeited if the corporation, when sued in a State court, should remove the cause to a federal court on account of local prejudice or its own nonresidence. Goodrel v. Kreichbaum, 70 Iowa 362.

2. A State law requiring persons dealing in merchandise grown or manufactured without the State to pay for and take out a license, while the sale of wares made within the State is left free, is void. Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275; Webber v. Virginia, 103 U. S. 344; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 440; State v. Pratt, 59 Vr. 590; Van Buren v. Downing, 41 Wis. 122.

So is a city ordinance taxing peddlers unless they reside in, and the goods are manufactured in, a certain county. Marshalltown v. Blum, 58 Iowa 184. Or an ordinance requiring vessels laden with the products of other States to pay a larger sum for the use of the public wharves of a city than where the cargo consists of articles grown or made in the State. Guy v. Baltimore, 100 U. S. 434.

But a law taxing "all peddlers of sewing machines and selling by sample" affects such persons "without regard to the place of growth or produce of material, or of manufacture," and is valid. Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, affirming s. c., 7 Bax. (Tenn.) 518. But see note 2, p. 549, as to sale by sample. As to regulation of the liquor traffic see infra, n. 1, p. 556.

impose any tax upon interstate commerce,¹ whether upon sales, by sample or otherwise, of goods to be brought from another State,² or upon passengers³

1. It is well settled that no State can impose a tax under such circumstances and with such effect as to constitute it a regulation of foreign or interstate commerce, and also that the test to be applied in such cases is that where the burden of a tax falls on a thing which is the subject of taxation, the tax is to be considered as laid on the thing rather than on him who is charged with the duty of paying it. Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wh. (U. S.) 419.

"The fairest and most just . . . construction of the constitution leads to the conclusion that no State has a right to lay a tax on interstate commerce in any form, whether by way of duties laid on the transportation of the subjects of that commerce, or on the receipts derived from that transportation, or on the occupation or business of carrying it on, and the reason is that such taxation is a burden on that commerce, and amounts to a regulation of it, which belongs solely to congress." Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640.

It does not help the matter that domestic commerce is subject to the same tax. State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 232; Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 489; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640.

2. "Drummers'" License Taxes.—Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275 (note 2, p. 548), decided simply that there must be no discrimination against interstate commerce. Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676 (supra, same note), sustained the constitutionality of a nondiscriminating State tax on "all peddlers of sewing machines [whether domestic or foreign] and selling by sample;" a decision which seems warranted by the facts of the case, for the agent taxed appears to have sold only machines which had been brought into the State and had become part of the general property. (See Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 123; note 1, p. 550). The business of selling by sample was not referred to in that case; but it is now settled that a State law providing that "all drummers, and all persons not having a regular licensed house of business in the taxing district, offering for sale or selling goods, wares or merchandise therein, by sample, shall be required to pay to the county trustee the sum of $10 per week, or $25 per month for such privilege, and no license shall be issued for a longer period than three months," is void in so far as it applies to persons soliciting the sale of goods on behalf of individuals or firms doing business in another State. Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 489.

The same is true of a law providing that "no person or corporation other than the grower, maker, or manufacturer, shall barter or sell or otherwise dispose of, or shall offer for sale any goods, chattels, wares or merchandise within the State without first obtaining a license" to be paid for at a certain rate. Corson v. Maryland, 120 U. S. 502, reversing s. c., 57 Md. 257. But license to enter, required of foreign corporations, depends on other principles. See note 1, p. 548. To the same effect, Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129 (reversing s. c., 23 Tex. App. 662); ex parte Stockton, 33 Feb. R. 95; State v. Agee, 83 Ala. 110; Fort Scott v. Pelton, 39 Kan. 764; Simmons Hdwre. Co. v. McGuire, 39 La. Ann. 848; ex parte Rosenblatt, 19 Nev. 439; State v. Bracco (N. Car.), 9 S. E. Rep. 404.

In West Virginia, a license tax on agents travelling with one or more horses and selling "any lightning rod, sewing machine, or organ, or other musical instrument" has recently been sustained as against agents selling sewing machines manufactured outside the State, on the ground that it applied only to agents carrying their goods with them. State v. Richards (W. Va.), 9 S. E. Rep. 245. Unless, however, these goods could be held to have reached their destination and thereby become part of the general property of the State, they were still a matter of interstate commerce (note 2, p. 548), and not subject to taxation, directly or in this indirect way.

3. Passengers.—In Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 35, the supreme court doubted whether the transportation of passengers were commerce, but Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485 (note 2, p. 554), settled that it is. This has been followed in the various Pullman car cases, and interstate transportation of passengers is now regulated by the Interstate Commerce act.

or goods¹ carried or messages sent to or from other States,² or

1. Goods.—Neither the business of carrying goods from one State to another (State Freight Tax Case and other cases in next note), nor the goods themselves while in transit (Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517), can be taxed; nor can a licence tax be imposed upon the business or occupation of selling the goods, for that is in effect a tax upon the goods themselves. Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275. As to the goods themselves, as was observed in the last two cases, it is not an easy matter to designate or define the point of time when state jurisdiction over them begins and federal jurisdiction ends, or vice versa; yet it is highly important, both to the business community and to the State, that this should be done as far as possible.

The control of a State over goods brought from another State begins sooner than in the case of imports from a foreign country. In the latter case, the right to sell without any restriction imposed by a State is a necessary incident of the right to import without such restriction, and hence so long as the goods remain the property of the importer, and continue in the original form and packages in which they were imported, the State can impose no tax or duty upon them. Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wh. (U. S.) 419. See Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 527. Nor can their sale by an auctioneer be taxed like other auction sales. Cook v. Penna., 97 U. S. 566.

In the case of goods from another State, no universal rule was stated in Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, the court deeming it sufficient for the purpose of that case to hold that the "commercial power [of congress] continues until the commodity has ceased to be the subject of discriminating legislation by reason of its foreign character. That power protects it even after it has entered the State from any burdens imposed" on that account. It would seem to be the received doctrine that this protection of the goods from all State control while in transit, and from discrimination at all times, is all that congress can or need undertake to secure in the matter. After the goods have been sent from one State to another for sale, or in consequence of a sale, and have reached their destination, they become part of the general property of the State, and are subject to its regulations and taxes just as all other property is, provided only that there be no discrimination against them by reason of their extra-state origin. Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 123; Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676; P. & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 40 La. Ann. 226.

The destination once reached, the mere fact that the sale takes place on the vessel which brought them, cannot divest the State control, which has already attached. Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622.

When State control over goods exported to another State ends is perhaps not so clearly settled, but the best rule would seem to be "that such goods do not cease to be part of the general mass of property of the State, subject, as such, to its jurisdiction, and to taxation in the usual way, until they have been shipped or entered with a common carrier for transportation to another State, or have been started upon such transportation in a continuous route or journey." Hence, logs cut and hauled to the place whence they were to be floated to another State, but kept in that place till it was convenient to float them away, were not yet commodities of interstate commerce, but were taxable. Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517.

2. State Freight Tax Case. 15 Wall. (U. S.) 232; Tel. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460; reversing s. c., 55 Tex. 314.

Occupation and Office License Taxes.—Interstate commerce cannot be taxed even indirectly, as by requiring the payment of a license fee for carrying it on. Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640. This case practically overrules Osborne v. Mobile, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 479, in which a license tax on express and railroad companies "having a business extending beyond the limits of the State," was held not to impose a tax upon interstate commerce, and hence to be valid.

In Pickard v. Pull. South. Car. Co., 117 U. S. 34, Osborne v. Mobile is distinguished from State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 232, and approved because involving a tax upon a business carried on within the city of Mobile only. But in Leloup v. Mobile, BRADLEY, J., said, in delivering the opinion of the court: "In view of the course of decisions which have been made since that time (i. e., the date of Osborne v. Mobile), it is very certain that such an ordinance (as the one in that case) would now be regarded as repugnant to the power conferred upon congress to regulate commerce among the several States."

The downfall of Osborne v. Mobile would seem to carry with it that of Lightburne v. Taxing Dist., 4 Lea (Tenn.) 219, which upheld in reliance on Osborne v. Mobile, a privilege tax upon steamboat and railroad agents, other than officers of railroads terminating in the taxing district, as valid even as against agents whose business was to contract for interstate commerce. Perhaps, also, the same may be said of N. & W. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 114 Pa. St. 256, which held that where a railroad company is confined, by the terms of its charter, to the carriage of freight and passengers within one State, its participation in through transportation carried on by force of traffic contracts with other companies owning roads in other States, is not interstate commerce, and that hence such company can be required to pay an office license tax in another State.

Taxation of Receipts.—State taxation of the receipts derived from interstate commerce is likewise forbidden. Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230; Phila. & South. S. S. Co. v. Penna., 122 U. S. 326 (reversing s. c., 104 Pa. 109); Ratterman v. W. U. T. Co., 127 U. S. 411; W. U. T. Co. v. Penna., 128 U. S. 39; Indiana v. A. E. Co., 7 Biss. (C. C.) 227.

Even in proportion to the distance travelled in the State by passengers or goods carried into, through or out of it. Indiana v. Pull. P. C. Co., 16 Fed. R. 193; State v. Wood, S. & P. C. Co., 114 Ind. 155.

It is immaterial that goods destined for points without the State were temporarily detained in the State. This did not alter their character. D. & H. C. Co. v. Com. (Pa.), 17 Atl. R. 175.

The reversal of Phila. & South. S. S. Co. v. Com., 104 Pa. 309, in 122 U. S. 326, would seem to indicate that Pull. P. C. Co. v. Com., 107 Pa. 148, was also wrongly decided. It held that a carrying company was taxable on all its receipts from business carried on in the State, even including receipts derived from the carriage of passengers into, through, or out of the State. See FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, vol. 8.

In Pennsylvania, it has also been very recently held that a State can tax the receipts from continuous transportation between points within the same, but by a route lying partly in another State, so that the passengers and goods were actually carried out of the State, and then into it again. Com. v. L. V. R. Co., 17 Atl. R. 179. This decision may be questioned. See supra.

The rule above given is analogous to that established in W. St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, that a State cannot regulate interstate transportation charges even for the distance travelled in the State. See title FREIGHT, 8 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law.

The fact that a company is engaged in interstate commerce does not, however exempt it from taxation on its receipts derived from internal commerce, e. g. from the transportation of passengers whose whole journey is within the State. State v. Pull. P. C. Co., 64 Wis. 89; or from telegrams sent by private citizens from one place to another within the State. Tel. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460. See title FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, 8 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law.

Authority of State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts Questioned.—In that case, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 284, it was held that a State could tax the gross receipts of a domestic corporation, even though a part of such receipts be derived from interstate commerce. This was on the ground that the tax was in effect a tax on the franchise which the State had a right to tax on any basis it might see fit, and also that the tax was not levied until after the money had actually come into the company's hands, thereby losing its distinctive character as freight earned, and becoming incorporated into the general mass of the company's property. In Phila. & South. S. Co. v. Penna., 122 U. S. 326, however, the decision in the Railway Gross Receipts case was questioned, and the second ground above given held to be untenable. BRADLEY, J., said: "No doubt a ship owner, like any other citizen, may be personally taxed for the amount of his property or estate, without regard to the source from which it was derived, whether from commerce or banking or any other employment. But that is an entirely different thing from laying a special tax upon his receipts in a particular employment. If such a tax is laid, and the receipts taxed are those derived from transporting goods and passengers in the way of interstate or foreign commerce, no matter upon the means by which interstate commerce is transacted, except in so far as they may be subject to direct taxation as property.¹

c. As to Regulation.—Such matters as are subject to the exclusive control of congress cannot be regulated by the States in any way, whether by fixing rates of charges,² granting monop-when the tax is exacted, whether at the time of realizing the receipts, or at the end of every six months or a year, it is an exaction aimed at the commerce itself, and is a burden upon it, and seriously affects it."

1. It is familiar that the property of individuals and corporations engaged in foreign or interstate commerce is subject to State taxation equally with other property, provided always it be within the jurisdiction of the State. See McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wh. (U. S.) 316, 429; Passenger Cases, 7 How. (U. S.) 283, 402; Tel. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Penna., 114 U. S. 196, 206.

Hence vessels engaged in interstate commerce may be taxed as property, but only at their home port, which must be within the jurisdiction of the State where their owner resides, without regard to their port of registry. St. Louis v. Ferry Co., 11 Wall. (U. S.) 423; People v. Commrs. of Texas, 23 N. Y. 224; Same v. Same, 58 N. Y. 242.

This is so even if the vessel be employed exclusively in commerce between other ports, and do not touch at her home port. Hays v. P. M. S. Co., 17 How. (U. S.) 596; Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 471.

A license fee imposed by a State or a municipality upon ferry boats plying across a navigable river between two States, is, however, not a regulation of interstate commerce. Wiggins Ferry Co. v. E. St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365.

Sleeping and parlor cars belonging to a foreign company, and merely passing through or into a State, cannot be taxed there. Pickard v. Pull. South. C. Co., 117 U. S. 34; Tenn. v. Same, 117 U. S. 51.

But it has been held in Pennsylvania that a foreign corporation doing business in the State is liable to taxation on the proportion of its capital stock invested therein, as represented by the cars used by it in the State, whether such cars be owned or leased by the company; and that the fact that such cars are continuously run into, through, or out of the State, and are also operated in other States, does not exempt them from taxation in the State, but only reduces the valuation upon which the company is taxable. Pull. P. C. Co. v. Com., 107 Pa. St. 156.

Hence a telegraph company can be taxed on its corporate franchise, at a valuation equal to the aggregate value of the shares of its capital stock after deducting from such valuation an amount proportionate to the length of the line lying without the State. Atty. Gen. v. W. U. T. Co., 33 Fed. R. 129; affd. 125 U. S. 530.

2. A State cannot, directly or indirectly, regulate the charges for freight or passengers to points outside its limits. P. C. S. S. Co. v. Bd. of Commrs., 18 Fed. R. 10; Carson v. I. C. R. Co., 59 Iowa, 148; Hardy v. A. T. & S. F. R. Co., 32 Kan. 698; infra, vol. 8, title FREIGHT.

Hence in a case arising from a carriage forming part of an interstate conveyance, a State law forbidding any railroad company to "charge or receive the same or a greater sum for the transportation of passengers and freight of the same class for any distance within the State than it does for a longer distance," was held unconstitutional, because applicable even though the longer distance be without the State, and hence affecting contracts for interstate transportation. Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 579, reversing s. c., 105 Ill. 236.

Even if the regulation is confined in terms to so much of the distance traversed as is within the State, and congress has taken no action in the matter, this does not alter the case. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557; Kaeiser v. I. C. R. Co., 5 McCr. (U. S. C.) 496; s. c., 18 Fed. R. 151; L. & N. R. Co. v. Commn., 19 Fed. R. 679; I. C. R. Co. v. Stone, 20 Fed. R. 468; M. & O. R. Co. v. Sessions, 28 Fed. R. 592; State v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 70 Iowa 162; Com. v. Hous. R. Co., 143 Mass. 264; R. R. Commrs. v. R. R. Co., 22 S. Car. 220; infra, vol. 8, title FREIGHT.

The same rule applies to carriage between points in the same State, but by a route lying partly in another State. This is interstate commerce, and the rates are subject to the control of congress. N. O. Cot. Exch. Co. v. N. O. etc. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. R. 375; State v. C. St. P. M. & O. R. Co. (Minn.), 41 N. W. Rep. 1047.

Before the "Interstate Commerce act" was passed, a State could require railroads traversing its territory to fix their rates of charges annually, and to keep printed tables of such rates posted in their stations, and forbid the charging of a higher rate than is so fixed and posted. R. R. Co. v. Fuller, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 560. In that case the court said: "No discrimination is made between local and interstate freights, and no attempt is made to control the rates that may be charged. It is only required that the rates shall be fixed, made public, and honestly adhered to. In this there is nothing unreasonable or onerous. The public welfare is promoted without wrong or injury to the company." The federal act has now superseded such legislation.

The "Granger Cases."—In Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113; C. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S. 155; Peik v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 94 U. S. 164; C. M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ackley, 94 U. S. 199; W. & St. P. R. Co. v. Blake, 94 U. S. 180; and Stone v. Wisconsin, 94 U. S. 181, it was held (FIELD and STRONG, J. J., dissenting) that where a railroad or warehouse was situated within the limits of a single State, its business was carried on there and its regulation was a matter of domestic concern, although such road or warehouse might be used as an instrument of interstate as well as of domestic commerce; and that until congress acted in regard to the interstate relations of such a road or warehouse, the State could enforce her own regulations upon it, and limit the rates to be charged for carriage or other services, even though such regulations should "indirectly operate upon commerce outside her immediate jurisdiction." (94 U. S. 135.)

These cases were cited with approval by WAITE, C. J., in the later "Railroad Commission cases," 116 U. S. 307, 325, 329, but have been the subject of much criticism. Very many of the State courts of last resort have relied on them in support of State authority against the defence of interstate commerce, only to find that they had leant upon a "bruised reed." It is to be observed that in Munn v. Illinois the court say: "We do not say that a case may not arise in which it will be found that a State, under the form of regulating its own affairs, has encroached upon the exclusive dominion of commerce in respect of interstate commerce, but we do say that, upon the facts as they are represented to us in this record, that has not been done," while in C. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa, the answer denied that any attempt was to be made to enforce the law so far as concerns interstate commerce. In all the Granger cases the interference with interstate commerce was only one of several constitutional matters assigned for error, and was treated as one of the least important. The reports clearly show that the main questions were: first, the fundamental one of the right of a State to restrict in any way the power of a railroad or elevator company to fix the rates at which it would do business, without regard to whether that business might be interstate or not; and secondly, that of the right to make any such restrictions in view of the express or implied rights of the railroads under their charters. The extent to which such restrictions might affect interstate commerce, and the right of a State to make any restrictions which might affect it, received very little attention either from court or counsel. In a general way the court treated the cases as belonging to that class of commercial regulations (like those affecting pilotage, bridges, etc.) which were within the power of a State until congress acted; or, perhaps, rather as resembling those internal regulations which are necessarily within the power of a State even though they may possibly have an incidental effect on interstate commerce. All this is pointed out in W. St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, by MILLER, J., who was of the majority who decided the Granger cases. He admits that the general language of the court in those cases "may be susceptible of the meaning which the Illinois court placed upon it" in the case before him, and which, speaking for the majority, he then and there declared not to be law, viz.: that a State could limit the rates of transportation for such proportion of a contract of interstate carriage as was actually performed within the State. Such an admission is perhaps as near an overruling as it was possible to go, inasmuch as the lies,¹ or other modes of interference.² As to other matters, the individual States are entitled to some control, which is usually manifested in the exercise of the police power.³ They may, in the ab-cases were, in his view, properly decided as to all the principal points presented in the arguments.

On the whole, therefore, the granger cases may safely be relied upon as establishing the right of a State to limit the rates for transportation, etc., to be charged by corporations engaged in strictly internal commerce within its borders; i. e., that such limitation is not a taking of private property for public use without due process of law, and also that the laws under consideration in those cases do not infringe the constitutions of the States that had enacted them. As to interstate commerce, however, in view of the recent cases of W. St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557; Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 489, and Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, they can hardly be considered as of any authority. Apart from this, too, congress has since acted in regard to the interstate matters involved in all the cases except Munn v. Illinois (the elevator case), and the Interstate Commerce act, declaring that interstate transportation rates shall be reasonable and uniform, removes all possibility of State interference in the matter.

1. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wh. (U. S.) 1; Pen. Tel. Co. v. W. U. T. Co., 96 U. S. 1.

2. A State cannot require telegraph companies doing business within the State to deliver despatches by messenger to the persons to whom the same are addressed or their agents, provided they reside within one mile of the telegraph station or within the city or town where such station is, so far as such requirement affects the delivery of messages outside the State. W. U. T. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347; reversing s. c., 95 Ind 15.

A State law requiring the owners of all steamboats navigating its waters to file certain statement in regard to each boat before it should leave a certain port, is void as regards vessels engaged in interstate commerce. Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. (U. S.) 227; Foster v. Davenport, 22 How. (U. S.) 244.

In Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, it was held that a State law securing equal rights to all passengers in any public conveyance passing through two or more States or from one State to another, was a regulation of interstate commerce and therefore void. The reasoning was that if one State might require that persons of different colors should occupy the same cabin, another might insist that they should be kept apart, a diversity of rules embarrassing to commercial intercourse. If legislation were necessary in the matter, it was for congress to undertake it.

In New York, the "Sunday laws" have been held void in so far as they attempt to interfere with the right of an express company to transact interstate business on that day. Dinsmore v. N. Y. Pol. Bd., 12 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 439; Ad. Ex. Co. v. Same, 65 How. (N. Y.) 72.

But in West Virginia, the right to forbid the running of freight trains on Sunday has been upheld without regard to the interstate character of the business. State v. & B. O. R. Co., 24 W. Va. 783.

In Texas, it has been held that as the State constitution prohibits railroads from controlling parallel or competing lines, this applies to traffic associations engaged partly in interstate commerce, and even though some of the members are foreign corporations. The court thought that "the defendant corporations who derive their charters from this State are acting in violation of law in entering into this contract of association; some of the members of the association being competing lines of road. The association, being illegal as to some of the defendants, is illegal as to all. G. C. & S. F. R. Co. v. State (Tex.), 10 S. W. Rep. 81.

Where a railroad has been organized under the statutes of several States to operate a continuous line, statutes authorizing the consolidation of the whole are not an interference with interstate commerce. Boardman v. L. S. & M. S. R. Co., 84 N. Y. 157.

3. It has not always been found easy to keep State authority within its proper limits.

"The line of distinction," says JUDGE COOLEY, "between that which constitutes an interference with commerce, and that which is a mere police regulasence of congressional legislation on the subject, pass laws regulating interstate commerce as to matters which are so local in their nature and operation that a uniform system throughout the whole country would be impracticable, and also matters constituting mere aids to commerce.¹ Furthermore, in pursuance of their general authority over internal concerns, the States may pass laws incidentally affecting interstate commerce, provided such laws do not discriminate against such commerce, and are not in-tion, is sometimes exceedingly dim and shadowy, and it is not to be wondered at that learned jurists differ when endeavoring to classify the cases which arise. It is not doubted that congress has the power to go beyond the general regulations of commerce which it is accustomed to establish, and to descend to the most minute directions, if it shall be deemed advisable; and that to whatever extent ground shall be covered by those directions, the exercise of State power is excluded. Congress may establish police regulations as well as the States, confining their operation to the subjects over which it is given control by the constitution. But as the general police power can better be exercised under the supervision of the local authority, and mischiefs are not likely to spring therefrom so long as the power to arrest collision resides in the national courts, the regulations which are made by congress do not often exclude the establishment of others by the State covering very many particulars." Cooley's Const. Lim. (5th ed.) 724.

1. "It is an established principle that the only way in which commerce between the States can be legitimately affected by State laws is when, by virtue of its police power, and its jurisdiction over persons and property within its limits, a State provides for the security of the lives, limbs, health and comfort of persons and the protection of property; or when it does those things which may otherwise incidentally affect commerce; such as the establishment and regulation of highways, canals, railroads, wharves, ferries, and other commercial facilities; the passage of inspection laws to regulate or restrict the sale of articles deemed injurious to the health or morals of the community; the imposition of taxes upon persons residing in the State or belonging to its population, and upon avocations and employments pursued therein, not directly connected with foreign or interstate commerce, or with some other employment or business exercised under authority of the constitution and laws of the United States; and the imposition of taxes upon all property within the State, mingling with and forming part of the great mass of property therein." Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 489.

A State may prescribe a system of pilotage. Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. (U. S.) 299; State v. Penny, 19 S. Car. 218.

But not one discriminating in favor of vessels of any State or plying between any particular ports. Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, reversing s. c., 69 Ga. 409; Freeman v. The Undaunted, 37 Fed. R. 662.

A State may establish port regulations. Owners of Brig v. Owners of Ship, 21 How. (U. S.) 184.

And even apart from measures to protect health, the State may prescribe rules for the government of vessels whilst in its harbors; it may provide for their anchorage or mooring, so as to prevent confusion and collision; it may designate the wharves at which they shall discharge and receive their passengers and cargoes, and require their removal from the wharves when not thus engaged, so as to make room for other vessels. It may appoint officers to see that the regulations are carried out, and impose penalties for refusing to obey the directions of such officers; and it may impose a tax upon vessels sufficient for the expenses attendant upon the execution of these regulations. Vanderbilt v. Adams, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 349.

Or quarantine regulations, and may require fees to be paid for inspections. Morgan v. Louisiana, 118 U. S. 455.

Or provide for the improvement of harbors, bays and rivers. Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691; In re Watson, 15 Fed. R. 511.

And protect them from the deposit of consistent with acts of congress. This power of the States is absolutely essential to the existence of a proper measure of local self government.¹

offal and dirt therein. N. Y. v. Furgueson, 23 Hun (N. Y.) 594.

If a State improves its rivers and harbors, it may impose a tax upon all vessels navigating them. This would not be a tax upon commerce, but merely a compensation for the additional facilities provided. Kellogg v. Union Co., 12 Conn. 7; Thames Bk. v. Lovell, 18 Conn. 500; McReynolds v. Smallhouse, 8 Bush (Ky.) 447.

A State may provide for the erection of wharves and collection of wharfage. Packet Co. v. Catlettsburg, 105 U. S. 559; Onachita P. Co. v. Aiken, 121 U. S. 444.

Or grant ferry licenses, directly or through a municipality. Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. (U. S.) 524; Conway v. Taylor's Exr., 1 Bl. (U. S.) 603; Wiggins Fer. Co. v. E. St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, affirming s. c., 102 Ill. 560.

Or provide for the erection of bridges over navigable streams. See p. 546, note 4.

1. The leading case on this point is Wilson v. Black Bird etc. Co., 2 Pet. (U. S.) 245, in which a State law authorizing the erection of a dam across a small navigable creek in order to exclude the tide and reclaim an unhealthy marsh, was held not be a regulation of commerce, but an exercise of the right, common to every State, to adopt such measures as will, in the opinion of the legislature, promote the health of the inhabitants or give additional value to the land. So long as congress passed no law regulating State legislation upon the particular creek, or upon such creeks in general, the State law did not interfere with the authority of congress. The only criticism to be made upon this is that the decision seems to have been reached with rather unnecessary difficulty. If the fact that interstate commerce may be incidentally affected to an infinitesimal degree were held to prevent a State from exercising the most ordinary and necessary functions of government in a matter in which congress has shown no intention of acting, or from allowing its citizens to protect their own health or promote their own convenience, local self government would be at an end.

As was said in Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99: "Whatever congress determines, either as to a regulation [of commerce] or the liability for its infringement, is exclusive of State authority. But with reference to a great variety of matters touching the rights and liabilities of persons engaged in commerce, either as owners or navigators of vessels, the laws of congress are silent, and the laws of the State govern . . . and it may be said, generally, that the legislation of a State, not directed against commerce or any of its regulations, but relating to the rights, duties and liabilities of citizens, and only indirectly and remotely affecting the operations of commerce, is of obligatory force upon citizens within its territorial jurisdiction, whether on land or water, or engaged in commerce, foreign or interstate, or in any other pursuit." Hence it was held in that case that in the absence of congressional legislation as to liabilities for marine torts, committed within the territorial limits of a State, and resulting in death, a State law giving a right of action to the personal representatives of the deceased was valid.

So a State may regulate maritime liens. The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558.

The powers reserved to the several States extend to all the objects which in the ordinary course of affairs concern property and the rights of property within each State. Hence the liability of the owners of a vessel or railroad engaged in interstate commerce for injury caused by such vessel or railroad, by fire, or otherwise, to property on land or outside the premises occupied by the railroad, is not a matter within the control of congress. King v. Am. Transp. Co., 1 Flip. (U. S.) 1; Smith v. B. & M. R. Co., 63 N. H. 25.

And a State may authorize such liability to be enforced by lien. Johnson v. C. & P. Elev. Co., 119 U. S. 388.

State Regulations.—A State can impose reasonable restrictions upon the mode in which any business is carried on, whether interstate commerce be involved or not, provided only that it be not hampered thereby. Thus a State may require timber floating down a river from or to other States to be bound into rafts and placed under the care of a sufficient number of persons. Harrigan v. Conn. Riv. L. Co., 129 Mass. 580; s. c., 37 Am. R. 387.

Or require oyster boats to be licenced and regulate the mode of catching, in order to preserve clams and oysters. Smith v. Marpland, 18 How. (U. S.) 71; Johnson v. Loper, 46 N. J. L. 321.

As to Railroads.—As was said in Stone v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 116 U. S. 307, 333 (one of the "Railroad Commission cases"), "There can be no doubt that each of the States through which the Mobile and Ohio railroad passes incorporated the company for the purpose of securing the construction of . . . a continuous line of interstate communication between the Gulf of Mexico in the south and the great lakes in the north. It is equally certain that congress aided in the construction of parts of this line of road so as to establish such a route of travel and transportation. But it is none the less true that the corporation created by each State is for all the purposes of local government a domestic corporation, and that its railroad within the State is a matter of domestic concern. . . . Mississippi may govern this corporation, as it does all domestic corporations, in respect to every act and everything within the State which is the lawful subject of State government. It may, beyond all question, by the settled rule of decision of this court, regulate freights and fares for business done exclusively within the State, and it would seem to be a matter of domestic concern to prevent the company from discriminating against persons and places in Mississippi. So it may make all needful regulations of a police character for the government of the company while operating its road in that jurisdiction. In this way it may certainly require the company to fence so much of its road as lies within the State; to stop its trains at railroad crossings; to slacken speed while running in a crowded thoroughfare; to post its tariffs and time tables at proper places; etc. . . . This company is not entirely relieved from State control in Mississippi simply because it has been incorporated by, and is carrying on business in, the other States through which its road runs. While in Mississippi it can be governed by Mississippi in respect to all things which have not been placed by the constitution of the United States within the exclusive jurisdiction of congress. . . . It is not enough to prevent the State from acting that the road in Mississippi is used in aid of interstate commerce. Legislation of this kind to be unconstitutional must be such as will necessarily amount to or operate as a regulation of business without the State as well as within."

Hence, a State may require locomotive engineers to pass a color examination, and punish companies employing them without certificate of their fitness. Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465; N. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96.

In Illinois, it is held that passenger trains, though coming from or going to another State, may be required to stop at county seats a sufficient time to enable passengers to get on and off. C. & A. R. Co. v. Peop., 105 Ill. 657.

In Arkansas, it is held that a State may prohibit the collection of more freight than the bill of lading specifies, and punish the withholding of goods until extra charges are paid. This is a mere police regulation, to prevent extortion and delay. L. R. & F. S. R. Co. v. Hanniford, 49 Ark. 291.

A State may require railroad companies to draw the cars of other corporations at reasonable times and rates, to be agreed upon by the parties or fixed by the commissioner. Rae v. G. T. R., 14 Fed. R. 401; Iowa v. C. M. & St. P. R. Co., 33 Fed. R. 391.

And it has been held that the charge for taking such cars onto the company's line ("switching," as it is called) is not part of the through rate, and has no reference to interstate commerce, and hence may be regulated by a State commission appointed under the police power. C. M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Becher, 32 Fed. R. 849.

Or even if such "switching" be an act of interstate commerce, such regulation is valid, as it does not refer to the carriage of freight outside the State. Iowa v. C. M. & St. P. R. Co., 33 Fed. R. 391.

The time, place and manner of making transfers of the subjects of commerce from one company's road to another cannot be regulated by a State so far as interstate commerce is concerned. Council Bluffs v. K. C. etc. R. Co., 45 Iowa 338.

In Iowa, it has been held, in reliance upon the "Granger cases," that a State law avoiding a contract of carriage limiting the carrier's liability is valid even as against contracts for interstate carriage. The court said: "The provision is in no just or legal sense a regulation of commerce. It prescribes no regulation for the transportation of freight upon any of the channels of communication. It leaves the parties free to make such contracts as they may choose to make with reference to the compensation which shall be paid for the services to be rendered. The carrier . . . is forbidden to make any contract that would exempt him from any of the liabilities which arise by implication from his undertaking to carry the property. But no burden is placed upon the property which is the subject of the contract; nor is any rule prescribed for his government respecting it. . . . The statute was enacted by the State in the exercise of the police power with which it is vested, and it is applicable to all contracts entered into within the jurisdiction." Hart v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 69 Iowa 485.

As to Health.—The power to prescribe regulations to protect the health of the community, and prevent the spread of disease, is incident to all local municipal authority, however much such regulations may interfere with the movements of commerce. Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Penna., 114 U. S. 196.

Hence, the importation of diseased cattle from another State may be prohibited. M. P. R. Co. v. Finley, 38 Kan. 550.

And the importer may be held liable for the consequences of letting cattle which come from a dangerous district run at large. Kimmish v. Ball, 129 U. S. 217.

But all importation of cattle, whether diseased or not, from other States, or certain of them, cannot be forbidden. R. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 455; Salzenstein v. Mavis, 91 Ill. 391; Arton v. Sherlock, 75 Mo. 247.

A State law punishing the sale of oleomargarine colored with annatto is valid as applied to a sale by the agent of a manufacturer in another State and although the package sold had been sent from such other State for sale. Waterbury v. Newton, 50 N. J. L. 534. The court said: "It seems proper to conclude that the package of oleomargarine with which we are now dealing became, on its delivery to the consignee in Jersey City, subject to our laws relating generally to all articles of that nature in the State, unless those laws are opposed to the legislation of congress. The only federal law [on the subject] implies that the prohibition of such traffic [in oleomargarine] by State legislation is permissible."

Kentucky statute regulating inspection and gauging of oils and fluids, is a mere police regulation within the power of the State, and does not contravene the federal constitution. Patterson v. Kentucky, 7 Otto (U. S.) 501; Book 24, L. ed. 1115. The right conferred upon a patentee and his assigns to use and vend an oil for illuminating purposes, created by the application of a patented discovery, must be exercised in subordination to the police regulations which the State established by such statute. Patterson v. Kentucky, 7 Otto (U. S.) 501.

As to Liquor Traffic.—The importation of intoxicating liquor from another State may be subjected to a license tax (Hinson v. Lott, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 148; License Cases, 5 How. (U. S.) 504), or even prohibited, providing domestic liquor be subject to the same restriction. Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 129; Beer Co. v. Mass., 97 U. S. 25; Weil v. Calhoun, 25 Fed. R. 165; Kansas v. Bradley, 26 Fed. R. 289; State v. O'Neil, 58 Vt. 140.

In Iowa, a statute prohibiting the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors, even for exportation, unless manufactured within the State for mechanical, medical, culinary or sacramental purposes, and prohibiting also the sale of imported foreign intoxicating liquor, unless in its original packages and quantities, is not in conflict with the exclusive power of congress over interstate commerce. Pearson v. Int. Dist., 72 Iowa 348.

As to Inspection.—Inspection laws are likewise permissible, if reasonable. Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38; Higgins v. Casks of Lime, 130 Mass. 1.

As to Game.—Inasmuch as no State can pass a law (whether congress has already acted upon the subject or not) which will directly interfere with the free transportation from one State to another, or through a State, of anything which is or may be a subject of interstate commerce, it follows that a law allowing prairie chickens to be killed, and thereby to become a subject of commerce, but prohibiting their transportation to any other State, is unconstitutional and void. Had the law forbidden the catching and killing of prairie chickens, and thereby indirectly prevented their exportation, it might have been valid. State v. Saun-

4. The Interstate Commerce Act.—By the “act to regulate commerce,” of February 4, 1889, amended by that of March 2, 1889,¹ congress subjected to its regulation all common carriers² engaged ders, 19 Kan. 127. See infra, vol. 8, title GAME AND GAME LAWS.

1. U. S. Stat. 1886-87, ch. 103; U. S. Stats. 1888-89, ch. 382.

Constitutionality of the Act.—MR. DOS PASSOS says (Int. Com. Act, p. xii) that when “its constitutionality is challenged, it will be found that outside of some disjected dicta of judges there is no precedent for it in the decisions of the United States courts;” and he further (p. 8) says that the language of MILLER, J. (in W. St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Ill., 118 U. S. 557, 577, that the prevention of discrimination is “a regulation of commerce” which must be of a “national character,” and can only be affected “by general rules and principles,” which facts “demand that it should be done by the congress of the United States under the commerce clause of the constitution”), “should be regarded as obiter dictum, and used only in a most general sense. MR. HARPER (Law of Int. Com., pp. 19-29) has answered this objection at some length and to some purpose. No case under the act has yet been decided in the supreme court, though its enactment was referred to with approval by MILLER, J., in Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 239. At present it may be sufficient to call attention to the fact that the constitutionality does not seem to have been attacked in any of the circuit court cases in regard to the act, while in one of them the court, apparently of its own motion, expressly affirmed this constitutionality, saying: “Prior to the passage of the Interstate Commerce act, this power and exclusive authority over the subject was only exercised—with the exception of regulations for the protection of passengers upon navigable waters, and the transportation of live stock by railways—through the judicial department of the general government in the way of restraining or annulling State legislation or action which undertook to interfere with, obstruct or impose burdens or restrictions upon interstate commerce. But the power is manifestly not confined or limited to this negative form of action upon the State. It clearly admits of affirmative exercise on the part of congress, as much as any other power granted by the constitution to the federal government.” K. & I. Br. Co. v. L. & N. R. Co., 37 Fed. R. 567, 534.

2. Carriers Subject to Its Jurisdiction.—The act “embraces the carriers ‘engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad, or partly by railroad and partly by water when both are used, under a common control, management or arrangement, for a continuous carriage or shipment,’ in interstate or international commerce.

“Carriers by Water.—It does not embrace the carriers wholly by water, though they also may be engaged in the like commerce, and as such be rivals of the carriers which it undertakes to control. . . .

“Express Carriers.—The question whether [they are] within the contemplation of the act is not so clear. . . .

“The commission . . . is of opinion that the express business, so far as it is done by the railroad companies themselves, whether directly, and by their managing officers, or indirectly, and through nominal corporations created for the purpose, is within the act; and that such companies are under obligations to see to it that such tariffs are filed, and that the rules of fairness and equality which the act prescribes are observed. Whether the express companies which are independent of the railroads are within the contemplation of the act is more doubtful. . . . Congress ought to [decide it] by either expressly and by designation including the express companies or by excluding them. [See In re Exp. Co.’s, 1 I. C. C. R. 349.]

“Other Carriers.—What is said of the express business is applicable also to the business of furnishing extra accommodations to passengers in sleeping and parlor cars. These accommodations are furnished in some cases by the railroad companies, and in others by outside corporations, which are not supposed to be embraced by the terms of the law. Outside companies are also to some extent engaged in the transportation of live stock in cars owned by themselves, but transported over the railroads under special arrangements with the railroad companies which supply the motive power.

in continuous¹ interstate or international² transportation³ of passengers or property by rail,⁴ or rail and water combined, under a common control, management or arrangement,⁵ except as re-

"It is well known also that the transportation of mineral oil is already to a very large extent in tank cars owned by parties who are not carriers subject to regulation under the act. If it is the will of congress that all transportation of persons and property by rail should come under the same rules of general right and equity, some further designation of the agencies in transportation which shall be controlled by such rules would seem to be indispensable." Rept. of Com. 1 I. C. C. Rep. 271-278.

Carriers whose participation in interstate traffic is limited to a few species of traffic only, must, however, conduct such traffic subject to the act. Rept., 2 I. C. C. Rep. 399-402.

Foreign Carriers.—These are subject to the act in regard to all interstate or international transportation carried on by them, to the same extent as domestic carriers are. In re G. T. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. Rep. 89.

Bridge Company Not a Carrier.—A bridge company, empowered to make its bridge and the approaches thereto "a public thoroughfare or highway, for the use of which by railroads or street cars, wagons, vehicles, animals, and foot passengers, it was authorized to charge 'reasonable tolls,' for the collection of which suitable toll gates could be established," is not a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce, within the act of 1887, although the bridge connect two States. Nor does the fact that the company transfers cars over its own tracks from one railroad to another, within the limits of a single town, and charges for such switching, alter the matter. K. & I. Br. Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 567, 615-620.

1. Continuous Carriage.—The act does not include the carriage or handling of passengers or property, by rail or otherwise, where such carriage or handling is performed wholly within a State, unless such passengers or property are shipped directly to or from such State from or to another State or a foreign country. Hence it does not apply to two companies carrying between San Francisco, Cal., and Portland, Ore., but giving no through bill of lading, and each liable only for the carriage on its own line. There is no "common control" in such a case. Ex parte Koehler, 30 Fed. Rep. 867.

2. The commerce affected is international as well as interstate. It is "transportation of passengers or property . . . from one State or territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, to any other State or territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, or from any place in the United States to an adjacent foreign country, or from any place in the United States through a foreign country to any other place in the United States, and also . . . of property shipped from any place in the United States to a foreign country and carried from such place to a port of transshipment, or shipped from a foreign country to any place in the United States, and carried to such place from a port of entry either in the United States or an adjacent foreign country." Act of 1887, § 1.

3. "Transportation" embraces "all instrumentalities of shipment or carriage" (§ 1, par. 2), and includes such cars as are provided by the carrier, but the act does not regulate the car equipment except to prevent discrimination. Schofield v. L. S. & M. S. R. R. Co., 2 Int. Com. 90, 117.

4. "Railroad" is defined in § 1, pt. 2, as including "all bridges and ferries used or operated in connection with any railroad," and all the road in use, whether owned by the company operating it or not. Hence, it includes a railroad situated wholly in one State, and not operated by its owners, but used as a means of interstate commerce by companies owning interstate roads. Heck v. E. T. V. & G. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 495.

5. "Control"—In the case of a contract by a railroad company concerning all roads which it then did or might thereafter control, by ownership, lease, or otherwise, this was held to mean an immediate or executive control exercised by officers and agents chosen by and acting under the direction of the company's board of directors acting as such; and where the company afterwards acquired a majority of the stock of another road, and elected its own president and vice president and some of its directors to the same positions in gards carriage under certain specified circumstances.¹ All such carriers are forbidden to make any unreasonable rates for such carriage;² or any unjust discrimination as between shippers by means of special rates or rebates, or undue preferences or prejudices;³ or as between connecting lines by refusing reasonable the other company, this was held not to be a control within the meaning of the contract. Pull. P. C. Co. v. Mo. Pac. R. Co., 11 Fed. R. 634.

"Arrangement."—This word is probably used in the same sense as in the English Regulation of Railways act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict., ch. 48). It has been held under that act that "an arrangement" by a railway company "for using, maintaining or working steam vessels for the purpose of carrying on a communication between any towns or ports" covered any arrangement with the proprietors of steam vessels for carriage to or from any place with which there was railway communication, provided the railway company party to the arrangement owned or worked, or was otherwise immediately interested in, some portion or other of the line of railway communication. Cal. R. Co. v. Greenock etc. R. Co., 4 R. & C. Traf. Cas. 135.

An agreement between a railway company and a steamboat company for a service of vessels between certain ports, "the hours of departure to be determined by the steamboat company, regard being had, however, to the convenience of the railway company and the arrival and departure of their trains," is an arrangement within the act. Belfast etc. R. Co. v. G. N. R. Co., 4 R. & C. Traf. Cas. 379.

The practice by a railway company of issuing through tickets between two points, including the carriage by certain steam vessels for the sea part of the journey, has been held not such an "arrangement" for the use of these vessels as to enable the owners to require through rates to other points, under the act. Ayr Har. Trustees v. Glasgow Ry. Co., 4 R. & C. Traf. Cas. 81.

1. The matters excepted from the operation of the act are "the carriage, storage or handling of property free or at reduced rates for the United States, State or municipal governments, or for charitable purposes, or to or from fairs and expositions for exhibition thereat;" "the free carriage of destitute and homeless persons transported by charitable societies, and the agents employed in such transportation;" "the issuance of mileage, excursion or commutation passenger tickets," the "giving reduced rates to ministers of religion, or to municipal governments for the transportation of indigent persons, or to inmates of "homes for soldiers or sailors or their orphans, under arrangements with the managers of such homes; free carriage to the officers and employes of the company carrying them; exchange of passes or tickets between different roads for the carriage of their respective officers and employes. Sec. 22 as amended.

See In re Indian Supplies, 1 I. C. C. R. 15; In re Disabled Soldiers, 1 I. C. C. R. 28; In re Fish Comm., 1 I. C. C. R. 21; Larrison v. C. & G. T. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 147; Ass'd Grocers v. St. L. & M. P. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 156.

The exception as to passes to officers and employes does not apply to their families. Ex parte Koehler, 31 Fed. R. 315.

2. Under § 1 of the act, all charges made for any service in the transportation of passengers or property or for receiving, delivering, handling or storing property must be reasonable and just. Cutting v. Fla. R. & N. Co., 30 Fed. R. 663; Bds. of Trade v. C. M. & St. P. R. Co., 1 Int. Com. R. 215; Raymond v. C. M. & St. P. R. Co., 1 Int. Com. R. 230; Evans v. Oregon R. & N. Co., 1 Int. Com. R. 325; Farrar v. E. T. V. & G. R. Co., 1 Int. Com. R. 480.

When, pending proceedings to test the reasonableness of rates, they are reduced to a satisfactory basis, the commission will not consider the question of whether they were excessive before the reduction, it being no longer a practical question. Bishop v. Duval, 3 Int. Com. R. 128.

Unreasonably low rates are not illegal, nor has the commission authority to require them to be increased on the ground that persistence in them would be ruinous. In re C. St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 2 Int. Com. 231.

3. Discrimination.—Act of 1887, §§ 2, 3. See, as to special rates, rebates, etc., P. C. Co. v. P. & W. R. Co., 1 Int. Com. R. 107; Larrison v. C. & G. T. R.

facilities for the interchange of traffic;¹ or to fix a smaller compensation in the aggregate for a long than a short haul in the transportation of passengers, or of like kind of property, under substantially similar conditions and circumstances, over the same line in the Co., 1 Int. Com. 147; Smith v. N. P. R. Co., 1 Int. Com. 208; Riddle v. P. & L. E. R. Co., 1 Int. Com. 374; Rice v. L. & N. R. Co., 1 Int. Com. 503.

Free passes, except to officers, etc. (see § 22), are forbidden, but the act is not violated unless the forbidden pass is used. Griffie v. B. & M. R. R. Co., 2 Int. Com. 301.

See, as to preferences and prejudices, P. C. Co. v. P. & W. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 107; Keith v. K. C. R. Co., 1 Int. Com. 189; Bds. of Trade v. C. M. & St. P. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 215; Raymond v. Same, 1 I. C. C. R. 230; Council v. W. & A. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 339; Reynolds v. W. N. Y. & P. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 393; Crews v. R. & D. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 401; Heard v. Ga. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 428; Bost. Ch. of Com. v. L. S. & M. S. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 436; Heck v. E. T. V. & G. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 495; Rice v. L. & N. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 503.

Undue preferences include preferences of one class of passengers over another where both pay the same rate of fare. If a company furnishes separate cars to white and colored passengers on its line engaged in interstate travel, it must make all the cars equal in comforts, accommodation and equipment. Heard v. Ga. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. R. 111.

But "all discriminations and preferences are not forbidden or made unlawful; but only such as are unjust, or undue, or unreasonable, are prohibited. In each and every case, therefore, the question whether a discrimination is unjust, or a preference is undue or unreasonable, either as to the common carrier or the commerce it may transport, involves a consideration of the circumstances and conditions under which such discrimination or preference is made or given." K. & I. Br. Co. v. L. & N. R. Co., 37 Fed. R. 567, 624.

As to discrimination in general, see FREIGHT.

Fleeing.—The offence is "unjust discrimination" in whatever manner effected, and whether directly or indirectly. The particular device resorted to need not be averred in an indictment.

A count stating that the defendant charged and received of one party a higher rate than that charged and received of another party for transporting the same class of goods between the same points (naming them), and over the same route, is sufficient, without averring that the service was rendered "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions." U. S. v. Sozer, 37 Fed. R. 635.

1. Facilities to Other Companies.—By the act of 1887, § 3, every common carrier within the act must "afford all reasonable, proper and equal facilities" for the interchange of traffic, etc., to all connecting lines. Cutting v. Fla. R. & N. Co. Co., 30 Fed. R. 663. See A. T. & S. F. R. Co. v. D. & N. O. R. Co., 110 U. S. 667.

"Facilities" for the interchange of traffic and passengers are what the act contemplates, not the furnishing of cars. Schofield v. L. S. & M. S. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. R. 90, 116.

This provision does not cover any mode of procedure for establishing through routes and through rates, and the equitable apportionment of the rates established, as is done by the English acts. K. & I. Br. Co. v. L. & N. R. Co., 37 Fed. R. 567, 630; L. R. & M. R. Co. v. E. T. V. & G. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. R. 1, 16.

Nor does it require a road to sell through tickets over another line whose managers persist in offering commissions to the agents who sell such tickets. C. & A. R. Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 86.

It does not necessitate the forming of new connections or the establishing of new stations for the reception and delivery of freight, etc., but only that whatever facilities in the way of yards, stations, etc., it affords to some of its connecting lines at any point, the same proper, reasonable and equal facilities cannot be denied to other lines connecting at the same point. K. & I. Br. Co. v. L. & N. R. Co., 37 Fed. R. 567, 623.

Proviso.—The section concludes with a proviso that it "shall not be construed as requiring any such common carrier to give the use of its track or same direction,¹ unless authorized by the commission;² or to combine for the pooling of freights and dividing of earnings.³ They are also required, and may be compelled by mandamus, to file with the commission, and keep posted in all their stations,⁴ schedules, made according to a form prescribed by the commission,⁵ of all terminal facilities to another carrier engaged in like business. This leaves it open to any common carrier to arrange with other lines for the use of its track or terminal facilities without incurring the charge of preferring such lines or discriminating against other carriers who are not parties to, or included in, such arrangements. No common carrier can therefore justly complain of another that it is not allowed the use of that other's tracks and terminal facilities, upon the same or like terms and conditions which, under private contract or agreement, are conceded to other lines." K. & I. Br. Co. v. L. & N. R. Co., 37 Fed. R. 567, 628.

Where a railway company had contracted with a city to allow other roads the use of its terminal facilities, and a State law has provided that different companies might have a joint use of such facilities, the contract and rights of the other roads must be determined by the State laws, and the Interstate Commerce act can have no application. Iowa v. C. M. & St. P. R. Co., 33 F. 591.

1. "Substantially Similar Circumstances and Conditions."—Cost of service constitutes a difference in "circumstances." D. M. Col. Co. v. M. S. & L. R. Co., 11 App. Cas. 97; C. & A. R. Co. v. Peop., 67 Ill. 11.

Competition with other lines does not. L. & N. W. R. Co. v. Evershed, 3 App. Cas. 1029; Budd v. L. & N. W. R. Co., 36 L. T. (U. S.) 802; Thompson v. L. & N. W. R. Co., 2 N. & M. 115; Greenop v. S. E. R. Co., 2 N. & M. 319; C. & A. R. Co. v. Peop., 67 Ill. 11.

But competition with water transportation does constitute a difference. Ex parte Koehler, 23 Fed. R. 529; s. c., 25 Fed. R. 73.

In the application of the act, where the circumstance or condition producing dissimilarity is not clearly proved, the subject of the law should have the benefit of the doubt, and substantial similarity should be presumed. In case of substantial similarity, even though there may be other circumstances which would make the act operate unjustly, the commission alone can relieve a carrier from compliance with it. Mo. Pac. R. Co. v. T. & P. R. Co., 31 Fed. R. 862.

Grouping of Stations.—The grouping and grading of stations to avoid a violation of the fourth section is not illegal unless the consequences are illegal. La Crosse Union v. C. M. & St. P. R. Co., 1 C. C. R. 631; Assn. v. C. St. P. M. & O. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. R. 52, 66. See vol. 8, title FREIGHT, at p. 965.

As to the long and short haul clause in general, see FREIGHT.

2. Discretion of the Commission.—The right of congress to confer discretionary power upon the commission as to the application of the long and short haul clause is the same as that of the State legislatures in regard to State railroad commissions, as to which see P. & O. R. Co. v. G. T. R. Co., 46 Me. 69; Commrs. v. P. & O. R. Co., 63 Me. 269; Com. v. E. R. Co., 103 Mass. 254; State v. C. St. P. M. & O. R. Co., 19 Neb. 476.

An appeal to this discretionary power is the carrier's only resource in case the conditions are substantially similar. Mo. Pac. R. Co. v. T. & P. R. Co., 31 Fed. R. 862.

As to the exercise of this power, see Report, 1 I. C. C. R. 279-291.

3. Section 5.—It has been held in New York that the prohibition of pooling does not invalidate a contract between two railroad companies, whose lines are parallel, by which naturally tributary territory is preserved to each, within which it may extend its branch lines without interference with or from the other. Ives v. Smith (s. c., Spl. T., N. Y. Co.), 3 N. Y. Suppl. 645.

4. Section 6 as amended.—In case of a special traffic, e. g., the transportation of petroleum oil, where the carrier furnishes rolling stock for one method, but not for another, the published rates should show the terms on which the rolling stock is furnished, which terms must be uniform and must be adhered to. Rice v. L. & N. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 503.

5. Section 6 as amended; *In re Tariffs, 3 I. C. C. R. 19.

rates and fares for interstate and international carriage, whether over their own lines or lines operated by two or more common carriers jointly,¹ together with a statement of terminal charges, etc.² These rates and fares must be maintained as regards all parties, and can only be changed after public notice.³ Carriers must, if required by the commission, make annual reports of all their property and business, and furnish it with specific information at any time.⁴ Failure to comply with any requirements of the act,⁵ combinations to evade it by making the carriage not continuous,⁶ and false billing, classification or weighing by carriers or shippers,⁷ are punishable criminally, and expose the offender to civil liability to all parties injured.⁸ Besides the corporate liability of the carriers, their officers and agents are also individually liable for wilful violations of the act.⁹

The commission established by the act¹⁰ is charged with the duty of investigating, both on complaint and of its own motion,¹¹ all alleged violations of the act;¹² and of making in each case a report which thereafter shall be deemed prima facie evidence as to all facts found therein.¹³ In case any complaint be sustained,

1. § 6 as amended.

Such published rates should not exceed the combined rates. Martin v. S. P. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. R. 1.

The provision in regard to joint tariffs, etc., does not authorize carriers to issue through tickets to passengers, or through bills of lading for property, at through rates, over connecting lines, in the absence of such arrangements between the companies. K. & I. Br. Co. v. L. & N. R. Co., 37 Fed. R. 567, 630.

2. § 6 as amended.

3. By § 6 ten days' public notice must be given of all advances in rates, and three days' notice of all reductions.

Pleading.—Where variance from the rate is charged, it is enough to allege that the rate in question had been "established and published" prior to the alleged date, and that it "was in force on that day," without averring that it had not been altered. U. S. v. Tozer, 37 Fed. R. 635.

4. § 20.

5. § 6, par. 6.

6. § 7.

7. § 10 as amended.

8. § 8.

By this section, the costs recoverable include counsel fees, but these are awarded by the court alone, not by the commission. Council v. W. & A. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 339.

A claim for pecuniary damages must be asserted in a court of law, not before the commission. Council v. W. & A. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 339; Heck v. E. T. V. & G. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. R. 495.

9. § 10 as amended.

An indictment against an agent need not aver that he had any authority to do the acts charged. U. S. v. Tozer, 37 Fed. R. 635.

10. For the composition of the commission, see §§ 11, 18 as amended.

By § 19, the principal office of the commission is in Washington, where its general sessions are held. Special sessions may be held in any part of the country.

11. § 13; In re G. T. R. Co., 3 I. C. Rep. 89, 110.

12. § 12 as amended, 13, 17 as amended.

By § 13, "no complaint shall at any time be dismissed because of the absence of direct damage to the complainant."

13. The Commission Not a Court.—The functions of the commission are administrative, not judicial. Its duty is to hear, investigate, and report upon the complaints laid before it, or to investigate and report of its own motion, but the "recommendation," "order" or "requirement" of its report is not final, and can only be enforced by proceedings in a federal court, begun either by itself or a party interested. A suit based upon the report is an independent proceeding, where the cause is heard and determined by the court de novo, upon proper pleadings and proofs, the report the commission must order the parties charged to desist and also to make reparation for injury done,¹ which order may be enforced by injunction and attachment, subject to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, where $2,000 or more are involved.² The commission must report annually to congress all useful information collected, with recommendations for any further legislation.³

INTERVAL—INTERVENE—INTIMIDATION.

By the act of August 7, 1888, congress placed all companies operating telegraph lines which had been constructed to any extent with government aid, under the control of the commission as to certain matters.⁴

INTERVAL.—See note 5.

INTERVENE.—To voluntarily interpose in an action or other proceeding with leave of court.⁶

INTERVENING DAMAGES.—Such as are occasioned to an appellee by the delay incident to the appeal.⁷

INTERVENTION.—See INTERPLEADER; PARTIES TO ACTIONS.

INTESTATE.—A person dies intestate who either has made no will at all, or has made one not legally valid, or if the testament he has made be revoked or made useless, or if no one has become heir under it.⁸

INTESTATE LAWS.—See STATUTES OF DISTRIBUTION.

INTIMATE.—See note 9.

INTIMIDATION.—See DURESS; ELECTIONS; THREATS.¹⁰ being only prima facie evidence of the facts thereby found. K. & I. Br. Co. v. L. & N. R. Co., 37 Fed. R. 567, 612.

1. § 15.

2. § 16 as amended.

3. § 21 as amended.

4. U. S. St. 1887-88, ch. 772. Such companies must maintain and operate their telegraph lines for railroad, governmental, commercial and other purposes, and must give equal facilities to connecting lines. In case they fail to do so, the commission proceed as in case of breach of the Interstate Commerce act.

Authorities.—Hare's American Constitutional Law, 1889; Harper's Law of Interstate Commerce, 1887; Dos Passos' Interstate Commerce Act, 1889; Rorer's American Interstate Law, 1879; Patterson's Federal Restraints on State Action, 1888.

5. "At an interval of not less than fourteen days" requires that fourteen days shall intervene or elapse between the two dates. The phrase is exclusive of the two dates. In re The Ry. Sleepers Supply Co., 54 L. J., ch. 720.

6. Repalje and L. Law. Dict.

7. Peasey v. Buckminster, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 267.

This phrase is used in certain statutes providing for security to be given on taking appeals. It means such damages "resulting from delay as are occasioned by a material alteration in the circumstances or situation of the party appealing or reviewing subsequent to the entering of the recognizance, such as the bankruptcy or removal of the party beyond process." Expenses in procuring witnesses, engaging counsel, and other charges incurred in defending the original suit are not such, being provided for in the fee bill. Peasey v. Buckminster, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 264. Nor does it include interest accruing after taking of appeal. Stearns v. Brown, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 532; and see Swan v. Picquet, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 465.

8. Repalje and L. Law Dict.; Bouv. Law Dict.

9. A charge that a man has been intimate with his brother's wife is not equivalent to a charge of adultery. Adams v. Stone, 131 Mass. 433.

10. As used in an indictment for conspiracy to obtain changes in the govern-

INTOXICATED—INTOXICATING DRINKS.

INTIMIDATION OF VOTERS.—See vol. 6, pp. 358-364.

INTO.—See note 1.

INTOXICATED.—Inebriated or drunk “by the drinking of intoxicating spirituous liquors,” being understood, unless the word is otherwise qualified.²

INTOXICATING DRINKS.—See INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

ment, laws and constitution by intimidation, “the word is not a technical word; it is not vocabulum artis, having a necessary meaning in a bad sense; it is a word in common use, employed on this occasion in its popular sense; and in order to give it any force, it ought at least to appear from the context what species of fear was intended, or upon whom the fear was intended to operate.” TINDAL, C. J., in O’Connell v. Reg., 11 Cl. & F. 255.

1. Into Court.—A delivery of a defendant into court by his sureties signifies “a delivery to the officers of the court who are under the control of the court and can take custody of the principal under the direction of the court.” The delivery must be made during the session of the court. Converse v. Washburn, 43 Vt. 132.

Into Port.—A vessel being towed from one dock to another is not passing “into or out of” port within a pilot act. The Maria, L. R., 1 Adm. & Ecc. 358.

A ship chartered to load a cargo at a port in the East Indies and to proceed to Belle Isle, Scilly, Queenstown or Falmouth for orders to discharge at a port in the United Kingdom or on the continent, which proceeded to Falmouth and there received orders to go to Bremen, where she discharged, carried her cargo into port in England within the meaning of an act regulating the jurisdiction of admiralty courts. The act does not mean carried into for delivery. The Piere Superiore, L. R., 4 Add. & Ecc. 170.

Into the State.—An exception in a statute of limitations, that where the debtor is absent from the State, at the time the cause of action accrues, suit may be brought “after his return into the State” means after his return within the jurisdictional limits of the State where the process of the courts of the State will run. A removal to an Indian nation, where such process will not run, is not such a return, though the nation be within the territorial limits of the State. Smith Admr. v. Heirs of Bond, 3 Ala. 386.

Into, Through or Under.—An act authorizing a local board to carry any sewer “into, through or under” any lands within its district, does not confine it to carrying a sewer underground. Roderick v. Aston Local Board, 5 Ch. D. 328.

2. It is error to charge that “a person who is in the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors intemperately is a person who is in the habit of getting intoxicated.” “Intemperance does not necessarily imply drunkenness.” Mullinix v. People, 76 Ill. 211.

“It needs no discussion or illustration to show that when it is said that a man is intoxicated, the meaning is that his condition has been produced by the drinking of intoxicating spirituous liquors. No additional word or expression is used or needed to convey the full and unambiguous idea. Whenever any other idea is intended to be conveyed by the term intoxicated or its equivalent, drunk, other words are always used, and are necessary to be used. It is sometimes said that a person is intoxicated or drunk with opium, or with ether, or with laughing gas. But it is always felt and understood that such is an unusual and forced use of the words intoxicated, drunk, and the addition to them is needful in order to prevent misapprehension of the sense in which those words are thus used. . . . There is, then, no need of any addition to the word when used in the complaint, in order, fully, exclusively and explicitly to indicate the crime defined and meant by the statute, as the one made the subject of the prosecution instituted by the complaint.” State v. Kelly, 47 Vt. 294.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—(See CIVIL DAMAGE ACTS, vol. 3, p. 257; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 670; CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 707, 713; CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, vol. 4, p. 802; DISORDERLY HOUSE, vol. 5, p. 702; DRUNKENNESS, vol. 6, p. 35; HABITS OF INTEMPERANCE AND HABITUAL DRUNKENNESS, vol. 9, p. 258; HOMICIDE, vol. 9, page 613; INSANITY; LOCAL OPTION; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS).

- I. Definition, 571.
- II. What Liquors Are Intoxicating or Prohibited, 571.
 1. Decoctions, 572.
 2. Cordials, Essences and Tinctures, 573.
 3. Bitters and Other Medicines, 574.
 4. Articles of Food, 578.
 5. Ale, 578.
 6. Alcohol, 579.
 7. Beer, 579.
 8. Cider, 581.
 9. Gin, 581.
 10. Pop, 582.
 11. Porter, 582.
 12. Rum, 582.
 13. Whiskey, 582.
 14. Wine, 582.
- III. Supervision and Control of Manufacture and Sale, 583.
 1. Generally, 583.
 2. Right and Property in Liquors Generally, 585.
 3. Federal Supervision, Control, etc., 587. [587.]
 4. State Regulation, Control, etc.,
 - a. Power to Regulate and Restrict Generally, 587.
 - b. Power to Prohibit Ownership, Sale, etc., 590.
 - c. Power to Prohibit Sales on Sunday and to Minors, 590.
 - d. Power to Authorize Abatement of Nuisance, 591.
 - e. Regulation as to Licensing, Taxing, etc., 591.
 5. Constitutionality of Statutes, 592.
 - a. Defences of Unconstitutionality; to Whom Available, 592.
 - b. Entitling of Statutes; Defective Title, 593.
 - c. Retrospective Statutes and Ex Post Facto Laws, 593.
 - d. Requirements as to Amending Statutes, 594.
 - e. Statutes Prescribing Remedy, Punishment, etc., 594.
 - f. "Due Process of Law," 595.
 - g. Right to Trial by Jury, 597.
 - h. Notice; Right to be Informed as to Nature, etc., of Action, 598.
 - i. Statutes Relating to Evidence, Presumptions, etc., 599.
 - j. Search and Seizure, 601.
 - k. Property Rights Generally; Compensation, 602.
 - l. Regulation of Commerce, 603.
 - m. Illegal Discrimination, 605.
 - (1) Against Other States, 605.
 - (2) Against Particular Persons or Liquors, 605.
 - (3) Against Particular Localities; Local and Special Laws, 606.
 - n. Taxation, 607.
 - (1) Taxing Power and Legislation Generally, 607.
 - (2) Taxation of Imports; Discrimination, 607.
 - (3) Uniformity, 608.
 - o. Statutes Violative of Constitutional Prohibitions, 609.
 - (1) Laws Authorizing and Regulating Traffic Generally, 609.
 - (2) Statutes Void or Unconstitutional in Part, 610.
6. Construction of Statutes, 610.
7. Operation and Effect of Various Statutes, 611.
 - a. Prospective and Retroactive Operation, 611.
 - b. As to Particular Persons or Classes, 611.
 - c. As to Particular Times, Localities, etc., 612.
8. Repeal, 612.
 - a. Operation and Effect, 612.
 - (1) Generally, 612.
 - (2) As to Existing Licenses, Permits, 612.
 - (3) As to Prescriptive Rights, 613.
 - (4) Upon Rights of Action—Pending Prosecutions, 613.
 - (5) As to Fines and Penalties, and Actions Therefor, 614.
9. Municipal Control; Local Option, 614.
 - a. Municipal Regulation and Control, 614.

- b. Legislative Power to Enact Local Option Laws, 618.
 - c. Constitutionality of Local Option Laws, 619.
 - (1) Grounds of Holding Local Option Laws Valid or Invalid, 620.
 - d. Adoption of Local Option; Elections, etc., 622.
 - e. Validity of Ordinances; Adopting Local Option, 626.
 - (1) Ordinances Relating to Licensing, Fees, etc., 628.
 - (2) Property Rights; Due Process of Law, etc., 629.
 - (3) Restraint of Trade; Regulation of Commerce, 629. [629.]
 - (4) Unlawful Searches, etc., 629.
 - f. Repeal or Revocation, 630.
 - g. Violation of Local Option Laws and Ordinances, 633.
- IV. License, 634.
- 1. Definition, 634.
 - 2. Necessity of Obtaining License Generally, 635.
 - 3. Number of Licenses; County and Town Licenses, 635.
 - 4. Effect Upon Right to Sale of Refusal of, or Inability to Obtain License, 636.
 - 5. Right to Sell Before Payment of Money or Giving of Bond, or Issuing of License, 637.
 - 6. Written and Parol License, 638.
 - 7. Form and Condition of License, 638.
 - 8. Designation of Place or Building, 639.
 - 9. Validity and Effect, 639.
 - 10. Taking Out License, 641.
 - 11. Term of Duration, 643.
 - 12. What Rights or Privileges Are Included in or Conferred by, 643.
 - 13. Place of Sale Authorized by, 644.
 - a. Where Business May be Conducted Generally, 644.
 - b. Adjoining Rooms or Premises, 645.
 - 14. Licenses Granted to Partners and Third Persons, 646.
 - 15. Validity and Effect of Assignment and Transfer, 647.
 - 16. Authority to Sell by Agent, 647.
 - 17. License to Sell Near Schools, etc., 647.
 - 18. Granting License, 648.
 - a. Consent of Commissioners, 648.
 - b. Power to Grant Generally, 648.
 - c. Discretion to Grant or Refuse, 649.
 - d. By Whom Granted, 651.
 - e. Grounds of Granting or Refusing, 652.
 - f. Time of Granting; Term of Court, 653.
 - g. Indictment Against Commissioners, 653.
 - h. Petition, 654.
 - (1) Oath or Affidavit of Petitioner, 654.
 - (2) Statement as to Liquors, 655.
 - (3) Description of Premises, 655.
 - (4) Statement as to Qualification of Petitioner, 655.
 - (5) Signing, 656.
 - (6) Notice of Petition or Application, 659.
 - i. Remonstrance, 659.
 - j. Proceedings on Application, 660.
 - k. Judicial Control and Discretion, 662.
 - (1) Mandamus, 662.
 - (2) Certiorari, 664. [664.]
 - (3) Injunction; Prohibition, 664.
 - (4) Appeal, 664.
 - (a) Right of Appeal; Jurisdiction, 664.
 - (b) Who May Appeal, 666.
 - (c) Nature and Effect of Appeal; Supersedeas, 666.
 - (d) Parties; Service of Notice, 666.
 - (e) Issues; What Will be Considered, 667.
 - (f) Remand, 667.
- 19. License Fees and Taxes, 667.
- a. In General, 667.
 - b. Fixing Amount; Rating, etc., 668.
 - c. Who Are Liable to Pay License Taxes, and for What Purposes, 669.
 - d. Custody and Disposition of License Moneys, 671.
 - e. Lien for Taxes, 671.
 - f. Recovery of Illegal or Excessive Licenses, 673.
- 20. Revocation, 674.
- a. What Acts or Violations Will Work, 674.
 - b. Legislative Power to Revoke a License, 676.
 - c. License Not a Contract Right, 676.
 - d. Jurisdiction and Discretion to Revoke, 677. [677.]
 - e. Proceedings and Proof, etc., 677.
 - f. Review; Appeal, 679.

21. Bonds; Actions on Bonds, 679.
 - a. Necessity of; Who Must Give, 679.
 - b. Acceptance and Approval; How Compelled, 680.
 - c. Form and Validity, 680.
 - d. What Constitutes a Breach, 681.
 - e. Damages for Breach, 682.
 - f. How Avoided; Discharge of Sureties, 682.
- V. Offences and Proceedings, 683.
 1. Sale Without License, 683.
 2. What Acts and Agreements Constitute a Sale, 684.
 3. Joint and Several Sales, 685.
 4. Number of Sales or Violations Necessary to Constitute Offence, 686.
 5. Devices, Evasions, etc., 687.
 6. Selling on Prohibited Days, 689.
 7. Selling to Prohibited Persons, 694.
 - a. Minors, 694.
 - (1) Ownership of Liquors; Knowledge and Consent to Sale, 696.
 - (2) Knowledge or Belief as to Minority of Purchaser, 696.
 - (3) Kind and Character of Liquor, 699.
 - (4) Sale Not Authorized or Protected by Statute, 700.
 - (5) Consent, etc., of Parent or Guardian, 700.
 - (6) Joint Sale to Minor and Adult, 701.
 - (7) Giving Away Liquor to a Minor, 701.
 - (8) Purchase by Third Person for Minor, 702.
 - (9) Sale to Minor for Use of Another, 702.
 - (10) Sale for Medical, etc., Purposes, 703.
 - (11) Bartering or Exchanging, 703.
 - (12) Aiding and Abetting Sale, 704.
 - b. Indians, 704.
 - c. Negroes and Slaves, 704.
 - d. Intoxicated Persons and Habitual Drunkards, 704.
 - (1) Who Are Persons of Intemperate Habits, 705.
 - (2) Notice to Dealer of Intemperate Habits of Purchaser, 705.
 - (3) Joint Sale to Intoxicated and Third Person, 708.
 8. Selling in Particular Places and Localities, 708.
 9. Sale by and Liability of Particular Persons—Sale of Agents, Servants, etc., 711.
 - a. Agents or Servants Generally, 714.
 - b. Drug Clerks, 717.
 - c. Sales to Minors, 718.
 - d. Sales to Intoxicated Persons or Habitual Drunkards, 720.
 - e. Husband and Wife, 720.
 - f. Liability of Partner for Sale by Copartner, 722.
 - g. Landlord and Tenant, 723.
 - h. Aiders and Abettors, 725.
 - i. Keepers of Inns and Restaurants and Common Victuallers, 725.
 - j. Social Clubs, 727.
 - k. Manufacturers and Growers, 731.
 - l. Druggists, Physicians, etc., Medicinal Purposes, 732.
 - (1) Sale by Druggist Without License, 735.
 - (2) Sale as a Beverage and to be Drunk upon Premises, 736.
 - (3) Necessity and Sufficiency of Prescription; Certificate and Representations of Purchaser, 736.
 - (4) Place of Sale, 738. [736.
 - (5) Giving Away, 738.
 - (6) Sale by Druggists Who Are Also Physicians, 738.
 - (7) Sale by Physicians, 739.
 10. Adulteration, 739.
 11. Exporting and Importing, 740.
 12. Illegal Transportation, 740.
 - a. The Offence in General, 740.
 - b. By Carriers and Express Companies, 741.
 - c. Sales of Liquors to be Transported to or Delivered in Another Town or State, 741.
 - (1) Generally, 741.
 - (2) Where Sales Made or Completed, 742.
 - (3) Sale or Delivery by Agent, 744.
 - (4) Sale, etc., by Travelling Salesmen, 745.
 13. Keeping for Unlawful Sale, 747.
 14. Keeping Place for Illegal Sale; Nuisance, 747. [747.
 - a. Keeping Place Generally, 747.
 - b. What Constitutes a Nuisance, and Who Is Guilty of Maintaining It, 748.
 - c. Adjoining Rooms, Appendages, etc., 748.

- d. Proceedings to Restrain or Abate, 749.
- 15. Permitting Disorderly Conduct and Unlawful Assemblages, 750.
- 16. Sales to be Drunk on Premises Contrary to License, 750.
 - a. Nature of, and What Constitutes Offence, Generally, 750.
 - b. Appurtenances; Adjoining Premises, etc., 751. [752.]
- 17. Prohibited Times and Hours, 752.
- 18. Giving Away, 752.
- 19. Sale to Informers, 753.
- 20. "Screen Law," 753.
- 21. Label, 754.
- 22. Seller Not Protected by United States License or Payment of Revenue Tax, 755.
- 23. Keeping Statement and Making Report of Manufacture and Sale, 755. [756.]
- VI. Indictment, Complaint, Trial, etc.,
 - 1. Jurisdiction, 756.
 - a. Generally, 756.
 - b. Of Police Courts, 756.
 - c. Of Justices' Courts, 757.
 - d. Of Common Pleas, Municipal and Superior Courts, 757.
 - e. Of Circuit and District Courts, 757.
 - 2. Form and Nature of Proceedings and Prosecutions Generally, 757.
 - 3. Venue, 758.
 - 4. Limitations, 758.
 - 5. Bar by Former Prosecution or Pendency, 758.
 - 6. Prosecutor, 758.
 - 7. Indictment or Complaint, 758.
 - a. General Matters as to Form and Requisites, 758.
 - b. Allegations as to Information and Belief, 759.
 - c. Clerical Errors and Omissions, 759.
 - d. Conclusion, 759.
 - e. Record, 759. [759.]
 - f. Signature and Endorsement, 759.
 - g. Verification and Jurat, 760.
 - h. Allegation as to Prior Convictions or Acquittal, 760.
 - (1) Miscellaneous Matters, 760.
 - (2) Necessity of Alleging Number of Offences, 760.
 - (3) Setting Forth Record, 760.
 - (4) Describing Time or Court, 761.
 - (5) Description of Offence of which Convicted, etc., 761.
 - i. Describing Sales and Offences, 761.
 - (1) Necessity, 761.
 - (a) Generally, 761.
 - (b) Charging Unlawful Sales, 761.
 - (c) Sales without License or Authority, 761.
 - (d) Keeping for Sale with Intent to Sell, 762.
 - (e) Keeping Place for Sale; Nuisance, 762.
 - (f) Selling on Prohibited Days and During Prohibited Hours, 762.
 - (g) Violation of Screen Laws, 762.
 - (2) Certainty and Particularity, 762.
 - (a) General Rules, 762.
 - (b) Sale Without License or Authority, 762.
 - (c) As to Payment of Special Tax, 763.
 - (d) Sale on Prohibited Days and During Prohibited Hours, 763.
 - (e) Sale to Minors, 763.
 - (f) Sale to Drunkards, etc., 763. [763.]
 - (g) Sale by Druggists, 763.
 - (h) Keeping for Sale or with Intent to Sell, 764.
 - (i) Sale to be Drunk on Premises, 764.
 - (j) Violation of City Ordinances, 764.
 - (k) Violation of Local Option Laws, 764.
 - (3) Statutory Language, 765.
 - (4) Surplusage, Joinder Duplicity, etc., 765.
 - j. Description of Liquors and Place of Sale, 765.
 - k. Describing Place and Time of Sale, 766.
 - l. Allegations as to Knowledge, Intent, etc., 767.
 - m. Negation of Defences, Exceptions, etc., 767. [767.]
 - n. Averments as to Ownership, 767.
 - o. Allegations as to Price, Value, etc., 769.
 - p. Description of Persons, 769.
 - 8. Trial, Practice, etc., 770.
 - 9. Bill of Particulars, 770.
 - 10. Evidence, 770.
 - 11. Verdict, Judgment, etc., 770.
 - 12. Sentence, Punishment, etc., 771.
 - a. Number of Fines; Joint and Separate, 771.
 - b. Amount of Fine, 771.
 - c. Imprisonment or Commitment, 771. [ment, 771.]
 - 13. Appeal, 772.
 - 14. Search, Seizures, etc., 772.
 - 15. Civil Damages, Remedies and Proceedings, 772.

I. DEFINITION.—Intoxicating liquors are such liquors as will intoxicate or make drunk, and which are commonly used as a beverage for such purposes, whether they be spirituous, vinous or malt, distilled or fermented. Any mixture of such liquors as retains the intoxicating qualities and which may be used as a beverage and become a substitute for the ordinary intoxicating drinks, it is thought, may be properly classed under the head of intoxicating liquors.¹

II. WHAT LIQUORS ARE INTOXICATING AND PROHIBITED.—Any liquid substance constituting any part of a mixture of intoxicating liquor or liquors which retain their intoxicating qualities, and which may be used as a beverage, and thereby become the substitute for the ordinary intoxicating drinks, is thought to be within all statutes denouncing or prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors.² It has been decided that any liquor is within the meaning of the terms "strong and spirituous liquors" in an act to suppress intemperance, whether such liquors be fomented or distilled, of which the human stomach can contain enough to produce intoxication.³

1. See Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 767; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284; State v. McGinnis, 30 Minn. 52; Commrs. v. Taylor, 21 N. Y. 173; State v. Reynolds, 47 Vt. 299.

"Liquors" is commonly understood to mean all liquors, whether spirituous, vinous, inferior fermented, or malt. People v. Crilley, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 248; State v. Brittain, 89 N. Car. 576.

The court say, in People v. Crilley, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 248, that "the strength of liquors and their intoxicating powers depend upon the quantity of alcohol which they contain. Spirituous liquors contain from 53 to 56 per cent.; wines (champagne), from 13 to 26 per cent.; currant wine or sherry wines over 10 per cent.; methlegen, about 7½ per cent.; cider (the average), about 7½ per cent.; ale (the average), about 6¼ per cent.; citing Brand's Manual of Chemistry, 1645-46.

Spirituous liquors are distilled liquors. All spirituous liquors are intoxicating, but all intoxicating liquors are not spirituous, such as fomented liquors. Com. v. Gray, 68 Mass. (2 Gray) 502; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 476; see State v. Oliver, 26 W. Va. 422, 425, 426; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 79.

"Intoxicating liquors" and "spirituous liquors" are not synonymous. An indictment for unlawfully selling "spirituous and intoxicating liquors" is not supported by proof of sales of liquors which are intoxicating, but not spirituous. Com. v. Livermore, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 20. See Com. v. Gray, 68 Mass. (2 Gray) 502; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 476; Com. v. Giles, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 466.

Vinous liquors are such liquors as are made from the juice of the grape. Adler v. People, 55 Ala. 24; Worley v. Spurgeon, 38 Iowa 467.

In Iowa wine manufactured from grapes, currants, or other grown fruit within the state, is not included in the term intoxicating liquors within the meaning of the prohibitory law. Worley v. Spurgeon, 38 Iowa 465. See Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284.

The term "liquors," when used in a statute forbidding the sale of liquors, refers only to spirituous or intoxicating liquors. See People v. Crilley, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 246; Townley v. State, 18 N. J. L. (3 Harr.) 311.

Intoxicating liquors, in some of the acts regulating the sale of liquors, such as the Illinois "Dram Shop Act," means spirituous, malt or vinous liquors, and for that reason proof of a sale of beer made to a minor without showing the kind of beer, and whether malt, spirituous or vinous, is not sufficient to sustain the indictment, because there are kinds of beer which are neither a malt liquor nor intoxicating. Hansberg v. People, 120 Ill. 21-25; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 549.

2. See Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284.

3. Tompkins Co. Com. of Excise v. Taylor, 21 N. Y. 173; s. c., 19 How. (N.

It is thought that the trial of a person indicted for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors under a statute regulating the sale of liquors, the court is not called upon to construe the terms "intoxicating liquor," that being done by the statute.¹

1. Decoctions.—Any beverage or decoction which contains spirituous liquor, if any essence adulterated with water or other fluids imparts its intoxicating quality, it is embraced within the term "spirituous liquor," and it is immaterial that such beverage or decoction is qualified by other ingredients under the guise of a drink or medicine;² however, it has been held that the courts may not say, as a matter of law, that the presence of a certain per cent.

Y.) Pr. 259. See State v. Hutchinson, 72 Iowa 561; State v. Giersch, 98 N. C. 720.

"Liquor."—It is said in the case of State v. Giersch, 98 N. C. 720, that the term "liquor," in its most comprehensive significance, implies fluid substance such as water, milk, blood, sap, juice, but in a more limited sense, and its more common application, it means spirituous fluids, whether fermented or distilled, such as brandy, whiskey, rum, gin, beer and wine, and also decoctions, solutions, tinctures, and the like fluids in great variety.

"Spirit" or "Spirituous."—It has been said that the term "spirituous," as used in statutes regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, signifies an inflammable liquid produced by distillation, either pure or mixed with ingredients, which do not convert it into some article of intoxication not known in common parlance under the appellation of "spirituous." Attorney General v. Bailey, 1 Ex. 281; s. c., 17 L. J. Ex. 9.

The supreme court of North Carolina say in the case of State v. Giersch, 98 N. C. 720, that the term "spirit" or "spirituous," as the general meaning, is applied to fluids mostly of a lighter character than ordinary water, obtained but not produced by distillation, but is also applied to liquors that signify the essence, the extract, the purest solution, the highly rectified substance, the pure alcohol contained in them. The spirit of liquors is really the alcohol in them. It is this characteristic, this essential element, that makes them spirituous, that gives all liquors of whatever kind their intoxicating quality and effect.

"Spirituous."—The word spirituous when used in the statute means spirituous liquors. Com. v. Burke, 81 Mass. (15 Gray) 408.

The word "spirits" used in prohibitory statutes means prohibiting of spirits having refined strength, ardent quality of alcohol in greater or less degree. Hence spirituous liquors implies such liquors as contain alcohol and thus have spirit, no matter by what particular name denominated or in what liquid form or combination they may appear. Hence distilled liquors, fermented liquors and vinous liquors are alike, all spirituous liquors. These liquors respectively may have different degrees of spirit in point of fineness and strength. Distilled liquors may be stronger or weaker according to the quantity of alcohol in them, and so are the other kinds mentioned.

Under Iowa Code, which defines the words "intoxicating liquors," wherever they occurred in the statute for the suppression of intemperance, to mean alcohol, and all spirituous and vinous liquors, with a proviso expressly excepting cider made from apples, was repealed by the twentieth general assembly and the following section substituted: "§ 1555. Wherever the words 'intoxicating liquors' occur in this chapter, the same shall be construed to mean alcohol, ale, wine, beer, spirituous, vinous and malt liquors, and all intoxicating liquors whatever." State v. Hutchinson, 72 Iowa 561.

Cider and Wines Made from Home Grown Fruit.—In Maine one may be indicted and convicted for a nuisance in selling cider and wine, made from fruit grown in that state for tipping purposes, provided the jury find they are intoxicating liquors. State v. Page, 66 Me. 418.

1. State v. Wittmar, 12 Mo. 407.

2. Ramagnano v. Crook, 85 Ala. 226; Wall v. State, 78 Ala. 417. See Prussia v. Guenther, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 231; Galloway v. State, 23 Tex. App. 398.

of alcohol brings the compound within the prohibition of the statute, or that any particular ingredient does or does not destroy the intoxicating influence of the alcohol or prevent the decoction from ever becoming an intoxicating beverage, in which case the question is one of fact and to be settled by the jury as other questions of fact.¹

2. Cordials, Essences and Tinctures.—A cordial made of whiskey sweetened and scented with peppermint and other things, such as is usually sold in stores, has been said to be within the description of spirituous liquors, or mixed liquors intended to be prohibited by a statute which prohibits the sale of any "wine, rum, brandy, gin, whiskey, or other spirituous liquors."²

It has been said that whatever is generally and properly known and used as medicine and articles of the toilet or for culinary pur-

1. Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284-294. See State v. Laffer, 38 Iowa 426; Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68; Russell v. Sloan, 33 Vt. 659.

Medicines and Articles of Food — Statutory Construction.—The court say in the case of Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68, that it is not a reasonable construction to hold that the statute prohibits the sale of either medicines or articles of food, in the preparation of which liquor is used in order to determine whether the statute applies to a sale; the true test is to enquire whether the article sold is in reality an intoxicating liquor; if it is, the sale is illegal, although it is sold to be used as a medicine, or it is attempted to disguise it under the name of a medicine, or it is a mixture of liquor with other ingredients. See Com. v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452; Com. v. Bathrick, 60 Mass. (6 Cush.) 247; Com. v. Sloan, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 52. But if the liquor sold cannot be used as an intoxicating drink, it is not within the prohibition of the statute, although it contains, as one of its ingredients, some spirituous liquor. The sale of such liquor is not within the mischief intended to be remedied by the statute, nor within the fair meaning of its language.

"Sun-Smile."—An allegation for the sale of intoxicating liquors is sustained by proof of sales of "sun-smile," an article containing fifteen per cent. of alcohol, and capable of producing intoxication. Prussia v. Guenther, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 230.

Same—Proof of numerous sales by defendant at his hotel bar of a beverage called "sun-smile," which was shown to be intoxicating. Held, sufficient to sustain a conviction under the statute. Prussia v. Guenther, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 230; citing Andrews v. Harrington, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 343; Commrs. of Excise of Orange Co. v. Taylor, 21 N. Y. 173.

"Whiskey Cock-tail."—In a prosecution for selling whiskey on Sunday, it was in proof that the beverage sold was "whiskey cock-tail," a compound in which whiskey was the predominating element. The court held that the sale was of "whiskey" within the purview of the statute, and that there was no variance between the allegation and the proof. Galloway v. State, 23 Tex. App. 398.

2. State v. Bennet, 3 Harr. (Del.) 565. See State v. Muncey, 28 W. Va. 494; State v. Haymond, 20 W. Va. 18; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 787.

"Mixed Liquors."—In the case of State v. Bennet, 3 Harr. (Del.) 565, the court say: "We think the mixed liquors intended by that act, following as it does the specification of punch as a mixture of spirituous or other liquor prohibited to be sold separately; and where the basis or substance of the liquor sold is spirituous and not mixed by the vendor, it comes within the precise prohibition of selling spirituous liquors, otherwise it would be no means to convict in any case, for no liquor is entirely unmixed. We think the cordial here proved is spirituous liquor, and of a kind intended to be prohibited by the act."

Same—Gum Camphor and Alcohol mixed by the seller before delivery and sold as a medicine is not embraced by § 1 of ch. 107 of the acts of the legislature poses, recognized, and the formula prescribed for its preparation described in some standard dispensatory, and not among liquors ordinarily used as beverages, such as tinctures, gentian, paregoric, bay-rum, cologne, essence of lemon, and the like, is without the statute and may be so declared as matter of law by the courts, notwithstanding the fact that such articles contain alcohol and may in fact produce intoxication.¹

3. Bitters and Other Medicines.—It has been said that an act prohibiting trafficking in intoxicating liquors does not apply to medical preparations in which alcohol is used in quantities capable of producing intoxication, such as bitters, tinctures and the like, which are in good faith made and sold for medical purposes;² but of 1877, which provides that "no person without a State license therefor shall sell, offer or expose for sale spirituous liquors, wine, porter, ale, or beer or any drink of a like nature," etc. State v. Haymond, 20 W. Va. 18; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 787.

Same—"Essence of Cinnamon."—A defendant was held properly found guilty of selling intoxicating liquor on proof of a sale of a bottle of "essence of cinnamon," defendant having refused to sell it to drink, and the buyer having said that he did not want it for that purpose, and then having drunk it and been so affected by it that he could not see after night. State v. Muncey, 28 W. Va. 494.

Same—"McLean's Strengthening Cordial" and "Sherman's Prickly Ash Bitters."—"A statute defining intoxicating liquors as "all liquors and mixtures, by whatever name called, that will produce intoxication." Held, not to embrace medicine and toilet articles not ordinarily used as beverages, such as tincture of gentian, bay rum and essence of lemon, although containing alcohol. Whether it embraces "McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier," a mixture of whiskey, syrup of tolu, and syrup of wild cherry, and "Sherman's Prickly Ash Bitters," is a question of fact. Intoxicating Liquors Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284. See State v. Laffer, 38 Iowa 426; Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68; Russell v. Sloan, 33 Vt. 659.

1. Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284.

2. Russell v. Sloan, 33 Vt. 656. See King v. State, 58 Miss. 737; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 344.

Compounds of Alcohol and Water, etc.—"Home Bitters."—In the case of King v. State, 58 Miss. 737; s. c., 38 Am. Rep.

344, the defendants were indicted for selling intoxicating liquor without a license, the liquor in question was a compound composed of thirty per cent. alcohol and the rest of water, bark, peeling, seeds, etc., known as "Home Bitters." The defendants alleged that they sold it as a medicine. The court charged that if the compound was intoxicating, and was sold as a beverage, the jury should convict, but if it was sold in good faith only as a medicine, they should acquit, although the compound might be intoxicating. Which instruction was held to be a fair statement of the law."

In Iowa, a trial court refused to charge that if the liquor was only sold after being compounded with medicine and other drugs, and was sold as a medicine in good faith, and with no intent to violate the law, the defendant should be acquitted; and charged that unless the liquor had been so changed that it had lost its distinctive character it was a violation of the law to sell it, but if it had been so changed that it could not be used as a beverage, and had become a medicine and of such a character that it could not be reasonably styled or used as an intoxicating drink, its sale was not illegal. On appeal these instructions were approved, the court saying: "So long as the liquors retain their character as intoxicating liquors, capable of use as a beverage, notwithstanding other ingredients may have been mixed therewith, they fall under the ban of the law; but where they are so compounded with other substances as to lose the distinctive character of intoxicating liquors, and are no longer desirable for use as a stimulating beverage and are in fact medicine, then their sale is not prohibited." State v. Laffer, 38 Iowa 422.

A pharmacist sold a pint of whiskey to a stranger upon his simple statement that he was accustomed to take it as medicine, and wanted it as a medicine. On appeal the court sustained a conviction, observing: "We incline to think it is true, liquors might be prescribed by a physician and yet the circumstances surrounding the transaction might be such as to warrant the jury in concluding the liquor was sold as a beverage. Conceding a person may prescribe for himself and lawfully determine he should take intoxicating liquors as a medicine, and that a druggist, in such case, may lawfully sell such liquor, it does not follow that it is always so prescribed or sold. It is undoubtedly true, the claim that it is taken and sold as medicine may be a subterfuge, and that while in form sold as a medicine, it was in fact a beverage and so understood by both buyer and seller. The druggist must act in good faith and the mere fact that a person says he wants intoxicating liquors as medicine will not exonerate the druggist if the circumstances are such as to warrant the court or jury in concluding that in truth and in fact it was sold as a beverage." State v. Knowles, 57 Iowa 669.

A druggist, who in good faith and with due caution sells as a medicine, by the direction of a practicing physician, spirituous liquors in a quantity less than a quart is indictable therefor under the North Carolina statute and other statutes regulating trafficking in intoxicating liquors. State v. Wray, 72 N. Car. 253.

In the above case the court say: "The letter of the law has been broken, but has the spirit of the law been violated? The question here presented has been much discussed, but it has not received the same judicial determination in all states in which it has arisen. In this conflict of authority we shall remember that the reason of the law is the life of the law, and when one stops, the other should also stop. What was the evil sought to be remedied by our statute? Evidently the abusive use of spirituous liquors, keeping in view at the same time, the revenues of the State. The special verdict is very minute in its details, and makes as strong a case for the defendants as perhaps will ever find its way into court again. A physician prescribes the brandy for a sick lady, and directs her husband to get it from the defendants, who are druggists. It may be that a pure article of brandy, such as the physician was willing to administer as a medicine was not to be obtained elsewhere than at the defendant's drug store. The doctor himself goes to the defendants, and directs them to let the witness have the brandy as a medicine for his wife, and the further fact is found, which perhaps might have been assumed without the finding, that French brandy is an essential medicine, frequently prescribed by physicians and often used; and the farther and very important fact is established that in this case it was bought in good faith as a medicine and was used as such. After this verdict we cannot doubt that the defendants acted in good faith, with due caution in the sale which is alleged to be in violation law. . . . Now unless this sale comes within the mischief which the statute was intended to suppress, the defendants are not guilty; for it is a principle of the common law, that no one shall suffer criminally for an act in which his mind does not concur. The familiar instance given by Blackstone illustrates our case better than I can do by argument. The Bolognian law enacted 'that whosoever drew blood in the street should be punished with the utmost severity.' A person fell down in the street with a fit, and the surgeon opened a vein and drew blood in the street. Here was a clear violation of the letter of the law, and yet from that day to this it has never been considered a violation of the spirit of the law. Perhaps it will give us a clear view of the case if we put the druggist out of the question, and suppose the physician himself, in the exercise of his professional skill and judgment, had furnished the liquor in good faith as a medicine. Can it be pretended that he would be any more guilty of a violation of our statute than a surgeon was guilty of violating the Bolognian law? We think not. But we would not have it understood that physicians or druggists are to be protected in an abuse of the privilege. They are not only prohibited from selling liquor in an ordinary course of business, but also from administering it as a medicine, unless it be taken in good faith and after the exercise of due caution as to its necessity as a medicine."

Liability of Practicing Physicians.—On the other hand it has been held in Carson v. State, 69 Ala. 235, that where a special prohibitory act does not except practicing physicians from its operation, they are liable, if they administer intoxicating bitters to their patients, but not for using liquors necessary in compounding medicines manufactured and sold by them. The court say that they know of no principle of law which would force them to incorporate so important an exception into the statute, and add: "The facts of the case may have constituted a good reason why the grand jury should have refused to find a bill, but there is no exception to be made in the statute in favor of physicians, druggists or other persons whomsoever; and this court cannot engraft one in their favor, without the exercise of legislative power, which it does not possess. The question presented is not a novel one, though not before decided in this State. Mr. Wharton states the rule to be that 'unless there is an express exception in the statute, the fact that the liquor was sold for medicine is no defence.' 2 Whart. Cr. L., § 2439. In the case of Com. v. Kimball, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 366; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 326, the point was made that where liquor was bought to be used bona fide for the purpose of medicine, the sale of it did not come within the purview of the prohibitory liquor law, general in terms. CHIEF JUSTICE SHAW, observing in answer to this suggestion: 'If it were sufficient, to avoid the prohibition of the statute, for the purchaser to say that the spirit was intended for medicine, it would in effect repeal the statute, but the decisive answer is that the legislature has made no such exception.' The same or similar points have been repeatedly settled in other cases. See State v. Brown, 31 Me. 522, and other authorities cited in brief of Attorney General and in 3 Whart. Cr. L., § 2439, n. (q). The application of any other rule would be fraught with difficulty if not impracticability. The frequency of impostures on the one hand and abuse on the other would be imminent, and sagacious foresight in this respect may have been a potent reason with the general assembly for excluding exceptions, which found place in former statutes relating to the same subject matter. We are not to be supposed as intimating that physicians or druggists would be prohibited, under such a statute as the one in question, from the bona fide use of spirituous liquors in the necessary compounding of medicines, manufactured, mixed or sold by them. This would not be within the evils intended to be remedied by such prohibitory enactments, nor even within the strict letter of the statute."

Druggists—Liquors for Mixing with Other Ingredients.—The Massachusetts statute forbidding the sale or keeping for sale, without authority, all spirituous or intoxicating liquors has been held not to apply to a druggist who keeps liquors only for the purpose of mixing with other ingredients according to prescriptions of physicians to be used as medicine, and also for the purpose of manufacturing such compounds as are commonly used by druggists, to be sold for the purpose of being used as medicines for remedies for sickness and disease. Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68. The court say: "In order to determine whether the statute applies to a sale, the true test is to enquire whether the article sold is, in reality, an intoxicating liquor; if it is, the sale is illegal, although it is sold to be used as a medicine, or it is attempted to disguise it under the name of a medicine, or it is a mixture of liquor and other ingredients. Com. v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452; Com. v. Bathrick, 60 Mass. (6 Cush.) 247; Com. v. Sloan, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 52. But that if the articles sold cannot be used as an intoxicating drink, it is not within the prohibition of the statute, although it contains as one of its ingredients some spirituous liquor." See, to same effect, Ansley v. State, 36 Ark. 67; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 29; Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284.

But on the other hand it has been held that under a statute prohibiting the sale of ardent spirits by any person for any purpose without a license, a druggist cannot lawfully sell such spirits even as medicine upon a prescription of a physician. Woods v. State, 36 Ark. 36; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 22. See Wright v. People, 101 Ill. 126.

The court say in Woods v. State, 36 Ark. 36; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 22, that "the power of the legislature, in the exercise of the police authority of the State, to regulate the sale of liquors, has been too well settled by the courts of the country to be now called in question." See Dorman v. State, 34 Ala. 216; Ex parte Whittington, 34 Ark. 394; State v. Almond, 2 Houst. (Del.) 612; Perdue v. Ellis, 18 Ga. 586; Godard v. Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; Mason v. Lancaster, 4 Bush (Ky.) 406; Keller v. State, 11 Md. 525; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 226; Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 115 Mass. 153; Metropolitan Board v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; License Cases, 46 U.

that it is otherwise with intoxicating liquors intended to be sold and used as a beverage, though disguised by some tincture or preparation so as to have, to some extent, the flavor or appearance of medicine.¹ The prevailing opinion, however, seems to be to the effect that if the article sold is not changed in character, but still remains an intoxicating liquor, the addition of roots, herbs, bark, and the like, will not take it out of the operation of the statute.² It has been held that as to articles not known to a given formula and sold under a specific name as bitters, cordials, tinctures, and the like, whether they are within the statute is a question of fact for the jury and not a question of law for the court, the rule or test being that if the compound or preparation is such that the distinct character and effect of the intoxicating liquors are destroyed, and its use as an intoxicating beverage practically impossible by reason of the other ingredients, then it is

S. (5 How.) 504; bk. 12, L. ed. 256; Cooley Const. Lim. 725.

Honest Belief No Defence.—It has been held by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in the case of Com. v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452, that it is no defence to an indictment that the seller believed that what he sold was a medicine and not intoxicating.

1. Russell v. Sloan, 33 Vt. 656. See Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68; Com. v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452; Com. v. Bathrick, 60 Mass. (6 Cush.) 247; Com. v. Sloan, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 52; State v. Wray, 72 N. Car. 253.

2. See Wall v. State, 78 Ala. 417; Gostorf v. State, 39 Ark. 450; Foster v. State, 36 Ark. 258; Davis v. State, 50 Ark. 17; Kinnebrew v. State (Ga.), 5 S. E. Rep. 56; State v. Laffer, 38 Iowa 422; s. c., 1 Cent. L. J. 513; Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68; Com. v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452; Com. v. Bathrick, 60 Mass. (6 Cush.) 247; Com. v. Sloan, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 52; State v. Wright, 20 Mo. App. 412; State v. Wilson, 80 Mo. 303; State v. Lillard, 78 Mo. 136; s. c., 17 Cent. L. J. 17; James v. State, 21 Tex. App. 353.

"Home Bitters."—In the case of King v. State, 58 Miss. 737; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 344, defendants were indicted for selling intoxicating liquor without a license. The liquor in question was called "Home Bitters," and was composed of thirty per cent of alcohol and the rest of water, bark, peelings, seeds, etc. The defendants alleged that they sold it as a medicine. The court charged that if the compound was intoxicating, and was sold as a beverage, the jury should convict; but if it was sold in good faith only as a medicine, they should acquit; although the compound might be intoxicating. Held, correct.

"Medicated Bitters."—Under a statute prohibiting the sale, by druggists, of intoxicating liquors or of "medicated bitters containing alcohol," but which permits the sale of liquors "used wholly in the admixture of necessary medical compounds," prohibits the sale of bitters, the basis of which is alcohol, and sold by the bottle. State v. Wilson, 80 Mo. 303.

Charge to Jury.—Where the defendant was indicted under the Arkansas statute (Mansf. Dig. § 4511), prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, or any compound thereof known as tonics, bitters, etc. The evidence showed that he had sold a bottle of a patent medicine that contained a certain per cent. of alcohol, and was intoxicating. The court held that it was not error to charge the jury that if they found the medicine was a compound of alcohol, and was intoxicating and was used, or could be used, as a beverage, they would be authorized to convict the defendant, and if it could not be so used, they would be authorized to acquit. Davis v. State, 50 Ark. 17, 388. In such a case it is not error for the judge to charge that though the sale or alcoholic and intoxicating spirits is a violation of law, it was not intended to prohibit the sale of medicine because they contained alcohol; and the fact that a medicine does contain a certain proportion of alcohol is not of itself evidence that the sale thereof is unlawful. Davis v. State, 50 Ark. 17.

"Bitters"—United States Government

outside of the statute; but if, on the other hand, the intoxicating liquor remains as a distinct force in the compound, and such compound is reasonably liable to be used as an intoxicating beverage, then it is within the statute.¹

4. Articles of Food.—A statute regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors has relation only to such articles as have a tendency to produce intoxication; and the sale of articles of food that could have no tendency to intoxicate is not within the prohibition of the statute, although such food contains, as one of its ingredients, some spirituous liquor.² It is otherwise, however, where the food is spirituous and intoxicating.³

5. Ale.—The question whether ale is a spirituous or intoxicating liquor within the meaning of statutes regulating the traffic in spirituous and intoxicating liquors, is an unsettled question, some of the courts holding that it is,⁴

License.—It is an offence against the Dramshop act for a person not having a license as a dramshop keeper to sell as a beverage, and not for medicinal purposes, "bitters," compounded in part of intoxicating liquor; and it does not matter that an excise tax has been paid on them to the government of the United States, and that the act of congress does not require one dealing in them to have a license as a liquor dealer. State v. Lillard, 78 Mo. 136; s. c., 17 Cent. L. J. 17.

"Nerve Tonic."—The sale of "nerve tonic" is within the prohibition of the statute regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, where it is shown that the nerve tonic is rye whiskey. Kinnebrew v. State (Ga.), 5 S. E. Rep. 56.

What "Bitters," etc., Are Intoxicating. The following compounds have been held to be intoxicating and to come within the prohibition of the statute. "Busby's Bitters," and "Busby's Improved System Invigorant" (Wall v. State, 78 Ala. 417), "Dr. Wilson's Rocky Mountain Herb Bitters" (State v. Wilson, 80 Mo. 303), "Fitzpatrick's Bitters" (Foster v. State, 36 Ark. 258), "Home Bitters" (Gostorf v. State, 39 Ark. 450; King v. State, 58 Miss. 737; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 344), "Home Sanitive Cordial" (Gostorf v. State, 39 Ark. 450), "Plantation Bitters" (Com. v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452); "Tonic Bitters" (Davis v. State, 50 Ark. 17).

Cider is said by the supreme court of West Virginia, in the case of State v. Oliver, 26 W. Va. 422; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 79, not to be distilled liquor, and that it is not a mixture known as "bitters or otherwise" which will produce intoxication, and therefore declared for the purpose of the act, spirituous liquor.

Gum Camphor.—Defendant was indicted under a statute of West Virginia, prohibiting the sale of "spirituous liquors," and providing that all mixtures "known as bitters or otherwise, which will produce intoxication," shall be deemed spirituous liquors. The article sold was gum camphor and alcohol mixed by the seller and sold as a medicine. The court held that such sale was not a violation of the law. State v. Haymond, 20 W. Va. 18; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 787.

1. Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284. See Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68; Com. v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452; Com. v. Bathrick, 60 Mass. (6 Cush.) 247; Com. v. Sloan, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 52.

2. See Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68; Fetter v. Wilt, 46 Pa. St. 457.

3. See Ryall v. State, 78 Ala. 410.

"Brandy peaches" and "brandy cherries" preserved in liquor are "spirituous liquors," the sale of which is punishable under the Alabama statute. Ryall v. State, 78 Ala. 410. But it has been held by the supreme court of Arkansas that the sale of brandy peaches—six peaches in a bottle with a gill of liquor—is not a sale of intoxicating liquors. Rabe v. State, 39 Ark. 204.

4. See State v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 55; Com. v. Locke, 114 Mass. 288; Haines v. Hanrahan, 105 Mass. 480; Com. v. Shea, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 386; State v. Lemp, 16 Mo. 389; State v. Adams, 51 N. H. 563; Walker v. Prescott, 44 N. H. 511; Board of Excise others that it is not,¹ but a liquor sold as ale may be so mixed with spirituous liquor as to fall within the meaning of a statute which prohibits the sale of "any wine or spirituous liquor," mixed or unmixed.² The question whether ale, after process of fomentation is completed, is an intoxicating liquor within the meaning of a statute which prohibits the sale of all such intoxicating liquors, is a question of fact for the jury.³

6. Alcohol.—Alcohol is neither ardent nor vinous nor spirituous liquor, nor liquor of any kind; and its sale is not in any manner restricted by a statute prohibiting the selling of liquor, without paying the special tax prescribed therein.⁴

7. Beer.—It is now well settled that the word "beer" in its ordinary sense denotes a beverage which is intoxicating, and is within the fair meaning of the words "strong or spirituous liquors" used in statutes regulating the sale of such liquors.⁵ But where a statute

Commrs. of Tompkins Co. v. Taylor, 21 N. Y. 173; Griffith v. Wells, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 226; Nevin v. Ladue, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 437; Board of Excise of Cayuga v. Freeoff, 17 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 442; Briffitt v. State, 58 Wis. 39; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 621. Compare People v. Crilly, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 246.

The provision of a statute that "ale, porter, strong beer, lager beer, cider, and all wines, shall be considered intoxicating liquors, within the meaning of this act," applies to the indictment under St. 1855, ch. 405, for a nuisance in keeping a tenement used for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors. Com. v. Shea, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 386.

Ale is fermented liquor, and an intoxicating drink, within the meaning of the act of Missouri, 1851, amendatory to the act of March 25th, 1845, and the person selling it without license, whether it be manufactured within or without the State, is indictable. The State v. Lemp, 16 Mo. 389.

1. Walker v. Prescott, 44 N. H. 511; People v. Crilly, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 246.

2. Walker v. Prescott, 44 N. H. 511.

3. State v. Biddle, 54 N. H. 379.

4. State v. Martin, 34 Ark. 340.

Alcohol as a Beverage.—But when sold as a beverage, alcohol is within the statutory prohibition against the sale of intoxicating liquors. Winn v. State, 43 Ark. 151.

Alcohol.—The essential element of all spirituous liquors is a limpid, colorless liquid; to the taste it is hot and pungent, and it has a slight and not disagreeable scent; it has but one source, the fermentation of sugar and saccharine matter. It comes through fermentation of substances which contain sugar proper, or which contain starch which may be turned into sugar. All substances that contain either sugar or starch or both will produce it by fermentation; but it is a mistake to suppose, as many persons do, that it is produced by distillation, it is produced only by fermentation, and the process of distillation simply serves to separate the spirit—the alcohol—from the mixture, whatever it may be, in which it exists. State v. Giersch, 98 N. Car. 720.

5. Netso v. State (Fla.), 5 So. Rep. 8; Watson v. State, 55 Ala. 658; State v. Jenkins, 32 Kan. 477; State v. Teissedre, 30 Kan. 476; State v. Volmer, 6 Kan. 371; Hansberg v. People, 120 Ill. 21; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 549; Bandalow v. People, 90 Ill. 218; Beebe v. State, 6 Ind. 520; Myers v. State, 93 Ind. 251; State v. Yager, 72 Iowa 421; Hawson v. Lockhart, 25 Ind. 117; Com. v. Bloss, 116 Mass. 56; Com. v. Locke, 114 Mass. 288; Com. v. Anthes, 78 Mass. (12 Gray) 29; State v. Lemp, 16 Mo. 689; Kerpon v. Bauer, 15 Neb. 150; Rau v. People, 63 N. Y. 279; Commissioners v. Taylor, 20 N. Y. 173; s. c., 19 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 259; Nevin v. Ladue, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 437; Commissioner v. Freeoff, 17 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 442; People v. Zeiger 6 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 355; Taylor v. People, 6 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 347; People v. Wheelock, 3 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 9; Dillman v. People, 4 N. Y. Week. Dig. 251; State v. Giersch, 98 N. Car. 720; Markle v. Akron, 14 Ohio 586; State v. Rush, 13 R. I. 188; State v. Goyette, 11 R. I. 592; Briffitt v. State, 58 Wis. 39; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 621; State v.

prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors only, and not beer by name, there being some kinds of beer which are neither a malt liquor nor intoxicating, to convict for a sale of beer, it must be shown that it is one of the liquors named in the statute.¹ In the absence of evidence to the contrary, beer will always be presumed to be an intoxicating liquor.² The court will take judicial notice of the fact that lager beer is a malt liquor and intoxicating.³

Oliver, 26 W. Va. 422; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 79. Compare State v. Johnson, 61 Iowa 504; State v. Thompson, 20 W. Va. 674.

In Hansberg v. People, 120 Ill. 21; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 549, it is said: "Beer may be intoxicating, and may not be, and it will not be sufficient for the State to show that the defendant sold 'beer.' It must show that he sold intoxicating beer."

1. Kurz v. State, 79 Ind. 488; Klare v. State, 43 Ind. 483; Hansberg v. People, 120 Ill. 21; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 549; State v. Starr, 67 Me. 242; State v. Wall, 34 Me. 165; Com. v. Bloss, 116 Mass. 56; Com. v. Chappel, 116 Mass. 7.

It is not competent for a defendant charged with violating the prohibitory liquor law by selling beer to prove that under a given formula a non-intoxicating liquor may be made, which is sometimes called beer, unless evidence is also offered tending to show that the liquor or beer sold was made from such formula. State v. Jenkins, 32 Kan. 477.

2. Watson v. State, 55 Ala. 158; Myers v. State, 93 Ind. 251; State v. Jenkins, 32 Kan. 477; State v. Teissedre, 30 Kan. 476; Rau v. People, 63 N. Y. 477. Compare Hansberg v. People, 120 Ill. 21; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 549.

Presumption in Rhode Island.—In State v. Boswick, 13 R. I. 211; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 26, it is held that there is no presumption of law that beer is a malt liquor.

Apparent Defect in Statute.—The fact that, while in other sections of the act the words used are, "strong or spirituous liquors, wines, ale or beer," the words "ale or beer" are omitted in the section containing such prohibition, does not establish a legislative intent to omit lager beer from the prohibition. The intention was to cover all intoxicating beverages within the mischiefs of the act. Rau v. People, 63 N. Y. 277.

3. State v. Goyette, 11 R. I. 592; Watson v. State, 55 Ala. 158; Hansberg v. People, 120 Ill. 21; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 549; Bandalow v. People, 9 Ill.

218; State v. Teissedre, 30 Kan. 482; State v. Volmer, 6 Kan. 371; State v. Lemp, 16 Mo. 389; Dillman v. People, 4 N. Y. Week. Dig. 251; Rau v. People, 3 N. Y. 277; Commissioners v. Taylor, 21 N. Y. 173; Nevin v. Ladue, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 437; Taylor v. People, 6 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 347; People v. Wheelock, 3 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 9.

In State v. Giersch, 98 N. Car. 720, the court observes: "We know from observation and knowledge, and it is a generally admitted physical fact . . . that lager beer and wine contain alcohol and generally in such quantity and degree as to produce intoxication. These liquors are therefore spirituous and obviously so within the meaning, and are embraced by the words "spirituous liquors," as used in the statute, unless there is something in the latter that shows that these words were intended to have a more limited application, and to exclude such beer and wine."

Schenk Beer.—The question whether Schenk beer is intoxicating or not is a question for the jury, and the fact that alcohol is discovered in it upon chemical analysis, though strong evidence, does not necessarily prove that the liquor sold was spirituous within the meaning of the statute. Com. v. Bloss, 116 Mass. 56. See Olliver v. State, 26 W. Va. 422.

Strong Beer.—Strong beer is "a strong and spirituous liquor" within the prohibition of a statute regulating the sale of such liquors. Commissioners v. Taylor, 21 N. Y. 173; s. c., 19 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 359; Nevin v. Ladue, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 43; Commissioners v. Freeoff, 17 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 442; Markle v. Akron, 14 Ohio 586. Compare People v. Crilley, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 246.

Fermented beer is not necessarily strong beer, and defendant's admission that he had sold "ale, strong beer or fermented beer" without a license, does not prove him guilty of an offence. Nevin v. Ladue, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 437. Modifying Nevin v. Ladue, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 43.

8. Cider.—There is a conflict of authority as to whether sweet or unfermented cider, when kept and sold as a beverage, is within the meaning of statutes regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors; some cases allege that cider is included;¹ others, that it is not.² It is sometimes held that whether or not cider is an intoxicating liquor is a question for the jury.³ It is thought that the sale of fermented cider is in violation of the statutes regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors.⁴

9. Gin.—Gin is an intoxicating liquor within the statute regulat-

Malt Liquors.—In State v. Starr, 67 Me. 242, the act held that the question of what were malt liquors intended by and embraced in the statute and prohibited from sale was one of fact for the jury and not of law for the court.

1. State v. Hutchinson, 72 Iowa 561; State v. Roach, 75 Me. 123; State v. McNamara, 69 Me. 133; Com. v. Dean, 78 Mass. (14 Gray) 99; Shaw v. Carpenter, 54 Vt. 155; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 37; Overseers v. McCann, 20 N. Y. Week. Dig. 144; s. c., 34 Hun (N. Y.) 112.

"German Cider."—In People v. Schwab, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 520, it was claimed by the prosecution that the beverage sold was Rhine wine, to which the defendant gave the name of "German Cider" to evade the law. It was urged that the law did not prohibit any nonintoxicating beverages, and that there are some kinds of liquor containing so small a percentage of alcohol that the human stomach cannot contain sufficient to intoxicate; and that Rhine wine was of this character. But the contention was not sustained.

Cider in Maine.—In Maine, cider is held to be an intoxicating liquor within the statute. State v. Roach, 75 Me. 123.

The laws of Maine class cider as an intoxicating liquor "when kept or deposited with intent that the same shall be sold for tipping purposes," and when so sold the place of drinking and of sale must be the same.

Cider in Massachusetts.—In Massachusetts, it is held that unfermented cider is included within the words of the statute referring to "ale, cider and all wines," and defining these as intoxicating liquors. Com. v. Dean, 14 Gray (Mass.) 99.

Cider in Vermont.—In Vermont, cider may be legally sold except at "a place of public resort," and a wholesale bottling establishment is not necessarily such a place. Shaw v. Carpenter, 54 Vt. 155; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 837.

2. Feldman v. Morrison, 1 Ill. App. 460; Guptill v. Richardson, 62 Me. 257; State v. Oliver, 26 W. Va. 422; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 79.

"Crab Cider."—In West Virginia, crab cider is not within the terms of the statute referring to "spirituous liquors, wines, ale, porter, beer or any drink of like nature."

Cider in West Virginia.—In State v. Oliver, 26 W. Va. 422; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 79, it was held that cider is neither produced by distillation nor by fermentation, and although liable to fermentation and when subject to the distillation is capable of producing a spirituous liquor, yet the liquid produced is no more like cider than rum is like the juice of sugar cane from which it is manufactured; neither is cider the result of any process of fermentation; therefore wine, which is in any sense a mixture of any liquor other than water which is common to all spirituous liquors, wines, ale, porter, beer, and all drinks of like nature, not being distilled liquor, neither is it a mixture known as "bitters" or otherwise which would produce intoxication, and therefore declared for the purpose of the act "spirituous liquor."

Cider in Illinois.—Cider is not within the terms of the Illinois statute referring to "spirituous, malt and vinous liquors." Feldman v. Morrison, 1 Ill. App. 460; State v. Biddle, 54 N. H. 379.

3. State v. Biddle, 54 N. Y. 379.

Presumption.—In Massachusetts it is held that there is no legal presumption that cider is an intoxicating liquor. Com. v. Chappel, 116 Mass. 7.

4. In People v. Foster (Mich.), 31 N. W. Rep. 596, it is said that under the Michigan statute regulating the sale by druggists of spirituous liquors, fermented cider is included, and the sale thereof as a beverage without giving bond as required by the statute, is unlawful. Compare State v. Biddle, 54 N. H. 379.

ing the sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors, and the court will take judicial notice of the fact.¹

10. Pop.—Pop is said to be an intoxicating liquor.²

11. Porter.—Porter is a "strong liquor" within the meaning of a statute regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors,³ and an illegal sale thereof is punishable under such statute.⁴

12. Rum.—Rum is a spirituous liquor within a statute prohibiting the sale of such liquors without first paying a license fee.⁵

13. Whiskey.—It is common information that whiskey is a spirituous liquor distilled from grain and vegetables and is highly intoxicating. It is in no sense a drug.⁶

14. Wine.—Although wine has been said not to be a spirituous liquor,⁷ yet it is an intoxicating liquor.⁸ Wine is a "strong or spirituous" liquor within the prohibition of the statutes of many of the States, and evidence of its effect in this respect is unnecessary.⁹

1. Com. v. Peckham, 68 Mass. (2 Gray) 514.

2. Godfreyson v. People, 88 Ill. 284. See State v. Oliver, 26 W. Va. 422, 427; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 79.

3. Briffitt v. State, 58 Wis. 39; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 621; 4 Cr. L. Mag. 886.

4. Com. v. Locke, 114 Mass. 288.

5. United States v. Angel, 11 Fed. Rep. 34.

6. Gault v. State, 34 Ga. 533. See Foster v. State, 36 Ark. 258.

7. See Smith v. State, 19 Conn. 493; State v. Moore, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 118; Caswell v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 402.

"Blackberry Wine."—Whether blackberry wine is a spirituous liquor, was left to the jury to decide in the case of State v. Lowry, 74 N. C. 121.

"Champagne Wine" is said to be included in the words liquors in Kizer v. Randleman, 5 Jones (N. C.) L. 428.

"Port Wine" is said to be an intoxicating liquor. In State v. Packer, 80 N. C. 439, the court say that on proof of a sale of port wine the fact of its intoxicating quality is a matter of common knowledge and can be passed on by the jury without proof.

The selling of port wine by a less quantity than a quart at a time, without license, is not a violation of the statute which prohibits such sale of spirituous liquors. State v. Moore, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 118.

8. Jones v. Surprise, 64 N. H. 243; State v. Packer, 80 N. C. 439; Kizer v. Randleman, 5 Jones (N. C.) L. 428.

9. Jones v. Surprise, 64 N. H. 243; State v. Giersch, 98 N. C. 720; State v.

Packer, 80 N. C. 439; Hatfield v. Com., 120 Pa. St. 395.

Under an act prohibiting the sale of any spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors within a certain district, an offence is committed by the sale of domestic wine, which need not be shown to be intoxicating. Hatfield v. Com., 120 Pa. St. 395.

The supreme court of North Carolina say, in the case of State v. Giersch, 98 N. C. 720, that: "We know from common observation and knowledge, and it is a generally admitted physical fact, that lager beer and wine contain alcohol, and generally in such quantity and degree as to produce intoxication; these liquors are therefore spirituous and obviously come within the meaning and are embraced by the words 'spirituous liquors' as used in the statute, unless there is something in the latter that shows that these words were intended to have a more limited application and intended to exclude such beer and wine, the closest reasonable scrutiny of the statute, its terms, phraseology, connections and purpose shows no such narrow application of the words 'spirituous liquors' employed in it as to exclude such beer and wine; but we think the contrary plainly appears, the terms used which severally and taken together bear good sweeping in excepting or limiting, but in a single respect . . . and the manifest purpose is to prevent and suppress drunkenness and the attendant evils produced by the free use of intoxicating spirituous liquors."

Domestic Wines.—In Iowa, wine manufactured from grapes, currants, or

III. SUPERVISION AND CONTROL OF MANUFACTURE AND SALE—1.

Generally.—All statutes which merely assume to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors, and to prohibit sales by persons other than those who are licensed by the public authorities, are valid and constitutional, as an exercise of ordinary police regulations, such as the State may make in regard to all classes of trade or employment,¹ and the State may absolutely prohibit the manufacture fruits grown within the State, is not included in the term "intoxicating liquors." Worley v. Spurgeon, 38 Iowa 465. See also Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284; Rogers Drinks, Drinking and Drinkers, 71, but in Pennsylvania it was held, in the recent case of Hatfield v. Com., 120 Pa. St. 395, that under the Pennsylvania act of April 12th, 1867, prohibiting the sale of any "spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors," within a certain district, an offence is committed by the sale of domestic wine which need not be shown to be intoxicating.

1. Territory v. O'Connell (Ariz.), 16 Pac. Rep. 209; Minnehaha Co. v. Champion (Dak.), 37 N. W. Rep. 766; Territory v. O'Connor (Dak.), 37 N. W. Rep. 765; State v. Allmond, 2 Houst. (Del.) 612; Menken v. City of Atlanta, 78 Ga. 668; Kettering v. Jacksonville, 50 Ill. 39; Goddard v. Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 449; Bode v. State, 7 Gill (Md.) 326; Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 115 Mass. 153; Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; Bancroft v. Dumas, 21 Vt. 456; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 25; bk. 24, L. ed. 989; License Cases, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 504; bk. 12, L. ed. 256. See Oviatt v. Pond, 29 Conn. 479; Reynolds v. Geary, 26 Conn. 179; State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; Brown v. State (Ga.), 7 S. E. Rep. 915; Perdue v. Ellis, 18 Ga. 586; Butler v. Walker, 80 Ill. 345; Jones v. People, 14 Ill. 196; O'Dea v. State, 57 Ind. 31; State v. Donehey, 8 Iowa 396; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487; Zumhoff v. State, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 526; Our House v. State, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 172; Ex parte Burnside (Ky.), 6 S. W. 276; Anderson v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 485; Barrett v. Delano (Me.), 14 Atl. Rep. 288; Meservey v. Gray, 55 Me. 540; State v. Strauss, 49 Md. 288; Keller v. State, 11 Md. 525; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 226; Com. v. Howe, 79 Mass. (13 Gray) 26; Com. v. Clapp, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 97; Com. v. Kendall, 66 Mass.

(12 Cush.) 414; Com. v. Kimball, 38 Mass. (21 Pick.) 373; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 326; People v. Gallagher, 4 Mich. 244; People v. Hawley, 3 Mich. 330; Butler v. Chambers, 36 Minn. 69; Rohrbacher v. Jackson, 51 Miss. 735; State v. Moore, 14 N. H. 451; People v. Clipperly, 101 N. Y. 634; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509; s. c., 18 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 119; People v. Commissioners, 59 N. Y. 92; Ingersoll v. Skinner, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 540; People v. Quant, 12 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 83; State v. Joyner, 81 N. C. 534-36; State v. Doyle, 15 R. I. 325; State v. Peckham, 3 R. I. 289; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475, 486; City v. Ahrens, 4 Strobb. (S. C.) L. 241; Johnson v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 469; Higgins v. Rinker, 47 Tex. 393; State v. Four Jugs of Intoxicating Liquors, 58 Vt. 140; Gill v. Parker, 31 Vt. 610; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328; State v. Prescott, 27 Vt. 194; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 85 U. S. (18 Wall.) 129; bk. 21, L. ed. 929; United States v. Ronan, 33 Fed. Rep. 117. Compare Meshmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 484; Beebe v. State, 6 Ind. 501; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378.

Statutes Forbidding Sale to Minors.—

In most if not all the States, where liquor is permitted to be sold at all, there are statutes forbidding its sale to minors or to persons habitually addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating drinks, and these statutes are universally recognized to be constitutional and valid. See Walton v. State, 62 Ala. 197; Hill v. State, 62 Ala. 168; Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 16; Ridling v. State, 56 Ga. 601; Johnson v. People, 83 Ill. 431; State v. Hamilton, 75 Ind. 238; Meyer v. State, 50 Ind. 18; Wiedemann v. People, 92 Ill. 314; Cobleigh v. McBride, 45 Iowa 116; Com. v. Bell, 14 Bush (Ky.) 433; Com. v. Davis, 12 Bush (Ky.) 240; Moran v. Goodwin, 130 Mass. 158; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 443; Faulks v. People, 39 Mich. 200; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 374; State v. Heck, 23 Minn. 549; Dahmer v. State, 56 Miss. 787; Ross v. People, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 591; State v. Cain, 9 W. Va. 559.

State Regulations of Property.—The and sale of intoxicating liquors.¹ Such legislation is not in conflict with the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution;² and is not a denial to any person of the equal protection of the laws,³ neither is it a deprivation of property without due process of law,⁴ because the right to sell intoxicating liquors is not a privilege guaranteed by the Federal Constitution,⁵ and the injury resulting from the enforcement of such laws is damnum absque injuria.⁶

legislature has power to regulate the mode and manner of enjoying property, and to regulate callings, where the public interests are affected by general laws operating alike on citizens. Mayor of Mobile v. Yuille, 3 Ala. 137.

1. Butler v. Chambers, 36 Minn. 69; People v. Cipperly, 101 N. Y. 634; Powell v. Com., 114 Pa. St. 265; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 350; Foster v. Kansas, 112 U. S. 203; bk. 28, L. ed. 629; State v. Bradley, 26 Fed. Rep. 289; In re Brosnahan, 18 Fed. Rep. 62; s. c., 4 McCrary, C. C. 1. See State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; Jones v. People, 14 Ill. 196; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165, 202; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487; Bode v. State, 7 Gill (Md.) 326; Com. v. Clapp, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 97; Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 25; bk. 24, L. ed. 989.

2. Butler v. Chambers, 36 Minn. 69; State v. Bradley, 26 Fed. Rep. 289. In re Brosnahan, 18 Fed. Rep. 62; s. c., 4 McCrary, C. C. 1.

3. State v. Bradley, 26 Fed. Rep. 289.

4. People v. Cipperly, 101 N. Y. 634; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1; bk. 32, L. ed. 146; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623; bk. 31, L. ed. 205; Tanner v. Alliance, 29 Fed. Rep. 196; State v. Bradley, 26 Fed. Rep. 289; Weil v. Calhoun, 25 Fed. Rep. 865; In re Brosnahan, 18 Fed. Rep. 62; s. c., 4 McCrary, C. C. 1. See Welch v. McKane, 55 Conn. 25; Drake v. Jordan, 73 Iowa 707; Dickinson v. Heeb Brewing Co., 73 Iowa 705; Drake v. Kaiser, 73 Iowa 703; Kaufman v. Dostal, 73 Iowa 691; McLane v. Leicht, 69 Iowa 401; Ex parte Kennedy, 23 Tex. App. 77; Kessinger v. Hinkhouse, 27 Fed. Rep. 883.

5. See In re Hoover, 30 Fed. Rep. 51.

6. Menken v. City of Atlanta, 78 Ga. 668.

Validity, Effect, etc., of Particular Constitutional Amendment.—The amendment to the Kansas constitution adopted in 1880, which prohibits the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, except for certain specified purposes, is not in conflict with the fourteenth amendment of the U. S. constitution. Prohibitory Amendment Cases, 24 Kan. 700. The court say: "The constitution provides that propositions for its amendment may be submitted to the people by the concurrence of two-thirds of the members of each house, that such propositions, together with the yeas and nays, shall be entered on the journal, and that if a majority of the electors voting on such proposed amendments adopt them, they shall become a part of the constitution. It also provides for a "general election" to be held annually on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November. From early Kansas history there has been in force a general election law. It provides all the machinery for elections, names judges, canvassing boards, prescribes forms and procedure for the election of all officers—State, district, county and township. In terms, it names only individuals and officers, and does not refer to constitutional amendments or other questions. In 1879, the legislature, by the requisite vote, submitted a proposition to amend the constitution. This proposition was not entered at length upon the journal, but was described by its title, its scope, and object. Otherwise, the submission was legal and regular. The joint resolution making the submission simply provides that the proposition shall be submitted to the electors at the general election in 1880, and prescribes the form of ballots. It does not in terms declare that the machinery of the general election law shall control, or that any particular officers or boards shall receive, count or canvass the votes cast. As a matter of fact, the full machinery of the general election law was appropriated, votes were received, counted, canvassed, and the result declared, just as fully as though it had been in terms ordered. Further, the records of the legislative action disclose that while, from 1861 to 1868, propositions for constitutional

2. Right and Property in Liquors Generally.—The control of the liquor traffic being a police regulation, no one can acquire such a vested right in that traffic by a license, that such control may not be amendments were submitted, in which the machinery of the general election law was specifically appropriated, and from 1868 to 1873 no propositions for constitutional amendments were submitted, yet that, from 1873 to the present time, four legislatures have submitted constitutional amendments, and that during these years the same form of submission has been observed as was used in this submission; that many of the propositions so submitted have been adopted, and, without question, recognized and acted upon as parts of the constitution; that among these changes are such vital ones as the numerical organization of the legislature, length of official terms, scope of revenue laws, and biennial sessions. Frequently, also, the full text of the proposed amendment did not appear upon the journal of either house, but, like the one in question, it was referred to only by the title and object. Beyond this, it is a matter of public history, that between the submission and the vote, a period of over twenty months, this proposition for amendment was the subject of a warm and heated canvass throughout the entire State, and no suggestion, even, was publicly made that the proposition was not fully and legally presented to the people for decision. At the election, seven out of every eight voters recorded, by ballot, their views upon the question, and a majority of these ballots was in favor of the adoption of the amendment. Held, that, conceding the irregularity in the proceedings of the legislature, and the doubtful scope of the provisions for the election, yet, in view of the very uncertainty as to those provisions, the past legislative history of similar propositions, the universal prior acquiescence in the same forms of procedure, and the popular and unchallenged acceptance of the legal pendency before the people of the question of this amendment for decision, and also in view of the duty cast upon this court of taking judicial knowledge of everything affecting the existence and validity of any law or portion of the constitution, it must be, and it is adjudged, that such proposed amendment has become, and is, a part of the constitution.

The section of the schedule to the Ohio constitution which provides that no licence to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted in the State, but the general assembly may provide against the evils resulting therefrom, applies to the wholesale as well as the retail traffic. Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 661.

The amendment to the Rhode Island constitution, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage, did not take away the right to recover for the breach of the condition of a bond given pursuant to the requirements of a licence law in force before and upon the adoption of said amendment. Coggeshall v. Groves (R. I.), 11 Atl. Rep. 296.

Pub. Stat., ch. 87, enacts a licence system for the sale of intoxicating liquors. This system, with its dependent provisions, was annulled by the constitutional amendment, art. 5, of April 7th, A. D. 1886. Hence complaints under Pub. Stat. ch. 87, §§ 25, 56, cannot be sustained. State v. Tonks, 15 R. I. 385; s. c., 7 East Rep. 627.

A constitutional amendment providing that the "manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited. The general assembly shall provide by law for carrying this article into effect," did not limit the power which the general assembly previously had to enact prohibitory laws. State v. Kane, 15 R. I. 395; s. c., 6 Atl. Rep. 783.

This act did not limit the power the general assembly previously had to pass a prohibitory law. Held, also, this does not impliedly licence the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for other purposes than as a beverage. State v. Kane, 15 R. I. 395.

Change of Tenancy.—The tenant of a beerhouse, holding a beerhouse licence, assigned his interest in the premises to another, and gave up possession to him on the 14th of February. At the general licensing sessions, on the 6th of March, the old tenant applied for a certificate for a renewal of the licence, which was refused on the ground that he had been convicted of an offence under 32 & 33 Vict., ch. 27, § 8. The new tenant had not time after the transfer to him to give the requisite notices to enable him to apply at the general exercised when the interests of society require it.¹ While prohibition to sell intoxicating liquors cannot prevent any person from acquiring and possessing them for his own use, without any intention of selling them, and cannot prevent them from being transported from one city to another, or through the State, when there licensing sessions. Held, that he was entitled to apply at a special sessions, under 9 Geo. 4, ch. 61, § 14; Reg. v. Middlesex (Justices), L. R., 6 Q. B. 781; s. c., 40 L. J., M. C. 184; 25 L. T. 41; 19 W. R. 960.

1. LaCroix v. County Commissioners, 50 Conn. 321; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 648; Schwuchow v. Chicago, 68 Ill. 444; Block v. Jacksonville, 36 Ill. 301; State v. Woodward, 89 Ind. 110; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 160; McKinney v. Town of Salem, 77 Ind. 213; Columbus v. Cutcomp, 61 Iowa 672; Fell v. State, 42 Md. 71; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 83; Com. v. Hamer, 128 Mass. 76; Com. v. Moylan, 119 Mass. 109; Com. v. Brennan, 103 Mass. 70; Calder v. Kurby, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 597; Moore v. State, 48 Miss. 147; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 367; State v. Holmes, 38 N. H. 225; People v. Board of Commissioners of Police and Excise, 59 N. Y. 92; People v. Wright, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 306; Richland County v. Richland Center, 59 Wis. 591; s. c., 29 Alb. L. J. 412; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. (11 Otto) 814; bk. 25, L. ed. 1079; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 25; bk. 24, L. ed. 980; License Tax Cases, 72 U. S. (5 Wall.) 462; bk. 18, L. ed. 497.

Nature of Licenses to Sell Intoxicating Liquors.—In the License Tax Cases, 72 U. S. (5 Wall.) 462; bk. 18, L. ed. 497, CHIEF JUSTICE CHASE explained the nature of the licenses required by the act of congress of 1864. He showed that those licenses did not confer any authority upon the licensee to carry on the licensed business; that they were merely receipts for taxes, and implied nothing more than that the licensee, if he paid the tax, should not be subject to any penalty under national law. WRIGHT, J., in delivering the opinion of the court in Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 667, said: "These licenses to sell liquors are not contracts between the state and the persons licensed, giving the latter vested rights protected on general principles, and by the constitution of the United States, against subsequent legislation; nor are they property in any legal or constitutional sense. They have neither the qualities of a contract or of property, but are merely temporary permits to do what otherwise would be an offence against a general law. They form a portion of the internal police system of the state; are issued in the exercise of its police powers, and are subject to the direction of the state government, which may modify, revoke or continue them, as it may deem fit." See to the same effect Block v. Jacksonville, 36 Ill. 301; Com. v. Brennan, 103 Mass. 70; Calder v. Kurby, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 597. Compare Adams v. Hackett, 27 N. H. 289; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 335.

Power of Legislature to Prohibit Sale.—The legislature has the undoubted power to prohibit the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors in any part of the State, notwithstanding a party, to be affected by the law, may have procured a license, under the general license laws of the State, which has not yet expired. Such a license is in no sense a contract made by the State with the party holding the license. It is a mere permit, subject to be modified or annulled at the pleasure of the legislature, who have the power to change or repeal the law under which the license was granted. Fell v. State, 42 Md. 71.

Licenses to sell liquors are not contracts between the state and the persons licensed, giving the latter vested rights protected on general principles and by the United States constitution against subsequent legislation, nor are they property in any legal or constitutional sense; they are mere temporary permits to do what otherwise would be unlawful. Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 659.

A license to retail liquor is neither a contract nor a grant, but a mere permit, and a person who receives it does so with the tacit condition and knowledge that it is, at all times, within the control of the legislature of the State. McKinney v. Town of Salem, 77 Ind. 213.

Licenses granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors upon fees paid therefor by the persons licensed, are not a contract between the State and the persons licensed, and are not property in is no intention to make sales of them,¹ yet the right to sell and traffic in intoxicating liquors is not a privilege so protected by the federal constitution² that it may not be abridged by State legislation.³

3. Federal Supervision, Control, etc.—The right to sell and traffic in intoxicating liquors is not one of the privileges and amunities of citizens of the United States, which, by the Fourteenth Amendment, the States were forbidden to abridge, and where the State statute authorizes or refuses to authorize the sale of liquor on such terms as it thinks proper, the courts of the United States have no control over this exercise of the police power of the State.⁴

4. State Regulation, Control, etc.—a. POWER TO REGULATE AND RESTRICT GENERALLY.—The power of the State to provide for the regulation and sale of spirituous liquors so as to guard against abuse and prevent disorder, is vested in the State government.⁵

any constitutional sense. La Croix v. County Commrs., 49 Conn. 591.

1. Preston v. Drew, 33 Me. 558; s. c., 54 Am. Dec. 639.

2. U. S. Const. Amendment Fourteen.

3. In re Hoover, 30 Fed. Rep. 51.

4. Edgar v. State, 45 Ark. 356; Robinson v. State, 38 Ark. 641; In re Hoover, 30 Fed. Rep. 51. See Nelson v. United States, 30 Fed. Rep. 112; Walker v. State, 6 Ark. 656.

Congress has power in its discretion to prohibit the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage in the district of Alaska, and to make the violation of such prohibition a crime punishable by fine and imprisonment, or to authorize the president of the United States to make such regulations as will be necessary to carry out the provisions of the law. Nelson v. United States, 30 Fed. Rep. 112.

No one Has a Natural Right to Retail Spirituous Liquors.—The whole subject is within the police power of the legislature, and persons engaging in the business must submit to such regulations, terms and burthens as the legislature may have prescribed for the public good. Robinson v. State, 38 Ark. 641; Walker v. State, 6 Ark. 656. See Walton v. State, 62 Ark. 197.

5. Jones v. Hilliard, 69 Ala. 300; Lodano v. State, 25 Ala. 64; Territory v. Connell (Ariz.), 16 Pac. Rep. 209; Ex parte McClaim, 61 Cal. 436; 44 Am. Rep. 554; Reynolds v. Geary, 26 Conn. 179; State v. Allmond, 2 Houst. (Del.) 643; Goddard v. Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; Kattering v. Jacksonville, 50 Ill. 39; Harrison v. Lockhart, 25 Ind.

117; Hollenbaugh v. State, 11 Ind. 557; Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 449; Vonderweit v. Town of Centerville, 15 Ind. 448; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 202; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487; Anderson v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 485; State v. Gurney, 37 Me. 156; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 782; Preston v. Drew, 33 Me. 558; s. c., 54 Am. Dec. 639; State v. Strauss, 49 Md. 288; Bode v. State, 7 Gill (Md.) 326; Com. v. Howe, 79 Mass. (13 Gray) 26; Com. v. Kimball, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 359; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 326; People v. Gallagher, 4 Mich. 244; People v. Hawley, 3 Mich. 330; Rohrbacker v. Jackson, 51 Miss. 735; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509, 520; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 323; Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657, 666; State v. Joyner, 81 N. C. 534; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475, 486; State v. Turner, 18 S. C. 103; Johnson v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 469; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328; Bancroft v. Dumas, 21 Vt. 456; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1; bk. 32, L. ed. 346; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 221; Mugler v. Kan., 123 U. S. 627; bk. 31, L. ed. 205; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 614; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 85 U. S. (18 Wall.) 129; bk. 21, L. ed. 929; License Cases, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 504; bk. 12, L. ed. 256; Cool. Const. Lim. (4th ed.) 727.

Those laws which undertake merely to regulate the sale, or to prohibit sales made by any other persons than those who are duly licensed by the public authorities have been everywhere upheld as constitutional. They are regarded as coming clearly within the class of police regulations which it is universally admitted the state may establish in reference to every kind of trade or employment. The authorities on this point are numerous and uniform. State v. Allmond, 2 Houst. (Del.) 612; Kettering v. Jacksonville, 50 Ill. 39; Goddard v. Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 449; Anderson v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 485; State v. Strauss, 49 Md. 288; Bode v. State, 7 Gill (Md.) 326; Rohrbacker v. Jackson, 51 Miss. 735; State v. Joyner, 51 N. C. 534; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 323; Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475, 486; Johnson v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 469; Bancroft v. Dumas, 21 Vt. 456; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 85 U. S. (18 Wall.) 129; bk. 21, L. ed. 929; License Cases, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 504; bk. 12, L. ed. 256; Cool. Const. Lim. (4th ed.) 725.

A state has the right to prohibit or restrict the manufacture of intoxicating liquors within her limits; to prohibit the sale and traffic in them in said state; to inflict penalties for such manufacture and sale; and to provide regulations for the abatement, as a common nuisance, of the property used for such forbidden purposes. Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1; bk. 32, L. ed. 346; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 221; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 627; bk. 31, L. ed. 205; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 614.

Such legislation by a state is a clear exercise of her undisputed police power, which does not abridge the liberties or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor deprive any person of property without due process of law, nor in any way contravene any provision of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution. Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1; bk. 32, L. ed. 346; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 221.

It is said in the case of the Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 662, that "at no time in the history of the state have we been without excise laws, nor has the authority of the legislature to control, regulate and prohibit the sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors been questioned."

"A state is not a sovereign without the power to regulate all its internal commerce as well as police. The legislature exercises and wields these sovereign police powers, as it deems the public good to require. It is a bold assertion, at this day, that there is anything in the state or United States constitutions conflicting with or setting bounds upon the legislative discretion or action, in directing how, when, and where, a trade shall be conducted in articles intimately connected with the public morals, or public safety, or public prosperity; or, indeed, to prohibit and suppress such traffic altogether, if deemed essential to effect those great ends of good government.

In Alabama, the legislature is not restricted by the state constitution from imposing such conditions as may be deemed proper, and required by the good of the community, upon those who are allowed to retail spirituous liquors, both as regards the persons to whom, and the quantities in which, they may sell. Lodano v. State, 25 Ala. 64.

In California, under the late constitution, it was competent for the legislature to prohibit the sale of vinous or alcoholic liquors, within the limits specified in section 172, Penal Code, if, in its opinion, the well being of the youth being educated at the university, or the discipline and reformation of convicts, or the health of the unfortunate insane, would be thereby promoted or preserved. Ex parte McClain, 61 Cal. 436; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 554.

In Ohio, the provision of the State constitution conferring upon the legislature power to provide against the evils resulting from the traffic in intoxicating liquors has ever stood, since its adoption, as a perpetual admonition to persons engaged in the traffic, that in so doing they placed their property invested in the business, subject to the power thereby conferred on the legislature. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539.

Police Power.—Blackstone defines the public policy and economy to be "the due regulation and domestic order of the kingdom; whereby the individuals of the State, like members of a well governed family, are bound to conform their general behavior to the rules of propriety, good neighborhood, and good manners; and to be decent, industrious and inoffensive in their respective stations." 4 Com. 162, JUDGE COOLEY says: "The police of a State, in a comprehensive sense, embraces its whole system of internal regulation, by which the State seeks not only to preserve the public order and to prevent offences against the State, but also to establish for the intercourse of citizen with citizen those rules of good manners and good neighborhood which are calculated to prevent a conflict of rights and to insure to each the uninterrupted enjoyment of his own, so far as is reasonably consistent with a like enjoyment of rights by others." Const. Lim. (4th ed.) 713.

Same — Massachusetts Doctrine. —

CHIEF JUSTICE SHAW said, in Com. v. Alger, 61 Mass. (7 Cush.) 85: "It is much easier to perceive and realize the existence and sources of this power, than to mark its boundaries or prescribe limits to its exercise." But while it is undoubtedly difficult to determine the exact limits to the exercise of this power, it is well settled that it belongs to the legislatures of the several States, and forms a part of the mass of residuary state powers over which congress has no direct control. 1 Kent's Com. 439; Slaughterhouse Cases, 83 U. S. (16 Wall.) 36, 63; bk. 14, L. ed. 394; License Tax Cases, 72 U. S. (5 Wall.) 462, 470; bk. 18, L. ed. 497. The chief justice delivering the opinion of the court in the case last mentioned, says: "But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade congress has no power of regulation, nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature."

Same—Declaring Liquor Selling a

Nuisance.—It has been decided that the legislature may declare the liquor kept for sale a nuisance and provide legal process to have it condemned and destroyed, and may even authorize the building used as a dram shop to be seized and condemned as a nuisance. Oviatt v. Pond, 29 Conn. 479; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328; Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 107 Mass. 396; Streeter v. People, 69 Ill. 595; Block v. Jacksonville, 36 Ill. 301; Lord v. Chadbourne, 42 Me. 429; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 290; State v. Robinson, 33 Me. 564; Our House No. 2 v. State, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 172.

Same—Extent of Power.—In Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. R. Co., 27 Vt. 140, 149; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 625, CHIEF JUSTICE REDFIELD says: "The police power of the State extends to the protection of all property within the State. According to the maxim sic utera tuo ut alienum non laedas, which being of universal application, it must, of course, be within the range of legislative action to define the mode and manner in which every one may so use his own as not to injure others.

Same—Espionage and Search.—The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts held, in Com. v. Ducey, 126 Mass. 269, that a statute conferring upon the mayor and aldermen of a city, or the selectmen of a town, or any police officer or constable specially authorized by them, power to enter upon the premises of any person licensed to sell liquors under that act, to ascertain the manner in which that person conducts his business, and to preserve order, is a reasonable exercise of the police power of the State, and constitutional. But in the case of Wynhamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378, a prohibitory law of New York was held to be unconstitutional and void, because, by absolutely prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, which were the property of the owner at the time the act went into effect, it virtually deprived him of his property in them. In that case it was held that intoxicating liquors, to be used as a beverage, where, when this act was passed, property, and as such entitled to constitutional protection, the same as other property. This is the only case we have been able to find supporting this doctrine. The supreme court of Connecticut, in the case of Oviatt v. Pond, 29 Conn. 479, expressly decided that liquors kept in that state for sale, contrary to law, are regarded by the law as having no lawful value at all. ELLSWORTH, J., who delivered the opinion of the court in that case, said: "It was worth nothing here, since it was kept contrary to our law, and for that reason was, by statute, put expressly out of the protection of the law."

It seems to be only in cases where, in framing such laws, the legislature has not taken care to observe the principles of protection that surround the persons and dwellings of individuals, securing them immunity from unreasonable searches and seizures, and accordingly to them the right of trial before being condemned, that the courts have been willing to declare that it has exceeded the legitimate province of police regulation. Baldwin v. Smith, 82 Ill. 162; Hibbard v. People, 4 Mich. 125; Cool. Const. Lim. (4th ed.) 728. Accordingly it has been held that it is competent for the legislature to pass an act declaring that all liquor intended by

This principle has been too long settled to now admit of question.¹

b. POWER TO PROHIBIT OWNERSHIP, SALE, ETC.—A State may prohibit the sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors as a beverage within its borders as a police and internal regulation², excepting only the case of the importer of foreign spirituous liquors selling in the original quantity as imported.³ It is thought that the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors may be supported upon the ground that per se it has a deleterious effect upon good order and the peace, comfort and morals of the people of the State.⁴

c. POWER TO PROHIBIT SALES ON SUNDAY, AND TO MINORS.—It is competent for the legislature, as a police regulation, to prohibit, under penalties, the sale of liquor by retail on Sunday, the owner or keeper thereof to be sold in violation of the act should be forfeited to the town wherein it is kept. State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; State v. Brennan's Liquors, 25 Conn. 278.

1. State v. Turner, 18 S. C. 103.

2. State v. Allmond, 2 Houst. (Del.) 612; McLane v. Bonn, 70 Iowa 752; McLane v. Leicht, 69 Iowa 401; State v. Shroder, 51 Iowa 197; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487; Prohibitory Amendment Cases, 24 Kan. 700; Preston v. Drew, 33 Me. 558; s. c., 54 Am. Dec. 639; State v. Pond, 93 Mo. 606; State v. Joyner, 81 N. C. 534; State v. Rauscher, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 96; Ex parte Bell, 24 Tex. App. 428; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 25; bk. 24, L. ed. 989; Kohn v. Melcher, 29 Fed. Rep. 433; United States v. Nelson, 29 Fed. Rep. 202.

Prohibitory Power of a State.—Notwithstanding the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, any State has a right to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for use as a beverage. Prohibitory Amendment Cases, 24 Kan. 700; Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 25; bk. 24 L. ed. 989.

Laws prohibiting the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors, whether enacted by congress for operation in the Territories, or by the States, are police regulations established by the law making power for the abatement and prevention of intemperance. United States v. Nelson, 29 Fed. Rep. 202. But the right of a State legislature to prohibit the sale of liquor is subject to the laws of the United States regulating imports; the State is bound to admit the article imported, but not to find a market for its sale. When sold by the importer, in the original package, or when broken up for retail sale, it becomes subject to the State laws, and may be taxed, or the sale is prohibited. State v. Allmond, 2 Houst. (Del.) 612.

A State legislature may prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors within a specified locality; as within the limits of a county (State v. Joyner, 81 N. C. 534); or within two miles of the corporate limits of a municipality (State v. Shroeder, 51 Iowa 197); or within four miles of any incorporated institution of learning. State v. Rauscher, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 96.

Property in Liquors.—A statute providing that no person shall acquire any property in spirituous liquors, intended to be used as a beverage, is not unconstitutional, since the legislature may determine that articles injurious to public health or morals shall not constitute property within its jurisdiction. Preston v. Drew, 33 Me. 558; s. c., 54 Am. Dec. 639.

"Drinking Saloons."—The legislature has authority absolutely to prohibit "drinking saloons," or saloons for the purpose of carrying on the liquor traffic; and it follows that it has the power to regulate the mode, manner and circumstances in which they shall be conducted and carried on, and to surround the right with such conditions, restrictions and limitations as may appear judicious. Ex parte Bell, 24 Tex. App. 428.

3. Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487.

4. Pearson v. International Distillery, 72 Iowa 348.

as well as on election and other public days,¹ and also to prohibit sales to minors.²

d. POWER TO AUTHORIZE ABATEMENT OF NUISANCE.—It is within the police power of the State to decide the illegal traffic in intoxicating liquors and the assembling of idle and vicious persons for that purpose, to be a nuisance, and to authorize the abatement thereof.³

e. REGULATION AS TO LICENSING, TAXING, ETC.—The legislature has power to regulate the sale, by retail, of intoxicating liquors, and it is competent for such legislature in its discretion to annex any conditions to the granting of license which is deemed proper, and to prescribe causes of forfeiture.⁴

1. Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 449.

2. Prohibiting Sales to Minors—Texas Act.—Texas act of April 4th, 1881 (Gen. Laws, p. 113), prohibiting the permitting of a minor to enter upon and remain in a retail liquor dealer's place of business was enacted for the purpose of shielding youth from temptation, and the State has power to enact the law and provide for its enforcement in disregard of the parents' wishes when its object and tendency is to protect the child; and for such purpose if necessary, if the parents are unfitted to properly rear their offspring, the State can confide the child to the keeping of another. Goldsticker v. Ford, 62 Tex. 385.

3. Streeter v. People, 69 Ill. 595; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 627; bk. 31, L. ed. 205; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 614.

Nuisance—Abatement of.—Under what is called the police power, the legislature may authorize the abatement of a public nuisance; and the carrying on of an illegal traffic in intoxicating liquors, and the assembling of idle and vicious persons for that purpose, is a nuisance, and may be so abated. Streeter v. People, 69 Ill. 595.

The State may absolutely prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and may declare places where such liquors are manufactured or sold to be a nuisance, and may authorize their abatement upon the judicial finding to that effect, and the destruction of such liquors found therein and all property used in keeping and manufacturing such nuisances, and the fining and imprisonment of their keepers, and a perpetual injunction against the same. Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 627; bk. 31, L. ed. 205; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 614.

Such a statute is valid as to such liquors lawfully manufactured before the enactment of the statute, and although it greatly deteriorates the value of property lawfully used in such manufacture before the enactment of the statute. Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 627; bk. 31, L. ed. 506; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 614.

Declaring Place of Manufacture or Sale to be a Nuisance.—A State may declare that any place maintained for the illegal manufacture and sale of liquors shall be deemed a common nuisance and abated, and at the same time provide for the indictment and trial of the offender. Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623; bk. 31, L. ed. 205; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 614.

4. Streeter v. People, 69 Ill. 595; Keller v. State, 11 Md. 525; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 226; Schulherr v. Bordeaux, 64 Miss. 59; Rohrbacher v. Jackson, 51 Miss. 735; People v. Meyers, 95 N. Y. 223; s. c., 2 N. Y. Cr. Rep. 128; People v. Comm'rs of Police, 59 N. Y. 92; Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539.

License—Requiring Petition by Majority.—Thus an act which requires an application for a license to retail dealers to be supported by a petition of a majority of the male citizens over twenty-one years and a majority of the female citizens over eighteen years of age, resident within the city, district, or town where the liquor is to be sold, is not invalid on the ground that the females are not voters. Rohrbacher v. Mayor etc. of Jackson, 51 Miss. 735.

The power to license and to cancel licenses is vested in the legislature, and the mode and manner in which it will be done rests in the legislative discre-

It is within the power of the legislature to tax the liquor traffic,¹ wholesale as well as retail;² and an act providing for the taxing of such liquors is not a bill to raise revenue, but simply the exercise of the police powers of the State.³

5. Constitutionality of Statutes.—Statutes regulating, restricting or prohibiting the sale or traffic in intoxicating liquors, where duly drawn and properly passed, are constitutional and valid.⁴

a. DEFENSE OF UNCONSTITUTIONALITY; TO WHOM AVAILABLE.—The defence that a law regulating, restricting or prohibiting the sale or traffic in intoxicating liquors, is invalid because of certain unconstitutional provisions contained therein, is not available to one who is not within such constitutional prohibition, and whose rights are not affected or prejudiced thereby.⁵

tion. People v. Comm'rs of Police, 59 N. Y. 92.

A State law requiring taking out of license by those who sell their own manufacture of lager beer in small quantities is constitutional, such a law being but the exercise of the right to regulate internal police and everything that relates to the morals and health of the community. Keller v. State, 11 Md. 525; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 226.

Delegating Power to License.—A statute general in its operation confining the power to license the sale of intoxicating liquors to incorporated towns and cities, where the police force is more efficiently organized and can better control it, is not an unauthorized exercise of the police power to the State in providing against the evils resulting from the liquor traffic. Streeter v. People, 69 Ill. 595.

"Dow Law"—Ohio Supreme Court.—The provisions of the Ohio act of May 14th, 1886, known as the "Dow Law," that upon the business of trafficking in spirituous vinous, malt, or any intoxicating liquors, there shall be assessed yearly, and shall be paid by every person engaged therein, and for each place where such business is carried on by or for such person, the sum of $200; and if such business continues through the year exclusively in trafficking in malt or vinous liquors, or both, $100, and that said assessment, together with any increase thereof, as penalty thereon, shall attach and operate as a lien upon the real property on and in which such business is conducted (83 L. 157), are a valid exercise of the power conferred by the constitution of the State upon the legislature to provide against the evils resulting from the traffic in intoxicating liquors; and neither the making of the assessment, in itself, nor the making it a lien upon such real estate, constitutes a license to traffic in intoxicating liquors, within the prohibition of the constitution against granting such license. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539; Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576.

1. Reithmiller v. People, 44 Mich. 280; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539; Kurth v. State, 86 Tenn. 134.

Taxation—State and County Tax.—The enactment of a statute taxing the liquor traffic does not prevent the State, in the exercise of its sovereign powers of taxation and police, from passing further laws affecting the traffic. Reithmiller v. People, 44 Mich. 280.

Same—Tennessee Doctrine.—The Tennessee constitution, art. 2, § 30, provides "that no article manufactured of the products of the State shall be taxed other than to pay inspection fees." Section 28 provides "that the legislature shall have power to tax privileges as they may direct." Acts Extra Sess., 1885, p. 41, provides for a tax upon wholesale and retail liquor dealers. Held, that the power to tax liquor dealers, and to define who constitute them, is unquestionable. Kurth v. State, 86 Tenn. 134.

2. Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 661.

3. State v. Wright, 14 Oreg. 365.

4. Ex parte Bernside (Ky.), 6 S. W. Rep. 276. See ante, 4, a. & b.

5. Ex parte Bernside (Ky.), 6 S. W. Rep. 276; Stickrod v. Com. (Ky.), 5 S. W. Rep. 580. See Jones v. Black, 48 Ala. 540; Com. v. Edinger (Ky.); 7 Ky. L. Rep. 441; Sullivan v. Berry's Admr., 83 Ky. 198; 4 Am. St. Rep. 147; Com. v. Wright, 79 Ky. 22; Wil-

b. ENTITLING STATUTES; DEFECTIVE TITLE.—Many State constitutions require that the title of statutes shall correctly indicate the purpose of the law and exclude everything from its effect and operation as law which is incorporated in the body of the act, but is not within the purpose indicated by the title. These requirements are held to be mandatory. Laws which simply provide for the regulation, restriction or prohibition of the manufacture and sale of, or trafficking in, intoxicating liquors, where such object is clearly expressed in the title, are held to be valid under such a requirement. The following cases involve this question in its application to statutes regulating intoxicating liquors.¹ Such acts are not invalidated by the fact that they declare what such liquors are² or that they provide penalties for the violation as containing provisions not within the subject of the act, but where the title expresses only that the act is to regulate the sale, giving away, etc., of spirituous liquors, but the body of the act provides as well for its prohibition as for the regulation of the sale, such act is invalid.³ And where the act is entitled "An Act to regulate the manufacture and sale of liquors," but the object of the law is to prevent such manufacture and sale in counties where a majority of the electors voting at an election to be held in accordance with the provisions of the act shall vote against the same, is thought to be unconstitutional, as not being properly entitled.⁴

c. RETROSPECTIVE AND EX POST FACTO LAWS.—Retroactive and retrospective laws, while not necessarily unconstitutional, are looked upon with disfavor by the courts, and will be construed as operating only in cases or on facts which come into existence after the statutes were passed, unless a retrospective effect be clearly intended. But all ex post facto laws passed either by congress or by States are unconstitutional and invalid. Acts for the suppression of intemperance are not open to the objection that they are ret-

Hamson v. Carlton, 51 Me. 449; Turnpike Co. v. County of Norfolk, 88 Mass. (6 Allen) 353; Dejarnett v. Haynes, 23 Miss. 600.

Who May Object—Party Injuriouly Affected.—Thus in ex parte Bernside (Ky.), 6 S. W. Rep. 276, where a petitioner applied for a license to retail intoxicating liquors and was refused, it was claimed that the law was unconstitutional because it not only forbid the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, but for medical and religious purposes also. The court held, that as prescriptions are not filled in barrooms, nor the communion tables supplied from such places, the petitioners' rights were not affected by this provision, and that he could not complain.

1. Block v. State, 60 Ala. 493; Watson v. State, 55 Ala. 158; Adner v.

State, 55 Ala. 16; Martin v. Blattner, 68 Iowa 256; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 105; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487; Werner v. Edmiston, 24 Kan. 147; State v. Schweitzer, 27 Kan. 499; Cearfoss v. State, 42 Md. 403; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 522; Keefer v. Hillsdale (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 277; In re Hauck (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 269; Westinghausen v. People, 44 Mich. 265; People v. Krushaw, 31 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 344, note; Hall v. Commissioners, 31 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 33, note; In re DeVaucene, 31 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 289; State v. Phenline, 16 Oreg. 109; Albrecht v. State, 8 Tex. App. 216; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 737.

2. Howell v. State, 71 Ga. 224.

3. Morgan v. State, 81 Ala. 72; Miller v. Jones, 80 Ala. 89.

4. In re Hauck (Mich.), 38 N. W.

rospective in their effect, and in conflict with the constitution of the State, even though they impose a heavier penalty for a second offence of keeping liquors unlawfully.¹

d. REQUIREMENTS AS TO AMENDING STATUTES.—Under a provision common to various State constitutions that no act shall ever be revised or amended by mere reference to its title, but the act revised or amended shall be set forth and published at full length, statutes regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors have been held to be both constitutional² and unconstitutional.³

e. STATUTES PRESCRIBING REMEDY, ETC.—A prohibitory liquor law which provides that the judgment to pay fine and costs for the violation of that law, shall be a lien upon the premises where the liquors were unlawfully sold, has been held not to be a violation of that clause of the bill of rights which provides that no conviction in the statute shall work a corruption of blood or forfeiture of the estate.⁴ A cumulative penalty being in the discretion of the legislature, the liquor law is not invalid for a cumulative penalty against certain classes of offenders.⁵ In some instances, liquor laws have been held constitutional in spite of efforts to establish that their provisions violate the constitutional requirement that excessive fines shall not be imposed. In other instances, they have been held unconstitutional as violations of this or similar

Rep. 269; Keefer v. Hillsdale (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 277.

1. Craig v. Floranz, 71 Iowa 761; McLane v. Bonn, 70 Iowa 752; State v. Wilcox, 66 Ind. 557 (overruling Houser v. State, 18 Ind. 106); Schlict v. State, 31 Ind. 246; Wiles v. State, 23 Ind. 406; Bolduc v. Randall, 107 Mass. 121; State v. Hughes, 24 Mo. 147; Edwards v. State, 22 Ark. 253; Brown v. State, 27 Tex. 335.

Increased Punishment for Second Offence. This punishment is for the violation of the law after it is passed, with the penalty in view increased from that imposed by a former statute. State v. Woods, 68 Me. 407. See also McKinney v. Salem, 77 Ind. 213.

In McLane v. Bonn, 70 Iowa 752, it was held that since § 12 of the Iowa laws of 1884 for the enjoining and abatement of nuisances kept in violation of the prohibitory liquor law does not prove how the nuisances shall be abated, the method of abatement defined in ch. 66 of the Iowa laws of 1886, viz.: "By seizing and destroying the liquor therein," etc., might properly be implied in cases which were pending when the latter statute was enacted, but which was not finally determined until after that time, and in such cases the objection that the law thus becomes ex post facto is of no force, since actions of this character are not criminal in their nature, and the acts done in abating nuisances of this description are not done in punishment of crime.

The Ohio statute punishing "whoever sells intoxicating liquors within two miles of the place where any agricultural fair is being held" (Rev. Stat. par. 6946, amended May 2nd, 1885, § 2 L. 222), is not, when applied to a person who was engaged, before the statute, in the business of selling such liquors in the same place, in conflict with the constitution of the state, as retroactive, the power to provide against the evils resulting from the drinking of liquor being conferred by the constitution, in terms upon the legislature; nor is the law unconstitutional, as being not uniform in its operation. Heck v. State, 44 Ohio St. 36.

2. Missouri act of 1883 (acts 1883, p. 90) amending Missouri act of 1881 (acts 1881, p. 130), held to be constitutional. State v. Thurston, 92 Mo. 325.

3. Oregon act of November 25th, 1885, amending act 1876, subd. 4, § 38, held to be unconstitutional. State v. Wright, 14 Ore. 365. See also McFee v. Greenfield, 62 Ind. 21; Cowley v. Riceville, 60 Ind. 327.

4. State v. Snyder, 34 Kan. 425.

5. State v. Duggan, 15 R. I. 403.

provisions.¹ A liquor law which provides that no citizen of a county where a nuisance is kept in the form of a place used for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, may maintain an action in equity to enjoin and abate it, without showing that he is especially damaged by such nuisance, is not repugnant to the constitution as being an attempt by the legislature to enforce a criminal law by a civil action;² but a law which seeks to confer upon the board of commissioners judicial power to hear, try and determine a complaint against the holder of a license, and to impose a penalty by revoking such license, is void because it seeks to erect a court not authorized by the constitution.³

f. DUE PROCESS OF LAW.—Laws passed for the regulation, restriction or prohibition of the sale of or trafficking in intoxicating liquors, when confined strictly to such regulation, restriction or prohibition, are not open to the objection that they are unconstitutional because they deprive individuals of their property without due process of law.⁴

1. Florida Revenue act of 1883, § 12, imposing a fine of not less than double the amount required for the license, held to be constitutional. Frese v. State, 2 So. Rep. 1.

Michigan liquor law of June 28th, 1887, held unconstitutional. People v. Hauge, 37 N. W. Rep. 21. Compare Luton v. Palmer, 37 N. W. Rep. 701.

Iowa statute providing as a punishment for contempt in disobeying an injunction restraining the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor, a fine of $500, held not unconstitutional. Jordan v. Wappello, Circuit Court, 69 Iowa 177.

2. Littleton v. Fritz, 65 Iowa 488; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 19.

3. State v. Brown, 19 Fla. 563.

4. Due Process of Law.—See Reynolds v. Geary, 26 Conn. 179; State v. Allmond, 2 Houst. (Del.) 612; Kettering v. Jacksonville, 50 Ill. 39; Goddard v. Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 773; Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 449; Bepley v. State, 4 Ind. 264; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 628; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487; Anderson v. Com., 13 Bush. (Ky.) 485; State v. Gurney, 37 Me. 156; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 782; Preston v. Drew, 33 Me. 558; s. c., 54 Am. Dec. 639; State v. Strauss, 49 Md. 288; Bode v. State, 7 Gill (Md.) 326; Com. v. Howe, 79 Mass. (13 Gray) 26; Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381; Com. v. Kimball, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 359; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 326; People v. Gallagher, 4 Mich. 244; People v. Hawley, 3 Mich. 330; Rohrbacher v. Jackson, 51 Miss. 735; Bertholf

v. O. Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509, 520; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 323; Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; State v. Joyner, 81 N. C. 534; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475, 486; Johnson v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 469; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328; Bancroft v. Dumas, 21 Vt. 456; License Cases, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 504; bk. 12, L. ed. 256; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 85 U. S. (18 Wall.) 129; bk. 21, L. ed. 929.

In the case of Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 85 U. S. (18 Wall) 129, counsel for the plaintiff in error contended that the law of Iowa prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors was in conflict with the provisions of that amendment to the constitution of the United States. The court, however, decided that the right to sell intoxicating liquors is not one of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States which, by that amendment, the States were forbidden to abridge. It was attempted in that case to present the question, whether in case a person who was the owner of liquor in a State at the time when such a statute went into effect was absolutely prohibited from selling or disposing of it, such law would be in conflict with the provision of that amendment which forbids the State to deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due course of law. The question was admitted by the majority of the court to be a grave one, but it was not passed upon by them, because it did not properly arise in a case before the court. MR. JUSTICE FIELD, who delivered a concurring opinion, said in reference to this question: "I have no doubt of the power of the State to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors when such regulation does not amount to the destruction of the right of property in them. The right of property in an article involves the power to sell and dispose of such article, as well as to use and enjoy it. Any act which declares that the owner shall neither sell it, nor dispose of it, nor enjoy it, confiscates it, depriving him of his property without due process of law. Against such arbitrary legislation, by any State, the fourteenth amendment affords protection."

One indicted under a statute for being a common seller of intoxicating liquors, cannot except to a refusal of the presiding judge to rule that, if that statute provides for a trial contrary to the course and usage of the common law, it is unconstitutional, and no verdict should be found under it. Com. v. Rock, 77 Mass. (10 Gray) 4.

Granting License—Requiring Written Contract.—Section 1419 of the Georgia Code as amended by the act of October 16th, 1885, providing that no license to retail spirituous liquors shall be granted, except in incorporated cities and towns, unless with the written consent of ten of the nearest bona fide residents, five of whom shall be freeholders, etc., is not in contravention of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution, because the decision of the court of county commissioners and of the ordinary in counties where no such courts exist is made final and conclusive, it being within the power of the State to authorize the issuing of license to sell intoxicating liquors and to determine the conditions upon which the person to whom and by what officials the license may be granted. United States v. Ronan, 33 Fed. Rep. 117.

Restricting Sale as to Place—Near Soldiers' Home.—The Michigan act of March 17th, 1887, making it unlawful to maintain a place in which intoxicating liquors are sold within one mile of the soldiers' home is not in conflict with Const. art. 6, § 52, declaring that no one shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law, or with Const. U. S., amend. 14, providing that no State shall make any law abridging the privileges or immunities of citizens, or deny to any person the equal protection of the law, and the same is true when said act prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors in buildings erected and occupied for such purposes before the establishment of said soldiers' home or the passage of said law. Whitney v. Township Board, (Mich.) 39 N. W. Rep. 40.

Prohibiting Manufacture.—Thus it has been said that statutes which make it unlawful for a citizen to distil his grain into spirituous or intoxicating liquor unless employed by the governor to do so, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe is not unconstitutional, because it does not deprive the citizen of his property without due course of law, nor transfer legislative power to the governor. Ingram v. State, 39 Ala. 247; s. c., 84 Am. Dec. 782. See Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487.

But it has been held in Indiana that the right to manufacture and sell intoxicating liquor is protected by the State constitution, and that an act of the legislature prohibiting it is unconstitutional and void. See Beebe v. State, 6 Ind. 501; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 391.

Taxing Business.—A statute imposing a tax upon the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, may provide for its collection by the treasurer of the county as other taxes are collected; may impose penalties for its nonpayment, and for the refusal engaged in the business on demand of the accessory to sign and verify the statement of certain return required by the statute. And for any injury done him in his property, such provisions do not deprive the citizen of the due course of law secured to him by section 16 of the Ohio bill of rights; nor are they inhibited by the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States as a deprivation of property without due process of law. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539; Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio 576; s. c., 7 W. Rep. 210.

Requiring Removal of Curtains, Screens, etc.—A statute requiring that at times, when places where liquor is sold must be kept closed, curtains, screens, etc., obstructing the view from the street, etc., shall be removed, does not conflict with the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution, providing that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law. Robinson v. Haug (Mich.), s. c., 38 N. W. Rep. 668; State v. Doyle, 15 R. I. 325.

Same—Preventing Sale on Sunday.—Ch. 492 of April 23rd, 1885 (R. I. Pub.

But those liquor laws which are so framed as to submit one to the will of his neighbor are unconstitutional, because repugnant to the provisions of the constitution for a protection of liberty and property.¹ Thus, a law which authorizes officers to close up places for the sale of liquor, found open on certain days and at certain hours in violation of the law, and to arrest the offender without a warrant is in violation of the constitutional provision prohibiting interference with persons or property without due process of law and the issuance of warrants unsupported by oath.² And a statute authorizing imposition of a fine with alternative of imprisonment, in case of nonpayment against an owner of intoxicating liquors, is unconstitutional if it does not provide for an indictment, information or complaint in which a specific offence is charged against him so that it can be put upon record and traversed, or an issue joined thereon and tried in due course of the law.³

g. RIGHT TO TRIAL BY JURY.—In all criminal matters, the right of the defendant to a trial by a jury of his peers is of ancient standing,⁴ and is secured by the constitution of the United States,⁵ and by most, if not all, of the State constitutions. Yet

Laws, designed to prevent sales of liquor on Sunday by licensed dealers, which requires only those obstructions to be removed that may prevent a clear view of the interior, through the window, of the premises by the passer by, is not unconstitutional because it does not define what constitutes an obstruction within the meaning of the act. State v. Doyle. 15 R. I. 325.

Revoking License.—A statute which makes it the duty of the mayor and council to revoke the license upon conviction of the licensee of any violation of any law, pertaining to the sale of liquors, is not unconstitutional as taking property without due process of law, because a license is subject to the control of the government, and lacks the essential elements of a vested right or property. Martin v. State, 23 Neb. 371.

1. People v. Haug (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 21; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378; People v. Toynbee, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 168; s. c., 2 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.), 329; 11 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 289; People v. Quant, 2 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 410; s. c., 12 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 83.

Thus, the provisions of a law leaving it discretionary with a municipal board to deprive a person of the right of selling, and thus provide judgment as to his unfitness, is unconstitutional. People ex rel.; Robison v. Miner (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 21.

Certain portions of §§ 1, 6, 7, 10, 12, 16, 17 and 25 of the act to prevent intemperance, pauperism and crime (N. Y. Laws, 1855, p. 340, ch. 231, which was repealed by 2 L. 1857, p. 416, ch. 528, § 33) held repugnant to the provisions of the constitution for the protection of liberty and property People v. Toynbee, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 168; s. c., 2 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 329; 11 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 289; People v. Quant, 2 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 410; s. c., 12 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 83; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378.

2. Baldwin v. State, 82 Ill. 162; People v. Haug (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 21.

Closing Saloons by Force.—Any ordinance of law which authorizes the authorities of a town to close a saloon or grocery by force, without having it first judicially declared a nuisance, and ordered to be abated, is unconstitutional. Baldwin v. State, 82 Ill. 162.

3. Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

4. Magna Charta—Provisions in.—This right constitutes one of the fundamental articles of Magna Charta, in which it is declared, "nullus homo capiat, nec imprisonetur, aut exulet, aut aliquo modo destruator, etc.; nisi per legale iudicium parium suorum, vel per legem terræ."

5. The constitutional guarantee of a right of trial by jury in the federal

it has been held that a statute declaring a building, where unlawful sales of intoxicating liquors are made, a public nuisance, and allowing any citizen of the county to maintain a bill for an injunction, is not unconstitutional as violating this right of trial by jury.¹ An act requiring the forfeiture of license where place is unlawfully kept, is not unconstitutional because it gives to the district court power to condemn prohibited liquors, whatever their value may be;² and an act providing for the cancellation by a board of excise, of licenses granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors, is not in contravention of the constitutional provision preserving the right of trial by jury, because the power to license and to cancel license is vested in the legislature, and the mode and manner in which it shall be done rests in its discretion.³ But a statute allowing a person to be convicted before a justice by a jury of six persons, for selling liquor without a license has been held to contravene the constitutional guaranty that "trial by jury shall be as heretofore."⁴

h. NOTICE—RIGHT TO BE INFORMED AS TO NATURE, ETC., OF ACTION.—It is a well established principle that every defendant is entitled to a notice of the nature of the action pending against him, which may affect the privileges or property. A license constitution is restricted to the federal courts, and the States may, if they choose, provide for the trial of all offences against the State, as well as for the trial of civil causes in such courts, without the intervention of a jury or by a jury differing from that known as the common law jury. See Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 533; bk. 28, L. ed. 232; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. (4 Otto) 113; bk. 24, L. ed. 77; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. (2 Otto) 90; bk. 23, L. ed. 678; Edwards v. Elliott, 88 U. S. (21 Wall.) 532; bk. 22, L. ed. 487; Justices v. Murray, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 274; bk. 19, L. ed. 658; Twitchell v. Com., 74 U. S. (7 Wall.) 321; bk. 19, L. ed. 223.

Right to Trial by Jury—Privilege or Immunity.—The court say in Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 533, bk. 28, L. ed. 232, that "a trial by jury, in suits at common law pending in State courts, is not therefore a privilege or immunity of national citizenship which the States are forbidden by the fourteenth amendment to abridge. A State cannot deprive a person of his property without due process of law, but this does not necessarily imply that all trial from the State courts, effecting the property of persons, must be by jury; this requirement of the constitution is met if the trial is had according to the settled course of judicial proceedings. 'Due process of law' is process according to the law of the land; this process in the State court is regulated by the law of the State." That a jury trial is not essential "to due process of law," see full discussion, 2 Hare Am. Const. L. 858, 864.

1. Littleton v. Fritz, 65 Iowa 488; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 19.

Nuisance—Criminal Character—Effect on Abatement.—The court say, in the case of Littleton v. Fritz, 65 Iowa 488; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 19, that the fact that a nuisance is a crime and punishable as such, does not deprive equity of its jurisdiction to restrain and abate it by injunction. See Minke v. Hopeman, 87 Ill. 450; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 63; People v. St. Louis, 10 Ill. (5 Gilm.) 351; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 339; Attorney General v. Hunter, 1 Dev. (N. C.) Eq. 12. See also Richards v. Holt, 61 Iowa 529; Faucher v. Grass, 60 Iowa 505; Shiras v. Olinger, 50 Iowa 571; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 138; Ewell v. Greenwood, 26 Iowa 377; State v. Iron Cliffs Co., 54 Mich. 350; Catlin v. Valentine, 9 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 575; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 507.

2 The reason for this is because the right of trial by jury is not invaded; the act reserving the right of appeal to the court of common pleas. State v. Fitzpatrick (R. I.), 11 Atl. Rep. 773.

3. People v. Board of Commissioners, 59 N. Y. 92.

4. Com. v. Saal, 10 Phila. (Pa) 496.

law which requires notice to a defendant and trial is not open to the constitutional objection that it authorizes a forfeiture or destruction of property without notifying the defendant or without trial, and as a penalty for crime which need not be proved.¹ But a statute concerning the manufacture and sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors, which does not require the name of any person keeping or depositing the liquors with intent to sell, to be named in the complaint or in the search warrants for the liquors, is void.² And a statute which authorizes imposition of a fine, with alternative of imprisonment in case of nonpayment, against the owner of intoxicating liquors, is unconstitutional if it does not provide for an indictment, information or complaint in which a specific offence is charged against him, so that it can be put on record and traversed, or an issue joined thereon and tried in due course of law.³

2. STATUTES RELATING TO EVIDENCE; PRESUMPTIONS, ETC.

—Liquor laws providing that proof of finding the liquor named in the statute in the possession of the accused, in any place except his private dwelling house or its dependencies shall be received and acted upon as presumptive evidence that such liquor was kept or held for sale contrary to the provisions of the act, is not unconstitutional on the ground that it presumes the guilt of the accused;⁴ and a statute providing that the notorious character of the building, place or tenement, shall be evidence that such premises are nuisances within the meaning of the stat-

1. Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487; see State v. Kane, 15 R. I. 395.

In furtherance of the fifth amendment to the R. I. const., Pub. Laws R. I., ch. 596, were passed. Section 1 prohibits the manufacture, etc., of any intoxicating liquor, to be used as a beverage, for the purpose of sale and delivery within the State, etc. Section 15 gives the form for a complaint, omitting "and delivery," but alleging the keeping to be "without lawful authority" and "against the statute." Held, this complaint unmistakably informs the defendant of the nature and cause of the accusation, and meets the requirements of art. 1, § 10, of the State constitution. "In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right . . . to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation." State v. Kane, 15 R. I. 395.

Act May 27th, 1886, § 15, prohibiting sales of intoxicating liquors, is not repugnant to State const., art. 1, § 10, which declares that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation. The general assembly had power before the amendment, not only to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors for a beverage, but also to restrict and regulate their sale for other purposes. State v. Kane, 15 R. I. 395.

2. Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

The court say that § 14, Mass. St., 1852, ch. 322, concerning the manufacture and sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors, violates the provisions of the declaration of rights, in that it provides for the destruction of private property, and the punishment of its owner or keeper, without his being duly charged with any offence or being summoned, unless known to the officer to appear before the magistrate, and without giving him opportunity to defend and meet the witnesses against him face to face, and providing for local proof and trial of the offence of keeping the liquors with intent to sell. Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

3. Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

4. Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; s. c., ute defining common nuisances, and that it shall not be necessary to prove an actual sale of intoxicating liquors therein, does not conflict with the constitutional provision securing to citizens the right to be confronted with witnesses.¹ A statute which imposes a penalty for keeping a place in which it is reputed that intoxicating liquors are kept for sale is not unconstitutional.² The statute treats such a reputation, where clearly established, as decisive evidence that liquors are in fact kept there for sale, but the defendant is at liberty to show that the reputation is unfounded.³ And a law providing that where a person is seen to drink intoxicating liquors on the premises of one who has simply a license to sell liquors, not to be drunk on his premises, it shall be prima facie evidence that the liquor was sold by the occupant or his agent with the intent that the same shall be drunk thereon, does not violate the constitutional guarantee of due process of law or trial by a jury.⁴ And a statute providing that "no allegations of any kind need be averred or proved in any complaint" under a law forbidding the sale of liquors, has been held not to violate any constitutional right of the accused.⁵

But a liquor law is unconstitutional which throws the burden of proof on the owner of liquors, and authorizes forfeiture in

63 Am. Dec. 487; State v. Higgins, 13 R. I. 330; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 26, and note.

1. State v. Waldron (R. I.), 14 Atl. Rep. 847; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 288; State v. Wilson (R. I.), 1 New Eng. Rep. 888.

The reason for this seems to be that it is the fact that the reputation exists which is put in proof and the persons testifying as to this fact are the witnesses and not the people whose utterances created the reputation. State v. Waldon (R. I.), 14 Atl. Rep. 847; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 288.

In R. I. Pub. Stat., ch. 80, § 3, providing the character of the premises shall be evidence of sale of intoxicating liquors, "character" is synonymous with "reputation." State v. Wilson (R. I.), 1 New Eng. Rep. 888.

Right to be Confronted with Witnesses.—It is a well established principle of law that in criminal cases, as a general rule, the testimony of the people can be given only by witnesses who are present in court. See State v. Thomas, 64 N. Car. 74; Goodman v. State, Meigs (Tenn.) 197; Jackson v. Com. 19 Gratt. (Va.) 656.

Same — Documentary Evidence.—While the defendant is entitled to be confronted with the witnesses against him (see authorities last cited, and also Johns v. State, 55 Md. 350; Bell v. State, 2 Tex. App. 216; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 429), yet this rule does not preclude such documentary evidence to establish collateral facts as would be admissible under the rules in common law in other cases. People v. Jones, 24 Mich. 215; U. S. v. Benner, Bald. C. C. 234; U. S. v. Ortega, 4 Wash. C. C. 531; U. S. v. Little, 2 Wash. C. C. 159.

2. See State v. Wilson (R. I.), 1 N. Eng. Rep. 888.

3. State v. Thomas, 47 Conn. 546; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 98.

4. Auburn v. Merchant (N. Y.), 14 Cent. Rep. 354; Commrs. of Excise of Auburn v. Merchant, 103 N. Y. 143; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 705; Com. v. Wallace, 73 Mass. (7 Gray) 222.

The provision of Stat. 1855, ch. 215, § 34, that, in prosecutions for the sale spirituous and intoxicating liquors, delivery in or from any building or place, other than a dwelling house, "shall be deemed prima facie evidence of a sale, and be punishable as such sale," is constitutional, and applies to all cases of such prosecutions; but the presumption is liable to be rebutted by attending circumstances, or other facts. Com. v. Wallace, 73 Mass. (7 Gray) 222.

5. State v. Beswick, 13 R. I. 211; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 26.

absence of any evidence against him or his property, or which does not provide for the framing of an issue upon the question and a trial in due course of law.¹

j. SEARCH AND SEIZURE.—A statute which authorizes an officer to seize intoxicating liquors under certain conditions, without a warrant, but which does not purport to confer the power of search, is constitutional.² Under such an act it is immaterial whether complaint is made before or after the seizure.³ And a statute authorizing a search warrant for intoxicating liquors is not unconstitutional on the ground that it does not require a particular description of the place to be searched or of the property to be seized, when it requires the place, person and property to be described "as particularly as may be."⁴ But a liquor law

1. Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 519; Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

Forfeiture of License.—A statute authorizing forfeiture of intoxicating liquors seized by an officer unless the owner can prove that they were lawfully kept, is unconstitutional in that it violates article 12 of the Massachusetts declaration of rights, declaring that no "subject shall be arrested or deprived of his property, immunities or privileges, or of his life, liberty or estate, but by judgment of his peers, or the law of the land," because it throws the burden of proof upon the owner, and authorizes the forfeiture of his property in the absence of any evidence against him or it. Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

2. State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 58 Vt. 594; State v. O'Neil, 58 Vt. 140; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 556. See Gill v. Parker, 31 Vt. 610; State v. Comstock, 27 Vt. 553; State v. Conlin, 27 Vt. 318, 325, 327; Spalding v. Preston, 21 Vt. 9; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 68.

3. State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 58 Vt. 594.

4. Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487. See Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

Fourteenth section of Massachusetts statutes of 1852, concerning manufacture and sale of spirituous or intoxicating liquors, is in conflict with the fourteenth article of the declaration of rights contained in the constitution of that State, declaring that every subject has a right "to be secure from all unreasonable searches and seizures of his person, his houses, his papers, and all his possessions," because the statute, while it authorizes the issuing of a warrant to search dwelling houses for spirituous or intoxicating liquors, does not require the warrant nor the complaint therefor to state that such liquors are kept by the person named, nor does the statute limit the officer's right of seizure to articles described by quantity, quality or marks, or restrict his power of seizure to liquors kept for sale. The statute is further objectionable because, on complaint being made that any such liquors are kept in any store, warehouse, or other place for sale, a warrant must issue for the seizure and removal of all liquors therein, whether kept for sale there or not. The statute was also held to be repugnant to other provisions of the fundamental law of the statute. Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

Proceedings in Rhode Island for the seizure of liquors unlawfully kept are not subject to articles 4-7, in amendment of the federal constitution, these articles being limited to their operation to the government of the United States. State v. Fitzpatrick (R. I.), 11 Atl. 773.

Requiring Removal of Screens, etc.—Michigan act, 1887, No. 313. § 31, requiring that at times, when places where liquor is sold must be kept closed, curtains, screens, etc., obstructing the view from the street, etc., shall be removed, does not conflict with Const., art. 6, § 26, providing that the persons, houses, papers, and possessions of every person, shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures. Robison v. Haug (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 668.

in conflict with constitutional prohibition, concerning unreasonable search and seizure, is invalid.¹

k. PROPERTY RIGHTS GENERALLY—COMPENSATION.—It has recently been held by the Supreme Court of the United States, that a State has the right to prohibit or restrict the manufacture of intoxicating liquors within her limits; to prohibit all sales and traffic in them in said State; to inflict penalties for such manufacture and sale; and to provide regulations for the abatement as a common nuisance of the property used for such forbidden purposes; and that such legislation by a State is a clear exercise of her undisputed police power which does not abridge the privileges or immunities of the citizens of the United States, nor deprive any person of property without due process of law, nor in any way contravene any provision of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States, which provides that "no State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of the citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law."² While it is undoubtedly true that the State, when providing by legislation for the protection of the public health, the public morals or the public safety is subject to the paramount authority of the constitution of the United States, and may not violate rights secured or granted by that instrument, or interfere with the execution of the powers confided to the general government,³ yet it belongs to the legislative department to exert what are known as the police powers of the State, and to determine primarily what measures are appropriate or needful for the protection of the public morals, the public health or the public safety, subject to the power of the courts to adjudge whether any particular law is an invasion of the rights secured by the constitution.⁴ A State government does not interfere with nor impair anyone's constitutional rights of liberty or of property, where it determines that the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks for general or individual use as a beverage are

1. See Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

Thus, § 14, Mass. Stat. 1852, ch. 322, concerning the manufacture and sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquor, violates the declaration of rights, because it does not limit the officer's authority and right of seizure to the liquors described in the complaint nor to those intended for sale, but directs him to seize any liquors found in the place described in the complaint. Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

2. See Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 664; bk. 31, L. ed. 205; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 614; Kidd v. Pear- son, 128 U. S. 1; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 221. See also Pearson v. International Distillery, 72 Iowa 348.

3. See Morgan Steamship Co. v. Louisiana Board of Health, 118 U. S. 455; bk. 30, L. ed. 237; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356; bk. 30, L. ed. 220; New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650; bk. 29, L. ed. 516; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446; bk. 29, L. ed. 691; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. (5 Otto) 465; bk. 24, L. ed. 527; Henderson v. Mayor of New York, 92 U. S. (2 Otto) 259; bk. 23, L. ed. 543.

4. Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 664; bk. 31, L. ed. 205.

or may become hurtful to society, and constitute, therefore, a business in which no one may lawfully engage.¹

1. REGULATION OF COMMERCE.—Congress has the absolute power to regulate commerce between the States and foreign countries, but where congress fails to make any regulation on the subject, it is thought that the traffic in an article may be lawfully regulated by the State, as soon as it is landed in its territory, and a tax imposed upon it or a license required, or its sale altogether prohibited, according to the policy which the State may suppose to be its interest or duty to pursue.²

If the effect of a State law, enacted without previously obtaining the consent of congress for the purpose of protecting the people of the State against the evils of intemperance, is to regulate interstate commerce, it is unconstitutional.³

1. Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1; bk. 32, L. ed. 346; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 664; bk. 31, L. ed. 205. See La Croix v. Fairfield Co. Commrs., 50 Conn. 321; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 648; McLean v. Leicht, 69 Iowa 401; Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381; Hall v. Commrs. of Excise, 31 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 331, note; In re De Vaucene, 31 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 289; People v. Krushaw, 31 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 344, note; Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539.

"Dow Liquor Law."—What is known as the Dow liquor law, it has been said, does not in its application to persons, who for a time long prior to its enactment have been engaged in trafficking in intoxicating liquors, and have had a large amount of property invested in the business impair their vested rights. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539. The same court say in another case that this law creating a lien upon realty upon which a saloon is established for the amount of the license imposed by the statute, is not in violation of the section of the State constitution which declares that private property shall be held invalid. Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 586.

A statute authorizing seizure and forfeiture of intoxicating liquors has been said not to be obnoxious of that part of the constitution prohibiting the taking of private property for public use without making compensation therefor; because if such intoxicating liquor can be rightfully taken at all, is on the ground that they are illegally kept and constitute a de facto nuisance, in which case their owner is not entitled to any compensation. Fisher v. McGirr, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 1; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 381.

A statute providing for the revocation of a license granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors and revocable in terms, is not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts, or taking away property rights, without compensation and due process of law. La Croix v. Fairfield Co. Commrs., 50 Conn. 321; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 648.

2. License Cases, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 504; bk. 12, L. ed. 256.

A State law cannot prohibit the introduction of imported liquors into the State and their sale in the original cask or package, because this would be to prohibit what congress, in its regulation of commerce, permitted. State v. Allmond, 2 Houst. (Del.) 612, 635; State v. Robinson, 49 Me. 285; Bradford v. Stevens, 76 Mass. (10 Gray) 379, 381; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328, 335; License Cases, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 504; bk. 12, L. ed. 256; Brown v. Maryland, 25 U. S. (12 Wheat.) 419; bk. 6, L. ed. 678.

In the License Cases, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 504; bk. 12, L. ed. 256, the court say that "if the State law in question came in collision with those acts of congress, and prevented or obstructed the importation of sale of this article by the importer in the original cask or vessel in which they were imported, it would be the duty of this court to declare them void. . . . These State laws act altogether upon the retail or domestic traffic within their respective borders. They act upon the article after it is passed the line of foreign commerce and become a part of the general mass of property in the State."

3. Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R.

A State legislature may properly prohibit the manufacture of intoxicating liquors in such State, and the fact that the statute fails to distinguish between sales within and those without the State, or that the manufacturer intends, at his convenience, to export the liquor so manufactured to foreign states or countries, will not render the act obnoxious to the objection that it is a regulation of interstate commerce.¹

A statute prohibiting any person from being a retailer or seller of spirituous liquors within the State, in less quantity than twenty-eight gallons, is not repugnant to that clause of the federal constitution which gives to the general government the power to regulate commerce with foreign powers and amongst

Co., 125 U. S. 465; bk. 31, L. ed. 700; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 236.

Prohibiting Importation of Intoxicating Liquors.—Thus a statute which in effect forbids common carriers to bring intoxicating liquors into the State from any other State or territory, without first having been furnished with a certificate under the seal of the auditor of the county, to which it is to be transported, certifying that the consignee is authorized to sell intoxicating liquors in the county, is in conflict with the provisions of the federal constitution prohibiting State legislation regulating interstate commerce. Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 125 U. S. 465; bk. 31, L. ed. 700; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 236.

1. Pearson v. International Distillery, 72 Iowa 348; State v. Stucker, 58 Iowa 469; State v. Fitzpatrick (R. I.) 11 Atl. Rep. 767; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1; bk. 32, L. ed. 346; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 221.

The application of a statute allowing purchasers of intoxicating liquors, illegally sold, to recover the purchase money by action, to a case where the vendor is a resident of another State, is not a violation of the constitution of the United States as regulating or restraining commerce between the States. Connolly v. Scarr, 72 Iowa 223.

Discrimination—Home Products—Unconstitutionality of Statute—Severance.—In the case of State v. Marsh, 37 Ark. 356, it was held that the first section of the Arkansas act of March 6th, 1879, regulating the sale of liquor in that State, is not in any proviso in conflict with the constitution of the United States, but that section fifteen of the act is, as it reads, in conflict with that provision of the constitution which empowers congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations and between the States; because it undertakes to discriminate in favor of wines made of the products of that State, and against those of other States; that the legislature has no power to make such discrimination; but that the constitutional part of the section being separable from the unconstitutional, the latter will be treated by the courts as stricken out, and the section read without the discriminating provision.

Same—Statutory Construction—Georgia Act.—In the case of ex parte Kinnebrew, 35 Fed. Rep. 52, JUDGE PARDEE held that the Georgia local option act of September 18th, 1885, which, after prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor, provides "that nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent the manufacture, sale and use of domestic wines or cider," etc., in excepting domestic wines from the prohibition it must be taken as also excepting other wines, and so construed, is not in violation of the federal constitution which gives to congress the power to regulate interstate commerce.

Same—Ohio Law.—In the case of McGuire v. State, 42 Ohio St. 580, it was held that the Ohio statute, providing that certain provisions therein shall "not extend to the sale of wine manufactured from the pure juice of the cultivated grape, within this State," was held not to be in violation of the exclusively national control of interstate commerce.

Same—Iowa Statute.—But in the case of State v. Stucker, 58 Iowa 496, the supreme court of Iowa held that it is incompetent to except from the general prohibition of the sale of wines of those made from fruit grown within the State. This, however, does not seem to be in the several States;¹ neither is a law limiting to the citizens of the State license to sell intoxicating liquors.²

m. ILLEGAL DISCRIMINATION—(1) Against Other States.—It has been held that the State, as a police regulation, may prohibit the sale of one kind of intoxicating liquor, and allow the sale of another kind, and that the prohibition of wines made from fruit grown in other States is not unconstitutional as being an invasion of the privileges and immunities of the citizens of another State;³ but the better opinion seems to be that any law which discriminates against imported wines manufactured from grapes raised in any of the other States, or in foreign countries, and in favor of wines manufactured from grapes raised in the State is in violation of the constitution of the United States, and void.⁴ Where a law regulating the sale of liquors thus discriminates against foreign wines and is therefore unconstitutional if the unconstitutional part can be separated from that which is valid, such invalid part will be treated by the courts as stricken out, and the law read without the discriminating provision.⁵

Where a statute purports to make the sale of domestic wine lawful and that of wine imported from other States unlawful, the sale of domestic wines cannot be deemed unlawful because the discrimination is unconstitutional.⁶

A liquor law is not unconstitutional because it permits license to sell, to be issued only to residents of the State.⁷

(2) Against Particular Persons or Liquors.—A statute regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, which prohibits, restricts or harmony with Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. (12 Otto) 123.

1. Com. v. Kimball, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 359; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 326.

2. Cohn v. Mulcher, 29 Fed. Rep. 433.

3. State v. Stucker, 58 Iowa 496; U. S. Const. 4, § 2. See Powell v. State, 69 Ala. 10; McGuire v. State, 42 Ohio St. 530; Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. (12 Otto) 123; bk. 26, L. ed. 103; Cohn v. Melcher, 29 Fed. Rep. 433.

4. McCreary v. State, 73 Ala. 480. See Vines v. State, 67 Ala. 73; State v. Marsh, 37 Ark. 356; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. (1 Otto) 275; bk. 23, L. ed. 347; Ex parte Kennebrew, 35 Fed. Rep. 52.

It is said in Powell v. State, 69 Ala. 10: "Where an act of the legislature, prohibiting the sale or other disposition of any vinous, spirituous or malt liquors, under a penalty, contains a proviso exempting from the prohibition of the act the sale of domestic wines manufactured from grapes grown in this State, a discrimination is thereby made against wines made from grapes grown in other States, but not against foreign spirituous or malt liquors. And while it may be, that this legislative discrimination is invalid so far as concerns wines imported from other States, under the principle decided in Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, and followed by this court in Vines v. The State, 67 Ala. 73—a point not decided—the rest of the law would be unaffected thereby, and would stand.

5. State v. Marsh, 37 Ark. 356. See Ex parte Kinnebrew, 35 Fed. Rep. 52.

6. State v. Nash, 97 N. C. 514.

7. Mette v. McGuckin, 18 Neb. 323; Cohn v. Melcher, 29 Fed. Rep. 433.

Thus it is said that sections 1523 and 1526 of the Iowa Code limiting the giving of license to certain classes of citizens of Iowa to buy and sell liquors for mechanical, medicinal, culinary and sacramental purposes only, do not abridge the privileges or immunities of the citizens of the United States, since the purpose and effect of the act is made a safeguard against the unlawful selling of all liquors, and not to discriminate against other citizens of other States. Kohn v. Melcher, 29 Fed. Rep. 433.

confines to designated individuals the sale of intoxicants in a particular district, is valid as an exercise of the police power of the State.¹ A statute taxing the business of selling liquor is not unconstitutional because not general and uniform in its operation in that it does not include manufacturers, or manufacturers selling in quantities of one gallon or more at a time.²

(3) Against Particular Localities; Local and Special Laws.—

It is competent for the legislature to pass a general law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, and the fact that such inhibition is confined to certain localities, though widely separate, does not render it unconstitutional;³ and such a statute is not unconstitutional for the reason that its application is limited and not general.⁴ Where an act of the legislature prohibits the sale of liquor in a particular locality, it is not essential to the validity of the act that the locality should be defined by the ordinance of the city, town or civil district.⁵

1. See Meyers v. Baker, 120 Ill. 567; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 580; Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284; Sarrls v. Com., 83 Ky. 327; Stickrod v. Com. (Ky.), 5 S. W. Rep. 580; Keefer v. Hillsdale (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 277; In re Hauck (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 269; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539; State v. Duggan, 15 R. I. 403.

In Cramer v. Marx, 64 Pa. St. 151, it is said that a statute prohibiting the sale, etc., "of any kind of articles of traffic, spirituous liquors, etc.," only applies to the sale of spirituous liquors; that this application to all articles of traffic would be unconstitutional.

2. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539. See Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 661.

3. Territory v. Connell (Ariz.), 16 Pac. Rep. 209; Howell v. State, 71 Ga. 224; State v. Shroeder, 51 Iowa 197; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539; State v. Berlin, 21 S. C. 292; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 677; State v. Rauscher, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 96; State v. Fisher, 33 Wis. 159.

Prohibiting Sale of Malt Liquors—Two Mile Limit.—Thus a law prohibiting the sale of malt or vinous liquors within two miles of the incorporate limits of any municipality. State v. Shroeder, 51 Iowa 197. And an act prohibiting the selling of intoxicating liquor within four miles of an incorporated institution of learning, although excepting sales within the limits of an unincorporated town, does not contravene the constitutional provision which prohibits partial legislation, if it extends to all persons who may come into like situation. State v. Rauscher, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 96.

A law taxing all of a class alike, as liquor dealers within five miles of a town, at one price, and liquor dealers at wayside inns at a less price, is not invalid for want of uniformity. Ter. v. Connell (Ariz.), s. c., 16 Pac. Rep. 209.

The legislature may, in providing against the evils resulting from the traffic of intoxicating liquors, levy a tax upon such forms of the traffic as in its wisdom may seem best, without infringing the constitutional requirement that all laws of a general nature shall be uniform in their operation throughout the State. So held in regard to the law which, in its provision, made distinctions as to the regulations imposed on distilleries and breweries on the one hand and saloons on the other. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio 539.

There is nothing in the Wis. Stat. (laws of 1872, ch. 127) regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, which shows an intention to exempt from the provisions thereof any portion of the State. It is co-extensive in its operation with the original excise law (R. S., ch. 35), of which it is amendatory; and no municipality can be held exempt therefrom, unless there is something in its charter creating such an exemption. State v. Fisher, 33 Wis. 159.

4. Howell v. State, 71 Ga. 224. See Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 661; Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539.

The Ohio act, taxing the traffic in intoxicating liquors, is not in conflict with the provision of the constitution, that laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation. Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 661.

5. Sarrls v. Com., 83 Ky. 327; United

There is no constitutional objection to a law which prohibits the sale of liquors outside of town and city, and permits its sale under license within towns and cities.¹

Laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, where otherwise valid, are not in conflict with that article of the constitution which requires that all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation.²

n. TAXATION—(1) Taxing Power and Legislation Generally.—A statute imposing a tax upon the retailing of spirituous liquors is not in conflict with that clause of the constitution which confers upon the legislature the power to impose taxes upon incomes, occupations and the like,³ and will not prevent the State, in the exercise of its sovereign powers, from passing further laws affecting the traffic.⁴ A liquor license fee is not a tax, and is therefore not void because it does not conform to the constitutional restriction upon the taxing power.⁵

(2) Taxation of Imports; Discrimination.—A statute prohibiting any person from being a retailer or seller of spirituous liquors, in less quantities than a specified number of gallons, unless first licensed as a retailer of spirituous liquors, is not violative of the provisions of the federal constitution prohibiting the several States from laying any duties of imposts upon imports or exports, except such as may be absolutely necessary to enforce States v. Ronan, 33 Fed. Rep. 117; In re Hoover, 30 Fed. Rep. 51.

1. State v. Berlin, 21 S. C. 295; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 677. See Davis v. State, 68 Ala. 58; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 128; State v. Turner, 18 S. C. 103; State v. Mancke, 18 S. C. 81.

Exception in Favor of Towns and Cities.—A State statute providing that no liquor license shall be granted except in incorporated cities or towns, unless with the consent of a certain number of freeholders, is not unconstitutional as denying liquor dealers in counties equal protection of the laws, under the federal constitution. United States v. Ronan, 33 Fed. Rep. 117.

The Georgia act of October 16th, 1885, regarding the manner of granting license for the sale of liquors is not unconstitutional because of discriminating in favor of persons residing in incorporate towns, since the statute provides that such persons need not obtain the consent of their neighbors, and as to them the county commissioners have no power to deny the license. In re Hoover, 30 Fed. Rep. 51.

The act of congress of May 17th, 1884, prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in Alaska, except for mechanical, medicinal and scientific purposes, concerning which latter the president is authorized to make proper regulations, is not invalid because it applies only to the district of Alaska, and such statute supersedes or repeals all former laws on the subject of intoxicating liquors in Alaska. Nelson v. U. S., 30 Fed. Rep. 112; U. S. v. Nelson, 29 Fed. Rep. 203.

Same—Local and Special Laws.—But a statute establishing a license and excise department in certain cities of more than 15,000 inhabitants, and in which the granting of licenses was not already vested in a board of excise or court of common pleas, being local and special, is unconstitutional. State v. Trenton, 48 N. J. L. (19 Vr.) 438; nom. Closson v. Trenton, 48 N. J. L. (19 Vr.) 438.

2. Groesch v. State, 42 Ind. 547; Martin v. Blattner, 68 Iowa 286.

3. See Napier v. Hodges, 31 Tex. 287.

4. Reithmiller v. People, 44 Mich. 280.

5. State v. Hudson, 78 Mo. 302. See Pleuler v. State, 11 Neb. 547.

Dram Shop Licenses—Police and Taxing Power.—The license fee exacted by the general law regulating dramshops and the amendatory act of March 24th, 1883 (Sess. acts 1883, p. 86, § 3), is not a tax. It is a price paid for the privi-

and carry into effect those laws providing for the peace, safety, health, morals and general welfare of the community.¹

(3) Uniformity.—Under a constitutional provision which requires that “the general assembly shall have power to tax peddlers . . . liquor dealers,” and the like, in such manner as it shall from time to time direct by general law, uniform as to the class which it affects, the term “liquor dealers” is used in the generic sense, and it is competent for the legislature to classify the different kinds of liquor dealers, and impose differential taxes upon such classes. The rule as to uniformity will not be violated so long as the tax imposed is the same upon all members of the particular class.² And it has been said that a statute which creates a lien upon realty upon which a saloon is established for the amount of the licence imposed by the statute is not in conlege of carrying on a business which is detrimental to public morals and which the legislature, in the exercise of the police power, has the right to prohibit altogether. The act, therefore, is not void because it does not conform to the restrictions of §§ 1, 3 and 10 of art. 10 of the constitution in relation to the exercise of the taxing power. State ex rel. Troll v. Hudson, 78 Mo. 302.

Texas Bell Punch Law.—The levy by the Texas “Bell Punch law” of 1879, of both a State and a county tax, and its prohibition of interference by the county authorities are provisions germane to its subject, and within the comprehensive, though specific, taxing powers conferred by the constitution upon the legislature. County commissioners’ courts, except as boards of equalization, have conferred and may resume. Albrecht v. State, 8 Tex. App. 216; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 737.

In Oregon, a bill providing for an increase of the amount for a license for the sale of liquors is not a bill for raising revenue, so that under § 18, art. 4, Const., it must originate in the house; but an exercise of the police power of the State. State v. Wright, 14 Oreg. 365.

1. Com. v. Kimball, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 359; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 326. See Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123. Compare Locke’s App., 72 Pa. St. 491; 13 Am. Rep. 716.

The act of the Texas legislature entitled “an act regulating taxation,” approved June 3rd, 1873, providing in § 3, that “there shall be levied on and collected from every person, firm, or association of persons, pursuing the selling of spirituous, vinous, malt and other intoxicating liquors in quantities less than one quart $200, in quantities of a quart and less than ten gallons $100; provided that this section shall not be so construed as to include any wines or beer manufactured in this State,” is unconstitutional only so far as it discriminates against wines or beer, for the selling of either of which a person cannot be subjected to a higher tax than that imposed for selling wines or beer manufactured in the State. Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123.

2. Timm v. Harrison, 109 Ill. 593. See State v. Rolle, 30 La. An., pt. 2, 991; Kaliski v. Grady, 25 La. An. 576; Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 661; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539; Albrecht v. State, 8 Tex. App. 216; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 737.

Bars on Steamboats.—Thus a law imposing a smaller license tax on the proprietors of bars or drinking saloons kept on steamboats owned and registered in this State than on owners of bars kept on land does not violate the clause of the constitution prescribing equality and uniformity of taxation. State v. Rolle, 30 La. An., pt. 2, 991.

In Louisiana, it has been held that a law is not unconstitutional because it levies a tax of $85 on persons dealing in distilled liquors, or retailing spirituous liquors on land, while a tax of only $50 is levied on persons following a like occupation on steamboats, although they may only ply within the limits of a single parish of the State. Kaliski v. Grady, 25 La. Ann. 576.

“Dow Liquor Law”.—Constitutionality.—The Ohio act of May 14th, 1886, known as the “Dow law,” does not violate the provision of the State constitution requiring taxation of property to be by a uniform rule according to its flit with the constitutional provision which requires that property shall be taxed by a "uniform rule."¹

o. STATUTES VIOLATIVE OF CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITIONS

(1) Laws Authorizing and Regulating Traffic Generally.—While it is competent for the general assembly of a State to impose a tax upon the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors as a means of providing against evils resulting therefrom,² yet an amendment to a constitution prohibiting the sale of beer or other liquors which is submitted to the people, but not lawfully adopted, is void; and no one can be convicted and punished for a sale of such liquors, under a statute passed in pursuance of the provisions of such amendment.³

Statutes regulating or imposing a tax upon the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, and providing that it shall attach as a lien upon the property in which the business is conducted, does not constitute a license within the provision of the constitution which prohibits the granting of liquor licenses.⁴

true value in money and assessment provided for therein, not being a tax upon property, but upon the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors in the State which is within the legislative power of taxation. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539.

And as applied to wholesale dealers in such liquors is not in conflict with the provisions of the State constitution requiring uniformity of taxation. Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 661.

Texas "Bell Punch Law."—The tax imposed by the Texas "Bell Punch law" of 1879 is a tax upon the occupation of a retailer of liquors, and not a tax of his stock in trade, like an ad valorem assessment. That it extracts more money from some dealers than from others does not impugn its equality and uniformity in a constitutional sense; and to automatic contrivance known as the "register" or "bell punch" is legitimately furnished at each dealer's expense, to count the drinks he dispenses, and thus adjust the tax he must pay. Albrecht v. State, 8 Tex. App. 216; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 737.

1. Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576.

The Ohio act, May 14th, 1886 (83 Ohio Laws 157), imposing a tax upon the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, or upon certain forms thereof, which tax shall attach as a lien on the property in which it is conducted,—such tax and provision for lien not constituting a license, within Const., art. 15, § 9,—and providing that the tax may be collected by the county treasurer, as other taxes are collected, and imposing penalties for nonpayment and refusal of persons engaged in the business, on assessor's demand, to sign and verify the statement of the return,—is not in violation of the Const., art. 2, § 26, providing for uniformity of laws. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539; Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576.

2. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539.

3. See State v. Johnson, 61 Iowa 504.

4. Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539; State v. Frame, 39 Ohio St. 399. See State v. Clark, 15 R. I. 383; State v. Kane, 15 R. I. 395, 541.

Tax on Liquor Business—Lien on Property.—Thus it has been held that a statute (Ohio statute of April 17th, 1883), providing against the evils resulting from intoxicating liquors, and authorizing an annual assessment of the business, and also providing that such assessment shall be a lien upon the real property "in which such business is conducted," and shall at a particular time, and that "whoever shall engage or continue in the business of selling liquors in or upon such land or premises, not owned by him and without the written consent of the owner thereof, shall be held guilty of a misdemeanor," is not a license law within the constitutional prohibition that "no license to tax any traffic in intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted in this State. State v. Frame, 39 Ohio St. 399. This case, however, was over-

A law relative to the licensing and sale of intoxicating liquors which requires applicants for license to procure the assent of a majority of the registered voters of the district in which the sale is to be made, is not unconstitutional.¹

However, a statute regulating the liquor traffic which requires from all engaged therein money and a bond, is said to be within the inhibition of a constitution providing that "no license to traffic of intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted in this State," and is, therefore, void.²

(2) Statutes Void or Unconstitutional in Part.—Where a statute is void or unconstitutional in part, and the part which is valid can be separated from the part which is invalid or unconstitutional, that part which is separable will be valid.³

6. Construction of Statutes.—Where the selling of liquor without license is clearly prohibited under penalties, the context, the surroundings and the evils intended to be remedied may be considered for the purpose of ascertaining the territorial limits intended to be affected.⁴

ruled in the case of Butzman v. Whitebeck, 42 Ohio St. 223; State v. Sinks, 42 Ohio St. 345, in which it was held that such an enactment was in effect a license law, whether the laws was executed before or after the passage of the act, and that, therefore, the law was unconstitutional. Compare King v. Capellar, 42 Ohio St. 218.

1. State v. Brown, 19 Fla. 563.

Granting License—Arbitrary Discretion.—The Georgia act of October 6th, 1885, regarding the manner of granting licenses for the sale of spirituous liquors, is not unconstitutional as being in violation of the constitution of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution, because it gives an arbitrary discretion to the county commissioners to prevent an applicant from engaging in an occupation legalized by the State, and without any sort of regard to his fitness for the business, or the property and merits of his application. In re Hoover, 30 Fed. Rep. 51.

2. State v. Hipp, 38 Ohio St. 199.

3. See McCreary v. State, 73 Ala. 480; State v. Amery, 12 R. I. 64; State v. Clark, 15 R. I. 383.

Sale on Sunday.—Thus it has been said that a statute providing that no sale of enumerated liquors shall be made on Sunday except by pharmacists upon a physician's prescription, is not so closely connected with other sections of the same chapter, authorizing licenses, as to render the whole act unconstitutional and void. State v.

Clark, 15 R. I. 383. And the proviso of an act (Alabama act of February 23d, 1881) prohibiting the sale of liquor, except wine raised from grapes grown in the State, is unconstitutional because being a discrimination against the foreign wines; but the unconstitutionality of this section does not affect the remainder of the act. McCreary v. State, 73 Ala. 480.

However, a statute prohibiting the sale of liquors therein named, in violation of such statute, has been held to be so connected with the portion of the chapter which enacts a license system that it is within the fifth amendment of the constitution and therefore void. State v. Tonks, 15 R. I. 385.

4. State v. Cofield, 22 S. Car. 301. See Amos v. State, 73 Ala. 498; State ex rel., Edwards v. Sumpter Co., 22 Fla. 1; Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284; State v. Higgins, 53 Vt. 191.

Election Day—Statute Prohibiting Sale of Liquor on—Interpretation.—Where a statute defining the offence of selling or giving away intoxicating liquors on election day, is absolutely free from ambiguity, and expresses clearly the minds of the framers, there is no occasion and no authority to resort to other means of interpretation, since the interpretation resulting from the ordinary nature of the words is not repugnant to sound and acknowledged principles of national or State policy. Smith v. State, 18 Tex. App. 454.

7. Operation and Effect of Various Statutes—a. PROSPECTIVE AND RETROACTIVE OPERATION.—It has been said that a law providing for the granting of licenses to merchants and grocers to traffic in intoxicating liquors is applicable to those licenses only which were granted after it took effect;¹ but such law extends to sales of liquors owned by the sellers at the time of its passage.²

b. AS TO PARTICULAR PERSONS AND CLASSES.—An act to regulate the sale of malt, spirituous and vinous liquors, applies Amendment of Statute.—Where a law establishes license for liquor selling, and it is amended by striking out the words "twenty-five nor more than one hundred and fifty dollars," and inserting in lieu thereof the words "seventy-five nor more than two hundred," and in a recital of how the section as amended shall read, omits the maximum upon the licence fee fixed in the first part of the act, establishes the license fee at $200; the act having declared what the amendment shall be, and the omission in the recital being evidently a mistake. Custin v. City of Viroqua, 67 Wis. 314.

"Or Otherwise Disposed of."—Where a statute makes it unlawful "to sell, give away, or otherwise dispose of," designated liquors, the words "or otherwise dispose of," following the more specific or particular words "sell or give away," must be construed, a larger legislative intention not being clearly expressed, as extending only to a disposition eiusdem generis with a sale or gift; they cannot be extended to any and every act which may be said to be a disposition. Amos v. State, 73 Ala. 498.

The expression "third offence," as used in the prohibitory liquor law, signifies the third offence which has been legally ascertained and determined, and in that sense is equivalent to "third conviction." Matter of Buddington, 29 Mich. 472.

"Keeping for sale," under the Rhode Island act, May 27th, 1886, § 9, means "keeping for sale and delivery." Section 1 is construed as if the words "and delivery" were not in it. State v. Kane, 15 R. I. 395 and 541.

Prohibiting Sale of Spirituous Liquors—Police Regulation Not a Revenue Law.—Ala. Rev. Code, § 3618, a statute forbidding the retailing of vinous or spirituous liquors in quantities less than a quart, without a license, or selling the same to a person of known intemperate habits, etc., is not a mere revenue law, but rather a police regulation for the protection of the public morals and peace. McPherson v. State, 54 Ala. 221.

"Immorality or Other Unfitness"—"As Specified in This Act."—In the last sentence of Ind. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 5314, permitting a remonstrance against the granting of a licence on account of "immorality or other unfitness, as is specified in this act," the phrase "as is specified in this act" qualifies and limits the word "unfitness," and not "immorality." Groscof v. Rainier, 111 Ind. 361.

1. State v. Andrews, 26 Mo. 171.

2. Com. v. Logan, 78 Mass. (12 Gray) 136. See Bennett v. People, 16 Ill. 160.

Thus it has been held that an indictment is sustainable under such a law for selling by retail any intoxicating or spirituous liquors or wines, while the act governing such liquors was in force. People v. Safford, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 112.

It is otherwise, however, as to sales made prior to the passage of the law. Bennett v. People, 16 Ill. 160.

An act "to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in the vicinity of certain manufacturing establishments in the counties of Scio, Lawrence and Jackson," must be confined to such manufacturing establishments as existed at the time of its passage. Town of Ottawa v. County of La Salle, 12 Ill. 339.

Where an act provides that all procedures under the act for the suppression of intemperance shall be held to be proceedings in rem, and not criminal proceedings, applies to proceedings pending when the act was passed. Hine v. Belden, 27 Conn. 384.

Where, in such a proceeding, a party had been cited to appear before a justice of the peace on a certain day and show why certain liquors seized should not be forfeited, and the act above referred to took effect between alike to all persons who are engaged in the sale of such liquors, either at wholesale or at retail.¹

c. AS TO PARTICULAR TIMES, LOCALITIES, ETC.—A general statute declaring the sale of spirituous or intoxicating liquors without a license to be unlawful, applies to incorporated cities, towns or villages of the State as well as to the county.²

8. Repeal—a. OPERATION AND EFFECT—(1) Generally.—The effect of repealing a statute to which a subsequent prohibitory statute refers for a penalty is to render the latter inoperative.³

(2) As to Existing Licences, Permits, etc.—Where a law has been adopted prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors for the time of issuing the citation and the day appointed for the trial, and the justice was absent from the town on the day appointed, it was held that the justice had authority, on his return, to issue a notice to the defendant, under a statute, relating to civil suits, appointing another day for the trial, and to proceed on the day so appointed with the trial of the case. Hine v. Belden, 27 Conn. 384.

1. State v. Cummings, 17 Neb. 311. Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 661; Read v. Storey, 6 H. & N. 423; s. c., 30 L. J. M. C. 110; 7 Jur. N. S. 344; 3 L. T. 674; 9 W. R. 418. Compare Brittain v. Bethany, 31 Miss. 331.

"The Slocum law," approved February 28th, 1881, applies alike to all persons engaged in the sale of such liquors, whether by wholesale or retail. State v. Cummings, 17, Neb. 311.

Sale to Inn Keeper.—Where there is nothing in the law prohibiting the sale to an inn keeper, by one who has no license to sell, and who is neither an importer, a commission auctioneer, producer, brewer, distiller or druggist prohibits the sale. Evans v. Hall, 45 Pa. St. 235.

Intemperate Persons, Habitual Drunkards and Minors.—As to laws prohibiting sale to, see Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 522; State v. Richter, 23 Minn. 81.

Annual assessments upon business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, does not operate where the real property in which the business is conducted by a tenant is held by such tenant, under the law for a permit executed before the passage of the statute. State v. Frame, 39 Ohio St. 399.

Dram shop acts apply only to persons having a dram shop license. State v. Hambright, 33 Mo. 394.

2. State v. Cofield, 22 S. Car. 301.

A statute concerning groceries, authorizing the sale of spirituous liquors in quantities not less than one quart, at a distance of one mile from a town or village, and not to be drunk on the premises where sold, is valid. Bledsoe v. State, 10 Mo. 388.

Sale on Sunday—A statute which declares that the permit granted under an act shall not authorize the person receiving it to sell intoxicating liquors on Sunday or at certain other days, and that sales made on such days are unlawful; and that upon conviction a fine shall be imposed upon a person selling on any such days, section 1 of which acts makes it unlawful for any person to sell liquors to be drunk upon the premises, without having first obtained a permit therefor, is construed to be a limitation as to the times when sales shall be made to be drunk in, upon or about the building or premises where sold. Morris v. State, 47 Ind. 503.

It has been said that the Indiana act of 1851, § 7, enacted for the purpose of regulating the sale of spirituous liquors in Tippecanoe county, does not create a distinct offence, but only prescribes a new rule of evidence for trials of the offence. State v. O'Conner, 4 Ind. 299.

3. See Com. v. Gedikoh, 101 Pa. St. 354.

So held as to the Texas Code, art. 423, e, referring to art. 423, d, prohibiting the sale of liquors less than one quart to be drunk on the premises. Smith v. State, 7 Tex. App. 286. See Sullivan v. People, 15 Ill. 233; Ingersoll v. State, 11 Ind. 464; King v. State, 2 Ind. 523; Hannibal v. Guyott, 18 Mo. 515; Reed's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 452.

A statute relating to the establishment, etc., of commissioners of excise, in each of the cities, villages and towns of the State, does not alter or abolish other than medical, scientific and mechanical purposes, all sales made after the passage and taking effect of such act will be unlawful, although made under a license issued before such law was adopted.¹ But it has been said that the repeal of a law granting licenses to grocers and the like to sell spirituous liquors, under certain restrictions, does not affect the validity of an unexpired term of such a license; it takes away the power to punish grocers dealing in liquors by virtue of those licenses for a violation of it.²

(3) As to Prescriptive Rights.—The right of custom, prescription or charter to sell beer or other liquors at fairs, without an excise retail license, is abrogated by a law providing for the regulation of the sale and traffic in intoxicating liquors, prohibiting all sales by persons not authorized by a license.³

(4) Upon Rights of Action—Pending Prosecutions.—The repeal of a statute pending the prosecution of an indictment for selling liquor without a license will not affect the proceedings.⁴

the county board of commissioners of excise, existing under prior laws. Cattaraugus Comms. of Excise v. Willey, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 427.

1. Prohibitory Amendment Cases, 24 Kan. 700. See State v. Fairfield, 37 Me. 517; Pleuler v. State, 11 Neb. 547; Reg. v. Whiteley, 3 Hurls. & N. 143.

Thus it is held by the supreme court of Nebraska, in the case of Pleuler v. State, 11 Neb. 547, that privileges granted under a former license law of Nebraska, which law was repealed by the act of February 28th, 1881, passed "to regulate the license and sale of malt, spirituous and vinous liquors," were absolutely revoked upon the taking effect of the latter act.

2. State v. Andrews, 28 Mo. 14, 19. See Cassett v. State, 9 Ind. 87; State v. Mullenhoff, 74 Iowa 271; State v. Holmes, 38 N. H. 225; Adams v. Hackett, 27 N. H. (7 Fost.) 289; s. c., 59 Am. Dec. 376; Hirn v. State, 1 Ohio St. 15; Sanders v. Com. 117 Pa. St. 293.

Previous Permit—Effect of New Law On.—The supreme court of Iowa has held that where a defendant is indicted for keeping a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors, in violation of an act of the assembly, it is no defence that the sale was made under a permit issued prior to the taking effect of the act, because such permit is not protected by a provision of the statute, which provides that the repeal of a statute shall not affect a right accrued under the statute repealed. State v. Mullenhoff, 74 Iowa 271.

The supreme court of Indiana say in Cassett v. State, 9 Ind. 87, that an act regulating trafficking in and sale of intoxicating liquors does not repeal the provisions of a license bond previously issued.

In the case of the Village of Rome v. Knox, 14 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 268, overruling People v. Tiphaine, 13 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 74, under an act declaring that no license, except as therein provided, should thereafter be granted, and the system of licenses therein provided for did not take effect until a later date; the court held that one whose former license expired after the passage of the statute, and before it took effect, was not liable to a penalty for selling without a license until after the date when the statute went into operation. See Lehritter v. State, 42 Ind. 482.

But it has been said by the supreme court of Mississippi, in the case of Trost v. State, 64 Miss. 188, that the seller cannot justify, under a license which at the time of the sale charged does not protect him, because retailing has become unlawful.

3. See Huxham v. Wheeler, 3 Hurls. & C. 75; s. c., 33 L. J., M. C. 153; 10 Jur., N. S. 545; 10 L. T. 342; 12 W. R. 713.

4. People v. Townsey, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 70. See Leyner v. State, 8 Ind. 490; Gray v. Kimball, 42 Me. 299; Com. v. McKenney, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 1; Com. v. Edwards, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 1; Teague v. State, 39 Miss. 516; Sanders v. Com., 117 Pa. St. 293.

(5) As to Fines and Penalties, and Actions Therefor.—Where the repealing statute contains a clause, in express terms, reserving the rights which have accrued under the repealing statute as to any offences committed against the former law, or as to any act done or punishment incurred or any right accrued, such repeal will in no wise affect the peoples' right to prosecute for penalties under the repealed statute;¹ but where such repealing statute has no saving clause, no penalty can be enforced or punishment inflicted for a violation of its provisions committed while it was in operation.²

9. Municipal Control; Local Option³—a. MUNICIPAL REGULATION AND CONTROL.—Cities may exercise police power by ordinance regulating the sale of intoxicating drinks, beyond those authorized by the general laws of the State, and may affix greater penalties;⁴ and the enactment of a liquor tax law does not es-

A liquor law was passed February 16, 1855, which repealed all acts inconsistent with its own provisions, but provided that the act should not take effect until from and after the 12th day of June then next. This suit was commenced the 1st of June. Held, that the repealing clause took effect from the said 12th day of June, up to which day a previous law remained in force, and therefore this action, which was instituted under that law, was well brought. Leyner v. State, 8 Ind. 490.

Particularly is this so where the repealing statute contains a saving clause. Thus the defendant was indicted for selling liquors in violation of a statute which prohibited the sale of vinous and spirituous liquors within a certain locality in any quantity whatever; he entered into recognizance for his appearance, which was forfeited, and judgment nisi was entered against him and his sureties. The act under which he was indicted was then repealed, but the repealing act provided that "it should not be so construed as to release or discharge from punishment any who had violated the act intended to be repealed, by selling vinous and spirituous liquors in less quantities than one gallon." Held, that this last act must be construed so as to save a prosecution under the first act, although the indictment did not charge the sale in less quantities than a gallon, and that, on trial of that indictment after the date of the repealing act, the State would be held to prove that the sale was in less quantities than a gallon; and therefore the judgment nisi might be made final. Teague v. State, 39 Miss. 516.

1. Mullinix v. People, 76 Ill. 211. See Parsons v. Bridgham, 34 Me. 240; Keller v. State, 11 Md. 525; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 226; Wright v. Smith, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 414; Cattaraugus Comms. v. Willey, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 427; State v. Fleming, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 152.

The Pennsylvania act of February 26th, 1855, a general act prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday, under a penalty of $50, recoverable in an action of debt, was repealed as to Alleghany county by the act of 1872. The general act of May 13th, 1887, repeals "all local laws fixing a license rate or fee less than" therein provided. The license rate fixed by the act of 1872 was less than that fixed by the act of 1887. Held, that the act of 1887 repealed the act of 1872, but that as it did not supply the provisions of the act of 1855 it left that act in force; that by the repeal of the act of 1872 Alleghany county was brought within the operation of the act of 1855, and an action for debt therein, for the penalties imposed by that act, was well brought. Durr v. Com. (Pa.) 12 Atl. Rep. 507.

2. Cooley's Const. Lim. 471; 1 Kent Com. 465.

Securities for Costs.—Repeal of Law not a Release.—However it is said in McGowan v. Deyo, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 340, that the repeal of the act of May 14th, 1845, without any saving clause, did not abrogate the security for costs given by a person prosecuting for penalties for the indemnity of the overseers of the poor.

3. See title LOCAL OPTION

4. Dennehy v. Chicago, 120 Ill. 627; Pekin v. Smelzel, 21 Ill. 464; s. c., 74

top the State from empowering municipal councils to further regulate the sale of liquor by requiring saloon keepers to take out licenses.¹ In the exercise of such powers, cities and villages may prohibit absolutely the sale of or trafficking in intoxicating liquors,²

Am. Dec. 105. See Morris v. City Council of Rome, 10 Ga. 532; Gunnarssohn v. Sterling, 92 Ill. 571; Martin v. People, 88 Ill. 390; Kettering v. Jacksonville, 50 Ill. 39; Strauss v. Pontiac, 40 Ill. 301; Block v. Jacksonville, 36 Ill. 301; O'Leary v. Cook County, 28 Ill. 534; Byers v. Olney, 16 Ill. 35; Godard v. Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; King v. Jacksonville, 3 Ill. 305; New Hampton v. Conroy, 56 Iowa 498; Wolf v. City of Lansing, 53 Mich. 367; State ex rel. Fairchild v. Andrews, 11 Neb. 523; Phillips v. Tecumseh, 5 Neb. 312; State v. Fav, 44 N. J. L. (15 Vr.) 474. Compare Carr v. Fowler, 74 Ind. 590.

Ordinance Imposing Penalties.—When Void.—Where the sale of intoxicating liquors other than vinous or malt is prohibited by the State, and cities and towns incorporated under the general law have power to regulate or prohibit the sale of liquors not prohibited by the State, if such a town enact an ordinance to regulate the sale of wine and beer, making it a condition of granting a license that liquors prohibited by law shall not be sold, nor gambling permitted on the premises, and imposing penalties for the violation of such conditions, to be collected by action on a bond, such ordinance is void, and no action can be maintained on the bond. New Hampton v. Conroy, 56 Iowa 498.

Ordinances Regulating Validity.

Where the charter incorporating the city of Rome gave power and authority to the mayor and council to pass all by-laws and ordinances that should appear to them necessary and proper for the security, welfare and interest of said city, or for preserving the peace, health, order and good government thereof, and also authorize said mayor and council to license persons to retail spirituous liquors within the said city; it was held, that it was competent for said mayor and council to pass an ordinance not essentially impairing the right to retail under the license granted, but only regulating the exercise of it for the benefit of the peace, order and good government of the city. Morris v. City Council of Rome, 10 Ga. 532.

Same.—Power by City Councils.

Where a town was empowered by its charter to make ordinances "to license, regulate and prohibit inns or taverns, and to prohibit all traffic in or sale of intoxicating drinks," it was held that the power was only to prohibit, and not to regulate, the sale of liquor. State v. Fay, 44 N. J. L. (15 Vr.) 474.

Where, under the statute, the traffic in liquor within the limits of cities and villages can only be carried on under ordinances duly passed by the corporate authorities thereof until such ordinances are passed, no application can be made and no other step can be taken towards the procurement of a license to sell liquors within the limits of such corporation. State v. Andrews, 11 Neb. 523.

"As hereinafter Provided."—The Illinois statute (Priv. Laws 1869) gives corporate authority of a particular town "complete and exclusive control as hereinafter provided over the selling," etc., of liquors. The words "as hereinafter provided" do no refer to the power to declare the sale a nuisance but to the limitation as to druggists, and the punishment. Martin v. People, 88 Ill. 390. And the fact that in such case the sale is declared a nuisance does not limit their exercise of such exclusive control. Martin v. People, 88 Ill. 390.

The authority of county commissioners in Nebraska to license the sale of liquors is confined to portions of the county not within any incorporated town or city; within these the municipal authorities control the subject. Phillips v. Tecumseh, 5 Neb. 312.

The excise board of a city, and not the common council, has the sole power to regulate the sale of liquors, under the New Jersey acts of 1884 and 1886. State, Featherstone v. Lambertville (N. J.), 14 Atl. Rep. 599.

1. Wolf v. City of Lansing, 53 Mich. 367.

2. See Hill v. Mayor, 72 Ga. 314; Gunnarssohn v. Sterling, 92 Ill. 569; Pekin v. Smelzel, 21 Ill. 464; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 105; Sweet v. City of Wabash, 41 Ind. 7; State ex rel. Rossell v. Garon, 13 Atl. Rep. 26; Trustees of Clintonville v. Keeting, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 341; Bronson v. Oberlin, 41 Ohio St. 476; or they may authorize,¹ or license a traffic in such liqu-

Compare Hill v. Commissioners, 22 Ga. 203.

A city charter, like that of the city of Pekin, which authorizes the passage of ordinances to restrain or prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks, supposes that the usual means by penalty will be resorted to. The passage of an ordinance which declares that liquor shall not be sold is not within the spirit of the charter. Pekin v. Smelzel, 21 Ill. 464; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 105.

The city of Dalton has power to pass an ordinance providing that no person or persons shall be allowed to sell spirituous, intoxicating, fermented or malt liquors in the incorporate limits of the city, in any quantity either directly or by selling any other commodity, and giving away liquor, nor under any other device or disguise whatever; and imposing a penalty for this violation. Hill v. Mayor, 72 Ga. 314.

Imposing fines, etc.—The act incorporating the village of Clintonville (N. Y. Sts. 1845, p. 172) authorized the trustees to make such by-laws as they should deem proper relative to "the regulating, restraining and suppressing of all manner of shops and places for the sale of ardent spirits by retail," and to impose a fine of not more than fifteen dollars for the violation of such by-laws; and this power was by a subsequent act declared to be "exclusive" of the powers of the town officers of the town in which the village was situated. Held, that the trustees might make a valid by-law imposing a fine of fifteen dollars for selling ardent spirits in a quantity less than five gallons without having a license from the trustees of the village; that they might prohibit altogether the selling of spirituous liquors, even by persons having a license from the town authorities; and that, after the passing of the by-law first mentioned, a retailer of spirits must have a license both from the town authorities and the trustees of the village. Trustees of Clintonville v. Keeting, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 341.

1. Brown v. State, 79 Ga. 473; Douglasville v. Johns, 62 Ga. 423; Coulterville v. Gillen, 72 Ill. 599; Bennett v. People, 30 Ill. 389; Sweet v. City of Wabash, 41 Ind. 7; Keokuk v. Dressell, 47 Iowa 597; State v. City of Leavenworth, 36 Kan. 314; State v. Pfeifer, 26 Minn. 175; Mundy v. New York Excise

Commissioners, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 117; In re Mundy, 59 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 359; Portland v. Schmidt, 13 Oreg. 17. Compare Sanders v. Town Commissioners, 30 Ga. 697; State v. Fleckenstein, 26 Minn. 177.

Incorporated towns have the exclusive privilege of granting license to sell spirituous liquors, and of prescribing the terms on which they may be sold within the corporate limits, and no person need have any other license than the town ordinances. If he bring himself within their provisions he is not liable to indictment under the state law. Bennett v. People, 30 Ill. 389.

A city may, in effect, authorize the sale of liquor, contrary to the prohibition of the constitution, by the action of its officers, so as to render it liable to proceedings against it to oust it from the exercise of such usurped powers, although not doing so expressly by granting written or printed licenses. State v. City of Leavenworth, 36 Kan. 314.

The power to license, tax, regulate, and restrain bar rooms and drinking shops, carries with it, without any express provision, authority to provide by ordinance the terms and conditions upon which such license should be issued, the amount of tax to be imposed, and the mode of collecting it, and to establish reasonable rules to be observed in conducting the business, and implies the power to inhibit the carrying on of that kind of business without obtaining such license. Portland v. Schmidt, 13 Oreg. 17.

How construed.—Where the legislature has declared that incorporated towns shall have the exclusive privilege to grant license within the incorporated limits of the town, the county authorities have no right or power to interfere in any manner whatever, with the granting of licenses. The refusal of a town to grant any licenses does not confer power upon the county authorities to issue them. Coulterville v. Gillen, 72 Ill. 599.

The power of municipal corporations under the Iowa law 1868, ch. 154, sec. 2, "to regulate or prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors not prohibited by State law," and "to impose a tax on such sale," imports a power to license their sale. Keokuk v. Dressell, 47 Iowa 597.

uors.¹ But under such powers a city or village is not authorized by ordinance to make it an offence for any person within the city to have in his possession any intoxicating liquors.² And a legislative provision authorizing a town to prohibit tippling houses, or dram shops, does not authorize such town to forbid sales in any county, or for any purpose except for medical or mechanical purposes.³ Municipal corporations empowered to license and regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors may prohibit the sale of liquor on particular days or at particular places,⁴ and may prohibit the sale of such liquors in licensed houses after ten o'clock in the evening.⁵ And it has been said that the power granted

1. See Dennehy v. Chicago, 120 Ill. 627; Lutz v. Crawfordsville, 109 Ind. 466; State ex rel. Rossell v. Garen, (N. J.), 13 Atl. Rep. 26. Compare Walter v. Columbia City, 61 Ind. 24.

The power to license places for the sale of liquors, granted to a city, where such places are unrestrained by general law, justifies an ordinance prohibiting the sale of liquors of unlicensed places. State ex rel. Rossell v. Garen (N. J.), 13 Atl. Rep. 26.

The Illinois general incorporation law for cities, etc., and the Dram Shops act, authorize a city to impose a license upon wholesale liquor dealers. Dennehy v. Chicago, 120 Ill. 627.

The Indiana statute providing that an incorporated city shall have power, within its corporate limits, and over a territory two miles beyond those limits, to regulate all shops or other places where intoxicating liquors are kept for sale for use on the premises, and to exact a license from persons keeping such shops (Rev. Stat., §§ 3106, 3154), empowers a city to exact such licenses from persons who have State or county licenses, as well as others, no constitutional provision prohibiting the legislature from fixing the jurisdiction of municipal corporations, and the grant of a license by one jurisdiction not authorizing the person to whom it is granted to violate the law of another jurisdiction. Lutz v. Crawfordsville, 109 Ind. 466; s. c., 8 Ind. 33.

2. Sullivan v. City of Oneida, 61 Ill. 242.

But a city may constitutionally be authorized by the legislature to enact, and may enact an ordinance that no intoxicating liquors shall be used or kept in any refreshment saloon, or restaurant within the city for any purpose whatever. State v. Clark, 28 N. H. (8 Fost.) 176.

3. Strauss v. Pontiac, 40 Ill. 301. See State ex rel. Rossell v. Garen (N. J.), 13 Atl. Rep. 26; McCrea v. Village of Washington, Fayette County (Ohio), 18 Week. L. Bull. 66.

Thus it has been said that the New Jersey act authorizing the borough of Pemberton to license lager beer saloons, does not carry with it the right to prohibit the sale of beer by the quart. State ex rel. Rossell v. Garen (N. J.), 13 Atl. Rep. 26.

A prohibitory ordinance passed by the common council of a municipal corporation in Ohio, under the Dow law, against the traffic of intoxicating liquors within such corporation, is within the power of such corporation so far as the retail traffic in liquor is concerned. But a municipality has no power, under the Dow law or any other law of Ohio, to pass an ordinance prohibiting the sale of liquor by the wholesale or compelling druggists to keep lists of persons to whom they furnish liquors on prescription. McCrea v. Village of Washington, Fayette County (Ohio), 18 Week. L. Bull. 66.

4. Piqua v. Zimmerlin, 35 Ohio St. 507; Portland v. Schmidt, 13 Oreg. 17.

Sunday Closing Ordinance.—It has been said that a statute conferring express power on municipal corporations to regulate beer shops, etc., authorizes such corporation by ordinance to prohibit keeping such places open on Sunday, without exempting from its operation cases of necessity and charity, or conscientious observance of the seventh day of the week. Piqua v. Zimmerlin, 35 Ohio St. 507. Such ordinance would not be necessarily void, if on prescribing that the lighting part of the beer shop on Sunday should be prima facie evidence of guilt. Piqua v. Zimmerlin, 35 Ohio St. 507.

5. Staates v. Washington, 44 N. J. L.

to the common council of a city to fix the rates of license for the privilege of transacting business is a branch of the taxing power which is not affected by the constitutional requirement that taxes shall be uniform, and that, therefore, the council in fixing such rates may discriminate and impose a larger license tax upon the business of retailing liquors than on any other.¹

b. LEGISLATIVE POWER TO ENACT LOCAL OPTION LAWS.—Municipal corporations and townships may be invested with authority to regulate or prohibit the retail of intoxicating drinks;² and the legislature may authorize such townships and municipal corporations to determine by vote of the inhabitants, or in the case of a city, by the vote of the city council, whether the sale of a particular kind or kinds of liquor within its limits shall be (15 Vr.) 605; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 402.

"Ten o'clock Ordinances."—The court say: "This conclusion is not without express authority. In 1 Dill. Mun. Corp., § 400 (333) the author says: Under a general power to pass" any other by-laws for the well being of the city, "its council may, by ordinance, prohibit saloons, restaurants and other places of public entertainment to be kept open after ten o'clock at night. The objections that such a by-law was unreasonable, and deprived the citizens of the constitutional right of acquiring property, were considered not to be well taken. It regulates but does not deprive the party of his rights." He cites the following authorities, and an examination sustains the statements in the section quoted: State v. Welch, 36 Conn. 215; Morris v. Rome, 10 Ga. 532; State v. Freeman, 38 N. H. 426; State v. Clark, 28 N. H. (8 Post.) 176; Hudson v. Geary, 4 R. I. 485; Platteville v. Bell, 43 Wis. 488.

A contrary doctrine, however, was held in the case of Ward v. Greeneville, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 228; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 700, where it is maintained that a town ordinance prohibiting licensed retailers of spirituous liquors from selling such liquors from six o'clock in the afternoon and six o'clock in the morning, is unreasonable and invalid.

1. Ex parte Hurl, 49 Cal. 557.

2. See Boyd v. Bryant, 35 Ark. 69; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 6; State v. Wilcox, 42 Conn. 364; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 536; Caldwell v. Barrett, 73 Ga. 604; Gunarssohn v. Sterling, 92 Ill. 569; Schwuchow v. Chicago, 68 Ill. 444; Erlinger v. Boneau, 51 Ill. 94; Com. v. Weller, 14 Bush (Ky.) 218; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 407; Anderson v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 485; Marshall v. Donovan, 10

Bush (Ky.) 681; Stickrod v. Com., 86 Ky. 286; s. c., 9 Ky. L. Rep. 563; State v. Strauss, 49 Md. 288; Fell v. State, 42 Md. 71; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 83; Com. v. Blackington, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 352; Com. v. Dean, 110 Mass. 357; Com. v. Bennett, 108 Mass. 27; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 304; Com. v. Martin, 108 Mass. 29; s. c., State v. Cooke, 24 Minn. 247; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 344; State v. Noyes, 30 N. H. 279; State ex rel. Sanford v. Court of Common Pleas, 36 N. J. L. (7 Vr.) 72; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 422; Metro-politan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; Cincinnati W. & Z. R. Co. v. Com'rs of Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 491; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 716; overruling Parker v. Com., 6 Pa. St. 507; State v. Parker, 26 Vt. 357; Bancroft v. Dumas, 21 Vt. 456; Bull v. Read, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 78; Slingef v. Henneman, 38 Wis. 504; Smith v. Janesville, 26 Wis. 291; State v. O'Neill, 24 Wis. 149; Thurlow v. Massachusetts, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 504; bk. 12, L. ed. 256. Compare Ex parte Wall, 48 Cal. 279; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 425; 10 Alb. L. J. 284; Rice v. Foster, 4 Harr. (Del.) 479; Mesmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 482; Maize v. State, 4 Ind. 342; State v. Weir, 33 Iowa 134; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 115; State v. Baum, 33 La. An. 981; Lammert v. Lidwell, 62 Mo. 188; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 411; Parker v. Com., 6 Pa. St. 507; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 480; overruled by Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 491; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 716; State v. Swisher, 17 Tex. 441.

Precluding Fulfilment of Existing Contracts—Effect of.—The fact that such laws may tend to prevent or may absolutely preclude the fulfilment of contracts previously made has been said to be no objection to their validity (see People v. Hawley, 3 Mich. 330; Rey- nolds v. Geary, 26 Conn. 179), because contracts cannot hamper or impede the police power of the State (Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 25; bk. 24, L. ed. 989), and such laws are simply a police regulation established by the legislature for the prevention of intemperance, pauperism and crime, and for the abatement of nuisances. Oviatt v. Pond, 29 Conn. 479; Reynolds v. Geary, 26 Conn. 179; State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; Jones v. People, 14 Ill. 106; State v. Donehey, 8 Iowa 396; Our House v. State, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 172; Zumhoff v. State, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 526; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 202; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487; Com. v. Clapp, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 97; Com. v. Kendall, 66 Mass. (12 Cush.) 414; People v. Gallagher, 4 Mich. 244; People v. Hawley, 3 Mich. 330; Gill v. Parker, 31 Vt. 610; State v. Prescott, 27 Vt. 194; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328. Compare Meshmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 484; Beebe v. State, 6 Ind. 501; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 391; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378.

prohibited or permitted;¹ for this subject, while not embraced within the ordinary power to make by-laws and ordinances, falls within the class of police regulations which may be entrusted by the legislature by express enactment to municipal authority.²

c. CONSTITUTIONALITY OF LOCAL OPTION LAWS.—A law regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors which provides for a submission to the vote of the people to determine whether the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be licensed or not in a particular place at a given time is constitutional where such law is complete in itself, being a perfect act requiring nothing further to give it validity;³ but where a statute is not a perfect law and depends upon some act of the people, or some other body, before it becomes a law, it is invalid.⁴

An act authorizing county courts,⁵ municipal villages,⁶ or police juries of parishes,⁷ to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors on particular days and at particular places is constitutional and valid. But it has been said that under a provision in the constitution providing for the enactment of a local option law, the legislature is without power to prohibit the gift as well as the sale of intoxicating liquors.⁸

1. Stickrod v. Com., 86 Ky. 285; s. c., 9 Ky. L. Rep. 563; Anderson v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 485; Com. v. Bennett, 108 Mass. 27; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 304. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

Local Option.—Delegation of Legislative Power.—Supreme court of California say, in the case of Ex parte Wall, 48 Cal. 279; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 425, that "the power to make law conferred by the constitution on the legislature cannot be delegated by the legislature to the people of the State, or to any portion of the people."

2. Com. v. Bennett, 108 Mass. 27; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 304; Com. v. Turner, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 493, 495; State v. Simonds, 3 Mo. 414; State v. Noyes, 30 N. H. 279; Tanner v. Trustees of Albion, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 121; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 337; Bancroft v. Dumas, 21 Vt. 456.

3. State v. King, 37 Iowa 462; Slymer v. State, 62 Md. 240; Fell v. State, 42 Md. 88; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 83; Hammond v. Haines, 25 Md. 541; s. c., 90 Am. Dec. 77; Com. v. Fredericks, 119 Mass. 199; Com. v. Dean, 110 Mass. 357; People v. Collins, 3 Mich. 343; Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 491; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 716; Steele v. State, 19 Tex. App. 425; Ex parte Lynn, 19 Tex. App. 293. See also authorities in (1) under last title.

4. Bancroft v. Dumas, 21 Vt. 456. See Hammond v. Haines, 25 Md. 541; s. c., 90 Am. Dec. 77; Com. v. Kimball, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 359; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 337.

5. Trammell v. Bradley, 37 Ark. 374.

6. Bronson v. Oberlin, 41 Ohio St. 476; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 90.

7. State v. Bott, 31 La. An. 663; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 224.

8. Holley v. State, 14 Tex. App. 505.

(1) Grounds of Holding Local Option Laws Valid or Invalid.—Local option laws have been held to be invalid (1) where their title was defective in not complying with a statutory requirement that no law shall relate to more than one subject, which shall be expressed in the title.¹ (2) Because it is a delegation of the legislative power to the people, and for that reason is in conflict with the constitutional provisions which vest all legislative powers in the legislature.² (3) Where it is left to a vote of the people to determine whether the act shall become a law.³

See Steele v. State, 19 Tex. App. 425.

1. Ex parte Burnside v. Lincoln Co. Ct., 86 Ky. 423.

2. State v. Baum, 33 La. An. 981 (overruling State v. Bott, 31 La. An. 663; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 224; Lessman v. Territory, 3 Wash. Tr. 452; Thornton v. Territory, 3 Wash. Tr. 482. See Com. v. Kimball, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 359; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 337 and note.

As to what acts are not invalid as a delegation of the legislative power to the people, or some body of the people, see State v. Wilcox, 42 Conn. 364; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 536; Groesch v. State, 42 Ind. 547; Fell v. State, 42 Md. 71; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 83; Savage v. Com. (Va.); 5 S. E. Rep. 563.

Same—Washington Territorial Act.—In Thornton v. Territory, 3 Wash. Tr. 482, it was held that the local option act giving to precincts of Washington Territory the power to repeal the existing law, and prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors by a petition and vote of the majority of the voters of any precinct, is invalid as a delegation of the legislative authority, precincts not being municipal corporations capable of receiving such grant, or of exercising the power granted. To the same effect see Lessman v. Territory, 3 Wash. Tr. 452.

Same Louisiana Police Juries Act.—The supreme court of Louisiana held in the case of State v. Baum, 33 La. An. 981 overruling State v. Bott, 31 La. An. 663; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 224, that the Louisiana acts of 1878, No. 84, authorizes police juries to prohibit the sale of liquors on Sunday, in the various parishes of the State invalid, because delegating to the police juries the authority of the general assembly to legislate, and that of the State to prosecute.

3. See Ex parte Wall, 48 Cal. 279; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 425; State v. Weir, 33 Iowa 134; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 115; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 487; Prohibitory Amendment Cases, 24 Kan. 700.

A statute empowering townships to decide by a popular vote whether or not the sale of spirituous liquors should be allowed within their precincts, such vote to be taken at a special election to be called on petition, by the board of supervisors of the county, was held unconstitutional in Ex parte Wall, 48 Cal. 279; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 425.

It was said by the supreme court of Iowa, in the case of State v. Weir, 33 Iowa 134; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 115, that the legislature have no power to make the operation or repeal of a law depend upon the vote of the people, and therefore an act prohibiting the sale of ale, wine, etc., the operation of which is made to depend upon the vote of the people in each county, was unconstitutional.

Calling Aid of People to Legislature.—But it is thought that the better doctrine is that an act of the legislature, which calls to its aid the people of a particular district, as a means of ascertaining the utility of a measure without delegating to the people the power to make the law, is valid and constitutional. See State ex rel. Sanford v. Court of Common Pleas of Morris, 36 N. J. L. (7 Vr.) 72; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 422; Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 491; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 716.

Thus it is said in State ex rel. Sanford v. Court of Common Pleas of Morris, 36 N. J. L. (7 Vr.) 72; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 422, that what is known as the Chatham local option law, declaring the retailing of ardent spirituous liquors to be unlawful, and providing that no license shall be granted if the township vote that a majority is for "no license" is constitutional. And it is said by the supreme court of Pennsylvania, in Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 491; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 716, overruling Parker v. Com., 6 Pa. St. 507; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 480, that an act was unconstitutional which authorized voters to vote "for license" or "against license."

Local option laws are within the police power and constitutional,¹ and are not open to the objection that they take private property for public use without compensation, and without due course of law;² or that they are a regulation of commerce,³ the tickets to be counted and returned certified to the quarter sessions; the voting to be conducted as in other relations; that the returns show a majority "against license" which should "not be lawful for any license to issue for the sale of intoxicating liquors."

1. See Minnehaha County v. Champion (Dak.), 37 N. W. Rep. 766; Territory v. O'Connor (Dak.) 37 N. W. Rep. 765; Burnside v. Lincoln Co. Ct., 86 Ky. 423; Falmouth v. Watson, 5 Bush (Ky.) 660; Com. v. Ducey, 126 Mass. 269; Lemon v. Peyton, 64 Miss. 161; Schulherz v. Bordeaux, 64 Miss. 59; Ex parte Kennedy, 23 Tex. App. 77.

Validity of Local Option Laws—Kentucky Doctrine.—The supreme court of Kentucky held, in the case of Falmouth v. Watson, 5 Bush (Ky.) 660, that authority conferred on the trustees of a town by act of the legislature to exact payment of not more than $300 from any person selling spirituous liquors by retail within one mile of the town is a police regulation and is not unconstitutional. The same court held, in the recent case of Burnside v. Lincoln Co. Ct., 86 Ky. 423, that an act prohibiting the sale of liquor in a designated county, is not interdicted by the bill of rights of Kentucky, or the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States, because the sale of liquor never has been a right but a privilege merely the creature of license, and the legislature of the State may, under its police power, not only regulate but restrict or entirely prohibit the retail liquor traffic.

Same—Massachusetts Doctrine.—The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts say, in the case of Com. v. Ducey, 126 Mass. 269, that a statute conferring upon the mayor and aldermen of a city, or the select men of the town, or any police officer, or constable "specially authorized by them," power to enter upon the premises of any person licensed to sell under this act, to ascertain the manner in which such person conducts his business, and to preserve order is a reasonable exercise of the police power of the commonwealth, and is constitutional.

2. Menken v. City of Atlanta, 78

Ga. 668; s. c., 36 Alb. L. J. 6; McKinney v. Salem, 77 Ind. 213; Ex parte Kennedy, 23 Tex. App. 77; Steele v. State, 19 Tex. App. 425; Ex parte Lynn, 19 Tex. App. 293; Ex parte Kinnebrew, 35 Fed. Rep. 552.

Taking Private Property.—The Texas court of appeals say, in the late case of Ex parte Kennedy, 23 Tex. App. 77, that the local option law being within the scope of the police power of the State, does not "take, damage, or destroy" private property for public use within the meaning of section 1 of the Texas bill of rights.

Destruction of Breweries—Damnum Absque Injuria.—It is said in the case of Menken v. City of Atlanta, 78 Ga. 668; s. c., 36 Alb. L. J. 6, that the local option legislation of Georgia is constitutional as a valid exercise of the police power, and that the effect of such law upon the value of the property, such as a brewery and its fixtures resulting from the inability of the owners to adjust their old business to the new law is damnum absque injuria; that the law does not take or damage such property for the use of the public, but only prevents the owners from taking or damaging the public for their use.

Licenses Already Granted—Property Rights.—The supreme court of Indiana say, in the case of McKinney v. Salem, 77 Ind. 213, that the Indiana act giving towns the right to license the sale of intoxicating liquors, is not unconstitutional as violating the rights of sellers already licensed by county officers, because a liquor license is at all times subject to the control of the legislature.

3. Prohibiting Sale of Intoxicating Liquors—Regulation of Commerce.—The United States circuit court for the northern district of Georgia, in passing upon the Georgia local option act of September 18th, 1885, which, after prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, provides "that nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent the manufacture, sale and use of domestic wine, cider, etc.," held, that in excepting domestic wines from the prohibition must be taken as excepting other wines and that so construed it is not in violation of the federal constitution, art. 1, § or that they are local or special laws,¹ and unjustly discriminating.²

d. ADOPTION OF LOCAL OPTION; ELECTIONS, ETC.—Where a statute provides for the adoption or rejection of local option by a vote of the people of the particular district or county, held at a general election, the general election referred to is one which is general throughout the State.³ But the officer charged with the duty of calling an election, under a local option law, cannot order such an election for the purpose of determining whether or not the gift or exchange of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited. Their authority is limited to ordering an election to determine the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors.⁴

Where the legislature provides for an election to determine the question of prohibiting the sale of liquors in a certain county, and no provision is made in the law for judicial interference, and there is no statute authorizing such interference, and no authority exists at common law, neither a court of law nor of equity has power or jurisdiction over the matter. The matters arising out of such elections must be determined alone by the tribunal constituted by the legislature for that purpose. The courts are powerless to interfere, unless the legislature shall see proper to confer such power upon them.⁵

A local option law, being for a particular locality, depends for its validity upon its adoption in conformity with prescribed regulations, and unless so adopted is void, and although promulgated

8, giving to congress the power to regulate interstate commerce." Ex parte Kinnebrew, 35 Fed. Rep. 52.

1. See Tatum v. State, 79 Ga. 176; Higgins v. State, 64 Md. 419; Ex parte Swann, 96 Mo. 44; State ex rel. Maggard v. Pond, 93 Mo. 606; Whisenhunt v. State, 18 Tex. App. 491.

"Local and Special Laws."—The Missouri local option law of 1887, which provides that any county or town, or city having a population of 2,500 or more, may by majority vote, put such county, town or city under its operation applies to all the counties in a State and to all incorporated cities or towns having a population of 2,500 or more inhabitants as a class and does not violate § 53 of art. 4 of the Missouri constitution, which provides "that no local or special law shall be passed when a general law can be made applicable." State v. Pond, 93 Mo. 606. The same court say in the later case of Ex parte Swann, 96 Mo. 44, that this statute does not contravene § 1 of art. 14 of the federal constitution prohibiting a State from denying to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law, the statute being applicable alike to all persons within the locality in which it is adopted, although for violation of the dramshop law which remains in force in other localities, whatever penalties are imposed.

2. In re Hauck, (Mich.); 38 N. W. Rep. 269; Ex parte Swann, 96 Mo. 44; State v. Pond, 93 Mo. 606.

3. Mackin v. State. 62 Md. 244.

Yet it has been said that under the Texas local option law the qualified voters of a precinct may assert their right to adopt or reject local option, independent of the wishes of the people of the county, and that voters of the whole county may do the same without reference to the wishes of the people of a particular precinct. Whisenhunt v. State, 18 Tex. App. 491.

4. And this limitation will not be affected by the fact that it is provided that when the election has resulted in favor of prohibition, the effect is that the sale, exchange and gift within a particular locality is prohibited and made penal. Steele v. State, 19 Tex. App. 425.

5. Caldwell v. Barrett, 73 Ga. 604.

by proper authority, is neither binding upon nor notice to anyone.¹

To be valid and binding the election must be regularly and properly ordered.²

Under a statute providing that liquorselling may be prohibited upon the petition of a majority of the adult inhabitants residing within a particular district, without such a petition there is no power to take action under the local option act, and an order made for an election thereunder without a sufficient petition is a nullity.³

In such petition it is only necessary that the requisite number of qualified persons shall, in writing, indicate to the proper officers their desire that an election be held in a particular locality for the purpose of determining whether or not the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited in that locality; it is not essen-

1. Donaldson v. State, 15 Tex. App. 25. See Hammond v. Haines, 25 Md. 541; s. c., 90 Am. Dec. 77, 83; Phillips v. State, 23 Tex. App. 304.

2. Com. v. King, 86 Ky. 436; Dawson v. State, 25 Tex. App. 670; Ex parte Sublett, 23 Tex. App. 309, 312.

Elections—Under the Texas Local Option Law.—An election held pursuant to an order issued at a term of commissioners' court, subsequent to the first term held after the petition thereafter is void. Ex parte Sublett, 23 Tex. App. 312.

In Com. v. King, 86 Ky. 436, it is said that where the local option law provides that upon petition of twenty legal voters in any district, town or city, the county judge shall make an order directing the sheriff or other officer, whose duty it may be to hold an election, to open a poll at the next State, town, city or county election for the purpose of taking the sense of the voters, whether or not liquor shall be sold, and that an election under this provision to take the sense of the city, held by the sheriff or coroner, at a State election is unauthorized and void, the act intending that in a city or town the vote was to be taken at a city or town election under the control of those directly interested in the municipal elections.

Second Election.—Under a statute providing that a second election under the local option law shall not be held in less than two years after the first election, which is an amendment to a prior statute permitting an election to be held one year thereafter, applies only to those localities thereafter adopting the law, and does not nullify a county election repealing the law held a year after this adoption which occurred before the passage of the latter act. Dawson v. State, 25 Tex. App. 670.

3. Akin v. State, 14 Tex. App. 142. See Tally v. Grider, 66 Ala. 119; Williams v. Citizens, etc., 40 Ark. 290.

Who May Sign.—In Arkansas it has been held that adult females, as well as adult males, may join in a petition for an order prohibiting the sale or giving away of liquor under a statute providing that liquor selling may be prohibited, upon the petition of a majority of the adult inhabitants of a particular district, and the finding of the county court in regard to this matter cannot be impeached upon a trial for a violation of the act. Blackwell v. State, 36 Ark. 178.

Contents of Petition.—A petition under the Alabama local option law authorizing probate judges to order elections to determine whether the sale of spirituous liquors shall be licensed, which fails to aver that "in the interest of the petitioner, the public good will be promoted by a prohibition of the sale or giving away of vinous or spirituous liquors within the limits" designated, is defective and confers no jurisdiction on the probate judge to order an election. Tally v. Grider, 66 Ala. 119.

Territory to be Included.—Under an act providing that liquor selling may be prohibited upon the petition of a majority of the adult inhabitants residing within three miles of any school-house, church, etc., two points as centers cannot be designated in the same petition, tial that the petition should refer to or designate the statute under which the election should be ordered.¹ No notice is required to be given of the filing of such petition.²

Where a remonstrance or counter petition to a petition for the prohibition of the sale of liquor under the local option law is not provided for by the statute, such remonstrance or counter petition cannot be admitted as evidence to apprise the court that the petition does not contain a majority of the inhabitants.³

The order for an election under the local option law should be made in accordance with the provisions of such law, but such order will not be invalid because it specifies voters qualified to vote for members of the legislature, where such voters are qualified for any election under the constitution.⁴ The requirements of the local option law regarding the posting of notices of election under such an order must be strictly complied with or the election will not be valid.⁵ In the absence of proof to the contrary it will be presumed that the notices were posted in the manner required by law; but such presumption may be overcome by proof.⁶

The statute providing for the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors in any town or city by vote of its inhabitants does not require that they shall take the vote by ballot or shall previously determine by a formal vote the manner of taking it;⁷ and where the voters are not asked the precise question prescribed by the act under which the vote is being taken, this will not invalidate the vote.⁸ The number of votes required by the statute must in each instance be cast to render the election valid.⁹ the signers secured from within three miles of either. Williams v. Citizens, etc., 40 Ark. 290.

Supervisors Canvassing for Signers—Disqualification.—The supreme court of Mississippi say, in Lemon v. Peyton, 64 Miss. 161, that a member of the board of supervisors, who canvasses for or signs a petition for an election under the local option law, is not thereby disqualified from acting on such petition in his official capacity, in pursuance of the terms of the law; that the interest which qualifies a judge is pecuniary, not political.

1. Steele v. State, 19 Tex. App. 425.

Referring to Statute—Incorrect Description.—Where a petition for an election under the local option law, unnecessarily refers to such law and incorrectly describes it, the erroneous reference to the statute is mere surplusage, and does not invalidate the petition. Steele v. State, 19 Tex. App. 425.

2. Blackwell v. State, 36 Ark. 178.

3. Williams v. Citizens, etc., 40 Ark. 290.

4. Lemon v. Peyton, 64 Miss. 161.

5. Ex parte Kennedy, 23 Tex. App. 77; Smith v. State, 9 Tex. App. 444.

6. James v. State, 21 Tex. App. 189. Posting—Placing in Hands of "Good Men."—The clerk does not "post" notices of a local option election by placing them "in the hands of good men to be posted." If he is shown to have done this, that fact rebuts the presumption that he did his duty. James v. State, 21 Tex. App. 189.

Same—Number of Notices.—An election under a local option law is not valid if the statutory requisites are not complied with as to a certain precinct, although the mere fact that two of the five notices posted in the county were posted in a single precinct, would not of itself invalidate the election. Ex parte Kennedy, 23 Tex. App. 77.

7. Com. v. Doe, 108 Mass. 418.

8. Gayle v. Owen County Court, 83 Ky. 62.

9. See Siloam Springs v. Thompson, 41 Ark. 456; Walker v. Oswald, 68 Md. 146; English v. State, 7 Tex. App. 171; Chalmers v. Funk, 76 Va. 717.

Number of Votes Required.—In the

Where the law makes no provision as to how the result of the election shall be proclaimed, a verbal proclamation by the clerk at the court house door that the local option law as carried is sufficient.¹

An order declaring the result of an election under the local option law is valid, although not in the words of the statute, if it contains all the essential requisites;² but an order of the county court forbidding the sale of liquor "within three miles of a church house and schools" in a town, is void for designating more than one point as the centre of the district.³

It is essential to the validity of an election under a local option law that it appear from the face of the records that the forms of absence of any special provision it would seem that the vote of a majority of the voters of the county or district voting at such election will be sufficient. Siloam Springs v. Thompson, 41 Ark. 456; Walker v. Oswald, 68 Md. 146; Chalmers v. Funk, 76 Va. 717.

Where There Is No Vote.—Under a statute providing that if a majority of the votes cast in any county be not for license, the county court cannot grant a license. Where no vote is taken no license can be granted. Siloam Springs v. Thompson, 41 Ark. 456.

1. Mackin v. State, 62 Md. 244.

Result of Election.—It is thought that when the vote under the local option law is in favor of selling, the fact need not be certified to the county court otherwise, where it is adverse. Com. v. Hoke, 14 Bush (Ky.) 668.

2. James v. State, 21 Tex. App. 353. See Lipari v. State, 19 Tex. App. 431.

Limitation.—Where the limitation of the prohibition under the election is fixed by law, it cannot be affected by the order of the court. Lipari v. State, 19 Tex. App. 431.

Form of Order.—If an election under the "local option" law results in favor of prohibition, it is sufficient for the order declaring the result to state that fact and to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors (except for certain purposes specified in the statute) within the limits of the locality. It was not essential to the sufficiency of the order that it should declare that the prohibition should continue until such time as the qualified voters of the locality, by a majority vote, at an election held therefor, should decide otherwise. Such limitation is fixed by law, and cannot be affected by the order of the court.

Language of the order, that the sale of intoxicating liquors "is absolutely prohibited, except for the purposes and under the regulations prescribed by law," is sufficiently specific and definite. Ex parte Burrage, 26 Tex. App. 35.

Clerical Error in Order.—An order of the commissioners' court declaring the adoption of local option, which, through manifest inadvertence or a clerical error, shows that less than a majority of the votes cast were for prohibition, when as a matter of fact it is apparent from other parts of the same order that there was a majority for prohibition, is not invalidated thereby. Ex parte Burrage, 26 Tex. App. 35.

An order of the commissioners' court in Texas, declaring the result of an election adopting the provisions of the local option law regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, was published in four successive issues of a newspaper, to wit, July 4th, 11th, 18th and 25th, 1885. On trial for violation of the law, the court charged that the publication of said order for four successive weeks was completed July 25th, 1885, and that the law took effect and became operative on that date. Held, error. Phillips v. State, 23 Tex. App. 304; s.c., 4 S. W. Rep. 893.

Same—Subsequent License to Sell.—Where an order has been made by the county court upon a petition of a majority of the adult residents of the township, prohibiting the selling of liquor within three miles of an academy in violation of Arkansas act of March 2, 1875, a subsequent license to sell liquor is no protection against a prosecution for selling within the prohibited limits, although a subsequent order revoking the prior order has been made by the county court, the latter order being without authority. Wilson v. State, 35 Ark. 414.

3. Gazola v. State, 45 Ark. 458.

the law were complied with in holding the election;¹ but where the records show that the officers were duly appointed before the election, the presumption obtains that they held it.²

c. VALIDITY OF ORDINANCES ADOPTING LOCAL OPTION.—A city ordinance passed for the purpose of regulating the traffic of intoxicating liquors adopting local option is valid.³ And an

1. Tally v. Grider, 66 Ala. 119; Carnes v. State, 23 Tex. App. 449; McMillan v. State, 18 Tex. App. 375; Stallworth v. State, 18 Tex. App. 378.

It devolves upon the State, in prosecuting violations of the local option law, to establish the fact that the order of the commissioners' court for the holding of the election was based upon a legal petition; and that proof must appear of record on appeal. Carnes v. State, 23 Tex. App. 449.

On an indictment charging the violation of the local option law the defendant objected that the election at which the law was adopted was not held in accordance with the provisions of Code North Carolina, § 3114, which makes it the duty of the board of county commissioners to order elections upon the petition of one-fourth of the qualified voters, etc. The evidence showed that the election in question was ordered by the board; that it was held, and the returns made and canvassed, and the result proclaimed according to law, but there was no proof that an election had been ordered upon petition as aforesaid. Held, that the result of the election as decided and proclaimed is conclusive upon any collateral proceeding. State v. Emery, 98 N. C. 768.

2. James v. State, 21 Tex. App. 353.

Appeal.—Upon appeal from a judgment of the county court, upon a petition under the three mile law, the circuit judge, in determining whether the petition contains a majority of the adult inhabitants, should attach great weight to the judgment of the county court and sustain it, unless quite clearly erroneous. Williams v. Citizens, 40 Ark. 290.

3. Franklin v. Westfall, 27 Kan. 614; Salena v. Seitz, 16 Kan. 143; Beasley v. Beckley, 28 W. Va. 81; Tanner v. Alliance, 29 Fed. Rep. 196. Compare Cantril v. Sainer, 59 Iowa 26; State v. Leavenworth, 36 Kan. 314.

In Salena v. Seitz, 16 Kan. 143, an ordinance of a city of the third class, providing for the issuance of licenses upon certain terms and conditions, to sell intoxicating liquors, and for punishing such persons as should sell without taking out, or having such licenses, was held valid.

Local Option—Village Ordinance—Injunction Against Enforcement.—In Tanner v. Alliance, 29 Fed. Rep. 196, by an ordinance of a village in Ohio, passed under the authority of the State legislature, the keeping of "ale, beer, and porter houses, and other places where intoxicating liquors are sold at retail," was prohibited within the village. The United States circuit court held that a citizen of the State engaged in the business of selling liquors, and who had paid the tax required by such act of the legislature, to be paid to carry on the business of the village, and had acquired and fitted property for that purpose, and had built up an extensive business, the good will of which was of large pecuniary value to him, was not therefore entitled to an injunction from a United States circuit court to restrain the village from enforcing the ordinance on the ground that it was a violation of the constitution to the State, and of the United States.

Defective Title—Discrepancy Between Title and Subject.—Where an ordinance is entitled "regulating the use and sale of intoxicating liquors," but the substance of the ordinance is found in the body of it, is entirely prohibitory with no pretence of regulation, it is invalid for want of compliance with the law requiring the subject of an ordinance to be clearly expressed in its title. Cantril v. Sainer, 59 Iowa 26.

Prospective and Retroactive Operation.—An ordinance passed after the issuance of a licence to a retailer of spirituous liquors, imposing a penalty for its violation by keeping his saloon open after ten o'clock P. M., is not an ex post facto or retroactive law, unless the act sought to be punished was committed antecedent to its passage. State v. Isabel, 40 La. An. 340. See Tanner v. Alliance, 29 Fed. Rep. 196.

In State v. Isabel, 40 La. An. 340, the court observes: "It is an established fact that the alleged violation of the ordinance occurred long after its adop-ordinance of a town declaring the selling of intoxicating liquors to be a nuisance, and imposing a fine for the offence is valid in those cases where the legislature conferred upon the town power to authorize the adoption of such an ordinance.¹

Towns have power to prohibit the sale of such intoxicating liquors only as are not prohibited by statute, and an ordinance which prohibits the sale of all kinds of intoxicating liquors will be void as to such liquors as are prohibited by statute;² but tion. We cannot understand in what respect it is an ex post facto law, when it is intended to punish crimes or offences committed antecedent to its enactment; and it is said to be retroactive when it is applied to past transactions. But neither view has any application here, because the act sought to be punished occurred subsequent to the adoption of the ordinance. We are referred to no provisions of law in force at the time the defendant procured his licenses, under the authority of which he was entitled to keep open his establishment until twelve o'clock at night, and the privilege of enjoying which the ordinance in question purports to abridge. And we are not aware of any. But if there was, it would not result therefrom that the ordinance in question was either an ex post facto or retroactive law."

Prohibiting Absolutely or for Certain Purposes.—It is said in Bronson v. Oberlin, 41 Ohio St. 476; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 90, that a village council acting under a statute (act of March 29th, 1882, 79 Ohio Laws, 59), authorizing incorporated villages having within their limits a college, university or the like, to provide against the evils resulting from selling intoxicating liquors therein, exceeds its power when it makes an ordinance prohibiting the sale of liquors to all persons for all purposes except medical or medicinal; and the sections of the ordinance so providing are void.

But it is said in Hill v. Mayor, 72 Ga. 314, that if the offence prohibited by a municipal ordinance prohibiting the sale of liquors in the corporate limits in any county either directly or selling any other commodity, or giving away liquor or any other device or disguises whatever, and imposing a penalty for such violation with the same punishments as those prohibited by section 5465 of the Georgia Code, the power having existed prior to the constitutions of 1868 and 1877, in the incorporate authorities to try parties for such offences, that for that reason the ordinance was valid.

1. Harbaugh v. City of Monmouth, 74 Ill. 369; Kettering v. City of Jacksonville, 50 Ill. 41; Dingman v. People, 51 Ill. 280; Block v. Town of Jacksonville, 36 Ill. 301; Roberts v. Ogle, 30 Ill. 461; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 201; City of Pekin v. Smelzel, 21 Ill. 469; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 105; Byers v. President etc. of Town of Olney, 16 Ill. 36; Goddard v. Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 773; City of Frankfort v. Aughe, 114 Ind. 77; Vonderweitz v. Centerville, 15 Ind. 447; Hollenbaugh v. State, 11 Ind. 556.

Declaring Sale to be a Nuisance.—A municipal ordinance declaring the sale of intoxicating liquors, beer, etc., to be a nuisance, forbidding such sale, and prescribing punishment therefor, is valid. Vonderweitz v. Centerville, 15 Ind. 447; Hollenbaugh v. State, 11 Ind. 556.

Imposing Fine.—An ordinance of a town declaring the sale of intoxicating liquors a nuisance, may impose a fine for such sale. City of Pekin v. Smelzel, 21 Ill. 469; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 105; Goddard v. President etc. of Town of Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 773.

2. Town of Eldora v. Burlingame, 62 Iowa 32; Cantril v. Sainer, 59 Iowa 26.

Ordinance Prohibiting Sale of Beer—Repugnancy to Statute.—A town ordinance prohibiting the sale of beer is not repugnant to the general laws of the State, beer of some kinds being an intoxicating drink. Pekin v. Smelzel, 21 Ill. 464. But a town ordinance prohibiting the sale of beer within three miles of the corporate limits, is void unless specially authorized by the legislature. Strauss v. Pontiac, 40 Ill. 301.

Same—Fixing Punishment.—A statute which prohibits towns or cities from making acts punishable by ordinance which are made public offences, and punishable by the State, does not apply will be enforced as to such liquors as the town council has power to regulate the sale of by ordinance.¹

Where, by statute or by charter, municipal corporations are authorized to prohibit the sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors, at particular times, such prohibition must be for a definite time,² and be reasonable.³ But it has been said that so much of an ordinance as in effect prohibits the sale of strong and spirituous liquors and wines by licenced inn keepers to lodgers and lawful travellers on Sunday is void.⁴

(1) Ordinances Relating to Licencing, Fees, etc.—An ordinance providing that a licence shall be granted only by applying to the

to an ordinance making it an offence to sell intoxicating liquors within the limits of a city without first obtaining a city license therefor. City of Frankfort v. Aughe, 114 Ind. 77.

Limit as to Quantity.—A city ordinance forbidding the sale of liquors of the amount of more than one quart to be drunk on the premises, where inconsistent with the State law, is unauthorized by the city charter and void. Adams v. Albany, 29 Ga. 56. An amendment to the city charter allowing the mayor to try offences, does not increase the power of the city to make laws creating offences. Adams v. Albany, 29 Ga. 56.

Same — Repugnancy to Statute.—Where the ordinance of a municipal corporation prohibiting the sale of pure Ohio wine, ale, beer, and cider to be drunk where sold, and prohibiting the sale of such liquors in less quantities than one gallon, was held in Thompson v. Mount Vernon, 11 Ohio St. 688, to be void, because inconsistent with and against the policy of the general statute of the State "to provide against the evils resulting from the sale of intoxicating liquors in the State of Ohio."

Same — Unreasonable Quantity.—Where the legislature, by enactments authorizing the council of a town to pass such ordinance as they may deem necessary for controlling the retail of spirituous liquors, and they passed an ordinance that no one should sell spirituous liquors in less quantities than twenty gallons, it was held that the act did not grant the power to pass such ordinance, twenty gallons being too great a quantity to embrace the word "retail." Harris v. Livingston, 28 Ala. 577.

However, it is said in the supreme court of Illinois, in the case of Byers v. President etc. of Town of Olney, 16 Ill. 36, that a town ordinance providing against the sale of vinous and spirituous liquors, etc., in a less quantity than one barrel without a licence, is not repugnant to the general law prohibiting the sale without licence in less quantity than one quart.

1. Town of Eldora v. Burlingame, 62 Iowa 32.

2. Definite Time.—Thus where a statute authorized the board of police commissioners of a particular town to order all drinking saloons to be closed temporarily, whenever in their judgment public peace required it, and making it a misdemeanor to disobey such order "during such period as such board shall so forbid," and the board issued an order that drinking saloons "be so temporarily closed until further notice," it was held that although the legislature had in no way exceeded its authority in conferring such power upon the board of police commissioners, yet such board being authorized by statute to close the drinking saloons only for a short and definite interval, that consequently the order to "close them" until "further notice" was void. State v. Strauss, 49 Md. 288.

3. Prohibition Must be Reasonable.—Thus it has been held that an ordinance of a municipal corporation forbidding licensed retailers of spirituous liquors to sell between the hours of six o'clock P.M. and six o'clock A.M., is unreasonable and invalid. Ward v. Greenville, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 228. Also that an ordinance forbidding the sale after six o'clock P.M. on the first three days of each term of the circuit court, on the days when the county court is held, when a public show takes place, or fairs are held near the town, is void as being unreasonable. Grills v. Jonesboro, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 247.

4. Wood v. Brooklyn, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 425.

city council, upon petition of the applicant, accompanied by a certificate as to his character, and that the applicant should be entitled to a license, if the city council find that he was qualified to carry on the business, is reasonable and valid;¹ but where it is required that the application shall be accompanied by a petition of the majority of the adult residents, it has been held to be void.²

(2) Property Rights; Due Process of Law, etc.—The right to pursue a lawful employment is not abridged within the meaning of the fourteenth amendment of the United States constitution by a municipal ordinance which merely regulates the sale of liquors and imposes a license thereon without prohibiting their sale absolutely;³ and it has been said that an ordinance prohibiting the sale of liquors in the incorporate limits of the city, and imposing a penalty for the violation thereof is not unconstitutional, because no provision is made for a jury trial on a prosecution for the violation of such ordinance.⁴

(3) Restraint of Trade; Regulation of Commerce.—Where a town is authorized by a statute or by its charter to regulate or suppress the sale of intoxicating liquors, an ordinance prohibiting such sale without a license is not in derogation of the common rights of the citizens, and is not open to the objection that it seeks to regulate commerce or is in restraint of trade.⁵

(4) Unlawful Search, etc.—A city ordinance prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, except by druggists for sacramental, chemical, mechanical or medicinal purposes, and requiring such druggists, under a heavy penalty, to furnish the city clerk a statement in writing of the kind and quantity thereof, and when and to whom sold, verified by the oath of every servant in the druggist's employ, has been held to be an invasion of the sanctity of private business, and contravenes the constitutional guaranty

1. Amador Co. v. Kennedy, 70 Cal. 458; In re Bickerstaff, 70 Cal. 35; Ex parte Hurl, 49 Cal. 557; Wolf v. City of Lansing, 53 Mich. 367.

License Fees.—Constitutional Law.—It is said in Ex parte Hurl, 49 Cal. 557, that a city ordinance requiring the payment of a license fee of $50 every ninety days, for the privilege of retailing spirituous liquors, does not violate any provision of the constitution, and that it cannot be assumed judicially that such an ordinance is a virtual prohibition of the sale of such liquors.

Discrimination.—Wayside Tavern or watering place.—An ordinance passed by the board of supervisors of a county, imposing license taxes upon the business of selling liquors at retail, is not invalid because it fixes a less rate of license for the business of retailing at a wayside tavern or watering place than for the same business carried on in a village, town or city. Amador Co. v. Kennedy, 70 Cal. 458.

2. Eureka v. Davis, 21 Kan. 578.

3. In re Bickerstaff, 70 Cal. 35; Tanner v. Alliance, 29 Fed. Rep. 196.

4. Hill v. Mayor, 72 Ga. 314.

5. Carthage v. Buckner, 4 Ill. App. 317; City Council v. Ahrens, 4 Strob. (S. C.) 241.

It is said by the supreme court of South Carolina, in City Council v. Ahrens, 4 Strob. (S. C.) 241, that a city ordinance prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license, is not in derogation of the common rights of the citizens, but is a restraint of the trade of a few for the benefit of the many; that such an ordinance is not unconstitutional, because the articles prohibited are articles of commerce, admitted by the revenue laws of the against unreasonable searches;¹ but it has been said that an order of the board of police commissioners, by which the police officers of a city are authorized to enter at any time upon the premises of any person licensed to sell intoxicating liquors under the statute, to ascertain the manner in which such person conducts his business, and to preserve order, is legal and valid.²

f. REPEAL OR REVOCATION.—Where a license has been granted by public authorities in accordance with the provisions of a statute or ordinance, such licence is in no sense a contract by the State, county or city with the person taking out the license; it is simply a permit granted to do business under the license, and the license may be repealed or revoked at any time.³ Where, in accordance with the constitution and the statutory provisions on the subject, a local option law has been adopted and put in force, it operates as a repeal, within the locality in question, of all laws and parts of laws in conflict with it. And unless otherwise provided will exempt from punishment all previous offenders against the repealed laws.⁴ But where authority

United States, and because after the article is admitted into the country it becomes the property of a citizen of the state which has power to regulate or prohibit its sale.

1. City of Clinton v. Phillips, 58 Ill. 102; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 52.

2. Com. v. Carter, 132 Mass. 12; Com. v. Ducey, 126 Mass. 269.

Supervision of licensed articles.—It is held by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in the case of Com. v. Carter, 132 Mass. 12, that "private property is held subject to the exercise of such public rights, for the common benefit; and in the case of licensed dealers in merchandise, the injury suffered by inspection is accompanied by advantages which must be regarded as sufficient compensation. Bancroft v. Cambridge, 126 Mass. 438, 441. Instead of requiring all milk offered for sale to be first inspected, the legislature for obvious reasons has permitted licensed dealers to sell milk without inspection, has imposed penalties for selling adulterated milk, and has provided that when the inspector of milk has reason to believe that any milk has been adulterated he may take specimens thereof in order that by analysis or otherwise he may determine whether the milk has been adulterated. Such a seizure of milk for the purposes of examination is a reasonable method of inspection, and does not require a warrant. It is a supervision under the laws by a public officer of a trade which concerns the public health, and is within the police power of the commonwealth. Com. v. Ducey, 126 Mass. 269; Jones v. Root, 72 Mass. (6 Gray) 435. The same is true of all spirituous, vinous, fermented or malt liquors, where licensed.

3. Brown v. State (Ga.), 7 S. E. Rep. 915. See Huffsmith v. People, 8 Colo. 175; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 550; Seibold v. People, 86 Ill. 33; Bennett v. People, 30 Ill. 389; McKinney v. Town of Salem, 77 Ind. 213; State v. Neepser, 3 G. Greene (Iowa), 337; Com. v. Jarrell (Ky.), 5 S. W. Rep. 763; Com. v. Weller, 14 Bush (Ky.) 218; Fell v. State, 42 Md. 71, s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 83; Calder v. Kurby, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 597; Wheeler v. State, 64 Miss. 462; Hearn v. Brogan, 64 Miss. 334; State v. De Bar, 58 Mo. 395; State v. Clarke, 54 Mo. 17; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 471; Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Berrie, 34 N. Y. 657; Boone v. State, 12 Tex. App. 184; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 32; Cooley Const. Lim. 343, 474.

4. Boone v. State, 12 Tex. App. 184. See State v. Yewell, 63 Md. 120; Wheeler v. State, 64 Miss. 462; Rauch v. Com. 78 Pa. St. 490; Compare Com. v. Weller, 14 Bush (Ky.) 218.

Repeal by Implication—Mississippi Doctrine.—However, it is held that the Mississippi local option law, approved March 11th, 1886, does not repeal the former laws except so far as it is inconsistent with them; also that where the result of an election is against the

is conferred upon the city council to regulate selling and trafficking in intoxicating liquors, such power does not enable the city council to nullify or abrogate the general law of the State.¹

A municipal ordinance prohibiting the sale of "any spirituous, intoxicating, fermented or malt liquors within the city limits," does not provide for the same offence as a statute which prohibits the retailing of spirituous liquors without a license.² But a general statute on the subject of licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors and making their unlicensed sale punishable as a mis-sale of liquors, the former law is thereby suspended for the time being; but if the result is in favor of the sale, the former law remains in full force, modified as to the terms on which the license may be obtained. Wheeler v. State, 64 Miss. 462; Hearn v. Brogan, 64 Miss. 334.

Same—Kentucky Rule.—The Kentucky local option law of 1874 has been held not to repeal or modify the local act of 1871 to prohibit the sale, etc., in Bullitt county, nor to authorize a new vote therein on the question of license. Com. v. Weller, 14 Bush (Ky.) 218.

1. Angerhoffer v. State, 15 Tex. App. 613. See Ambrose v. State, 6 Ind. 351; State v. Nolan, 37 Minn. 16; State v. Langdon, 31 Minn. 316; Craddock v. State, 18 Tex. App. 567; Corbett v. Territory, 1 Wash. Tr. 431. Compare Huffsmith v. People, 8 Colo. 175; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 550; Com. v. Luck, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 296.

Conflict of Laws—Ordinance Does Not Repeal Statute.—An act giving municipal authorities the right to regulate liquor selling does not repeal a general law prohibiting sales without a license from county commissioners. Corbett v. Territory, 1 Wash. Tr. 431. Neither will it enable the municipality to shelter from penalties imposed by a general law for selling liquors at any hour on Sunday. Angerhoffer v. State, 15 Tex. App. 613. See Craddock v. State, 18 Tex. App. 567.

It is said in State v. Langdon, 31 Minn. 316, that the general law making the sale of intoxicating liquors by persons not licensed a criminal offence remained in force within the village of Worthington, notwithstanding provisions of a special act of incorporation; but by force of the special act, the sale of such liquors as a beverage was prohibited, and a penalty prescribed therefor. Upon an indictment under the general law, for selling without a license, it appeared that the sale for which the defendant was indicted was made as a beverage, and the court held that this fact did not render the general law inapplicable to the case. See Ambrose v. State, 6 Ind. 351.

It is said in State v. Nolan, 37 Minn. 16, that by the charter of the village of Windom, it was not intended to abrogate, as respects that locality, the general law of the State prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license, although the village council alone were authorized to grant licenses, and were authorized to restrain, regulate and control, "to the entire exclusion of any control or right to regulate or restrain any said matters, by any board, officer, person or municipality in the county."

Where a general statute prohibited keeping open tippling houses on Sunday, and subsequently a city charter gave the city "exclusive power to license, tax, restrain, prohibit and suppress tippling houses" in the city, and the city enacted an ordinance prohibiting the keeping open of any place for the sale of intoxicating liquors "between midnight and five o'clock A.M. of the day following," the defendant was convicted under the statute of keeping open a tippling house on Sunday in that city, but the court held this to be error, the general statute having been suspended as to that city. Huffsmith v. People, 8 Colo. 175; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 550. See Com. v. Luck, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 296.

2. Hill v. Mayor, 72 Ga. 314.

Where a statute takes from cities and towns the power to license the sale of ale, porter and beer, their illegal sale having been punishable under a prior statute, the penalty of which was not repealed by the act giving cities and towns power to license, their illegal sale may be punished under such prior statute. Com. v. Locke, 114 Mass. 288.

In Village of Gloversville v. Howell, 70 N. Y. 287, it is said that the special charter provisions as to granting license demeanor, operates to repeal the provisions of an existing municipal charter upon that subject;¹ but a grant of power conferred by the legislature in the charter of a municipal corporation to pass and enforce ordinances to suppress and punish the sale of adulterated drinks, is not regulated by a subsequent general statute providing for the prosecution of the same offence throughout the State.²

Where a local option law has been adopted in a certain district by vote, and thereafter by act of the general assembly, the district was divided and a new voting district was created out of the territory, this does not change the law in the old district as it was left,³ and the prohibition will continue in force in the new district.⁴ Where local option has been adopted by a vote of the county, it is within the power of the qualified voters of any subdivision of such county, such as a justice's precinct, town or city, to repeal the local option law within the limits of such subdivision, justice's precinct, town or city in the manner provided by and suing for penalties passed after the general excise law of 1857, and before that of 1874, are not abrogated by the law.

1. Plattville v. McKernan, 54 Wis. 487. See State v. Brady, 41 Conn. 588; Minnehaha County v. Champion, (Dak.) 37 N. W. Rep. 766; Franklin v. Westfall, 27 Kan. 614; State v. Sannerud, 38 Minn. 229; State v. Olson, 38 Minn. 150; State v. Peterson, 38 Minn. 143. Compare Town of Ottawa v. La Salle, 12 Ill. 339; State v. Neeper, 3 G. Greene (Iowa), 337.

Thus where the provisions of the statute relating to intoxicating liquors are applicable to cities, they supersede all provisions of the city charters inconsistent therewith, and no legislation by way of ordinance is necessary to give them effect. State v. Sannerud, 38 Minn. 229; State v. Olson, 38 Minn. 150; State v. Peterson, 38 Minn. 143.

Keeping Open Saloon at Night—Conflict of Ordinance and State Law.

Where a city by-law imposed a penalty for keeping open any shop for the sale of liquors after half-past ten o'clock at night, and a State law subsequently enacted provided for the licensing of persons to sell liquors, and forbade, under a penalty, the keeping open by any person licensed under the act, of any place for the sale of liquors between twelve o'clock at night and five o'clock in the morning, and repealed all laws inconsistent with the act; upon a prosecution for the violation of the city by-law, it was held that such by-law was superseded by the State law, only in its application to persons licensed under the law, and that it must be shown affirmatively in the defence that the party prosecuted was so licensed. State v. Brady, 41 Conn. 588.

Partial Repeal.—Where the ordinance of a city authorizing the granting of licenses to sell intoxicating liquors has been impliedly repealed by subsequent provisions of the constitution and statute, the remainder of the ordinance, which provides for punishing persons for selling intoxicating liquors in violation of law and in violation of the ordinance, and without having any license or permit therefor, not being repealed by implication or otherwise, is still in force, and illegal sales may be punished thereunder. Franklin v. Westfall, 27 Kan. 614. See Corporation of Aberdeen v. Saunderson, 16 Miss. (8 Smed. & M.) 663.

2. The court say, in State v. Labatut, 39 La. An. 516, that "under the jurisprudence firmly established in this State, a general law thus characterized does not repeal a particular law, unless they be so repugnant that they cannot stand together under any circumstances. State v. Natal, 39 La. An. 439; St. Martin v. New Orleans, 14 La. An. 113; Beridon v. Barbin, 13 La. An. 458; State v. Kitty, 12 La. An. 805; De Armas' Case, 10 Mart. (La.) 170."

3. Jones v. State, 67 Md. 256.

4. Jones v. State, 67 Md. 256; Higgins v. State, 64 Md. 419.

law, notwithstanding the fact that the latter was adopted and is enforced throughout the county.¹

If a county adopted and afterwards rescinded the local option law, the abrogation of its provisions in this manner is tantamount to a legislative repeal, and exempts offenders from punishment, whether their cases were pending in the courts of original jurisdiction, or in the court of appeals at the time the county rescinded its adoption of the law.² The removal of constitutional prohibition against licensing the sale of liquor does not authorize a town council to license drinking saloons under a municipal charter granted before the constitutional amendment.³

g. VIOLATION OF LOCAL OPTION LAWS AND ORDINANCES.—The sale of liquor in violation of local option law being an indictable offence,⁴ may be prosecuted, even after a

1. Woodlief v. State, 21 Tex. App. 412. See Higgins v. State, 64 Md. 419; Whisenhunt v. State, 18 Tex. App. 491.

Thus where the State constitution required the enactment of a law whereby the qualified voters of any "county, justices' precinct, town or city" might from time to time determine whether the sale of intoxicating liquors should be prohibited within the prescribed limits, and a subsequent statute provided that a local option law should remain in force until such time as the qualified voters might decide, otherwise a county adopted local option, and a year later a justice's precinct therein repealed it as to that precinct, and the court held that this might be done, a vote of the whole county not being necessary. Whisenhunt v. State, 18 Tex. App. 491.

But in the case of Com. v. King, 86 Ky. 436, where a district embracing a city and including many voters outside of the city boundary had voted in favor of local option in 1882, and in 1884 the city, without legislative authority, again voted upon the question and a majority voted against local option, the licenses were granted, and indictments found against the licensees. The court held that the action of a part of the city was erroneous because a district could not be severed, except by the will of the legislature, and the vote in part of the district on the same question was not a protection to the licensees.

2. Monroe v. State, 8 Tex. App. 343. See Dawson v. State, 25 Tex. App. 670; Woodlief v. State, 21 Tex. App. 412; Prather v. State, 14 Tex. App. 453; Freese v. State, 14 Tex. App. 31; Halfin v. State, 5 Tex. App. 212.

Effect of Abrogation of Local Option.

—After a county has rescinded its local option law pending prosecutions must be dismissed as well as pending appeals, former convictions for its violation while in force must be dismissed, and convictions of judgment reversed, because such abrogation nullifies the conviction. See Dawson v. State, 25 Tex. App. 270; Woodlief v. State, 21 Tex. App. 412; Prather v. State, 14 Tex. App. 453; Freese v. State, 14 Tex. App. 31; Halfin v. State, 5 Tex. App. 212.

Repeal of Penal Law—Effect of.—The repeal of a penal law, when the repealing statute substitutes no other penalty, exempts from punishment all persons who have offended against the provisions of such repealed law, unless it be declared otherwise in the repealing statute. Wherefore, in a county which adopted and has rescinded a local option law there is no legal authority for the punishment of persons who sold liquor in the county while it sustained the local option law. Halfin v. State, 5 Tex. App. 212.

3. Dewar v. People, 40 Mich. 401.

4. Garner v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 568; Com. v. Hoke, 14 Bush (Ky.) 668; State v. Emery, 98 N. Car. 768; s. c., 3 S. E. Rep. 810.

In conformity with an act of 1846, a vote was taken in Centre township, Marion county, relative to the granting of licenses to retail spirituous liquors in that township, and the voters determined, by a large majority, against the granting of such licenses. The county commissioners were duly notified of said vote. Held, that the retailing of spirituous liquors afterwards, in said vote has been taken revoking the former vote against the sale.¹

IV. LICENSE²—1. Definition.—A license is a permission granted by some competent authority to do an act which without such permission would be illegal.³ The object of a license township, without a license, was, under the act of 1843, on the subject, an indictable offence. Garner v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 568.

A conviction under an ordinance of a corporation empowered to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors by section 2, chapter 154 of the Iowa laws of 1868, of violating the ordinance by selling ale, beer and wine without license is not invalidated by the fact that the city had no power to license the sale of ale, such sale being prohibited by the State statute. Keokuk v. Dressell, 47 Iowa 597.

That the offender will be liable to prosecution under a statute for unlawfully selling, when the sale is consummated, will not hinder his being punished under the ordinance for keeping for unlawful sale. Menken v. City of Atlanta, 78 Ga. 668; s. c., 36 Alb. L. J. 6.

1. Com. v. Hoke, 14 Bush (Ky.) 668.

A conviction for violating the local option act cannot be sustained where there is no proof that the act has been put in operation in the county where it is charged that the offence was committed. Bryant v. State, 65 Miss. 435. Such law not being a general law must be shown to be applicable to him who invokes it in a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquors. Donaldson v. State, 15 Tex. App. 25.

2. Contract rights secured by license. See III. 2; effect upon subsequent legislation. See III. 4, e; III. 7, a; III. 8, a, (2); III. 9, a; III. 9, f, (5); power of municipalities to exact and grant licenses. III. 9, a.

3. See LICENSES.

What Constitutes a License.—A conviction and fine for retailing liquor without a license does not operate as a license to retail for a year. State v. McBride, 4 McC. (S. Car.) 332. And a certificate of the clerk of the county commissioners that a person has been licensed by them as an innholder is not per se a license. Com. v. Spring, 36 Mass. (19 Pick.) 396.

Permit to Druggists.—Where a village ordinance prohibits the sale or giving away of intoxicating liquors within the limits of the village, concluding with the provisos that druggists may sell such liquor for purely medical, medicinal and sacramental purposes, and fails to provide for the issue of any written permit, this will within the meaning of the statute be of itself a permit to all druggists in the village to sell such liquor for the purposes named. Moore v. People, 109 Ill. 499.

Order of Selectmen Closing Saloons.—An order of the selectmen of a town to an officer directing him to cause all saloons to be closed at a certain hour, and containing an intimation of an intent to prosecute offenders against the law in certain contingencies, is not a license to sell intoxicating liquors at times and under circumstances not mentioned in the order. Com. v. Matthews, 129 Mass. 485.

Tax by General Assembly of Business.—Where the general assembly of a State imposes a tax on the business in trafficking in intoxicating liquors as a means for providing against evils resulting therefrom, neither the tax so imposed nor a provision that the same shall attach as a lien on the property in which the business is conducted, constitutes a license within the meaning of a constitutional provision forbidding licensing. Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539.

The act of April 5th, 1882, entitled "An act more effectually to provide against the evils resulting from the traffic in intoxicating liquors" (79 Ohio Laws, 66), which requires every person engaged or engaging in such traffic to pay a specified sum of money annually and execute a bond as therein required, and also provides that "every person who shall engage or continue in such traffic, without having executed the bond . . . or after his bond shall have been adjudged forfeited . . . shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor," is in its operation and effect, as to the traffic not already prohibited, a license, within the inhibition of the section of the constitution which provides that "no license to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted in this State," and is, therefore, void. State v. Hipp, 38 Ohio St. 199.

is to confer a right which does not exist without a license.¹

2. Necessity of Obtaining License Generally.—In those cases where a statute requires a license and imposes a penalty, one who sells spirituous liquors while such statute is in force must see to it that he obtains a license from those clearly authorized to grant it;² but a license to a vendor of spirituous liquors from either a city or county authority exclusively authorized by the legislature to grant such license, is all that can be required.³

3. Number of Licenses; County and Town Licenses.—The grant of a license by one jurisdiction, such as a State or county, does not interfere with the power of another jurisdiction, such as an incorporated city or town, to exact a license, the exacting of a license being in the nature of a restraint upon the traffic;⁴ and where a liquor dealer procures a license under a municipal ordinance, this will not relieve him from his obligation to procure a similar one from the State or county.⁵

1. Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 406; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 654; Chilvers v. People, 11 Mich. 43, 49; Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576, 588.

JUDGE COOLEY says, in the case of Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 406; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 654, that "the popular understanding of the word 'license' undoubtedly is a permission to take something which without a license would not be allowed, and adds that this is a legal meaning also." See Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539, 558.

In State v. Frame, 39 Ohio St. 399, JUSTICE MCILVAINE says that a license is essentially the granting of a privilege to one or more persons, not enjoyed by citizens generally, or at least not enjoyed by a class of persons to which the licensee belongs. A common right is not a creature of a license. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539, 558.

2. Cronin v. Stoddard, 97 N. Y. 272. See Hunter v. State, 79 Ga. 365; Johnson v. State, 60 Ga. 634; Moore v. People, 109 Ill. 499; Haug v. Gillett, 14 Kan. 140; State v. Pittman, 10 Kan. 593; Overseers etc. v. Warner, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 150; State v. Cofield, 22 S. C. 301.

Where a statute declares that no license shall be granted outside of the cities and towns, and that it shall be unlawful for anyone to sell without such license, liquors may not be sold in cities and towns without a license.

But it was said in the case of State v. Pittman, 10 Kan. 593, that under the Kansas Dramshop act a person desiring to keep a dram shop, tavern or grocery in an incorporated town or city, was not required to procure a license therefor from a tribunal transacting county business.

Written Permit.—Where an ordinance providing for the sale of liquor makes no mention of a written permit being required, none is required. Moore v. People, 109 Ill. 499.

Inn Keeper.—One may keep an inn without a license, but he cannot sell spirituous liquors therein without such a license. Overseers etc. v. Warner, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 150.

3. Hetzer v. People, 4 Colo. 45.

4. Lutz v. City of Crawfordsville, 109 Ind. 466; Hedderich v. State, 101 Ind. 564; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 768; McKinney v. Town of Salem, 77 Ind. 213. See City of Huntington v. Cheesbro, 57 Ind. 74; City of Lawrenceburg v. Wuest, 16 Ind. 337; Smith v. City of Madison, 7 Ind. 86; State v. DeBar, 58 Mo. 395; State v. Clarke, 54 Mo. 17; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 471.

5. See Page v. State, 11 Ala. 849; State v. Estabrook, 6 Ala. 653; Furman v. Knapp, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 248; State v. Propst, 87 N. C. 560; Parsley v. Hutchins, 2 Jones (N. C.) L. 159; Com. v. Yetter, 3 Pa. County Court 179.

It is said in Page v. State, 11 Ala. 849, that to legalize the retailing of spirituous liquors it is necessary that a license should first be obtained for that purpose from the county court; a license to keep a tavern does not confer that right.

The provision in the charter of the city of Montgomery, Alabama, that retailers who procure a license from the city council shall be exonerated from paying anything to the county for the privilege, does not relieve them from obtaining a license from the county court. State v. Estabrook, 6 Ala. 653.

4. Effect Upon Right to Sale of Refusal of, or Inability to Obtain License.—We have seen above that all who wish to sell intoxicating liquors in a district in which laws regulating such sales are in force must, at their peril, procure the necessary license;¹ the fact that the commissioners refused to license any persons within their district does not justify any person in selling without a license.²

The New York supreme court say in the case of Furman v. Knapp, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 248, that according to the true construction of the New York act "lay a duty on spirituous liquors and to regulate inns and taverns," a retailer of spirituous liquors in New York must obtain a license from the mayor and also from the commissioner of excise.

It is said in Parsley v. Hutchins, 2 Jones (N. C.) L. 159, that permission granted by town commissioners to an individual to retail spirituous liquors, does not grant the full right to retail; but he must also get a license from the county court; and such court license will protect him, although it runs beyond the time embraced in the permission of the town commissioners.

In Pennsylvania, it has been said that a bottlers' license procured by paying the county treasurer the amount stipulated in the Pennsylvania act of 1875 does not authorize one to sell without a license from court of quarter sessions. Com. v. Yetter, 2 Pa. County Ct. 179. Compare Ex parte Schmitker, 6 Neb. 108.

1. Supra, IV, 2.

2. See State v. Tucker, 45 Ark. 55; Brock v. State, 65 Ga. 437; Reese v. City of Atlanta, 63 Ga. 344; Bolduc v. Randall, 107 Mass. 121; Com. v. Blackington, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 352; State v. Cron, 23 Minn. 140; Com. v. Jamison, 23 Mo. 330; State v. McNeary, 88 Mo. 143; Mayor etc. of N. Y. v. Mason, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 344; s. c., 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 152; Village of Rome v. Knox, 14 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 268; Palmer v. Doney, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 346; State v. Downer, 21 Wis. 274.

Illegal Sale—Defence—Inability to Procure License.—It is no defence to an indictment for selling liquor without a license that the sale was made where license are not granted under any circumstances. State v. Tucker, 45 Ark.

55. Neither is it any defence that the county court refused to grant a license; the conduct of the court in that particular cannot be enquired into. State v. Jamison, 23 Mo. 330.

Same—It is no defence to an indictment under the statute (Wisconsin Rev. Stat., ch. 35, § 5, as amended by law of 1862, ch. 147) charging that one selling intoxicating liquors without a license to aver that he had applied for a license, which had been refused on other than personal objections, town board having determined not to license any sale of liquors. State v. Downer, 21 Wis. 274.

It is said in the case of State v. Cron, 23 Minn. 140, that the liability of a person who sells intoxicating liquors to punishment under Minnesota Gen. Stat., ch. 16, § 4, is in no way affected by the fact that the town in which such sale was made has voted "in favor of license," under a statute providing therefor, nor by the fact that the board of county commissioners of the county in which the sale is made refused to grant a license to any person whomsoever to sell liquors in towns which have not voted against license.

Premature Sale.—Where a license for selling intoxicating liquors had been petitioned for by the seller, before the sale, though not granted till after the sale, the licensing commissioners not being appointed till then, the court held that this fact did not protect the sale. Bolduc v. Randall, 107 Mass. 121. See Com. v. Welch, 144 Mass. 356.

No One Authorized to Grant.—The fact that there is no officer or tribunal authorized to grant a license, cannot justify keeping a dram shop in violation of law. State v. McNeary, 88 Mo. 143.

Refusal of Commissioners.—If it had been the duty of the county commissioners under the statute to license one or more persons in each town to retail spirituous liquors, their refusal to license any person whatever does not annul the statute and authorize every person to retail spirits without a license. Com. v. Blackington, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 352. See State v. Downer, 21 Wis. 274.

the remedy is by mandamus.¹

5. Right to Sell Before Payment of Money or Giving of Bond or Issuing of License.—Although a person has been granted a license for the retail of spirituous liquors, and may have paid his money for such license, it is not proper for him to begin retailing before the license has actually been issued and delivered to him.² The au-

Illness of Officer.—Where a city ordinance requires a license to retail spirituous liquors, in a prosecution for retailing without a license it is no protection to show that defendant's license expired at a time when he could not renew it by reason of the illness of the city clerk; that when the clerk subsequently recovered, he took out a license covering the time in which the sale was made, and the money therefor was paid by him to the clerk, and by the clerk paid into the city treasury. If dealers continue to sell while they are unable to procure a license, they become liable to prosecutions. Reese v. City of Atlanta, 63 Ga. 344. See Com. v. Welch, 144 Mass. 356.

Inn Keepers' License—Neglect of Commissioners to Meet.—It has been said that after an inn keeper's license expires he is not liable for selling without a license by reason of the commissioners' neglect to meet. Palmer v. Doney, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 346. See Mayor etc. N. Y. v. Mason, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 344; s. c., 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 142.

1. Brock v. State, 65 Ga. 437; Kadgihn v. Bloomington, 58 Ill. 229; Com. v. Blackington, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 352.

What Constitutes the Offence.—A wrongful refusal to grant a license does not justify the applicant in selling without a license, he having a remedy by mandamus. Kadgihn v. Bloomington, 58 Ill. 229. Following Com. v. Blackington, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 352.

2. See State v. White, 23 Ark. 275; Reese v. City of Atlanta, 63 Ga. 344; Prather v. People, 85 Ill. 36; Dudley v. State, 91 Ind. 312; State v. Wilcox, 66 Ind. 557; Vannoy v. State, 64 Ind. 447; Houser v. State, 18 Ind. 106; Com. v. Welch, 144 Mass. 356; Bolduc v. Randall, 107 Mass. 121; State v. Bach, 36 Minn. 234.

Sale Before Issuance of License—Liability for.—One who has not taken out his license and has not paid the fee may be indicted in an unlawful sale, although the license has been granted and the bond has been given. Dudley v. State, 91 Ind. 312. And when a person has been granted a license by the county court to retail spirituous liquors, and has paid for it, he is not entitled to retail before the clerk has issued the license. State v. White, 23 Ark. 275.

It is well settled that where a license has not been issued until after the act complained of, it is no protection in a prosecution for selling liquors without a license. Com. v. Welch, 144 Mass. 356. See Reese v. City of Atlanta, 63 Ga. 344; Bolduc v. Randall, 107 Mass. 121.

Same—Vote of Aldermen Granting License.—It is said in Com. v. Welch, 144 Mass. 356, that where a person to whom the board of aldermen have voted to issue a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors, makes sales before the license fee has been paid, and before a bond has been filed as required by statute, such sales are illegal and at the trial of a complaint charging such person with the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors where the date upon the license is earlier than that upon which the sales are alleged to have been made, it is competent for the government to prove that the license fee was not paid; but that the bond was not given, and that the license was not issued until after the date of the alleged sale.

Sale Before Paying License Fees.—In a prosecution for the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license, where it appeared that the defendant's license had been granted by the authorities, but that without any intention of violating the law he had made the sale before paying his license fee, and taking out the license, although he had taken these steps before the prosecution was instituted, it was held that the sale was illegal and that he might have been prosecuted for it at the time, and that he was not liable to a subsequent prosecution therefor after he had paid his license fee and had taken out his license. Vannoy v. State, 64 Ind. 447.

In a prosecution for an unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, in a less quantity than a quart, the facts that the defendant had, prior to such sale, upon proper thority granted by license to sell liquor arises upon the issuing of the written license, and not upon the vote or order granting it, or upon the completion of the instrument by the signatures of the proper officer.¹

6. Written and Parol Licenses.—A license to retail intoxicating liquors must be in writing,² and the defendant cannot justify under a parol license from the proper officer to whom he paid the required sum.³

7. Form and Condition of License.—Where a license to retail vinous and spirituous liquors is signed by a proper local officer and countersigned by the collector, it is all that the law requires, and the presumption will be that the county authorized and issued the license upon a proper petition presented therefor.⁴ And it is said that if the license recites that the licensee shall conform to all the conditions or requirements of the act under which it is granted, or the license shall become forfeited, null and void, and the text of the act is appended in full, the licensee on fully complying with the conditions of the license and displaying it in his premises according to law, is legally licensed.⁵

notice, and after having given the bond required by the statute, obtained from the proper county board an order granting him license to sell such liquor in a less quantity than a quart at a time, for the term of one year, are not sufficient to constitute any defence, when it appears that the offence was committed and the indictment against him was returned before he had paid the requisite fee for, or taken out, his license. Dudley v. State, 91 Ind. 312.

Where an order, for the issue of a license to one to sell intoxicating liquors, has been made, a failure to procure such license, or of its issue by the officer, would not subject the licensee to prosecution for subsequent sales; but, if he has not paid his money into the treasury, nor filed his bond, he is subject to prosecution. Houser v. State, 18 Ind. 106.

Same—Conviction of Clerk.—It is said in State v. White, 23 Ark. 275, that when a person is granted a license by the county court to retail spirituous liquors, and has paid for it, though his clerk cannot be found guilty of a criminal violation of the statute by selling before the clerk has issued a license and empowering the principal to sell.

Same—Sale After Payment of License Fee and Before Issuing of License.—It is said in State v. Wilcox, 66 Ind. 557, that a liquor licensee cannot be prosecuted for a sale made after the payment of his license and grant thereof, but before its issuance. Distinguishing Wiles v. State, 33 Ind. 206; Schlict v. State, 31 Ind. 246; Houser v. State, 18 Ind. 106.

But it is said by the supreme court of Illinois, in Prather v. People, 85 Ill. 36, that a party who strictly complies with the ordinance of a village having power to license and regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors by paying the money required for the privilege, and giving bond which is accepted, will be protected in selling although the clerk may have neglected to give him a license in such cases. The court held, the ordinance is the authority to sell, the license being only evidence of such authority, and a former license not being necessary.

Same—After Execution of Bond.—Where the defendant executed a liquor bond, and offered to pay the fee required on an application for a license, the supreme court of Minnesota held, in State v. Bach, 36 Minn. 234, that until he had received the license he had no right to sell.

1. Com. v. Welch, 144 Mass. 356.

2. State v. Moore, 14 N. H. 451.

3. Lawrence v. Gracy, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 179.

4. State v. Brandon, 28 Ark. 410.

5. Murphy v. Nolan, 126 Mass. 542.

Closing on Sunday.—Application for License.—A condition requiring licensed premises to be closed during the whole of Sunday cannot be

8. Designation of Place or Building.—A license to retail spirituous liquors should fully set forth and describe the place in which the business is to be carried on;¹ but a license to sell liquors is not void because it fails to specify the house where the liquors are sold.²

9. Validity and Effect.—A license is valid and protects the holder thereof, so long as it remains uncanceled, unreversed, and is not appealed from.³ The fact that the license was obtained through fraud will not invalidate it unless the fraud is practiced by the inserted in a new license, unless the applicant for the license applies for the insertion. Reg. v. Justices of Kirkdale, L. R., 18 Q. B. Div. 248; s. c., 56 L. J. M. C. 24.

A license granted by a town to keep a dram shop is impliedly subject to such lawful ordinances of the town as are in existence at the time it was granted, without words in the license expressly referring to the ordinances. Baldwin v. Smith, 82 Ill. 162.

Limitations, Restraints and Conditions in Licenses.—The officers composing the board of excise cannot insert in a license a limitation, restriction or condition which is repugnant to the statute; and a clause inserted in the licenses of hotel keepers or inn keepers absolutely prohibiting the sale of liquors upon certain days named in them is unauthorized and nugatory. In re Breslin, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 210.

1. See Com. v. Merriam, 136 Mass. 433; Goforth v. State, 60 Miss. 756.

2. Goforth v. State, 60 Miss. 756.

Change of Place of Business.—Where the licensee desires to change his place of business, leave for such change must be endorsed upon the license, and must be authenticated in the same way as the original license. Com. v. Merriam, 136 Mass. 433. See Pope v. State, 2 Swan. (Tenn.) 611.

Endorsing Oath.—A license issued under the Tennessee act of 1846 is void under such statute, unless the oath required to be administered to the retailer is endorsed thereon, although it was in full administered and recorded in the clerk's office. Pope v. State, 2 Swan. (Tenn.) 611.

Record of License.—Under the Wisconsin statute it is the duty of the town clerk to keep a record of all licenses granted to the town board for the sale of intoxicating liquors. Hepler v. State, 58 Wis. 46.

3. Com. v. Graves, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 33.

Licensing Inns and Taverns.—A license to keep an inn and store granted by the proper authority, is valid and will protect the person licensed notwithstanding the anterior proceedings may have been illegal. Goff v. Fowler, 20 Mass. (3 Pick.) 300.

In Com. v. Graves, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 33, upon a presentment for retailing spirituous liquors, it was held that a tavern license granted by the county court to the defendant could not be impeached as being properly granted.

In City of Independence v. Noland, 21 Mo. 394, under a statute authorizing the government of a city to restrain the sale of liquor, it was held that a tavern license issued by a county court could not authorize the grantee to sell within the limits of a city in violation of laws previously made by the city government.

Same—Ability to Accommodate.—In New York, there is a prohibition against licensing persons not having ability and accommodations to keep a tavern. People v. Hartmann, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 602.

Sale for Medical Purposes.—The supreme court of New Hampshire say in State v. Emerson, 16 N. H. 87, that under the New Hampshire statute a license to sell spirituous liquors for medical purposes solely, is not void.

New License as Common Victualer.—In Com. v. Rourke, 141 Mass. 321, it is said that the acceptance of a license describing the licensee as a common victualer estops him from setting up any defence of the violation of another condition of his license that he was not a duly licensed common victualer.

Sale Under Prior License.—In Trost v. State, 64 Miss. 188, the statute required a licensee to sell liquors in certain counties, provided that the act should not apply to dealers in places where retailing was permitted under the general laws. A special plea to an indictment for unlawfully selling in a party to whom it is granted.¹ And where a party has paid for a license which is void through some informality, and it is subsequently corrected the licensee is entitled to a new license for the unexpired term.²

A license takes effect from the time the written license is issued, and not upon the vote granting it, or from the completion of the instrument by the signature of the proper officers.³ A license to sell spirituous liquors cannot be antedated so as to cover offences already committed.⁴ A sale unlawful when made is not legalized by a subsequent license nor by a previous license which did not by its terms extend to the time of sale, although that time was within a year of the granting of the license.⁵

certain city alleged that at a time when liquors were being retailed in such city under the general laws defendants had procured a license which had not yet expired. The court held that the plea was properly stricken out as the facts stated constituted no defence.

Release of Penalties.—The supreme court of South Carolina say in the case of Charleston v. Corleis, 2 Bail. (S. Car.) L. 186, that a license to retail spirituous liquors from a day passed is a release of the penalties incurred subsequent to that day.

1 Rex v. Minshull, 1 N. & M. 277. See Com. v. Graves, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 33; Goff v. Fowler, 20 Mass. (3 Pick.) 300.

2 State v. Cornwell, 12 Neb. 470.

A license by a county to sell liquors is no bar to a prosecution for selling without the license required by a city ordinance. And one's liability under a territorial law for selling on Sunday does not shield him from a penalty therefor imposed by a city ordinance. Elk Point v. Vaughn, 1 Dak. 113.

3. Keiser v. State, 78 Ind. 430; overruling Vannoy v. State, 64 Ind. 447; State v. Wilcox, 66 Ind. 557; Com. v. Welch, 144 Mass. 356; State v. Hughes, 24 Mo. 147; Brown v. State, 27 Tex. 335; Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292.

When License Takes Effect.—It is said in Brown v. State, 27 Tex. 335, that a license to retail liquors will take effect at the time when the application produces to the clerk of the county court, the county treasurer's receipt for the taxes imposed by the law in such cases, and not from the time when the county court acted upon the application.

An ordinance of the city of Wheeling provides that a license to keep an ordinary shall expire on the 1st day of May succeeding the date thereof. In April the council granted a license for the succeeding year. Held that the party to whom it was granted had no actual vested right in such license until it issued to him on the 1st of May, the passing of the order before that date being merely for the convenience of the council. Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292.

4. Edwards v. State, 22 Ark. 253; Keiser v. State, 78 Ind. 430; overruling Vannoy v. State, 64 Ind. 447, and State v. Wilcox, 66 Ind. 557; Wiles v. State, 33 Ind. 206; State v. Hughes, 24 Mo. 147.

License—Relation Back.—The supreme court of Missouri say in the case of State v. Hughes, 24 Mo. 147, that a license to sell spirituous liquors has no relation back to the date of the order granting permission to obtain it and will only protect one who sells after the date of its issue.

The supreme court of Indiana say in the case of Keiser v. State, 78 Ind. 430, that a license to sell intoxicating liquor should bear the date of the day when issued and its effect from that date and does not relate back to the order granting the license, although so dated so as to legalize sales made between the date of the order and the issuing of the license.

5. Commissioners of Alms House of Kingston v. Osterhoudt, 23 Hun (N. Y.) 66; State v. Brady, 14 R. I. 508.

Sale After Expiration of License.—One who sells after the expiration of his license cannot defend on the ground that he was induced by town officers to believe that his license would be renewed, and that it was customary to date licenses back. State v. Brady, 14 R. I. 508.

10. Taking Out License.—Anyone who brings himself within the requirements of the law is entitled to a license to sell,¹ and the authorities are bound to grant the same.²

1. Ailstock v. Page, 77 Va. 386. See Polk County Commissioners v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 578; Zanone v. Mound City, 11 Ill. App. 334; Rosenham v. Com. (Ky.), 2 S. W. Rep. 230; Mundy v. Excise Commissioners, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 117; People ex rel. Gillane v. Haughton, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 135; O'Rourke v. People, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 225; s. c., 5 T. & C. (N. Y.) 496; People ex rel. Gillane v. Woodman, 5 N. Y. State Rep. 318; People ex rel. Ochs v. Commissioners of Excise of Brooklyn, 10 N. Y. Wk. Dig. 413; Leighton v. Maury, 76 Va. 865; People v. Morrison, 22 Alb. L. J. 210; Munn v. Southall, 7 L. T. 356.

Refreshment and Wine License.—In Munn v. Southall, 7 L. T. 356, a beer house keeper having obtained a refreshment house license, applied for a wine license under the statute; and an objection was made that he was not entitled to such license as not coming within the statute; he provided travellers and others who came in his house with bread, cheese and other victuals as they required them. The court held that he was entitled to a wine license.

License to Sell Ale and Beer.—A license to sell ale and beer to be drunk on the premises may be granted to one not a hotel keeper. Mundy v. Excise Commrs. of New York, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 117; O'Rourke v. People, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 225; s. c., 5 T. & C. (N. Y.) 496; People ex rel. Ochs v. Commrs. of Excise of Brooklyn, 10 N. Y. Wk. Dig. 413; People v. Morrison, 22 Alb. L. J. 210.

Joint Commissioners—Absconding of One.—Where one of two joint petitioners for a liquor license absconds, this is not necessarily a reason for refusing a license to the other. Polk County Commrs. v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 578.

License to Druggist.—A druggist is a merchant and entitled to a license as such under the Kentucky statute. Rosenham v. Com. (Ky.), 2 S. W. Rep. 230.

Under Ordinance—Arbitrary Discrimination.—Under a general ordinance of a city for licensing dram shops, the city authorities have no right to make an arbitrary discrimination, but should issue licenses to all complying with the conditions of the ordinance, and such an one is justified in selling without a license if they refuse or neglect to issue one to him. Zanone v. Mound City, 11 Ill. App. 334.

Building Used for Amusement.—In People v. Andrews, 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. (22 J. & S.) 183; s. c., 3 N. Y. St. Rep. 547, an applicant for a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors had music played in his saloon upon a piano and violin by performers hired for that purpose every night, Sunday included. The court held that the applicant kept a place of exhibition and performance within the meaning of the New York City Consolidation act, and that under that act a license could not be granted. Compare People ex rel. Gillane v. Woodman, 5 N. Y. St. Rep. 318, where the decision in People ex rel. Gillane v. Haughton, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 135, holding that the excise law does not prohibit granting a license for a building which is used part of the time for a place of amusement, is reiterated.

Who not Entitled to—Coffee House.—It is said in Louisville v. Kean, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 9, that the authorities of the city of Louisville are not bound under the charter to license coffee houses.

Same—Distillers.—The supreme court of Pennsylvania say, in the case of Vandegrift's Application, Pa., 1 Cent. Rep. 626, that a license to sell spirituous liquors in quantities less than a gallon cannot, under the Pennsylvania act of 1858, be granted to a distiller.

Same—Grocery Keepers.—It is said in State v. Sumer, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 253, that the statute of Indiana authorizing the clerks of courts in vacation to give "permits" to retail spirituous liquors, etc., does not apply to grocery keepers.

Same—Lodging House Keeper.—A lodging house keeper is not entitled to a license as an inn keeper because accustomed to send out for cooked food for his lodgers. Kelly v. Excise Commrs. of New York, 54 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 327.

2. Daugherty v. Com., 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 239. See Zanone v. Mound City, 11 Ill. App. 334.

The qualifications necessary to entitle one to receive a license are governed by each particular law under which the application is made. Thus in England the licensee is required to be a person who is a householder,¹ and in Indiana every licensee must be a male inhabitant of the State,² and a temperate and a moral man of the age of twenty-one.³

Under a law regulating the sale and trafficking in intoxicating liquors, all persons engaged therein must procure the necessary license, such as wholesale dealers,⁴ and all classes of retail dealers,⁵ such as saloon keepers or inn and hotel keepers, where intoxicating liquors are sold;⁶ druggists,⁷ and the holders of "special stamps."⁸

1. Thompson v. Harvey, 4 H. & N. 254; s. c., 28 L. J., M. C. 163.

2. Murphy v. Board of Commrs. of Monroe County, 73 Ind. 483; Ex parte Laboyteaux, 65 Ind. 545.

3. Miller v. Wade, 58 Ind. 91.

Residence of Applicant.—Under the Indiana laws it is not necessary that an applicant for license should be a resident of the ward, town, township or county in which the place where the liquor is to be sold is situated. Murphy v. Board of Commrs. of Monroe County, 73 Ind. 483; Ex parte Laboyteaux, 65 Ind. 545.

"Immorality or Other Unfitness."

—It is said in Hill v. Perry, 82 Ind. 28, that one may be an immoral man and not a proper person to be licensed to sell intoxicating liquors, though he himself is not in the habit of becoming intoxicated; and in Calder v. Sheppard, 61 Ind. 219, that the fact that a person has been once seen intoxicated, and sometimes take a drink, does not disqualify him for a license under the statute requiring him to be "a fit person to be entrusted with the sale of intoxicating liquors" and "not in the habit of becoming intoxicated" and permitting any voter to remonstrate "on account of immorality or other unfitness."

Same—Frequenting Gambling Houses.

—In the late case of Groscop v. Rainier, 111 Ind. 361, it is said that it is sufficient to sustain a verdict in favor of a remonstrance against granting a license under the above named statute, that the applicant was immoral by reason of his frequenting places of gambling, and thus unfit to sell liquor under the law of the State, although frequenting places of gambling is not specified in that act.

4. United States v. Kallstrom, 30 Fed. Rep. 184. See United States v. Vroll- igo, 28 Int. Rev. Rec. 313; United States v. Wittig, 22 Int. Rev. Rec. 98; s. c., 2 Law Dec. 466.

Wholesale Dealers—Retailers' Protective Union.—Thus where retail liquor dealers organized themselves in a "Protective Union" and signed articles pledging themselves to purchase beer through the union in another State, by which means they saved two dollars a barrel, and no wholesale license having been taken out as prescribed by the U. S. Rev. Stat., § 3242, and the purchases were made by the president of the "union," who was paid nothing for his services and the members were charged only with mere storage and the like, it was held that the retail dealers became wholesale dealers and were liable to the penalty provided by the statute.

Same—Minnesota Doctrine.—It is said by the supreme court of Minnesota, in the case of State v. Orth, 38 Minn. 150, that the Minnesota statutes regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors do not apply to, exclusively, wholesale dealers who sell to other dealers so as to make it necessary for them to take out licenses.

5. It is said in Com. v. Wheeler, 79 Ky. 284, that under the Kentucky statute, before a person is required to obtain a license to sell whiskey he must be engaged in merchandizing and in the sale of other things than spirituous liquors.

6. People v. Davis, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 404; Louisville v. Kean, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 9.

7. Jones v. State, 68 Ala. 559; Chew v. State, 43 Ark. 361; Brown v. State, 9 Neb. 189.

8. Special Stamp Holders.—Under the U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2243, providing that the holders of special stamps for the sale of liquor shall not be exempt

Laws regulating the sale of liquors do not apply to social clubs where the steward furnishes the members with food and with beer or other liquors at a fixed price to be consumed at the club, the money so received being expended for the expenses of the club.¹

11. Term of Duration.—Usually a license may extend for the period of one year from the time it is granted,² or until the beginning of the next excise year.³

12. What Rights or Privileges Are Included in or Conferred by.—A license to sell liquors for certain purposes therein specified cannot protect the licensee from a criminal prosecution for violating the laws of the State in selling liquors for other purposes than from any penalty imposed by State laws for carrying on the sale in the State; a holder of such stamps on board a steamer within the State limits is subject to the State license law. Com. v. Sheckels, 78 Va. 36.

Physicians and Druggists.—Under a town charter prohibiting the sale of spirituous liquors within the corporate limits of the town, but containing a proviso that the section should not be so construed as to prevent any practicing physician or druggist selling such liquors for medical or sacramental purposes. Held, that physicians and druggists selling for such purposes were not bound to take out a license. Jones v. State, 68 Ala. 559.

1. Seim v. State, 55 Md. 566; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 419; Com. v. Smith, 102 Mass. 144. See Com. v. Pomphret, 137 Mass. 564; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 340; Graff v. Evans, 8 Q. B. Div. 373. Compare Martin v. State, 59 Ala. 34; Rickart v. People, 79 Ill. 85; Marmont v. State, 48 Ind. 21; State v. Mercer, 32 Iowa 405; State v. Lockyear, 95 N. Car. 633; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 287.

Sale of Liquor by Clubs.—On an indictment under the Massachusetts statutes for keeping a liquor nuisance, it was proven that the defendant, as agent of a club, bought intoxicating liquors with money advanced by the club; that the liquors purchased were the property of the club; that checks of the denomination of five cents each were delivered to each member to the extent of the amount of money advanced by him; that the defendant was a member of the club and delivered to each member, upon presentment of the checks, from time to time, liquor of the club to the amount of the checks presented; and that the residue of undelivered liquors, amounting by calculation to twenty per cent., was to belong to the defendant as compensation for his services and for the use of his room. The court held that this did not justify a ruling that the facts proven would, as matter of law, be a sale; that the question whether the facts amounted to an evasion of the law is a question for the jury. Com. v. Smith, 102 Mass. 144.

2. State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumter Co., 22 Fla. 1; Gurley v. State, 65 Ga. 157; People v. Gainey, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 60; Hendersonville v. Price, 96 N. Car. 423. Compare Opinions of Attorneys General, N. Y., 457, 503, 553.

Life of License.—It is said by the supreme court of Georgia, in Gurley v. State, 65 Ga. 157, that an ordinary has no power to grant a license to retail spirits for less than one year, and a license for four months will not protect the retailer from prosecution.

The supreme court of North Carolina say, in Hendersonville v. Price, 96 N. Car. 423, that while the board of commissioners cannot issue a license for a longer period than one year, the time may not begin and terminate with the term of office of the board which grants it; for they can grant a license which extends beyond their term of office, providing it does not exceed one year and does not begin to take effect after their term of office has expired.

The supreme court of Florida say, in the case of State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumter County, 22 Fla. 1, that a permit under the Florida statute continues for the license year as defined by the statute for which it may have been issued and for the unexpired year for the license portion when issued.

3. The New York statutes, prescribing the time during which a license to sell liquors shall remain in force, has those named in the license.¹ And a license will not authorize the licensee to sell liquor on Sunday contrary to the statute.²

13. Place of Sale Authorized by.—a. WHERE BUSINESS MAY BE CONDUCTED, GENERALLY.—While it is desirable that a license to retail spirituous liquors should designate the place in which the business is to be carried on, yet it is no objection to a license to sell liquor that it does not specify the particular place in the town been held not to refer to the calendar year but to the excise year, and that a license granted on and after the first Monday in May expires at the same time with those granted on that day. Disbrow v. Saunders, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 149.

1. State v. Adams, 20 Iowa 486; Curd v. Com., 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 386; New Orleans v. Jane, 34 La. An. 667; State v. Woodward, 34 Me. 293; State v. Cahen, 35 Md. 236; Com. v. Jordan, 35 Mass. (18 Pick.) 228; Com. v. Markoe, 34 Mass. (17 Pick.) 465; State v. Amba, 20 Mo. 214; Lambert v. State, 8 Mo. 492.

It is said in the case of State v. McGrath, 73 Mo. 181, that the license of a dram shop keeper authorizes all the sales which the owner and beer shop keeper is authorized to make by virtue of his license, and that a license to a tavern keeper includes the privilege of retailing spirituous liquors. State v. Chamblyss, 1 Cheves (S. Car.) 220; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 593. Compare Com. v. Kamp, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 385; Commissioners v. Dennis, 1 Cheves (S. Car.) 229; Hirn v. State, 1 Ohio St. 15.

Upon trial of a complaint for keeping intoxicating liquors with intent to sell the same, contrary to a statute which required a license of a certain class for the sale of such liquors to be drunk on the premises (Mass. Pub. Stat., ch. 100, § 10), the evidence tended to prove that defendant kept such liquor with intent to sell the same to be used as a beverage, and to be drunk on the premises; and the court instructed the jury that a license to keep and sell intoxicating liquors for medicinal, mechanical and chemical purposes "gave the holder no right to keep for sale or to sell intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage, . . . or . . . to be drunk on the premises." Held, that the instruction was correct, it not appearing that there were any circumstances about the sales in question requiring the liquor sold, if sold for medicinal purposes, to be drunk on the premises. Com. v. Mandeville, 142 Mass. 469.

Tavern Keeper's License.—It is said in the case of Com. v. Kamp, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 385, that a license granted in general terms by virtue of the statute to keep a tavern authorizes a tavern keeper to vend spirituous liquors in his bar room, or tavern, in small quantities, to be drunk in the tavern or elsewhere. And in the case of Hirn v. State, 1 Ohio St. 15, it is said that a license to keep a tavern, under the Ohio act of 1831, was, according to the true meaning of the act, a license to retail spirituous liquors. To the same effect see State v. Chamblyss, 1 Cheves (S. Car.) 220; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 593. Compare Commissioners of Roads v. Dennis, 1 Cheves (S. Car.) 229.

License of Common Victualer.—It is said by the supreme judicial court of Maine, in State v. Woodward, 34 Me. 293, that the license of an inn holder and common victualer does not authorize the person licensed to sell intoxicating liquor to guests. And by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in Com. v. Markoe, 34 Mass. (17 Pick.) 465, that under the Massachusetts statute a person licensed to be a common victualer in any other place than Boston was not authorized to sell distilled spirits. Com. v. Jordan, 35 Mass. (18 Pick.) 228.

Oyster and Eating House.—It is held, in the case of State v. Cahen, 35 Md. 236, that under the Maryland statute providing for the issuing of three classes of license to sell spirituous liquors, an oyster or eating house license must not authorize the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors by the barrel, or quantities greater than a pint.

Merchant's License.—A merchant's license does not authorize him to sell liquors by the quart, or any other quantity, at a store to be drunk there, or adjacent thereto, or which shall be so drunk; and if he does so, he is guilty of keeping a tippling house. Curd v. Com., 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 386.

2. See State v. Amba, 20 Mo. 214; Lambert v. State, 8 Mo. 492.

where the licensee may sell; he cannot, however, carry on his business at more than one place in the same town.¹ But a general license to retail spirituous liquors within the county, does not authorize the sale of such liquors within the area covered by a special prohibitory law.² Where a license designates the particular place where the business shall be carried on it will not justify a sale in any other place.³

b. ADJOINING ROOMS OR PREMISES.—Where a license is granted to sell liquor at a particular place, as a rule it will not cover a sale at any other place.⁴ But where two bars are maintained in the same establishment and separated from each other by temporary obstructions, it is thought that one license will protect both bars.⁵

1. State v. Walker, 16 Me. 241; State v. Gerhardt, 3 Jones (N. Car.) 178.

A license granted by the commissioners of a certain county reciting that the person to whom it was granted was a resident of R, in said county, and licensing him to sell strong and spirituous liquors to be drunk in his house as an inn or tavern, when at the time of the granting of the license he in fact resided in another town and county, and had ever since resided there, does not authorize sales to be made in a mere drinking saloon, in the corner of a warehouse, but only authorizes such sales in an inn, tavern or hotel. People v. Davis, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 494.

2. Barnes v. State, 49 Ala. 342.

3. State v. Prettyman, 3 Harr. (Del.) 570; State v. Hughes, 24 Mo. 147.

Tavern License.—A tavern license restricts the sale of liquors to the place as well as the person licensed. State v. Prettyman, 3 Harr. (Del.) 570.

4. The respondent had a license to sell intoxicating liquors at his stand on the corner of A and B streets. He had another stand adjoining this, there being an internal communication between the two, and he sold liquors in both. Held, that his license only applied to the place first named. State v. Fredericks, 16 Mo. 382, 14.

A license, granted by the commissioners of excise of Seneca county to D, recited that he was a resident of R, in said county, and licensed him to sell strong and spirituous liquors and wines to be drunk in his house, as an inn or tavern. D, in fact, at the time, resided in the town of T, in the county of Yates, and had ever since resided there. Under this license, D kept a mere recess or drinking saloon in a room in his warehouse, situated in the waters of Seneca lake, a few feet from the western shore thereof, and a few yards from the county line, within the town of R. Held, that the judge was right in instructing the jury that D's license was void, and afforded him no protection, if he was, at the time it was applied for and granted, a resident of the town of T. People v. Davis, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 494.

A small building on the same lot with a dwelling house, but 45 rods distant from it, with a passageway between, though both are occupied by one person, is not an apartment or dependence of the dwelling house; and a license to sell spirits in his dwelling house will not authorize the selling of them in the small building. Com. v. Estabrook, 27 Mass. (10 Pick.) 293.

5. Hochstadler v. State, 73 Ala. 24; Sanders v. Town Council of Elberton, 50 Ga. 178; St. Louis v. Gerardi, 90 Mo. 640; State v. Moody, 95 N. Car. 656.

The question whether two rooms in a house, in which it is proposed to sell spirituous liquors, are in truth two distinct places, so that the applicant may be required to take out two licenses, is a question of fact; and the judgment of the town council, upon evidence, holding that they are distinct places, will not be disturbed if the evidence justifies that conclusion, though it may not require it. Sanders v. Town Council of Elberton, 50 Ga. 178.

Where defendant, the proprietor of a hotel, procured a license to keep a dram shop at the main entrance to the hotel, and three bars were kept on the ground floor of the hotel, screened off by partitions having direct and immediate connection by doorways, all of which were accessible to the guests without going

14. Licenses Granted to Partners and Third Persons.—A license may be granted to two persons jointly,¹ but a license granted to one person who forms a partnership with an unlicensed person, does not authorize the latter to make sales.² The agent or servant of one licensed to sell liquor, is protected to the same extent as the master by the license;³ but where a pretended appointment of

out of the hotel, and all of which bars were located on the premises occupied for hotel purposes, and where a part of the house, which was one building and one place, the mere fact of the licensee erecting more than one bar at such place, so connected, would not render him liable to the penalty of the ordinance which contemplates that the location of the place where a dram shop is to be kept shall be designated, and that a license to keep a dram shop at any such place does not authorize it to be kept anywhere else. St. Louis v. Gerardi, 90 Mo. 640.

Separate Bar for Negroes.—It is held in Hochstadler v. State, 73 Ala. 24, that only one license is required of a person engaged in retailing vinous, spirituous and malt liquors, who occupies and carries on his business in two adjoining rooms connected with each other by an open fence or archway cut in the portion of the wall in each of which is a bar; one of the rooms being used for white persons, and one for negroes, and both rooms constituting but one establishment and being under one and the same management.

1. Shaw v. State, 56 Ind. 188; State v. Gerhardt, 3 Jones (N. C.) L. 178.

2. Long v. State, 27 Ala. 32; Shaw v. State, 56 Ind. 188; Com. v. Hall's Case, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 588.

A license to one man to keep a tavern at his house in a village, does not authorize another who formed a partnership with the first in the sale of spirituous liquors which the first was authorized to sell under his license, to sell liquors at a house on the same lot and within the same inclosure as that of the tavern. Com. v. Hall's Case, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 588.

License to a Firm.—A license to sell liquors issued to a firm of which A is a member, confers no authority to sell to another firm of which he is also a member. Wharton v. King, 69 Ala. 365.

Same—Retirement of Partner.—A license to sell liquor granted to two persons as partners will, during the period mentioned in the license, protect one of the partners against the penalty for selling without a license, although the other has retired from the firm. State v. Gerhardt, 3 Jones (N. C.) L. 178.

3. People v. Buffum, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 216. See Heath v. State, 105 Ind. 342; Keiser v. State, 58 Ind. 379; State v. Sterns, 28 Kan. 154; Com. v. Branamon, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 374; Duncan v. Com., 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 281.

One who sells spirituous liquors in a room of an inn, which is under the control of the inn keeper, and by his permission, is protected by the license of the inn. Duncan v. Com., 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 281.

Where A obtained a license to keep a tavern, and B agreed to pay for the license, and sold liquors in an adjoining room, which he rented from a third person, not being at all under the control of A, it was held that B was not protected by A's license, but was liable for keeping a tippling house. Com. v. Branamon, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 374.

On the trial of the defendant, charged with selling intoxicating liquor, without license, in a less quantity than a quart at a time, the evidence established that the defendant, who was the owner of the premises where the sale was made, had made such sale pursuant to, and in compliance with, the terms of the written contract, entered into by the defendant, who had no license, and another who had a license, whereby the defendant leased such premises to the licensee for a saloon, upon the condition that the licensee should furnish the stock necessary to carry on the business; that the defendant in the name of licensee should make all purchases and sales of such stock, should pay all debts and expenses incurred in carrying on the business out of the proceeds thereof; and for his services and the rent of the building he should receive all the profits of the business, except a certain sum per diem, which was to be paid to the licensee. Held, that, by the terms of such agreement, the licensee and defendant became, as between themselves, not partners, but principal and agent, and that such sale was pro-

one as a liquor seller's agent, is in fact a sale, the license of the pretended principal will afford no protection.¹

15. Validity and Effect of Assignments and Transfer.—A license to sell or traffic in intoxicating liquors, is personal to the holder and cannot be delegated or assigned nor committed to the care of a receiver appointed by the court.²

16. Authority to Sell by Agent.—³ It is true that a license to sell or traffic in intoxicating liquors is not transferable, yet a person who has been rightfully licensed may employ an agent to conduct his business for him,⁴ although he leaves the country for an indefinite time,⁵ or removes into another county.⁶

17. License to Sell Near Schools, etc.—A statute forbidding the granting of a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors in any tected by such license. Keiser v. State, 58 Ind. 379.

1. Heath v. State, 105 Ind. 342.

2. State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumter County, 22 Fla. 8; Heath v. State, 105 Ind. 342; Runyon v. State, 52 Ind. 320; Godfrey v. State, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 151; Lewis v. United States, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 199; Com. v. Bryan, 9 Dana (Ky.) 310; State v. Lydick, 11 Neb. 366; Sample v. Flynn (N. J. Eq.), 10 Atl. Rep. 177; Alger v. Weston, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 231; State v. McNeeley, 1 Winst. (N. C.) L. 234; In re Templeton (Pa.), 4 Lancast. L. Rev. 242.

License not Assignable.—Where a person who held a license from a city to retail malt, spirituous and vinous liquors, sold his stock in trade, furniture and fixtures, to the defendant, and assigned his said license to him. The court held that such license so assigned to him was no defence to an indictment for selling liquors "without first having obtained a license therefor." State v. Lydick, 11 Neb. 366. See State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumpter County, 22 Fla. 8; Heath v. State, 105 Ind. 342.

And where an instrument is a mere cover for an absolute transfer of a saloon, although in form an appointment as bar keeper or seller who holds the license, such license will not protect the purchaser. Heath v. State, 105 Ind. 342. See Keiser v. State, 58 Ind. 379; Shaw v. State, 56 Ind. 188; Krant v. State, 47 Ind. 519; Pickens v. State, 20 Ind. 116.

A license issued contrary to statute confers no authority to vend malt, spirituous or vinous liquors. A person who holds a liquor license issued under the authority of a mayor and council of a city, sold out his saloon and assigned his license to the defendant, who petitioned the mayor and council to transfer the said license to him. The council thereupon ordered the said license to be transferred to the defendant, and the clerk issued an original license, in form, to the defendant, who proceeded to retail spirituous liquors under it, and was indicted therefor. The court held that such license was no defence to the indictment. State v. Lydick, 11 Neb. 366.

A license to keep a tavern or an inn confers a personal privilege which is not assignable, and does not pass by a lease of the tavern house. Com. v. Bryan, 9 Dana (Ky.) 310; Alger v. Weston, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 231.

A license to keep a grocery is not assignable. Lewis v. United States, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 199.

It is said in Godfrey v. State, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 151, a grocer having a license to retail spirituous liquors sold his grocery, agreeing that the buyer should have the benefit of the license. The court held that the license was not assignable and that the buyer had no authority under it to retail spirituous liquors.

3. See also infra, this title, OFFENCES; SALE BY AGENT.

4. See Thompson v. State, 37 Ala. 151; State v. Keith, 37 Ark. 96, 98, 272; Runyon v. State, 52 Ind. 320; State v. McNeeley, 1 Winst. (N. C.) 234.

5. State v. McNeeley, 1 Winst. (N. C.) 234.

6. Thompson v. State, 37 Ala. 151.

Carrying on Business by Agent.—Where a license has not been forfeited, a licensee may carry on the business by an agent at the place designated in the license, and the agent will not be responsible for selling without a license. Runyon v. State, 52 Ind. 320.

building or place on the same street within a specified distance of a public school or university, applies to the whole building; and no license can be granted or the sale of liquor in any room thereof, although more than the prescribed distance from the school building.¹

18. Granting License.—A license to sell or traffic in spirituous, vinous or malt liquors cannot be issued until the statutory conditions have been complied with.²

a. CONSENT OF COMMISSIONERS.—In those cases where by private act a county court or other licensing body is forbidden to grant a license to retail spirituous liquors within the limits of an incorporated town without a recommendation from the board of commissioners of the town, a license granted without such recommendation having first been procured, is void and will not protect the licensee.³

b. POWER TO GRANT GENERALLY.—The power of the board of excise, or other body charged with the granting of licenses to sell and traffic in spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, is limited to the granting or refusing of licenses. The statutes regulate the rights acquired by such license; the restriction to be observed and the punishment for each violation of its provisions.⁴ When the law

1. Com. v. Jones, 142 Mass. 573. See De Bois v. State, 34 Ark. 381.

It is said by the supreme court of Arkansas, in the case of De Bois v. State, 34 Ark. 381, that the sale of liquor within two miles of Judson University is regulated entirely by the act of February 27th, 1875, entitled "an act to prohibit the sale of alcoholic spirits, vinous liquors within two miles of Judson University, White County." And that the county court had no authority to license one to sell within that distance of the university.

2. Com. v. Welch, 144 Mass. 356. See Russell v. State, 77 Ala. 89; Long v. State, 27 Ala. 32.

Compliance with Statute.—In issuing a license for retailing spirituous liquors under the general statutes, the officer granting such license acts ministerially, and is bound to require a substantial compliance with the precedent statutory conditions; and while the license itself is prima facie evidence of such compliance, the fact of noncompliance when affirmatively shown renders the license void; and its validity being thus shown, it affords no protection to the person to whom it was granted, and who has acted under it. Russell v. State, 77 Ala. 89.

It is said by the supreme court of Alabama, in the case of Long v. State, 27 Ala. 32, that a law authorizing licensees to retail and traffic in intoxicating liquors is not merely a revenue measure. The payment of the prescribed tax is not the only prerequisite to obtaining a license, the other prerequisites show that the legislature deemed the privilege of retailing so dangerous that it was not to be entrusted to any person until he was properly recommended, etc.

3. Purdy v. Sinton, 56 Cal. 133; State v. Moore, 1 Jones (N. C.) L. 276.

In Purdy v. Sinton, 56 Cal. 133, the plaintiff applied to the defendant, the collector of licenses of San Francisco, for a license to retail liquors, and was refused, on the ground that the defendant was not authorized to issue such a license without the written consent of a majority of the board of police commissioners. The court held that such are the requirements of the act from which the defendant derives his sole power to issue licenses; and that, if the act is constitutional, the plaintiff must comply with it before he can demand a license; and if unconstitutional, the defendant has no power to issue licenses at all.

4. In re Breslin, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 210; s. c., 10 N. Y. St. Rep. 80. See Siloam Springs v. Thompson, 41 Ark. 456; State v. Justices, 15 Ga. 408; Pierce has been complied with, it is the right of the petitioner to have a license issued, and any obstacle thrown in his way by the commissioners or body charged with the issuing of licenses on the plea of being guardians of the public, is a mistake as to duty.¹

c. DISCRETION TO GRANT OR REFUSE.²—A law regulating or restraining the traffic in intoxicating liquors and investing a particular tribunal with power to grant a license therefor, upon proper petition or application, signed or recommended by a certain number or proportion of the residents of the immediate vicinity in which the business is to be carried on, vests such body with a judicial discretion.³ In granting or refusing the license, such

v. Com., 10 Bush (Ky.) 6; Ex parte Persons, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 655; State v. Moody, 95 N. C. 656; Conway's Appeal (Pa.), 1 Atl. Rep. 727; Rauch v. Com., 78 Pa. St. 490; Lutz's Application, 3 Pa. County Court 127.

The rule that the court will take judicial notice of things which are public in their effects and relations, and ought to be known within their jurisdiction, is applied to the question whether a county treasurer could grant a valid brewers' license after the result of a vote had been judicially ascertained. Rauch v. Com., 78 Pa. St. 490.

Duty of Court to Grant License.—It is said in State v. Justices, 15 Ga. 408, that the inferior courts of Georgia cannot withhold a license from any person applying for it, and complying with the requirements of the law by paying for the license and giving bond and security to keep an orderly house.

It is said in Conway's Petition (Pa.) 1 Atl. Rep. 727, that a wholesale liquor license can be denied by the court of quarter sessions without assigning any reason. And in the case of Pierce v. Com., 10 Bush (Ky.) 6, that the Kentucky statute, which provides that no license shall be granted unless the judge "or board of trustees shall deem it expedient to grant such privilege," confers a power to grant a license only when deemed by them to be expedient to the community or travelling public."

Same—Failure to Vote.—It is said by the supreme court of Arkansas, in Siloam Springs v. Thompson, 41 Ark. 456, that under the Arkansas act of March 19th, 1881, the county court could not grant licenses to sell liquor in any township or city ward in the county unless at the previous general election there was a majority vote "for license" both in the county township or ward in which it was applied for, and that where there was no vote at all on the question, no license could be granted. See State v. Moody, 95 N. C. 656.

Same—Bottler's License.—It is said in Lutz's Application, 3 Pa. County Court 127, that the court of quarter sessions has no authority to grant a bottler's license.

Granting License When Concluded.—It is said in Ex parte Persons, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 655, that the question whether the commissioners will grant a tavern license is open until a resolution is entered on their minutes as provided by statute.

1. State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumter County, 22 Fla. 1. See State v. Justices, 15 Ga. 408.

2. See infra, JUDICIAL CONTROL OF DISCRETION; REVIEW; APPEAL etc.

3. Ex parte Levy, 43 Ark. 42; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 550; Ex parte Whittington, 34 Ark. 394; Batters v. Dunning, 49 Conn. 479; Wiggins v. Varner, 67 Ga. 583; People v. Norton, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 477; Ex parte Persons, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 655; Muller v. Buncomb Co. Commrs., 89 N. C. 171; Attorney-General v. Justices of Guilford, 5 Ired. (N. C.) 315; Leister's Appeal (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 387; Morris's Licenses, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 307; Chester's Licenses, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 304; Wayne's Licenses, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 301; Licenses of Frey, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 93; Lycoming Licenses, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 90; Beaver's Licenses, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 56; Conroy's Licenses, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 52; Mercer's License Applications, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 43; Northumberland Licenses, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 660; Kistler's Licenses, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 604; Meredith's Licenses, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 82; Lelling's Licenses, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 76; Severn's Licenses, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 75; Smith's Licenses, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 74; Application of Keifer, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 40; Bourjohn's Application, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 33; Re License Applications, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 30, 603; Justin's Application, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 22; King's Application, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 17; Ex parte Lester, 77 Va. 663; Ailstock v. Page, 77 Va. 386; Leighton v. Maury, 76 Va. 865; Ex parte Yeager, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 655.

The Connecticut Act of 1881 provides that the county commissioners of each county shall, upon the recommendation of the selectmen of the town where the business is to be carried on, license suitable persons to sell intoxicating liquors in suitable places in said county. Batters v. Dunning, 49 Conn. 479. In which case it was held that under this act the commissioners have a discretion to grant or refuse licenses to persons, regulated by the selectmen, and that having this discretion the exercise of their judgment in the matter is final, and cannot be controlled by mandamus.

The Georgia Act providing for an application for a liquor license upon written consent of two thirds of the freeholders of a particular county, is said in Wiggins v. Varner, 67 Ga. 583, not to divest the ordinary of the discretion, under the Georgia Code to grant or refuse the license.

The Pennsylvania Doctrine.—It is said in Leister's Appeal (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 387, to be a proper exercise of the discretionary power of the court of quarter sessions in the granting of liquor licenses, to refuse such a license in a case where but fourteen people signed a petition for the license, and over two hundred signed a remonstrance against it, and the applicant had been refused a license a year before for the violation of the liquor law; also in a case where the court knew that the applicant had violated the liquor law the preceding year.

The Pennsylvania act of March 22d, 1867, providing that, on application for license to sell intoxicating drinks, it shall be lawful for the court to hear petitions in favor of and remonstrances against the application, "and in all cases to refuse the same whenever, in the opinion of the said court, having due regard to the number and character of the petitioners for and against such application, such license is not necessary for the accommodation of the public and entertainment of strangers and travellers," vests in the court a sound judicial discretion to be exercised in accordance with the law, and guided by the evidence prescribed by the law-making power; and the necessity for a license is to be determined, in great part, by the sentiment of the locality as expressed in the petitions and remonstrances presented to the court. King's Application, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 17. See also, as to the nature and exercise of the discretion of the court. Justin's Application, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 22; Re License Applications, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 30; Bourjohn's Application, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 33. And compare, as to the weight to be given to petitions, remonstrances, etc.

Morris's License, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 307; Chester Licenses, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 304; Wayne Licenses, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 301; License of Frey, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 93; Lyecoming Licenses, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 90; Beaver Licenses, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 56; Conroy's Application, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 52; Mercer License Application, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 43; Northumberland License, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 660; Kistler's Licenses, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 604; License Application, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 603; Meredith's License, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 82; Lelling's License, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 76; Severn's License, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 75; Smith's License, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 74; Application of Keifer, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 40.

The Virginia Act of 1882, regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, confers upon the county courts a discretion to grant or refuse license to sell liquors, not conferred by the former act; therefore an applicant who appears to have brought himself within the rule which, under the former law, would have entitled him to a license as of right, and a license is granted by the court, such exercise of discretion cannot be interfered with by the circuit court at the instance of a contestant, and no prohibition will issue to restrain such interference on the part of the circuit court by supersedas and writ of error. Ailstock v. Page, 77 Va. 386. See Ex parte Yeager, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 655.

It is otherwise, however, where the license is refused. The discretion to be exercised by the court is not an arbitrary discretion. Ex parte Lester, 77 Va. 663.

"May" and "shall"—Under the North Carolina Code providing that county commissioners "shall grant" license "to all properly qualified applicants," it was held that in the exercise of a sound discretion the commissioners could refuse a license even to an appli-body does not act solely as judicial officers,¹ and while they have a discretion, it is a judicial and not an arbitrary discretion.²

d. BY WHOM GRANTED.—License to traffic in intoxicating liquors may be granted under the various statutes by judicial officers,³ municipal and ministerial officers,⁴ cant properly qualified. Muller v. Buncomb Co. Commrs., 89 N. C. 171.

The Virginia act of March, 1882, amending the act of March, 1880, and substituting "may" for "shall," has been said not to remit applicants to sell liquor to the court's arbitrary discretion. The words "may grant the license" mean the court must grant it in a proper case. Ex parte Lester, 77 Va. 663.

The supreme court of Virginia say, in the case of Leighton v. Maury, 76 Va. 865, that the statute of Virginia relating to the granting of licenses providing that the county court "shall grant the license" if the applicant brings himself within the requirements, and that the circuit court "may grant the license," the words "may grant the license" mean that the circuit court shall have the jurisdiction to do so, and must do so, if the applicant brings himself within the requirements, and they confer no arbitrary discretion, but a sound judicial discretion, subject to move as in other cases provided by act 1873. p. 1136, §§ 2-3.

1. People v. Norton, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 477.

It has been said that under the New York excise law, the justices who are charged with the granting of licenses have a discretion, but that their duties are so plainly defined that in case they disregard them they are liable to indictment. People v. Norton, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 477.

2. Louisville v. Kean, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 9.

The County Court having the discretion to grant or refuse to grant a license to sell intoxicating liquors in a particular locality, having licensed some applicants, may not arbitrarily refuse others in the same locality, who are of good moral character and comply with the statute. Ex parte Levy, 43 Ark. 42; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 550.

The Justices of the County Court, in North Carolina, are not bound to grant a license to retail spirituous liquors to every one who proves himself of good moral character; nor have they, on the other hand, the arbitrary power to refuse, at their will, all applicants for license who have the qualifications required by the statute. Attorney-General v. Justices of Guilford, 5 Ired. (N. C.) 315.

They have the right to exercise only a sound legal discretion, referring itself to the wants and conveniences of the people, to the particular location in which the retailing is to be carried on, and to the number of retailers that may be required for the public accommodation. Attorney-General v. Justices of Guilford, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 315.

Although a person complies with the provisions of the statute relative to the granting of a license to keep a dram shop, he cannot of right demand the license, the power of granting it being a matter of discretion vested in the county court. State v. Holt County Court, 39 Mo. 521.

3. State v. Brandon, 28 Ark. 410; Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284; Austin v. State, 10 Mo. 591; O'Driscoll v. Viard, 2 Bay (S. C.) 316; Candlish v. Simpson, 1 B. & S. 357.

Druggist's Permit.—The legislature has the power, under the Kansas constitution, to cast upon the person holding the office of judge of the probate court the duty of issuing permits or licenses for the sale of liquor, as provided in ch. 128 of the law of 1881.

4. See Com. v. Voorhies, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 361; Leymon v. Peyton, 64 Miss. 161; State v. Bayonne, 42 N. J. L. (13 Vr.) 114; Com. v. Mueller, 81* Pa. St. 127.

In State v. Bayonne, 42 N. J. L. (13 Vr.) 114, the charter of a city gave the common council power to pass ordinances to license and regulate or prohibit inns or taverns, restaurants and beer saloons, the court held that only the common council and not the mayor could grant a license, and that only beer saloons could be licensed, and that an ordinance authorizing the license of a sale of beer at picnics is void.

License by County Treasurer.—Under the Pennsylvania act of 1875, a county treasurer is prohibited from issuing a and by excise commissioners.¹

e. GROUNDS OF GRANTING OR REFUSING.—It has been said that where, from the evidence of personal knowledge or inspection, the body empowered with granting licenses is fully satisfied that there has been a sufficient number of licenses already granted in the locality, it is their duty not to grant others,² and an applicant's former wilful violation of the liquor laws, coupled with a liquor license when the local option law is operative, and a seller cannot justify a sale under such a license. Com. v. Mueller, 81* Pa. St. 127.

License by Supervisor — Aiding in Call of Election.—The supreme court of Mississippi say, in the case of Lemon v. Peyton, 64 Miss. 161, that a supervisor, who canvasses for or signs a petition for an election under the local option law of Mississippi, is not thereby disqualified from acting on such petition, in his official capacity in pursuance of the terms of the law. The interest which disqualifies is pecuniary, not political.

1. People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521; People v. Gates, 56 N. Y. 387; Board of Excise of Ontario v. Garlinghouse, 45 N. Y. 249; Cronin v. Gundy, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 520; Comms. of Excise of Cattaraugus Co. v. Wiley, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 427.

Appointment of Excise Commissioners.—Commissioners of excise cannot be constituted by merely oral appointment, or relieve themselves from the duties of the office, save in one of the ways designated by the statute. People ex rel. Babcock v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521.

Under New York act, 1870, "regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors," and prescribing the manner of appointment of commissioners of excise for cities (Laws 1870, ch. 175, § 2), the same methods are to be pursued in subsequent as upon the first appointment under the act, i. e., in all cities, except the cities of New York and Brooklyn, the appointments are to be made by the mayor of the city alone; and in those cities, by the mayor and board of aldermen in the manner directed. People v. Gates, 56 N. Y. 387.

Same — Bond — Commissioners of excise failing to have their bond approved, as they are required to do by the statute, do not ipso facto vacate their office, but leave it to be declared forfeited on proper proceedings. Cronin

v. Gundy, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 520. See Foot v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 399.

Thus in Cronin v. Stoddard, 97 N. Y. 271, where, because of the failure of an excise commissioner to procure the approval of the supervisor to the bond presented by him, no one was selected to fill the supposed vacancy, the court held that a license signed by the person so selected and by one of the three commissioners was no defence to an action to recover a penalty for selling liquor without a license.

Transfer of Office. — The commissioners of excise cannot transfer their office or relieve themselves from their duties, except in the way designated by statute. People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521 reversing 8 Hun (N. Y.) 577.

Majority of Board. — Two of the commissioners of excise may act in the absence of the third, if he had notice of the time and place of meeting. People ex rel. Kimball v. Haughton, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 558.

Constitution of Board. — The supervisor may, in his discretion, associate more than two justices with himself as commissioners, and a license signed by a majority present is valid. Palmer v. Doney, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 346; Orvis v. Thompson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 500.

Legality of License. — A license is illegal for want of authority to grant, that is, if granted by two commissioners without the supervisor, or by several, one of whom is not a commissioner, is no defence to an action for the penalty. Palmer v. Doney, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 346. And a license granted by one who has not even apparent authority or color of title to act as an excise commissioner, furnishes no defence to an action for a penalty. A person desiring to enjoy the privileges afforded by the act must see to it that they are granted by one duly authorized or submit to the penalty prescribed. Cronin v. Stoddard, 97 N. Y. 271.

2. Northumberland Licenses, 2 Pa. County Ct. 660.

number of remonstrances, is thought to be sufficient reason for refusing a license;¹ but it seems that a judge is not justified in refusing a license merely because he does not think it necessary to license a hotel to sell liquors.² The fact that there are covenants in deeds to premises prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on such premises will not prevent the granting of licenses for such sale;³ neither will the fact that a building is being used part of the time as a place of public amusement.⁴ A license will not be refused on account of general disorder in the neighborhood when the applicant was in no way connected therewith or responsible therefor;⁵ and it has been said that a refusal to take out an excise license for the sale of spirits is not a sufficient legal ground for refusing a license for the sale of beer.⁶

f. TIME OF GRANTING; TERM OF COURT.—Under some statutes a license to sell intoxicating liquors can be granted only at designated terms of court;⁷ and by others such license is of no validity if granted before the delivery to the town treasurer of the bond prescribed by the statute.⁸

g. INDICTMENT AGAINST COMMISSIONERS.—The persons charged with the duty of granting licenses, may under some of the statutes be indicted as for a misdemeanor where they knowingly

1. Leister's Appeal (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 387; s. c., 20 Wk. Notes Cases, 224.

Withholding License Because of Former Violation.—It is said by the supreme court of Indiana, in Golden v. Bingham, 61 Ind. 108, that under the Indiana statute of 1873 the fact that one holding a liquor license had been convicted of a violation thereof was no ground for refusing him a license under 1 Ind. Rev. Stat. 1869.

Same — Repeated Violations.—Although a license should not be withheld for a single previous violation of the laws by the applicant, repeated violations, as by selling on Sunday, are ground for such refusal. Bourjohn's Application, 2 Pa. County Ct. 33; Application of Meitzler, 2 Pa. County Ct. 37. See also Rutherford's License, 2 Pa. County Ct. 78; Meredith's License, 2 Pa. County Ct. 82.

2. Leister's Appeal (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 387; s. c., 20 Wk. Notes Cases, 224.

Licensing Hotel.—It is not the necessity of the house for the public accommodations, as a hotel or eating house, but the necessity for a license to sell intoxicating drinks, that is to control the action of the court. Mercer License Applications, 3 Pa. County Ct. 43; Beaver Licenses, 3 Pa. County Ct. 56; King's Application, 2 Pa. County

Ct. 17. Compare Justin's Application, 2 Pa. County Ct. 22.

An application for license for a restaurant, which the petitioner shows should furnish accommodation for women, will be refused under the Pennsylvania law unless the proper and decent facilities therefor are furnished. Morris License, 2 Pa. County Ct. 79; s. c., 3 Pa. County Ct. 307.

3. State v. Busby, 44 N. J. L. (15 Vr.) 627.

4. People ex rel. Gillaine v. Haughton, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 135.

5. Helling's License, 2 Pa. County Ct. 76.

6. Queen v. Sylvester, 2 B. & S. 322.

7. State v. Kennedy, 1 Ala. 31.

In the case of Brown v. Nicholson, 5 C. B., N. S. 468, a license was granted by the justice of the boroughs of M,—a place having a separate commission of the peace, but no separate court of quarter sessions,—at a licensing meeting held on the 7th of September which had been duly appointed by them as they had been accustomed to do, the court held that the license so granted was valid, notwithstanding that the justice of the county (who had concurrent jurisdiction in M) had previously appointed a licensing meeting for the 8th.

8. In re Ricker, 32 Me. 37 and wilfully grant licenses to sell liquor in violation of the law.¹ They are not judicial officers, and are not entitled to the protection of such officers. And the general principle is that when the common law or statute forbids the doing of a thing, the doing of it wilfully is indictable though the motive is not corrupt.² But an indictment which simply charges such officers with having unlawfully granted a dram-shop license, and alleges that they were then the officers charged with such duty; is insufficient; it should aver that the license was granted by them as such officers, and that the act was done wilfully, knowingly, and from an improper motive.³

h. PETITION.—A presentation of a petition according to the statute is an indispensable prerequisite to the license.⁴

(1) Oath or Affidavit of Petitioner.—Where an affidavit is required of the petitioner, it is a necessary prerequisite to the issuance of the license, and if it is omitted, and material parts of the statement are omitted, the license will be void.⁵ An applicant

1. See State v. Kite, 81 Mo. 97; People v. Worsley, 1 N. Y. Supp. 748; People v. Jones, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 311; People v. Norton, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 477.

The commissioners of excise in New York who have power to grant licenses to keep spirituous liquors for sale may be indicted for granting licenses to persons not possessing the qualifications contained in the statute. But they are not liable for a mere error of judgment. People v. Norton, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 477.

Same — Sufficiency of Evidence.—It is said in the case of People v. Worsley, 1 N. Y. Supp. 748, on an indictment of excise commissioners for misdemeanor in granting a license to sell liquor to be drunk on the licensee's premises, knowing that he was not able to keep an inn, and had not the necessary accommodations for travellers, in violation of the excise law, where it appears that the licensee had no such accommodation for travellers, and there is evidence from which the jury might find that defendants had entirely failed in their official duty to ascertain the licensee's disability, and want of accommodation before issuing the license, the evidence is sufficient to sustain conviction.

But on an indictment against commissioners of excise, for granting a license, illegal proof of the mere granting of a license, which had before never been granted, does not establish an offence, but the jury must be able to say from the evidence that the defendant knew at the time that it was not a proper case for a license under the statute, and nevertheless granted it, in wilful disregard of the statute. People v. Jones, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 311.

2. People v. Norton, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 477.

3. State v. Kite, 81 Mo. 97.

It is said under the Missouri Rev. Stat., 1879, § 5442, making it a misdemeanor for county courts to grant a liquor license save on the petition of citizens, it is not necessary in an indictment charging defendants with having unlawfully granted a license to allege that it was granted wilfully and knowingly. State v. Kite, 81 Mo. 97.

4. Mere informalities in a petition for a license present no valid reason for its issuance. Hearn v. Brogan, 64 Miss. 334.

The alteration of a petition for a liquor license, which consists of erasing the name of the person to whom the registered voters supposed that the license was to issue, and substituting the name of another person, affords a sufficient ground for refusing a license to the person thus substituted. Polk County Commissioners v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 578.

5. Russell v. State, 77 Ala. 89. See State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumpter County, 22 Fla. 1; Floyd v. Commissioners of Eatonton, 14 Ga. 354; Hall v. State, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 574.

Affidavit of Applicant.—The statutory affidavit required of a person applying for a license to retail spirituous liquors (Sess. Acts 1882-3, pp. 36-7) must state, among other things, making oath to a petition for a permit to sell liquors should know of his own knowledge that the petitioners have signed; and should not base his affidavit of the absence of fraud, bribery, or deception, upon the statement of others whom he may have procured to get the names for him.¹

(2) Statement as to Liquors.—Where the statute prohibits the sale of liquors in less than a given quantity, without first having obtained a license, a petition for a license to retail intoxicating liquors is not bad for failing to state what quantity the applicant desires to sell.²

(3) Description of Premises.—Where the statute requires the applicant for license, to give a description of the premises where the business is to be carried on, a description of the premises so reasonably full and certain as to point out the exact location thereof is sufficient.³

(4) Statement as to Qualification of Petitioner.—A petition for a license to sell liquors is not insufficient under the statute because it fails to state that the applicant is a moral person;⁴ but a petition which fails to recommend the petitioner to be of "good repute" as is required by statute is insufficient.⁵

that the applicant will not knowingly sell or give away vinous or spirituous liquors to any person of known intemperate habits, and will not keep his house open on Sunday for the purpose of carrying on the business; and if the affidavit omits these statements, it does not authorize the issue of a license, and the license itself is void. Russell v. State, 77 Ala. 89.

The Georgia act of January 22nd, 1852, granted power to certain commissioners to issue licenses for the retail of spirituous liquors, provided the applicant be required to take the oath required by the general law of the State. Held, that this gave them impliedly power to require the clerk of the applicant to take a similar oath. Floyd v. Commissioners of Eatonton, 14 Ga. 354; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 559.

The statutory oath required of a liquor seller not to "mix or adulterate with any substance whatever," is not complied with by an oath not to "mix or adulterate with any poisonous substance whatever." Hall v. State, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 574.

1. State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumter County, 22 Fla. 1.

2. Hearn v. Brogan, 64 Miss. 334. See State v. Jefferson County Commissioners, 20 Fla. 425.

It is said in the case of State v. Jefferson County Commissioners, 20 Fla. 425, that under the Florida act of March 3rd, 1883, to regulate the sale of wine, beer, providing that an applicant for a license shall present a petition asking the board of county commissioners to grant the right "to sell such liquors, wines or beer," a petition asking for a license "to sell spirituous or intoxicating liquors, wines and beer," is a good and sufficient form under the application of the act.

3. Murphy v. Monroe County Commissioners, 73 Ind. 483. See Eslinger v. East, 100 Ind. 434; State v. Reingardt, 46 N. J. L. (17 Vr.) 337.

An application for license to sell liquor at "No 1005 Elizabeth avenue, the corner of Spring street, in said city," sufficiently designates the place. State v. Reingardt, 46 N. J. L. (17 Vr.) 337.

Evidence.—Upon an application for license to sell liquors, evidence showing the location of the proposed place of business, with reference to the court house, a college and public school, and that it is on a street necessarily much used by school children, is admissible. Eslinger v. East, 100 Ind. 434.

4. Hearn v. Brogan, 64 Miss. 334.

5. McGee v. Beall, 63 Miss. 455; McCreary v. Rhodes, 63 Miss. 308; Loeb v. Duncan, 63 Miss. 89; Corbett v. Duncan, 63 Miss. 84.

"Good Repute."—Under the Mississippi Code requiring an applicant for a license to retail liquor to produce

(5) Signing.—Where a statute requires that a license to sell intoxicating liquor can only be granted upon the petition of a majority of the qualified voters or of resident land-holders, such a petition is a prerequisite to the granting of the license to sell intoxicating liquor.¹ The personal fitness of the party to be lia petition recommending him as of "good reputation, and a sober and suitable person to receive such license," a petition is insufficient which omits the representation concerning "good reputation." McCreary v. Rhodes, 63 Miss. 308; Loeb v. Duncan, 63 Miss. 89; Corbett v. Duncan, 63 Miss. 84.

Nor is a petition sufficient which avers that a certain firm is of good reputation, no further mention being made of the reputation of the individual members of the firm. Loeb v. Duncan, 63 Miss. 89.

Under Mississippi Code of 1880, § 1099, a license granted without it being shown to the board, by the petition or otherwise, that the petitioner is a resident of the county in which he presents his application, is invalid. And such objection, being a jurisdictional one, may be raised for the first time in this court, in a case properly brought here. McGee v. Beall, 63 Miss. 455.

Section 2 of the 3 & 4 Vict., ch. 61, which enacts "that every applicant for a license to retail beer shall produce to the officer of excise a certificate from an overseer that he is the real resident of the house in which he shall apply to be licensed," is directory only, and therefore a license may be valid, notwithstanding the certificate omits to state that the applicant is such householder. Thompson v. Harvey, 4 Hurl. & Nor. 254.

A man who was living in a state of concubinage with a woman, by whom he had had three illegitimate children, procured a certificate from his neighbors that he was a person of good character, and with it obtained a license to sell beer to be drunk on the premises. Held, that he was not liable to conviction, under § 6 of 3 & 4 Vict., ch. 61, for using a certificate for obtaining such license, knowing it to be false. Leader v. Yell, 16 C. B. (N. S.) 584.

1. See Rogers v. Hahn, 63 Miss. 578; Corbett v. Duncan, 63 Miss. 84; House v. State, 41 Miss. 737; State v. Meyers, 80 Mo. 601; State v. Weber, 20 Neb. 467; O'Rourke v. People, 5 T. & C. (N. Y.) 496.

Assent of Taxpayers.—Under the Missouri statute requiring the assent of two-thirds of the tax payers, etc., to the keeping of a dram shop, it has been held that an act requires the assent of two thirds only of the tax payers of the block or square wherein the dram shop is to be kept, and that, if the city contains two thousand five hundred or more inhabitants, not two thirds of the tax payers of the city. State v. Meyers, 80 Mo. 601.

Majority of Legal Voters — Requisites of Record.—It is said in Rogers v. Hahn, 63 Miss. 578, that under a law prohibiting the granting of a license, unless the petition therefor contains a majority of the names of all the legal voters within the city, town or district for which the license is sought exclusive of all names appearing on the counter petition, if the records of the proceedings granting such license fail to show affirmatively that the petition therefor contained the requisite majority, the supreme court will, upon appeal, reverse the action of the authorities, in granting the license.

Objections and Counter Petitions.—The same court say, in Corbett v. Duncan, 63 Miss. 84, that under the Mississippi Code, where it is sought to prevent the issuance of any license for the period of twelve months, the petition must be signed by a majority of the legal voters within the supervisor's district or incorporated town, but where it is sought to prevent the issuance of such a license as to a particular individual, a single voter may intervene by counter petition for the purpose of raising any valid objection to its issuance.

The presentation to the board of trustees of an incorporated village, or filing in the office of the village clerk of a petition signed by not less than thirty of the resident freeholders of such village, applying for a license to the person or persons therein named to sell malt, spirituous and vinous liquors in said village, is an indispensable condition precedent in Nebraska to the issuance of such license. State ex rel. Conway v. Weber, 20 Neb. 467.

The requirement of a petition of freeholders, under New York Laws

censed is an essential consideration in the mind of the voter at the time of signing the petition.¹ Under the various statutes regulating the granting of license for the sale of intoxicating liquors, the petition of the applicant is required to be signed by adult residents,² by the registered voters,³ or by the reputable freeholders of the community in which the business is to be carried on.⁴ The signatures to the petition must be signed by the persons themselves in ink,⁵ it not being sufficient that the names be signed by another or by a cross as a mark.⁶

of 1857, ch. 628, § 6, does not apply to licenses to sell ale and beer, granted to one not an inn keeper. O'Rourke v. People, 5 T. & C. (N. Y.) 496; s. c., 3 Hun (N. Y.) 225; Opin. of Attys. Gen. 458. But it seems that this act was repealed by the act of 1870. People v. Smith, 69 N. Y. 175; reversing Smith v. People, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 446.

1. Polk Co. v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 578.

Recommendation of Householdors.—An act requiring the applicant for a liquor license to secure a recommendation from a majority of the householders in the precinct is not inoperative because it provides no way of obtaining such a recommendation. Jones v. Hilliard, 69 Ala. 300.

It is said by the United States circuit court, in In re Hoover, 30 Fed. Rep. 51, that the act of Georgia requiring an applicant for a license to present the written consent of ten of the nearest bona fide residents, five of whom shall be freeholders, and not applying to municipal corporations, is not an unconstitutional discrimination against the rural population.

2. The petition to the county court provided for by the Arkansas act of March 2nd, 1885, may be signed by adult females as well as males; and on trial for violation of the act the judgment of the county court that the petitioners were a majority of the adult residents within, etc., cannot be impeached. Blackwell v. State, 36 Ark. 178.

3. See State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumter Co., 22 Fla. 1; Hearn v. Brogan, 64 Miss. 334; State v. Reinhardt, 46 N. J. L. (17 Vr.) 337.

Signing by Applicant.—It is said that an applicant, if a registered voter, has a right to sign his name as one of the petitioners for a permit to sell liquor, and be counted as such in making the majority required by statute. State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumter Co., 22 Fla. 1; Hearn v. Brogan, 64 Miss. 334.

Signing a recommendation for license of an inn or a tavern does not disqualify a person from signing a recommendation for beer license. State v. Reinhardt, 46 N. J. L. (17 Vr.) 337.

4. Thus it is said by the supreme court of New Jersey in the case of State, Austin v. Atlantic City, 48 N. J. L. (19 Vr.) 118, that a deed of five acres of marsh land to four hundred and sixty persons for a single consideration, for the purpose of enabling them to sign recommendations for inn and tavern licenses, is fraudulent, and the grantees are not "reputable" freeholders within the words and intent of the New Jersey statute. The court say in this case that "persons who will lend themselves to such a scheme are not the reputable freeholders whose certificate will be received by any legal tribunal entrusted with the responsible duty of controlling the sale of intoxicating drinks, as satisfactory recommendation of good repute for honesty and temperance of one who seeks a license to keep an inn and tavern. A like attempt was made to impose on the excise board of the city of Elizabeth, and was condemned by this court in State, ex rel. Smith v. Elizabeth, 46 N. J. L. (17 Vr.) 312.

5. Signatures in lead pencil are not sufficient. Smith's Appeal, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 314.

6. Grant's License, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 87. Faulkner's License, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 86. Compare Ex parte Miller, 49 Ark. 18.

Signing by Making Mark.—In Ex parte Miller, 49 Ark. 18, some of the signatures to a petition presented to a county court for the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors within a certain district were by mark, not attested by a witness. The petitioners tendered evidence that these signatures were genuine, and that the persons who wrote the names of the signers by mark were authorized to do so; the court held that under Mansf. Dig. Ark., § 6344, which defines a signature or prescription to "include a mark when the person cannot write his name being written near it, and witnessed by a person who writes his own name as a witness;" evidence was competent, the statute intending the signature by mark not to be taken as prima facie genuine, without other proof of signing, and not that such proof should be exclusive. In Watson v. Billings, 38 Ark. 278. it is said by MR. JUSTICE EAKIN, that since the adoption of the code. the mark of one who cannot write is not to be considered a signature or subscription, unless the person writing his name writes his own name as a witness; this only means that such a signature is not to be prima facie evidence without other proof of signing.

Signature of Witness.—Witnesses to a petition for a permit to sell liquor are not required to subscribe or attest the signatures in Florida. State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumpter Co., 22 Fla. 1.

Sufficiency and Effect of Signature.—A petition for a license signed by less than the majority of voters of the district was denied. At the ensuing regular meeting an additional number of names, thus making a majority, was affixed to the original petition on file and the whole duly authenticated and published. Held, that though courts would consider such signing of a paper already on file in judicial proceedings irregular, yet in transacting the ordinary business of the community by plain people in a simple manner the strict rules of courts should not be enforced, no fraud being imputed. And if the petitioner shows that a majority have expressed themselves it is of no consequence whether the additional names are signed to the original or to an additional petition of the same import. State v. Jefferson Co. Comms., 20 Fla. 425.

Under Missouri Revised Statutes of 1879, §§ 5438, 5442, as amended by the act of the general assembly of March 24th, 1883 (acts, pp. 87, 88), the petition for a dram shop license, where the dram shop is to be kept in a block or square of a city containing 2,500 inhabitants or more, signed by two thirds of the assessed tax paying citizens of said block or square, is sufficient in respect to such signers, and the law being otherwise complied with by the applicant for the license, it is obligatory on the county court to issue it. State ex rel. Fitzpatrick v. Meyers, 80 Mo. 601.

Signatures Procured After Presentation.—A petition for a license which after presentation receives signatures, there not being before its presentation enough to justify the issue of a license based on it, although irregular, will not be declared incorporative. Such proceedings need not be conducted with the strict accuracy required by courts. State v. Jefferson County Comms., 20 Fla. 425.

Same.—Withdrawal of the name of a signer of a recommendation for a license after it has been presented to the excise board cannot, without the board's consent, divest it of jurisdiction. State v. Reingardt, 46 N. J. L. (17 Vr.) 337.

Dram Shop Keeper's License.—Effect.—On the trial of an indictment for selling intoxicating liquor without a dram shop keeper's license, a license as such, covering the time of the alleged sales, is a complete defence, and the State cannot show that the petition of the tax payers, upon which the license was granted, did not contain the requisite number of signers. State v. Evans, 83 Mo. 319.

Judicial Ascertainment of Validity and Effect of Signatures.—An applicant for a liquor license circulated different petitions. Held, that in determining whether a sufficient number of voters had signified their assent, the petitions could not be treated as one petition. Collins v. Barrier, 64 Miss. 21.

The sole duty of the county court is to satisfy itself by the best modes fairly practical that the petition contains the names of a majority of the inhabitants. Williams v. Citizens, 40 Ark. 290.

Under Missouri acts, 1883, p. 86, requiring a petition for a dram shop license to be signed by a majority of the assessed taxpaying citizens, to be presented as a condition precedent to the exercise of the power to grant a license in a city, it is incumbent on the county court, in determining whether the petition is signed by a majority of the assessed tax payers, to include married or single women who reside in the city and own property in their own right, and who are assessed thereon at the last assessment; to count minors resident in the city who have guardians and own property; but not to count citizens residing outside of the city, though owning property therein regularly assessed. State ex rel. McCampbell v. Howard County Court, 90 Mo. 593.

Under Missouri statute of 1885, making it unlawful for any county court in the State, or clerk thereof in vaca-

(6) Notice of Petition or Application.—Under most if not all the laws regulating the granting of license to traffic in intoxicating liquors, an applicant for a license is required to give notice thereof.¹

i. REMONSTRANCE.—One who would resist the granting of a licence to sell intoxicating liquors must follow the statute, he must file a remonstrance and do the other things provided for by the statute, otherwise he cannot be heard;² and where such party fails to file such remonstrance with the proper officers upon consideration of the matter in the court, he cannot be permitted to appear by an attorney and resist the application.³ Any remonstrance against the granting of a petition for a license to sell intoxicating liquors must be filed before the body granting such license, and before whom the petition is pending.⁴ Where it is tion, to grant any license to keep a dram shop in any town or city containing two thousand five hundred inhabitants, or more, until a majority of the assessed taxpaying citizens shall sign a petition asking for such license. Held, (1) that it is incumbent on the county court, in determining whether such petition has been signed by a majority of the tax payers, to count married or single women who resided in the city or town, and owned property in their own right, and who are assessed thereon at the last assessment; (2) to count minors resident of the city who have guardians, and who own property; and (3) that citizens residing outside of the city, though owning property in the city, and regularly assessed, should not be counted. State v. Howard County Court, 90 Mo. 593.

1. Blackwell v. State, 36 Ark. 178; Polk County v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 578; Pelton v. Drummond, 21 Neb. 492. See State ex rel. Edwards v. Sumter County, 22 Fla. 1; Hornaday v. State, 43 Ind. 306.

In the publication of the petition for a permit to sell liquor, the omission to publish the marks of a few petitioners whose names are published is immaterial, in the absence of improper motive. State, Edwards v. Sumter County, 22 Fla. 1.

Whether proper notice by publication has been given by an applicant for license under the statute cannot be enquired into in a prosecution against him for retailing intoxicating liquor without a license. Under that act no one but the applicant need sign his petition for a license. Hornaday v. State, 43 Ind. 306.

Publication of Affidavit.—The Florida statute does not require the publication of the affidavit to the petition named therein, but only of "the petition and the names and marks thereto attached." Polk County v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 578.

Applications for Licenses, and Proceedings Thereon.—Under a statutory provision that "no action shall be taken" upon an application for a license to sell intoxicating liquors "until at least two weeks' notice of the filing of the same has been given by publication," etc. (Neb. Comp. Stat. ch. 50, § 2), the board to which such application is to be made has no authority, before the expiration of the two weeks, even to adjourn the hearing of the application to a day after such expiration. Pelton v. Drummond, 21 Neb. 492.

2. Ex parte Miller, 98 Ind. 451.

Change of Place of Conducting Business.—In Lester v. Price, 83 Va. 648, it is said that under the provisions of the Virginia Code which relate to changing licenses from one place to another, an application to the county court to have a license to keep a bar room at one place, changed, a license to keep a bar room at another place, is such an application that any person who should feel that he would be aggrieved by the granting of such application is entitled to have himself entertained as a defendant and to defend and contest the same.

3. Ex parte Miller, 98 Ind. 451.

4. Miller v. Wade, 58 Ind. 91.

Withdrawal of Remonstrance.—On appeal to the circuit court from the action by a board of commissioners provided by statute that the petition for a license to sell intoxicating liquors shall lie over for a definite time before being acted upon, counter petitions may be presented at any time before the granting of the license, even though after the time has expired for which the petition is required to lie over.¹ A remonstrance against granting an application for a liquor license under some statutes, may be made on the ground of the applicant's immorality or of his unfitness otherwise to be entrusted with the sale of liquor.²

j. PROCEEDINGS ON APPLICATION.—It is provided in some statutes that on application for a license to sell intoxicating liquors when a remonstrance against the issue of such license is filed, a day shall be appointed for hearing the case, and that a license may not be issued unless this is done, and an opportunity for an investigation afforded.³ Where the remonstrance is passed upon on a petition for such license, that court has no power on the withdrawal of a remonstrance made before such a board to hold a party to appear and file a remonstrance. Miller v. Wade, 58 Ind. 91. See Ex parte Miller, 98 Ind. 451.

1. Rogers v. Hahn, 63 Miss. 578.

Right to Remonstrate—When Lost.—When the remonstrance provided for by the statute against the granting of license to sell intoxicating liquors "by any voter of said township," the remonstrance must be filed before the party making it has ceased to be a voter of the township or district. List v. Padgett, 96 Ind. 126.

2. Immorality of Applicant.—When the immorality or other unfitness of an applicant are made the grounds of a remonstrance against the application for a license to sell liquors, such immorality or unfitness should be set forth with such reasonable certainty as will advise him of the charges against him. Grummon v. Holmes, 76 Ind. 585.

Species of Immorality other than the habit of becoming intoxicated may be made the ground of a remonstrance against the applicant for license to sell intoxicating liquors under the Indiana statute of 1876, were properly set forth in such remonstrance. Grummon v. Holmes, 76 Ind. 585. Overruling Calder v. Sheppard, 61 Ind. 219.

Remonstrance—Verification.—A remonstrance against granting an application for a license to sell intoxicating liquors must be verified by an affidavit, or it will not be considered. Palmer's License, 3 Pa. County Ct. 314.

Remonstrance against granting license to keep inns and taverns may present special facts affecting the jurisdiction of the city council under the charter. State v. Atlantic City, 48 N. J. L. (19 Vr.) 118.

It has been said that under a statute which provides that no license to retail spirituous liquors shall be granted to any person within the township if a majority of the freeholders shall remonstrate against it. A general remonstrance against granting such license to any person is within the spirit of the statute, and on receiving it the officers charged with the duty of granting the licenses should refuse them. Woods v. Pratt, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 377.

Hotel Licenses—Unexpired Term—Remonstrance of Ejected Licensee.

—It would seem that under the Pennsylvania act of April 20th, 1858, the court of quarter sessions can grant a hotel license to any applicant for the unexpired term, notwithstanding the remonstrance of the owner of the original licenses who had been ejected from the premises. Teller's License, 2 Pa. County Ct. 235.

3. Clark v. State, 24 Neb. 263; State ex rel. Conway v. Weber, 20 Neb. 467; Steinkraus v. Hurlbert, 20 Neb. 519; State v. Reynolds, 18 Neb. 431; Vanderlip v. Derby, 19 Neb. 165.

Upon presentation of a remonstrance, it is the duty of the board to appoint a day for hearing the case, sufficiently advanced in the future to give reasonable opportunity to subpoena witnesses and make suitable preparations for trial. State v. Weber, 20 Neb. 467.

Where, as by the Nebraska statute, without objection on the part of the applicant such application is said to have waived any objections to the persons filing the remonstrance.¹ Where the statute requires that every applicant for a liquor license shall be "a fit person to be entrusted with the sale of intoxicating liquors," on application being made to obtain a license to retail liquors, and a remonstrance filed thereto on account of the alleged immorality and unfitness of the applicant, the burden is upon such applicant to prove his innocence.²

it is required that, on remonstrance against the issue of a license, a day for a hearing shall be appointed, the board is bound to grant a hearing and to fix a day in the future. In case of refusal, mandamus may issue. State v. Reynolds, 18 Neb. 431.

Where a remonstrance is filed with a village board against the issuance of a license to a particular applicant to sell intoxicating liquors, it is the duty of such board to set a time for the hearing of such remonstrance, and to grant the persons so remonstrating a reasonable time to produce their testimony. Clark v. State, 24 Neb. 263.

Upon the presentation to the board of trustees of an incorporated village of a petition for a license to sell liquors in said village, and the presentment of a protest or remonstrance against the issuance of the license, alleging that some of the persons signing were not the identical persons named in the body of the petition, and that certain other signers were not lawful residents, and still others were not lawful freeholders of the village; an adjournment from ten o'clock P.M. to nine o'clock A.M. the next day for a hearing of the remonstrance is not a reasonable time, and is a substantial denial of a hearing to the remonstrators. State v. Weber, 20 Neb. 467.

When after the presentation or filing of a petition for a license, an objection, protest or remonstrance against the issuance of such license, alleging that two of the thirty-two persons signing said petition are the identical persons named in the body of such petition as the persons to be licensed; that other two signers, naming them, are not lawful residents of said village; and that other two signers, also naming them, are not lawful freeholders of said village, was presented to and brought to the consideration of said board, it was the duty of such board to appoint a day for the hearing of the case. And the day so appointed should have been fixed sufficiently advanced in the future as to give a reasonable opportunity to subpoena witnesses and make suitable preparations for trial. State ex rel. Conway v. Weber, 20 Neb. 467.

It is said in Steinkraus v. Hurlbert, 20 Neb. 519, that where a remonstrance against the issuing of a license to a certain applicant is filed with the board, in which it is alleged that the applicant "within five or six months last passed, during which time he has run a saloon in Planeview, has been guilty of gross violation of the law under which he now asks for license," it is the duty of such board to set a day and hear the testimony to prove or disapprove the charge and render a decision thereon. Vanderlip v. Derby, 19 Neb. 165.

It is said in Reed's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 452, that under the Pennsylvania act of 1867 an application to the court of quarter sessions for a license to sell intoxicating drinks, the court is to hear petitions in addition to that of the applicant in favor of and remonstrances against the application; and in all cases to refuse the same whenever in the opinion of the court, having due regard to the number and character of the petitioners for and against such application, such license is not necessary for the accommodation of the public and entertainment of strangers and travelers; the petitions and remonstrances being for the sole purpose of determining with regard to the character of the applicant whether such license is or is not a matter of public notoriety.

1. Groscop v. Rainier, 111 Ind. 361.

2. Hill v. Perry, 82 Ind. 28; Stockwell v. Brant, 97 Ind. 474; Goodwin v. Smith, 72 Ind. 113; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 144. See Session v. Dixon, 5 B. & S. 758; Bodwell v. Redge, 1 Car. & P. 220; Smith v. Davies, 7 Car. & P. 307; Williams v. East India Co., 3 East 192; Ridgway v. Ewbank, 2 Moo. & R. 217.

Burden of Proof.—Whoever asserts a right dependent for its existence upon a negative, must establish the

k. JUDICIAL CONTROL AND DISCRETION.—(1) Mandamus.—Where an act regulating the granting of licenses to sell intoxicating liquors vests a discretion in a designated person or body empowered to grant such license, such person or body cannot be controlled in the honest exercise of such discretion;¹ but if such truth of that negative, and where a person becomes an applicant for a license to retail intoxicating liquors the burden is on him to prove that he is not in the habit of becoming intoxicated and is a fit person to sell intoxicating liquors; where these qualifications are made a prerequisite by the statute. Goodwin v. Smith, 72 Ind. 113; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 144.

Opinion of Witness.—Where upon a remonstrance to a petition the county board refuses to grant a license to sell intoxicating liquors in a less quantity than a quart, upon a trial of the case it is proper for a witness to testify that in his judgment the applicant was a man fit to be entrusted with the license. Stockwell v. Brant, 97 Ind. 474.

Unfitness of applicant may be proved by specific acts, yet the question is not one merely of general character; but the jury may judge whether the specific acts prove unfitness in the applicant. Stockwell v. Brant, 97 Ind. 474, in such a case the testimony, as to the conduct of persons who entered the saloon formerly kept by the applicant and going in and out thereof, is competent, although the former place was one where liquor was sold by the quart instead of the pint. Stockwell v. Brant, 97 Ind. 474.

Evidence—Surrounding Circumstances.—Where the circuit court certifies that it is not “fully specified that the place is suitable for a bar room and for retailing ardent spirits,” the same being certified by the county court and the testimony being conflicting, and it is contended by the remonstrant that the sale of ardent spirits at the place will injure the large and prosperous business of making charcoal in the vicinity and so be detrimental to the community, to which it is repeated by the applicant for a license that the legislature has adopted a system of measuring liquor, and that this policy ought not to be detained by the personal interests and private business of individuals, however extensive and important that interest and business may be. The court in determining this question may take into consideration all the circumstances whether of a general or limited nature. Leighton v. Maury, 76 Va. 865.

Opening and Closing Argument.—Where an application has been made for a license to retail intoxicating liquors and a remonstrance has been filed on account of the alleged immorality and unfitness of the applicant, the refusal of the court to award such applicant the opening and closing of the argument is error for which the judgment against him will be reversed. Hill v. Perry, 82 Ind. 28.

Findings—Verdict.—Where the jury found especially that an applicant for a liquor license, “by frequenting places of gambling, was an immoral man,” the law concludes that such immorality unfits the applicant to be entrusted with the sale of intoxicating liquors. Groscop v. Rainier, 111 Ind. 361.

It is said in Hill v. Perry, 82 Ind. 28, where an application is made to obtain a license to retail intoxicating liquors to which a remonstrance is filed on account of alleged immorality and other unfitness of the applicant, and upon such issue the jury returned a general verdict for the remonstrators with answers to interrogatories that the applicant is a resident of the State, is of proper age and not in the habit of becoming intoxicated, such facts so found are not inconsistent with the general verdict as that in effect finds that the applicant is an immoral man and unfit to be trusted with a license.

Rehearing.—After applications for and remonstrances against granting licenses have been dispose of at a term of the court, fixed upon as an annual license court, and the court is discharged sine die, rehearings will not be granted. License Applications, 2 Pa. County Ct. 140.

1. Ex parte Whittington, 34 Ark. 304; Batters v. Dunning, 49 Conn. 479; Crotty v. People, 3 Ill. App. 465; State v. Board of Commissioners, 45 Ind. 501; State v. Commissioners of Cass County, 12 Neb. 54; People v. Norton, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 477; In re Raudenbusch, 120 Pa. St. 328; Sights v. Yar- authorities, in the arbitrary exercise of their discretion, refuse without sufficient reason to issue a license to a suitable person, they will be compelled by mandamus to issue such license.¹ And if the county commissioners refuse to hear testimony they will be compelled to do so by mandamus.²

nall, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292. See Toole's Appeal, 90 Pa. St. 376.

Mandamus—Pennsylvania Doctrine.

—In In re Raudenbusch, 120 Pa. St. 328, in refusing a writ of mandamus, the court say the petitioner assumes that he is entitled, as a matter of right, to a license, upon complying with the provisions of the act of 1887, in the absence of any allegation that he is an improper person to be so licensed. This is the fallacy which underlies his cause, as well as the able argument of his learned counsel. He has no such absolute right, nor has any other man in the commonwealth. It is not needed to review the license legislation of this State for the last half century. That was thoroughly done by MR. JUSTICE AGNEW in Schlaudecker v. Marshall, 72 Pa. St. 200.

Same—Connecticut Doctrine.—It is said in Batters v. Dunning, 49 Conn. 479, that the discretion of the county commissioners to grant or refuse a license conferred by the Connecticut act of 1881, providing that the county commissioners of each county shall, upon the regulation of the selectmen of the town where the business is to be carried on, license suitable persons to sell intoxicating liquor in suitable places in said county, cannot be controlled by mandamus.

An application for mandamus against county commissioners to compel the issuance of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors, though answered as causes of refusal that the relator "had sold liquors to minors; had sold liquors on Sunday, and had kept a disorderly and gambling house, all within twelve months before the hearing of said causes," the court held (1) that the answer stated the good cause for refusing to grant license; (2) that the county commissioners have a discretion as to whether they will issue licenses or not and their question therein cannot be controlled by mandamus. State v. Cass County Commissioners, 12 Neb. 54.

Resolution of Village Trustees.—The passage of village trustees of a resolution fixing the amount to be paid for a license to keep a dram shop is not a regular ordinance such as to entitle one who has tendered the amount and a bond, to a mandamus to compel the village to issue a license, the moral offence of the application may be considered. Crotty v. People, 3 Ill. App. 465.

1. Polk County Commissioners v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 578; Brock v. State, 65 Ga. 437; Zanone v. Mound City, 103 Ill. 552; People ex rel. Gillane v. Houghton, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 135.

If the authorities disregard plainly defined duties, they are liable to indictment. People v. Norton, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 477.

Arbitrary Exercise of Discretion.

—It is said in the case of People ex rel. Gillane v. Houghton, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 135, that although the duties devolved upon the excise commissioners of New York city are to some extent discretionary and judicial, yet where there has been an abuse of their discretion in refusing a license, the court may compel them by mandamus to grant the license. So held where the license was refused by the commissioners on the ground that the applicant kept a place of amusement where the liquors were forbidden to be sold by statute, it being shown, however, that the place was used for that purpose only a part of the time.

Same—Georgia Doctrine.—The supreme court of Georgia say, in the case of Brock v. State, 65 Ga. 437, that the commissioners of Gwinnett county—like the ordinary in a county where there are no commissioners—have power to grant or refuse a license to retail liquors. If a license is arbitrarily refused, the remedy is by mandamus, and such a refusal does not give the right to retail without a license.

Joint Petitioners—Absconding of One.

—The absconding of one of two joint commissioners after the issuance of an alternative right of mandamus to the board of county commissioners which had refused said petitioners a permit to obtain license is not a good reason why the peremptory right should not issue. Polk County v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 578.

2. Steinkraus v. Hurlbert, 20 Neb. 519.

(2) Certiorari.—Where the authorities grant a license to sell intoxicating liquors on a petition on its face insufficient, a writ of certiorari may be awarded to review the proceeding on the application of any person who has duly filed a counter-petition,¹ or becomes otherwise connected with the action.² But where at the time of granting the license no objection was raised by any citizen, and there was no counter-petition on file, and qualified voters are not entitled to prosecute a writ of certiorari to have the proceedings reviewed, they not being parties to the record.³

(3) Injunction, Prohibition.—The act of the authorities empowered to grant licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors, which is exclusively within their jurisdiction, is a quasi judicial one; and if erroneous the remedy is by appeal or certiorari, and not by injunction.⁴

(4) Appeal.—(a) RIGHT OF APPEAL; JURISDICTION.—In most of the States where the record is without fault, the action of the

1. Loeb v. Duncan, 63 Miss. 89. See Corbett v. Duncan, 63 Miss. 84; State v. Atlantic City, 48 N. J. L. (19 Vr.) 118.

A writ of certiorari may be awarded by the circuit court to correct errors of law apparent on the face of the record of the proceedings of municipal authorities in relation to petitions for and against the issuance of a license to retail vinous and spirituous liquors, where no appeal is given in such case by statute. Corbett v. Duncan, 63 Miss. 84.

Remonstrants — Refusal to Hear — Remedy.—Where remonstrants against the granting of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors, who are acting in good faith, are refused a hearing by a city council, its action, without an examination of the charges made against the legality of the application for license, will be at the peril of revocation by review on certiorari in the supreme court. State v. Atlantic City, 48 N. J. L. (19 Vr.) 118; nom. Austin v. Atlantic City (N. J. L.), 2 Cent. 709.

2. A qualified voter of a city, who appears before the municipal authorities some time after the filing of a petition for license, but before final action thereon, and objects to the issuance of such license, thereby becomes connected with the proceedings sufficiently to enable him to prosecute a writ of certiorari to have the same reviewed. McCreary v. Rhodes, 63 Miss. 308.

3. Lexington v. Sargent, 64 Miss. 621; McCreary v. O'Flinn, 63 Miss. 204.

Pursuant to the provision of the Mississippi code forbidding the granting of any license to retail liquor for twelve months after the presentation to the city or town council of a petition signed by a majority of the residents (§ 1103), a town council passed an ordinance that no such licenses would be granted in that town for the ensuing twelve months. Plaintiff applied for a license, and before action was taken on his application, sought by certiorari to annul the ordinance. Held, that plaintiff not being a party to the proceedings sought to be reviewed, and there being no decision on his application that was subject to review, he was not entitled to certiorari. Lexington v. Sargent, 64 Miss. 621.

4. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Whalen, 3 Wash. Tr. 452. See Gayle v. Owen County Court, 83 Ky. 61; Romberger v. Water Valley, 63 Miss. 218; Leigh v. Westervelt, 2 Duer (N. Y.) 618; Hein v. Smith, 13 W. Va. 358.

No court has jurisdiction to restrain commissioners of excise from granting, in their discretion, licenses under the statute authorizing the sale of spirituous liquors. Leigh v. Westervelt, 2 Duer (N. Y.) 618.

Where a board had not entertained jurisdiction of a petition, or done any act to indicate an intention to do so, held that a prohibition granted to restrain the board from considering it is improper. Romberger v. Water Valley, 63 Miss. 218.

Under the West Virginia act of 1877, ch. 107, § 11, providing that county courts shall not authorize a liquor license, "unless they are satisfied and so enter on the record, that the authorities in granting or refusing a license to traffic in intoxicating liquors will not be reviewed on appeal;¹ but in other States an appeal has been provided by statute.²

applicant is not of intemperate habits," and section 18 requiring a bond, etc., of at least $3,500, the action of the county court in granting or refusing the certificate is not reviewable, and the issuance of a supersedeas thereon by a judge of the circuit court is coram non judice and of no effect; and the supreme court of appeals will grant the injured person a writ of prohibition to restrain the appellant and judge from proceeding to enforce the judgment. Hein v. Smith, 13 W. Va. 358.

In the matter of a license to keep a hotel or to retail spirituous liquors, the judge of the county court has a large discretionary power; and while this discretion is judicial, the chancellor will not control its exercise, or prohibit the inferior court from acting when the case is within this jurisdiction. Gayle v. Owen County Court, 83 Ky. 61.

1. State v. Pischel, 16 Neb. 608; Reed's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 452; Leister's Appeal (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 387; Ailstock v. Page, 77 Va. 386; French v. Noel, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 454; Yeager ex parte, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 655.

The action of the court of quarter sessions in granting or refusing licenses, under act March 22nd, 1867, being a matter in the discretion of the court, and no appeal being provided by the statute, will not be reviewed. Reed's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 452.

The discretionary action of the county court, under the statute granting or refusing to the keeper of an eating house a certificate for a license to retail ardent spirits, held to be final and conclusive, and a reversal on appeal to be coram non judice and void. French v. Noel, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 454.

Writ of Error and Supersedeas.—Where an application to the county court for a license to sell by retail required at a certain place was opposed, and by the evidence the court was satisfied that the applicant brought his case within the requirements of the law, and granted the license, and upon exception being taken by the person who made the opposition, the court certified the evidence, and the party opposing obtained from the circuit judge a writ of error and supersedeas, it was held that the circuit court had no jurisdiction to award the writ of error and supersedeas. Ailstock v. Page, 77 Va. 386.

Same—Nebraska Doctrine.—Where application was made to the county court for license to sell by retail liquor at a certain place, which application was opposed, and by the evidence the court was satisfied that the applicant had brought his case within the legal requirements and granted the license, and upon exception being taken by the one who made the opposition, the court certified the evidence and the opposing party obtained from the circuit judge a writ of error and supersedeas, it was held, on petition of the applicant for the license for a writ of prohibition to the circuit court, that the writ must be awarded, and that the judgment of the county court would remain as if no writ of error and supersedeas had been awarded. State v. Pischel, 16 Neb. 608.

2. See State v. Board of Commrs., 45 Ind. 501; Ex parte Dunn, 14 Ind. 122; Ex parte Lester, 77 Va. 663; Ailstock v. Page, 77 Va. 386; Leigton v. Maury, 76 Va. 865.

A party entitled to a license to retail liquors may appeal from a refusal to grant it. Ex parte Dunn, 14 Ind. 122.

An appeal lies to the circuit court, under the general statute relating to county commissioners, from a decision of such commissioners in refusing to grant a permit to sell intoxicating liquors, there being no provision in the liquor law of February 27th, 1873, forbidding such appeal, or making the decision of the commissioners final. State v. Board of Commrs., 45 Ind. 501.

Same—Virginia Doctrine.—The object of the Virginia statute, acts 1879-80, p. 148, was to depart from the former laws on the subject of licenses to sell ardent spirits, as construed by this court in Yeager's Case, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 655, where it was held that the county courts had unlimited discretion on the subject, and that their decisions were not liable to review by any appellate tribunal. The present statute is mandatory, and the right of appeal to the circuit court absolute. The appeal is a transfer of the case to the circuit court, where it is heard de novo. Leigton v. Maury, 76 Va. 865.

(b) Who May Appeal.—A party entitled to a license to retail liquors may appeal from a refusal to grant it.¹ The signers of counter-petitions against the issue of a license to retail liquors, have the right to appeal from the decision granting such license.² Any citizen is entitled to make himself a party to the proceedings to procure a license and oppose a granting of the same, and may appear and defend in the appellate court and should be served with process upon appeal, writ of error and supersedeas.³

(c) Nature and Effect of Appeal; Supersedeas.—It seems that pending an appeal from the decisions of the authorities granting a license to sell, the applicant may sell if he tender a proper bond and license fee, although the auditor unlawfully refuses to issue the license;⁴ and that a license issued after a reasonable time has elapsed to take an appeal from an order overruling a remonstrance to the granting thereof, but before such appeal is actually taken, is valid, notwithstanding a notice of intention to appeal.⁵

(a) Parties; Service of Notice.—In a proceeding to review the action of the authorities granting or refusing a license, the county or public corporation whose acts are to be reviewed must be a defendant,⁶ and citizens who make themselves parties to the pro-

To applicant denied liquor license by the act of March 6th, 1882, there is given an appeal of right to the circuit court. Under Code 1873, ch. 178, § 2, he may, upon bill of exceptions taken at the trial, apply to the circuit court for a writ of error and supersedeas. Of his two remedies he may resort to either. And if the circuit court also erroneously refuse the license, its decision is reviewable by this court upon appeal, or writ of error and supersedeas, as in other cases. Ex parte Lester, 77 Va. 663.

Discretion—"Shall" and "May."—The purpose and effect of the change by the legislature by its act of March 6th, 1882, of the word "shall" to the word "may," was to conform the act of March 3rd, 1880, so amended, to the law in this respect, when the case of French v. Noel, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 454, was decided, and so to leave it discretionary with county courts to grant or refuse such licenses. This, however, is a sound legal discretion, subject to the appeal specifically allowed by the statute to the applicant. Ailstock v. Page, 77 Va. 386.

Time of Appealing.—On the third day of October, 1881, the city council of F overruled a remonstrance against granting a license to L to sell intoxicating liquors. The parties presenting the remonstrance gave notice of an intention to appeal, but no transcript was filed nor was the case docketed in the district court until December 5th of that year. License was issued October 7th. Held, that as the law fixed no time in which to appeal, and as no undertaking was given, the appeal must be taken as soon as with reasonable diligence the transcript could be prepared and filed. And where an appeal was not perfected until sixty days from the date of the order appealed from, the appellate court acquired no jurisdiction. Lydick v. Korner, 13 Neb. 10.

1. State v. Board of Commrs., 45 Ind. 501; Ex parte Dunn, 14 Ind. 122.

2. Collins v. Barrier, 64 Miss. 21.

3. Leigton v. Maury, 76 Va. 865.

Board of commissioners may voluntarily appear and defend in the circuit court on appeal, and contest the application for a license, and such board, though ordinarily not a proper party on such an appeal, will not be heard to move for its dismissal on that ground in the supreme court. Murphy v. Monroe Co. Commrs., 73 Ind. 483.

4. Padgett v. State, 93 Ind. 396. See Chalmers v. Funk, 77 Va. 717.

5. Lydick v. Korner, 13 Neb. 10.

6. Wood v. Riddle, 14 Oreg. 254.

Where remonstrants against the granting of a license to sell spirituous liquors bring a writ of review, the county or other public corporation granting the license must be made a party. Wood v. Riddle, 14 Oreg. 254.

ceedings as contestants and oppose the granting of the license, should be served with process upon appeal, writ of error and super-sedeas.¹

The service of a notice of appeal on one member of the board of commissioners of excise of the county or other body empowered to grant licenses is not a proper service, because any number of the members less than the whole do not constitute the body, and the service of papers on such a body must be on every member thereof to confer jurisdiction on the appellate court to hear the appeal.²

(e) Issues; What Will be Considered.—On an appeal from an order granting or refusing a license nothing can be tried except what appears to have been in issue before the board of commissioners or other body,³ and the court will not review the facts of the case.⁴

(f) Remand.—Where a licensing board refuses to hear testimony in support of a remonstrance against a license, the court upon appeal will remand the cause that such testimony may be taken and a decision rendered thereon.⁵

19. License Fees and Taxes.—a. IN GENERAL.—The exaction of license fees under an act passed for the purpose of regulating and licensing the sale of malt, spirituous and vinous liquors is not taxation, either in the ordinary or constitutional significance of that term.⁶ And the imposition of a State tax on the sale of liquor

Upon an application for a license under § 3, of the act to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquor (1 Indiana R. S. 1876, p. 869), the board of commissioners is not a proper party to appeal to the circuit court; but where the board voluntarily appeared in that court and contested that application, it will not be heard to move for a dismissal of the appeal in the supreme court on that ground. Murphy v. Monroe Co. Comms., 73 Ind. 483.

1. Leighton v. Maury, 76 Va. 865.

2. A board of excise commissioners, like overseers of the poor, commissioners of highways, and the like, is not an official body like a corporation, but a quasi corporation only. Metcalf v. Garlinghouse, 40 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 50.

3. See Groscop v. Rainier, 111 Ind. 361; Osborn v. Sutton, 108 Ind. 443; Forsythe v. Kreuter, 100 Ind. 27; Green v. Elliott, 86 Ind. 53.

Remonstrance—Amendments—Practice.—On an appeal from a refusal by the county board to grant a license to sell intoxicating liquor in a less quantity than a quart, the circuit court may permit, at the costs of the remonstrator, an amendment making the remonstrance more specific and adding new specifications under the original objections, where no new parties are introduced.

Stockwell v. Brant, 97 Ind. 474.

Where a remonstrance against an application for a license to retail intoxicating liquors has been struck out by the court, and on leave of court an amended remonstrance is filed over the objection of petitioner, no question upon the ruling permitting the filing of such amended remonstrance can be raised in the supreme court unless the rejected remonstrance is properly incorporated in a bill of exceptions. Goodwin v. Smith, 72 Ind. 113; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 144.

4. Leister's Appeal (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 387.

5. Steinkraus v. Hurlbert, 20 Neb. 511.

6. San Louis Obispo Co. v. Hendricks, 71 Cal. 242; Pleuler v. State, 11 Neb. 547.

Tax to Raise Revenue.—It is said in Aulamier v. Governor, 1 Tex. 653, that a tax imposed upon retailers of spirituous liquors "to raise a revenue," etc., is a license tax, and its collection as such is provided for by statute "to provide for the assessment and collection of taxes."

does not preclude the State from authorizing an additional imposition of a municipal tax.¹

b. FIXING AMOUNT; RATING, ETC.—Under the provisions of some of the statutes regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors a license cannot issue until the amount of the fee has been fixed;² and where the power to impose a license fee is given by law to a municipal council, its discretion in fixing the amount is not reviewable by the courts.³ It has been said that the power to

It is said in Place v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 319, that an act respecting certain specific taxes authorizing the county treasurer in vacation, etc., to determine the sum to be charged for a year for a license to retail spirituous liquors, to receive the amount and give a receipt therefor, applies only to the application of brokers.

Occupation Tax.—The commissioners' courts of the several counties of this State have power to levy and collect a tax for the counties, equal to one half of the State tax upon taxable occupations. No particular form is presented by law for an order of the commissioners' court levying an occupation tax on retail liquor dealers, nor is there any statute prescribing the requisites of such an order. Wade v. State, 22 Tex. App. 629.

Same—Local Option.—The general law imposing an occupation tax on retail liquor dealers is not in force in localities where the local option law has been adopted. Robertson v. State, 5 Tex. App. 155.

The Missouri act of March 24th, 1883 (Sess. acts 1883, p. 86, § 13), exacting a license fee for the privilege of maintaining a dram shop, etc., is applicable to the city of St. Louis. State v. Hudson, 78 Mo. 302.

Construction of Statutes.—The fact that a party sells liquor without license subjects him to the legal penalty therefor; and under Mississippi Rev. Code, arts. 3, 4, 5, ch. 20, the board of police may assess him for a license; but under act of December 5th, 1865, such board has no right to assess him for the State tax imposed on licensed retailers of spirits. O'Harra v. Cox, 42 Miss. 496.

1. Wolf v. Lansing, 53 Mich. 367. See Matter of Lawrence, 69 Cal. 608.

Double Taxation—State and Municipal.—A person doing business as a liquor dealer in a city within a county, who has paid a valid license tax imposed by the municipal authorities of the city, is not thereby exempted from paying a tax of the same kind duly levied by the county authorities. Matter of Lawrence, 69 Cal. 608.

2. State v. Hudson, 78 Mo. 302. See State v. Keaough, 68 Wis. 135.

Fixing Liquor License Fees—Missouri Doctrine.—Under Missouri act of March 24th, 1883, regulating dram shops and exacting a license fee for a privilege of selling liquors therein, it is the duty of the municipal assembly of the city of St. Louis and all the county courts of the several counties to fix the amount of license fee to be charged under the act, within the limits prescribed, and until such action is taken by the municipal assembly or the county court, no collector has a right to issue a license to any person as a dram-shop keeper. State v. Hudson, 78 Mo. 302.

Same—Wisconsin Doctrine.—The Wisconsin statute regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors provides that the sum to be paid for a license to sell such liquors in towns containing within their boundaries no city or village incorporated or unincorporated with a population of 500 or more, should be $100; and that the population of any city or village "shall be ascertained by the last preceding enumeration of the State or general government." (L. 1885, ch. 296.) An answer, in proceedings to compel by mandamus a town treasurer to accept $100 for a license, alleged that there was an unincorporated village in the town containing more than 500 inhabitants, and offered to make proof of that fact by parol evidence. Held, that the statute was exclusive, and under it parol evidence was not admissible to prove the population of such city or village, which was settled by the last enumeration by the State or national government. State v. Keaough, 68 Wis. 135.

3. Wolf v. City of Lansing, 53 Mich. 367.

license implies the power to fix the amount of the license fee, subject only to the restriction that it shall not be so large as to show the evident intention to forbid altogether the acts to be licensed.¹

c. WHO ARE LIABLE TO PAY TAXES AND FOR WHAT PURPOSES.

—Retail dealers,² manufacturers.³

1. Portland v. Schmidt, 13 Oreg. 17.
Fixing the Amount of the License Fee—Alabama Doctrine.—Under the provisions of the Alabama Revenue Law of 1876, imposing a license tax on retailers of spirituous, vinous and malt liquors, the price of the license in the city of Mobile, outside of certain designated limits, was reduced to $75; the other provisions contained in the paragraph declaring this limit, as transcribed in the code, to apply to the entire subdivision of the section, are not confined to the portion of the city of Mobile in which a license is imposed. Foster v. Burt, 76 Ala. 229. Under this construction of the statute, it has been held that when a license for retailing liquors has been taken out after the first day of January, the full price for the whole year must be paid, although the license for any other business or occupation, if taken out after the first day of July, is only one-half the price for the whole year. Foster v. Burt, 76 Ala. 229.

Same—California Doctrine.—A license fee of $50 a month, required by a city ordinance to be paid by persons carrying on the business of a saloon, where liquors are sold or given away in quantities less than a gallon, is not, as matter of law, oppressive, unreasonable, or prohibitory of trade. Matter of Guerrero, 69 Cal. 88.

Same—Illinois Rule.—Under a constitutional requirement that taxes on "liquor dealers," inter alia, shall be uniform as to the class on which the taxes operate, one sum may be charged for a license to sell liquors generally, and a less sum for a license to sell malt liquors. Timm v. Harrison, 109 Ill. 593.

Same—In a license to a wholesale dealer there may be charged a sum both for the purpose of restricting sales or the persons selling, and compensating the municipality for additional police expenses that may result from the traffic. There can be no question of adequacy or excessiveness of amount charged. Dennehy v. Chicago, 120 Ill. 627.

The act chartering the city of Louisville, passed in March, 1851, conferred upon the general council the power to license taverns in the city, with or without the privilege of selling spirituous liquors by retail; and also to license coffee houses, and other houses and establishments, wherein such liquors might be sold by retail. Under the general law of the State, no establishment, or house of any description, has a right to retail spirituous liquors to be drunk on their premises, except licensed taverns. Held, that the power conferred upon the city authorities by the charter must be exercised in conformity with the general law, and only gave to them the right to impose an additional tax for the privilege besides that which was required to be paid to the State. Louisville v. Kean, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 9.

Same—A brewer of beer is not one "engaged in distilling and rectifying alcoholic or malt liquors," within Louisiana acts 1881, No. 4, § 9, requiring from such a license of $75; he is only liable to the license tax of $10, under § 3. State v. Weckerling, 38 La. An. 36.

As to rate of license in Louisiana see Jefferson Police Jury v. Marrero, 38 La. An. 896.

Where an order granting a license to issue in May, passed the city council of Wheeling in April, the city council could alter its grant, at any time before the time prescribed for the issuing of the license, by substituting a legal for an illegal tax, where the tax first imposed was illegal, or by fixing a tax where none had been imposed before. And the inn keeper could demand his license only on payment of the tax so fixed. Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292.

2. It is said in Chastain v. Calhoun, 29 Ga. 333, that under the Georgia act authorizing the city council of Calhoun to tax liquor shops, and repealing previous conflicting laws, does not authorize a tax on a dealer who had bought a license from the State.

Under How. Stat., § 1281, the payment of a manufacturer's tax does not authorize a sale at retail. People v. Greiser (Mich.), 11 West. Rep. 489, 35 N. W. Rep. 87.

3. Taylor v. Vincent, 12 Lea (Tenn.)

and wholesale dealers¹ are liable under the statute to pay a liquor license; but druggists² and social clubs³ cannot be required to pay a license tax.

282; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 338; Webb v. State, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 662.

Home Grown Materials—Liquors from—License Tax.—A manufacturer of liquors made of the produce of Tennessee, who sells the same in unbroken packages at his place of business, is not liable for the taxes on dealers. Taylor v. Vincent, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 282; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 338.

But it is said in Webb v. State, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 662, that manufacturers of whiskey and brandy, out of products of the farms and orchards of the State of Tennessee, who sell by wholesale, are liable for the privilege tax imposed upon wholesale liquor dealers.

1. Wholesale dealers who are not manufacturers are not within the terms of the Ohio statute, taxing the traffic in intoxicating liquors, and are within the terms of the act of the general assembly providing against the evils resulting from the traffic of intoxicating liquors and are liable to the taxes therein imposed. Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 661.

City Dealers—County License Tax.—A liquor dealer in a city within the county is not exempt from the payment of a county license tax by reason of the fact that he has paid a license tax of the same kind in pursuance of an ordinance enacted by the municipal authorities of the city. In re Lawrence, 69 Cal. 609.

Officers' Fees for License—Who Must Pay.—The Kansas statute fails to say who shall pay the probate judge's fees for issuing to druggists the certificate of the filing, by the physician of the county, of the affidavit required to obey the law regulating the sale and use of intoxicating liquors. The court held, therefore, that the physician is not liable for the fees. Miller v. Minney, 31 Kan. 522.

2. Druggists—Liability for Tax.—Under the Tennessee statute a druggist who sells liquors is liable for a liquor seller's occupation tax although he has paid a merchant's tax. The Druggist Cases, 85 Tenn. 449.

The revenue act of 1883, providing that the "provisions of the act shall apply to all druggists," did not subject a druggist to the payment of the tax imposed upon retail liquor dealers unless he sold liquor contrary to the provisions of the act of 1870, for other than communion purposes, or for medical purposes upon a physician's prescription. State v. Wharton, 85 Tenn. 449.

3. A club or association of persons, not incorporated, combining together to promote social or literary objects, which delivers beer to its members, receiving checks in exchange for glasses of beer, having sold the checks originally to members of the club, is a dealer, under the statute, and liable to be taxed, under the United States revenue law of 1875, ch. 36, § 18. United States v. Wittig, 2 Low. C. C., 466.

A social club organized under the act of 1875, ch. 142, § 1, subsections 3 and 5, maintained a library, gave musical entertainments, afforded meals for its members, and kept a small stock of liquors, which were for the use of its members, members paying for each drink as it was taken, but no profit was made for the club upon the liquors, the stock of which was in part kept up by the monthly dues of members. Held, the club was not liable to pay a privilege tax as a retail liquor dealer. Tennessee Club of Memphis v. Dwyer, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 452; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 298.

House of Public Entertainment.—No tax can be demanded on granting a license to keep a house of public entertainment, unless it be in a city or incorporated town or village. State v. Cloud, 6 Ala. 628.

Necessity of Payment.—The necessity of payment under a statute which provides that before a license shall issue to retail liquors the applicant must first pay the required tax, the payment is necessary and no discretion is left to the officers. McWilliams v. Phillips, 51 Miss. 196.

It is said in State v. Mancke, 18 S. C. 81, that a grant of license by a city council, without the payment of the county license required by the statute is void.

The charter of the city of Wheeling authorizes it to levy a tax on licenses to inn keepers, the payment of the tax may be made a condition precedent to the issuing of the license. Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292.

When a city council have authority

d. CUSTODY AND DISPOSITION OF LICENSE MONEYS.—The custody and disposition of license moneys will in each instance depend upon the provision of the statute under which such moneys are collected.¹

e. LIEN FOR TAXES.—An act regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors providing that the fee therefor shall be a lien upon the to add a city tax to a State tax on ordinaries, and a license is granted "under existing rates of taxation," the payment of the city as well as of the State tax may be required as a condition, without a compliance with which the license cannot issue. Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292.

Where in such case a license had been ordered, though upon payment of a tax, unequal, oppressive and illegal, the payment was notwithstanding a condition precedent, and must be made before any right to the license will vest. Nor can the grant be regarded as absolute, the condition being inseparable from it. The inn keeper must accept the whole or reject the whole. Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292.

Sufficiency and Effect of Payment.—The payment of a liquor tax for the coming year, does not exempt the dealer from the operation of a subsequent law, passed during the year, forbidding the sale of liquor on specified days. Reithmiller v. People, 44 Mich. 280.

License Fee—Payment.—The relator paid the necessary fee for a license to sell intoxicating liquors in the city of Crete, and a formal one was issued. Through the omission of the corporate authorities to take certain steps required by the general license law, the license was void. Subsequently the required steps were taken, whereupon the relator applied for a license on the credit of his former payment, and for the unexpired term for which he paid, so far as it would go. Held, that he was entitled to it. State v. Cornwell, 12 Neb. 470.

A retailer of spirituous liquors who has paid all his licenses, does not become on that account exempt from the operation of the effect of a police regulation, thereafter ordered by the police jury. State v. Isabel, 40 La. An. 340.

Same—Payment by Note.—The note of a liquor dealer, payable on time, cannot be received in satisfaction of the liquor tax imposed by statute, and if taken in payment therefor is void as in violation of public policy. Doran v. Phillips, 47 Mich. 228. Thus where a county treasurer took notes in payment of license to retail liquors, it was held that the notes were void; that the county treasurer had no authority to receive them and that he was liable to the county for the amount of the licenses. McWilliams v. Phillips, 51 Miss. 196.

Same—Payment of a Less Sum.—The payment of a less sum for a liquor license than that required by law does not authorize it to be issued, and if issued contrary to law is a nullity. Spake v. People, 89 Ill. 617.

Thus where, in violation of their own ordinance prescribing that a certain fee shall be paid before a liquor license shall issue, the mayor and town council permit one who has only paid a portion of the required fee to do business, they cannot subject to the payment of the balance of the fee the stock in trade of the delinquent in the hands of an innocent purchaser. Wicker v. Siesel (Ga.), 6 S. E. Rep. 817.

A city license, dated in July, to retail liquors to December 31st, gave no license to sell in the January preceding, although the tax had then been in part paid, and it was customary to pay in two installments. State v. Mancke, 18 S. C. 81.

A's license to sell spirituous liquors expired December 31st, 1880. The city license fee was $100 for a year, and when on January 13th, 1881, A paid $50 of the amount due for the current year, a statute had that day become operative, prohibiting the issuance of a license to one who should not have paid the county fee as well as the city fee. In July, 1881, A obtained a license which recited that it was good until December 31st, following. Held, that A was properly convicted of selling on January 15th, 1881, without a license. State v. Mancke, 18 S. C. 81.

1. The power of the State to license and collect license charges is a delegated police power, and the legislature may so amend its charter as thereby to divert part of such license charges into the treasury of the county. Winnona v. Whipple, 24 Minn. 61.

property creates a valid lien upon real estate when the tenant holds under a lease, written or oral, made after the passage of the statute;¹ and the postponing of all liens, mortgages, conveyances and incumbrances to the lien for liquor taxes, while valid, does not apply to liens created before the act was passed.²

Under an amended State charter providing that "the State council shall have the exclusive right to license persons vending intoxicating liquors, and persons so licensed shall not be required to obtain a license from the board of county commissioners," and further providing that "three fourths of the money received from the licenses so granted shall be paid to the treasury of the city, and one fourth to the treasurer of the county." It is the duty of the State treasurer to pay over one fourth of the sum so collected by him to the county treasury, notwithstanding a provision in the State charter that all funds in the city treasury shall be under the control of the State council and be drawn out upon the order of the mayor and recorder. Winona v. Whipple, 24 Minn. 61.

Under Kentucky general statute, ch. 92, as amended in 1886, the county clerk, and not the county judge, is the proper person to collect and to receive commissions on fees for licenses to retail spirituous liquors shall be granted by the county court. Severance v. Kelly, 86 Ky. 522.

Mandamus will lie to compel a county treasurer to pay over to the proper local officers the amount of liquor taxes to which they are entitled by law. East Saginaw v. Saginaw County Treasurer, 44 Mich. 273.

County treasurers are not required to pay excise moneys received under the act of 1857 to the overseers of the poor of towns which support their own poor, though such moneys were first paid to the commissioners for licenses by residents of such towns. They must pay to the county superintendents of poor, who are authorized to draw on them therefor. (1 R. S., 617, § 16, subd. g.) People v. Harris, 16 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 256.

The fact that the constitution of Mississippi recognizes the policy of general laws for granting licenses to sell liquors by devoting revenues derived from such sources to the support of common schools cannot be held to prevent change of the conditions recognized, and does not establish any policy in respect to such licenses. Lemon v. Peyton, 64 Miss. 161.

City authorities, in Nebraska, are not empowered to dispose of money paid into the treasury as a fee for obtaining a license until the license for which it is paid has been issued. State v. Mayor etc. of Lincoln, 6 Neb. 12.

Where a city requires an applicant for license to pay to the city treasurer $1,000, one half of which sum to be paid to the school district in which the city is situated, and the other half to be retained by the city as an occupation tax on saloon keepers, since the entire sum of $1,000 is required to be paid as a condition of obtaining a license, it is license money and not a tax, and under the provisions of § 5, art. 8, of the constitution, belonging to the school district. State v. Wilcox, 17 Neb. 219.

Inebriates' Home.—The treasurer of the Inebriates' Home of King's county is entitled to twelve per cent. of the excise money collected by the Brooklyn board of police and excise (L. 1873, ch. 687, § 3; L. 1872, ch. 687, § 1; 55 N. Y. 180); and mandamus issues to compel payment. People ex rel. Buckley v. Board of Police and Excise of Brooklyn, 63 N. Y. 623.

1. Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576.

2. Finn v. Haynes, 37 Mich. 63.

Action to Restrain Collection.—It has been said that under a statute providing that courts of chancery shall have jurisdiction of suits to restrain the collection of taxes levied or attempted to be collected without authority of law, such court has jurisdiction of a suit by a saloon keeper to restrain the collection of the license tax on his business for the privilege of retailing, imposed by the statute. Portwood v. Baskett, 64 Miss. 213.

An act of the legislature of Texas, entitled "An act regulating taxation," approved June 3rd, 1873, provides in its third section that "there shall be levied on and collected from every firm or association of persons . . . pursuing the occupation of selling spirituous, vinous, malt, and other intoxicating liquors in quantities less than one

f. RECOVERY OF ILLEGAL OR EXCESSIVE LICENSES.—One who voluntarily pays for a license to sell intoxicating liquors more than is required by municipal charter or by statute cannot quart, $200; in quantities of a quart and less than ten gallons, $100; provided that this section shall not be so construed as to include any wines or beer manufactured in this State." A, who was pursuing in that State "the occupation of selling spirituous, vinous, malt, and other intoxicating liquors in quantities less than one quart," filed his petition setting forth that the wines and beer which he was selling were the manufacture, not of that State but of other States and of foreign nations, and praying that the county treasurer be enjoined from collecting the tax imposed by said act of 1873, on the ground of its repugnance to the constitution of the United States. Held, that as he was also engaged in selling other liquors the injunction was properly refused. Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123.

Actions and Proceedings to Recover Unpaid Taxes.—The board of supervisors of a county has authority to appoint an agent to collect the license taxes imposed by an ordinance upon the business of selling liquors at retail, to fix the compensation to be paid him therefor, and to empower him to direct actions against persons failing to procure licenses. Amador County v. Kennedy, 70 Cal. 458; Re Lawrence, 69 Cal. 608.

A suit for the recovery of sums due for license tax, in Texas, should be brought in the name of the State. Whether it can be brought in the name of the governor, quære. Aulainer v. Governor, 1 Tex. 653.

In a suit by the State against a druggist to collect a tax imposed by law upon retail liquor dealers, the sale of liquors without a license being a misdemeanor, the defendant cannot refuse to testify as to the sales made by him on the ground that he would criminate himself, when the prosecution for the misdemeanor involved in such sale is barred by the statute of limitations. State v. Wharton, 85 Tenn. 449.

The indictment alleged both the amount of the occupation tax due the State and the amount of the tax due the county of H. The prosecution failed, on the trial, to prove that the county of H had levied an occupation tax upon liquor dealers. The trial court instructed the jury that the prosecution could be maintained only for the amount of taxes due the State, and the verdict of the jury was in accordance with the instruction. The defence contended that in order to sustain a conviction it was incumbent on the State to prove both allegations, and asked a special charge to that effect, which was refused. Held, that the charge as given by the court was correct, and the special charge was properly refused. Mansfield v. State, 17 Tex. App. 468.

Refunding Moneys Collected.—Where a license is cancelled the court should direct repayment pro tanto of the amount paid for the same for the unexpired term. Lydick v. Korner, 15 Neb. 500.

Where a party receives a license to keep a dram shop, and pays it, the city cannot, by repudiating the act of the officer who issued the license, maintain an action against the said party without returning the money paid for the license. Martel v. East St. Louis, 94 Ill. 67.

Where, on taking out a license for the sale of liquor, the dealer paid therefor, which he was not bound to do until the expiration of the time for taking an appeal, and upon appeal the license was refused; held, that the county was not bound to refund any part of the money. Monroe County Commrs. v. Kreuger, 88 Ind. 231.

Where a remonstrance against a liquor license was overruled by the city council, the amount paid, and license issued, no appeal having been taken in a reasonable time, and subsequently the license was cancelled by the district court; held, that the treasurer was not liable to refund the money. Lydick v. Korner, 15 Neb. 500.

Cancellation of License—Liability of Treasurer.—Where a remonstrance against issuing a license to sell liquor was overruled by a city council, the amount required for the license paid to the city treasurer, and no appeal having been taken within a reasonable time, and license issued; held, that the subsequent cancellation of the license by the district court, the money having been paid into the treasury did not render the treasurer liable for the repay-recover back the overplus;¹ but where the amount is paid under protest it may be recovered back in an action brought for that purpose.²

20. Revocation.—a. WHAT ACTS OR VIOLATIONS WILL WORK.—The authorities granting a license to sell intoxicating liquors have power to revoke the same for cause;³ therefore a licensee is bound at his peril to keep within the term of his license.⁴ A re-

ment of the money. Lydick v. Korner, 15 Neb. 500.

1. Commrs. of Thomson v. Norris, 62 Ga. 538 limiting Callaway v. Milledgeville, 48 Ga. 309; Town of Sullivan v. McCammon, 51 Ind. 264; Town of Ligonier v. Ackerman, 46 Ind. 552; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 323; Emery v. Lowell, 127 Mass. 138; Trainor v. Multnomah Co., 2 Oreg. 214; Custin v. City of Viroqua, 67 Wis. 314. See Woodburn v. Stout, 28 Ind. 77; Jacobs v. Morange, 47 N. Y. 57; Doll v. Earle, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 298; aff'g 59 N. Y., 638; Gilson v. Bingham, 43 Vt. 410; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 289; Knox v. Lee, 79 U. S. 457; Bank of United States v. Daniel, 37 U. S. 32.

Where an excessive license fee has been demanded under a misapprehension of the law and has been voluntarily paid, the mere fact that the business necessities of the plaintiff compelled him to pay the excessive license does not alter the voluntary character of the payment so as to authorize him to recover back the excess. Custin v. City of Viroqua, 67 Wis. 314.

Where a town in good faith adopted an ordinance requiring a license to be obtained for the retail of intoxicating liquors, in pursuance of the amendatory act of the legislature, of March 11th, 1867 (Acts 1867, p. 220), a person who applied for license, and received and paid for the same cannot recover back the money thus paid, although the act of the legislature, and the ordinances of the town thereunder, are invalid. Town of Ligonier v. Ackerman, 46 Ind. 552.

A village board, in good faith, but under a misapprehension of the law, demanded from plaintiff an excessive sum for an excise license, which he paid without any force or coercion on the part of the village. Held, that he could not recover back the excess. Custin v. Viroqua, 67 Wis. 314.

A complaint against a town to recover money paid by the plaintiff to the defendant for a license to sell intoxicating liquors, in compliance with an invalid ordinance of the town, adopted in pursuance of an invalid act for the legislature, must show that the money was not voluntarily paid. Town of Sullivan v. McCammon, 51 Ind. 264.

But where the mayor of an ancient borough, in which he was also a justice of the peace, took a fee of 4s. from a publican resident within the borough for renewing his annual license, and though for fifty-seven years a similar fee had been uniformly received by the mayor for the time being, from every publican within the borough applying to renew his license; held, that such fee was illegal, and might be recovered as money had and received, and the payment could not be considered as voluntary, so as to preclude the party from recovering. Morgan v. Palmer, 4 D. & R. 283; s. c., 2 B. & C 729.

2. Catoir v. Watterson, 38 Ohio St. 319. See Emery v. Lowell, 127 Mass. 138; Stephan v. Daniels, 27 Ohio St. 527; Baker v. Cincinnati, 11 Ohio St. 534.

A person engaged in the traffic in intoxicating liquors who, under protest, paid into the county treasury the sum required of a dealer in liquors by the terms of the act of April 5th, 1882, "more effectually to provide against the evils resulting from the traffic in intoxicating liquors" (79 Ohio L. 66), may maintain an action to recover back the sum so paid. Catoir v. Watterson, 38 Ohio St. 319.

3. Davis v. Com., 75 Va. 944. Compare Kostler v. Board of Excise of New York, N. Y. Daily Reg., March 19th, 1886.

4. Com. v. Julius, 143 Mass. 132. See Com. v. Ferenden, 148 Mass. 28; Com. v. Uhrig, 138 Mass. 492; Roberge v. Burnham, 124 Mass. 277; Com. v. Finnegan, 124 Mass. 324; Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6.

Where the license requires the closing of entrances elsewhere than on the public street it is forfeited by keeping opened a rear door to a driveway. Com. v. Ferenden, 148 Mass. 28.

removal from the district,¹ and a conviction of an offence against the law will work a forfeiture of the license;² but it seems that under a statute providing for a revocation of a license, after "a conviction or judgment" has been obtained against a licensee for a penalty given by the act or upon his bond, this provision applies only when there has been a recovery in a civil pro-

1. A person who obtained a permit to sell intoxicating liquors, under the act to regulate intoxicating liquors (Acts 1873, p. 151), and who afterwards voluntarily removed from the State, by the act of removal forfeits and abandons his rights under the permit, and cannot thereafter continue the business by means of an agent. The permit is forfeited by the holder because he has ceased to possess the required qualification of residence. And having been abandoned and forfeited by the principal, to whom it was granted, it is no protection to one who claims to act as his agent in selling intoxicating liquors. Krant v. State, 47 Ind. 519.

Under the statutes of Alabama, the removal of a licensed retailer of spirituous liquors to another county does not abrogate his license, or render his clerk or agent liable to an indictment for selling without license for continuing his premises after such removal. 37 Ala. 151. See Long v. State, 27 Ala. 36; Thompson v. State, 1 Ala. (S. C.) 58.

2. Ballentine v. State, 48 Ark. 45; Hildreth v. Crawford, 65 Iowa 339; Ottumwa v. Schaub, 52 Iowa 515; Martin v. State, 23 Neb. 371; People v. Meyers, 95 N. Y. 223; s. c., 2 N. Y. Crim. Rep. 128; Fincke v. Police Commissioners, 66 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 318; People v. Tighe, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 25; People v. Wright, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 306; s. c., 5 T. & C. (N. Y.) 518.

For the violation of an ordinance under which a liquor license was granted, the city may cause the license to be forfeited. Ottumwa v. Schaub, 52 Iowa 515.

Under that statute relating to cities of the first class, it is the duty of the mayor and council to revoke a license granted for the sale of liquors, upon conviction of the licensee of a violation of any law pertaining thereto, and where the fact of such conviction was certified by a police judge to the mayor and council, they are bound to revoke such license, and may do so by resolution, instead of by ordinance, without giving notice of the proposed action to the licensee. Martin v. State, 23 Neb. 371.

It is competent for the legislature to pass an amendatory law providing that a conviction for a violation of any provision of the act amended by any person or at any place licensed as therein provided shall forfeit the license and authorize the board of commissioners upon being notified of a violation of any such provision to cancel or revoke the license. People v. Meyers, 95 N. Y. 223.

Under the provision of the Excise act of 1873 (§ 4, ch. 549, Laws of 1873), which provides that a conviction for a violation of any provision of said act, or of the acts thereby amended, by any person or at any place licensed as therein provided, shall forfeit the license, and authorizes the board of excise, upon being satisfied of a violation of any such provision, to cancel and revoke the license, a conviction of a bartender of a licensed person for an offence under the act, committed at the place licensed, operates ipso facto to annul the license. The act casts upon the licensee the necessity, in order to protect himself in the enjoyment of his license, of seeing to it that no violation shall be committed upon the licensed premises; and he may not claim that the offence was committed without his knowledge or consent. People v. Meyers, 95 N. Y. 223.

Whether a license by the board of commissioners of excise in the city of New York, to a tavern keeper, is ipso facto revoked by the conviction of an employee of the licensee in the court of special sessions for unlawfully selling liquor on Sunday, in violation of L. 1873, ch. 549, § 4, query distinguishing People v. Tighe, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 25. Fincke v. Police Commissioners, 66 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 318.

Where a dram shop keeper is convicted by a jury of violating his license, whether he is keeping for himself alone or in copartnership with another, the license should be declared forfeited, whether it was issued in his name or another's. The forfeiture of a ceeding, and does not include the case of a conviction upon indictment.¹

b. LEGISLATIVE POWER TO REVOKE A LICENSE.—Licenses granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors upon fees paid therefor form a part of the internal police system of the State, and are granted in the exercise of the police power of the State and may at any time be revoked by the legislative authority.²

c. LICENSE NOT A CONTRACT RIGHT.—A license to sell liquors is not a contract which may not be taken away by a legislative act or by a town ordinance.³

dram shop keeper's license for permitting gaming in his dram shop is a consequence of his conviction. The jury have nothing to do with it and are not instructed about it. Ballentine v. State, 48 Ark. 45.

Permitting Gaming on Premises.—On the trial of an indictment for permitting gaming in defendant's dram shop or grocery, the testimony tending to show that the defendant was the real party in interest, although the license to carry on the business was issued to another, the court held that a judgment declaring the license forfeited was proper, no matter in whose name it was written. Ballentine v. State, 48 Ark. 45; Brockway v. State, 36 Ark. 629.

1. People v. Meyers, 95 N. Y. 223; s. c., 2 N. Y. Crim. Rep. 128; citing People v. Tighe, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 25.

2. La Croix v. County Commrs., 50 Conn. 321; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 648; State v. Woodward, 89 Ind. 110; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 160; Kellum v. State, 66 Ind. 588; Columbus v. Cutcomp, 61 Iowa 672; Fell v. State, 42 Md. 71; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 83; Calder v. Kurby, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 397; Moore v. State, 48 Miss. 147; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 367; Mississippi Soc. etc. v. Musgrove, 44 Miss. 820; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 723; State v. Holmes, 38 N. H. 225; People v. Board of Commrs. of Police and Excise, 59 N. Y. 92; Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; People v. Wright, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 306; s. c., 5 T. & C. (N. Y.) 518; Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292; Richland Co. v. Richland Center, 59 Wis. 591; s. c., 29 Alb. L. J. 412; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814; Beer Company v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25.

The county commissioners can take cognizance of an application for a revocation of a license, on the ground of a violation of law by the licensee while a criminal prosecution is pending against the licensee for the same violation of law. La Croix v. Co. Commrs., 50 Conn. 321; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 648.

Notwithstanding the Virginia act of March 30th, 1877, the judge of the hustling court of Richmond has authority to revoke a license given for keeping a bar for the sale of wine, etc. Hogan v. Guigon, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 705.

The provision of the Pennsylvania act of May 13th, 1887 (Pamph. L. 108), known as the Brooks liquor law, relative to the revocation of the license of a liquor dealer, when proof has been made to the court of the violation of any liquor law of the commonwealth being imperative, the quarter session court is not invested with discretionary power. Bosch's License, 5 Lan. L. Rev. 290.

Revocation of License.—The legislature may revoke a license granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors, and revocable in terms. La Croix v. Co. Commrs., 50 Conn. 321; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 648.

Licenses granted under the New York act of 1857, may be revoked by legislation. Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657.

The ordinance of the city of Wheeling provides that the council may at any time annul a license issued by its order. A fortiori, where an order only, for a license has passed the council, but no license issued, the order may be rescinded. Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292.

3. License to Sell Liquors Not a Contract.—A license issued under the general statute to a dealer in liquors, is in no sense a contract between the State and the licensee, and it is not protected by the contract clauses of the federal constitution and of the constitution of this State. It is a mere permit and can be revoked by the legislature at pleasure. Powell v. State, 69 Ala. 10.

A license to sell liquors is not a cond. JURISDICTION AND DISCRETION TO REVOKE.—A liquor license not being a contract may be revoked by the authorities empowered to grant licenses, if good and sufficient cause be shown.¹

e. PROCEEDINGS AND PROOF, ETC.—A board of excise commissioners, or other body revoking a license granted by them, are not restricted to the formal proceedings, and full evidence requisite to a judicial act affecting life, liberty, or property.² And while such tribunals are not warranted in judicating a forfeiture of the license without legal proof,³ yet the statute does not require the same strictness by want of proof in such a proceeding as is required in an action of special proceeding in court.⁴ Such proceed-tract vesting in the licensee rights which the State may not take away. Accordingly, where a license was granted to sell ale, wine and beer, under an existing ordinance of an incorporated town, it was competent for the town to abrogate the license, before its term had expired, by another ordinance prohibiting the sale of ale, wine and beer, and the license was no defence to a prosecution for a violation of the new ordinance. Columbus city v. Cutcomp, 61 Iowa 672.

1. See La Croix v. County Commrs., 50 Conn. 321; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 648; Hogan v. Guigon, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 705; Bosch's Case, 5 Lan. L. Rev. 290.

Number of Offences Necessary.—It is said in the case of Hildreth v. Crawford, 65 Iowa 339, that under the Iowa statute "to regulate the practice of pharmacy," a license may be revoked for a single unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors.

In proceedings before excise commissioners, under the New York statute (L. 1873, ch. 549), to annul a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors, the determination of two of these commissioners is effectual, where it appears that the third had notice of the time and place to which the hearing was adjourned, by having participated in the making of the order for adjournment. People v. Haughton, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 558; s. c., 4 N. Y. St. Rep. 78.

2. People ex rel. Weller v. Wright, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 306; s. c., 5 T. & C. (N. Y.) 518; People v. Jones, 54 Barb. 311, 315; People v. Norton, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 477; Ex parte Persons, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 655; People ex rel. Kimball v. Haughton, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 558; s. c., 25 N. Y. Week. Dig. 15.

The statute does not require the same strictness by way of proof to support an order revoking a license made by the excise commissioners of the city in a proceeding before them for that purpose, as is required in an action or special proceeding in court. Such a proceeding before the commissioners is destined to be summary, and all that has been required is that the commissioners should become satisfied of the existence of the facts necessary to warrant a revocation of the license by such reliable information as they may be able to obtain, establishing it to a reasonable certainty. People ex rel. Kimball v. Haughton, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 558; s. c., 25 N. Y. Week. Dig. 15.

Where upon the hearing of the board of excise to revoke a license, the witnesses on the part of the complainants were examined upon oath against the objection of the relator, who did not ask that any person be examined in his behalf either with or without oath, it was held, that even if a board had not power to administer oaths, as such, as the information was before them and satisfied them that the relator had violated the law, it was their duty to revoke the license. People v. Delhi Commrs. of Excise, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 306.

3. Forfeiture of License.—The justices are not warranted in adjudicating a forfeiture of the license without legal proof of a former conviction; a mere reference to the records of the petty sessions where former convictions were entered, will not suffice. Cross v. Watts, 13 C. B., N. S. 239.

4. People ex rel. Kimball v. Haughton, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 558; s. c., 25 N. Y. Week. Dig. 15.

Proceedings Summary.—The proceeding is defined to be summary, and to depend upon such reliable information as may be obtainable to a reasoning must be founded upon a complaint¹ made to the licensing board.² Such complaint need not be in writing.³

A proceeding to revoke a license granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors may be heard and determined by the court without a jury;⁴ but to give such court jurisdiction of the case, the license complained of must be notified.⁵ But a defendant whose license has been revoked cannot defend against a complaint for unlawable certainty establishing the existence of the necessary facts. People ex rel. Kimball v. Haughton, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 558; s. c., 25 N. Y. Week. Dig. 15.

1. A Violation of the Law under which the license has been granted cannot be enquired into by presentment and indictment, and in Maryland it is said that the circuit court and criminal court of Baltimore shall take cognizance thereof on application or remonstrance, and may withdraw the license of persons complained of, and shall exercise a sound discretion relative thereto. Downs v. State, 19 Md. 571.

2. State v. Lamos, 26 Me. 258.

Knowledge of Board.—It is not sufficient to authorize the board to issue a warrant that the matter complained of has come to their personal knowledge. State v. Lamos, 26 Me. 258.

3. Com. v. Hamer, 128 Mass. 76.

Form of Complaint.—It is said in State v. Lamos, 26 Me. 258, that although the complaint need not be in writing to authorize the issuing of the warrant, yet before notice to the party accused can be given, the complaint should be reduced to writing, and the matter complained of specifically alleged, that he may know what he is required to answer.

Contents of Complaint.—Under the Indiana statute in a proceeding to forfeit a liquor license, for keeping a disorderly house, an information must aver and prove the existence of the license. Brubaker v. State, 89 Ind. 577.

4. State v. Schmitdz, 65 Iowa 556.

Discretion of Commissioners.—While commissioners of excise have a degree of discretion as to the order and time of the trial of cases coming under their jurisdiction, they have no right to refuse to try a class of cases presented because they question the propriety of enforcing the law therein; and if the evidence produced satisfies them that the charges are true, the license should be revoked, even though the complainant's character and motives may not be above reproach, and even if the witnesses obtain their knowledge by entering the saloons through the back doors and purchasing the liquor with the intention of preferring complaints. People v. Becker, 3 N. Y. St. Rep. 202.

Statutory Construction.—An act which inflicts upon a licensed retailer by small measure, who shall be convicted of selling spirituous liquors to persons designated, the forfeiture of his license, etc., applies to those who are retailers at the time of the offence committed, and not at the time of the trial; and the fact of their being such retailers is not to be ascertained on affidavits or otherwise by the court, but must be averred in the indictment and confessed, or found by the verdict of a jury. State v. Plunket, 1 Ired. (N. C.), L. 115.

5. Plummer v. Com., 1 Bush (Ky.) 26; Young v. Blaisdell, 138 Mass. 344; Com. v. Hamer, 128 Mass. 76; People ex rel. Kimball v. Haughton, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 558; s. c., 25 N. Y. Week. Dig. 15; Gaertner v. Fond du Lac, 34 Wis. 497. See Com. v. Wall, 145 Mass. 216.

An Order of Court suspending the license without requiring the licensee to appear and show cause why it should not be sustained as required by statute, is void. Plummer v. Com., 1 Bush (Ky.) 26.

Notice to Licensee—Presumption.—It is said in Young v. Blaisdell, 138 Mass. 344, that the law may provide for the revocation of a liquor license on an application of the owner of real estate adjoining the premises where the license is to be exercised, and if a hearing is provided for, it is implied that the licensee is to be notified, and the law cannot be objected to for want of a provision for notice.

The same court say, in Com. v. Hamer, 128 Mass. 76, that under the Massachusetts statute authorizing the mayor and aldermen of a city, by whom a license to sell intoxicating liquors has been issued, to declare a license forfeited upon satisfactory proof to them upon a violation of its conditions, after fully keeping liquors, upon the ground that he had no opportunity to be heard upon the revocation.¹

f. REVIEW; APPEAL.—Appeal lies from error in the hearing and determining of a proceeding to revoke a permit granted by the proper body for the sale of intoxicating liquors.²

21. Bonds; Action on.—a. NECESSITY OF; WHO MUST GIVE. The giving of the bonds required by the excise law is an essential condition precedent to the issuing of a license to sell intoxicating liquors; and all licenses granted without such bonds being given are no protection to the licensees.³

a notice to the licensee and reasonable opportunity for him to be heard by them, a licensee can be convicted of keeping intoxicating liquors for sale in violation of law upon the production of the record showing that before the day named in the complaint the board declared his license forfeited, after a hearing on a verbal complaint made to the board, the licensee being present with counsel, and after a finding that he had violated the provisions of his license.

Opportunity to be Heard—Illness of Defendant.—The defendant in a prosecution for illegally keeping liquors contended that the revocation of his license by the board of aldermen was invalid, because he was not given an opportunity to be heard upon the question of revocation, he being unable to attend the hearing before the board of aldermen by reason of the illness, and the board refusing to grant a continuance for that reason. The court held that the acts of the board of aldermen could not be reviewed in a proceeding in which it was not a party. Com. v. Wall, 145 Mass. 216.

Notice—Service and Waiver of Objection.—The objection to the power of the excise commissioners of the city of New York to revoke a license founded upon the ground that the summons to appear before the commissioner was not served upon the licensee himself, but upon the person who in his absence was found in the possession and control of his establishment, was obviated by the appearance of the licensee by attorney upon the return of the summons moving for and obtaining an adjournment of the proceeding without taking objection for want of reasonable service. People ex rel. Kimball v. Houghton, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 558; s.c., 25 N. Y. Week. Dig. 15.

1. Com. v. Wall, 145 Mass. 216.

Costs of Proceedings.—Upon proceeding to revoke a license there can be no judgment for costs, and the petitioner and respondent each must bear their own costs. Young v. Blaisdell, 138 Mass. 344; Chesney's License, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 474.

2. State v. Schmitdz, 65 Iowa 556.

Certiorari is Not the Proper Remedy.—State v. Schmitdz, 65 Iowa 556.

However, supreme court of Wisconsin, in the case of Gaertner v. Fond du Lac, 34 Wis. 497, say that if the act in revoking a liquor license upon charges, without giving the licensee notice and an opportunity to be heard, be without authority (as it seems such act would be) if the proper remedy of the party aggrieved would be by certiorari and not by injunction.

Appeal.—However, it is said by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in Young v. Blaisdell, 138 Mass. 344, that under the Massachusetts statute no appeal lies from the judgment of a district court revoking a license granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors upon the application of an owner of real estate adjoining the premises in which the license is to be exercised.

Bond on Appeal.—In a proceeding under the Iowa Code to revoke a permit granted by the board of supervisors for the sale of intoxicating liquors, the court is not required to fix the amount in which the defendant must give bond for an appeal to the supreme court as is provided when it is desired to supersede the judgment in a criminal action pending in appeal. State v. Schmitdz, 65 Iowa 556.

3. State v. Fisher, 33 Wis. 159.

No Bond Required of Druggists.—Since the passage of Iowa acts, general assembly, 1886, ch. 83, relating to sales of intoxicating liquors by pharmacists for medical purposes, a pharmacist is not required to give bond to obtain a permit so to sell, and such permit is not limited to one year. State v. Courtney, 73 Iowa 619.

b. ACCEPTANCE AND APPROVAL; HOW COMPELLED.—Authority to retail spirituous liquors is not operative without the approval of the bond required, and may be set aside at any time before such approval.¹ Where the proper bond has been furnished and is sufficient, its acceptance cannot be compelled by mandamus, where there is nothing showing that the discretionary power vested in the commissioners or other board empowered to grant license has been exercised unreasonably or in bad faith;² but where a liquor bond is rejected simply because the affidavit required by statute omits to state that the surety is not engaged in the sale of liquors, its acceptance will be compelled by mandamus.³

c. FORM AND VALIDITY.—The bond required by statute to be

A druggist empowered by municipal ordinance to sell liquor for medical purposes is not within the purview of the Illinois dram shop act, § 5, requiring a bond from those licensed to sell. Moore v. People, 109 Ill. 499, limiting Wright v. People, 101 Ill. 126.

But under the Missouri statute, while druggists and physicians are permitted to mix, adulterate spirituous and other liquors, for medical and mechanical purposes, yet they are required to make an affidavit, and give the bond required by the law, of all persons who deal in such liquors. State v. Ferguson, 72 Mo. 297.

New Bond — Discretion of County Treasurer.—The county treasurer cannot be invested with power to determine in what contingency he will require a liquor dealer to give a new bond or stop his business until it is done. People ex rel. Robinson v. Miner (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 21.

1. Crutz v. State, 4 Ind. 385; Garrison v. Steel, 46 Mich. 99.

It is said in the case of Garrison v. Steel, 46 Mich. 99, that a liquor dealer's bond in Bay City, in which the penalty by mistake has been left blank, cannot be enforced until approved by the common council; and a report of a committee will not be sufficient unless adopted by the council.

2. See McHenry v. Chippewa, (Mich.), 31 N. W. Rep. 602; Wolfson v. Rubicon, 63 Mich. 49; Post v. Sparta, 58 Mich. 212. Compare Kuhn v. Detroit (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 470.

In an application for mandamus to compel the township board to approve a druggist's liquor bond, where nothing is disclosed in the return showing that its discretionary power was not exercised reasonably and in good faith, the writ must be denied. McHenry v. Chippewa, (Mich.) 31 N. W. Rep. 602.

On an application for a mandamus to compel a township board to approve a liquor bond, where the sureties justified on oath as to their sufficiency, and there was a conflict of testimony as to the value of the property owned by one of them, and there was nothing in the testimony to make it inadmissible and the witnesses were legally qualified to express an opinion, the determination of the board in rejecting one of the proffered sureties will not be disturbed. Wolfson v. Rubicon, 63 Mich. 49.

On a petition for a mandamus to compel a township board to approve a liquor bond, the supreme court is not called upon to decide from the record whether the surety was worth more than the law requires over and above his indebtedness and liabilities on other similar bonds; and where it does not appear that the board had acted arbitrarily or capriciously, the right must be refused. Post v. Sparta, 58 Mich. 212.

The answer of the respondents in proceedings to compel by mandamus the approval of a liquor bond fully met all the allegations in the relator's petition, and raised a direct issue as to the surety's sufficiency, and denied that he was worth the penalty of the bond over his liabilities, and the whole record failed to show that the respondents acted arbitrarily and capriciously, or with a design to evade the law. Held, that a mandamus would be denied. Post v. Sparta, 58 Mich. 212. See also McHenry v. Chippewa, 31 (Mich.) N. W. Rep. 602.

3. Kuhn v. Detroit, (Mich.) 38 N. W. Rep. 470.

given by retail liquor dealers should be made payable to the State, but is not void if it runs to a village instead.¹ And where in a liquor dealer's bond the penalty has, by mistake, been left in blank, it will be held valid at the lowest statutory penalty, when the sureties have justified at that sum, in accordance with the statute requiring the justification to conform to the penalty.² But where the bond taken by a board of officers imposes upon the obligee restraints additional to those imposed by statute, is void.³

d. WHAT CONSTITUTES A BREACH.—A bond given by a licensee to retail spirituous, malt or intoxicating liquors is broken by a violation of the laws relating to intoxicating liquors,⁴ by

1. Thomas v. Hinkley, 19 Neb. 324 following Huffman v. Koppelkom, 8 Neb. 344; distinguishing Sexson v. Kelley, 3 Neb. 104. See Redpath v. Nottingham, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 267; Ring v. Gibbs, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 502; Van Deusen v. Hayward, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 67; Tripp v. Norton, 10 R. I. 105.

Tavern Keeper's Bond.—The bond required by statute to be given by tavern keepers, etc., may be made payable to the county treasurer, without either naming him or containing the words "and his successors in office." Redpath v. Nottingham, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 267.

Refusal to Give Bond—Objection to Statute.—The relator having refused to give a bond, as required by Texas act of March 29th, 1887, regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, was arrested, and applied for a writ of habeas corpus, alleging the conditions of the bond were unconstitutional. Held, that as the relator had never executed the bond, he had no right to be heard upon the validity of its conditions. Ex parte Bell, 24 Tex. App. 428.

Bond to Village.—In Tripp v. Norton, 10 R. I. 125, a licensee's bond to "the city treasurer of the city of Providence" was held not to be invalid by omission to insert his name.

2. Garrison v. Steele, 46 Mich. 98.

3. Crosby v. Snow, 16 Me. 121; Com. v. Kelly, 75 Mass. (9 Gray) 259; Providence v. Bligh, 10 R. I. 208.

License Bond—Excessive Restraints.—A license bond conditioned that the principal "shall not violate any of the provisions of the laws" of Rhode Island,—construed to comply with R. I. Rev. Stat., ch. 670, requiring a bond conditioned that he "will not violate any of the provisions of this act." Providence v. Bligh, 10 R. I. 208.

A bond, given by a party convicted under a statute, which requires him to give bond not to violate any law "concerning the sale of intoxicating liquors," is void, if conditioned that he shall not violate any law "concerning the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors." Com. v. Kelly, 75 Mass. (9 Gray) 259.

Bond of Innholder.—A bond taken by a board of officers, imposing upon the obligor, as innholder, restraints in the sale of liquors, additional to those imposed by statute, is void. Crosby v. Snow, 36 Me. 121.

4. See Welch v. McKane, 55 Conn. 25; Quintard v. Corcoran, 50 Conn. 34; State ex rel. Pearson v. McEntee, 68 Iowa 381; People v. Harrison, 28 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 247.

Keeping Open on Sunday.—It is held by the supreme court of Connecticut, in Quintard v. Corcoran, 50 Conn. 34, that it is a breach of the licensee's bond conditioned to "duly observe all laws relating to intoxicating liquors" to keep open on Sunday a place where such liquors are exposed for sale, and this although the act of keeping open on Sunday is not a violation of the liquor law, but of the statute in regard to Sunday.

Conviction of a Violation of the Law.—Under the Connecticut act of 1883, providing that, where the bond required by the act upon granting a license to sell liquors is given and such license issued, if the "person so licensed shall be convicted of a violation of the provisions of" a certain part of the act, "and no appeal is pending, said bond shall thereupon become forfeited" (L. 1883, ch. 137, § 5), a conviction of the principal, of such a violation, constitutes a breach of the bond; the statute, so construed, does not violate the constitutional guaranty of due process of law, as the parties enter into the obli-abuse of privilege;¹ by keeping a gaming table;² or by a failure to make the return to the auditor of the county required by statute.³

e. DAMAGES FOR BREACH.—It seems that upon a bond given by one licensed to sell intoxicating liquors in a certain town, to the treasurer of such town with sureties as required by law, conditioned that the licensee shall duly observe all laws relating to intoxicating liquors in which case the bond is to be void, the measure of damages for a breach is the face of the bond.⁴

f. HOW AVOIDED; DISCHARGE OF SURETIES.—The obligation of a liquor seller's bond is not affected by the fact that he has been fined the amount of the penalty, and has served out a term of imprisonment for nonpayment of the fine, and his sureties will not thereby be discharged from liability in an action to recover the fines.⁵

gation in view of the provisions of the statute. Welch v. McKane, 55 Conn. 25.

Under said act the record of such a conviction of a violation is proof of the breach of the bond in a civil action upon it. Welch v. McKane, 55 Conn. 25.

1. Abuse of Privilege—Damage to Plaintiff.—It is not necessary to effect the breach of a bond given by one licensed to sell intoxicating liquors, the condition of which is that if the licensee shall duly observe all laws relating to intoxicating liquors it shall be void, that the act constituting a breach shall be merely an abuse of a privilege granted by the license, or that the plaintiff shall have sustained any damage by reason of such breach. Quintard v. Corcoran, 50 Conn. 34.

2. Keeping Gaming Table.—An inn keeper's bond under New York laws, 1857, that he will not keep a gambling table of any description, is broken by keeping a billiard table which his guests and others use under a rule that the losing party of each game should pay him for the use of the table. People v. Harrison, 28 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 247.

3. State ex rel. Pearson v. McEntee, 68 Iowa 381.

4. Quintard v. Corcoran, 50 Conn. 34.

Liabilities of Sureties on Bond.—The sureties upon the bond of a licensed vendor of intoxicating liquors are liable not only for the damages resulting directly from the act of their principals, but for all damages to which such acts contribute. And where, during the existence of a license based upon such bond, the principal sells liquor to one who is disqualified to earn a support for his family by reason of his intoxication, the liability of the surety attaches and continues throughout the period of such disqualification, whether the same terminates during the license year or continues for the entire term. Wardell v. McConnell, 23 Neb. 152.

5. Brown v. Com., 114 Pa. St. 335; Stehle v. Com. (Pa.), 7 Atl. Rep. 169; s. c., 4 Lan. L. Rev. 22; Com. v. Shannon, 2 Pa. County Ct. 142; Com. v. Findler, 37 Leg. Int. 225.

In the case of Stehle v. Com. (Pa.), 7 Atl. Rep. 169, a bond given by defendant on being licensed to keep an eating house, was conditioned that he would pay all damages, fines, etc., that might be recovered against him. Defendant, being sentenced to pay certain fines, "or in default" to undergo imprisonment for selling liquor on Sunday, underwent the imprisonment, but never paid the fines. Held, that his sureties were not discharged from liability in an action to recover the fines. Com. v. Shannon, 2 Pa. County Ct. 142.

In the case of Brown v. Com., 114 Pa. St. 335, A applied for a tavern license and filed a $2,000 judgment bond conditioned that he would pay the costs, fines, and penalties, which might be imposed on him in an indictment for violating any law of the commonwealth, relative to selling intoxicating drinks; later, and after he had been granted a license, he pleaded guilty to selling liquor on Sunday, whereupon he was sentenced to pay $200 fine and costs, or, in default, to undergo ninety days' imprisonment. He went to jail and at the expiration of his term of imprisonment was discharged as an insolvent. He paid the costs of the prosecution but did not pay the fine; judgment was confessed on his bond for $2,000, and liquidated in the sum of $200, the amount of the fine, as the real debt. The court said: "It is a mistake to suppose that the defendant and his sureties were released from the obligation of their bond by the imprisonment of the defendant in default of the payment of his fine. That was part of the penalty which he suffered in consequence of his non-compliance with the sentence of the court; and, while it released him from the grasp of the quarter sessions, it in no way affected the obligation of his bond."

V. OFFENCES AND PROCEEDINGS.—A person holding a permit to sell intoxicating liquors for lawful purposes is bound, before making a sale, to exercise reasonable care to ascertain whether the purchaser intends in good faith to use the liquor for a purpose for which it may lawfully be sold.¹

1. Sale Without License.—Under a statute regulating traffic in intoxicating liquors and prohibiting sales without a license, a sale made without first having procured a license is a misde-

1. Taylor v. Pickett, 52 Iowa 467; State v. Blair, 72 Iowa 591. See Ashurst v. State, 79 Ala. 276; Com. v. Boynton, 84 Mass. (2 Allen) 160; State v. Perkins, 26 N. H. (6 Fost.) 9; Miller v. State, 5 Ohio St. 275; McMillan v. State, 18 Tex. App. 375.

Exercising Due Diligence.—It is the duty of one authorized to sell intoxicating liquors for legal purposes, to exercise due diligence and act in good faith in making such sales, and where this is done he is not responsible for the illegal use made by a purchaser. Taylor v. Pickett, 52 Iowa 467. But where a person is licensed under a statute to sell liquors for certain purposes specified in the statute, "and for any other purpose," he is liable to be punished if he does sell for any other use or purpose. State v. Perkins, 26 N. H. (6 Fost.) 9.

Liquor Obtained by False Pretences.—Where the liquor is obtained by false pretences, and an imposition on the seller, he having no intention to violate the law, he is not guilty under the statute. Miller v. State, 5 Ohio St. 275.

A prohibited sale of liquors is, per se, a violation and not an evasion of the law, and is punishable as a violation. McMillan v. State, 18 Tex. App. 375.

Knowledge of Intoxicating Quality.—The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts say, in the case of Com. v. Boynton, 84 Mass. (2 Allen) 160, that a person may be convicted of being a common seller of intoxicating liquor, although he did not know or suppose the liquor sold by him to be intoxicating.

It is said by the supreme court of Pennsylvania, in Hatfield v. Com., 120 Pa. St. 395, that on trial of an indictment under a statute prohibiting the sale of vinous or spirituous liquors whether the liquor sold is intoxicating or not, is immaterial.

Manufacturing Corporation — Transfer of Business.—The charter of a manufacturing corporation made it an offence to sell liquor "within four miles of the factories of said corporation." The property of the corporation was sold under a decree in chancery, and the purchasers carried on the same business under a new corporate name. The court held that the offence of selling continued the same as before. Ashurst v. State, 79 Ala. 276.

Sale by Person Not a Merchant.—In Com. v. Wheeler, 79 Ky. 284, it is said that in the Kentucky statute no penalty has been denounced against a person not a merchant for selling vinous and spirituous liquors when they are not drunk on the premises where sold or adjacent thereto.

Domestic Wines or Cider — Sale in Bar Rooms.—The Georgia act permitting the manufacture and sale of domestic wines or cider, or the sale of wines for sacramental purposes, but providing that "such wine or cider shall not be sold in bar rooms by retail," a "bar room" means a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors by retail for consumption at the place and time of sale. Beiser v. State, 79 Ga. 376.

Dram Shop Keeper.—A dram shop

meanor and indictable.¹ It is not necessary to constitute the offence of selling liquor without a license that the liquor sold should be intoxicating, it is sufficient if it be sold under the prohibited circumstances.²

2. What Acts and Agreements Constitute a Sale.—The statutory offence of selling spirituous liquors without a license is not committed by the bargain for a sale. To constitute the offence there must be a completed sale which passes the property;³ the actual delivery of the liquor must be proved.⁴

keeper is a person licensed by law to sell intoxicating liquors in any quantity not exceeding a given amount. State v. Heckler, 81 Mo. 417.

1. State v. Kobe, 26 Minn. 148; People v. Brown, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 561; People v. Stevens, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 341; State v. Turner, 18 S. Car. 103. See Hill v. People, 20 N. Y. 363; Schwab v. People, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 520; Blatchley v. Moser, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 215; Richards v. Banks, 58 L. T. 634. The defendant is liable for selling without a license notwithstanding the fact that he has already been sued for the penalty. Blatchley v. Moser, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 215; People v. Stevens, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 341.

Misdemeanor.—Vending spirituous liquors or wines in quantities less than the amount prescribed by the statute, without a license, is a misdemeanor, although described by the statute simply as an offence. Hill v. People, 20 N. Y. 363.

It is said in the case of People v. Brown, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 561, that the selling of spirituous liquors without a license is punishable as a misdemeanor under the New York statute upon that subject, although the statute contains no prohibition other than the imposition of a penalty and a provision that all offences against the provisions of the act shall be deemed misdemeanors.

It is said in Chevalier v. Com., 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 379, that under the Kentucky act of 1830, regulating the sale of liquors in Louisville without a license, a party is not liable for selling liquors unless the same were to be drunk in his house.

License to Sell "Sweet and Made Wines."—Where the holder of a license to sell foreign wine sold a bottle of wine labeled "Best Pale Sherry, British," the court held that he was guilty of selling foreign wine without a license. Richards v. Banks, 58 L. T. 634.

2. Schwab v. People, 4 Hun (N. Y.)

520. See Hatfield v. Com., 120 Pa. St. 395.

3. Banchor v. Warren, 33 N. H. 183.

4. Recovering Trespass—Not a Sale.—But all transfers of the title intoxicating liquors are not sales. Thus it is said in Hamilton v. Goding, 55 Me. 419, that "a recovery in trespass of the value of intoxicating liquors held in this State, and intended for illegal sale in this or another State, transfers the title to the defendant by the mere operation of law, and does not constitute a sale 'by any person or persons' within the prohibition of the statute." Riley v. State, 43 Miss. 397. But it is not necessary either to aver or prove that the liquor was paid for, because a sale on credit is as much a violation of the law as one for cash. Riley v. State, 43 Miss. 197.

Procurement for Another.—Mere proof of procurement and delivery of a bottle of whiskey by one person to another at the latter's request is not an unlawful sale. State v. Thomas, 13 W. Va. 848.

In the case of State v. Taylor, 89 N. Car. 577, a witness testified that he applied to defendant for liquor, but the defendant said he could not get it unless he had a bottle. Witness then procured a bottle and gave it to the defendant, together with a small sum of money. The defendant went off and in a short time returned with the bottle of whiskey, and said that he charged the witness a small sum for getting it, which was paid. It was held error in the trial court to charge the jury that if they believed the evidence, the defendant was guilty, without further telling them to consider the bona fides of the transaction,—the purchase by the defendant's agent of the witness.

However, if a storekeeper does not keep liquors for sale in his store, but makes himself an agent and carrier merely to procure it for division and distribution among his customers, this

The statutory presumption arising from mere delivery of intoxicating liquor, that there was an unlawful sale, is limited to cases under the act.¹

Any act or transaction which clearly indicates an intention on the one part to dispose of and on the other part receive intoxicating liquors for a consideration, constitutes a sale within the meaning of a statute regulating the traffic in such liquors. Thus an acceptance of intoxicating liquors in exchange for grain,² or for work,³ or in discharge of an indebtedness,⁴ is a sale within the meaning of the statute. Any shift or device by means of which it is sought to evade the liquor law, if a customer procures liquor in quantities prohibited, for which the vendor receives a compensation, the transaction constitutes a sale.⁵

3. Joint and Several Sales.—The retailing of spirituous liquors to two distinct persons at the same time and place constitutes two distinct offences, and not a single offence;⁶ and if two join in is a violation of the statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors. State v. Buck, 37 Vt. 657.

What Constitutes—Intent.—To constitute the offence of carrying on the business of a retail liquor dealer without having paid the special tax, the facts proved must indicate that the defendant procured the liquor with the intention to retail it, or having on hand, had formed the intent to retail it and had carried out the intent by one or more acts. U. S. v. Bonham, 31 Fed. Rep. 808.

Same—Arkansas Doctrine.—It is said in the case of Ramsey v. State, 11 Ark. (6 Eng.) 35, that to constitute the offence prohibited by the law of Arkansas (§ 2, ch. 159, Digest) it is not sufficient that the defendant sold ardent spirits in quantities less than one quart without license, he must have kept a grocery for that purpose without a license, and sold spirits without license.

1. Jones v. McLeod, 103 Mass. 58.

Drinking or intending to drink the entire glass delivered is not essential to constitute a sale. Dillman v. People, 4 N. Y. Week. Dig. 251.

2. Com. v. Clark, 14 Gray (Mass.) 367.

3. Exchange for Services.—Where a person has taken liquor in payment for work, in the absence of any prior agreement to do the work for liquor, the transaction constitutes a sale and not a barter of the liquor. Bescher v. State, 32 Ind. 480.

4. In the case of State v. Poteet, 86 N. Car. 612, where one received sundry drinks of spirituous liquors in payment of a certain sum the seller to have credit for each drink, and so toties quoties until the debt was satisfied, the court held this to be a violation of the statute against retailing without a license.

5. See Murphy v. State, 1 Ind. 366; Murphy v. State, 1 Smith (Ind.) 261; Com. v. Geary, 146 Mass. 139; Com. v. Thayer, 49 Mass. (8 Metc.) 525; Johnson v. State, 63 Miss. 228; State v. McMinn, 83 N. Car. 668; State v. Kirkham, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 384; State v. Bell, 2 Jones (N. Car.) L. 337; Williams v. State, 23 Tex. App. 499; Richardson v. Com., 76 Va. 1007. See infra, DEVICES, EVASIONS, etc.

6. Com. v. Hogan, 97 Mass. 120; Com. v. Very, 78 Mass. (12 Gray) 124; State v. Barron, 37 Vt. 57; Com. v. Dove, 2 Va. Cas. 26.

Each sale of intoxicating liquor without a license constitutes a distinct and separate offence against the State. Different and distinct offences may be committed by selling to the same persons at different times. State v. Small, 31 Mo. 197.

Playing at Game—Loser to Treat.—Where one plays a game with three persons who severally lose under an agreement that each loser shall treat, is liable as a common seller in three distinct sales if he furnished the treats, although no settlement or payment is made until the playing is concluded. Com. v. Hogan, 97 Mass. 120.

Simple Call.—In prosecutions for the violation of the liquor law, where the liquor is furnished in answer to a simple call, at the same time, and by a sin-

the sale of a glass of liquor they incur jointly the penalty imposed by the statute, and not several penalties.¹

4. Number of Sales or Violations Necessary to Constitute Offence.—Regarding the number of sales of intoxicating liquors made in violation of laws regulating the sale of the same, which are necessary to constitute an offence, there is a conflict of opinion. No doubt the question depends upon the terms of statutes which should be examined. In some States the statutes prescribe penalties for the offence of being a "common seller," some of the cases holding that one sale is sufficient,² others that more than one sale is required.³ But a conviction for the violation of the liquor law will be sustained by proof of two,⁴ three,⁵ gle act, it can constitute but one act of furnishing, and the party incurs but one penalty, notwithstanding it may be drunk by more than one person. State v. Barron, 37 Vt. 57.

Joint Purchase.—Where a dealer to whom a customer applied for whiskey, being out of it, purchased a gallon from another dealer, partly with the money of such customer and partly with his own, divided with the customer,—held, a joint purchase, and not a sale in quantity less than one gallon. Johnson v. State, 63 Miss. 228.

If two persons go together to a shop and each asks for a half pint of liquor, which is delivered to each one in his separate bottle, it is a separate sale of liquor to each, although one at the request of the other pays for both. Com. v. Very, 78 Mass. (12 Gray) 124.

Placing Money on Dumb Waiter.—Where two persons applying for liquor placed money upon what appeared to be a table,—in fact a dumb waiter,—were excluded from the room, and on their return found two glasses of liquor,—these facts prove a joint sale. Henry v. State, 113 Ind. 304, 593.

1. Tracy v. Perry, 5 N. H. 504.

2. Lawson v. State, 55 Ala. 118; McPherson v. State, 54 Ala. 221; Dansey v. State (Fla.), 2 So. Rep. 692; Frese v. State (Fla.), 2 So. Rep. 1; Woody v. State, 32 Ga. 595; Lebkovitz v. State, 113 Ind. 26; State v. Reyelts, 74 Iowa 499; Com. v. Kerrissey, 141 Mass. 110; Com. v. Coolidge, 138 Mass. 193; Com. v. Hoar, 121 Mass. 375; Com. v. Cleary, 105 Mass. 384; Com. v. Thurlow, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 374; People v. Kropp, 52 Mich. 582; People v. Cox (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 235; Kansas City v. Muhlback, 68 Mo. 638; State v. Glasgow, Dudley (S. Car.) 40; State v. Mooty, 3 Hill (S. Car.)

187; State v. Cassety, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 90; State v. Paddock, 24 Vt. 312; State v. Bugbee, 22 Vt. 32; State v. Chandler, 15 Vt. 425. Compare Overall v. Beegan, 37 Mich. 506.

A single act of retailing is a violation of the law prohibiting the selling of spirituous liquors without license. Lawson v. State, 55 Ala. 118; State v. Glasgow, Dudley (S. Car.) 40; State v. Mooty, 3 Hill (S. Car.) 187; State v. Cassety, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 90; State v. Paddock, 24 Vt. 312; State v. Bugbee, 22 Vt. 32.

3. Lawson v. State, 55 Ala. 118; Bryant v. State, 46 Ala. 302; Blackwell v. State, 45 Ark. 90; Overman v. State, 88 Ind. 6; Morrison v. Com., 7 Dana (Ky.) 218; Com. v. Patterson, 138 Mass. 498; Gulick v. State, 50 N. J. L. (21 Vr.) 468; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; Merritt v. State, 19 Tex. App. 435; Halfin v. State, 18 Tex. App. 410; Mansfield v. State, 17 Tex. App. 468.

4. Com. v. Rooney, 142 Mass. 474; Com. v. Tabor, 138 Mass. 496.

5. Com. v. Whalen, 82 Mass. (16 Gray) 25; Com. v. Barker, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 412; Com. v. Porter, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 426; Com. v. Tubbs, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 2; State v. Williams, 6 R. I. 207.

Common Seller of Wine.—In order to constitute a common seller of wine, etc., under the Massachusetts Rev. Stats., ch. 47, § 1, it must be proved that the defendant made three or more distinct sales of spirituous liquor; and it is not sufficient to prove merely that he had a place on his premises fitted up in the usual manner, with a bar for the sale of liquors to be used on the premises; that the place so fitted up was provided with the liquors, or some of them, mentioned in the said

four¹ or more² sales of intoxicating liquors.³

5. Devices, Evasions, etc.—Where it is unlawful to sell or give away liquor, no trick, device, subterfuge or pretence can be allowed to evade the operation or defeat the policy of the liquor law, if liquor be thereby procured.⁴

section; that this place was provided with a person in the employment of the defendant to wait upon customers; that the defendant, by himself or his agent, did in fact sell liquor, of some of the kinds mentioned, to be used upon his premises, to one person or more; and that the defendant, by himself or his agent, was there ready and willing to sell to persons who might come there to buy and drink; though these facts are proper to be submitted to the jury, as evidence of three distinct sales, upon which they may find the defendant guilty as a common seller. Com. v. Tubbs, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 2.

1. State v. Day, 37 Me. 244.

2. Lemons v. State, 50 Ala. 130; Com. v. Perley, 56 Mass. (2 Cush.) 559; Com. v. Odlin, 40 Mass. (23 Pick.) 275.

One travelling with liquors on his person and selling them may be indicted as a common seller. State v. Grames, 68 Me. 418.

A mere sale without pursuing the occupation of selling is not an offence against a statute requiring payment of an occupation tax. Merritt v. State, 19 Tex. App. 435. The offence denounced by the Texas Pen. Code consists not in the mere sale of spirituous liquor, but in the pursuing of the occupation of selling spirituous liquors without having first paid the tax levied on such occupation. Williams v. State, 23 Tex. App. 499.

Who is a Dealer Within the Internal Revenue Laws.—Selling an occasional drink of spirits, out of a bottle, not in a bar room, where no intention of defrauding the national revenue is apparent, is not "carrying on the business of a retail liquor dealer" without having paid the special tax, in contemplation of U. S. Rev. St., § 3242. United States v. Jackson, 1 Hugh. C. C. 531.

3. Occupation of Selling.—The engaging in or pursuing the occupation of selling intoxicating liquors, such business being taxable under the laws of the State, without having first paid the tax due thereon, is a penal offence. Merritt v. State, 19 Tex. App. 435.

To sustain a conviction under a prosecution for selling spirituous liquors in quantities less than one quart without license, it must appear that the accused was engaged in the occupation of selling spirituous liquors in quantities less than that prescribed by the statute, without first having obtained a license therefor. Wells v. State, 18 Tex. App. 417.

4. Boggus v. State, 78 Ala. 26; Looney v. State, 43 Ark. 389; Rabe v. State, 39 Ark. 204; Murphy v. State, 1 Ind. 366; Murphy v. State, 1 Smith (Ind.) 261; Archer v. State, 45 Md. 33; Com. v. Geary, 146 Mass. 139; Com. v. Thayer, 49 Mass. (8 Metc.) 525; Johnson v. State, 63 Miss. 228; State v. McMinn, 83 N. Car. 668; State v. Kirkham, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 384; State v. Bell, 2 Jones (N. Car.) L. 337; Williams v. State, 23 Tex. App. 499; s. c., 5 S. W. Rep. 136. See Rickart v. People, 79 Ill. 85; Marmont v. State, 48 Ind. 21; State v. Mercer, 32 Iowa 405; Walter v. Com., 88 Pa. St. 137; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 429; Holoman v. State, 2 Tex. App. 610; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 439.

Selling Brandy Peaches Without License.—No license is required to sell fruits preserved in brandy; but if one put a few peaches or cherries in a bottle of liquor to evade the law, and sell them, he is guilty. Rabe v. State, 39 Ark. 204.

Selling Whiskey as Turpentine.—A device by which one pretends to sell and the other to buy turpentine, whiskey being in fact intentionally sold, is not effective as an evasion of the law. Looney v. State, 43 Ark. 389.

What Must be Proved to Authorize Conviction.—In order to sustain a conviction for the offence denounced in the act to prevent the violation or evasion of prohibition laws, or of laws requiring license for the sale of liquors, approved February 19th, 1883, three things must appear: 1st, a house, room, enclosure, or other place, where spirituous, vinous or malt liquors are furnished or obtained in violation or evasion of law, or where some device is used to dispose of, furnish, or obtain such liquors, in violation or evasion of law; 2nd, such house, room, enclosure, place or device to be so constructed, and in such manner, as to keep the person concealed who furnishes or disposes of the liquor; and 3rd, a sale, disposition or furnishing of such liquor, in violation or evasion of law, by a person who is at the time concealed. Bog-gus v. State, 78 Ala. 26.

Devices to Evade Statute—Sale by Bulk—Delivery in Small Quantities.—If a person pays for only part of the liquor in a bottle which is passed to him, and he retains possession of the entire contents, simply using a glass to taste the quality of the liquor, and takes it all away, there is a complete sale. Com. v. Geary, 146 Mass. 139.

On an indictment for selling spirituous liquors in quantities less than one quart, it appeared that a customer was in the habit of going to the defendant and contracting for the purchase of a quart of liquor, but that he took away only one pint at a time. Held, that only a pint was sold at each time a pint was delivered. Murphy v. State, 1 Smith (Ind.) 261.

An agreement for the sale of a quart of liquor, the price of a quart being paid, and one pint taken away by the purchaser, the other pint remaining in the cask with other liquor, is a sale of less than a quart, under the statute of Indiana prohibiting such sales. Murphy v. State, 1 Ind. 366.

In North Carolina, on an indictment for retailing spirits by the small measure without a license, it appeared that the agreement was, to deliver to the purchaser from time to time, spirits, in parts of a quart, as he should call for them, the purchaser to take, in the whole, a quart in quantity, and the seller not to exact payment until that quantity was received. Held, that this was a violation of the act prohibiting sale of spirits by the small measure without a license. State v. Kirkham, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 384.

A sold to B a quart of spirituous liquor, and it was agreed that A should retain it in a separate vessel, and that B should have access to it when he pleased, under which agreement the buyer drank the whole at various times. On the trial of an indictment against A, for selling spirits by retail (which indictment had no averment of an intent to evade the statute), the court held that the defendant was not guilty of violating the statute. State

v. Bell, 2 Jones (N. Car.) L. 337.

Same—Contribution Among Purchasers.—A, wanting a pint of whiskey, tried to buy it of B, who, not having any, and wanting some for himself, took from A the price of a pint, added thereto enough to make the price of a gallon, bought a gallon of C with the money, and let A have a pint of it. Held, not a sale of less than a gallon by B to A. Johnson v. State, 63 Miss. 228.

Same—Sale of Merchandise.—In Com. v. Thayer, 49 Mass. (8 Metc.) 525, A, who has no license to sell spirituous liquors, took money of B for some other article, which B received from him, and B thereupon took A's spirituous liquor without any word concerning it; and this was held to constitute a sale of liquor, and that A was guilty of the violation of the statute, if any part of the money given by B and received by A was in payment for the liquor.

In Archer v. State, 45 Md. 33, the defendant, having no license to sell liquors, sold cigarettes, worth from a quarter to a half a cent each, for ten cents apiece, and then invited the purchaser to drink liquors with him. The court said: "There can be no question that if the price asked for the cigarettes was intended to cover the price of the whiskey, which was afterwards nominally given to the purchasers, the transaction was a sale of the whiskey, as well as of the cigarettes. Such an attempt to evade the law is a very shallow one, and testimony tending to show that this was the real character of the transaction was admissible to establish the offence for which the traverser was indicted." Walter v. Com., 88 Pa. St. 137; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 429.

In Williams v. State, 23 Tex. App. 499, defendant was indicted for engaging in pursuing and following the occupation of selling spirituous liquors in quantities less than one quart, without first obtaining a license therefor. It appeared that he had some whiskey on hand, but always refused to sell it because he had no license to do so; that on several occasions he let parties help themselves to whiskey in bottles, and he gave some to others. Held, that the evidence failed to show that whiskey selling was an occupation pursued by him.

Same—Hole in a Table.—An indictment for unlicensed retailing of spirituous liquors, the evidence of the

6. Selling on Prohibited Days.—There are certain days upon which the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited, such as election days,¹ prosecuting witness was that the defendant had a room wherein was a table with a hole in the top and a vessel on it containing such liquor; that at sundry times witness went into the room, poured out a drink of the spirits, less than a quart, and having drunk it, dropped some money, at the rate of a nickel for a drink, into the hole, defendant being present, and nothing being said to him or by witness. Held, no error in refusing to charge that there was no evidence of a sale or contract for the sale of the liquor, and in charging instead that, if the jury should believe from the testimony that the liquor drunk by witness was the property of defendant, and that he received the money put into the hole by the witness as payment thereof and that this was a device to evade the statute against retailing, defendant was guilty. State v. McMinn, 83 N. Car. 668.

1. State v. Cady, 47 Conn. 44; State v. Kidd, 74 Ind. 554; Cearfoss v. State, 42 Md. 403; State v. Sinnott, 15 Neb. 472; People v. Murphy, 5 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 130; Wooster v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 533; State v. Powell, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 164; Smith v. State, 18 Tex. App. 454; Lawrence v. State, 7 Tex. App. 192; Haines v. State, 7 Tex. App. 30.

Selling on Election Day.—In order to constitute the offence of selling or giving away intoxicating liquors on election day, in violation of the statute, the liquor must be sold or given away, in the voting precinct, village, town, or city in which the accused is a voter. Smith v. State, 18 Tex. App. 454.

It is said in State v. Cady, 47 Conn. 44, that the Connecticut statute forbidding the keeping open on the day of any electors' meeting, of any place where it is reputed that intoxicating liquors are sold, requires such a place to be closed on the days of the electors' meeting, even though the occupant has a license to sell liquors.

In State v. Powell, 3 Lea (Tenn.), 164, the defendant was indicted under the Tennessee Code, for keeping open his liquor shop on election day; an indictment charging that defendants "did unlawfully keep open their liquor shop, which is situated within one half mile of the election ground," on the 21st day of November, "said 21st day of November being an election day," etc. The court held, on appeal, that it was not a matter of law whether half a mile from the voting place was too far to incur the penalties of the statute, and that the presumption was that the election was duly held.

The supreme court of Nebraska say in State v. Sinnott, 15 Neb. 472, that persons selling liquor on election days in violation of the statute are punishable by indictment.

The words "during the entire day of any election" mean from midnight to midnight. Haines v. State, 7 Tex. App. 30; Lawrence v. State, 7 Tex. App. 192.

Where, after the polls were closed, a licensed retailer opened his saloon and invited bystanders in to drink, held, that he was guilty of keeping "open" a liquor establishment on election day; the fact that he kept other commodities for sale in the same house, and paid a tax as merchant, was immaterial. Haines v. State, 7 Tex. App. 30.

The giving of spirituous liquors in one's own house on the day of election to a friend in the course of hospitality is a violation of the Maryland act of 1865, ch. 191, prohibiting the sale or giving of spirituous or fermented liquors in the several counties of the State on the day of elections. Cearfoss v. State, 42 Md. 403.

Any person keeping an inn, tavern or hotel, having a license to sell spirituous liquors and wines to be drunk in his house, who sells or gives away any intoxicating liquors or wines on any day and time when an election or town meeting is held within a quarter of a mile of the place of such election or town meeting, is guilty of a misdemeanor under the New York Laws of April 16th, 1857 (Laws of 1857, ch. 648, § 21). People v. Murphy, 5 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 130.

Municipal Election—Water Works.—An election by a city, under Indiana act of March 25th, 1879, § 1, authorizing cities to construct water works, held, to be a "municipal election," within the meaning of the act of March 5th, 1877, § 1, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on days

holidays¹ and Sundays.²

when municipal elections are held. State v. Kidd, 74 Ind. 554.

The term "liquor shop," as used in the Tennessee act of 1870, prohibiting "keeping open a liquor shop" on an election day, applies to a dwelling house where liquor is sold. Wooster v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 533.

School Election.—The provisions of a general election law against giving away or selling intoxicating liquor on election day, does not apply to an election for a school director at an annual school meeting, provided for by the school laws of the State. Stout v. State, 43 Ark. 413.

1. Ruge v. State, 62 Ind. 388; People v. Minter, 59 Mich. 557; Reithmiller v. People, 44 Mich. 280.

"Keeping Open"—Open for any Purpose.—It is said by the supreme court of Michigan, in People v. Minter, 59 Mich. 557, that a charge which authorizes a conviction of one accused of keeping his saloon open on a holiday, if it should appear that it was open "for any purpose," is erroneous. See People v. Waldvogel, 49 Mich. 337. Compare Patten v. Centralia, 47 Ill. 370.

Christmas is a legal holiday within the meaning of a statute which directs all saloons to be closed on legal holidays, Sundays and election days. Reithmiller v. People, 44 Mich. 280.

2. See State v. McMahon, 53 Conn. 407; State v. Ryan, 50 Conn. 411; State v. Barr, 39 Conn. 40; Hall v. State, 4 Harr. (Del.) 132; Sanders v. State, 74 Ga. 82; Hussey v. State, 69 Ga. 54; Harvey v. State, 65 Ga. 568; Hall v. State, 3 Ga. 18; Siebold v. People, 86 Ill. 33; Kroer v. People, 78 Ill. 294; Patten v. Centralia, 47 Ill. 370; Koop v. People, 47 Ill. 327; Bloomington v. Strehle, 47 Ill. 72; Weidman v. People, 7 Ill. App. 38; Shepler v. State, 114 Ind. 194; Tilford v. State, 109 Ind. 359; Dant v. State, 106 Ind. 79; Barton v. State, 99 Ind. 89; Morris v. State, 47 Ind. 503; Schlict v. State, 31 Ind. 246; Parker v. State, 27 Ind. 393; State v. Drischel, 26 Ind. 154, 180; Hingle v. State, 24 Ind. 35; Hingle v. State, 22 Ind. 462; Wood v. State, 21 Ind. 276; State v. Thomasson, 19 Ind. 99; Rosenbaum v. State, 4 Ind. 599; Seim v. State, 55 Md. 566; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 419; State v. Fearson, 2 Md. 310; Com. v. Moore, 145 Mass. 244; Com. v. Hagan, 140 Mass. 289; Com. v. McCurdy, 109 Mass. 364; Com. v. Hyneman, 101 Mass. 30; People v. Cox, (Mich.) 38 N. W. Rep. 235; People v. Cummerford, 58 Mich. 328; People v. Higgins, 56 Mich. 159; People v. Blake, 52 Mich. 566; People v. Roby, 52 Mich. 577; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 270; People v. Waldvogel, 49 Mich. 337; Elkin v. State, 63 Miss. 129; State v. Burnett, 77 Mo. 570; State v. Huffschtmidt, 47 Mo. 73; State v. Sinnott, 15 Neb. 472; Houtsch v. Jersey City, 29 N. J. L. (5 Dutch.) 316; People v. Krank, 110 N. Y. 488; s. c., 46 Hun (N. Y.) 632; Schwab v. Mayforth, 1 N. Y. City Court, 177; 1st re Breslin, 7 N. Y. St. Rep. 764; Wood v. City of Brooklyn, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 425; Pulling v. People, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 384; People v. Murphy, 5 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 130; People v. Page, 3 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 600; Van Zant v. People, 2 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 168; State v. Wool, 86 N. Car. 708; Lincolnton v. McCarter, Busb. (N. Car.) L. 429; Com. v. Naylor, 34 Pa. St. 86; Omit v. Com., 21 Pa. St. 426; State v. Sharrer, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 323; State v. Eskridge, 1 Swan. (Tenn.) 413; Keller v. State, 23 Tex. App. 259; Craddock v. State, 18 Tex. App. 567; Angerhoffer v. State, 15 Tex. App. 613; Thon v. Com., 31 Gratt. (Va.) 887; State v. Wacker, 71 Wis. 672; Jensen v. State, 60 Wis. 577.

"Other Person."—Under a statute which makes it an offence for "any tavern keeper or other person" to sell liquors on Sunday, the words "other person" mean a person engaged in the business of selling liquor. Jensen v. State, 60 Wis. 577.

To convict for selling liquor under a city ordinance enacting that "no person shall keep open, or permit to be kept open, any saloon or place licensed under this ordinance, nor give away, barter, exchange, or sell any liquors of any description on Sunday," it is necessary to prove the defendant was a licensed saloon keeper. Bloomington v. Strehle, 47 Ill. 72.

A town ordinance imposed a penalty on any licensed retailer, who should, on Sunday, "open his shop, where he retails, for the purpose of selling," etc., of the sum of $25 for each offence of selling, etc. Held, that no penalty was incurred, except for selling. Lincolnton v. McCarter, Busb. (N. Car.) L. 429.

Selling Beer on Sunday is not Sabbath-breaking within the meaning of the act of 1866, ch. 66. Seim v. State, 55 Md. 566; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 419.

Same—Sale by Israelites.—It is no defence to a complaint under Massachusetts stat. 1868, ch. 141, § 10, for selling intoxicating liquors on the Lord's day, without a license, that the defendant was a Jew, and conscientiously believed that the seventh day ought to be observed as the Sabbath. Otherwise in a prosecution for violating the secular labor law, ch. 84, Com. v. Hyneman, 101 Mass. 30.

Indictable Offence.—The supreme court of Missouri say, in the case of State v. Huffschmidt, 47 Mo. 73, that selling liquor on Sunday is not an indictable offence under the Missouri statute, but in other States the sale of liquors in any quantity on Sunday is an indictable offence under the State statute and city ordinances. See State v. Sinnott, 15 Neb. 472; State v. Eskridge, 1 Swan. (Tenn.) 413.

The supreme court of Illinois say, in Siebold v. People, 86 Ill. 33, that one may be indicted for keeping open a tippling house on Sunday, in a corporate city, if the municipal authorities have been authorized to act and do not have exclusive jurisdiction in the premises.

Under a statute declaring it a misdemeanor for any tavern or hotel keeper, having a personal license to sell liquors, to sell or give away intoxicating wines or liquors on Sunday, is not applicable other than to those indicted, and it is not an indictable offence under the statute to sell or give away intoxicating liquors or wines on Sunday, when the act is done by a person not licensed to sell liquors, or who is not the keeper of an inn, tavern or hotel. People v. Krank, 110 N. Y. 488.

Liability to Prosecution for Selling Without a License.—A conviction is proper under an indictment for selling without a license, although the proof shows that the sale was on Sunday. The fact that the law makes special provisions for the punishment of a sale on Sunday, whether the accused has a license or not, does not alter the general provisions of the law prohibiting sales without license so as to render it inapplicable to sales made on Sunday. People v. Krank, 110 N. Y. 488.

Liability for Maintaining Nuisance.—A building kept and used for the purpose of selling intoxicating liquors on Sunday is a nuisance within the meaning of Massachusetts Gen. Stat., ch. 87, §§ 6, 7, and an indictment under that statute for keeping a tenement for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor is supported by evidence of sales on Sunday, although the liquor is such that its sale on other days would not be illegal. Com. v. McCurdy, 109 Mass. 364.

The Wisconsin Revised Statute (§ 1563) declares all places in which intoxicating liquors are sold in violation of law to be public nuisances. Held, that a sale of liquor on Sunday by a licensed saloon keeper is not, in the absence of evidence showing that a city ordinance had been passed forbidding the sale of liquor on that day, such a violation of the law as to render the place in which it was sold a nuisance. State v. Wacker, 71 Wis. 672.

Sale by Licensed Person—Indiana Doctrine.—It is said that although a license granted under the Indiana liquor law of 1859 does not authorize the selling on Sunday, yet none of the penalties imposed embrace the case of a sale on Sunday made by a licensed person. Parker v. State, 27 Ind. 393; State v. Drischel, 26 Ind. 154, 180; Hingle v. State, 24 Ind. 35. See Rosenbaum v. State, 4 Ind. 599.

Inn and Hotel Keepers.—Com. v. Naylor, 34 Pa. St. 86, holds that the sale of liquors on Sunday by a licensed inn keeper, is not an indictable offence under the Pennsylvania statutes of 1834, 1849, and that the only penalty incurred by such an act is one imposed by the law of 1874 forbidding worldly employment on the Lord's day. And it was said in Hall v. State, 4 Harr. (Del.) 132, that the sale of liquor by an inn holder on Sunday is not a profanation of the Lord's day; he being obliged by his occupation to keep a public house of entertainment at all times, but this was altered by statute in 1847.

The prevailing doctrine at present is that any inn, hotel or tavern keeper having a license to sell spirituous liquors or wine to be drunk in his house, who sells or gives away intoxicating liquors or wines on Sunday, is guilty of a misdemeanor and may be prosecuted therefor by indictment. See Com. v. Hagan, 140 Mass. 289; People v. Murphy, 5 Park. Cr. Cas. (N.Y.) 130; Jensen v. State, 60 Wis. 577.

A person, licensed as an inn holder, and to sell intoxicating liquors to be drunk on the premises, may be convicted of keeping and maintaining a tenement used for the illegal sale and illegal keeping of intoxicating liquors, if he sells and delivers such liquors to persons on the Lord's day, although, before supplying such persons with liquors, he requires them to eat a cold lunch placed on a table at which the liquors are served. Com. v. Hagan, 140 Mass. 289.

The Wisconsin statute provides that "if any tavern keeper or other person shall sell" intoxicating liquors on Sunday, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, etc. Held, that a "tavern keeper," within the meaning of the act, is a person whose business, in part at least, is to sell such liquors, and the words "or other person" must refer to a similar class of persons, and include, therefore, only those engaged in the business of selling liquors. Jensen v. State, 60 Wis. 577.

Same—Housekeeper.—Under the statute which provides that "no housekeeper shall sell any strong liquor on Sunday, or suffer any drunkenness, gaming, or unlawful recreations in his or her house," it was held that a tavern keeper is a housekeeper in the contemplation of this act; and the term gaming, as there used, is synonymous with betting on games. State v. Fearson, 2 Md. 310.

Same—Sale to Guests.—Under the statutes of New York regulating the sale of spirituous liquors, hotel keepers and inn keepers have a right to sell spirituous liquors to their guests on Sunday, to be used with their meals. In re Breslin, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 210.

Under a statute prohibiting the keeping open on Sunday of any place in which it is reputed that intoxicating liquors are kept for sale, if the reputation applies to the whole house, it may yet be kept open on Sundays for the admission of boarders and travellers. State v. Ryan, 50 Conn. 411.

A statute which provides that a licensed inn holder may supply intoxicating liquor to guests who have resorted to his house for food and lodging, clearly excludes those who resort there for the purpose of procuring and drinking intoxicating liquor on Sundays. Com. v. Hagan, 140 Mass. 289.

Persons who resort to an inn on the Lord's day for the purpose of procuring and drinking liquor are not guests, within the meaning of Massachusetts Pub. Stat., ch. 100, § 9, cl. 2. Com. v. Moore, 145 Mass. 244.

But it has been held that it is not a misdemeanor under the statute, for an inn keeper to sell drink to be taken on the premises on Sunday to persons not lodgers or travellers. Van Zant v. People, 2 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 168.

Same—What Constitutes a Sale.—The supreme court of New Jersey, held in the case of Houtsch v. Jersey City, 29 N. J. L. (5 Dutch.) 316, that having liquors exposed at the bar without having some affirmative act offering to make sale of them, is not an offence against an ordinance providing that no licensed tavern keeper shall expose intoxicating liquors for sale on Sunday.

Sale by Druggists for Medical Purposes.—It is said in Elkin v. State, 63 Miss. 129, that a statute prohibiting keeping open on Sunday is applicable to a druggist who sells liquors in the same store unless that part where drugs are kept does not afford access to the place where liquors are sold.

Under a statute forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquor on Sunday, "unless the person to whom the same is sold shall have first procured a written prescription therefor from some regular practicing physician in the county where the same is sold." A druggist who sells such liquors on Sunday without a physician's prescription will be liable to fine and prosecution, although the liquor is used for medical purposes, and this fact is known to the druggist at the time of the sale. Barton v. State, 99 Ind. 89; State v. Wool, 86 N. Car. 708. See Shepler v. State, 114 Ind. 194; Tilford v. State, 109 Ind. 359.

The fact that the druggist making the sale is himself a physician is no defence to the indictment. Tilford v. State, 109 Ind. 359.

Giving Away Liquors on Sunday.—The supreme court of Indiana say in the case of Dant v. State, 106 Ind. 79, that where the indictment charged a sale on Sunday and the evidence did not show any payment or contract to pay for the liquor, which the witness drank, the evidence will not be set aside for variance, because a gift is as much a violation of the statute as a sale.

But where a statute does not prohibit the giving away of intoxicating liquor on Sunday, but only denounces its sale, a conviction cannot be sustained unless a sale is proved. State v. Burnett, 77 Mo. 570; Keller v. State, 23 Tex. App. 259.

And where a statute provides inter alia that it shall be a misdemeanor for an inn, tavern or hotel keeper, or a person licensed to sell liquor, to sell or give away any intoxicating liquor on Sunday, such statute is said not to include in this clause a person not an inn holder. People v. Page, 3 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.), 600.

Keeping Place Open—What Constitutes.—Keeping a place open for the use of family and boarders is not a violation of the statute prohibiting keeping open on Sunday. State v. McMahon, 53 Conn. 407; Com v. Lattinville, 120 Mass. 385. And the mere opening of a house on Sunday and permitting people to resort there, no tipping being intended or permitted, will not constitute the offence of keeping open a tipping house on Sunday. Weidman v. People, 7 Ill. App. 38.

But it has been held in Michigan to be a violation of the statute of that State against keeping saloons open on Sunday, that the saloon was open for the purpose of being cleaned, although no liquor was sold. People v. Waldvogel, 49 Mich. 337; People v. Minter, 59 Mich. 557. Compare Patten v. Centralia, 47 Ill. 370.

Same—Tipping Houses.—A boarding house keeper will be held liable for keeping open a tipping house on Sunday, though he sell but a single glass of beer, provided his saloon is then accessible to the public. Koop v. People, 47 Ill. 327.

But merely opening the door does not constitute the offence, unless it be kept open as on secular days. Patten v. Centralia, 47 Ill. 370.

A conviction of keeping open a tipping house on Sunday held, sustained by proof that the house was a tipping house, that it was kept open on Sunday, and that defendant was its owner, although defendant may not have been visible to those resorting to the house for the purpose of tipping. Sanders v. State, 74 Ga. 82.

It is not necessary to constitute the offence of keeping a tipping house open the Sabbath day, under the Illinois statute, that the house be kept open as on week days. It will be within the offence named if it is so kept that access may be had thereto on the Sabbath, and facilities afforded for the obtaining of intoxicating drinks, and it is not material whether the access is by the front door or back door, or whether the door is kept open or is only opened on application for admittance. Kroer v. People, 78 Ill. 294.

Same—Saloons.—A saloon is not "closed" so long as customers can get through a door and get liquor, or so long as they are there, nor is it material that the bar keeper is not there if the customers can help themselves. People v. Cummerford, 58 Mich. 328.

Where a saloon keeper is prosecuted for violating the law which requires all saloons to be closed on Sunday, the respondent's intention in allowing his saloon to be opened is immaterial; and the same is true even where the opening was the act of his bar tender and without his knowledge or express authority. People v. Blake, 52 Mich. 566; People v. Roby, 52 Mich. 577; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 270.

Same—Part of Premises—Adjoining Rooms.—Where the law requires tipping houses to be closed on the Sabbath day, if the whole house is used for tipping purposes it must all be closed; if any or part is so used, that must be closed. Where a part of a tipping house was used for a bed room, and between that part and the saloon there was an open way unclosed by a door, or otherwise, keeping open a door permitting ingress and egress to and from the part used as a bed room on the Sabbath day, would amount to a violation of the statute. Harvey v. State, 65 Ga. 568.

Where a saloon keeper connects his living rooms with his saloon and occasionally serves liquor in them, they become part of the saloon and to open them on Sunday to others than his family is to violate the law against opening saloons on Sunday. People v. Cox (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 235.

A saloon keeper had a bar in a front room, and two rooms in the rear used for drinking and card playing. Held, that the rear rooms were part of the saloon, and, if kept open on Sunday, the saloon was kept open. People v. Higging, 56 Mich. 159.

A saloon keeper occupied three rooms for that business, and lived over them. The rooms opened into one another from front to rear, and the rear room had an outer door. The bar was in the front room; the other two were used for card playing and drinking. Between the front and back rooms there was a hole in the wall. Held, that the saloon included the three rooms; and if any outsider had access to the rear rooms on Sunday, no matter for what purpose, the statute requiring the saloon to be kept closed on that day was violated. People v. Higgins, 56 Mich. 159.

7. Selling to Prohibited Persons—a. MINORS.—In most, if not all, of the States, statutes have been enacted prohibiting sales of intoxicating liquors to minors without the consent of their parents

Under the statute (Gen. Stats. Connecticut, p. 522, § 60) which forbids the keeping open on Sunday of any place in which it is reputed that intoxicating liquors are kept for sale, an entire hotel may come within the statute as having such a reputation, although liquor may not have been sold in every room in it. State v. Ryan, 50 Conn. 411.

Where a bar room is connected by inside halls with living rooms, through which the proprietor permits others than his family to pass into and from the bar room, he cannot open said rooms to the public on Sunday. People v. Cox (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 235.

But where such other rooms are distinct from the bar and its supplies, he has the right to keep them open for living purposes on Sunday. People v. Cox (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 235.

Michigan acts 1887, No. 313, § 7, providing that each violation thereof shall be a separate offence, does not apply to an offence of not keeping closed on Sunday, into which the selling of liquor does not necessarily enter. People v. Cox (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 235.

One is guilty of keeping an open tipping house on Sunday if liquor be then retailed and drunk in his restaurant in the rear of his office, the buyer entering by simply pushing open the street door of the office; and this though the bar be concealed by a canvas on which is a sign, "Bar closed." Hussey v. State, 69 Ga. 54.

In Connecticut, on trial of a complainant for a violation of the statute against keeping open on Sunday, "a shop, store, saloon or other building in which it is reputed that spirituous and intoxicating liquors, ale, and lager beer, are exposed for sale," it appeared that the accused kept open an enclosed park, containing four acres of ground, within which was an unenclosed and uncovered platform for dancing, from which lager beer was sold. Held, that the statute was not intended to reach all sales of intoxicating liquors on Sunday, or all cases where such liquors are exposed for sale on that day, but was designed to reach cases where such liquors are kept in buildings for purposes of sale, until such buildings acquire the reputation specified in the statute, and that neither the park nor the platform was a "house," "saloon," or "building," within the meaning of the statute. State v. Barr, 39 Conn. 41.

Kind and Quality of Liquor.—A statute prohibiting the sale of "spirituous liquors" on Sunday includes wine and ale. State v. Sharrer, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 323.

To sustain a prosecution under the Indiana act of 1865, it is said that it was not necessary to show that the quantity of liquor sold was less than a quart at a time. The statute prohibiting the sale by licensed retailers of any quantity of intoxicating liquor on Sunday. Schlicht v. State, 31 Ind. 246.

Particular Hours.—Where a general act makes it a penal offence to sell liquor on Sunday, and defendant holds a municipal license to sell liquor, and a municipal ordinance makes it an offence to sell between specified hours on Sunday, a conviction may be had for selling on Sunday at another hour than those during which the ordinance prohibits the sales. Angerhoffer v. State, 15 Tex. App. 613.

A sale of liquor at quarter of one on Monday morning is no violation of the statute that forbids the sale on Sunday, nor is it within a statute which forbids sales of liquors between one and five o'clock in the morning. Schwab v. Mayforth, 1 N. Y. City Ct. 177; citing Pulling v. People, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 384; Campbell v. International Ins. Co., 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 310.

A statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks anywhere in the commonwealth, from twelve o'clock Saturday night to sunrise of the next Monday morning, and a city ordinance against keeping open a bar room on Sunday, are aimed at different offences, and have different penalties; and the latter is not within the proviso of the former. Thon v. Com., 31 Gratt. (Va.) 887.

A general law required the closing of bar rooms on Sunday. A municipal charter authorized the city to close them on Sunday, and to prescribe hours for closing them. An ordinance of the city prohibited barter and traffic between 9 A.M. and 4 P.M. Held, that it was not an offence to sell liquor in the city at an hour between 9 and 4. Cradock v. State, 18 Tex. App. 567.

or guardian.¹ Under these statutes each sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor is a separate offence, and there may be as many convictions as there are sales made.² In some of the States, a violation of this law is made a misdemeanor, while in others there is only a penalty attached, and the offence, therefore, is not indictable.³

1. See Page v. State, 84 Ala. 446; Hill v. State, 62 Ala. 168; Bain v. State, 61 Ala. 75; Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 16; Weed v. State, 55 Ala. 13; Marshall v. State, 49 Ala. 21; Merkle v. State, 1 Ala. (Sel. Cas.) 45; s. c., 37 Ala. 139; Maschwitz v. State, 49 Ark. 170; State v. Blahut, 48 Ark. 34; Gillan v. State, 47 Ark. 555; Foster v. State, 45 Ark. 361; Ward v. State, 45 Ark. 351; Rounders v. State, 37 Ark. 399; Edgar v. State, 37 Ark. 219, 399; s. c., 45 Ark. 356; Crampton v. State, 37 Ark. 108; Nale v. State, 36 Ark. 150; Redmond v. State, 36 Ark. 58; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 24; Cloud v. State, 36 Ark. 151; State v. McMahon, 53 Conn. 407; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 140; Dukes v. State, 79 Ga. 795; Loeb v. State, 75 Ga. 258; Reich v. State, 63 Ga. 616; Newman v. State, 63 Ga. 533; Johnson v. People, 83 Ill. 431; Albrecht v. People, 78 Ill. 510; Byars v. City of Mt. Vernon, 77 Ill. 467; Farmer v. People, 77 Ill. 322; McCutcheon v. People, 69 Ill. 601; Flynn v. Galesburg, 12 Ill. App. 200; Behler v. State, 112 Ind. 140; Mulreed v. State, 107 Ind. 62; Kreamer v. State, 106 Ind. 192; Bird v. State, 104 Ind. 384; Hunter v. State, 101 Ind. 241; Swigart v. State, 99 Ind. 111; Holmes v. State, 88 Ind. 145; Payne v. State, 74 Ind. 203; Johnson v. State, 74 Ind. 197; Robinius v. State, 67 Ind. 94; Moore v. State, 65 Ind. 382; Robinius v. State, 63 Ind. 235; Ihinger v. State, 53 Ind. 251; Ball v. State, 50 Ind. 595; Werneke v. State, 50 Ind. 22; Ward v. State, 48 Ind. 289; Goetz v. State, 41 Ind. 162; Ihrig v. State, 40 Ind. 423; State v. Clottu, 33 Ind. 409; Fitzenrider v. State, 30 Ind. 238; Simons v. State, 25 Ind. 331; Rineman v. State, 24 Ind. 80; Farbach v. State, 24 Ind. 77; State v. Kalb, 14 Ind. 404; State v. Hamilton, 75 Ind. 238; State v. Thompson, 73 Iowa 282; State v. Douglass, 73 Iowa 279; State v. Coenan, 48 Iowa 567; Jamison v. Burton, 43 Iowa 282; Com. v. Davis, 12 Bush (Ky.) 240; Baer v. Com., 10 Bush (Ky.) 8; Ulrich v. Com., 6 Bush (Ky.) 400; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 522; Com. v. O'Leary, 148 Mass. 95; Com. v. Barnes, 138 Mass. 511; Com. v.

Tabor, 138 Mass. 496; Com. v. Uhrig, 138 Mass. 492; St. Goddard v. Burnham, 124 Mass. 578; Com. v. Lattinville, 120 Mass. 385; McNeil v. Collinson, 130 Mass. 167; Faulks v. People, 39 Mich. 200; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 374; State v. McGinnis, 30 Minn. 48; State v. Richter, 23 Minn. 81; Ritcher v. State, 63 Miss. 304; Fahey v. State, 62 Miss. 402; Cox v. State (Miss.), 3 So. Rep. 373; State v. Amor, 77 Mo. 568; State v. Slaughter, 17 Mo. App. 142; State v. McBrayer, 98 N. Car. 619; State v. Lawrence, 97 N. Car. 492; Perry v. Edwards, 44 N. Y. 223; Ross v. People, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 591; Farrell v. State, 32 Ohio St. 456; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 614; Grepel v. State, 32 Ohio St. 167; State v. Munson, 25 Ohio St. 381; Hatfield v. Com., 120 Pa. St. 395; s. c., 14 Atl. Rep. 151; Com. v. Jessup, 63 Pa. St. 34; Williams v. State, 23 Tex. App. 70; Lantzner v. State, 19 Tex. App. 320; Hunter v. State, 18 Tex. App. 444; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 319; Pressler v. State, 13 Tex. App. 95; State v. Gilmore, 9 W. Va. 641; State v. Cain, 9 W. Va. 559; State v. Hartfiel, 24 Wis. 60.

Sale to Minors.—On an indictment for selling liquor to two minors, it appeared in evidence that the defendant sold but to one; the court held that as the offence was complete when he sold to one, he was properly convicted. Dukes v. State, 79 Ga. 795.

Under the Mississippi code subjecting to penalty "any person who may own or have any interest in . . . liquor sold contrary to this act," it was held that the owner was subjected to the penalty imposed for sale to a minor under the statute. Fahey v. State, 62 Miss. 402.

Minority of Purchaser—Defendant's Intention.—In the case of Marshall v. State, 49 Ala. 21, on the trial of an indictment for selling liquor to a minor, a charge to the jury that the fact of the minority of the person to whom the liquor was sold is conclusive as to the defendant's intention was held to be erroneous.

2. State v. Blahut, 48 Ark. 34; McNeil v. Collinson, 130 Mass. 167.

3. State v. Slaughter, 17 Mo. App.

(1) Ownership of Liquors; Knowledge and Consent to Sale.—It is thought that the ownership of the liquors given to a minor is immaterial;¹ but where, under an indictment for the sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor, the proof does not show the sale to have been made with the knowledge or consent of the defendant, he should be acquitted.²

(2) Knowledge or Belief as to Minority of Purchaser.—The offence of selling liquor to a minor cannot, as a matter of law, be complete unless the seller had reason to believe the person to be a minor; and, though prima facie, his knowledge may be presumed to accord with the fact, yet he may show that the person was unknown to him, and looked like or represented himself to be an adult, or that the person's family or the community treated him as an adult.³ It is held, by a respectable number of cases,

142. See State v. Thompson, 73 Iowa 282; State v. Douglass, 73 Iowa 279; Baer v. Com., 10 Bush (Ky.) 8; State v. Amor, 77 Mo. 568.

Under a statute providing that no one shall sell intoxicating liquors except for medicinal purposes, and then only when he has a permit from the county board of supervisors; but these sections contain no penalty for a violation of their provisions. Section 1539 forbids the sale of liquors by any person to minors, intoxicated persons or those who are in the habit of becoming intoxicated, and imposes a penalty for such sales to such persons, but does not make them misdemeanors. Section 1540 provides that if a person who does not hold a permit from the board of supervisors sells liquor to any person, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor. Plaintiff, who held a permit from the board of supervisors for the sale of liquors for unlawful purposes, was tried criminally for sales made by him to minors and intoxicated persons. Held, that a person holding such a permit, while liable to a civil action for the penalties imposed in section 1539, cannot be prosecuted criminally for such sales. State v. Thompson, 73 Iowa 282; State v. Douglass, 73 Iowa 279.

1. Under the Alabama code, the ownership of the liquors is immaterial, because it is the voluntary delivery into the possession of a minor, with or without anything being given in consideration, which the statute denounces and punishes. Hill v. State, 62 Ala. 168.

2. This is equally true whether the sale be made upon credit or for cash. Ihrig v. State, 40 Ind. 423.

On the contrary it has been held, in Loeb v. State, 75 Ga. 258, that where liquor is sold to a minor on the premises of defendant, he is guilty of the offence whether he was present or not, or knew or consented to the sale or not.

3. State v. Kalb, 14 Ind. 404. See Hunter v. State, 101 Ind. 241; Robinson v. State, 63 Ind. 235; Ihrig v. State, 53 Ind. 251; Stephenson v. State, 28 Ind. 272; Jamison v. Burton, 43 Iowa 282; Faulks v. People, 39 Mich. 200; s. c., 33 Am. Dec. 374; Perry v. Edwards, 44 N. Y. 223; Williams v. State, 23 Tex. App. 70; Hunter v. State, 18 Tex. App. 444; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 319; Pressler v. State, 13 Tex. App. 93; State v. Gilmore, 9 W. Va. 641; State v. Cain, 9 W. Va. 559.

Reasonable Belief.—The supreme court of Michigan held, in the case of Faulks v. People, 39 Mich. 200; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 374, that on a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquors to a minor, it is a good defence to show that the seller reasonably believed him of age. The court say: "It cannot be assumed that the legislature would attempt such a wrong as to punish a criminal act which involved no criminal intent; there can be no crime where there was no criminal mind. This principle is as old as the criminal law, and underlies the whole of it. Pond v. People, 8 Mich. 150." See to same effect Farrell v. State, 32 Ohio St. 456; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 614.

Knowing or Having Reason to Believe.—Under the New York statute, the words "knowing or having reason to believe him to be," applies to minors as well as to Indians and ap-that a necessary element of the offence of selling intoxicating liquors to minors is, that the accused knowingly sold the liquor to a minor, and this knowledge must be alleged in the indictment and sustained by the proof;¹ but a contrary doctrine prevails in some courts,² where it is held that the vendor sells at his peril, and that it is incumbent upon him to know that his prentices, and in an action to recover the penalty therein provided for the sale of spirituous liquors to a minor under the age of eighteen years, the plaintiff has the burden of showing that the defendant knew or had reason to believe that the person to whom the sale was made was not that age. Perry v. Edwards, 44 N. Y. 223.

Evidence of Minority—Personal Appearance.—It was held by the supreme court of Indiana, in the case of Robinus v. State, 63 Ind. 235; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 322, note, that a sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor made by the seller in the reasonable and honest belief that such minor is of full age, is not the violation of the liquor law, and that the court has no right to take into account, in determining the guilt or innocence of such seller, the personal appearance of such minor as to age. The court say: "It was further shown, however, by the bill of exceptions, that 'the court, without being requested thereto by the counsel for the State, or by anyone else, having personally inspected the appearance of the witness, Edward Geisendorff, who was present in court and testified as a witness, took his youthful appearance into consideration in determining the question of defendant's guilt or innocence, to which the said defendant at the time objected and excepted.' This action of the court was assigned by the appellant as a cause for a new trial in his motion therefor, and we think it was well assigned. The question presented thereby is not a new question in this court; substantially the same question was decided in the case of Stephenson v. State, 28 Ind. 272, and again in the more recent case of Ingber v. State, 53 Ind. 251. In these cases it was held in substance, and we think correctly, that the personal appearance of a party or witness cannot be considered by a court or jury as evidence in determining the question of the age of such party or witness. The cases cited are decisive of the case now before us."

Same—Beard of Minor.—The supreme court of Indiana held, in the case of Hunter v. State, 101 Ind. 241, that it is error to withdraw from the consideration of the jury the fact that the minor had a beard, where the question to be determined is the one of reasonable cause to believe the minor over age.

Proof of Knowledge.—The court of appeals of Texas say, in the case of Hunter v. State, 18 Tex. App. 444; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 319, that under a statute punishing the sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor with knowledge that he is under age, the knowledge of the minority must be explicitly proved; it cannot be presumed even in cases of a purchaser only sixteen years old. The court say: "In creating this offence our statute uses the word 'knowingly,' and it is, therefore, an essential element of the offence that the defendant knew at the time he sold the liquor that the purchaser thereof was under the age of twenty-one years. This knowledge must, therefore, not only be alleged, but must be affirmatively proved." Pressler v. State, 13 Tex. App. 95.

1. Pressler v. State, 13 Tex. App. 95. See Williams v. State, 23 Tex. App. 70; s. c., 3 S. W. Rep. 661; Hunter v. State, 18 Tex. App. 444; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 319.

The Texas statute, defining the offence of selling intoxicating liquors to minors, employs the word "knowingly" in such a manner as to constitute the knowledge an essential element of the offence, and in order to support a conviction, the evidence, either direct or circumstantial, must show that when the defendant sold the liquor he knew that the person to whom he sold it was a minor. Hunter v. State, 18 Tex. App. 444; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 319.

2. Jamison v. Burton, 43 Iowa 282; State v. Gilmore, 9 W. Va. 641; State v. Cain, 9 W. Va. 559.

Knowledge by the seller, or reasonable cause to believe, that the buyer of liquor was a minor, is not necessary to constitute the offence, under West Virginia statute, of selling to a minor without consent of his parent, etc. If the buyer was in fact a minor, the seller must show, that the sale was made on the prescribed written order, in order to justify it. State v. Gilmore, 9 W. Va. 641; State v. Cain, 9 W. Va. 559.

The sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor is within the prohibition of Iowa code (§ 1539), notwithstanding the seller had no knowledge that the purchaser was under age; and his knowledge of that fact need not be alleged in the petition, in an action for the benefit of the school fund, founded on such sale. Jamison v. Burton, 43 Iowa 282.

Effect of Knowledge as Defence or Justification.—It is held by some cases that under a statute forbidding the sale of intoxicating spirits to a minor without written consent of their parents or guardians, an honest belief that the purchaser is of full age will not absolve the seller in case of mistake. Crampton v. State, 37 Ark. 108; Pounders v. State, 37 Ark. 399; Redmond v. State, 36 Ark. 58; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 24; Mulreed v. State, 107 Ind. 62; Com. v. Barnes, 138 Mass. 511; Com. v. Uhrig, 138 Mass. 592. See as bearing upon this question Sikes v. State, 30 Ark. 496; Smyth v. State, 13 Ark. 666; Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6; Com. v. Waite, 93 Mass. (11 Allen) 264; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 711; Com. v. Farren, 91 Mass. (9 Allen) 489; Com. v. Boynton, 84 Mass. (2 Allen) 160; State v. Hartfiel, 24 Wis. 60.

Inquiry of Purchaser as to His Age.—In the case of State v. Hartfiel, 24 Wis. 60, the evidence for the prosecution showed that the defendant enquired of the minor before letting him have the liquor whether he was of age and received an answer in the affirmative, and also showed that the minor was six feet and one inch in height; the jury were instructed that ignorance or mistake on the part of the accused as to the age of the minor was no defence, and he was convicted. The question of the correctness of the instruction was certified by the supreme court. DICKSON, C. J., said: "The words 'knowingly,' 'wilfully,' or other words of equivalent import, are omitted from the statute, and the offence is made to consist solely in the fact of the sale of intoxicating liquors or drinks to a minor. The authorities cited are to the effect that where a statute commands that an act be done or omitted, which in the absence of such statute might have been done or omitted without culpability, ignorance of the fact or state of things contemplated by the statute will not excuse." Citing Barnes

v. State, 19 Conn. 398; Com. v. Wash, 48 Mass. (7 Metc.) 472; Com. v. Boynton, 84 Mass. (2 Allen) 160; Com. v. Farren, 91 Mass. (9 Allen) 489; Com. v. Waite, 93 Mass. (11 Allen) 264; s. c., 87 Am. Dec. 711; Com. v. Raymond, 97 Mass. 567; Com. v. Ellwell, 43 Mass. (2 Metc.) 190; 2 Greenl. Ev., § 21. See Redmond v. State, 36 Ark. 58; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 24, 27.

A party's belief, however honestly entertained, that a minor to whom he sells liquor without the consent of his parent or guardian is of full age will not justify or excuse him, but will mitigate his punishment. Crampton v. State, 37 Ark. 108; Pounders v. State, 37 Ark. 399.

A sale to a minor, under the belief that he was of lawful age, based upon appearances, will not excuse defendant, unless it appears he exercised due care to ascertain his age. Mulreed v. State, 107 Ind. 62.

One prosecuted for illegally selling liquor cannot defend on the ground of his ignorance of the fact that the purchaser was one of a class to whom a sale could not lawfully be made. Com. v. Barnes, 138 Mass. 511; Com. v. Uhrig, 138 Mass. 492.

Honest Belief Good Defence.—On the other hand, it is held that the sale of liquor to a minor by a licensed vendor, under the belief that he is an adult, is not an indictable offence. See Dotson v. State, 62 Ala. 141; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 2; Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 16; Kreamer v. State, 106 Ind. 192; Hunter v. State, 101 Ind. 241; Robinius v. State, 63 Ind. 235; Rineman v. State, 24 Ind. 80; Farbach v. State, 24 Ind. 77; Faulks v. People, 39 Mich. 200; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 374. Compare Crampton v. State, 37 Ark. 108; Pounders v. State, 37 Ark. 399.

In such a case the burden of proof is on the defendant to show honest belief. Rineman v. State, 24 Ind. 80; Farbach v. State, 24 Ind. 77.

A person cannot be convicted under a statute punishing selling liquor to a minor, if he honestly believed, on creditable information, that the purchaser was of age; for there is no criminal intent. Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 16.

Where the seller of intoxicating liquors to a minor, believes, and has good reason to believe, at the time of the sale, that the minor is an adult, he is not guilty of the offence prescribed by § 2094 of Indiana statute prohibiting sales to minors. Kreamer v. State, 106 customer is under no disability.¹ This conflict in the decisions is thought to be due to the wording of the various statutes.

It seems that the mere fact that one desiring to purchase intoxicating liquors looked as though he was twenty-one years old and so represented himself, is not sufficient of itself to excuse the sale.²

(3) Kind and Character of Liquor.—It has been said that statutes prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors includes all fomented liquors commonly used as a beverage,³ cider and domestic wines,⁴ and "bitters."⁵

Ind. 192; Hunter v. State, 101 Ind. 241; Robinius v. State, 63 Ind. 235.

1. See Edgar v. State, 37 Ark. 219; Pounders v. State, 37 Ark. 399; Reich v. State, 63 Ga. 616; Farmer v. People, 77 Ill. 322; McCutcheon v. People, 69 Ill. 601; Flynn v. Galesburg, 12 Ill. App. 200; Mulreed v. State, 107 Ind. 62; Ulrich v. Com., 6 Bush (Ky.) 400; State v. Hartfel, 24 Wis. 60.

Showing Good Faith and Due Care.—One prosecuted for selling liquor to a minor must not only show that in good faith he believed from appearances that the buyer was not a minor, but must also show and exercise due care to ascertain the buyer's age. Mulreed v. State, 107 Ind. 62.

Some of the cases go further and hold that a dealer in intoxicating liquors must determine for himself, at his peril, whether one to whom he sells is a minor; if a minor, the dealer cannot shield himself from responsibility through his ignorance of the fact. Flynn v. Galesburg, 12 Ill. App. 200. Thus it is said by the supreme court of Arkansas, in the case of Edgar v. State, 37 Ark. 219; Pounders v. State, 37 Ark. 399, that it is no excuse or justification to one who sells liquor to a minor without the written consent of his parents or guardian, that both he and the minor believed, at the time, that the latter was of age.

The supreme court of Illinois, in the cases of Farmer v. People, 77 Ill. 322, and McCutcheon v. People, 69 Ill. 601, say that upon a trial for selling liquor to a minor without consent of his parents or guardian, the fact that the defendant did not know the purchaser to be a minor furnishes no defence. Where the general law forbids all persons to sell liquor, except to those specially licensed, one who takes a license upon condition that he shall not sell to minors is bound to ascertain whether a person applying to buy is a minor or not.

Sufficiency of Evidence—Extent of Enquiry.—The sale of spirituous liquors to a minor is sufficient to convict of the offence, unless the defendant, after due enquiry, was honestly mistaken in respect to the minor's age, and to show such mistake; while the dealer need not enquire of the parent alone as to the age of the person to whom he sells, yet he must exercise special diligence to ascertain the truth; and such diligence will not be manifested by enquiry of the minor alone or by such persons as have no better means of knowing than the dealer, but it must be of such persons as to satisfy the jury that the enquiry was honest, and not a mere subterfuge or cover for crime. Reich v. State, 63 Ga. 616.

Charge to Jury.—On the trial of an indictment for selling liquor to a minor, it is proper to charge that if the defendant sold liquor to a minor he was guilty, unless he used special diligence to ascertain whether he was a minor or not, and that the diligence should be such as to satisfy the jury that he was making honest enquiry to ascertain the truth. Reich v. State, 63 Ga. 616.

2. See Behler v. State, 112 Ind. 140; Bird v. State, 104 Ind. 384; Swigart v. State, 99 Ind. 111; Moore v. State, 65 Ind. 382; Goetz v. State, 41 Ind. 162.

3. Markle v. State, 1 Ala. (Sel. Cas.) 45; s. c., 37 Ala. 139.

4. Hatfield v. Com., 120 Pa. St. 395; s. c., 21 Week. N. C. 455.

5. Upon a trial for selling intoxicating liquor to a minor without consent of his parent, etc., the proof showed that the liquors sold were "bitters" manufactured by defendant according to a formula prepared by a physician. Held, that the defendant had no ground of objection to the want of affirmative

(4) Sale Not Authorized or Protected by Statute.—Where the sale of intoxicating liquor to a minor is one of the prohibited sales which a license does not authorize a vendor by retail to make, it is immaterial whether the party making such sale has or has not a license to sell to another and a different class of persons.¹

(5) Consent, etc., of Parent or Guardian.—Under some statutes a vendor of intoxicating liquors may sell to a minor upon the written consent or direction of the parent or guardian of such minor.²

proof that he knew the intoxicating character of the liquors sold. Being the manufacturer, he was chargeable with knowledge of what they contained. Byars v. City of Mt. Vernon, 77 Ill. 467.

1. State v. Hamilton, 75 Ind. 238. See Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 522; Com. v. Tabor, 138 Mass. 496; State v. McGinnis, 30 Minn. 48.

In a prosecution for the sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor, under a statute which forbids "any person" to so dispose of intoxicating liquors, it is not material whether the accused was a person licensed to sell intoxicating liquors, nor whether his occupation was one of those named in that clause of the statute, to wit, that of a saloon keeper. State v. McGinnis, 30 Minn. 48.

An act to prohibit sale of intoxicating liquors to minors which make it unlawful for any person or persons, whether licensed or not, to sell or give such liquors to a minor, and which provides a penalty by fine, and that a licensed person shall have his license suppressed, applies to private individuals whether licensed or not. Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 522.

2. Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 16; Mascowitz v. State, 49 Ark. 170; Pounders v. State, 37 Ark. 399; State v. Coenan, 48 Iowa 567; Com. v. Davis, 12 Bush (Ky.) 240; State v. Lawrence, 97 N. C. 492; Lantzner v. State, 19 Tex. App. 320.

Written Consent of Parent, etc.—Proof that the minor's father had consented that he should drink lager beer does not establish a defence to a prosecution under a statute punishing one who sells to a minor without his father's consent. Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 16. The fact that a minor is carrying on business for himself will not justify a vendor of intoxicating liquors in selling to him without the written consent or order of his parents or guardian. Pounders v. State, 37 Ark. 399.

"Parent."—The sale or gift of intoxicating liquor to a person under the age of twenty-one years, without the written consent of the parent or guardian of such minor, or other person standing in the place of such parent or guardian, is a penal offence in this State, under the provisions of article 376 of the penal code. "Parent," in common parlance, signifies father or mother, and, by express provision of article 22 of the penal code of this State, is made to include both male and female. "Father" or "mother," therefore, is not equivalent to the statutory word "parent;" and an information does not negative the consent of the "parent" by using the term "father" instead of "parent." The general rule is that the indictment or information should follow and conform to the statute denouncing the offence. When other words are used, the words substituted must be equivalent to the statutory terms, or be of a more comprehensive and extensive signification. Lantzner v. State, 19 Tex. App. 320.

In Arkansas.—The written consent of the father of a minor, as follows, "Please let my son Jack have anything in reason, or a drink when he wants it, and oblige a friend," signed and delivered to the defendant by the father, is a continuing authority to sell to such minor, and, until revoked, a complete defence to an indictment for selling liquor to such minor in ordinary retail quantities, without the consent of his parent or guardian. Mascowitz v. State, 49 Ark. 170; s. c., 4 S. W. Rep. 656.

In Kentucky.—Whenever a minor is furnished with spirituous, vinous, or malt liquor, by anyone other than his parent, without the special written direction of the father or guardian of such and under others he cannot.¹

(6) Joint Sale to Minor and Adult.—Upon a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquors to a minor, if the evidence shows that there was a sale to the minor alone, or jointly with an adult, the saloon keeper is guilty of a violation of the statute prohibiting such a sale to a minor;² but a defendant cannot be convicted of selling liquor to a minor who merely delivers liquor to him under a purchase by another who treats the minor. In such case the sale is to the purchaser and not to the minor.³

(7) Giving Away Liquor to a Minor.—Under a statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor, giving such liquors to a minor is not within the terms of the statute, and not in-minor, there is a violation of the law. Com. v. Davis, 12 Bush (Ky.) 240.

The North Carolina Code forbids all dealers in intoxicating "drinks or liquors" to sell in any manner, or to give away, to any unmarried person under the age of 21 years, knowing such person to be under that age, any such drinks or liquors, and makes it a misdemeanor and indictable to do so; and gives the father, or if he be dead, the mother, guardian or employer of any minor to whom such sale or gift shall be made, a right of action against the guilty party. Held, upon the trial of an indictment for the violation of said sections, that the fact that the father of the minor authorized the sale, did not furnish the defendant with any legal excuse or justification. State v. Lawrence, 97 N. C. 492.

Order Must be in Writing.—A party cannot justify the act of giving intoxicating liquors to a minor by establishing that he did it by order of the parent unless he shows that the order was in writing. State v. Coenan, 48 Iowa 567.

1. See State v. Clottu, 33 Ind. 409; Grepel v. State, 32 Ohio St. 167; State v. Lawrence, 97 N. C. 492.

A liquor seller is no less guilty in selling to a minor because the minor's father has authorized the sale. State v. Lawrence, 97 N. C. 492.

Under the Indiana act (1 Gav. & H. 614) providing that a license to sell intoxicating liquors shall not authorize a sale "to any person under the age of twenty-one years," the fact that the father authorized the sale of such liquors to his child is no defence to an indictment for selling intoxicating liquors to a minor. State v. Clottu, 33 Ind. 409.

In Ohio.—On the trial of an indictment under Swan & S. Ohio Stat. 748, for furnishing intoxicating liquor to a minor, knowing him to be such, with intent that he drink it, a written order from his father, directing the defendant to "sell" beer to the son until forbidden, is not competent evidence for the defence. Otherwise, if the indictment is under the act of 1854 for a sale to a minor. Grepel v. State, 32 Ohio St. 167.

2. Edgar v. State, 45 Ark. 356. See Page v. State, 84 Ala. 446.

Where a minor approaches a bar with one who calls for two drinks, and two glasses and a bottle are set up, and both drink, the bar keeper is guilty of a sale or gift to the minor, though he did not know one of the drinks was intended for him. Page v. State, 84 Ala. 446.

Where an adult and minor went into a saloon and drank liquor over the bar, which was paid for by the adult in checks, and it is not proved who called for the drinks, but the minor testified that he did not pay for them, that he was a bar tender at his father's saloon and frequently drank at other saloons without paying, and if the drinks were paid for he did not know it; whether the payment was made in checks, or there was no payment at all, is immaterial, it being the question of sale and not the payment. Edgar v. State, 45 Ark. 356.

3. Ward v. State, 45 Ark. 351.

"Treating" Minor—"Giving Away."—It is said in Kruz v. State, 79 Ind. 488, that an indictment for "giving away" liquor to a minor is supported by proof of a "sale" to a person of age who treated a minor.

And one who sold beer to an adult, who paid therefor, and gave one glass to C, a minor, who drank it, when there dictable;¹ but where the act prohibits the sale or giving away of such liquors to minors, the rule is otherwise.²

(8) Purchase by Third Person for Minor.—One who sells liquor to another for the minor without notice of his purchase cannot be convicted of a sale to the minor;³ and if he at the minor's request, and with his money, purchased whiskey and delivered it to him, is not guilty of selling liquor to a minor,⁴ but such person is an aider and abettor in procuring the sale, and is punishable as such.⁵

(9) Sale to Minor for Use of Another.—The sale and delivery of intoxicating liquors to a minor is equally an offence whether made for the use of the minor or the use of any other person.⁶

was nothing to lead the seller to suspect that C furnished the money; held, not liable, under the Illinois Rev. St. 1874, ch. 43, § 6, punishing anyone who "shall sell or give intoxicating liquors to a minor." Siegel v. People, 106 Ill. 89.

1. Gillan v. State, 47 Ark. 555. See Simons v. State, 25 Ind. 331.

2. "Give" and "Sell."—Word "give" has different meaning from the word "sell" in an act making it unlawful to give or sell intoxicating liquor to minors. Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 522.

Under the Illinois Liquor Law of 1874, entitled "an act to provide for the licensing of, and against the evils arising from, the sale of intoxicating liquors," is aimed at such as keep a dram-shop; and the provisions of the 6th section, prohibiting the sale or giving away of liquors to minors or intoxicated persons, do not apply to a person who treats a friend at his private house as an act of hospitality. Albrecht v. People, 78 Ill. 510.

3. Gillan v. State, 47 Ark. 555.

Thus where, in an indictment for selling liquor to a minor, without the consent of his parent or guardian, it was proved that the minor gave the money to a negro to purchase it for him, and that the negro made the purchase of the defendant, in the minor's absence, without disclosing his agency, and the accused did not know, nor had any reason to suspect, that the negro was acting as agent for the minor, he cannot, upon the state of proof alone, be convicted of making a sale to the minor. Gillan v. State, 47 Ark. 555; s. c., 2 S. W. Rep. 185.

However, in Ohio, the supplying of intoxicating liquor to a minor to be drunk by him, is a furnishing of the liquor to such minor within the meaning of the act of April 5th, 1866, although it may have been purchased by another and supplied by the seller to the minor in pursuance of such purchase. State v. Munson, 25 Ohio St. 381.

4. Cox v. State (Miss.), 3 So. Rep. 373. See Bryant v. State, 82 Ala. 51; Young v. State, 58 Ala. 358; Johnson v. State, 63 Miss. 230.

In Alabama, under an indictment for selling or giving intoxicating liquors to a minor (Code 1876, § 4205), a conviction cannot be had against a person who, not being interested in the sale of intoxicating liquor, purchased a pint for the minor, with money furnished for the purpose by the latter. Bryant v. State, 82 Ala. 51.

5. Post, V, 8 a (12), AIDING AND ABETTING SALE."

6. See Holmes v. State, 88 Ind. 145; State v. Fairfield, 37 Me. 517; Com. v. O'Leary, 148 Mass. 95; O'Connell v. O'Leary, 145 Mass. 311; People v. Garrett (Mich.) 36 N.W. Rep. 234; Ritcher v. State, 63 Miss. 304; Ross v. People, 17 Hun (N.Y.) 591; State v. Lawrence, 97 N. C. 492.

In such case the person for whose use the sale was made need not be alleged in the complaint. Com. v. O'Leary, 148 Mass. 95.

A statute which forbids the sale, giving, or furnishing of liquor to a minor is violated although the liquor delivered to the minor be intended for the use of an adult, the infant being only an agent in making the purchase. People v. Garrett (Mich.), 36 N. W. Rep. 234.

One who sells liquor to a minor, not knowing that the minor has been sent by an adult and for his use, is properly convicted of selling to a minor. Ritcher v. State, 63 Miss. 304.

The fact that when intoxicating liquor

(10) Sale for Medical, etc., Purposes.—Sale to minors for sacramental, medicinal, mechanical or business purposes are not prohibited by the ordinary statute forbidding sale and delivery to minors.¹

(11) Bartering or Exchanging.—It is thought that a statute prohibiting selling does not cover an exchange of liquor for other liquor of the same or of a different kind without agreement was sold to a minor, he was acting for an adult, and purchasing for him, is immaterial, at least when the principal is undisclosed. Ross v. People, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 591.

A complaint alleging a sale to a minor may be sustained by evidence of a sale by a person having a license to a minor for the use of an adult, although the fact of its being for such adult's use was disclosed at the time of the sale. Com. v. O'Leary, 143 Mass. 95.

The statute prohibiting the sale of liquors to minors, etc., without written order of his parent, etc., is violated by delivery of such liquor to a minor, asking for it in behalf of one to whom it might lawfully have been sold. State v. Fairfield, 37 Me. 517.

Statement of Minor at Time of Purchase.—In a prosecution for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors to a boy eleven years old, the statement of the boy at the time, or the belief of the defendant founded on such statement, that the liquor was for the boy's sick mother, constitutes no valid or legal offence. Holmes v. State, 88 Ind. 145. Compare below, SALE FOR PARENT.

A contract for the sale of intoxicating liquor, made with a minor as the agent of a disclosed principal, is a sale to a minor for the use of another person, within the meaning of Massachusetts Pub., Stat. ch. 100, § 9, cl. 4, and it may be so alleged in the complaint, although the property in the liquor sold passes, not to the agent, but to the principal. Com. v. O'Leary, 143 Mass. 95.

Evidence offered to show that a minor to whom the liquor was sold was acting as the agent of an undisclosed principal, held, properly excluded. Ritcher v. State, 63 Miss. 304.

Sale for Parent.—Some cases hold that a statute forbidding the sale or delivery of any intoxicating liquor to a minor does not apply to a minor sent by his parents to buy liquor for them. See State v. McMahon, 53 Conn. 407; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 140; O'Connell v.

O'Leary, 145 Mass. 311; St. Goddard v. Burnham, 124 Mass. 578; Com. v. Latinville, 120 Mass. 385. Compare Holmes v. State, 88 Ind. 145.

1. Johnson v. State, 74 Ind. 197; Ball v. State, 50 Ind. 595; State v. Wool, 86 N. Car. 708; State v. Wray, 72 N. Car. 253. Contra, Page v. State, 84 Ala. 446; State v. McBrayer, 98 N. Car. 619.

Sales for Medical Purposes.—The rule that a person who sells intoxicating liquor, on a proper occasion, in good faith and with due caution, for medical purposes only, is as much shielded by the spirit of the Indiana act of February 27th, 1873, as if he were exempted from the penalties of the act by express words, is applicable to sales to minors. Ball v. State, 50 Ind. 595.

A practicing physician who "keeps on hand intoxicating drinks or liquors for the purpose of sale or profit," and thus brings himself within the definition of a dealer in such drinks, is guilty of a violation of the code, § 1077, which forbids "dealers in intoxicating drinks or liquors" to sell or give the same in any quantity to unmarried minors, knowing them to be such, if he prescribes for an unmarried minor, knowing him to be such, or drinks liquors such as, in his judgment, the minor ought to take as a medicine, and thereupon sells or gives him the same, even if he honestly supposes that such act is not forbidden by the law. State v. McBrayer, 98 N. Car. 619.

Sale Without Physician's Requisition.

An indictment under Alabama Code, 1876, § 4205, charging a gift or sale of liquors to a minor "without the requisition of a physician for medicinal purposes," charges no indictable offence; the above act having been amended by act of February 26th, 1881, under which the sale is legal if made by or with the consent of the parent, guardian, or person having the management and control of the minor, or upon the prescription of a physician. Page v. State, 84 Ala. 446.

as to the price or reference to money payment because of such a transaction, is not a sale, but a barter or exchange.¹

(12) Aiding and Abetting Sale.—Anyone aiding or abetting, in the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors, in violation of law is liable to be punished on indictment the same as his principal.²

b. INDIANS.—The statute prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians, and the payment of the special internal revenue tax for selling liquors in a collection district does not authorize the licensee to introduce liquors into the Indian country in violation of law, although such Indian country is within the collection district.³

c. NEGROES AND SLAVES.—In some of the States, the law prohibits a sale of intoxicating liquors within certain districts to negroes,⁴ and formerly slaves.⁵

d. INTOXICATED PERSONS AND HABITUAL DRUNKARDS.—There are in some of the States statutes in varying terms forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquors to intoxicated persons and habitual drunkards.⁶

1. Gillan v. State, 47 Ark. 555.

The court say in the above case that: "In Ward v. State, 45 Ark. 351, we were forced to that hold one who gave liquor to a minor could not be convicted of selling him the liquor under the statute, quoting with approval Siegel v. People, 106 Ill. 89. The court there say: 'We cannot construe the word "sell" in such a statute to mean something different from its ordinary import.' An exchange or a barter has a different legal import from a sale, as we pointed out by this court in Cooper v. State, 37 Ark. 412, determined under the statute making it penal to sell, barter or otherwise dispose of mortgaged property. See also Meyer v. Rousseau, 47 Ark. 460. Where one commodity is exchanged for another of the same or a different kind, without agreement as to price, or reference to money payment, the transaction is not a sale, but a barter or exchange. Cases supra, Gunter v. Leckey, 30 Ala. 591; Mitchell v. Gile, 12 N. H. 390; Woodford v. Patterson, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 630; Lumpkin v. Wilson, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 555."

2. See Foster v. State, 45 Ark. 361; Johnson v. People, 83 Ill. 431.

A person engaged in making change for parties engaged in unlawfully selling liquors to minors may be convicted, on indictment for selling the liquors, as aiding and assisting in the transaction. Johnson v. People, 83 Ill. 431.

One who with the money of the minor purchases liquor for the latter, in addition to being an agent of the minor for the purchase, which is not punishable, is also an aider and procuror of the sale and therefore punishable as a principal in violating the statute inhibiting sales to minors. Foster v. State, 45 Ark. 361.

3. U. S. v. Forty-three Gallons of Whiskey, 108 U. S. 491.

4. See Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 522; State v. Sonnerkalb, 2 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 280.

In the Maryland act of 1858, passed February 17th, 1858, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in Annapolis or within five miles thereof, to minors and people of color, the word "give" has a different meaning from the word "sell," and the law applies to the case of a party who buys liquor at a hotel and gives it to a minor. Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 522.

5. Shuttleworth v. State, 35 Ala. 415; Powell v. State, 27 Ala. 51; Boltze v. State, 24 Ala. 89; Reinhart v. State, 29 Ga. 522; Com. v. Hatton, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 537; Rawlings v. State, 2 Md. 201; Bond v. State, 21 Miss. (13 Smed. & M.) 265; Jolly v. State, 16 Miss. (8 Smed. & M.) 145; Page v. Luther, 6 Jones (N. Car.) L. 413; State v. McNair, 1 Jones (N. Car.) L. 180; State v. Harrington, 12 Rich. (S. Car.) L. 293; Brown v. State, 2 Head (Tenn.) 180; State v. Weeks, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 522; State v. Bradshaw, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 627; Johnson v. Com., 12 Gratt. (Va.) 714.

6. Tatum v. State, 63 Ala. 147; Wal-

(1) Who Are Persons of Intemperate Habits.—An habitual drunkard is one who is in the habit of getting drunk, or that frequently is drunk; but not necessarily one who is constantly or universally drunk.¹

(2) Notice to Dealer of Intemperate Habit of Purchaser.—A conviction for unlawfully giving or selling intoxicating liquor to a person in the habit of becoming intoxicated cannot be sus-ton v. State, 62 Ala. 197; Hill v. State, 62 Ala. 168; Atkins v. State, 60 Ala. 45; Young v. State, 58 Ala. 358; Smith v. State, 55 Ala. 1; Maxwell v. State, 27 Ala. 660; Elam v. State, 25 Ala. 53; Smith v. State, 19 Conn. 493; Barnes v. State, 19 Conn. 398; Humpeler v. People, 92 Ill. 400; Murphy v. People, 90 Ill. 59; Mapes v. People, 69 Ill. 523; Buell v. State, 72 Ind. 523; Allen v. State, 52 Ind. 486; Williams v. State, 48 Ind. 306; Deveny v. State, 47 Ind. 208; Zeizer v. State, 47 Ind. 129; Stewart v. Waterloo Turn Verein, 71 Iowa 226; Dudley v. Sautbine, 49 Iowa 650; State v. Gutekunst, 24 Kan. 252; State v. Heck, 23 Minn. 549; State v. Mahoney, 23 Minn. 181; People v. Hislop, 77 N. Y. 331 (affirming s. c., sub nom. People ex rel. Hislop v. Cowles, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 577); Crabtree v. State, 30 Ohio St. 382; Adams v. State, 25 Ohio St. 584; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475.

The offence created by New York laws, of selling liquor to an intoxicated person, is not indictable as a misdemeanor. The penalty is only recoverable by action. People v. Hislop, 77 N. Y. 331 (affirming s. c., sub nom. People ex rel. Hislop v. Cowles, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 577). See Foote v. People, 56 N. Y. 321.

A corporation organized "for the intellectual and physical improvement of its members," at a regular meeting resolved to have a ball, and a committee was appointed who took charge of the entertainment. At the ball two of the committee sold beer, with the knowledge of the speaker to a person within the prohibition of the statute, and turned over the proceeds to the treasurer of the corporation. Held, that the corporation had subjected itself to the penalty imposed by the Iowa statute for selling beer to a person in the habit of becoming intoxicated (Code, § 1539). Stewart v. Waterloo Turn Verein, 71 Iowa 226.

Y received a dollar from B, whom he knew to be of intemperate habits, and under B's promise that Y should have any surplus thereof, bought and delivered to B a bottle of whiskey. Held, that Y was not liable to the penalty of the Alabama Code, § 4205, for selling or giving away spirituous liquors. Young v. State, 58 Ala. 358.

Selling Liquor to a Person of Known Intemperate Habits.—To authorize a conviction under an indictment for selling liquor to a person of known intemperate habits (Code, § 4205), it is essential that three facts shall be proved: 1st, that the defendant sold spirituous, vinous or malt liquor to the person named; 2nd, that such person was of intemperate habits; and, 3rd, that the defendant had knowledge of his intemperate habits. Tatum v. State, 63 Ala. 147.

Selling to persons of known intemperate habits, vinous and spirituous liquors, in quantities greater than a quart, is not a violation of the statute. Maxwell v. State, 27 Ala. 660.

Delivery to Intoxicated Person on Another's "Threat."—Where A orders intoxicating liquor to be delivered to B, an intoxicated person, for B's sole benefit, and it is so delivered, the title passes directly to B, though the goods are paid for by A, and thus furnishing intoxicating liquor to an intoxicated person is an indictable offence under the statute. State v. Hubbard, 60 Iowa 466.

1 See HABITUAL DRUNKENNESS, vol. 9, p. 258.

State v. Pratt, 34 Vt. 323. See Tatum v. State, 63 Ala. 152; Mahone v. Mahone, 19 Cal. 626; Harrison v. Ely, 120 Ill. 83; Murphy v. People, 90 Ill. 60; Richards v. Richards, 19 Ill. App. 435; Zeizer v. State, 47 Ind. 129; Wheeler v. Wheeler, 53 Iowa 512; Walton v. Walton, 34 Kan. 198; Com. v. McNamee, 112 Mass. 286; Com. v. Whitney, 71 Mass. (5 Gray), 86; Ludwig v. Com., 18 Pa. St. 174; Trigg v. State, 49 Tex. 676.

It has been said that if the rule or habit be to drink to intoxication when occasion offers, and sobriety or abstinence is the exception, then the charge

tained unless the proof shows that the notice required by statute has been given, informing the defendant that the party to whom he is charged with furnishing the liquor is in the habit of being intoxicated.¹

The sale of spirituous liquors to a common drunkard is an offence within the terms of some statutes prohibiting such sale

"of intemperate habits" is established. It is not necessary that the custom be an every day rule. Tatum v. State, 63 Ala. 152.

While it is true that in every clear case a court may assume the facts that disclose a case of habitual intemperance, or that they warrant the opposite conclusion, yet in the main these are questions to be submitted to the jury. Northwestern Life Ins. Co. v. Muskegon Bank, 122 U. S. 506.

Evidence that the party had been drunk from three to five times within two years preceding the trial has been held sufficient to authorize the jury to find that he was in the habit of getting intoxicated. Murphy v. People, 90 Ill. 59.

To convict for a violation of the statute prohibiting sale of liquor to any person who is in the habit of getting intoxicated, the charge must allege and the proof must show that such person was, at or about the date of the sale, in the habit of getting intoxicated. Zeizer v. State, 47 Ind. 129.

Upon the trial of the information, the court instructed the jury that the persons named must have been in the habit of getting drunk at the time of the sale, and that whether they were or not was a question for the jury; and properly refused to instruct them additionally that it was not sufficient that the persons had been frequently intoxicated, and that five occasions of intoxication would not justify a finding of habitual intoxication. Harrison v. Ely, 120 Ill. 83.

"Sober and temperate" does not imply total abstinence from intoxicating liquor, the moderate temperate use of intoxicating liquors is said to be consistent with sobriety. Brockway v. Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 249, 253. See Dunn v. Dunn, 62 Cal. 178; Miller v. Mut. Ben. Ins. Co., 34 Iowa 222; Van Vankenburgh v. American Popular Life Ins. Co., 70 N. Y. 605; Union Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Reif, 36 Ohio St. 599; Mowry v. Home Life Ins. Co., 9 R. I. 346; Northwestern Life Ins. Co. v. Muskegon Bank, 122

U. S. 512; Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Foley, 105 U. S. 354; Hutton v. Waterloo Life Assur. Co., 1 Fost. & F. 735.

A drunkard is one whose habit is to get drunk, whose ebriety has become habitual. "Drunkard," "common drunkard," and "habitual drunkard," mean the same thing. Com. v. Whitney, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 86. See DRUNKARD, DRUNKENNESS, vol. 6, p. 34.

It has been said that while the word "common" imports frequency, the law does not specify the number of instances at a given time that are necessary to constitute a common drunkard. Com. v. McNamee, 112 Mass. 286.

"Intemperate habits" within the meaning of Alabama Code, § 4205, prohibiting the selling of liquor to a person of known intemperate habits cannot be predicated of the person who occasionally drinks to excess. But it is not necessary to show that he is drunk every day; if sobriety is the rule and occasional intoxication the exception, he is not within the statute, but if the habit is to drink to intoxication when occasion offers and sobriety or abstinence is the exception, as when one is accustomed to remain sober while at home, but generally drinks to excess when in company or when visiting the town or village, such person is a person of intemperate habits. Tatum v. State, 63 Ala. 147.

What Must be Shown.—On an indictment for selling liquor to a person in the habit of getting intoxicated, it is not essential to show that the party is constantly or usually intoxicated, but it is sufficient to show that he has been frequently so, and has thereby acquired an involuntary tendency to become intoxicated. Murphy v. People, 90 Ill. 59.

1. State v. Gutekunst, 24 Kan. 252. See Engle v. State, 97 Ind. 122; Taylor v. Carroll, 145 Mass. 95; Tate v. Donovan, 143 Mass. 590; Kennedy v. Saunders, 142 Mass. 9.

The Indiana Statute (§ 2093, R. S. 1881) that the notice therein referred to regarding the selling or giving of whether the seller knew him to be a common drunkard or not.¹ It has been said that a prosecution for giving away intoxicating liquors to a person in the habit of becoming intoxicated cannot be sustained where the evidence shows that the defendant believed and had reason to believe that the man to whom the liquor was given was a sober man and not in the habit of becoming intoxicated.²

intoxicating liquors to a person who is in the habit of becoming intoxicated must be given to a citizen of a township or ward in which the person resides, and an averment that the wife of a citizen of such township or ward has given notice is not sufficient. Engle v. State, 97 Ind. 122.

Sufficiency of Notice.—The following notice in writing, signed by the son of a person having the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors to excess, and given to a seller of such liquors, towit: "I forbid you selling or delivering liquor to I. N. Taylor," is a sufficient compliance with Mass. Pub. Stat., ch. 100, § 25. Taylor v. Carroll, 145 Mass. 95.

A notice served by a wife on a liquor seller, which was as follows: "I hereby warn you not to harbor my husband, nor to sell him any more beer after this date, or I will put you to trouble," is a sufficient notice to support an action of tort, under Massachusetts Pub. Stat., ch. 100, § 25, and it is not necessary that the notice should state that the person named was in the habit of using intoxicating liquors to excess. Tate v. Donovan, 143 Mass. 590.

Recovery of Penalties.—Under a statutory provision that the husband, wife, etc., having "the habit of drinking spirituous or intoxicating liquor to excess, may give notice in writing, signed by him or her, to any person, requesting him not to sell or deliver such liquor to the person having such habit," and imposing a penalty for a subsequent sale, etc., by the person so notified of any such liquor to the person having such habit (Massachusetts Pub. Stat., ch. 100, § 25), the notice need not be in the language of the statute; and a notice by a wife stating that her husband "had been in the habit of getting liquor here and coming home drunk," and requesting the defendant not to give him any more drink, is sufficient to sustain an action for such penalty, although it does not contain the words "spirituous or intoxicating liquor." Kennedy v. Saunders, 142 Mass. 9, 1. Smith v. State, 19 Conn. 493. See Hill v. State, 62 Ala. 168; Humpeler v. People, 92 Ill. 400; State v. Thompson, 74 Iowa 119; State v. Ward, 73 Iowa 533; Dudley v. Sautbine, 49 Iowa 650; Church v. Higham, 44 Iowa 482; Com. v. McNeff, 145 Mass. 406; Com. v. Julius, 143 Mass. 132; Whitton v. State, 37 Miss. 379; State v. Heck, 23 Minn. 549.

Want of Knowledge—Effect on Sale.—The fact that a person selling or giving intoxicating liquors to one in the habit of becoming intoxicated did not know that the person receiving them was intoxicated does not relieve him from liability. Church v. Higham, 44 Iowa 482. Thus under the Iowa Pharmacy act ignorance of the habit of intoxication of the person purchasing intoxicating liquors is no defence to an indictment for unlawful sales. State v. Thompson, 74 Iowa 119. And under the Massachusetts statute (ch. 100) forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquors to an intoxicated person, it is no defence that the seller did not know at the time of making the sale that the buyer was intoxicated. Com. v. Julius, 143 Mass. 132.

It is said in the cases of Humpeler v. People, 92 Ill. 400; Dudley v. Sautbine, 49 Iowa 650, that proof of the fact that the vender did not know that such person was in the habit of getting intoxicated constitutes no defence.

At the trial of a complaint charging the defendant with maintaining a tenement for the illegal keeping and sale of intoxicating liquor, an instruction that the jury might convict upon evidence of sales to a person who was a drunkard, and known to defendant to be intoxicated, if defendant kept the premises for the purpose of making such sales, held, sufficient, the attention of the jury having been previously called to the necessity of proving knowledge on defendant's part that the person was a drunkard. Com. v. McNeff, 145 Mass. 406.

2. Williams v. State, 48 Ind. 306. See Deveny v. State, 47 Ind. 208.

(3) Joint Sale to Intoxicated and Third Person.—Where intoxicating liquors are sold to a third person with the knowledge that a person of known intemperate habits is to join in the drinking of it, and such intemperate person is permitted to drink such liquor in the presence of the party selling, he is guilty of the offence denounced by the statute.¹

8. Selling in Particular Places and Localities.—In various of the States there are statutes prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors at or near educational institutions,²

Where the defendant, in a prosecution for intoxicating liquor to a person in the habit of getting intoxicated, had no knowledge, at the time of the sale, of the habit of intoxication of such person, who was a stranger to the defendant, and was sober at the time, and had not the appearance of being a person in the habit of getting intoxicated, he is entitled to an acquittal. Deveny v. State, 47 Ind. 208.

1. Walton v. State, 62 Ala. 197. See Weireter v. State, 69 Ind. 269; State v. Hubbard, 60 Iowa 466; Scatchard v. Johnson, 57 L. J., M. C. 41.

A treated B to liquor when B was intoxicated.—Held, that the liquor seller who sold the liquor was guilty of the offence of disposing of liquor to an intoxicated person, although A and not B paid for it. State v. Hubbard, 60 Iowa 466.

Indictment was brought under 1 Indiana Rev. St. 1876, p. 871, § 10, for selling intoxicating liquor in a less quantity than a quart to a person in the habit of becoming intoxicated, after having received written notice not to do so. The evidence showed that defendant, at the time alleged, sold to such person four glasses of beer for twenty cents; that one of these glasses was for such person's own use, and he drank its contents, and that the other three glasses were intended to be a treat for three friends who had accompanied the purchaser to the saloon, and who drank the contents of the said glasses at the same time; that these glasses held less than a pint of beer each, three of them together holding a quart. Held, that the evidence showed a sale of four several glasses of lager, containing each less than a pint within the meaning of the statute. Weireter v. State, 69 Ind. 269.

In England, a publican is rightly convicted of selling liquor to a drunken person, when the liquor is consumed by the drunken person, though ordered and paid for by a sober companion. Scatchard v. Johnson, 57 L. J. M. C. 41.

Giving liquor to intoxicated person.—Proof of a gift of intoxicating liquor will support an indictment under the statute for selling liquor to a person in the habit of getting intoxicated. Church v. Higham, 44 Iowa 482; Dahmer v. State, 56 Miss. 787.

Sale by unlicensed dealer.—The statute forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquor to an habitual drunkard applies not merely to those licensed to sell intoxicating liquor but to "any person." State v. McGinnis, 30 Minn. 52. See also Fitzenrider v. State, 30 Ind. 238.

2. See Blackwell v. State, 36 Ark. 178; DeBois v. State, 34 Ark. 381; Com. v. Jones, 142 Mass. 573; Com. v. Everson, 140 Mass. 292; Com. v. Heaganey, 137 Mass. 574; Com. v. Jenkins, 137 Mass. 572; Com. v. Whelan, 134 Mass. 206; State v. Hollingsworth, 100 N. C. 535; In re Liquor Locations, 13 R. I. 733; Boyd v. State, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 687; State v. Tarver, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 658; Lea v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 478; Tillery v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 35; Harney v. State, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 113; Brewer v. State, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 682.

Educational Institutions.—A statute preventing the sale or giving away of liquors within a given distance of any academy, college, university, or institution of learning, does not apply to common schools provided by the legislature. This is held to be true even though such common schools are taught in the building of an academy or college. Blackwell v. State, 36 Ark. 178.

The supreme court of Tennessee held, in the case of Lea v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 478, that a taxing district of the second class organized under Tennessee acts 1871, ch. 127, is an incorporated town within the exemption contained in Tennessee act of 1877, ch. 23, forbidding the sale of liquor within four miles of an institution of learning.

Ascertainment of Distance or Locality.—Under a statute forbidding the granting of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquor in any building or place within a given number of feet of a public school, the distance is to be measured in a direct line from any part of the building or place to any part of the school. In re Liquor Locations, 13 R. I. 733.

Under the Massachusetts statute making it an offence to sell liquor in a building on the same street with a school house, and within a certain distance from it, if the lot on which the school house stands abuts on the street in which is the building in which the liquor is sold, the school must be deemed to be on the street on which the entrances are. Com. v. Heaganey, 137 Mass. 574; Com. v. Jenkins, 137 Mass. 572.

If the buildings are situated on the same street, that is, have entrances from a common street, the four hundred feet is to be determined by the distance between the two buildings, without including the distance from the building to the street. Com. v. Jones, 142 Mass. 573.

In the case of Com. v. Whelan, 134 Mass. 206, at the trial of a complaint for an unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, it appeared that the building in which the sale was made was bounded on one side by C street and on another side by S street, the two streets intersecting each other at the corner of the building; that the only entrance to the building and the only windows of the premises were on C street, the entrance being numbered "28 C street;" that a former entrance and a former window on S street had been permanently closed by boarding up, to meet the requirements of the authorities in granting a license to the defendant; that upon the wall of the building on S street there were two signs on which the defendant's name appeared, and upon the same wall a sign on which were the words, "Entrance 28 C street;" and that the whole building was within four hundred feet of a building on S street, then occupied by a public school. Held, that the defendant's building was on S street, within the meaning of the statute of 1882, ch. 220.

What Sales are Illegal, or Constitute an Offence.—A license issued after an order is made under the power conferred by the Arkansas act of March 2nd, 1875, prohibiting the sale or giving away, etc., of liquors within three miles of any academy, etc., is no defence to a prosecution for the violation of such order. Blackwell v. State, 36 Ark. 178.

A party cannot be indicted under the Arkansas act of March 8th, 1879, for selling liquors within two miles of Judson University, White county, as such a sale is regulated entirely by the Arkansas act of February 27th, 1875. DeBois v. State, 34 Ark. 381.

Manufacturers of spirituous liquors cannot, under Tennessee acts, 1877, ch. 23, § 1, sell the same for purposes of consumption within four miles of an incorporated institution of learning, said acts allowing manufacturers to sell "in wholesale packages or quantities." State v. Tarver, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 658.

The North Carolina local option law (Code, § 3116), provides that an election in favor of license shall not affect localities in which sale of liquors is prohibited by law. The town of H voted for license. Held, that sales in H were illegal, as it was "within two miles of a" certain church, a locality within which the sale of liquor is prohibited by law," under act 1887, ch. 417. State v. Hollingsworth, 100 N. C. 535.

Same—Sale Made from Steamboat on Water.—One may be indicted for selling intoxicating liquor without a license, or within four miles of an incorporated institution of learning, although the sales were made from a steamboat on the waters of a navigable river. Boyd v. State, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 687.

Same—Institution of Learning—Sale in Vacation.—The law prohibiting the sale of liquor within four miles of an incorporated institution of learning applies to a sale made in vacation, and although the institution is maintained by the common school fund. Tillery v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 35.

Same—Gate in Premises.—Where there is an entrance to licensed premises through a gate on a street on which there is a school house within limit prohibited by statute 1882, ch. 220, the question whether the license is avoided thereby depends upon the purpose for which the gate is used. Com. v. Everson, 140 Mass. 292, 434.

Same—Failure to Register Charter—Effects.—Upon a trial of an indictment for selling liquor within four miles of an incorporated school, it appeared that the certificate of charter of the school had not been registered in the office of the county register as required by law. Held, that a conviction could not be sustained, and that it was immaterial that the name of the school appeared in the list of incorporated companies published by order of the secretary of state. Brewer v. State, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 682.

churches,¹ agricultural fairs,² places of exhibition and amusement,³ public or State buildings,⁴

Same—Buyer Not Guilty of Offence.—Under the Tennessee act of 1877, ch. 23, which makes it a misdemeanor, subject to both fine and imprisonment, to sell or tippie any intoxicating beverage within four miles of an incorporated institution of learning, the buyer of the liquor is not guilty of the offence. Harney v. State, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 113.

1. Yowell v. State, 41 Ark. 355; State v. Midgett, 85 N. C. 538.

Sale Near Church.—Where a local option law existed prohibiting the sale or giving away of ardent liquors within three miles of a church in a certain place, and the physician practicing at that place handed a dollar to a member of the firm of saloon keepers at a place four miles distant from that where the sale was prohibited, telling him to give it to his bar tender and to tell the latter to send him a quart of a particular whiskey for prescriptions; but the partner got the whiskey himself at the saloon and on his return delivered it to the physician, such partner being a part owner of the saloon and receiving the money and delivering the whiskey at the place where the sale was prohibited, made it a sale by him at that place. Yowell v. State, 41 Ark. 355.

An indictment under North Carolina acts, 1879, ch. 232, for selling spirituous liquor within a certain distance of a church in Hyde county, cannot be supported by evidence of such a sale within the prescribed distance of a house conveyed primarily for educational purposes, with permission to hold divine service therein on suitable occasions, which is ordinarily used for a school house, but in which there is preaching at stated intervals. State v. Midgett, 85 N. C. 538.

2. Sale Near Agricultural Fair.—A statute making it an offence to sell liquor within two miles of a place where an agricultural fair is being held; one who sells at a permanent place of business within the limit is liable. Heck v. State, 44 Ohio St. 536.

3. State v. White, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 158; Otter v. Haughton, N. Y. Dial.

Reg., June 5th, 1886; Kramer v. Police Department of New York, N. Y. Dial. Reg., November 24th, 1885; Com. v. Cavanagh, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 344.

Places of Exhibition.—The act of the proprietor of a theatre, giving persons tickets to a wine room in an adjoining building, accessible by stairs from his bar room whence drinks were sent, held to be a violation of Tennessee acts, 1869, ch. 39, prohibiting the furnishing of liquors inside a place of amusement or "any apartment opening into the same." State v. White, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 158.

A saloon having a bill board at the door, and in the rear thereof a platform on which male and female minstrels and a clog dancer perform, partakes of the nature of a place of amusement kindred to a theatre, though no admission fee is charged, and comes within the prohibition of the Pennsylvania act of July 9th, 1881; and a liquor license therefor should be revoked. Com. v. Cavanagh, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 344.

Same—Sale in Hotel Connected with.—It is said in the case of Otter v. Haughton, N. Y. Dial. Reg., January 5th, 1886, that § 2010 of the New York Consolidation act (Laws of 1882, ch. 410), against the sale of liquors in the auditoriums, or lobbies of a place of exhibition or performance mentioned in § 1988, does not prohibit the sale of liquors in a bar room having no connection with the lobby of a theatre except that a door opens out of it into another room from which a door opens upon the end of a long hallway leading through a hotel building to the theatre.

Same—in "Garden."—The prohibitions of said § 2010 do not apply to a so-called "garden" used as a concert room, where a concert programme is furnished, and no admission fee charged on week days, and which contains no scenery or other appurtenances of a theatre. Kramer v. Police Department of New York, N. Y. Dial. Reg., November 24th, 1885. The judgment, however, was reversed in 53 Super. Ct. (J. & S.) 492, without passing upon this point, upon the ground that a court of equity had no jurisdiction to enjoin a threatened arrest for crime.

4. Public Buildings.—The legislature may make it a misdemeanor to sell intoxicating liquor within two miles of and near railroads during construction.¹

9. Sale by and Liability of Particular Persons.—Sale by Agents, Servants, etc.²—A licensee, to sell intoxicating liquors, is bound at his peril to see that the conditions of the license are complied with by his servants or agents;³ but to render a defendant liable for sales made by his agent or servant, knowledge or consent must the State prison grounds, or within one mile of the State insane asylum, or within one mile of the grounds of the State university, or in the State capitol, or upon the grounds belonging thereto. Ex parte McClain, 61 Cal. 436; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 554.

1. The Georgia act entitled "to prevent the sale of spirituous liquors near the Ridge Valley Iron Works, in Floyd county," held properly to contain the inhibition, "there shall not be delivered, sold, or furnished by retail, as a beverage, any spirituous or malt liquors within the radius of two and a half miles from said Ridge Valley Iron Works, the words "by retail" qualify "delivered" and "furnished." McArthur v. State, 69 Ga. 444.

In North Carolina, an indictment is not maintainable, under laws 1874-75, ch. 126, punishing selling liquors within three miles of the A. & S. railroad during construction of the road, for selling within that distance from the line or route. The sale must be within three miles of a part of the road in course of construction. State v. Hampton, 77 N. C. 526.

2. As to the liability of dealers under civil damage acts, for sales made by agent or servant, see CIVIL DAMAGE ACTS. vol. 3, p. 258.

3. Com. v. Wachendorf, 141 Mass. 270. See McCutcheon v. People, 69 Ill. 601; Molihan v. State, 30 Ind. 266; State v. Wentworth, 65 Me. 234; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 688; Murphy v. McNulty, 145 Mass. 464; Com. v. Kelly, 140 Mass. 441; Com. v. Barnes, 138 Mass. 511; Com. v. Uhrig, 138 Mass. 492; Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6; Com. v. Park, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 553; State v. Reiley, 75 Mo. 521; State v. Durkem, 23 Mo. App. 387; Amerman v. Kall, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 126; State v. Dow, 21 Vt. 484; Rex v. Medley, 6 Car. & P. 292; Rex v. Dixon, 3 Maule & S. 11.

Selling by Agents.—On the trial of an information for retailing intoxicating liquor without a licence it was proved that the liquor was sold at a saloon, in which the defendant transacted a retail liquor trade, by a person who was his servant in conducting that trade. Held, that the proof sufficiently connected the accused with the commission of the offence. Molihan v. State, 30 Ind. 266.

Under the Illinois liquor law of 1872, the holder of a licence to selling intoxicating liquors is liable to indictment for unauthorized sales made by his agent or servant. McCutcheon v. People, 69 Ill. 601.

An indictment or complaint which alleges that the defendant sold spirituous or intoxicating liquor without any legal authority, contrary to Stat. 1852, ch. 322, § 7, is supported by proof that he sold it by his clerk, servant or agent. Com. v. Park, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 553; State v. Durkem, 23 Mo. App. 387.

Prima Facie Case.—Proof of a sale by an agent in the principal's saloon is prima facie proof of a sale by the principal. State v. Wentworth, 65 Me. 234; State v. Reiley, 75 Mo. 521; Amerman v. Kall, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 126.

An instruction in a criminal prosecution to the effect that the sale of intoxicating liquors, although illegal, by a bar tender in his master's shop and in the regular course of his master's lawful business, is prima facie a sale by the master, is erroneous. Com. v. Briant, 142 Mass. 463; Com. v. Stevenson, 142 Mass. 466.

In order to constitute one a dealer in spirituous liquors, so as to subject him to the penalty imposed by the statute of 1846, it is not necessary that he should actually do the business in person, or even that it should be done in his presence, or by his express command. If he keep liquors, and employ clerks to deal them out in common with other commodities, he is equally as liable for sales made by such clerks as if made by him in person. State v. Dow, 21 Vt. 484.

So, if the owner of the store of goods at which spirituous liquors are kept for sale, reside out of this State, and the business of the store is managed by one who is his general agent in that respect, and who has the general direction and supervision of the clerks in the store, the same as his employer be shown.¹ To convict in such a case the jury must be satisfied of the defendant's assent to and not merely of his knowledge of

would have had if he had been present, such general agent is liable to the penalty imposed by statute, although the liquors be in fact sold by the clerks. State v. Dow, 21 Vt. 484.

Under the Alabama acts 1880-81, p. 387, making it unlawful "to sell, give away or otherwise dispose of" intoxicating liquor, held, that a person could not be indicted for simply handing over to another liquor purchased for him by defendant's father as agent, and temporarily left in defendant's possession. Amos v. State, 73 Ala. 498.

1. Wetzler v. State, 18 Ind. 35. See Wreidt v. State, 48 Ind. 579; State v. Hayes, 67 Iowa 27; Taylor v. Pickett, 52 Iowa 467; Goods v. State, 3 Greene (Iowa) 566; Minden v. Silverstein, 36 La. An. 912; Com. v. Putnam, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 16; People v. Roby, 52 Mich. 577; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 270; People v. Blake, 52 Mich. 566; Gathings v. State, 44 Miss. 343; Gaiocchio v. State, 9 Tex. App. 387. Compare Com. v. Kelley, 140 Mass. 441; State v. Burke, 15 R. I. 324.

Intent—Unlawful Sale by Servant.—Thus it is said in the case of State v. Hayes, 67 Iowa 27, that one who keeps liquor which he intends shall be sold lawfully, is not liable criminally for an unlawful sale made without his knowledge and consent by his clerk. Consequently where there is nothing to fix upon the defendant guilty knowledge of the sale of liquor in his saloon by another behind the counter, and he was neither present at nor approved of the sale, the charge of selling liquor by the defendant is not proved. Wreidt v. State, 48 Ind. 579.

It is said in Goods v. State, 3 Greene (Iowa) 566, that evidence that a third person sold "a dram" at the defendant's grocery, in his absence, but without evidence that the store was kept for that purpose, or that the person selling did so with his approbation or was employed for that purpose will not justify a conviction.

But it is said that, under the Mississippi statute prohibiting the sale of liquors without a licence, any person having an interest in liquor so sold may be indicted and convicted, though he was not present at or even knew of the sale. Gathings v. State, 44 Miss. 343.

Selling on Sunday—Sale by Bar Keeper.—A defendant charged with common labor on Sunday in selling liquor cannot be convicted on proof of such sale at his bar room by his bar keeper, without also proving his presence or knowledge. Wetzler v. State, 18 Ind. 35.

The Bell Punch Law.—In Gaiocchio v. State, 9 Tex. App. 387, the appellant, who was a licensed retailer, was indicted and tried for violation of the "bell punch law," by selling a drink of whiskey, and failing to turn a crank of the proper register. The evidence showed that the bar tender made the sale in his absence, and there was no proof of appellant's complicity in the bar tender's failure to register the drinks. The court held that, in order to sustain a conviction, the record must show that the defendant was present, had knowledge of and assented to the sale, and the servant's act in failing to turn the crank.

Order Taken by Agent Off Premises.—But it has been said that the sale of intoxicating liquors is illegal where the order for them is taken by an agent at a different place from his principal's house of business, and not subject to his approval although the principal has a licence. Taylor v. Pickett, 52 Iowa 467.

Keeping Saloon Open on Sunday—Opening by Bar Keeper.—It has also been held that the keeper of a saloon may be convicted of keeping it open on Sunday, if, without his knowledge, his clerk or bar keeper opens the saloon and makes a sale of liquor. People v. Roby, 52 Mich. 577; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 270; People v. Blake, 52 Mich. 566.

Same—Opening by Son—Instructions.—It is said in State v. Burke, 15 R. I. 324, that an instruction to the jury, in a prosecution for the sale of liquor on Sunday, to the effect that the presumption of law is that defendant's son, being in his place of business, acting for him on week days, is his agent, without proof of knowledge on the part of defendant of the unlawful acts done on Sunday or of any authority that the agent might act for him on Sunday, is erroneous.

Intention.—As to intent in such cases, see Redmond v. State, 36 Ark. 58; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 24; Stern v. State, 53 Ga.

the sale;¹ and where a sale is made by an agent or servant in dis-

229; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 226, note 268; George v. Gobey, 128 Mass. 289; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 376; King v. State, 58 Miss. 737; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 344; Halsted v. State, 41 N. J. L. (12 Vr.) 552; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 247; Farrell v. State, 32 Ohio St. 456; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 614.

Same—Michigan Doctrine.—In People v. Roby, 52 Mich. 577; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 270, the court say: "Many statutes which are in the nature of police regulations, as this is, impose criminal penalties irrespective of any intent to violate them, the purpose being to require a degree of diligence for the protection of the public which shall render violation impossible. Thus, in Massachusetts a person may be convicted of the crime of selling intoxicating liquor as a beverage, though he did not know it to be intoxicating. Com. v. Boynton, 84 Mass. (2 Allen) 160. And of the offence of selling adulterated milk, though he was ignorant of its being adulterated. Com. v. Smith, 103 Mass. 444; Com. v. Waite, 93 Mass. (11 Allen) 264; s. c., 87 Am. Dec. 711; Com. v. Holbrook, 92 Mass. (10 Allen) 200; Com. v. Farren, 91 Mass. (9 Allen) 489. See State v. Smith, 10 R. I. 258. In Missouri a magistrate may be liable to the penalty for performing the marriage ceremony for minors without consent of parents or guardian, though he may suppose them to be of proper age. Beckham v. Nacke, 56 Mo. 546. Where the killing and sale of a calf under a specified age is prohibited, there may be a conviction though the party was ignorant of the animal's age. Com. v. Raymond, 97 Mass. 567. See King v. Dixon, 3 Maule & S. 11. In State v. Baltimore & Sus. Steam Co., 13 Md. 181, a common carrier was held liable to a statutory penalty for transporting a slave on its steamboat, though the persons in charge of its business had no knowledge of the fact. A case determined on the same principle is Queen v. Bishop, 5 Q. B. Div. 259; s. c., 29 Eng. Rep. 283. If one's business is the sale of liquors, a sale made by his agent in violation of law is prima facie by his authority. Com. v. Nichols, 51 Mass. (10 Metc.) 259; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 432. And in Illinois the principal is held liable, though the sale by his agent was in violation of instructions. Noecker v. People, 91 Ill.

494. In Connecticut it has been held no defence in a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquor to a common drunkard that the seller did not know him to be such. Barnes v. State, 19 Conn. 398. It was held in Faulks v. People, 39 Mich. 200; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 374, under a former statute, that one should not be convicted of the offence of selling liquors to a minor who had reason to believe and did believe he was of age; but I doubt if we ought so to hold under the statute of 1881, the purpose of which very plainly is, as I think, to compel every person who engages in the sale of intoxicating drinks to keep within the statute at his peril. There are many cases in which it has been held under similar statutes that it was no defence that the seller did not know or suppose the purchaser to be a minor. Redmond v. State, 36 Ark. 58; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 24; Farmer v. People, 77 Ill. 322; McCutcheon v. People, 69 Ill. 601; Ulrich v. Com., 6 Bush (Ky.) 400; Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6; State v. Cain, 9 W. Va. 559; State v. Hartfiel, 24 Wis. 60. And in Com. v. Finnegan, 124 Mass. 324, the seller was held liable, though the minor had deceived him by falsely pretending he was sent for the liquor by another person. So a person has been held liable to a penalty for keeping naphtha for sale under an assumed name, without guilty knowledge, the statute not making such knowledge an ingredient of the offence. Com. v. Wentworth, 118 Mass. 441. Other cases may be cited, and there is nothing anomalous in these. A person may be criminally liable for adultery with a woman he did not know to be married. Fox v. State, 3 Tex. App. 329; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 144. Or for the carnal knowledge of a female under ten years of age, though he believed her to be older. State v. Newton, 44 Iowa 45; Queen v. Prince, L. R., 2 Cr. Cas. 154."

1. Com. v. Putnam, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 16. See Com. v. Dunbar, 75 Mass. (9 Gray) 298; Com. v. Briant, 142 Mass. 464; Com. v. Stevenson, 142 Mass. 466; State v. Denoon, (W. Va.) 5 S. E. Rep. 315.

Presumption by Jury.—It is said in the case of Com. v. Locke, 145 Mass. 401, that "evidence of the bar keeper's conduct was admissible in connection with the other facts as tending to show obedience of orders, the master will not be liable.¹ But a general authority by an employer to his clerk to sell, unlawfully, will render him answerable criminally for any single sale made by the clerk in pursuance of such authority.²

a. LIABILITY OF AGENT OR SERVANT GENERALLY.—In order to constitute the offence prohibited by the statute, it is not necessary that the defendant should own the liquor,³ or have had that the defendant was guilty. If liquor was kept for sale in the defendant's bar room by the defendant's bar keeper, the jury might think it unlikely, as matter of common experience, that it would be kept for sale there without the defendant's consent, and might infer his consent on that ground.⁴ Citing Com. v. Briant, 142 Mass. 463, 465; Com. v. Holmes, 119 Mass. 195; Com. v. Edds, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 406, 409; Com. v. Nichols, 51 Mass. (10 Metc.) 259.

1. Lathrope v. State, 50 Ind. 555, 557; Com. v. Wachendorf, 141 Mass. 270; State v. Shortell, 93 Mo. 123; Kirkwood v. Autenreith, 21 Mo. App. 73. See Grosch v. Centralia, 6 Ill. App. 107; Minden v. Silverstein, 36 La. An. 912. Compare Noecker v. People, 91 Ill. 494; Dudley v. Sautbine, 49 Iowa 654; Com. v. Wachendorf, 141 Mass. 270; Riley v. State, 43 Miss. 397.

Sale Without Licence.—It is said in Noecker v. People, 91 Ill. 494, that where a party keeps liquors for sale without a licence granted by the statute, he is responsible for any sales by his clerks, no matter what his instructions to them are, and it is no defence that he has sold upon a physician's prescription to one who pretended that the liquor was wanted for medicine.

But the court of appeals of Missouri hold in the case of Kirkwood v. Autenreith, 21 Mo. App. 73, that while a sale of liquor by an employe is prima facie evidence of the liability of an unlicensed employer, yet this may be rebutted by proof that the sale was made without the employer's knowledge, and in disobedience of his orders.

2. Kinnebrew v. State (Ga.), 5 S. E. Rep. 56. See Forrester v. State, 63 Ga. 349; Hofner v. State, 94 Ind. 84; Com. v. Nichols, 51 Mass. (10 Metc.) 259; s. c. 43 Am. Dec. 432; Hall v. McKechnie, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 244.

Thus it has been held that retailing, done in a man's kitchen by his servant, and in his presence, with his consent and approbation, may be deemed his own act as well as the act of the servant. Forrester v. State, 63 Ga. 349. And it is said in Hofner v. State, 94 Ind. 84, that where the evidence tends to show that the sale was made by the bar tender of the defendant, in his presence, it is no error to instruct the jury that if an agent of the defendant, in his presence and with his knowledge and consent, made such a sale, the defendant would be liable.

In a suit for the penalty under the liquor laws, it was proved that the defendants were proprietors of a store, doing business together, and in the store daily, and that sales were made there by their clerk and in their presence, held, that the proof warranted the conclusion that the sales were by their authority, and they thereby incurred the penalty in like manner as if they had personally sold. Hall v. McKechnie, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 244.

Held, further, that the penalty for each offence is single, that the defendants were united in committing the offence and were jointly liable for the penalties incurred. Hall v. McKechnie, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 244.

But while a shop keeper is liable criminally for the unlawful sale of spirituous liquor in his shop, made with his assent by a servant or agent employed in his business, yet the unlawful sale by such servant or agent is only prima facie evidence of the assent thereto by the shop keeper, and his liability to punishment therefor. Com. v. Nichols, 51 Mass. (10 Metc.) 259; s. c. 43 Am. Dec. 432, and in Com. v. Churchill, 136 Mass. 148, it is said that an indictment under Mass. Pub. St. ch. 101, §§ 6 & 7, for keeping a tenement for the illegal sale of liquors, is not supported by proof that defendant, a servant of the licensee of the premises, made illegal sales under the personal supervision of his employer.

3. State v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 55; Com. v. Cotton, 138 Mass. 500; Com. v. Sinclair, 138 Mass. 493; Com. v. O'Reilly, 116 Mass. 15; Thompson v.

authority from the owner to sell it;¹ and it is no defence to an indictment for selling liquor without license that the defendant sold it as the agent of another person.²

State, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 138; Tardiff v. State, 23 Tex. 169; State v. Bugbee, 22 Vt. 32. Compare Morgan v. State, 81 Ala. 72; Campbell v. State, 79 Ala. 271; Com. v. Murphy, 140 Mass. 440. n.

Where spirituous liquors are sold by an agent, contrary to the statute, both principal and agent are guilty and liable to indictment. Thompson v. State, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 138.

Thus it is said in Tardiff v. State, 23 Tex. 169, that a clerk in the establishment of a vendor of ardent spirits is included in the clause of the Texas Licence act, rendering liable to the penalty "any person or firm who shall sell or be in anywise concerned in selling spirituous liquors." And the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts say in the case of Com. v. O'Reilly, 116 Mass. 16, that on the complaint under the Mass. Stat. of 1869, ch. 415, § 36, for keeping intoxicating liquors with intent to sell them in violation of law, it is sufficient to authorize a verdict of guilty to prove that the defendant was in possession and exercised control of the liquors with intent to sell the same in violation of law, although he was not the owner of the liquors.

Illegal Sale—Inn Holder's License.—At the trial of a complaint against an inn holder's clerk for an unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, the judge instructed the jury "that if the defendant was not in the room with the proprietor, and the door was locked between him and the proprietor, and the defendant took orders for intoxicating liquors and delivered the liquor to the party ordering it and took pay therefor, it was a sale by the defendant." The court held, that the defendant had no ground of exception. Com. v. Cotton, 138 Mass. 500. See Com. v. Sinclair, 138 Mass. 493.

Alabama Doctrine.—It is said by the supreme court of Alabama, in Campbell v. State, 79 Ala. 271, that one who has no interest in the liquor sold or in the money paid for it, and who acts merely as the buyer's friend or agent, does not violate the Alabama statute against selling. See Morgan v. State, 81 Ala. 72. And it is said by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in the case of Com. v. Cotton, 138

Mass. 500, that one charged with selling liquor from a wagon, upon which he carried other things for sale, may be shown that his employer authorized occasionally to give liquors to customers. See Com. v. Murphy, 140 Mass. 440. n.

1. State v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 55; State v. Finan, 10 Iowa 19.

The supreme court of Iowa say, in the case of State v. Finan, 10 Iowa 19, that one who sells intoxicating liquors, although it be as the owner or agent of another, and without his authority, as a volunteer and without pecuniary reward, is nevertheless liable under the statute.

2. State v. Stucker, 33 Iowa 395; Roberts v. O'Conner, 33 Me. 496; Com. v. Galligan, 144 Mass. 171; Com. v. Williams, 86 Mass. (4 Allen) 587; Com. v. Hadley, 52 Mass. (11 Metc.) 66; State v. Canton, 43 Mo. 48; State v. Bryant, 14 Mo. 340; Hays v. State, 13 Mo. 246; French v. People, 3 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 114; State v. Bugbee, 22 Vt. 32; Boldt v. State, 72 Wis. 7; s. c., 35 N. W. Rep. 935.

The accused set up the defence that he was acting merely as the agent of the persons who got the liquors of him. It was proven conclusively, however, that such persons paid him for what they got, and at the time they got it. Held, that instructions for the defence, on the liability of such an agent, were properly refused. Boldt v. State, 72 Wis. 7.

In a suit to recover a penalty for selling intoxicating liquors, incurred under the fifth section of the act of 1846, ch. 205, in Maine, the fact that the defendant made the sale as the servant of another person, constitutes no defence. Roberts v. O'Conner, 33 Me. 496.

Under the Iowa statute, revision, section 1562, making "clerks, servants and agents" liable to be "charged and convicted" as "principals may be" for liquor selling, and under section 1564, providing that "in addition to the penalties prescribed in the three preceding sections, whoever shall erect or establish, continue or use any building" for liquor selling "shall be deemed guilty of a nuisance," etc., a bar tender or clerk in any liquor saloon may be indicted for a nuisance. State v. Stucker, 33 Iowa 395.

One who is personally present at any time, however brief, having the entire control and superintendence of the house, although he is only a clerk or servant of the household, will be liable on an indictment for keeping and maintaining a house as a liquor nuisance,¹ because an agent having the actual possession and participating in the unlawful purpose is equally guilty with his principal.² But where a sale is made on the premises in the presence of or under the actual supervision of the employer, the agent or servant cannot be convicted for an illegal sale.³

When a person is indicted on the Massachusetts Rev. Stat., ch. 47, § 1, 2, for presuming to be a common seller of spirituous liquor, and also for selling spirituous liquor in a single instance, to be used in or about his house or other buildings, without being first duly licensed as an inn holder or common victualler, and is proved to have done the acts charged in the indictment, he is liable to the penalties imposed by those sections, although he was not the owner or lessee of the building in which the sales were effected, and was merely a hired agent or bartender, without any interest in the profit of the sales, and acted in the presence and under the control of his employer; unless his employer was duly licensed as an inn holder or common victualler. Com. v. Hadley, 52 Mass. (11 Metc.) 66.

If the servant in carrying on the business of his employer, and in the absence of his employer, was authorized by the latter to make illegal sales of intoxicating liquors, and he made such sales, both may be found guilty of maintaining a liquor nuisance. Com. v. Galligan, 144 Mass. 171.

Two were jointly indicted under the statute for illegally selling intoxicating liquors. Held, to be no defence to one that he acted as clerk for the other, it not being alleged that there was any compulsion. French v. People, 3 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 114.

Assuming without authority to act as agent for the owner does not exonerate one from criminal responsibility for selling intoxicating liquor; but merely acting as messenger and transmitting the liquor from the seller to the buyer, and the money from the buyer to the seller, does not render one criminally responsible. Com. v. Williams, 86 Mass. (4 Allen) 587.

Sale without License—Liability of Servant.—One who sells spirituous liquors as the servant of another, neither he nor his principal having any license, under the statutes of this state, is liable personally to indictment, although he acted without compensation in making the sale. State v. Bugbee, 22 Vt. 32.

1. Com. v. Maroney, 105 Mass. 467, n.; Com. v. Kimball, 105 Mass. 465; St. Johnsbury v. Thompson, 59 Vt. 300. See Com. v. Brady, 147 Mass. 584; Com. v. Murphy, 145 Mass. 250; Com. v. Burke, 114 Mass. 261; Com. v. Dowling, 114 Mass. 259; Com. v. Tryon, 99 Mass. 442; Com. v. Gannett, 83 Mass. (1 Allen) 7; s. c. 79, Am. Dec. 693; Com. v. Mann, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 213; Com. v. Drew, 57 Mass. (3 Cush.) 279.

2. Menkin v. City of Atlanta, 78 Ga. 668; s. c., 36 Alb. L. J. 6. See Com. v. Cotton, 138 Mass. 500; Com. v. Sinclair, 138 Mass. 493; State v. Canton, 43 Mo. 48.

The court say, in Menkin v. City of Atlanta, supra, "that the accused was not the owner but only the hired agent is no excuse for him. The agent's possession is that of the owner, and if the agent participates in the unlawful purposes he is equally guilty with his principal. In dealing with crime the law gives no heed to a plea of agency. In criminal transactions voluntary agents are accomplices."

Carrying Beer in Saloons.—It is said by the supreme court of Missouri in the case of State v. Canton, 43 Mo. 48, that under subdivision 9, § 1, art. 4 of ordinances number 5421 of the ordinances of St. Louis, any person "found employed" carrying beer in saloons, whether they act as proprietors or servants, are liable to be arrested and proceeded against as vagrants.

3. Pickens v. State, 20 Ind. 116; Com. v. Murphy, 145 Mass. 250; Com. v. Galligan, 144 Mass. 171; Com. v. Churchill, 136 Mass. 148.

A licensed vendor of intoxicating liquors may employ an agent to carry on his business, who will not be liable on an indictment for illegal sales of

b. DRUG CLERKS.—Under a statute which forbids the sale of intoxicating or spirituous liquors without a license, a druggist who has such liquors in his store, which are sold in violation of the statute, by his clerk, is responsible for the sale and may be punished therefor, notwithstanding the sale was made without his knowledge, and contrary to his instructions.¹ But one who as clerk of another sells intoxicating liquors, for the sale of which his master has a druggist's license, cannot be prosecuted for selling without himself having a license.²

such liquors. Pickens v. State, 20 Ind. 116.

1. Treadage v. State (Miss.), 3 So. Rep. 245; State v. Denoon (W. Va.), 5 S. E. Rep. 315.

In the case of State v. Denoon, supra, the court says: "It is claimed by the defendant that as the sale here is shown to have been made not by him but by his clerk without his knowledge, and contrary to his directions, he was wholly innocent of any wrong intent or purpose to violate the law, and therefore innocent of any offence. In support of this claim he cites and relies upon Anderson v. State, 22 Ohio St. 305; 1 Bish. Cr. L., § 219; 3 Lawson Cr. Def. 200-217, 267-279, and cases there cited. See Com. v. Nichols, 51 Mass. (10 Metc.) 259; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 432; Reg. v. Holbrook, 13 Cox, C. C. 650. These authorities seem to sustain the position of the defendant; but on the other hand, the authorities are numerous to the effect that where statutes prohibit or command an act to be done without qualification, in such cases ignorance or mistake of fact will not excuse their violation. This is peculiarly the case in regard to statutes respecting revenue and police matters, for the mere violation of which, irrespective of the motives or the knowledge of the party, certain penalties are enacted; for the law in these cases seems to bind the party to know the facts and to obey the law at his peril. Many of the cases sustaining this view will be found in a note to Farrell v. State 32 Ohio St. 456; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 617, and the result there deduced from the cases is stated thus: 'First, when to an offence knowledge of certain facts is essential, then ignorance of these facts is a defence; second, when a statute makes an act indictable, irrespective of guilty knowledge, then ignorance of fact is no defence.' Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6; Halsted v. State, 41 N. J. L. (12 Vr.) 552; State v. Hartfiel, 24 Wis. 60; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 247.

In the case of Treadage v. State (Miss.), 3 So. Rep. 245, a druggist whose license for selling liquor had expired was convicted under the prohibitory law for the sale by his clerk of a bottle of whiskey, without his knowledge, against his orders, and in his absence, although he reprimanded the clerk and endeavored to rescind the sale. The conviction was sustained. The court say: "The appellant was the owner of the liquor sold; it was in his store as a part of the stock in trade, and he had been engaged in retailing under a license which had expired at the time of the sale for which he was indicted. That his clerk violated his instructions, and sold without his knowledge or consent, is immaterial, under section 1112 of the code, which subjects, not only the person violating the law by personally selling, but also any person who may own or have any interest in any vinous or spirituous liquor sold contrary to this act. There is a combination of all the circumstances requisite under the act to fix the penalty of its violation upon the appellant, and it is wholly immaterial (because made so by statute) that he had no criminal intent." Citing Fahey v. State, 62 Miss. 402; Gathings v. State, 44 Miss. 343; Riley v. State, 43 Miss. 397; Whitton v. State, 37 Miss. 379.

2. State v. Mullenhoff, 74 Iowa 271; State v. Hunt, 29 Kan. 762.

Sale for Medicinal Purposes.—In a case where the defendant attempted to justify sales of intoxicating liquor for medicinal purposes, as an assistant to a registered pharmacist, under Iowa Stat., ch. 75, Acts 18th Gen. Assem., which forbids one not a registered pharmacist to dispense medicine except as an aid to and under the supervision of a registered pharmacist, an instruction to the jury that defendant was authorized to assist a registered pharmacist under his immediate personal direction and supervision was proper. State v. Mullenhoff, 74 Iowa 271.

c. SALE TO MINORS.—A sale of liquor to a minor by an agent, clerk, or bartender, of the owner of a saloon, or drug store, is a sale by the owner for which he is liable where it was made in the regular course of the master's lawful business, although the sale was made without his knowledge and in violation of his bona fide instructions to such agent, clerk or bar tender.¹ And a bar tender whose business is to sell liquors is within the prohibition of a Physician's Clerk.—In Gault v. State, 34 Ga. 533, it was held that the clerk of a physician, who kept a drug store, was rightly convicted for selling a pint of whiskey, even upon a physician's order and for medicinal purposes, as he had no license to retail; although his master had a physician's license.

1. Mogler v. State, 47 Ark. 109; Edgar v. State, 45 Ark. 356; Snider v. State, (Ga.) 7 S. E. Rep. 631; Loeb v. State, 75 Ga. 258; Carroll v. State, 63 Md. 551. See People v. Roby, 52 Mich. 577; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 270; Byington v. Simpson, 134 Mass. 169, 170; George v. Gobey, 128 Mass. 289; Roberge v. Burnham, 124 Mass. 277; Com. v. Holmes, 119 Mass. 195; Com. v. Edds, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 406; Com. v. Putnam, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 16; Com. v. Dunbar, 75 Mass. (9 Gray) 298. Compare Cloud v. State, 36 Ark. 151; Thompson v. State, 45 Ind. 495; Hanson v. State, 43 Ind. 550; Com. v. Hayes, 145 Mass. 289, 294; Com. v. Stevenson, 142 Mass. 466; Com. v. Briant, 142 Mass. 463; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 707.

In Arkansas, it is no defence to a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquor to a minor that defendant was absent from his saloon when his bar tender sold the liquor to the minor; nor does the fact that defendant had given directions to his bar tender to refuse to make sales to minors aid him further than to commend a mitigation of punishment. Mogler v. State, 47 Ark. 109.

In Cloud v. State, 36 Ark. 151, it is held that, under an act imposing a penalty upon any person who should sell liquor to a minor without the written consent of his parent or guardian, the owner of the liquor cannot be punished for an unauthorized sale by his clerk or partner, in his absence, and without his authority or consent. Aliter if sold since the act of the eighth of March, 1879, came in force, imposing a penalty upon any person who shall sell for himself or another, or be interested in such sale.

In Georgia, the Code, § 4540 (a), ex vi termini makes all persons connected with the sale of liquor to a minor liable criminally. Under said provision the proprietor of a tippling house is liable for sales made by his clerk. Loeb v. State, 75 Ga. 258.

Under the Georgia Code, sec. 4540, a man indicted for selling intoxicating liquor to minors cannot defend on the ground that the sales were made, not by him, but by his clerk. Snider v. State (Ga.), 7 S. E. Rep. 631.

In Maryland, under an indictment for the violation of a statute, providing that "if any person shall sell . . . liquor to a minor . . . he shall pay a fine," defendant is liable, though the sale was made by his bar keeper without his knowledge and in violation of his bona fide instructions to the bar keeper. Carroll v. State, 63 Md. 551.

A licensed dealer in spirituous liquors, indicted for unlawfully selling liquor to a minor, cannot escape the penalty of the offence by proving that the sale was made by his bar keeper, during his absence, without his knowledge, and contrary to his instructions given in good faith, and which were so understood by the bar keeper. The intent in such case is immaterial in determining the guilt. Carroll v. State, 63 Md. 551.

In Indiana, the proprietor who has a license is not criminally liable where his bar tender, in his absence, and without his knowledge, sells liquor to a minor. Hanson v. State, 43 Ind. 550.

Where, in the absence of the proprietor of a saloon, his bar keeper sold intoxicating liquor to a minor, and on the trial of a prosecution therefor against said proprietor there was nothing in the evidence tending to show that he had authorized his bar keeper to sell to minors, or in any manner in violation of law, held, that there could be no conviction. Thompson v. State, 45 Ind. 495.

In Massachusetts, an illegal sale to a minor, by a servant in his master's shop and in the regular course of his master's lawful business, is not necessarily, prima facie, a sale by the mas-statute against selling liquors to minors,¹ whether he is the owner of the saloon or the liquors, or is merely employed to sell the liquors.² In such a case it is no defence that the seller did not know or suppose the purchaser to be a minor, and honestly believed him to be of full age,³ and the minor had deceived him by falsely pretending that he was sent for the liquor by another person.⁴

ter. Com. v. Stevenson, 142 Mass. 466; Com. v. Briant, 142 Mass. 463; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 707.

"In Com. v. Briant, 142 Mass. 463; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 707, and in Com. v. Stevenson, 142 Mass. 466, the complaints were for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors to a minor, and the rulings which were held to be erroneous were to the effect that a sale of intoxicating liquors by a bar tender in his master's shop, and in the regular course of his master's business, was prima facie a sale by the master, whether made to a minor or any other person. In Com. v. Briant, 142 Mass. 463; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 707, it was said that, although we should admit that a jury might be warranted in inferring that such a sale was authorized, it would not follow that a court could rule that there is a presumption of fact that it was so, which is the purport of the instruction fairly construed." See Com. v. Hayes, 145 Mass. 295.

1. Such as Ala. Rev. Code, § 3619.

2. Marshall v. State, 49 Ala. 21.

3. Redmond v. State, 36 Ark. 58; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 24; Barnes v. State, 19 Conn. 398; Farmer v. People, 77 Ill. 322; McCutcheon v. People, 69 Ill. 601; Ulrich v. Com., 6 Bush (Ky.) 400; Com. v. Finnegan, 124 Mass. 324; Com. v. Lattinville, 120 Mass. 386; Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6; Com. v. Goodman, 97 Mass. 117; State v. Haynes, 71 N. C. 79; State v. Cain, 9 W. Va. 572; State v. Hartfiel, 24 Wis. 60; United States v. Dodge, 1 Deady, U. S. D. C. 186; Reg. v. Prince, L. R. 2 C. C. 154; s. c., 13 Moak, Eng. Rep. 385. Aliier under Georgia and Indiana a statutes. Stern v. State, 53 Ga. 229; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 266; Goetz v. State, 41 Ind. 162; Brown v. State, 24 Ind. 113; Farbach v. State, 24 Ind. 77. See Dotson v. State, 62 Ala. 141; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 2; Sikes v. State, 30 Ark. 496; Smyth v. State, 13 Ark. 696; Dudley v. Sautbine, 49 Iowa 650; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 165; Com. v. Waite, 93 Mass. (11 Allen) 264; s. c., 87 Am. Dec. 711;

Com. v. Farren, 91 Mass. (9 Allen) 489; Com. v. Boynton, 84 Mass. (2 Allen) 160; People v. Roby, 52 Mich. 577; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 270; Halsted v. State, 41 N. J. L. (12 Vr.) 552; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 247; Reg. v. Booth, 12 Cox, C. C. 231; s. c., 4 Moak, Eng. Rep. 521; Reg. v. Mycock, 12 Cox, C. C. 28; s. c., 2 Moak, Eng. Rep. 177; Reg. v. Olifier, 10 Cox, C. C. 402.

Compare Faulks v. People, 39 Mich. 200; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 374; Farrell v. State, 32 Ohio St. 456; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 614, and note 617.

4. Com. v. Finnegan, 124 Mass. 324. See People v. Roby, 52 Mich. 577; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 270.

Intent.—As to intent in such cases see Redmond v. State, 36 Ark. 58; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 24; Stern v. State, 53 Ga. 229; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 266, and note 268; George v. Gobey, 128 Mass. 289; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 376; King v. State, 58 Miss. 737; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 344; Halsted v. State, 41 N. J. L. (12 Vr.) 552; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 247; Farrell v. State, 32 Ohio St. 456; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 614, and note 617.

The intent becomes a question of fact for the jury. for purposely doing of act is not necessarily and inevitably criminal. Com. v. Greene, 111 Mass. 392; Com. v. Mason, 105 Mass. 163; Jeff v. State, 39 Miss. 593; s. c., 2 Morris St. Cas. 1422; Mask v. State, 36 Miss. 77; s. c., 2 Morris St. Cas. 1100; Wood-sides v. State, 13 Miss. (2 How.) 655; s. c., 2 Morris St. Cas. 95; State v. Malloy, 34 N. J. L. (5 Vr.) 410; Evans v. People, 49 N. Y. 86; People v. McDonald, 43 N. Y. 66; People v. Jones, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 311; People v. Hamill, 2 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 223; People v. Johnson, 1 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 291, 564; Kemble's Case, 1 City Hall Rec. 177; Bluff v. State, 10 Ohio St. 547.

Ignorance of Fact.—See Farrell v. State, 32 Ohio St. 456; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 614, and note 617.

Mistake of Fact.—It has been said that if the defendant honestly believed from the appearance of an infant, and from his answers to questions, that he

d. SALE TO INTOXICATED PERSONS OR HABITUAL DRUNKARDS.—In most of the States there are statutes in varying terms forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquor to drunkards.¹ Under these statutes it is held that a master is not liable for the penalty imposed if his servant, in the course of his master's business, without the master's knowledge or consent, and in his absence sells to such a person.²

e. HUSBAND AND WIFE.—It is a general rule that a defendant cannot be convicted for an illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, where the sale is made by his wife and done without his knowledge was of full age, there can be no conviction. Stern v. State, 53 Ga. 229; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 266. But this case is denied by the supreme court of Iowa in Dudley v. Sautbine, 49 Iowa 650; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 168.

1. Tatem v. State, 63 Ala. 147; Walton v. State, 62 Ala. 197; Hill v. State, 62 Ala. 168; Atkins v. State, 60 Ala. 45; Smith v. State, 55 Ala. 1; Elam v. State, 25 Ala. 53; Smith v. State, 19 Conn. 493; Barnes v. State, 19 Conn. 398; Humpeler v. People, 92 Ill. 400; Murphy v. People, 90 Ill. 59; Mapes v. People, 69 Ill. 523; Buell v. State, 72 Ind. 523; Allen v. State, 52 Ind. 486; Williams v. State, 48 Ind. 306; Deveny v. State, 47 Ind. 208; Zeitzer v. State, 47 Ind. 129; Dudley v. Sautbine, 49 Iowa 650; State v. Gutekunst, 24 Kan. 252; State v. Heck, 23 Minn. 549; State v. Mahoney, 23 Minn. 181; People v. Hislop, 77 N. Y. 331; Crabtree v. State, 30 Ohio St. 382; Adams v. State, 25 Ohio St. 584; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475.

2. See O'Leary v. State, 44 Ind. 91; Hanson v. State, 43 Ind. 550; Hipp v. State, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 149; People v. Parks, 49 Mich. 333; State v. Mahoney, 23 Minn. 181; State v. Shortell, 93 Mo. 123.

In Indiana, under an indictment against a saloon keeper for selling intoxicating liquors to one he knew to be in the habit of becoming intoxicated, the defendant is not liable where the sale was made in his absence by his bartender without his knowledge or consent, and against his express direction. O'Leary v. State, 44 Ind. 91; Hanson v. State, 43 Ind. 550.

An inn keeper is not liable to be indicted for the offence committed in his absence, and without his knowledge, by his bar keeper, of selling spirituous liquors to an intoxicated person. Hipp v. State, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 149.

In Michigan, a liquor dealer cannot be held criminally responsible for the sale of liquor by his clerk, and without his knowledge and concurrence, to habitual drunkards. People v. Parks, 49 Mich. 333.

In Minnesota, a single sale of liquor to an habitual drunkard, made by the clerk of defendant in his absence, is not sufficient to raise a presumption of an authority, from the defendant to the clerk, to make the sale. The presumption from a clerk being employed at the saloon would be that he had authority from the defendant to make such sales as were lawful. State v. Mahoney, 23 Minn. 181.

Missouri Revised Statutes, § 5462, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors to an habitual drunkard does not authorize the conviction of a dramshop keeper for the acts of his agent in excess of the authority of the latter. State v. Shortell, 93 Mo. 123.

Notice Not to Sell.—But it is held in George v. Gobey, 128 Mass. 289; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 376, that a master is liable to the penalty imposed by the statute where his servant, in the course of the master's business, sells intoxicating liquors, after notice requiring the master not to do so to a person who has the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors to excess, notwithstanding the fact that the master has instructed the servant not to make a sale to such person, and the sale is without the knowledge or consent of the master. See Shugart v. Egan, 83 Ill. 56; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 359 and note.

Under an indictment for furnishing liquor to persons of known intemperate habits, proof that defendant knew that his clerk was selling liquor to improper persons, or that he in any manner assented to illegal sales at his bar, charged in the indictment, will support a conviction. Zeigler v. Com. (Pa.) 12 Cent. Rep. 497, 14 Atl. Rep. 237.

Same—Instructions to Judge.—Pennsylvania.—On the trial of an indictor consent and against his will;¹ but it is otherwise in a case where the sale is made with the husband's knowledge or consent and by his direction.²

Where the property is owned by the wife but such property or the business therein is controlled by the husband at the time of the sale of the intoxicating liquors, he will be guilty of the offence of ment far wilfully selling liquor to persons of known intemperate habits, it is not error for the court to charge the jury that if the defendant knew that his clerks—"agents"—were selling liquor to improper persons, or if, in any manner, he assented to or promoted the illegal sales charged in the indictment, he was as guilty as though they were made directly by himself. Zeigler v. Com., (Pa. St.) 14 Atl. Rep. 237.

1. Com. v. Hill, 145 Mass. 305. In this case the court say: "We are aware that, in some of the decisions, expressions have been used which indicate that it is a substantive part of the law, that, to excuse himself, the husband must show that he has used all reasonable and practicable means to restrain his wife; but, taking all the decisions together, we think it appears that his whole conduct, including what he did and said, and as well what he could reasonably have done and did not do, is admitted as evidence only for the purpose of proving or disproving his consent in fact to the acts of his wife." Citing Com. v. Pratt, 126 Mass. 462; Com. v. Carroll, 124 Mass. 30; Com. v. Kennedy, 119 Mass. 211; Com. v. Barry, 115 Mass. 146; Com. v. Cheney, 114 Mass. 281; Com. v. Tryon, 99 Mass. 442; Com. v. Welch, 97 Mass. 593; Com. v. Wood, 97 Mass. 225; Com. v. Putnam, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 16.

2. Mulvey v. State, 43 Ala. 316; s. c., 94 Am. Dec. 684. See State v. McDaniel, 1 Houst. Cr. Cas. (Del.) 506; Com. v. Hill, 145 Mass. 305; s. c., 10 Crim. L. Mag. 283; Com. v. Pratt, 126 Mass. 462; Com. v. Carroll, 124 Mass. 30; Com. v. Kennedy, 119 Mass. 211; Com. v. Reynolds, 114 Mass. 306; Com. v. Coughlin, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 389; State v. Lymburn, 1 Brev. (S. C.) 397; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 669; Rex v. Perkins, 4 Car. & P. 537; s. c., 19 Eng. C. L. 515; Anon., 1 Lew C. C., 17; s. c., 34 Eng. C. L. 539.

Evidence that the defendant's wife unlawfully sold liquor without his knowledge or consent, or as his agent or servant, will support a conviction of him for an illegal sale. Commonwealth

v. Kennedy, 119 Mass. 211; Commonwealth v. Reynolds, 114 Mass. 306.

Guilty Knowledge.—A husband, with guilty knowledge thereof, is liable for his wife's illegal keeping of liquors, although she has filed a certificate for doing business on her own account, and holds a United States license as a retail liquor dealer. Com. v. Barry, 115 Mass. 146.

Sale Without License.—A husband is liable, whose wife in his presence retails spirituous liquors without a license. Geuing v. State, 1 McCord (S. C.) 573. But, on the other hand, a husband is not criminally liable for the act of his wife in selling liquor without license, when the sale is made in his absence and contrary to his express instructions. State v. Baker, 71 Mo. 475.

Where a married woman, living with her husband, keeps a store in the house, and sells liquor without a license, her husband is liable to be indicted and convicted for the offence, although he was not present at the sale, and had often remonstrated with her for selling intoxicating liquors. State v. McDaniel, 1 Houst. Cr. Cas. (Del.) 506.

Sale by Wife in Husband's House.—Unlawful sales of intoxicating liquor, made by a wife in a husband's house in his absence, may be given in evidence to charge him for the offence. Com. v. Coughlin, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 389.

Hotel Rented by Wife—Sale of Liquors by Her.—If a married woman keeps intoxicating liquors for sale in violation of law, in a hotel hired by her, and her husband aids her in such keeping, or if, without actual and actively aiding her, he is present, and has knowledge of the fact and of her intent, the presumption of law is that she is acting under his coercion, and he can be convicted of such illegal keeping. Com. v. Pratt, 126 Mass. 462.

House Owned by Wife—Sale of Liquors by Her in.—A husband knowingly permitting his wife unlawfully to keep liquors for sale in a house owned by her, but under his control as the family domicil, can be convicted for the keeping, although he has no interests in the selling, although the sale was made by a clerk.¹ But it seems that a married woman is liable under the statutes of the various States for selling without license spirituous liquors of her husband's in his absence, and as his agent.²

f. LIABILITY OF PARTNER FOR SALE BY COPARTNER.—Where one partner sells ardent spirits unlawfully in the absence and without the knowledge or consent of the other, the latter is not liable.³

stock or in the profits. Com. v. Carroll, 124 Mass. 30. The statutes enlarging the rights of married women have not changed the law in this regard. Com. v. Carroll, 124 Mass. 30.

A husband cannot be convicted of maintaining a liquor nuisance where it appears that the house was owned by his wife, who used it for such unlawful purpose of her own free will, and without his consent, and against his will, even though it does not appear that he has used all reasonable and practicable means to control her conduct; and evidence that from time to time, during the five years next preceding the date first alleged in the indictment, he had used such means and ordered, directed and persuaded her not to make such use of the premises, is admissible as showing the state of his mind during the period alleged in the indictment. Com. v. Hill, 145 Mass. 305; s. c., 10 Crim. L. Mag. 283.

1. Faircloth v. State, 73 Ga. 426. See Commissioners of Excise v. Dougherty, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 332.

One who violates the statute prohibiting the sale of liquors without a license, cannot relieve himself from liability by setting up the defence that his wife owned the tavern where the liquor was sold, and that he sold as her agent, unless there is proof that the wife had a license. Commissioners of Excise v. Dougherty, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 332.

But in the case of State v. Hunt, 29 Kan. 762, the defendant was prosecuted criminally for selling spirituous, malt, vinous, fermented and other intoxicating liquors, without having a permit therefor from the probate judge of the county. Upon the trial it was shown that the defendant sold such liquors as the clerk and managing agent of his wife, who owned the drug store in which the liquors were sold, and who had a druggists' permit to sell intoxicating liquors, issued by the probate judge of the county, the court held that the defendant is not liable.

2. Com. v. Welch, 97 Mass. 593; State v. Haines, 35 N. H. 207; Utica Excise Commrs. v. Palmer, 3 N. Y. St. Rep. 200; State v. Goss, 59 Vt. 266.

It has been said that it is no defence to an indictment of a wife for being a common seller of intoxicating liquor that her husband provided it, and she unlawfully sold it under his coercion. Com. v. Welch, 97 Mass. 593.

Wife Delivering Liquor Sold by Husband.—A wife was convicted as a common seller, on proof that in husband's absence she had delivered and taken pay for liquors that he had previously bargained and sold. Authorities cited in State v. Goss, 59 Vt. 266.

The conviction of a husband for maintaining a liquor nuisance is no bar to the conviction of his wife for being a common seller, etc., although the same testimony is relied on to prove both offences. Com. v. Welch, 97 Mass. 593.

A wife who in pursuance of a contract made by her husband for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors delivers the same to the purchaser in his absence, may be punished under Massachusetts Stat. 1855, ch. 215, § 17. Com. v. Whalen, 82 Mass. (16 Gray) 25.

Married Women Carrying on Separate Business.—A married woman, in possession of premises and carrying on a separate business of her own therein, who sells spirituous liquors to be drunk on the premises without having a license therefor, is liable in an action to recover the penalty prescribed for the violation of the excise laws (N. Y. L. 1857, ch. 628, § 14), as though unmarried, and can be sued in the same manner, her husband not being liable alone or jointly with her. Utica Excise Commrs. v. Palmer, 3 N. Y. St. Rep. 200.

3. Acree v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 353; Whitton v. State, 37 Miss. 397; State v. Hughes, 22 W. Va. 743.

By Mississippi Revised Code, art. 9, p. 199, one partner can be convicted except in those cases where the sale is made to a minor;¹ but if one of the two partners sells spirituous liquors unlawfully for account of the firm and with the consent of the other partner, both are liable for such sale.²

g. LANDLORD AND TENANT.—In many of the States where there are statutes prohibiting the selling of liquor without a license, to be drunk on the premises, it is provided that where a tenant keeps intoxicating liquors with intent to sell them, the landlord is also liable to prosecution under the prohibitory liquor law in those cases where he leased the premises to the tenant for that purpose, or where the tenant keeps or sells the liquor by his authority or permission.³ The reason of this is that the lessor of a upon a sale of liquor by his associate without his consent, and in his absence. Whitton v. State, 37 Miss. 379.

A partner of a wholesale liquor firm in Wood county visited Taylor county and there solicited orders for whiskey, which was delivered in jugs by the firm to an express agent in Wood county, to be shipped to the purchasers, who received it in Taylor county; this partner collected the agreed price for the whiskey. Held, that this partner could not be indicted for the sale of liquor in Taylor county, as the sale was complete when the whiskey was delivered to the express agent. State v. Hughes, 22 W. Va. 743.

1. Waller v. State, 38 Ark. 656; Robinson v. State, 38 Ark. 641.

Under a statute providing that any one who shall sell or be interested in the sale of liquors to a minor, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, held, that A, a partner in a saloon, might be convicted of a sale by his copartner, though A was absent at the time and had no knowledge of it. Waller v. State, 38 Ark. 656; Robinson v. State, 38 Ark. 641.

2. State v. Neal, 27 N. H. (7 Post.) 131.

3. Plunkett v. State, 69 Ind. 68; Pearson v. International Distillery, 72 Iowa 348; State v. Potter, 30 Iowa 587; Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576; Bellinger v. Griffith, 23 Ohio St. 619. See Crocker v. State, 49 Ark. 60; Shugart v. Egan, 83 Ill. 56; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 359 and note, 362-369; State v. Abrahams, 6 Iowa 117; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 399; Martin v. Blattner, 68 Iowa 286; State v. Ballingall, 42 Iowa 87; Cordes v. State, 37 Kan. 48; Koester v. State, 36 Kan. 27; State v. Frazier, 79 Me. 95; State v. Stafford, 67 Me. 125; Com. v. Wentworth, 146 Mass.

36; Conklin v. Tice, 1 N. Y. Sup. 803.

Ohio Doctrine—"Dow Liquor Law."—Thus under section 2 of the Ohio Stat. of May 14th, 1886, known as the "Dow Law," a valid lien is created upon the real property when the tenant holds under a lease, either written or parol, made after the passage of the statute. Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576.

The lien of a judgment recovered under Ohio act of 1870 to provide against the evils resulting from the sale of intoxicating liquors, is limited to the real estate of the judgment debtor. The provisions of section 10 of the act, as amended, declaring that real estate owned by the judgment debtor shall be held liable for the payment of a judgment, not being designed to create a lien on such property, but to authorize it to be subjected to the payment of a judgment in a suit against the owner instituted for the purpose. Bellinger v. Griffith, 23 Ohio St. 619.

Indiana Doctrine.—On a prosecution under Indiana act of March 17th, 1875 (1 R. S. 1876, p. 869), for selling liquor without a license to be drunk on the premises, where the evidence shows the house where the liquor was drunk to have been at the time in the actual possession and occupancy and under the immediate control of a person other than the defendant, with whom the latter lived as a member of his family without any independent authority over the house, it is not the house of the defendant within the meaning of the statute. Plunkett v. State, 69 Ind. 68.

In an action to abate as a nuisance a distillery unlawfully manufacturing intoxicating liquors, prosecuted against the lessee alone, where the owner of the property is not brought into ques-building used as a place for unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors becomes an aider and abetter in violating the law.¹ But it is thought that in the absence of a statute to the contrary the owner of premises upon which intoxicating liquors are kept for sale contrary to law, is not guilty of an offence, if he leased them for a lawful purpose, and did not affirmatively assent to such unlawful use; and that the mere failure to prevent the illegal use of such premises for the sale of liquors, does not subject him to the penalty of the statute.²

tion, and it is shown that the machinery is used in violation of law, it is not error to decree the closing of the establishment, or to decree the sale of the personal property to satisfy the costs, as the decree is not binding on the lessor, who is not a party to the action. Pearson v. International Distillery, 72 Iowa 348.

1. Martin v. Blattner, 63 Iowa 286; State v. Frazier, 79 Me. 95.

But to constitute an offence under the statute it must appear that the tenement was left for the illegal use, or that the illegal use was permitted. The court say, in the case of State v. Frazier, 79 Me. 95, that "one who has authority to let a tenement and receive the rents has control of it within the meaning of the statute; and if he knowingly permits the illegal use, that is, consents to it, he becomes liable for aiding in maintaining a nuisance; but the mere fact that he has control of the tenement does not make him liable; he must be proved to consent to the illegal use; and if such use is known to him, and he takes no measures to prevent it, his inaction may be evidence of his consent to such use, or that he permitted it; but his permission of the use must be proved, to charge him under the statute; and these same rules apply to the owner, and the same facts must be proved in order to charge him. State v. Stafford, 67 Me. 126.

2. Crocker v. State, 49 Ark. 60; Shugart v. Egan, 83 Ill. 56; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 36, 28; State v. Abrahams, 6 Iowa 117; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 399; State v. Ballingall, 42 Iowa 87; Cordes v. State, 37 Kan. 48; Koester v. State, 36 Kan. 27; State v. Stafford, 67 Me. 125; Com. v. Wentworth, 146 Mass. 36; Conklin v. Tice, 1 N. Y. Sup. 803.

Effect of Knowledge of Landlord.—Under the Maine Rev. Stat., ch. 17, §§ 1 & 4, on an indictment for maintaining a nuisance, mere knowledge of an owner of leased premises that they are used for liquor selling does not expose him to punishment; there must be positive proof of permission or consent. State v. Stafford, 67 Me. 125.

The supreme court of Kansas held, in the case of Cordes v. State, 37 Kan. 148, that the owner of leased premises can only be made liable under the statutory provisions of the prohibitory law of that state when he knowingly permits the occupant to use the premises for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors; but knowledge sufficient to excite the suspicion of a prudent man and put him on enquiry is held equivalent to knowledge of the ultimate fact.

Under those statutes which make it a misdemeanor for any person owning, using or controlling a house or tenement to sell or give away, or allow to be given away, any ardent or vinous spirits, a landlord who leases a house for a lawful purpose is not bound to interfere, and invoke the law when he subsequently finds that the tenant is using the premises for the sale of liquor. Crocker v. State, 49 Ark. 60. Thus where a landlord leased his premises for a term of years, retaining no control over them, and subsequently a temporary injunction was issued restraining him and the subtenant from keeping a saloon upon the premises in violation of law, and afterwards while the original lessee was in possession, a subtenant opened a saloon therein and sold intoxicating liquors without a permit, the court held that the mere knowledge of the landlord of such use of the premises, and his omission to take steps to avoid the lease by re-entry was not sufficient to justify his punishment for contempt for disobedience of the temporary injunction. Koester v. State, 36 Kan. 27.

In Illinois, New York, Michigan and Ohio, the sale by the tenant, contrary to the provisions of the act, works a forfeiture of all his rights under the lease; and consequently in those states,

h. AIDERS AND ABETTERS.—Under some statutes¹ any person who counsels, aids or abets in the commission of the offence of selling intoxicating liquors contrary to law, may be charged, tried and convicted in the same manner as if he were the principal offender.²

i. KEEPERS OF INNS AND RESTAURANTS AND COMMON VICTUALLERS.—The keepers of inns³

at least, the landlord would be liable at all hazards for sales made with his knowledge because he would not have the excuse of inability to prevent the sale and thus would be held to "permit" it. State v. Ballingall, 42 Iowa 87. But knowledge on his part is essential; mere inactivity to ascertain the fact, or a mere failure to prevent such a use of his premises, would be insufficient. Shugart v. Egan, 83 Ill. 56; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 362 n.; State v. Abrahams, 6 Iowa 117.

Reservation of control.—The Massachusetts statute provides (Pub. Stat., ch. 101, § 9) for the punishment of one in control of a building, who allows it to be used for the illegal sale of liquors, or if after notice of such use he fails to take reasonable measures to eject the occupant. The supreme judicial court, in the case of Com. v. Wentworth, 146 Mass. 36, held that under this statute a lessor cannot be convicted unless the lease specially reserves his control of the building, notwithstanding the fact that section 8 of this statute provides that the owner may recover possession by entry or action in case of such illegal sale.

Evidence.—Evidence that a lessor, before leasing the building, stated that his prospective tenant intended to keep a hotel and could get a license by reason of the friendship of a high county official; that he was several times about the hotel while it was being fitted up, and was in the habit of going there two or three times a week; together with evidence that there was a regular bar room in the hotel where every one could get liquor who asked for it, is a sufficient proof of a leasing for the purpose of the sale of intoxicating liquor, and knowledge that the premises were used for that purpose. Conklin v. Tice, 1 N. Y. Sup. 803.

In an action under the Kansas Prohibitory Liquor Law, section 18, against the owner of leased premises, to enforce a lien which has been adjudged against the occupant for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, it is not essential to a recovery that the petition or evidence should show that the owner witnessed or had knowledge of the particular sales; it is enough in such case that the owner knowingly permitted the occupant to use the premises for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors. Cordes v. State, 37 Kan. 48.

1. Such as the Compiled Laws of Kansas, 1879, ch. 82, § 115.

2. State v. Shenkle, 36 Kan. 43. See State v. Mosley, 31 Kan. 355; State v. Brown, 21 Kan. 50; State v. Cassady, 12 Kan. 550.

3. State v. Cloud, 6 Ala. 628. See Gray v. Com., 9 Dana (Ky.) 300; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 136; Foster v. Haines, 13 Me. 307; Benson v. Moore, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 260; Burner v. Com., 13 Gratt. (Va.) 778.

Keeping a house of public entertainment, without first having obtained a licence therefor, is an offence punishable by indictment or presentment, although spirituous liquors are not sold. State v. Cloud, 6 Ala. 628.

Definition.—In Georgia the words "tavern," or "house of entertainment," as used in the act of 1791, are held to be synonymous, and that the word tavern, in that act, is intended to mean the common inns of the common law. Bonner v. Wellborn, 7 Ga. 296.

Same—License.—The possession of a licence does not make, nor the want of it prevent, a person from being an inn holder at common law. Norcross v. Norcross, 53 Me. 163.

Same—Keeper of "Summer Boarders."—One whose business it is to rent houses and furnish board, lodging and entertainment for a season at a watering place, to the visitors who resort there, is not the keeper of a tavern, or house of entertainment, within the view of the act of 1791 of the laws of Georgia. Bonner v. Wellborn, 7 Ga. 296.

One licensed as inn keeper has no right to sell liquor by the gallon to be carried away. Benson v. Moore, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 260.

A licensed inn holder is not liable, and restaurants¹ and common victuallers² are liable to the penalties provided by statutes regulating the sale and traffic in intoxicating liquors for sales made without license, and for other acts violative of such statutes.

under the Maine statute of 1834, ch. 141, to the penalty of $10 for selling spirituous liquor in a particular instance. But if he presume to be a common retailer without being licensed as such, he is liable under that statute to the penalty of $50. Foster v. Haines, 13 Me. 307.

A tavern keeper, duly licensed, may have his bar room in an apartment which is not connected by any door way with his main building, but separate from it, and may there retail spirituous liquors, by himself or his partner, without a violation of law, provided this separate room constitutes, in good faith, a part of the licensed tavern, and is not used as a fraudulent shield for a "grocery." Gray v. Com., 9 Dana (Ky.) 300; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 136.

Unlicensed Ordinary.—A person is not guilty of keeping an unlicensed ordinary who, being licensed to keep a house of private entertainment, sells spirits to be drunk at the "house," etc., in addition to furnishing lodgings, etc., at that place. Burner v. Com., 13 Gratt. (Va.) 778.

1. See Nicrosi v. State, 52 Ala. 336; Baldwin v. Chicago, 68 Ill. 418; Com. v. Everson, 140 Mass. 292; State v. Hogan, 30 N. H. (10 Fost.) 268; State v. Clark, 28 N. H. (8 Fost.) 176; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 611; Kelly v. Excise Commrs., 54 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 327.

A restaurant keeper, regularly licensed as such by the city of Montgomery, having a wholesale, but no retail license from the State, who sells vinous liquors only to persons taking meals at his restaurant, the liquors being drunk by them only while eating, is guilty of an indictable offence under section 3618 of the revised code. Nicrosi v. State, 52 Ala. 336.

A restaurant or lodging house is not an inn, such that the proprietor can claim a license to sell liquor, under a law allowing licenses to inn keepers. And the fact that a lodging house sometimes furnishes meals will not constitute it an inn. But a house kept "on the European plan" is an inn. Kelly v. Excise Commrs., 54 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 327.

Public Bar.—A person may be convicted of keeping a "public bar" if he sells liquor over it to anyone, although the bar is also used for luncheon purposes. Com. v. Everson, 140 Mass. 292.

Keeping Open Bar Room.—A restaurant keeper may properly be convicted for keeping an open bar room between midnight and 5 o'clock A. M., in violation of an ordinance, although he sells no liquor after midnight, and draws a curtain around his bar after that hour. Baldwin v. Chicago, 68 Ill. 418.

Refreshment Room—Keeping Liquor in.—An ordinance enacted by a city that no intoxicating liquors shall be used or kept in any refreshment room or restaurant within the city for any purpose whatever is violated by the keeping of liquor in a cellar under a refreshment saloon or restaurant. State v. Clark, 28 N. H. (8 Fost.) 176; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 611.

In State v. Hogan, 30 N. H. (10 Fost.) 268, the respondent was charged with a breach of a city ordinance, which provided that "no intoxicating liquors shall be used or kept in any refreshment saloon or restaurant within the city for any purpose whatever," and it appeared that the shop where the alleged offence was committed, was used by the respondent for the manufacture and sale of tobacco, snuff and cigars, and also for the sale of strong beer by the glass, and for no other purposes, the court held that there was no breach of the ordinance shown.

Same—What Is.—A shop which is used for the manufacture and sale of tobacco, snuff and cigars, is not a refreshment saloon or restaurant. State v. Hogan, 30 N. H. (10 Fost.) 268.

2. See State v. Davis, 23 Me. 403; Com. v. Salmon, 136 Mass. 431; Com. v. Rogers, 135 Mass. 536.

Common Victualler—Keeping Public Bar.—A person, licensed as a common victualler, and to sell intoxicating liquors to be drunk on the premises, may be convicted of keeping a "public bar," within the Pub. Stats., ch. 100, § 9, cl. 5, if he sells and delivers, not in connection with food, intoxicating liquors indiscriminately to such persons as may call for them, over a bar or counter, although there is no public display of the

j. SOCIAL CLUBS.—The distribution of liquors by a bona fide club among its members is not a sale within the inhibition of a liquor law, even though the person receiving the liquor gives money in return for it,¹ and the law prohibiting the sale of liquor on Sunday does not apply to such a club.² It is otherwise, however, liquors, and the bar is also used for luncheon purposes. Com. v. Rogers, 135 Mass. 536.

The same court say in Com. v. Salmon, 136 Mass. 431, that a license to a common victualler, to sell intoxicating liquors to be drunk on 'the premises, is no defence to a complaint for exposing and keeping for sale intoxicating liquors with intent unlawfully to sell the same in this commonwealth, if the licensee keeps a public bar, or maintains a partition which interferes with a view of the interior of the premises, in violation of the Pub. Stats., ch. 100, § 9, cl. 5, and § 12; and of the Stat. of 1882, ch. 250, § 1.

All who take it upon them to be common sellers of spirituous liquors, without being licensed therefor, in less quantities than twenty-eight gallons at a time, are liable to the penalty provided by the statute, whether they take it upon themselves to be common victuallers or not. State v. Davis, 23 Me. 403.

1. Seim v. State, 55 Md. 566; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 419; Com. v. Ewig, 145 Mass. 119. Compare Chesapeake Club v. State, 63 Md. 446; State v. Lockyear, 95 N. Car. 633.

Where the steward of a social club furnished liquor to the members at a fixed price sufficient to cover the cost, but not for the purpose to profit, held, a sale, and in violation of the Local Option act. State v. Lockyear, 95 N. Car. 633.

Under the Maryland act of 1882, ch. 112, known as the "Local Option law," of Anne Arundel County, providing, among other things, "that in case of any violation of any provision of this act by any company, corporation or association, each or any member of such company, corporation or association shall be liable and shall suffer imprisonment as prescribed in this act for persons violating the same, an indictment will lie against a body corporate, e. g., a social club, for violating the provisions of the act, the action in terms expressly declaring that the corporation or association violating the law shall be liable to indictment and punished. Chesapeake Club v. State, 63 Md. 446.

Social Club—Sale of Liquor at Ball.—But the rule that the police may not invade the precincts of a social club has no application where it gives a ball, and sells tickets, and wines, and liquors to all persons willing to pay for them. Cercle Francais de L'Harmonie v. French, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 123.

2. Seim v. State, 55 Md. 566; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 419.

Liability of Officers and Servants.—The officers of a social club, whose steward furnishes the members with food, and with beer and a glass, at a fixed price, to be consumed at the club, the money so received being expended for the expenses of the club, are not guilty of "selling" beer on Sunday, within the meaning of an excise law. Seim v. State, 55 Md. 566; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 419.

Same—Sale by Steward.—A private club, owning intoxicating liquors, and employing one of its members as a steward, paying him for his services and for the use of a room where the liquors are kept, the steward delivering the liquor to other members on checks which he had previously sold them, and the money for which he uses in buying liquors in the name of the club, the steward may not be convicted of keeping intoxicating liquors with intent to sell them. Com. v. Pomphret, 137 Mass. 564; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 340.

Same—Selling by Agent.—A person who acts as the agent or employe of a social club, to keep and deal out its liquors to members purchasing and presenting tickets, may be indicted and punished for a violation of section 1563 of the Iowa revision, punishing any person who shall own or keep or be in any way concerned, engaged or employed in owning or keeping any intoxicating liquors with intent to sell the same in the State. State v. Mercer, 32 Iowa 405.

It is no defence to an indictment for retailing liquor without a license, that the accused was merely the agent of a corporation which owned the liquor and the bar where it was sold; that no one but where such club is simply a device resorted to as a means of evading the statute.¹

members or stockholders, or persons specially invited, could gain admission to the room; and that liquor was sold to none but members, and the money paid went into the treasury of the corporation. Martin v. State, 59 Ala. 34.

1. See Rickart v. People, 79 Ill. 85; Marmont v. State, 48 Ind. 21; State v. Mercer, 32 Iowa 405; Com. v. Smith, 102 Mass. 144.

Devices to Evade the Statute.—Laws prohibiting or regulating the sale or traffic in intoxicating liquors have furnished a fruitful source of attempts at evasion. Thus in State v. Mercer, 32 Iowa 405, an organization was formed called the "Winterville Social Club," the object of which was to supply its members with intoxicating liquors, to be used as a beverage. The manner in which this club carried on its operations was not explained further than it was shown that defendant had possession of the liquors used, and sold tickets to members of the club, which were exchanged for or given in payment of intoxicating liquors in defendant's house by the members of the club presenting the tickets. The liquors were served out to the ticket holders and members of the club by defendant. Persons became members by signing their names in some book and by buying tickets, but what was the contents of the book does not appear. Upon the trial, the defendant offered in evidence the articles of association of the club, but they were excluded. The court say:

"The articles of the association are not in the abridgment of the record before us. It is therefore not possible for us to determine that they were material and admissible as evidence. But if we are to consider that they were of the purport as claimed by the defendant's counsel in their argument, we must conclude that they were correctly excluded by the district court. They appear, by the statement of counsel, to have been nothing more than the foundation of an organization, the object and intent of which was to evade the law for the suppression of intemperance, a rather clumsy device by which the defendant and the members of the 'social club' hoped to defeat that law and establish a place of resort where they could be supplied with intoxicating liquors for unlawful use. The fact that under the arrangement of selling tickets, the members of the club became owners of the liquors to the extent of the money paid, does not make the sale of the liquors in that way lawful. The acts of selling the tickets was the sale, in fact, of the liquors. It is confessed that such sales were for the purpose of supplying the liquors to the purchasers to be used as a beverage.

In Indiana, a society or club of persons was formed, having a treasurer and other officers; it met every Sunday, and each person on becoming a member paid into the treasury a certain sum and monthly assessments thereafter, to form the basis of a fund to pay expenses and for relief, and the treasurer, by order of the club, and for the club, on each Saturday evening purchased a keg of "lager beer," an intoxicating liquor, and placed it in the hall where the meetings were held, and on Sunday whenever a member desired a glass of beer he got it, drank it on the premises, and delivered to the treasurer five cents, which money was placed in the treasury to keep up the funds, pay expenses, and for relief for sickness and other mishaps to members. The supreme court of that State say, in the case of Marmont v. State, 48 Ind. 21, that the delivery of a glass of beer under such circumstances to a member of the club, and receiving five cents therefor by the treasurer, constituted a sale by the treasurer, as agent of the club, within the meaning of the statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor on Sunday. The court said:

"Under the arrangement as agreed upon, the keg of beer belonged to the society. The appellant was the agent of the society, and if he sold in violation of law he is liable to be convicted, in the same manner and upon the same principle as a bar tender of a person who holds a permit under the statute in question is liable, who sells in violation of the statute. As the keg of beer when purchased belonged to the society, the question arises whether the society, by its agent, could make a valid sale of such beer to the persons composing such society. We know of no principle of law which prevents it. We know that it is the daily habit of partners to sell the firm property to persons composing the firm, and quite frequently the members of the firm are permitted to purchase such goods or articles as they may need at cost.

"When a firm purchases, with partnership funds or upon credit, a sack of coffee or a barrel of sugar, the coffee belongs to the firm; but when a part of each is taken out and transferred to each member of the firm, either for cash or upon credit, a valid transfer has been effected from the firm to the individual members. So, while the beer was in the keg, it was the common property of the society, but when a portion was withdrawn and delivered to a member of the society, upon credit or for cash, the portion so withdrawn ceased to belong to the society and became the separate property of the member so receiving it, and the transaction invested him with the power to drink it himself, to give it away, to sell it, or to throw it away. But, says the learned counsel for appellant, there was no gain or profit to the appellant. It is not necessary that there should be gain or profit to him. It is sufficient if the sale or transfer enured to the benefit of his principal—the society. It is agreed that each member, upon his initiation, paid fifty cents and thereafter a monthly assessment of ten cents, to form the basis of a fund for payment of expenses and reliefs of the society; and that the money received for each glass of beer drawn for and used by a member of said association goes into the society's treasury, to keep up its funds for payment of expenses, procuring refreshments, and for reliefs; which expenses are for fuel, rents of hall, newspapers, the beer used, and the donations or reliefs payable to each member of said association, who, from sickness or other mishaps, may require assistance; and a standing committee from the members of said society is appointed to see after and enquire into and direct the payment of necessary reliefs in all such cases. We are not informed what profits are realized from the sale of each keg of beer, but it must be considerable, or the proceeds would not be sufficient to pay expenses and furnish the necessary reliefs to the sick and unfortunate members of the society.

"When the society appointed the appellant its agent for the sale of beer to the members of the association, it consented that each member might become the owner of such portion of the partnership property as he might be willing to pay for, and appropriate it to his individual use. If the transaction set out in the agreed statement of facts be not an evasion and violation of the law, then a number of persons may do that lawfully which if done by one person would be unlawful. It would be a reproach of the law and its administration, if a combination of persons could, by such an arrangement, evade the law and thwart the legislative will."

In Rickart v. People, 79 Ill. 85, an association was formed for the avowed purpose of promoting temperance, friendship, etc. They claimed to have bought the dram-shop of one of their members, who was elected their treasurer, and who continued in the possession of the dram-shop, having no license to sell intoxicating liquors. Each member was required to pay one dollar, for which he received a ticket, with the numbers from 1 to 20 inclusive upon it, and upon presenting this ticket at the bar the member received liquors or cigars as he wished, and paid for the same by having numbers punched out of his ticket, each number representing five cents. Any person could become a member by paying one dollar. The treasurer received all the money and rendered no account to the other members. He also bought all the liquors and cigars. The jury found that this was but a device to evade the law and that the treasurer was guilty of unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors, which finding was sustained on appeal. The court said:

"Any person, it appears, could become a member of the association simply by buying a ticket. The witness whose testimony we have before cited says, 'that he supposed a person might join the club, call for a glass of beer, get it, have his ticket punched and then offer back his ticket and demand the balance of the money paid in by him, get it and cease to be a member of the club.' It is added, however, nothing of the kind had ever occurred, but the witness states he had known an instance of a person, who was not a member, drinking beer that belonged to the club in the club room. All this is plainly a device on the part of the defendant and those who desire to patronize his bar, to avoid the provisions of the law, and to enable him to sell intoxicating liquors at retail as he formerly had done, without first obtaining a license to keep a dram shop. The purpose and object is so transparent that the subject need not be seriously discussed. The whole thing is a subtle artifice, planned with a view to avoid the penalties denounced against persons violating the law. The ticket arrangement was simply paying in advance and getting the liquors at convenient seasons, when desired. The proposition is absurd that the ticket holders really owned the liquors with which the bar was stocked. Each party bought tickets, to be used at the bar room when he wanted anything, and for no other purpose. Should we adopt the theory of the defence, that the several ticket holders, or parties constituting the association, in fact owned the liquors in the saloon, it would make no better case for defendant, and a vastly worse one for the parties associated with him. In that view the liquors would belong to the company as partnership stock, and the company would have no more rightful authority to sell to the individual members, or partners at retail, without a license to keep a dram shop, than a mere stranger would have. Buying the tickets, as we have seen, was simply buying twenty drinks and paying for them in advance. Each one paid for whatever he got, as he would have done had he bought of a licensed seller. It is preposterous to assume that a number of persons may, with impunity, associate themselves together as a firm, or voluntary company, purchase a quantity of liquors and retail them out to the several members as they would to strangers. Such an enterprise is unlawful, and all concerned would be guilty of violating the statute. If such a device could be tolerated, it would render all legislation on this subject nugatory. But the alleged association is a mere fiction. It is nothing but a device, under the guise of a copartnership company, adopted to enable defendant to sell intoxicating liquors to whomsoever might desire to buy at his counter, and to enable him to do so without taking out a license as the law requires. The real object of the parties engaged in the business was purposely concealed in the articles of the association. Had it been an honest enterprise there would have been nothing to conceal. It was adopted under legal advice, and is obviously nothing but a shift, or device, to evade the provisions of the law, and whatever liquors were either given away or sold for tickets under that arrangement, come within the definition of 'unlawful selling.' It was a question of fact whether the association was a mere shift or device to evade the provisions of the law, and the jury having found it was, we see no reason to be dissatisfied with the conclusion reached."

In Com. v. Smith, 102 Mass. 144, several persons formed a club of which the defendant was a member. They advanced a certain sum of money each, which was put into the common fund; the defendant was chosen agent of the club, and under instructions of the club purchased liquors and refreshments for the club; the fund was taken by the defendant and invested for them, and a certain number of checks, of the amount of five cents each, were delivered to each member of the club, to the extent of the money advanced by each; these checks were transferable only to other members of the club; upon presentation of the checks by any number to the defendant, he would deliver to that member liquor of the club, to the amount of the check presented; on several occasions the defendant had delivered liquor to the witness, as such member, upon checks; upon distributing the liquor in the manner aforesaid, it was calculated that the liquor would so far overrun the amount to be delivered upon the checks as to leave in undelivered liquor about twenty per cent. of the original cost; and the defendant was to have this residue, to compensate him for his services as agent, and for the use of his room by the club. On the trial the presiding judge, in view of all the evidence, ruled that if the liquor in the defendant's possession was bought by him as the agent of the club, and the liquor so purchased was that of the club, the members advancing the money to purchase the same, and if checks were distributed to each of the members according to the amount advanced to each, and the defendant was a member of the club, and delivered to each member upon presentation of such checks, from time to time, the amount of liquor represented by such checks, that would be a sale by the defendant.

On appeal this was held to be error. The court say:

"The arrangements described in the bill of exceptions for the formation of a club, the purchase of liquors with their joint funds, and their distribution among the members by the agency of the defendant, may have been a mere evasion of the law. Whether it was really so, however, was really

§ k. MANUFACTURERS AND GROWERS.—Under a statute¹ providing for the punishment of the manufacturer² of spirituous or intoxicating liquors for sale, a common seller of liquors not manufactured by himself is included,³ as well as one who sells liquors manufactured by himself;⁴ but it has been held that a wine grower is not indictable for selling wine on his own premises without a license; or for permitting it to be drunk at such a question of fact, to be passed upon by the jury, under proper instructions. The court was not warranted in assuming, as a matter of law, that it was necessarily an evasion, or that, as a matter of law, the facts stated, to use the language of the presiding judge, "would be a sale." It certainly might happen, and not unfrequently has happened, that a number of persons unite in importing wines, or other liquors, from a foreign country, to be divided between them according to some agreed proportion. It could not seriously be contended that the person who should receive the liquor so imported, at his place of business, and make or superintend the division among the contributors to the purchase money, is a seller of intoxicating liquors, or that they buy the liquors of him. It is difficult to see how it could make any difference that the liquors are of various kinds and were purchased in this country instead of being imported from abroad, or that the person who is to make the distribution delivers them in small quantities, and keeps his account by means of tickets or checks. If the liquors really belonged to the members of the club, and had been previously purchased by them, or on their account, of some person other than the defendant, and if he merely kept the liquors for them, and to be divided among them according to a previously arranged system, these facts would not justify the jury in finding that he kept and maintained a nuisance, within the meaning of the statute under which he is indicted. There would be neither selling nor keeping for sale. On the other hand, if the whole arrangement were a mere evasion, and the substance of the transaction were a lending of money to the defendant, that he might buy intoxicating liquors to be afterwards sold and charged to the associates, or if he was authorized to sell, or did sell, or keep any of the liquors with intent to sell, to any persons not members of the club, he might well be convicted. This however, would be a question not of law but of fact, and would fall wholly within the province of the jury."

1. Such as Mass. Gen. Stat. 1852, ch. 322, § 12.

2. A person who leases his still house and still, knowing that the lessee takes them for the purpose of distilling spirits from corn, is not guilty of a violation of the act forbidding the distillation of spirits from corn, if he has not any interest in the liquor made. State v. Summey, 1 Winst. (N. C.) L., No. 2, 108.

Liquor obtained by running the beer through the still once is "spirituous liquor" within the act. State v. Summey, 1 Winst. (N. C.) L., No. 2, 108.

3. Com. v. Bralley, 69 Mass. (3 Gray) 456.

4. Keller v. State, 11 Md. 525. See Cable v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 531; Stickrod v. Com., 86 Ky. 285; Acree v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 353; State v. Hazell, 100 N. C. 471; State v. Lovell, 47 Vt. 493; Clemmons v. Com., 6 Rand. (Va.) 681.

A brewer cannot maintain an agency in any town and sell his beer there without a license from such town, because a brewer so selling intoxicating liquors is not to be regarded as selling directly to the consumer. Peitz v. State, 68 Wis. 538.

Distillers.—Indiana Doctrine.—A person may be liable under the Ind. Stat. of 1843, for keeping a distillery for a tippling house where he sells liquor without license, and where noisy, drunken people gather together and get to quarreling and fighting, etc., to the great annoyance and disturbance of the people, although the quarreling, fighting, etc., were in the street. Cable v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 531.

Kentucky Doctrine.—A conviction of a distiller for making at his distillery a sale of spirits, which was unlawful when made, is good, although before trial a law was passed authorizing like sales. Acree v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 353.

The particular whiskey for the sale of which defendant was indicted was manufactured by him at his distillery place;¹ and it has been said that tolls earned by a grist mill situated on a farm are not products of the farm within the meaning of the statute,² which imposes a license on the sale of liquors except when sold by a person at the place of manufacture in quantities not less than one quart and manufactured from the products of his own farm.³

4. DRUGGISTS, PHYSICIANS, ETC., MEDICAL PURPOSES.—In some States there are statutes prohibiting the sale or giving away of intoxicating liquors to the classes of persons therein named, unless made upon the requisition of a physician for medical purposes.⁴ Under such a statute the requisition must be a before the act prohibiting its sale was passed. Held, no defence. Stickrod v. Com., 86 Ky. 285.

By the statute provision that "distillers are allowed to obtain license to sell liquor in the same way, and under the same terms, restrictions and penalties as merchants," it was not intended to prohibit distillers from selling liquor of their own manufacture, by the barrel, unless licensed. Lawson v. Com. 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 225.

In North Carolina, that one is a licensed distiller, under the laws of the United States, and the whiskey sold of his own manufacture, affords no immunity for a sale contrary to State law. State v. Hazell, 100 N. C. 471. But a sale of whiskey, made by defendant three or four yards from his distillery, though on his farm, is not a sale "at the place of manufacture," within the meaning of acts 1885, ch. 175, § 34, allowing any person to sell liquor or wines of his own manufacture at the place of manufacture, without a license. State v. Hazell, 100 N. C. 471.

In Pennsylvania, a distiller of whiskey, who has paid the annual county tax for a distiller's license, may sell the whiskey manufactured by him, in quantities not less than one gallon, at any one place within the county other than at his distillery. Britton v. Com., 105 Pa. St. 311.

Nothing in the Pennsylvania statutes relating to distillers' licenses limits the right to sell anywhere in the county. Britton v. Commonwealth, 105 Pa. St. 311.

In Vermont, one may not distil cider brandy for his own use, or to sell according to law. Our statute prohibits the sale of distilled liquor, and is not in conflict with any provision of the constitution of that state, nor of the United States. State v. Lovell, 47 Vt. 493.

In Virginia, the 13th section of the Virginia act for the regulation of ordinaries, etc., is not to be construed as permitting persons, from the produce of whose estates ardent spirits are made, or distillers, to retail them to be drunk at the place where sold. Clemmons v. Com., 6 Rand. 1 (Va.) 681.

1. State v. Jaeger, 63 Mo. 403.

2. N. C. acts 1887, ch. 135, § 31.

3. State v. Emery, 98 N. C. 768.

4. See Carson v. State, 69 Ala. 235; State v. Hunt, 29 Kan. 762; State v. Shackle, 29 Kan. 341; McGuire v. State, 37 Miss. 369; People v. Safford, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 112; State v. Thornburg, 16 S. C. 482; Wood v. Smith, 23 Vt. 706; State v. Chandler, 15 Vt. 425.

Purposes for Which Sold.—It is no answer to a charge of selling liquor by retail without a license, though it was sold to the purchaser under the direction and prescription of a licensed physician, unless it is also shown that it was prescribed for medical purposes. People v. Safford, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 112.

Sale to Druggist.—A sale of spirituous liquor in Vermont, by one having a license under the statute of 1846, to sell intoxicating liquor for medical, chemical, and mechanical purposes, made to a person having a similar license, is not rendered unlawful by the fact that the liquors are thus sold in large quantities, and for the purpose of being again sold by the vendee, pursuant to his license. Wood v. Smith, 23 Vt. 706.

Sale by Practicing Physician.—It is said by the supreme court of Alabama, in Carson v. State, 69 Ala. 235, that where a special prohibitory act does not exempt the practicing physician from its operation, he is liable if he verbal or written application or request to the seller by the physician himself.¹ But where a statute forbids the sale of ardent spirits to any person, and for any purpose without a license, a druggist cannot lawfully sell such spirits, even as a medicine, upon a prescription of a physician.²

administer intoxicating liquors to his patient, but not for using liquors necessary for compounding medicine manufactured and sold by him. The court said: "It was contended under this state of facts, that if the appellant gave or sold the bitters in question as a prescription, and in good faith, he would not come within the prohibition of the statute and should be acquitted. . . . We know of no principle of law which would authorize us to incorporate so important an exception into the statute. The facts of the case may have constituted a good reason why the grand jury should have refused to find a bill, but there is no exception made in the statute in favor of physicians, druggists, or other persons whomsoever, and this court cannot engraft one in their favor without the exercise of legislative power which it does not possess. The question presented is not a novel one, though not before decided in this state. Mr. Wharton states the rule to be, that 'unless there is an express exception in the statute, the fact that the liquor was bought for medicine is no defence.'" 2 Whart. Cr. L., § 2439.

1. Bain v. State, 61 Ala. 75. See State v. Suesse, 20 Mo. App. 423.

Under such a statute it is immaterial and will not constitute a defence that the seller believed that what he sold was a medicine or was not intoxicating. Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68; Com. v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452; Com. v. Bathrick, 60 Mass. (6 Cush.) 247; Com. v. Sloan, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 52. See Com. v. Pierce, 138 Mass. 165, 180; Com. v. Farran, 91 Mass. (9 Allen) 480; Reg. v. Prince, L. R., 2 C. C. 154. This is upon the principle that the defendant was bound to know the quality of the articles manufactured or kept for sale. Com. v. Savery, 145 Mass. 212, 214; Com. v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452; Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6, 8; Com. v. Raymond, 97 Mass. 567; Com. v. Goodman, 97 Mass. 117; Com. v. Boynton, 84 Mass. (2 Allen) 160.

However, in King v. State, 58 Miss. 737; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 344, where defendants were indicted for selling intoxicating liquors without a license, and the liquor in question was called "Home Bitters," and was composed of 30 per cent. of alcohol, and the rest of water, bark, peeling, seeds, etc., and the defendants alleged that they sold it as a medicine, the court held correct a charge to the effect that if the compound was intoxicating and was sold as a beverage "the jury should convict, but if it was sold in good faith and only as a medicine, they should acquit although the compound was intoxicating."

2. Woods v. State, 36 Ark. 36; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 22; Wright v. People, 101 Ill. 126. See Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284. Compare Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68.

In Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68, a statute forbidding the sale or keeping for sale without authority all spirituous or intoxicating liquors, was held not to apply to a druggist who keeps liquors only for the purpose of mixing them with other ingredients according to prescriptions of physicians to be used as medicine, and also for the purpose of manufacturing such compounds as are commonly made by druggists to be sold for the purpose of being used as medicine for remedies for sickness and disease. The court said: "In order to determine whether the statute applies to a sale, the true test is to enquire whether the article sold is in reality an intoxicating liquor. If it is, the sale is illegal, although it is sold to be used as a medicine, or it is attempted to disguise it under the name of a medicine, or it is a mixture of liquor and other ingredients. Com. v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452; Com. v. Bathrick, 60 Mass. (6 Cush.) 247; Com. v. Sloan, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 52. But if the article sold cannot be used as an intoxicating drink, it is not within the prohibition of the statute, although it contains as one of its ingredients some spirituous liquor. The sale of such article is not within the mischief intended to be remedied by the statute, nor within the fair meaning of its language."

In the case of State v. Laffer, 38 Iowa 422, the court below refused to charge that if the liquor was sold only after being compounded into medicine with other drugs, and was sold as a medicine, in good faith and with no intent to violate the law, the defendant should be acquitted; and charged that unless the liquor had been so changed that it had lost its distinctive character, it was a violation of the law to sell it, but if it had been so changed that it could not be used as a beverage, and had become a medicine and of such a character that it could not reasonably be styled or used as intoxicating drink, its sale was not illegal. These instructions were approved, the court saying: "So long as the liquors retain their character as intoxicating liquors, capable of use as a beverage, notwithstanding other ingredients may have been mixed therewith, they fall under the ban of the law, but when they are so compounded with other substances as to lose the distinctive character of intoxicating liquors, and on no longer desirable for use as a stimulating beverage, and are in fact medicine, then their sale is not prohibited.

Druggists' Sale for Medical Purposes.—On a prosecution under the Maine statute, restricting the sale of intoxicating liquors, it is said in State v. Brown, 31 Me. 520, to be no defence that the liquor was sold and used solely for medical purposes. The defendant had no license, although no one else in the town had any license to sell for medical purposes.

The supreme court of Massachusetts say in the case of Com. v. Sloan, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 52, that it is no justification for the sale of spirituous liquor without license, though at the time of such sale there was no druggist or other person licensed to sell liquors within the county; that the sale was made upon the order or prescription of a physician; and that the spirit thus obtained was necessary for the buyer's use, either as a medicine or for the preservation of his health.

Sale for Medical Purposes—Indiana Doctrine.—It is said in Nixon v. State, 76 Ind. 524, that a bona fide sale of intoxicating liquors for medical purposes is not a violation of any of the provisions of the Indiana statute regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors. The same court said in Hooper v. State, 56 Ind. 153, that the courts will imply an exception of bona fide sales for medical purposes from the operation of an act prohibiting in general terms the selling of intoxicating liquors.

It is said in Hottendorf v. State, 89 Ind. 282, that section 5320 of the Ind. Rev. Stat. of 1881 is not violated by selling less than a quart of intoxicating liquor without license, in good faith, for medical purposes, but prudence and caution by the seller is required. And it was previously held that a sale on proper occasion in good faith, and with due care and for medical purposes only, is as much shielded by the spirit of the Indiana act of February 27th, 1873, as if he were exempted from the penalties of the act by express words. Ball v. State, 50 Ind. 595. The question of whether liquors were sold for medical purposes must be determined upon the facts of each particular case, when it is doubtful whether the sale was made in good faith or for such purpose, or was colorable only. Hottendorf v. State, 89 Ind. 282.

Same.—Iowa Doctrine.—It is said in the case of State v. Ward, 75 Iowa 637, under a statute providing that pharmacists can "sell intoxicating liquors for the actual necessities of medicines only." A pharmacist who has violated the provisions of the statute cannot, on an information for having in possession intoxicating liquors, protect himself by alleging that the liquor when seized was not in his actual possession.

Same.—Kansas Doctrine.—The supreme court of Kansas, in the case of State v. White, 31 Kan. 342, held that a druggist who has a permit from a probate judge of his county to sell intoxicating liquor for medical, scientific and mechanical purposes, and no offence is charged against him, he cannot be convicted of the offence of selling intoxicating liquors for medical, scientific and mechanical purposes in an irregular manner.

Same.—Missouri Doctrine.—Under an act to tax and license merchants, the Missouri court held that a person who, under a merchant's license is principally engaged in selling drugs and medicines, although incidentally admitting into his store articles not strictly falling under the denomination of drugs and medicines, was authorized to sell liquors in any county for medical purposes. State v. Mitchell, 28 Mo. 562; State v. Wells, 28 Mo. 565.

It is said in State v. Robertson, 24 Mo. App. 232, that under the Missouri act of 1881 regulating the sale of medicines by druggists, which repealed the act of 1879 regulating the sale of in-

(1) Sale by Druggists Without License.—Under a statute prohibiting the sale of ardent spirits by any person for any purpose without toxicating liquors by druggists, a registered pharmacist who sells intoxicating liquors for medical utility, in less quantity than one gallon, though not having the prescription of any physician therefor, and not having a license as a dram shop keeper, provided it had been done in good faith, is not guilty of any offence. But it would seem that one who would justify his sales of liquor under the privilege accorded by the Missouri statutes to druggists, must show himself to have in his employ a duly registered druggist. State v. Suess, 20 Mo. App. 423.

Same—Rule in Nebraska.—It is said in Warrick v. Rounds, 17 Neb. 411, that under the Nebraska statute a druggist without a permit is absolutely prohibited from selling intoxicating liquor upon any pretext, and with a permit is equally prohibited from selling except in the best of faith, and strictly for the purpose specified by law.

Same—North Carolina Rule.—In State v. Wray, 72 N. C. 253, it was held that a druggist, who in good faith and with due caution sells as a medicine, by the direction of a practicing physician, spirituous liquors in a quantity less than a quart, is not indictable therefor. The court said: "The letter of the law has been broken, but has the spirit of the law been violated? The question here presented has been much discussed, but it has not received the same judicial determination in all the states in which it has arisen. In this conflict of authority we shall remember that the reason of the law is the life of the law, and when one stops the other should also stop. What was the evil sought to be remedied by our statute? Evidently the abusive use of spirituous liquors, keeping in view at the same time the revenues of the state. The special verdict is very minute in its details, and makes as strong a case for the defendants as perhaps will ever find its way into court again. A physician prescribes the brandy as a medicine for a sick lady, and directs her husband to get it from the defendants, who are druggists. It may be a pure article of brandy, such as the physician was willing to administer as a medicine, was not to be obtained elsewhere than at the defendants' drug store. The doctor himself goes to the defendants and directs them to let the witness have the brandy as a medicine for his wife. And the further fact is found, which perhaps might have been assumed without the finding, that French brandy is an essential medicine, frequently prescribed by physicians and often used; and the farther and very important fact is established, that in this case it was bought in good faith as a medicine, and was used as such. After this verdict we cannot doubt that the defendants acted in good faith and with due caution in the sale which is alleged to be a violation of the law. In favor of defendants, criminal statutes are both contracted and expanded. 1 Bish. Cr. L., § 261. Now unless this sale comes within the mischief which the statute was intended to suppress, the defendants are not guilty; for it is a principle of the common law that no one shall suffer criminally for an act in which his mind does not occur. The familiar instance given by Blackstone illustrates our case better than I can do by argument. The Bolognian law enacted 'that whosoever drew blood in the street should be punished with the utmost severity.' A person fell down in the street with a fit, and a surgeon opened a vein and drew blood in the street. Here was a clear violation of the letter of the law, and yet from that day to this it has never been considered a violation of the spirit of the law. Perhaps it will give us a clearer view of the case if we put the druggist out of the question, and suppose that the physician himself, in the exercise of his professional skill and judgment, had furnished the liquor in good faith as a medicine. Can it be pretended that he would be more guilty of a violation of our statute than the surgeon was guilty of a violation of the Bolognian law? We think not. But we should not have it understood that physicians and druggists are to be protected in an abuse of the privilege. They are not only prohibited from selling liquor in the ordinary course of business, but also from administering it as a medicine unless it be done in good faith, and after the exercise of due caution as to its necessity as a medicine. The sale of liquor without a license, in quantities less than a quart, is prima facie unlawful, and it is incumbent upon one who does so sell to show that it was done under circumstances which render it lawful."

a license, a druggist cannot lawfully sell such spirits, even as a medicine, upon the prescription of a physician, unless he be properly licensed to do so.¹

(2) Sale as a Beverage and to be Drunk Upon the Premises.—Under a statute forbidding a druggist to sell liquor to be drunk by the purchaser on the premises where sold, or in any place adjacent thereto, he will not be protected by his license in making such a sale of the liquors to be drunk on the premises,² unless it be shown that the drinking was done without his knowledge or consent.³

(3) Necessity and Sufficiency of Prescription; Certificate and Representations of Purchaser.—Under a statute forbidding the

1. Woods v. State, 36 Ark. 36; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 22; Wright v. People, 101 Ill. 126; Warrick v. Rounds, 17 Neb. 411. See Dennehy v. Chicago, 120 Ill. 627; Torbert v. Clough, 72 Iowa 220; Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 284; Rosenham v. Com. (Ky.), 2 S. W. Rep. 230; State v. Wharton, 85 Tenn. 449; reviewing and discussing King v. Jacksonville, 3 Ill. 305; Goddard v. Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; Byers v. Olney, 16 Ill. 35; O'Leary v. Cook County, 28 Ill. 534; Block v. Jacksonville, 36 Ill. 301; Kettering v. Jacksonville, 50 Ill. 39; Strauss v. Pontiac, 40 Ill. 301; Ashton v. Ellsworth, 48 Ill. 299; Gunnarssohn v. Sterling, 92 Ill. 571. Compare Donnell v. State, 2 Ind. 658.

Necessity of and Right to Licenses, Generally.—A Kentucky statute requires merchants and druggists who sell liquors which are not to be used exclusively for medical purposes to procure a license therefor (acts 1884, 1st sess.). Held, that a druggist was a merchant, and entitled to a merchant's license, but that even if he was not, and no provision was made by the law for supplying him with a license, he would not, in that case, be entitled to sell without one. Rosenham v. Com. (Ky.), 2 S. W. Rep. 230.

Under the provisions of the Tennessee act of 1870 (Code 10, § 696) no druggist could sell vinous or alcoholic liquors without taking out a license therefor, except for communion purposes or for medical purposes upon a physician's prescription. State v. Wharton, 85 Tenn. 449.

Under West Virginia statute, ch. 107, § 4, there can be no sale, by a druggist, of intoxicating liquors without a license, except alcohol for mechanical purposes and liquors for medicinal purposes upon a physician's prescription. State v. Cox, 23 W. Va. 797.

But it was held by the supreme court of Indiana, in Donnell v. State, 2 Ind. 658, that a druggist, upon a proper occasion, bona fide, and with due caution, did retail liquor to be used merely as a medicine; he will not be considered as having violated a statute prohibiting the retailing of liquors without a license.

2. Spake v. People, 89 Ill. 617.

In State v. Knowles, 57 Iowa 669, a registered pharmacist sold a pint of whiskey to a stranger upon his simple statement that he was accustomed to take it as medicine, and wanted it as medicine. A conviction was sustained, the court observing: "We incline to think it is true liquors might be prescribed by a physician and yet the circumstances surrounding the transaction might be such as to warrant the jury in concluding the liquor was sold as a beverage. Conceding a person may prescribe for himself and lawfully determine that he should take intoxicating liquors as medicine, and that a druggist in such case may lawfully sell such liquor, it does not follow that it is always so prescribed or sold. It is undoubtedly true the claim that it is taken and sold as medicine may be a subterfuge, and that while in form sold as medicine, it was in fact a beverage, and so understood by both buyer and seller. The druggist must act in good faith, and the mere fact that a person says he wants intoxicating liquors as medicine will not exonerate the druggist if the circumstances are such as to warrant the court or jury in concluding that in truth and in fact it was sold as a beverage."

3. Under the Missouri statute prohibiting druggists from selling or giving away any alcoholic liquors as a beverage.

sale of ardent spirits by any person for any purpose without a license, a druggist cannot lawfully sell such spirits, even as medicine, upon the prescription of a physician.¹ The prescription of the practicing physician must be in writing, and must have all the requisites prescribed by the statute.² There must be a separate prescription for each sale, by a druggist, of spirituous and intoxicating liquors prohibited.³ But it has been said that simply keeping intoxicating liquors without a license only for the purpose of mixing them with other ingredients, according to the prescription of physicians, to be used as medicines, and of manufacturing such compounds as are commonly used by druggists for medical purposes, is not a violation of prohibitory statutes.⁴

age, it has been held that they may sell liquor for medical purposes even without a physician's prescription. State v. Roller, 77 Mo. 120.

1. Woods v. State, 36 Ark. 36; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 22. See State v. Roller, 77 Mo. 120; State v. Robinson, 24 Mo. App. 232.

It seems that under the Missouri act of March 26th, 1881, relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors by druggists being inconsistent with the act of May 19th, 1879, and for that reason a repeal of the latter act by implication, it follows that druggists, while they may not sell as a beverage, may sell for medical purposes without a physician's prescription required by the act of 1879. State v. Roller, 77 Mo. 120; State v. Robertson, 24 Mo. App. 232.

Prescription by Physician.—Under the Missouri act of 1883, the prescription on which a druggist may sell liquor must be the prescription of a regularly registered and practicing physician, and a prescription not shown to be such is inadmissible on the trial of a druggist for selling. State v. Millikan, 24 Mo. App. 462.

2. State v. Cox, 23 W. Va. 797, 799.

But it is said in State v. Wray, 72 N. C. 253, that a druggist who, in good faith and with due caution, by the direction of a practicing physician, sells as a medicine spirituous liquors in a quantity less than a quart is not indictable therefor, because the letter and not the spirit of the statute is broken thereby.

3. Carrington v. Com., 78 Ky. 83. See State v. Clevenger, 25 Mo. App. 653; State v. Wright, 20 Mo. App. 412; Harper v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 211.

4. Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68. See Warrick v. Rounds, 17 Neb. 411;

State v. Shaw, 58 N. H. 72; State v. Brown, 60 N. H. 205.

Under a statute authorizing druggists to keep liquors for compounding their medicines, it was held that such statute does not authorize them to be sold to others to be compounded with medicines. State v. Brown, 60 N. H. 205. And also that a statute authorizing any registered pharmacist "to keep spirituous liquors for compounding their medicines" does not authorize them to sell spirituous liquor not compounded with medicine. State v. Shaw, 58 N. H. 72. Under such a statute a druggist selling liquor without a license cannot escape liability on the ground that there was quinine in the liquor, and that he sold it as a medicine. Warrick v. Rounds, 17 Neb. 411.

In State v. Laffer, 38 Iowa 422, the court below refused to charge that if the liquor was only sold after being compounded into medicine with other drugs, and was sold as a medicine, in good faith and with no intent to violate the law, the defendant should be acquitted, and charged that unless the liquor had been so changed that it had lost its distinctive character, it was a violation of law to sell it, but if it had been so changed that it could not be used as a beverage and had become a medicine, and of such a character that it could not reasonably be styled or used as an intoxicating drink, its sale was not illegal. These instructions were approved, the court saying: "So long as the liquors retain their character as intoxicating liquors, capable of use as a beverage, notwithstanding other ingredients may have been mixed therewith, they fall under the ban of the law, but when they are so compounded with

Under some statutes a retail druggist cannot sell pure alcohol except upon the certificate of a purchaser stating the use for which it is wanted.¹

(4) Place of Sale.—Under a permit to sell liquors, the sales must be strictly confined to the objects for which the sale is granted, and to the place where the sale is permitted.²

(5) Giving Away.—Where the statute prohibits the sale or giving away of intoxicating liquors except under conditions named, such a restriction applies to licensed pharmacists, as well as to saloon keepers, and they are liable for giving away intoxicating liquors for unlawful purposes, no matter how artfully done.³

(6) Sale by Druggists Who Are Also Physicians.—It seems that a druggist who is also a practicing physician may prescribe and sell whisky or other intoxicating liquors, notwithstanding the other substances as to lose their distinctive character of intoxicating liquors, and no longer desirable for use as a stimulating beverage, and are in fact medicine, then their sale is not prohibited."

In Com. v. Ramsdell, 130 Mass. 68, a statute forbidding the sale or keeping for sale without authority, of spirituous or intoxicating liquors, was held not to apply to a druggist who kept liquors only for the purpose of mixing them with other ingredients, according to prescriptions of physicians, to be used as medicine, and also for the purpose of manufacturing such compounds as are commonly used by druggists, to be sold for the purpose of being used as medicines for remedies for sickness and disease. The court said, in substance: In order to determine whether the statute applies to a sale, the true test is to enquire whether the article sold is in reality an intoxicating liquor. If it is, the sale is illegal, although it is sold to be used as a medicine, or it is attempted to disguise it under the name as a medicine, or it is a mixture of liquor and other ingredients. Commonwealth v. Hallett, 103 Mass. 452; Commonwealth v. Bathrick, 60 Mass. (6 Cush.) 247; Commonwealth v. Sloan, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 52. But if the article sold cannot be used as an intoxicating drink, it is not within the prohibition of the statute, although it contains as one of its ingredients some spirituous liquor. The sale of such articles is not within the mischief intended to be remedied by the statute or within the fair meaning of its language.

1. Com. v. Pierce, 147 Mass. 161.

In Bryant v. State, 65 Miss. 435, a licensed druggist was indicted for selling alcohol in a county where the Local Option act was in force. He showed that the purchaser represented that the alcohol was to be used for medicine. The court charged that the jury must convict if the defendant had no certificate from a physician to make the sale, and the appellate court held that the question of defendant's good faith in making the sale should have been submitted to the jury, because the act of March 11, 1886, § 9, permits such sale without a certificate.

But in Jakes v. State, 42 Ind. 473, where on the trial of an indictment for the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license under the act of 1859, the proof was that the defendant, a druggist, sold a pint of liquor on the statement of a purchaser that it was for medical purposes, and that it was so used, the court held that the defendant should have been acquitted.

2. State v. Copp, 34 Kan. 522.

Thus where a druggist's permit is to sell liquor, all his clerks and agents may sell the same for him in his drug store without violating the law; but such sales must be made in the drug store where the business is carried on and the permit to sell is posted, and the druggist cannot sell under his permit intoxicating liquors to any other than the class of persons designated therein, or at any other or different place than a store where a permit is posted; and if any clerk or agent of the druggist sells or barter intoxicating liquors at any different place than at the said store of the druggist, the permit of the druggist is no protection of such clerk or agent for selling or bartering intoxicating liquors. State v. Copp, 34 Kan. 522.

3. State v. Harris, 64 Iowa 287.

local option law;¹ but where the statute authorizes a sale to be made only on a prescription of some regularly practicing physician, a druggist, who is himself a regularly practicing physician, cannot sell under his own prescription.²

(7) Sale by Physicians.—It has been said that where a physician administers liquor as a medicine upon his professional judgment of its necessity, the act is not within the statute.³

It is said that where a physician sells liquor to persons who apply therefor, by their own suggestion, and not because of his prescription as their medical adviser, the fact that he is a practicing physician is no defence to a prosecution for illegally selling intoxicating liquors;⁴ and the mere fact that the physician knew that the purchaser's wife was sick, has been held not to show that the liquor was sold for medical purposes.⁵

It has been said to be no defence to an indictment charging the sale or gift of intoxicating liquors or bitters in violation of a local statute prohibiting the sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors, that the defendant was a licensed practicing physician, and gave or sold them in good faith as a prescription to a person who was under his treatment, notwithstanding the fact that it is shown that such was the proper or scientific treatment of the disease for which he was prescribing.⁶

10. Adulteration.—In some States the statutes require that persons trafficking in intoxicating liquors shall not only procure a license, but shall take an oath,⁷ and give a bond,⁸ not to adulterate the liquors sold.

1. Boone v. State, 10 Tex. App. 418; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 641.

2. State v. Anderson, 81 Mo. 78.

3. Sarrls v. Com., 83 Ky. 328; State v. Larrimore, 19 Mo. 391.

But under the Kansas statute it would seem that a physician having no permit therefor, cannot lawfully furnish intoxicating liquors as a medicine, even to a patient who is actually sick, and charge and receive pay for the sale. State v. Fleming, 32 Kan. 588. See State v. Hall, 39 Me. 107.

It is said in Thomason v. State, 70 Ala. 20, that under the Alabama code prohibiting the sale of liquor without a revenue license, no exemption is made in favor of a sale for medical purposes by the family physician of the purchaser, and such a sale is a violation of the statute.

Recording Prescription.—The supreme court of Kentucky held in Sarrls v. Com., 83 Ky. 328, that where a statute requires the physician to record every prescription of liquor in a book to be kept by him, and provides a penalty for his failure to do so, under an indictment against the physician for unlawfully selling liquor; the only question is whether he in good faith prescribed the liquor as a medicine when necessary as such, and if so he is not guilty, although he may have failed to record the prescription, that being a separate and distinct offence.

4. State v. Cloughly, 73 Iowa 626.

5. Thomason v. State, 70 Ala. 20.

6. Carson v. State, 69 Ala. 235.

7. Levi v. State, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 289; Hall v. State, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 574; Newman v. State, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 617.

Oath Not to Adulterate.—In Newman v. State, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 617, where a druggist sold a man a quart of liquor upon a physician's prescription, without having taken the oath not to adulterate as required by the Tennessee statute, he was held to be liable to indictment.

It is said in Hall v. State, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 574, that an oath "not to mix or adulterate with any poisonous substance whatever," is not a compliance with a statute requiring an oath "not to mix or adulterate with any substance whatever."

8. See State v. Ferguson, 72 Mo. 297; Levi v. State, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 289.

11. Exporting and Importing.—It has been said that the sale of intoxicating liquors for exportation from a State is not forbidden by the liquor law prohibiting the manufacture and sale,¹ but the better doctrine is that exportation from a State is not a purpose for which intoxicating liquors may be lawfully manufactured and sold where there is a statute prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.²

The importer of intoxicating liquors, under the laws of the United States, may himself sell them while remaining in the original casks or packages without regard to any State prohibitory law,³ although he has knowledge that the purchaser intends to resell the liquor in violation of the law.⁴

It has been said that a person who is not himself the importer may sell intoxicating liquors in the original unbroken packages or casks in which they were imported, in quantities not less than those prescribed by the laws of the United States;⁵ but a different doctrine prevails in some of the States.⁶

12. Illegal Transportation—a. THE OFFENCE IN GENERAL.—Under a statute making it an offence to receive for the purpose of conveying to another person liquor intended for sale contrary to the statute regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquor, the offence consists in receiving for the purpose of conveying to the purchaser and thus completing the intended sale;⁷ but it is

Druggists and physicians, it is said in State v. Ferguson, 72 Mo. 297, are not exempted from giving the bond required by the Missouri statute, of all persons dealing in liquors, notwithstanding the fact that by a section of the same statute, they are permitted to mix the adulterated liquors for medical and mechanical purposes.

1. Hanley v. Powers, 11 R. I. 82.

2. Pearson v. International Distillery Co., 72 Iowa 348; s. c., sub nom.; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1; 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 221. See Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 627; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 614.

3. State v. Robinson, 49 Me. 285. See Pearson v. International Distillery Co., 72 Iowa 348; s. c., sub nom. Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1; 23 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 221; Richards v. Woodward, 113 Mass. 285; Bradford v. Stevens, 76 Mass. (10 Gray) 379; Jones v. Hard, 32 Vt. 481.

It is said by the supreme court of Iowa in the case of State v. United States Express Co., 70 Iowa 271, that intoxicating liquors imported into Iowa by an express company, and there held for delivery to the consignees on payment of the purchase price, are under the Iowa Code, §§ 1542, 1543, 1553, as amended by ch. 143 of the laws of the twentieth assembly, contraband, as held for sale.

4. Richards v. Woodward, 113 Mass. 285.

5. Bradford v. Stevens, 76 Mass. (10 Gray) 379.

It is said in King v. McEvoy, 86 Mass. (4 Allen) 110, that one who receives from an importer, and duly forecloses a mortgage on a cask of spirituous liquors, which is in a United States warehouse, in bond, and pays the duties and receives the cask of liquors, does not thereby become the importer thereof, within the meaning of the statute.

6. See Wynehamer v. People, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 567; s. c., 2 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 377 and 421; People v. Quant, 2 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 410.

7. Com. v. Locke, 114 Mass. 288.

The purchaser's intention in regard to the liquor is immaterial, and it is not necessary that he should be named. Com. v. Locke, 114 Mass. 288.

Transportation in Town.—Under a statute prohibiting the transportation of intoxicating liquors "from place to place," having reasonable cause to know that they were intended to be sold, includes the transportation of such liquors from one place to another in the same thought that where liquors have been lawfully sold, a mere messenger cannot be held guilty of illegally transporting them by bringing them to a purchaser residing in a town where such sale cannot be lawfully made.¹

b. BY CARRIERS AND EXPRESS COMPANIES.—The law neither requires nor permits common carriers to do illegal acts, and they are not bound to transport and deliver intoxicating liquors or other commodities if thereby they incur a penalty.² A common carrier, such as an express company, is bound to know whether the goods received for shipment are such as the law authorizes to be bartered or sold, and it cannot be allowed to make itself the agent of one who is violating the law of the State;³ but it is not a carrier's duty to know the contents of any package offered to him for carriage, where their attendant circumstances do not awaken his suspicion as to their character, there can be no presumption of law that he had such knowledge in any particular case of that kind, consequently he cannot be charged as matter of law with notice of the purchase and character of the packages received for transportation.⁴

c. SALES OF LIQUORS TO BE TRANSPORTED TO OR DELIVERED IN ANOTHER TOWN OR STATE—(1) Generally.—One having a license to retail liquor in a certain town violates his license by filling an order from another town by taking or sending liquor there and collecting the price at the time of the delivery;⁵

town. Com. v. Waters, 77 Mass. (11 Gray) 81.

Lawful Sale in Another City.—It is no defence to a complaint for carrying intoxicating liquor with reasonable cause to believe that it was intended to be sold in violation of the law, from place to place in a city where it was not lawful to sell such liquor, that it was lawfully sold in another city, to a person to whom the defendant was carrying it. Com. v. McLaughlin, 108 Mass. 477.

1. Falvey v. Faxon, 143 Mass. 284. Compare State v. Campbell (Iowa), 40 N. W. Rep. 100; Com. v. McLaughlin, 108 Mass. 477.

It is said in State v. Campbell (Iowa), 40 N. W. Rep. 100, that the carrying of liquors from wholesale dealers to retail dealers, in the same city, is a conveying within the meaning of a statute imposing a penalty for conveying liquors "from one place to another within the State."

2. State v. Goss, 59 Vt. 266.

3. State v. United States Express Co., 70 Iowa 271.

Sending Goods C. O. D.—Where a dealer in one State ships intoxicating liquors to a party in another State by express C. O. D. order, which is in effect a direction by the consignor not to deliver the liquors to the consignee except on the payment, the express company is the agent of the consignor and may be lawfully convicted under an indictment charging him with keeping liquors for unlawful purposes. State v. O'Neil, 58 Vt. 140. See State v. Goss, 59 Vt. 266.

In State v. Campbell (Iowa), 40 N. W. Rep. 100, it is said that the words "any other person," a specification in a statute of certain companies, and other carriers and their agents, etc., who are prohibited from carrying intoxicating liquors without a certificate, means simply other persons of like kind, or in like employment as those specified.

4. Nitro Glycerine Cases, 82 U. S. 524; State v. Goss, 59 Vt. 266; denying Crouch v. London & N. W. R. Co., 14 C. B. 255, and dictum in Riley v. Horne, 5 Bing. 217. See Brass v. Maitland, 6 El. & Bl. 471; s. c., 1 Smith Lead. Cas. (7th Am. ed.) 389, 411.

5. United States v. Kline, 26 Fed. Rep. 515. See State v. Four Jugs of Intoxicating Liquors, 58 Vt. 140; United States v. Shriver, 23 Fed. Rep. 134; s. c., 31 Alb. L. J. 163.

Thus it is said, in Berger v. State, 50

but the law of a State prohibiting the sale of liquor cannot extend to sales made in another State in which sales are lawful, where the sale is completed in the latter State.¹

(2) Where Sales Made or Completed.—The illegality of the sale of intoxicating liquors frequently depends upon the place where the sale is made; this is governed by the place where the sale is completed by delivery, where the vendor is to and does pay the freight to the place of delivery, the place of delivery becomes the place of sale.² The same is true where liquors are sent by

Ark. 20, that where a person in a non-liquor license town sends an order for liquor left with him to a licensed dealer in another town, who fills the order, putting the liquor in a bottle, and with many others of the same nature sends it, labelled with the customer's name in a locked box, to the person sending the order, who opened the box and delivered the liquor to a customer; the court held the defendant guilty of the offence of selling ardent spirits. In this case the court say that if after selecting the goods ordered they had been consigned to the carrier for the purpose of being delivered to the person for whom the liquor was intended, the carrier would be regarded as standing in the place of the buyer for the purpose of delivery, and the property would have vested in him at the place of sale and shipment, and that the sale would have been completed there, in which case there would have been no violation of the liquor law. Citing Parsons Oil Co. v. Boyett, 44 Ark. 230; State v. Carl, 43 Ark. 353; Frank v. Hoey, 128 Mass. 263; Webber v. Howe, 36 Mich. 150; Boothby v. Plaisted, 51 N. H. 436; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 140; Garbracht v. Com., 96 Pa. St. 449; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 550; Sarbecker v. State, 65 Wis. 171.

1. Smith v. Godfrey, 28 N. H. 379; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 617.

Penal Statutes of Foreign States.—It is a well settled principle of law that the penal statutes of one State are not in force beyond the limits of the State which enacted them. See Teall v. Felton, 1 N. Y. 546; Delafield v. State of Ill., 2 Hill (N. Y.) 169; Scoville v. Canfield, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 338; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 467; Dickson v. Dickson, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 110; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 444; Suffolk Bank v. Kidder, 12 Vt. 464; s. c., 36 Am. Dec. 354.

It is said, in State v. Comings, 28 Vt. 508, that the delivery in Vermont of intoxicating liquors in transitu, by the procurement of a nonresident owner of the liquors, is a violation of the Vermont statute, the delivery being the more essential act of the offence which is a misdemeanor.

In State v. Emery, 98 N. Car. 668, an indictment charged the unlawful selling and retailing of spirituous liquors in the county of Wake; the only witness testified that he bought liquors of the defendant in the city of Raleigh, Wake county; a motion in arrest of judgment was refused, because it did not appear that there was an exception to the law in regard to Raleigh township.

2. Weil v. Golden, 141 Mass. 364. See Blackwell v. State, 42 Ark. 275; Berger v. State, 50 Ark. 20; State v. Basserman, 54 Conn. 88; Com. v. Shurn, 145 Mass. 150; Com. v. Burgett, 136 Mass. 450; People v. Capen, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 377; Re Young's Liquors, 15 R. I. 243.

When a person licensed to sell in one town sends liquor to another town where there are no licenses, for sale, he is guilty of illegal selling in the latter town, and the liquors are forfeited to the State. Re Young's Liquors, 15 R. I. 243.

Where liquor has been ordered from M by a resident of another place and was delivered, paid and receipted for in the latter place, it is sufficient evidence of a sale therein. Com. v. Shurn, 145 Mass. 150.

A, who had a billiard saloon in X, where the local option law prevailed, directed B to give A's son money for some whiskey at said saloon, which money A sent to his dram shop outside of X, got the whiskey there, and through his son delivered it to B at said saloon; the court held, that this was a sale at X. Blackwell v. State, 42 Ark. 275.

A, who had a place of business in B, where he sold liquors, advertised that he would sell persons in H, at B prices, free of expressage, and that applications might be left in the post office box in H, express, C. O. D.¹ But delivery to a common carrier being delivery to the consignee, if a dealer in one county sends liquors by express to a buyer residing in another, and the latter pays the

which was hired by an employe of A. Upon an application being left in the box, it was taken by the employe to A, who delivered a bottle of whiskey to an expressman in B, who carried it to the person ordering it in H. Held, that A might be convicted of a sale in H. Com. v. Burgett, 136 Mass. 450.

A, as servant of B, took from C an order for a case of lager, in Corinth, where no licenses for sales thereof were granted, carried it to B at Glenn's Falls, where B delivered to A the quantity ordered, which A thereupon took to Corinth, delivered to C and received the pay. Held, that the sale was made at Corinth, and A was liable for violation of the excise law. People v. Capen, 26 Hun (N.Y.) 377.

A brewer was in the habit of sending into a town adjoining that in which he carried on business, and which had voted against the granting of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors, a wagon, on regular trips, for the delivery of ale and beer to persons residing in such adjoining town. Held, that he might properly be convicted of selling intoxicating liquors in that town, upon proof of the delivery of beer therein to purchasers by the driver of the wagon as his agent; that under the statute providing that where any town shall have voted against the granting of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors, a delivery of such liquors within such town shall be deemed a sale in the town, although the contract for the sale shall have been made in another town (Conn. L. 1882, ch. 107, pt. 2, § 2), the complaint properly charged a sale in that town; and that under that statute he was liable for the delivery by his agents. State v. Basserman, 54 Conn. 88.

1. State v. O'Neil, 58 Vt. 140.

Thus where a dealer in one State ships intoxicating liquors to parties in another State by express on a C. O. D. order, which order is in effect a direction by the consignor to the express company not to deliver the liquors to the consignee except upon payment, when the liquors have been delivered by the express company to the consignee in the State to which they are shipped and paid for, the sale is in that State and the vendor is liable to a conviction there for an illegal sale. State v. O'Neil, 58 Vt. 140.

In the case of State v. Carl, 43 Ark. 353; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 565, one Davidson, at Ozark, sent a written order to Carl & Toby, merchants at Little Rock, to send him one gallon of whiskey by express, C. O. D. It was sent accordingly, the seller agreeing with the express company that if it was not taken within thirty days it might be returned, and they would pay therefor both ways. Davidson received and paid for the liquor, and the court held the sale to have been completed at Little Rock.

In Pilgreen v. State, 71 Ala. 368, it was held that when goods are forwarded through an express company, by instructions of the purchaser, marked "C. O. D.," the carrier is the agent of the purchaser to receive the goods from the seller, and the agent of the seller to collect the price from the purchaser; and the sale is complete when the goods are delivered to the carrier. The court said: "Upon all sales of specific goods in the possession of the vendor, the contract is complete when the buyer and seller agree; the property in the goods then passes to the buyer, and the risk of loss by accident, or from any other cause than the fault or negligence of the seller, is cast upon the buyer as an incident of ownership, though actual possession may not pass, and he may not be entitled to it until he pays the price, or performs some other like stipulation. 1 Pars. Cont. (6th ed.) 525. An illustration given in some of the books is, 'if a man sell his horse for money, though he may keep him until he is paid, yet the property of the horse is in the bargainor or buyer.' When buyer and seller are distant from each other, the delivery of the goods to a carrier by the seller, in accordance with the specific request of the purchaser, is a delivery to the purchaser. 1 Pars. Cont. (6th ed.) 532; Benj. Sales (3rd Am. ed.), § 181. Applying these settled rules of the law of sales of personal property to the facts, the transaction cannot be located at Columbiana. All the dealings between the buyer and the charges for the carriage of the liquor, the sale is completed at the place where the liquors are delivered to the carrier.¹

(3) Sale or Delivery by Agent.—It is a violation of the excise law to send liquors from a place where a licence permits a sale to another place where such sale is unlawful, by a servant or agent of the seller to be delivered to and paid for by the purchaser,² because a delivery by an agent of the seller is a delivery by the seller were at Calera. There the offer of the buyer was received, accepted and acted upon, and there every act was done which it was intended the seller should do. The general property in the thing sold there passed to the buyer, by the delivery to the carrier of his own appointment, though he could not entitle himself to possession until he paid the price to the carrier. The carrier was his agent to receive the thing sold at Calera, and was the agent of the seller to receive the price. It would have been a neglect of duty, as a collecting agent, rendering the express company liable to the seller, if there had been a delivery of the whiskey without payment of the price; and if possession had been wrongfully obtained, it may be the seller could have reclaimed it. The general property, however, passed to the buyer by the delivery to the express company at Calera; the risk of loss then passed to him, though there may have remained in the seller a special property, and though the buyer could not, without the payment of the price, entitle himself to the absolute property and to the actual possession. 'In law,' as is observed by MR. BENJAMIN, 'a thing may in some cases be said to have in a certain sense two owners, one of whom has the general and the other a special property in it.' Benj. Sales (Kerr's edition), § 1. And this occurs in the sales of personal property when the bargain is struck, and the payment of the price is intended to be simultaneous with the delivery of possession. The seller has a lien on the property for the price, and the right of possession until it is paid. A sale, which will be in violation of the statute under which the conviction is had, must, within the designated locality, pass the title, a sale made in the different locality where the liquor is set apart and delivered to the purchaser, or to a carrier for him, passing title, is not within its words or spirit. Garbracht v. Com., 96 Pa. St. 449; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 550. Compare Baker v. Boucicault, 1 Daly (N. Y.) 23."

1. Brechwald v. People, 21 Ill. App.

213. See Rindskopf v. D'Ruyter, 39 Mich. 1; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 340; Garbracht v. Com., 96 Pa. St. 449; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 550; State v. Hughes, 22 W. Va. 743.

Where a member of a firm of wholesale and retail licensed liquor dealers, doing business in one county, visits another county and there solicits and obtains an order on his firm for whiskey, which is shipped in jugs by railroad, and delivered to the firm by an express agent in the county where the firm does business, for transportation to the purchasers in their county, who received the whiskey and paid the express charges, and subsequently, when on a visit to the county where the railroad was, the partner collected in that county the price agreed to be paid by the purchasers, the sale was completed when the whiskey was delivered to the express agent for transportation, there being up to that time only an executory contract therefor, and hence the partner cannot be indicted in the county where the sale was taken. State v. Hughes, 22 W. Va. 743.

2. People v. Capen, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 377. See Berger v. State, 50 Ark. 20; State v. Basserman, 54 Conn. 88; Peitz v. State, 68 Wis. 538.

In State v. Basserman, 54 Conn. 88; s. c., 9 Cr. L. Mag. 123, the town of H had voted against the granting of licenses for the sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors in the town. Defendant was a brewer living and carrying on his business in the town of New Haven, to which H adjoined, where he had a license for sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors, ale and lager beer, at wholesale and retail, and he was in the habit of sending wagons on regular trips, once or twice a week, through the town of H for the delivery of ale and lager to various persons residing there. Held, that under the statute of 1832, p. 178, § 2, which makes the delivery in a nonlicensed town a sale by the vendor or his agent, defendant was properly convicted of a sale in H. The delivery by his agent was a delivery by defendant.

seller himself,¹ and where an employe of a seller of intoxicating liquors in another State who there receives an order for such liquors, and under authority from his employer to receive or reject orders, accepts the order, he may be indicted and punished in the State to which the liquors are taken, if the liquors are, in pursuance of his direction, delivered to the buyer in such latter State.²

(4) Sale, etc., by Travelling Salesmen.—Where liquors are ordered by sample of the travelling agent of the firm in another State, where the sale of intoxicating liquors is lawful, and they are put up marked to the purchaser, and shipped from the firms' place of business, the sale is regarded as made, and the contract completed at the place of shipment.³

A brewer owning a building in a town some fifteen miles distant from his duly licensed place of business, sent beer there to be stored and sold by his agent to any one who desired to get it, without obtaining a license from the authorities of such town. Held, that his agent, who had sold a keg of beer directly to a consumer, was properly convicted for selling beer without a license. Peitz v. State, 68 Wis. 538.

1. State v. Basserman, 54 Conn. 88.

2. Com. v. Eggleston, 128 Mass. 408.

See Com. v. Hadley, 52 Mass. (11 Metc.) 66; Com. v. Drew, 57 Mass. (3 Cush.) 279. Also, Adams v. People, 1 N. Y. 173. 1 Whart. Cr. L. (7th ed.), §§ 278, 604.

Under a statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors by sample, by soliciting, or procuring orders therefor, or otherwise, without first taking out a license for the privilege, the offence is committed by procuring an order from a dealer in one State and sending it to the principal in another, who accepted the order and shipped the liquors. State v. Ascher, 54 Conn. 299.

The supreme court of Wisconsin held, in the case of Sar Becker v. State, 65 Wis. 171, that when the contract is silent on the subject, and there is nothing in the transaction indicating a different intention, and a manufacturer residing in one city receives, through his agent residing in another, an order for beer from a customer there, and fills the order by delivering the beer to a common carrier at the place of manufacture, consigned to such customer at his place of residence, or to such agent for him, the sale is complete, and the title passes at the place of shipment, even though the customer, on receiving the beer at his place of residence, pays to such agent there the purchase price; and the absence of a license to sell liquors in the county where the purchaser resided will not render the agent liable for selling without obtaining a license there. The court cite City of Kansas v. Collins, 34 Kan. 434; Com. v. Farnum, 114 Mass. 267; Janney v. Sleeper, 30 Minn. 473; Somers v. McLaughlin, 57 Wis. 358; Ranney v. Higby, 4 Wis. 154; Fragano v. Long, 4 B. & C. 219. The court say: "The same principle has frequently been applied, in the sale of liquors, to a purchaser residing in a place where all such sales, without a license, were prohibited; citing Tegler v. Shipman, 33 Iowa 194; Frank v. Hoey, 128 Mass. 263; Dolan v. Green, 110 Mass. 322; Brockway v. Maloney, 102 Mass. 308; Abberger v. Marrin, 102 Mass. 70; Finch v. Mansfield, 97 Mass. 89; Boothby v. Plaisted, 51 N. H. 436; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 140; Hill v. Spear, 50 N. H. 253; s. c., 9 Am. Rep. 205; Garbracht v. Com., 96 Pa. St. 449; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 550; Shuenfeldt v. Junkermann, 20 Fed. Rep. 357.

3. Gross v. Scarr, 71 Iowa 656; Tegler v. Shipman, 33 Iowa 194; Boothby v. Plaisted, 51 N. H. 436; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 140; Hill v. Spear, 50 N. H. 253; s. c., 9 Am. Rep. 205; Carbracht v. Com., 96 Pa. St. 449; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 550. Compare State v. Ascher, 54 Conn. 299.

A travelling agent for a licensed wholesale liquor dealer, doing business in Erie, took orders for whiskey in Mercer county, and sent them to his employer in Erie, who shipped the goods by railroad to purchasers in Mercer county; the court held that Erie was the place of sale and delivery, and that the agent could not be convicted of selling liquors without a license in Mercer

13. Keeping for Unlawful Sale.—Where the owner of intoxicating liquors retains possession of them, intending to deliver them on an unlawful contract for sale, such possession is within a statute or a municipal ordinance which prohibits the keeping of such liquors for unlawful sale,¹ although they are not exposed to per-county. Garbracht v. Com., 96 Pa. St. 449; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 550.

A commercial traveller, in Connecticut, solicited and obtained an order for spirituous liquors to be furnished by his employers doing business in another State, and transmitted the order to them; and, in pursuance of the order, the goods were forwarded and went into the possession of the person so ordering them. Held, that the agent was guilty of a violation of the Connecticut statute imposing a fine upon "any person who, without a license therefor, shall, by sample, by soliciting or procuring orders or otherwise, sell any spirituous and intoxicating liquors." State v. Ascher, 54 Conn. 299.

But in Webber v. Howe, 36 Mich. 150, where a liquor dealer from Ohio in person solicited and received in Michigan an order for liquors, which were afterwards shipped in Ohio, and delivered to the vendee in Michigan, it was held to be a sale in Michigan. JUDGE COOLEY says: "Had the order been sent from this State to dealers in Ohio, and filled there, or had an agent of the Ohio parties, who had no authority to agree upon sales, taken the order in this State, and transmitted to his principals, who accepted and filled it," the sale would have been completed in Ohio; citing Orcutt v. Nelson, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 536; McIntyre v. Parks, 44 Mass. (3 Metc.) 207; Kling v. Fries, 33 Mich. 275; Garland v. Lane, 46 N. H. 245. See, to same effect, Keiwert v. Meyer, 62 Ind. 587; Hausman v. Nye, 62 Ind. 485.

1. Griffin v. City of Atlanta, 78 Ga. 679; Menken v. City of Atlanta, 78 Ga. 668; s. c., 36 Alb. L. J. 6. See State v. Connelly, 63 Me. 212; State v. Kaler, 56 Me. 88; State v. McCann, 61 Me. 116; Com. v. Savery, 145 Mass. 212; Com. v. Welch, 140 Mass. 372; Com. v. Henderson, 140 Mass. 303; Com. v. Atkins, 136 Mass. 160; Com. v. Fraher, 126 Mass. 56; Com. v. Goodman, 97 Mass. 117; State v. Murphy, 15 R. I. 543.

It is said in Com. v. Goodman, 97 Mass. 117, that the guilty intent within the statute need not include a knowledge by the seller of the intoxicating quality of his liquor. In the more recent case of Com. v. Savery, 145 Mass. 212, that the person keeping liquor for sale is bound to know its kind and quality.

The fact that the offender will be liable to a prosecution under a statute for the unlawful act of selling liquors when the sale is consummated will not prevent his being punished under an ordinance for the keeping of liquors for an unlawful sale. Griffin v. City of Atlanta, 78 Ga. 679.

Authority to Sell in Small Towns.—In State v. Connelly, 63 Me. 212, it is said that a complaint under the Maine Revised Statute (ch. 27, §§ 33 and 35), for keeping liquors with intent to sell them within the State, in violation of law, will lie against one who has authority to sell in some town or city within the State.

Intention to Sell and Deliver.—The supreme court of Rhode Island say, in the case of State v. Murphy, 15 R. I. 543, that under the laws of that State, the keeping of prohibited liquors for sale to be used as a beverage is inimical to the statute only when the keeper intends not only to sell, but also to deliver as well as to sell within that State.

Quality of Liquor—Intention to Test.—On indictment for having lager beer upon the premises with intent to sell the same, defendant testified that he purchased it for three per cent. beer, and that if he had found when he had opened it that it was lager beer, he would not have sold it. Held, that in the absence of evidence that he actually intended to test it before he offered it for sale, the jury could not be required to speculate upon the probability of his finding out that it contained more than three per cent. of alcohol before he sold it. Com. v. Savery, 145 Mass. 212.

Illegal Seizure—Defence of.—The fact that the officer proceeded illegally, in making search for and seizure of intoxicating liquors kept for unlawful sale, is no defence to the prosecution of the person for keeping them. State v. McCann, 61 Me. 116.

sons visiting the premises,¹ and are deposited where their presence cannot be known to the public;² neither is it necessary that the keeper shall intend to make the unlawful sale himself. Where there is a keeping with the intent that an unlawful sale shall be made in the State by any person, or with the intent to aid or assist in such unlawful sale, the law is violated.³

14. Keeping Place for Illegal Sale; Nuisance.—a. KEEPING PLACE GENERALLY.—It has been said that the "keeping of a place" for the unlawful sale of liquors is a distinct offence from selling, notwithstanding the fact that the statute does not define the place as one of "public resort";⁴ also that the finding of intoxicating liquors in any other building than the one used as a private dwelling affords presumptive evidence that they are kept by the owner for sale and will support an indictment for keeping and maintaining a house for selling intoxicating liquors.⁵

1. Com. v. Atkins, 136 Mass. 160; Com. v. Fraher, 126 Mass. 56; Com. v. McCue, 121 Mass. 358. See Com. v. Tay, 146 Mass. 146; Com. v. Welch, 140 Mass. 372; Com. v. Henderson, 140 Mass. 303; Com. v. Peto, 136 Mass. 155; Com. v. Sprague, 128 Mass. 75.

2. Com. v. Fraher, 126 Mass. 56.

3. State v. Kaler, 56 Me. 88.

4. Oshe v. State, 37 Ohio St. 494.

5. State v. Norton, 41 Iowa 430. See Com. v. Rooney, 142 Mass. 474.

Where there was evidence that defendant, charged with continually unlawfully keeping and maintaining a building for the illegal keeping and illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, was in his house, in apparent control, selling intoxicating liquor, the court properly submitted the case to the jury under instructions that, if the defendant kept the whole building described in the complaint during any part of the time named therein, and used any part thereof for illegal keeping or illegal sale of intoxicating liquor, they could convict. Com. v. Rooney, 142 Mass. 474.

At the trial of a complaint for keeping and maintaining a tenement used for the illegal sale and illegal keeping of intoxicating liquors, it appeared that the defendant had a license of the first class to sell such liquors to be drunk on the premises; and the evidence for the government tended to show two sales of liquors by the defendant, which were carried away from the premises by the buyer. The judge instructed the jury that if the defendant was the proprietor of the premises, and made either of the sales testified to, they must return a verdict of guilty. Held, that the instruction was erroneous. Com. v. Patterson, 138 Mass. 498.

Connecticut Doctrine.—Under the Connecticut statutes imposing a penalty on every person who shall, without license, keep a place where it is reputed that intoxicating liquors are kept for sale, it is sufficient that the place was reputed to be one where intoxicating liquors are kept for sale, and it is not necessary that it be reputed that they were kept for sale without a license. State v. Buckley, 40 Conn. 246; State v. Morgan, 40 Conn. 44.

The statute seems to presume that if a place has the reputation of being one where spirituous liquors, ale and lager beer are kept for sale, and therefore makes it criminal for a man to keep such a place which has such a reputation, the foundation of the reputation, therefore, must be the fact that such liquors are kept for sale. If it has its origin from any other source it is spurious and of no importance. The reputation here intended grows out of such indications as to convince men of ordinary sagacity that such liquors are in fact kept in these places for sale. It comes from persons passing and repassing and who see there the ordinary concomitants of drinking saloons. They perhaps see the intemperate loitering before them; or persons going in apparently sober and coming out intoxicated. They see casks, decanters and jugs labelled with the names of the various intoxicating liquors. They see beverages prepared and drunk resembling such liquors; and indeed everything that usually attends drinking saloons.

b. WHAT CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE AND WHO IS GUILTY OF MAINTAINING IT.—Intoxicating liquors do not in themselves constitute a common nuisance.¹ But where a law regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquors requires a license to be procured therefor, a person selling without having procured such license is guilty of a misdemeanor, and the house where such sale is made is a public nuisance,² although not kept in a disorderly manner.³ A place may be a liquor nuisance although the selling was carried, not as a main purpose, but as incidental and subordinate to the main business of the seller.⁴ The crime of selling intoxicating liquors is not an essential part of the crime of keeping a liquor nuisance where the two are created by distinct statutes.⁵ In a prosecution for maintaining a nuisance for keeping a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors, it is no defence that the defendant in good faith believed that he had a right to sell.⁶

c. ADJOINING ROOMS, APPENDAGES, ETC.—Where rooms are adjoining and are used either for storing or selling intoxicating liquors contrary to law, the whole is thereby rendered a nuisance.⁷

Such persons communicate their knowledge to others, and in a short time the places acquire the reputation of being establishments where such liquors are kept for sale. The reputation, therefore, is "founded in fact," that is, it is based upon, or grows out of, the fact that such liquors are kept for sale. State v. Morgan, 40 Conn. 44.

1. A building in which intoxicating liquors are kept cannot be broken open and the liquors destroyed by those whose relations and friends frequent the building and obtain intoxicating liquors there. Brown v. Perkins, 78 Mass. (12 Gray) 89.

2. Howard v. State, 6 Ind. 444; State v. Waynick, 45 Iowa 516.

It is said by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in the case of Com. v. Murray, 138 Mass. 508, that a person may be convicted of keeping and maintaining a common nuisance under the Massachusetts statute upon evidence of illegal sales of intoxicating liquors, notwithstanding the fact that he has a license for the sale of such liquors.

Under the Iowa Code, § 4091, providing that houses where drunkenness, quarrelling and breaches of the peace are carried on to the disturbance of others, are nuisances; a place where such acts are done but once is a nuisance. State v. Pierce, 65 Iowa 85.

A person licensed to retail spirituous liquors who causes and procures, for lucre, evil-disposed persons to congregate in and about the house in which the liquors are sold, and permits them to remain there drinking, cursing, blackguarding, fighting, etc., the house is a public nuisance, and the keeper of it is indictable. State v. Mullikin, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 260.

An instruction by the court to the jury, on the trial of an indictment for keeping such a nuisance, that, if they find the defendant erected, established, continued, or used a building, etc., for the purpose and with the intent of owning, keeping or selling intoxicating liquors therein, contrary to the law, he will be guilty, is erroneous, because the instruction makes punishable an unexecuted intention or an incomplete act. State v. Harris, 27 Iowa 429.

3. Howard v. State, 6 Ind. 444.

4. State v. Hoxsie, 15 R. I. 1; In re Liquors of Youngs, 15 R. I. 243.

5. State v. Lincoln, 50 Vt. 644.

6. State v. Mullenhoff, 74 Iowa 271.

7. See Brown v. State, 27 Ala. 47; State v. Fertig, 70 Iowa 272; Com. v. Hersey, 144 Mass. 297; Com. v. Fraher, 126 Mass. 56; Com. v. Welsh, 110 Mass. 359.

A tenement under the Massachusetts Gen. Stat., ch. 87, §§ 6, 7, may consist of two rooms used together and immediately connected together, and if the two are used alternately and interchangeably for the illegal sale or the illegal keeping of intoxicating liquors,

d. PROCEEDINGS TO RESTRAIN OR ABATE.—A statute authorizing any citizen of a county in a place where the unlawful sale of liquors is kept, to maintain an action to prohibit and abate it as a nuisance, is constitutional;¹ and on an application the court may grant a temporary injunction before the defendant is convicted generally of keeping a nuisance.² Persons engaged they must be considered as parts of one and the same tenement, and the illegal use of either, while thus connected and used, is an illegal use of the tenement. Com. v. Fraher, 126 Mass. 56.

Where intoxicating liquors were discovered upon the ground under the floor of a tenement, held to be a "using of the tenement for the keeping of liquors," within the meaning of the statute. Com. v. Welsh, 110 Mass. 359.

Same—A part of a room may constitute a "tenement," and where one was charged with maintaining a tenement for the illegal keeping and sale of intoxicating liquors, the fact that the tenement included other premises not in the town in which the offence was alleged to have been committed, but in an adjoining town, does not make it any the less a tenement of such person where it appears that he occupied the entire premises. Com. v. Hersey, 144 Mass. 297.

Appendage.—On the trial of a prosecution for keeping a nuisance in the form of a liquor saloon, the evidence showed that on the ground floor of the building occupied by defendant, the front room was used as a saloon, and a back room as a kitchen and for storing liquors; that upon the officers appearing to search there was quite a commotion caused by the women moving boxes of different sizes out of the back room; that the officers found a jug containing a gallon and a half of whiskey in a box in that room. Held, that designating the back room, in the charge to the jury, as an "appendage" to the saloon, was not error. State v. Fertig, 70 Iowa 272.

"Public House."—A storehouse in the country is a "public house," within the meaning of § 3243 of the Alabama code. And where the house consists of two rooms, one over the other, and the owner controls both, and uses the lower room as his store, the upper room is within the prohibition of said section, unless it affirmatively appears that it is not used as an appendage to the store, but is occupied for some justifiable private purpose entirely disconnected from the business of the store or the convenience of its customers. Brown v. State, 27 Ala. 47.

"Place of Public Resort."—And a public street or alley adjoining the place where beer is sold by the gallon may be so used by the public as to make them places of "public resort" within the meaning of a statute relating to dram shops, as where persons daily assemble there for amusement, drinking and conversation, and contribute money with which to buy beer by the gallon. Bandalow v. People, 90 Ill. 218.

1. Littleton v. Fritz, 65 Iowa 488; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 19. In this case it is said that "courts constantly enjoin nuisances where no damage can be estimated in money and where the nuisance produces mere annoyance and discomfort to the complaining party; as a manufacture producing discomfort to individuals (Catlin v. Valentine, 9 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 575; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 567); a blacksmith shop near plaintiff's dwelling (Faucher v. Grass, 60 Iowa 505); a livery stable (Shiras v. Olinger, 50 Iowa 571; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 138); a hog lot (Richards v. Holt, 61 Iowa 529). These and many other cases which might be cited show a great relaxation of the old rule that no action will lie to restrain and abate a public or common nuisance, unless the plaintiff, in the language of Blackstone, 'suffers some extraordinary damage beyond the rest of the king's subjects by a public nuisance, in which case he shall have private satisfaction by action; as if by means of a ditch dug in a public highway, which is a common nuisance, a man or his horse suffer any injury by falling therein, for this particular damage, which is not common to others, the party shall have his action.'"

2. Littleton v. Fritz, 65 Iowa 488; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 19.

It is said by the supreme court of Indiana, in the case of Howard v. State, 6 Ind. 444, that upon a prosecution for the maintaining of a liquor nuisance, an order for the removal of such nuisance is not a necessary part of the judgment, and in case of such order, which must in selling intoxicating liquors contrary to law, and maintaining a building for that purpose, and who gives up such business upon being advised of legal proceedings, may be enjoined from keeping and maintaining the nuisance in the future.¹

15. Permitting Disorderly Conduct and Unlawful Assemblage.—A person selling liquor and permitting it to be drunk in his store, is liable for the disorderly conduct of the one to whom he sells in and about his store, and for keeping a disorderly house;² but proof of disorder in a single instance is not sufficient to support a prosecution under a statute for keeping a place where liquors are sold in a disorderly manner.³

16. Sales to be Drunk on Premises Contrary to License.—a. NATURE OF AND WHAT CONSTITUTES OFFENCE GENERALLY.—Under statutes prohibiting the selling of liquor to be drunk on the place where sold, it is not necessary to prove that the liquor was actually drunk on the premises, the offence consisting in the sale for that purpose.⁴ It has been said that the liquor must be drunk in always be based upon the testimony given at the trial, it is the duty of the court to make direction of its removal sufficiently explicit to guide the officer in the discharge of his duties.

In a suit in equity to enjoin a saloon from selling intoxicating liquors and to have his establishment abated as a nuisance, before it can be said that defendant has been unlawfully deprived of his property without compensation it must be made to appear that such property was owned by him or those under whom he claims power to the enactment of the Iowa statute of 1885, declaring such an establishment as a nuisance. McLane v. Leicht, 69 Ia. 401.

1. Judge v. Kribs, 71 Iowa 183. See Rumford Chemical Works v. Vice, 14 Blatchf. C. C. 179; Goodyear v. Berry, 2 Bond. C. C. 189; White v. Heath, 10 Fed. Rep. 291; Jenkins v. Greenwald, 2 Fish. Pat. Cas. 37.

2. State v. Burchinal, 4 Harr. (Del.) 572. See Brockway v. State, 36 Ark. 629; Cable v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 531; State v. Thornton, Busb. (N. Car.) L. 252; Parker v. Green, 2 B. & S. 299; Patten v. Rhymmer, 3 Ell. & El. 1.

The keeper of a shop for the sale of spirituous liquors, who permits the promiscuous assembling about his shop of persons who cause disturbance by loud noises, quarreling and swearing, and such disturbance being the probable consequences of his conduct, is indictable for keeping a disorderly house, State v. Thornton, Busb. (N. Car.) L. 259.

The offence, prohibited by the Indiana statute of 1843, of keeping a distillery house called a tippling house, where liquor is sold without a license, and where noisy, drunken people gather together, etc., to the great annoyance and disturbance of the people, is not limited to a case where the sale of liquor is by a less quantity than a quart. Cable v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 531.

Prostitutes are persons of "notoriously bad character," within the meaning of a license to sell excisable liquors by retail, which forbids the licensee from permitting such persons to assemble in his house. Parker v. Green, 2 B. & S. 299.

3. Overman v. State, 38 Ind. 6; Dunnaway v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 351.

A person was indicted for keeping "a disorderly common tippling house." The jury found a special verdict "that the defendant, on one occasion, kept a house in which there was a collection of twenty or thirty negroes more than belonged to the place, who got drunk, danced, and disturbed the neighborhood with noise and uproar." Held, that the facts found by the special verdict did not constitute the offence of keeping a "disorderly common tippling house." Dunnaway v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 350.

4. Com. v. Luddy, 143 Mass. 563. See Pearce v. State, 40 Ala. 720; People v. Smith, 69 N. Y. 175; Moore v. State, 12 Ohio St. 387.

The offence, specified in the first section of the liquor act (2 S. & C. St.

some place over which the seller has the legal right to exercise control.¹

b. APPURTENANCES; ADJOINING PREMISES, ETC.—A sale of intoxicating liquors is in violation of the law prohibiting such sale, for the purpose of being drunk on the premises where sold, where drunk on the appurtenances, or adjoining premises.²

431), consists, not in the mere act of selling intoxicating liquors, but in the selling of such liquors to be drunk in or about the building or premises where sold. The mere act of selling intoxicating liquors is not in its nature local, but it only becomes unlawful when its intended use is connected with some building or premises in their nature fixed and local; and the offence created by the above section would, therefore, seem to be partly local and partly transitory. [Per PECK, J.] Moore v. State, 12 Ohio St. 387.

In a trial for selling liquor without license, the defendant may be found guilty of selling it to be drunk on the premises, if he went to a public sale by an administrator, taking liquor with him in his buggy, and sold a quart of liquor to several persons. Pearce v. State, 40 Ala. 720.

A person licensed to sell beer by retail, "to be drunk or consumed off the premises," supplied a pint of beer to a traveller who sat upon a bench placed and fastened against the wall of the house, returning the mug in which he was served. Held, that the beer shop keeper was properly convicted of the offence of selling beer to be drunk on the premises, within the meaning of the statute. Cross v. Watts, 13 C. B. (N. S.) 239.

Belief as to intoxicating qualities.—It is said in Farrell v. State, 32 Ohio St. 456, that in an action under a statute prohibiting the selling of intoxicating liquors to be drunk on the premises, the defendant may show that he bought and sold the liquor (as here certain "biters") with the understanding and the belief that it was not intoxicating liquor.

Tippling House.—Selling liquor by the quart to be drunk in the house of the defendant, does not constitute the offence of keeping a tippling house, within the statute. Moore v. State, 9 Yerg. 353.

Where one kept a few goods for sale in his shop for the purpose of protecting himself against the statute against tippling shops, and it appeared that his principal business was selling liquor, and that the liquor was drunk on his premises, it was held that he did not come within the proviso of the statute, which excepted merchants who sell liquor to be used off from their premises. The Commonwealth v. McGeorge, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 3.

1. Downman v. State, 14 Ala. 242.

But it is held in the case of Patterson v. State, 36 Ala. 297, that the fact that liquor retailed to a party was drunk across the state line or on land over which the vendor had no control is no defence on an indictment for selling liquor drunk on or about the premises.

It is said in the case of Wrocklege v. State, 1 Iowa 167, that if intoxicating liquor sold was actually drunk on the premises, whether or not it was intended by the seller to be there drunk is immaterial.

2. See Powell v. State, 63 Ala. 177; Christian v. State, 40 Ala. 376; Swan v. State, 11 Ala. 594; Bandalow v. People, 90 Ill. 218; Stockwell v. State, 85 Ind. 522; O'Connor v. State, 45 Ind. 351; Stone v. State, 30 Ind. 115.

Liquor handed through a window to be drunk on the seller's back steps, may be deemed to have been sold in contravention to a statute prohibiting its sale to be drunk in "house, outhouse, yard, or garden." Stockwell v. State, 85 Ind. 522.

A public street or alley fronting a place where beer is sold to be drunk in the street, is embraced within the statute prohibiting sales of liquor to be drunk upon premises adjoining to the place of sale. Bandalow v. People, 90 Ill. 218.

In a trial for selling liquor without a license, it was held that there was no error in the charge to the jury that it was the defendant's duty, if he sold the liquor to prevent its being drunk on or about his premises; and that if they believed from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant sold the liquor as stated, and that if it was drunk, as stated, in front of his store, then they should find him guilty. Christian v. State, 40 Ala. 376.

Drunk in Adjoining Shed.—Where, in

17. Prohibited Times and Hours.—Where a saloon is required to be closed at certain hours, it is not so closed within the meaning of the law, so long as it is possible for persons desiring liquor to get in peacefully, whether by the outside entrance or any other, or so long as any customer, who is inside at the time for closing, remains inside, and it is not important that there is no one attending the bar, if the liquor is accessible, neither is it important that any is sold.¹

18. Giving Away.—Under a law providing that no one shall sell or dispose of liquor without a license, the words disposing of include giving away liquor.² It seems that under a statute declaring it unlawful "to make, sell, give away or otherwise dispose of" intoxicating drinks, a person cannot be convicted for giving away liquor at his private residence, provided the giving away is done honestly and in good faith, and not as a shift or device to evade the provisions of the statute.³ And it has been said that it is no

a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquors without a permit, the evidence showed that the accused sold a bottle of beer, which was taken by the purchaser to a shed, from 15 to 20 feet distant from the seller's premises, and there drunk, and that there was no agreement or understanding between the buyer and the seller as to where the liquor was to be drunk, held, that there was no violation of law by the seller. O'Connor v. State, 45 Ind. 351.

Proof that a person having purchased liquor in the store room from one who stated that it must not be drunk there, opened a door and stepped into a shed attached to the store room building, placed the bottle of liquor and tumblers furnished by the seller on a box found there, and when the liquor had been drunk left the tumblers and the box and passed back through the store room to the street; the entire premises belonging to a third person, the store room but not the shed being rented by the seller, shows that the seller suffered the liquor to be drunk in his house within the intent of the statute. Stone v. State, 30 Ind. 115.

Sale from jug in field.—The supreme court of Alabama in Powell v. State, 63 Ala. 177, held, on the authority of Pearce v. State, 40 Ala. 720, that a defendant was properly convicted of selling liquor "drunk on or about his premises," on proof that the liquor was sold from a jug which he had in a field where he was working with others, more than a mile from his house, and in the plantation of another person, over which he had no control.

The term "premises," in the Alabama statutes authorizing merchants and shop keepers to retail spirituous liquors by the quart, so that the same be not drunk with their privy on the premises where they reside or have their stores, means something over which the individual has control; therefore a conviction is proper where the liquor furnished is drunk from glasses of the shop keeper on a bench used by him in a mill yard some fifteen or twenty steps from the house where the liquor was sold. Swan v. State, 11 Ala. 594.

1. People v. Cummerford, 58 Mich. 328.

Prohibited Hours.—As the court cannot enquire into the business and the manner of keeping licensed houses, except on complaint made and an opportunity for hearing given to the parties licensed, it cannot on petition order licensed houses to be closed at a certain hour of the night. Petition of Bedford, 2 Pa. County Ct. 85.

2. State v. Deusting, 33 Minn. 102; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 12. See State v. Adamson, 14 Ind. 296; State v. Reinhartz, 69 Iowa 224; Com. v. Kimball, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 366; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 326; State v. Freeman, 27 Vt. 520.

3. Reynolds v. State, 73 Ala. 3; State v. Standish, 37 Kan. 643; State v. Jones, 39 Vt. 370.

Thus a person cannot be convicted, under the Kansas Prohibitory act of 1881, § 16, for keeping in his house or store, or in a wareroom thereof, intoxicating liquor for his own use, or for defence to give intoxicating liquors to an adult person, not intoxicated nor in the habit of becoming intoxicated, when such gift is without any consideration received or expected in return and without subterfuge or attempt to evade the provisions of the statute.¹

Evidence to prove a sale or from which a sale may be inferred will not sustain a conviction upon a charge of giving away intoxicating liquor.²

19. Sales to Informers.—Where for the purpose of apprehending an offender under the excise law and bringing him to justice, a board of excise commissioners employs and pays informers and witnesses to go upon the premises of the accused and purchase and drink spirituous liquor thereon, the seller violates and becomes liable to the penalty where he has no license from the board of excise to protect him.³

20. "Screen Law."—A statute relating to the use and management of premises for the sale of liquors which expressly intends that an unobstructed view of the premises shall at all times be obtained by persons outside and is addressed to the licensee only, forbidding him to do or to permit to be done the prohibited act, renders him liable whether the screen is interposed by himself in person or by an agent left by him in charge of his business.⁴ The prohibition against the licensee's maintaining upon the licensed premises used by him for the sale of intoxicating liquors, any giving the same away, provided such giving away is not done as a shift or device to evade the provisions of the act. State v. Standish, 37 Kan. 643.

But the gratuitous furnishing of intoxicating liquor to musicians employed by the inn keeper on the occasion of a dance at his house, was held to be an offence under the statute. State v. Jones, 39 Vt. 70.

And an inn keeper gratuitously furnished whiskey three times at his bar to his domestic servant, who on each occasion had been sitting up late at night in performance of his duties. Held, that this was not a violation of the statute regulating traffic in intoxicating liquors (Gen. Sts., ch. 94). State v. Jones, 39 Vt. 370.

1. State v. Hutchins, 74 Iowa 20.

2. Harvey v. State, 80 Ind. 142.

3. Onondaga Commissioners v. Backus, 29 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 33.

4. Com. v. Kelley, 140 Mass. 441. See Com. v. Ferden, 141 Mass. 28; Com. v. Rourke, 141 Mass. 321.

Neglect to keep closed a door at the rear of a saloon, opening upon a driveway from the street, is a violation of a license requiring that all entrances other than those from the public street be permanently closed. Com. v. Ferden, 141 Mass. 28.

The words "no such license," in the Massachusetts Pub. Sts., ch. 100, § 12, prohibiting the maintenance of screens or other obstructions upon premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquors, refer to every licensee, and not merely to one who has been required by the licensing board to remove screens or other obstructions. Commonwealth v. Rourke, 141 Mass. 321.

A license for the sale of intoxicating liquors contained the following clause: "The licensee is required to close permanently all entrances to the licensed premises other than those from the public street or streets upon which such premises are located." The licensed premises were a saloon thirty feet deep, with a door fronting on the street upon which the premises were located, and opening into the saloon; and there was another door, which was put in at the time the building was constructed, at the rear of the saloon, opening upon a driveway from the street to the rear, and which was not kept closed. Held, that these facts constituted a violation of the license. Commonwealth v. Ferden, 141 Mass. 28.

screen or partition does not apply to leaving in statu quo the walls of the several premises contemplated by the license as remaining distinct.¹ The maintenance of curtains in windows or elsewhere so as to interfere with the view of the interior of a building is a violation of the license under a statute prohibiting the use of screens, and the like, irrespective of the purpose for which the curtains are maintained.²

21. Label.—A statute providing that "it is desired and required that all and every grower, manufacturer, trader, holder, or bottler when selling or putting up" a specified liquor "shall plainly stencil, brand, or have painted where it will be plainly seen, first, the quality of the liquor, and second, his name or the firm's name

1. Com. v. McGrath, 140 Mass. 296; Com. v. Donahue, 140 Mass. 450, n.; Com. v. Flannery, 140 Mass. 450, n.; Com. v. Sansville, 140 Mass. 450, n. See Com. v. Kane, 143 Mass. 92; Com. v. Barnes, 140 Mass. 447; Shultz v. Cambridge, 38 Ohio St. 659.

The screen law is not violated by maintaining a partition between a front and rear room where a license is to sell both in the front room and rear room, although such wall obstructs the view into the rear room. Com. v. Barnes, 140 Mass. 447.

In an ordinance prohibiting saloon keepers from permitting at, in or about the doors, windows, openings or in the interior of their saloons, "any blind, screen, painted or frosted glass, shade, curtain or other device," the words "other device" do not embrace a board partition between different rooms of a building, such partition extending from floor to ceiling, fastened in the usual manner, and intended by the owner, when he placed it in the building, as a permanent accession to the realty. Shultz v. Cambridge, 38 Ohio St. 659.

Upon a complaint charging the defendant with the violation of the screen law, where it appears that there was a door opening from a bar room to a room in front, the windows of which were covered by curtains cutting off a view of entrance to the bar room, in the absence of evidence that there was another entrance to the bar room from the outside, or that there was no door between the bar room and the room in front, it will be assumed that the entrance to the bar room was from the front room, and the maintenance of the curtains in the latter, cutting off a view of the usual entrance to the bar room constitutes a violation of the license, and renders it void. Com. v. Kane, 143 Mass. 92.

2. Com. v. Moore, 145 Mass. 244. See Hussey v. State, 69 Ga. 54; Com. v. Kane, 143 Mass. 92; Com. v. Worcester, 141 Mass. 58; Com. v. Casey, 134 Mass. 194; Com. v. Auberton, 133 Mass. 404.

A statute prohibiting the use of screens being so placed as to interfere with a view of the interior of the premises, is violated by the placing of a curtain which interferes with any part of the interior, whether such part is used for the sale of liquors or not. Com. v. Worcester, 141 Mass. 58.

Where a bar room was the middle of a building and the defendant does not show that there was any entrance to the front room from outside or that there was any door between the front room, which had an entrance upon the public street, and the bar room, it will be assumed that the entrance to the bar room was from the front room, and the maintenance of curtains or screens covering the windows of the front room, which was used as an office, cigar store and eating room, will render a license for keeping the bar room void. Com. v. Kane, 143 Mass. 92.

Closing Bar on Sunday by Canvas Curtain.—In the case of Hussey v. State, 69 Ga. 54, the defendant occupied one floor of a house. In the front room he had his office on one side and a bar on the other. In the rear room there was a restaurant and there was a door between the two rooms. The door on the street, which furnished access to the front room, was so kept that a visitor had only to push it in order to pass into the front room and through it into the restaurant; the counter where drinking was ordinarily done was covered and concealed on Sunday by a canvas reaching from the ceiling to the floor, on which appearing the announcement as the case may be, on label of bottle or package," is said to be merely directory and no punishment can be inflicted for selling without such label or brand or the label furnished in lieu thereof by the State.¹

22. Seller Not Protected by United States License or Payment of Revenue Tax.—The payment of a United States revenue tax and the procurement of United States license by a retail liquor dealer is no defence to an indictment under a State statute for selling without a State license.²

23. Keeping Statement and Making Report of Manufacture and Sale.—Under a statute concerning the manufacture and sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquor, among other things, requiring a tabular statement of sales to be kept in which shall be entered the date of sale, name of purchaser, etc., although no tabular statement is kept as prescribed by such statute, yet if the manufacturer's or seller's books, kept in the usual course of business, contains

"Bar closed." Visitors passed into the restaurant and liquor was there furnished for them and drunk. The court held that it made no difference whether the bar was open or hid if liquor was retailed in the restaurant and the tipping was done there.

Screens Obstructing View on the Lord's Day.—A statute providing that no licensee shall maintain or permit to be maintained upon any premises used by him for the sale of spirituous or intoxicating liquors, under the provisions of his license, any screen, blind, shutter, or other obstruction, in such a way as to interfere with the business conducted upon the premises or with the view of the interior of the premises, applies to a licensee who maintains such shutter upon his premises on the Lord's day, although he is prohibited from and is not in fact carrying on business on that day. Com. v. Casey, 134 Mass. 194; Com. v. Auberton, 133 Mass. 404.

1. Ex parte Kohler, 74 Cal. 38.

2. Pierson v. State, 39 Ark. 219; Block v. Jacksonville, 36 Ill. 301; State v. McCleary, 17 Iowa 44; State v. Carney, 20 Iowa 82; State v. Stutz, 20 Iowa 488; State v. Baughman, 20 Iowa 497; Com. v. Thornily, 88 Mass. (6 Allen) 445; Com. v. O'Donnell, 90 Mass. (8 Allen) 548; Com. v. Holbrook, 92 Mass. (10 Allen) 200; Com. v. Keenan, 93 Mass. (11 Allen) 262; Com. v. McNamee, 113 Mass. 12; Com. v. Owens, 114 Mass. 252; Com. v. Aaron, 114 Mass. 255; Com. v. Dowdican, 114 Mass. 257; Com. v. Dowling, 114 Mass. 259; Com. v. Burke, 114 Mass. 261; Com. v. Sanborn, 116 Mass. 61; State

v. Funk, 27 Minn. 318; Boyd v. State, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 687; Com. v. Sheckles, 78 Va. 36; McGuire v. Massachusetts, 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 382; bk. 18, L. ed. 164.

A license granted under the United States statute does not authorize the sale of intoxicating liquors in violation of the statutes of the state, although such sale is only incidental to the salesman's business. State v. McCleary, 17 Iowa 44; Com. v. Thornily, 88 Mass. (6 Allen) 445; Com. v. O'Donnell, 90 Mass. (8 Allen) 548.

Sale on Water.—A United States license to sell liquor is no excuse for the sale in violation of the state law on land or water. Pierson v. State, 39 Ark. 219.

It is said by the supreme court of Tennessee, in the case of Boyd v. State, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 687, that it is no defence to an indictment for selling liquor in less quantity than a quart without first having obtained a license under the laws of the State, or for selling an intoxicating beverage within four miles of an incorporated institution of learning, that the sale was made in a steamboat while under way in the Cumberland river, and that the defendant had paid the special tax and taken out a license as a retail liquor dealer as required by the laws of the United States. And it is said by the supreme court of Virginia in the case of Com. v. Sheckles, 78 Va. 36, that liquor cannot without license obtained in accordance with the laws of this State be lawfully sold therein, either on land or on board of a vessel, although the seller may have obtained from the United States gov-

the same entries as those required in the tabular statement, this will constitute a substantial compliance with the law and the sale will be valid.¹

A statute providing for monthly returns to be made of liquor bought and sold has been said to include liquors sold on prescription.²

VI. INDICTMENT, COMPLAINT, TRIAL, ETC.—1. Jurisdiction.—a. GENERALLY.—It has been said that proceedings under the liquor law for a violation of the provision against selling intoxicating liquor, are not criminal proceedings, and that the statutory provisions as to the general jurisdiction does not operate as a limit to their jurisdiction as expressly given under the liquor law; and the jurisdiction thus conferred is within constitutional limits.³

b. OF POLICE COURTS.—In some of the States police courts ernment a special tax stamp therefor, it being expressly provided by section 3243 of the U. S. Revised Statutes that persons holding such stamps shall not be exempt from any penalty imposed by the laws of any State for carrying on the trade within its limits.

1. Barnard v. Houghton, 34 Vt. 264.

Where the form of the tabular statement, given in the statute, contained one entry, "purpose of sale," but the tenth section of the law providing for the sale by manufacturers did not even contain a provision requiring such an entry, it was held that the form given in the statute could not be considered as adding a new requirement to the statute. Barnard v. Houghton, 34 Vt. 264.

Return by Officers Mandatory.—A statute requiring returns of liquor manufacturers to be made to a designated officer at a designated time is mandatory and not directory. State v. McEntee, 68 Iowa 381. See Abbott v. Sartori, 57 Iowa 656.

However, it is said in Abbott v. Sartori, 57 Iowa 656, that the provisions of section 1537 of the Iowa Code, requiring every person having a permit to sell intoxicating liquors shall make a return of his sales on the last Saturday of each month, as to the time of filing the return, are not mandatory. The statute is so far directory as to authorize the return to be filed at any time before an action is commenced for the recovery of the statute penalty.

Same—"Retailer."—Under a statute requiring constables to make returns by retailers of liquors the word "retailer" cannot be construed with reference to druggists as such. Com. v. Porter, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 217; 31 Leg. Int. 398.

A city ordinance making it the duty of the city marshal, on the first day of every month, to ascertain and report to the city council the names of all persons engaged in the liquor traffic, giving their place of business, whether licensed or unlicensed, and to make complaint against all persons selling liquor without license, apply to all persons engaged in the liquor traffic, and it is the duty of the marshal to comply with the requirements of the ordinance without reference to the quantity of the liquors sold at each sale by persons engaged in the traffic. State v. Cummings, 17 Neb. 311.

Erroneous Return.—A statute providing that any person holding a permit to sell liquors shall, on failure to make a true monthly return, forfeit a specified sum for the offence, it is no defence in an action to recover the forfeiture that the return was false through error and mistake. State v. Chamberlin, 74 Iowa 266.

2. State v. Chamberlin, 74 Iowa 266. Compare Com. v. Porter, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 217; 31 Leg. Int. 398.

Sale by Registered Pharmacists.—A sale of intoxicating liquors by a registered pharmacist holding a permit is not rendered criminal by the fact that he fails to make to the county auditor the report required by law, or by the fact that he sells at a greater profit than the law allows. State v. Von Haltschuherr, 72 Iowa 541, 34 N. W. 323.

3. Matter of Buddington, 29 Mich. 472.

It is said in the case of State v. Arlen, 71 Iowa 216, that under the Iowa code (sections 1544 to 1547), providing that the proceedings may be instituted before justices of the peace for the seizure, condemnation and destruction have jurisdiction of offences against statutes regulating keeping a liquor nuisance.¹

c. OF JUSTICES' COURTS.—In many of the States a justice of the peace has jurisdiction of violations of laws regulating traffic in intoxicating liquors.²

d. OF COMMON PLEAS, MUNICIPAL AND SUPERIOR COURTS.—In some of the States the common pleas courts have jurisdiction of the offence of being a common retailer of intoxicating liquors without license, and of other offences prosecuted by indictment committed against the statutory provisions regulating traffic in intoxicating liquor,³ in others the superior courts,⁴ municipal courts,⁵ and mayor courts.⁶

e. OF CIRCUIT AND DISTRICT COURTS.—In other States the circuit and district courts have either exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction to try and punish all offences against laws regulating traffic in and sale of intoxicating liquors.⁷

2. Form and Nature of Proceedings and Prosecutions Generally.—In some cases a prosecution for violation of the liquor law may be by civil action or by complaint in criminal form,⁸ but in the majority of the States such prosecution is by indictment or criminal information.⁹

of intoxicating liquors kept for sale in violation of the law; such proceedings are a criminal action and the jurisdiction of the justices is not affected by the value of the liquors to be seized. Citing State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 40 Iowa 95; Bryan v. State, 4 Iowa 349; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165. Compare Sullivan v. City of Oneida, 61 Ill. 242.

1. Com. v. Ring, 111 Mass. 427. See Com. v. Ballou, 124 Mass. 26, 28; Com. v. Lambert, 94 Mass. (12 Allen) 177. Compare Com. v. Griffin, 105 Mass. 185; Com. v. Carr, 77 Mass. (11 Gray) 463.

2. See Barnes v. State, 19 Conn. 398; Hamilton v. Carthage, 24 Ill. 22; State v. Arlen, 71 Iowa 216; State v. Knowles, 57 Iowa 669; Osborn v. Sargent, 23 Me. 527; Com. v. Golding, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 49; Com. v. Rowe, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 47; Com. v. Murphy, 77 Mass. (11 Gray) 53; Faulks v. People, 39 Mich. 200; State v. Passaic, 42 N. J. L. (13 Vr.) 87; State v. Nutt, 28 Vt. 598; Ex parte Tracy, 25 Vt. 93. Compare State v. Peck, 32 Vt. 172.

Penalties and Costs May Exceed Limit of Jurisdiction.—In Michigan, justices of the peace have jurisdiction of the offence of selling intoxicating liquor to minors, although the sum of the penalty and the costs exceed the amount to which they are limited in ordinary cases. Faulks v. People, 39 Mich. 200. See Barnes v. State, 19 Conn. 398.

3. State v. Stinson, 17 Me. 154.

4. State v. Hollingsworth, 100 N. Car. 535.

5. See Com. v. Murray, 144 Mass. 170; State v. Emery, 98 N. Car. 768.

The offence of keeping intoxicating liquors with intent to sell the same unlawfully, being under the degree of felony, is within the jurisdiction of the municipal court of the city of Boston, which has by statute original criminal jurisdiction of all crimes under the degree of felony, except conspiracy and libels, and cases where a prosecution by indictment or information is required by law (Mass. Pub. Stat., ch. 154, § 50); provisions of statute for the prosecution by indictment, unless otherwise especially provided by law, of all fines or forfeitures recovered in criminal prosecutions, having no application to the fine imposed as a punishment for the offence. Com. v. Murray, 144 Mass. 170.

6. Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165.

7. See Lichtenstein v. State, 5 Ind. 162; Com. v. Hersey, 144 Mass. 297; State v. Bach, 36 Minn. 234; State v. Kobe, 26 Minn. 148; Agin v. Heyward, 6 Minn. 110 (Gil. 53); Eckhart v. State, 5 W. Va. 515.

8. Ricker Petitioner, 32 Me. 37.

9. See Part of Lot 294 v. State, 1 Iowa 507; Overshiner v. Com., 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 344; State v. Hollin, 12 La. An. 677; Harper v. State, 7 Ohio

3. Venue.¹4. Limitations.²5. Bar by Former Prosecution or Pendency.³

6. Prosecutor.—Prosecutions for violations of the liquor law are required to be in the name of the State in some jurisdictions,⁴ but in other jurisdictions the prosecution may be by the mayor or aldermen of the city,⁵ by special constable⁶, or agent,⁷ appointed to make complaints and prosecute for violations of the liquor laws,⁸ or by private persons.⁹

7. Indictment or Complaint¹⁰—a. GENERAL MATTERS AS TO FORM AND REQUISITES.—Where no form of complaint in prosecutions for the violation of the laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors is provided by statute, the common law form must be

St. 73; Haines v. State, 7 Tex. App. 30.

In State v. Hollin, 12 La. An. 677, it is said that the proceedings against a person for retailing spirituous liquors without previously obtaining a licence, should be by indictment and not by civil suit.

In some of the States the prosecution may be commenced by an indictment without a previous preliminary examination before the mayor or justice. Harper v. State, 7 Ohio St. 73.

Suit to Enforce Forfeiture.—It is said in Com. v. Newell, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 76, that a complaint in which, under the statute, the forfeitures for single sales of intoxicating liquors may be recovered, is a complaint in a criminal process, and need not purport to be made in the name of any city or town, although the statute under which the suit is brought gives as a concurrent remedy an action by debt in the name of the city or town where the offence was committed, and provides that the forfeiture so recovered shall go to the town where the convicted party resides.

1. See INDICTMENT, vol. 10; as to VENUE, see CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, vol. 4, p. 736; as to CHANGE OF VENUE, see that title, vol. 3, p. 90, and CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, vol. 4, p. 818.

2. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, vol. 4, p. 784.

3. See, for a full discussion of this subject, JEOPARDY; see also CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, vol. 4, pp. 787 to 798.

4. Rogers v. Alexander, 2 Greene (Iowa) 443; State v. Stinson, 17 Me. 154.

Retailing liquors on Sunday is one of the offences for which an indictment may be sent in without a prosecutor in Tennessee. Neideiser v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 499.

5. Portland v. Rolfe, 37 Me. 400; Com. v. Murphy, 140 Mass. 440, note.

A constable appointed by a justice of the peace to assist peace officers "to seize liquors," is not thereby authorized to select an attorney to prosecute a case under the prohibitory liquor law. Foster v. Clinton County, 51 Iowa 541.

It is said in Com. v. Murphy, 140 Mass. 440, note, that the provisions of most statutes requiring the mayor and aldermen of cities and selectmen of towns to prosecute for illegal sales of intoxicating liquors, is merely directory, and any other citizen may enter complaint for the violation of the law.

6. State v. Carver, 12 R. I. 285.

7. State v. Wolfarth, 42 Conn. 155.

8. In State v. Wolfarth, 42 Conn. 155, it is said that an agent appointed to prosecute for all violations of law relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors, has power to prosecute for offences committed before his appointment.

Appointment of Attorneys and Deputies to Prosecute.—In the case of the Board of Excise v. Sackrider, 35 N. Y. 104, it is said that the board of excise may employ an attorney to conduct in a prosecution commenced by such board, but cannot give general authority to commence any such prosecution at his discretion.

It is said that under statutes regulating the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, a prosecuting attorney is authorized to appoint a deputy, and such deputy is authorized to perform all the duties of his principal, including signing of the indictment. Stout v. State, 93 Ind. 150.

9. See Com. v. Murphy, 140 Mass. 440, note; State v. Shortell, 93 Mo. 123.

10. See INDICTMENT, vol. 10.

followed.¹ In such prosecutions, it seems that no very strict conformity between the information and the preliminary complaint is necessary, and that if the charge is substantially the same in both, the information will not be quashed on the ground of variance.²

b. ALLEGATIONS AS TO INFORMATION AND BELIEF.—In a prosecution for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors under a statute regulating such sale, it seems that an allegation that the complainant is "credibly informed and verily believes" or "has good reason to believe" is sufficient.³

c. CLERICAL ERRORS AND OMISSIONS.—The general rules relating to clerical errors and omissions and indictments generally which have heretofore been set out fully⁴ are applicable, to indictments for violations of laws regulating traffic in intoxicating liquors.⁵

d. CONCLUSIONS.—An indictment under local option or general liquor laws is sufficient if it charges the offence as "contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided."⁶

e. RECORD.⁷—When in an indictment it is alleged that a person sold and offered and exposed for sale at retail, spirituous liquors and other drinks, and the record shows the presentment of an indictment for "unlawfully retailing," the record of the finding of the indictment is sufficient.⁸

f. SIGNATURE AND ENDORSEMENTS.—The signatures and endorsements upon indictments for violation of the liquor law are governed by the same rules as those upon indictments for any other offence.⁹

1. State v. Miles, 4 Ind. 577; Com. v. Ferden, 141 Mass. 28; State v. Higgins, 53 Vt. 191. See Kern v. State, 7 Ohio St. 411; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 488.

The Michigan liquor law having gone very far in the form prescribed therein in removing the requirements of specific averments, the courts will not assume that the door was intended to be opened any wider than the statute allows; and a declaration which is neither a good common law declaration nor sufficient under either the general statute for the recovery of penalties or the specific provision of this particular act, cannot be sustained. Benallick v. People, 31 Mich. 200.

2. Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475.

3. See Byars v. City of Mt. Vernon, 78 Ill. 11; Deveny v. State, 47 Ind. 208; State v. Welch, 79 Me. 79; Mowery v. Camden, 49 N. J. L. 106; Robertson v. City of Lambertville, 38 N. J. L. 69; State v. Tall, 56 Wis. 577; State v. Bilby, 21 Wis. 204; State v.

Dale, 3 Wis. 795. Compare In re Morton, 10 Mich. 208.

4. See INDICTMENT, vol. 10.

5. Clerical Errors and Omissions.—Walter v. State, 105 Ind. 589; State v. Clark, 3 Ind. 451; Com. v. Burke, 15 Gray (Mass.) 408; State v. Whitney, 15 Vt. 298; State v. Rhodes, 2 Ind. 321.

6. Conclusions in Indictments.—See State v. Schilling, 14 Iowa 455; State v. Welch, 79 Me. 99; Slynur v. State, 62 Md. 237; Com. v. Hoyer, 11 Gray (Mass.) 462; Com. v. Keefe, 7 Gray (Mass.) 332; Trost v. State, 64 Miss. 188; State v. Muse, 4 Dev. & Bat. (N. Car.) L. 319. See also Com. v. Howe, 13 Gray (Mass.) 26; State v. Miller, 24 Conn. 519.

7. See INDICTMENT, vol. 10.

8. Tefft v. Com., 8 Leigh (Va.) 721; State v. Chapman, 25 W. Va. 408; State v. Fitzpatrick, 8 W. Va. 707.

Identification by Jurat.—See Com. v. McIvor, 117 Mass. 118.

9. Signatures and Endorsements.—See INDICTMENT, vol. 10. As relating to

g. VERIFICATION AND JURAT.—The jurat of a complaint for the violation of the law regulating traffic in intoxicating liquors, signed by the complainant and certified as subscribed and sworn to before the justice of the court issuing the warrant thereon, is properly subscribed and sworn to.¹

h. ALLEGATIONS AS TO PRIOR CONVICTIONS OR ACQUITTAL—(1) Miscellaneous Matters.—An indictment for the violation of the provision of a law, regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquors, need not aver that an action for the same penalties, has not been brought by any other complainant, that being a matter of defence;² and under a charge of a second selling, and a former conviction, the defendant may be convicted for a first selling.³ However the accused cannot be charged in separate counts of the information or indictment for a first and second offence, or a second and third; but any number of charges for the first, or the second, or the third offence, may be brought in as so many counts.⁴

(2) Necessity of Alleging Number of Offences.—An indictment for the violation of statutes regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquors, should state whether it is the first or subsequent offence, otherwise the imposition of the punishment provided for a second or subsequent offence will be erroneous.⁵ But in an indictment for maintaining a nuisance for keeping a place, and for selling therein unlawfully, intoxicating liquors, it is not necessary to allege that it is the second or subsequent offence.⁶

(3) Setting Forth Record.—In a complaint or indictment for a second or subsequent offence, for selling intoxicating liquors, technical accuracy is not required in setting forth the record of the former conviction for a similar offence.⁷

intoxicating liquor cases, see Harrison v. Ely, 120 Ill. 83; State v. Cottle, 15 Me. 473; Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 140 Mass. 287; Benalleck v. People, 31 Mich. 209; State v. Glennon, 3 R. I. 276; State v. Perkins, 58 Vt. 722; State v. Paddock, 24 Vt. 312.

1. Verification and Jurat.—Com. v. Peto, 136 Mass. 155; Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 122 Mass. 8; Com. v. McGuire, 11 Gray (Mass.) 459; Com. v. Dillane, 11 Gray (Mass.) 67; Ferguson v. People, 73 Ill. 559.

2. Com. v. Murphy, 68 Mass. (2 Gray) 510.

3. State v. Ensley, 10 Iowa 149; State v. Conlin, 27 Vt. 318.

State v. Conlin, 27 Vt. 318.

4. State v. Lels, 11 Iowa 416.

5. Garvey v. Com., 74 Mass. (8 Gray) 382; Tuttle v. Com., 68 Mass. (2 Gray) 305, 507; Norton v. State, 65 Miss. 297; State v. Small, 64 N. H. 491; Com. v. Welsh, 2 Va. Cas. 57.

This is on the principle that where a statute makes a second offence a felony, subject to a heavier punishment than the first, it is always implied that such second offence ought to be committed after a conviction for the first; from whence it follows that if it be not so laid in the indictment, it shall be punished only as the first offence. Freethy v. Freethy, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 641, 643; People v. Butler, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 347; Bish. Stat. Crimes (2nd ed.), § 240; Dwar. Stat. (2nd ed.) 643; Hawkins P. C., ch. 7, § 7.

Indictment Under Dram Shop Act.—It is said in State v. Muntz, 3 Kan. 386, that it is not necessary to allege in an indictment under the Dram Shop act of Kansas, that if the offence is a second offence in a case where the fine is less than one hundred dollars in order to give the court jurisdiction.

6. State v. Howorth, 70 Iowa 157.

7. State v. Gorham, 65 Me. 270; State v. Wentworth, 65 Me. 234; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 688; State v. Robinson, 39 Me. 150; State v. Small, 64 N. H. 491.

(4) Describing Time or Court.—In an indictment for a second offence in violating the liquor laws, an averment of conviction without giving any information of the time, court, or county in which the judgment was rendered, is insufficient.¹

(5) Description of Offence of Which Convicted, etc.—An allegation of a former conviction in an indictment for a single sale of liquor, that at a specified term of court, the defendant was convicted of "selling a quantity of liquor," is sufficient.² In a complaint for search and seizure, an allegation of a former conviction averring that at a time specified the defendant was convicted of "unlawfully keeping, in said county, intoxicating liquors with intent to sell in violation of law," is sufficient.³

i. DESCRIBING SALES AND OFFENCES—(1) Necessity—(a) Generally.—An indictment or complaint, although in the form prescribed by statute, must define an offence punishable by law, or the prosecution cannot be maintained.⁴

(b) Charging Unlawful Sales, etc.—An indictment for a violation of a local statute prohibiting the sale of vinous or spirituous liquors within a specified territory without a license, is sufficient if it charges that the defendant "did sell vinous or spirituous liquors without a license and contrary to law."⁵ An indictment for the violation of the statute by selling intoxicating liquors, as agent for another person, or firm, travelling from place to place, the charge must be made positively and not inferentially;⁶ and removing intoxicating liquors, for which the tax is not paid, to a place other than a distillery warehouse, and concealing the same, is good.⁷

(c) Sales Without License or Authority.—Under a statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license, an indictment for "unlawfully retailing," is good.⁸

1. State v. Small, 64 N. H. 491; State v. Kennedy, 36 Vt. 563; State v. Conwell, 80 Me. 80; State v. Kennedy, 56 Vt. 563; State v. Adams, 64 N. H. 440.

2. State v. Wyman, 80 Me. 117; State v. Lashus, 79 Me. 504.

3. State v. Devine (Me.), 13 Atl. Rep. 128; State v. Hawley (Me.), 9 Atl. Rep. 620; State v. Welch, 79 Me. 99; State v. Longley, 79 Me. 52.

In State v. Longley, 79 Me. 52, the court distinguish the cases of State v. Miller, 48 Me. 576; and State v. Learned, 47 Me. 426, where the allegation was that the respondent had the liquors, intended, it may be, not by him, but some other person, for unlawful sale, for which he would not be responsible.

4. State v. Learned, 47 Me. 426; Murphy v. Montclair, 49 N. J. L. (10 Vr.) 673.

5. Boon v. State, 69 Ala. 226; Powell v. State, 69 Ala. 10. See Byars v. City of Mt. Vernon, 78 Ill. 11; State v. Cottle, 15 Me. 473; Com. v. Kendall, 66 Mass. (12 Cush.) 414; Bush v. Republic of Texas, 1 Tex. 455.

6. State v. Higgins, 53 Vt. 191.

7. United States v. Nunnemacher, 7 Biss. C. C. 129.

8. Ulmer v. State, 61 Ala. 208; Higgins v. People, 69 Ill. 11; Com. v. Turner, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 4; Woods v. Com., 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 74; Com. v. Kimball, 48 Mass. (7 Metc.) 304; Goodhue v. Com., 46 Mass. (5 Metc.) 553; State v. Mooty, 3 Hill (S. C.) 187; State v. Young, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 51; White v. State, 11 Tex. App. 476; State v. Munger, 15 Vt. 290; Com. v. Hatcher, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 667; State v. Chapman, 25 W. Va. 408. Compare Hensley v. State, 6 Ark. (1 Eng.) 252; Merritt v. State, 19 Tex. App. 435;

(d) Keeping for Sale with Intent to Sell.—A complaint alleging that the defendant did keep intoxicating liquors with intent to sell the same in the state, to be used as a beverage, against the statute, etc., is sufficient.¹

(e) Keeping Place for Sale ; Nuisance.—An indictment alleging that the defendant at a time and place named "did keep a drinking house and tippling shop contrary to the laws of the statute," is sufficient.² And an indictment charging one with keeping a building, "a house wherein spirituous liquors are sold, without license to be drunk in and about the same, and thereby maintained a common nuisance, to the great injury," etc., is sufficient.³

(f) Selling on Prohibited Days and During Prohibited Hours.—Where the defendant's license is conditioned that he should not sell on specified days, or during particular hours, an indictment which charges simply that he sold intoxicating liquors without any authority therefor, on a day or an hour named, will be sufficient if the evidence shows that the sale charged was made on a prohibited day, or during prohibited hours.⁴

(g) Violation of Screen Laws.—A complaint for obstructing the view of premises where liquor is sold, under license, is sufficient if it alleges that the defendant having a license maintained curtains and shutters in the room named, against the law.⁵

(2) Certainty and Particularity—(a) General Rules.—The same general rules as to certainty and particularity which govern indictments generally, apply in cases of indictment for illegal sale of intoxicating liquors.⁶ Under an indictment for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors while the respondent is entitled to a specification of the offence, yet the character of the specification, in reference to extent and minuteness, is a matter of discretion of the trial court.⁷

(b) Sale Without License or Authority.—A general charge in an indictment of keeping a tippling house, or otherwise selling liquor without a license, is good;⁸ but if by any addition thereto the in-

Eppstein v. State, 11 Tex. App. 480; Munch v. State, 3 Tex. App. 552.

1. See State v. Hartwick, 49 Conn. 101; Com. v. Keefe, 143 Mass. 467; Com. v. Sprague, 128 Mass. 75; Com. v. Byrnes, 126 Mass. 248; Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 86 Mass. (4 Allen) 593; State v. Murphy, 15 R. I. 543.

2. Overshiner v. Com., 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 344; State v. Collins, 48 Me. 217; State v. Casey, 45 Me. 435; State v. Crabtree, 27 Mo. 232. See Hintermeister v. State, 1 Iowa 101; Com. v. Wright, 94 Mass. (12 Allen) 190.

3. State v. Freeman, 27 Iowa 333; State v. Welch, 79 Me. 99. See Shilling v. State, 5 Ind. 443; Com. v. Clark, 145 Mass. 251; Com. v. Wright, 94 Mass. (12 Allen) 190; Com. v. Davenport, 84 Mass. (2 Allen) 299.

4. Com. v. Chadwick, 142 Mass. 595; People v. Baumann, 52 Mich. 584.

5. Com. v. Keefe, 143 Mass. 467. See Com. v. Gibbons, 134 Mass. 197.

6. See INDICTMENT, vol. 10.

7. State v. Wooley, 59 Vt. 357. See Boggus v. State, 78 Ala. 26; Devine v. State, 4 Iowa 443; State v. Bacon, 41 Vt. 526; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 616; State v. Muntz, 3 Kan. 383; Com. v. Rowe, 14 Gray (Mass.) 47; Com. v. Burding, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 506.

8. Morrison v. Com., 7 Dana (Ky.) 218. See Anderson v. People, 63 Ill. 53; Frankfort v. Aughe, 114 Ind. 77. 600; Mullen v. State, 96 Ind. 304; State v. Graeter, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 105; State v. Stinson, 17 Me. 154; Com. v. Leonard, 49 Mass. (8 Metc.) 530; State v. Cox, 29 Mo. 475; State v. Downer, 21 Wis. 274.

dictment specifies the facts and they do not amount to the offence charged, the indictment is bad.¹

(c) As to Payment of Special Tax.—An indictment for selling liquor without paying the special tax prescribed by statute, must state the particular tax, whether State or county, that has not been paid,² but need not allege a specific sale or sales, or giving away, it being sufficient if it alleges that the accused was engaged in the business of selling, or offering for sale.³

(d) Sales on Prohibited Days and During Prohibited Hours.—An indictment for keeping open a tippling house on the Sabbath day, need not allege and it need not be proved on the trial, that the defendant sold liquor, or that the keeping open of his shop was a nuisance or hurtful to the neighborhood, in respect to morals or otherwise.⁴ It is thought that an indictment for keeping open a bar room on an election day, need not allege what the election was for, but merely aver that the election was held.⁵

(e) Sale to Minors.—A complaint for selling intoxicating liquors to a minor contrary to law, need not allege that the defendant was licensed,⁶ had previous notice,⁷ or that the sale was made for the minor's own use, or the use of his parents, or for the use of any other person.⁸

(f) Sale to Drunkards, etc.—An indictment for selling intoxicating liquors to one who is in the habit of getting intoxicated, must allege that the habit existed at the time of the sale.⁹

(g) Sale by Druggists.—An information or indictment for the illegal sale of liquors, by a druggist need not aver whether the sale by the druggist was at retail or wholesale;¹⁰ but where, to constitute the offence the indictment attempts to charge the druggist

Thus it has been held that it is not necessary to aver that defendant received any compensation for the liquors sold (State v. Downer, 21 Wis. 274), or aver the existence of the corporation nor of an ordinance regulating the sale (State v. Graeter, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 105), or that he had license under the laws of the state to sell liquor to be drunk on the premises (Frankfort v. Aughe, 114 Ind. 77, 600), or to state what penalty or forfeiture is incurred or to what uses it is applied (State v. Stinson, 17 Me. 154). But an indictment for selling spirituous liquors without a license should state at what house or establishment, or to whom the vending took place, or some other fact tending to identify the transaction, otherwise the objection will be fatal on demurrer. Burch v. Republic, 1 Tex. 608.

1. Morrison v. Com., 7 Dana (Ky.) 218.

2. State v. Martin, 34 Ark. 340; Mansfield v. State, 17 Tex. App. 468.

3. People v. Breidenstein, 65 Mich. 65.

4. Hall v. State, 3 Ga. 18; Fant v. People, 45 Ill. 259.

5. State v. Irvine, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 155. Compare Hoskey v. State, 9 Tex. App. 202.

6. Johnson v. State, 74 Ind. 197; Com. v. O'Brien, 134 Mass. 198. A complaint for selling to a minor defines the act of the defendant with sufficient certainty by charging him, at a time and place named, with "selling unlawfully intoxicating liquors" a person named in the complaint, "who was then and there a minor." Com. v. O'Brien, 134 Mass. 198.

7. State v. Hyde, 27 Minn. 153.

8. Com. v. O'Leary, 143 Mass. 95.

9. Wiedemann v. People, 92 Ill. 314. See also Barnes v. State, 20 Conn. 232; Miller v. State, 106 Ind. 415.

10. Luton v. Palmer (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 701; Savage v. Com., 84 Va. 582, 619.

must have sold the liquor as a beverage, the indictment must specifically state that it was so sold.¹

(h) Keeping for Sale or with Intent to Sell.—In an indictment for keeping liquors for sale, or with intent to sell, the offence must be specifically set forth;² but under a statute making it an offence to keep liquor for sale, the indictment need not aver that it was sold in the State.³

(i) Sale to be Drunk on Premises.—The offence of selling intoxicating liquors without having any license, to be drunk on the premises, consists in selling the liquor for the purpose of being drunk on the premises, and it is not necessary to allege that the liquor thus sold, was subsequently drunk on the premises.⁴

(j) Violation of City Ordinance.—A complaint charging that the complainant has just cause to suspect, and does suspect that the defendant is guilty of violating a city ordinance against the sale of intoxicating liquors, without averring that he is guilty, is bad for uncertainty.⁵

(k) Violation of Local Option Laws.—It has been said that an indictment for the sale of intoxicating liquors in violation of the local statute need only aver that the "defendant sold vinous, or spirituous liquors without a license and contrary to law;"⁶ but the better opinion appears to be that where a liquor law is not to become operative until after an election has been held in accordance with the provisions of the law it must be alleged in the indictment and proved in the trial that such an election has been held.⁷

1. State v. Buckner, 20 Mo. App. 420.

2. State v. Moran, 40 Me. 129. See also Com. v. Gallagher, 145 Mass. 104; Com. v. Kimball, 7 Gray (Mass.) 328; Com. v. Purdy, 146 Mass. 138; Com. v. Quinn, 12 Gray (Mass.) 178.

Keeping Tippling House.—An indictment charging the defendant with "keeping a certain grog shop, and tippling shop," is not bad for uncertainty. Com. v. Riley, 14 Bush (Ky.) 44; Our v. Com., 9 Dana (Ky.) 30; State v. Tracey, 12 R. I. 216.

Order of Information.—The defendant, embarrassed by not knowing which of several nuisances kept by him in a town, is covered by an indictment, may have an order of information. State v. Tracey, 12 R. I. 216.

3. State v. Perkins, 63 N. H. 368.

4. State v. Freeman, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 248; Com. v. Luddy, 143 Mass. 563; Com. v. Moulton, 64 Mass. (10 Cush.) 404; State v. Auberry, 7 Mo. 304.

It is said in State v. Smith, 35 Tex. 132, that an indictment charging the defendant with "unlawfully and wickedly selling spirituous, vinous and other intoxicating liquors in quantities of a quart, and did permit the same to be drunk at the establishment where sold," if sufficiently definite to charge the offence under the statute. But the supreme court of Indiana say, in Vanderwood v. State, 50 Ind. 26, that an indictment charging the sale of liquor and alleging that the defendant suffered and permitted it to be drunk in, etc., is bad.

In Wisconsin, it is not necessary to allege that the liquor was sold to be drunk on the premises. Allen v. State, 5 Wis. 329.

"By Retail."—An indictment for selling ardent spirits, to be drunk where sold, without license, is bad, without the words "by retail." Boyle v. Com., 14 Gratt. (Va.) 674.

5. Roberson v. Lambertville, 38 N. J. L. (9 Vt.) 69. See also Frankfort v. Aughe, 114 Ind. 77, 600.

6. Boon v. State, 69 Ala. 226; Powell v. State, 69 Ala. 10.

7. State v. Chambers, 93 N. Car.

(3) Statutory Language.—The sufficiency of charging a crime in the language of the statute, or equivalent words has been fully treated heretofore.¹

(4) *Surplusage, joinder, duplicity, etc.*²

j. DESCRIPTION OF LIQUORS AND PLACE OF SALE.—It seems that an indictment for keeping and maintaining a tenement used for the illegal sale and illegal keeping of intoxicating liquors need not particularly describe the liquors,³ and some cases hold that an indictment for unlawfully keeping and selling intoxicating liquors need not specifically describe the liquors kept or sold;⁴ but the better opinion seems to be that an indictment or information for selling liquors contrary to statute should state the kind or quality of the liquors sold.⁵

600; Croon v. State, 25 Tex. App. 556; Nineger v. State, 25 Tex. App. 449; Smith v. State, 19 Tex. App. 444; McMillan v. State, 18 Tex. App. 375; Prather v. State, 12 Tex. App. 401.

1. See INDICTMENT, vol. 10.

Description by Reference to Statute.—

An indictment is bad which fails to show on which of two sections of the liquor law imposing different penalties it is founded. State v. Leavitt, 63 N. H. 381.

For cases applying specially to indictment for the violation of liquor laws see Camp v. State, 27 Ala. 53; State v. Cathey, 41 Ark. 308; State v. Orton, 41 Ark. 305; State v. Witt, 39 Ark. 216; State v. Cady, 47 Conn. 44; Barth v. State, 18 Conn. 432; Frankfort v. Aughe, 114 Ind. 77, 600; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 683; State v. Reyelts, 74 Iowa 499; Zumhoff v. State, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 526; State v. Dodge, 78 Me. 439; Cearfoss v. State, 42 Md. 403; Jones v. State, 67 Md. 256; Higgins v. State, 64 Md. 419; Rawlings v. State, 2 Md. 201; Com. v. Bartley, 138 Mass. 181; Com. v. Kelly, 78 Mass. (12 Gray) 175; Com. v. Gilland, 75 Mass. (9 Gray) 3; Benalleck v. People, 31 Mich. 200; Mankato v. Arnold, 36 Minn. 62; State v. Hanley, 25 Minn. 429; State v. Walker, 24 Mo. App. 679; State v. Wallace, 94 N. Car. 827; Oshe v. State, 37 Ohio St. 494; State v. Duggan, 15 R. I. 403; State v. Kane, 15 R. I. 395; State v. McGough, 14 R. I. 63; State v. Campbell, 12 R. I. 147; Lantzner v. State, 19 Tex. App. 320; State v. Paddock, 24 Vt. 312.

2. For a full discussion of the subjects of surplusage, joinder, duplicity, the election of the prosecutor on which count or offence to proceed, conjunctive, disjunctive and alternative averments and the like, see INDICTMENT, vol. 10.

3. Com. v. Conneally, 108 Mass. 480. See Com. v. Bennett, 108 Mass. 27.

4. Com. v. Timothy, 74 Mass. (8 Gray) 480. See Barth v. State, 18 Conn. 432; Connell v. State, 46 Ind. 446; State v. Hannum, 53 Ind. 335; State v. Carpenter, 20 Ind. 219; Downey v. State, 20 Ind. 37; Simpson v. State, 17 Ind. 444; State v. Crowell, 30 Me. 115; Com. v. Bennett, 108 Mass. 27; Com. v. Clark, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 367; Com. v. Edwards, 66 Mass. (12 Cush.) 187; Mankato v. Arnold, 36 Minn. 62; State v. McGinnis, 30 Minn. 52; State v. Odam, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 220; State v. Reynolds, 47 Vt. 297; State v. Boncher, 59 Wis. 477.

5. Neales v. State, 10 Mo. 498; Blasdel v. Hewit, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 137. See Bogan v. State, 84 Ala. 449; State v. Witt, 39 Ark. 216; State v. Teahan, 50 Conn. 92; Dansey v. State, 23 Fla. 316; Plunkett v. State, 69 Ind. 68; Hooper v. State, 56 Ind. 153; Hammond v. State, 48 Ind. 393; Ward v. State, 48 Ind. 293; Leary v. State, 39 Ind. 360; State v. Mondy, 24 Ind. 268; Downey v. State, 20 Ind. 82; State v. Carpenter, 20 Ind. 219; Fetterer v. State, 18 Ind. 388; State v. Graeter, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 105; State v. Mullinix, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 554; State v. Brooks, 33 Kan. 708; State v. Sterns, 28 Kan. 154; Com. v. Grady, 108 Mass. 412; Com. v. Ryan, 75 Mass. (9 Gray) 137; Com. v. Timothy, 74 Mass. (8 Gray) 480; Com. v. Conant, 72 Mass. (6 Gray) 482; Com. v. Grey, 68 Mass. (2 Gray) 501; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 476; Com. v. Wilcox, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 503; Com. v. Odlin, 40 Mass. (23 Pick.) 275; State v. Rogers, 39 Mo. 431; State v. Pischel, 16 Neb. 490; State v. Blaisdell, 33 N. H. 388; State v.

In an indictment for manufacturing intoxicating liquors for sale,¹ or for the keeping of intoxicating liquors with intent to sell them unlawfully² need not specify the quantity of liquor manufactured or kept, and some of the cases hold that in an indictment for illegally selling liquors or for selling without a license, that the quantity sold need not be alleged,³ other cases hold that the indictment should contain an averment of the quantity sold.⁴

k. DESCRIBING PLACE AND TIME OF SALE.—An indictment for selling liquors contrary to statute, should state the place where,⁵ and the time when,⁶ the sale was made.

American Forcite Powder Mfg. Co., 50 N. J. L. (21 Vr.) 75; State v. Fox, 16 N. J. L. (1 Harr.) 152; State v. Packer, 80 N. Car. 439; Frisbie v. State, 1 Oreg. 248; Cochran v. State, 26 Tex. 678.

It is said by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in the case of Com. v. Grey, 68 Mass. (2 Gray) 501; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 476, that a complaint or indictment which alleges an unlawful sale of "spirituous or intoxicating liquors" is bad for uncertainty, even after the plea of nolo contendere; and the supreme court of Nebraska, in State v. Pischel, 16 Neb. 490, say that an indictment charging the sale without a license of "malt, spirituous and vinous liquors and intoxicating drinks" under the statute punishing the sale without a license of "malt, spirituous or vinous or any intoxicating drinks" is too indefinite; and it is said by the supreme court of Indiana, in the case of Ward v. State, 48 Ind. 293, that an indictment founded upon a statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors which charges the selling of "liquor" without any averment that it was intoxicating should be quashed.

1. Com. v. Clark, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 367.

2. State v. Teahan, 50 Conn. 92.

3. See Block v. State, 66 Ala. 493; Kilbourn v. State, 9 Conn. 560; Brow v. State, 103 Ind. 133; Megowan v. Com., 2 Met. (Ky.) 3; Mankato v. Arnold, 36 Minn. 62; White v. State, 11 Tex. App. 476; Allen v. State, 5 Wis. 329. Compare Eppstein v. State, 11 Tex. App. 480; State v. Lane, 33 Me. 536.

4. See State v. Chambless, 45 Ark. 349; State v. Clayton, 32 Ark. 185; Zarresseller v. People, 17 Ill. 101; State v. Corll, 73 Ind. 535; Arbintrobe v. State, 67 Ind. 267; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 84; Grupe v. State, 67 Ind. 327; State v. Zeitler, 63 Ind. 441; Manville v. State, 58 Ind. 63; State v. Jacks, 54 Ind.

412; State v. Mondy, 24 Ind. 268; McCool v. State, 23 Ind. 127; Smith v. State, 23 Ind. 132; Reams v. State, 23 Ind. 111; Struckman v. State, 21 Ind. 160; Haver v. State, 17 Ind. 455; Cool v. State, 16 Ind. 355; Hamilton v. State, 103 Ind. 96; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 491; Redding v. Com., 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 339; Haskill v. Com., 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 342; State v. Kuhn, 24 La. An. 474; Com. v. Dean, 38 Mass. (21 Pick.) 334; Neales v. State, 10 Mo. 498; Blasdel v. Hewit, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 137; State v. Shaw, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 198.

5. See Rawson v. State, 19 Conn. 292; Barth v. State, 18 Conn. 432; Murphy v. Monroe County Commissioners, 73 Ind. 483; State v. Zeitler, 63 Ind. 441; Howard v. State, 6 Ind. 444; State v. Hass, 22 Iowa 193; State v. Schilling, 14 Iowa 455; State v. Kreig, 13 Iowa 462; State v. Rohrer, 34 Kan. 427; State v. Nickerson, 30 Kan. 545; State v. Sterns, 28 Kan. 154; Young v. Com., 14 Bush (Ky.) 161; Herine v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 295; Grimme v. Com., 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 263; State v. Dodge, 78 Me. 439; State v. Lang, 63 Me. 215; Com. v. Welsh, 83 Mass. (1 Allen) 1; Com. v. Dean, 38 Mass. (21 Pick.) 334; State v. Sannerud, 38 Minn. 229; State v. Olson, 38 Minn. 150; State v. Peterson, 38 Minn. 143; Boughridge v. State (Miss.), 3 So. Rep. 667; Blasdel v. Hewit, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 137; Com. v. Head, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 819; State v. Church, 4 W. Va. 745. Compare Dansey v. State, 23 Fla. 316; Anderson v. People, 63 Ill. 53; Com. v. Clapp, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 97; Com. v. Stowell, 50 Mass. (9 Metc.) 569; Cochran v. State, 26 Tex. 678.

6. State v. Zeitler, 63 Ind. 441; Clark v. State, 34 Ind. 436; Com. v. Adams, 1 Gray (Mass.) 481; Com. v. Thurlow, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 374; Com. v. Kingman, 14 Gray (Mass.) 85; Com. v. Donnelly, 14 Gray 86, note; Blasdel v. Hewit, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 137; State v.

1. ALLEGATIONS AS TO KNOWLEDGE, INTENT, ETC.—A prohibited sale of intoxicating liquors being per se a violation and not an evasion of the law, an indictment need not allege the sale to have been made with a purpose of evading the law.¹

m. NEGATION OF DEFENCES, EXCEPTIONS, ETC.—The negation of defences, exceptions, etc., in an indictment for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, is governed by the same rules as the negation of exceptions and defences in other cases.²

n. AVERMENTS AS TO OWNERSHIP.—An indictment or information against a defendant for selling intoxicating liquor without a license for that purpose "to be drunk on the premises where sold," should state that the premises were owned and controlled by the Kennedy, 36 Vt. 563; State v. O'Keefe, 41 Vt. 691; State v. Bruce, 26 W. Va. 153.

Alleging Impossible Date.—Murphy v. State, 106 Ind. 96; State v. Patterson, 116 Ind. 45.

Averments as to Day or Hour.—People v. Husted, 52 Mich. 426; Farrell v. State, 45 Ind. 371.

Motion to Amend Allegation as to Year.—State v. Kennedy, 36 Vt. 563.

On or About.—State v. Lavake, 26 Minn. 526; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 415. See Rawson v. State, 19 Conn. 292; Com. v. Purdy, 147 Mass. 29.

Sale on Sunday.—Henry v. State, 113 Ind. 304. See Kroer v. People, 78 Ill. 294; Com. v. McKiernan, 128 Mass. 414; State v. Sannerud, 38 Minn. 229; State v. Olson, 38 Minn. 150; State v. Peterson, 38 Minn. 143; State v. Kock, 61 Mo. 117; State v. Roehm, 61 Mo. 82; Brown v. State, 16 Neb. 658. See also Gilbert v. State, 81 Ind. 565; Shepler v. State, 114 Ind. 194; Roy v. State, 91 Ind. 417; Lehritter v. State, 42 Ind. 383; State v. Fletcher, 13 R. I. 522; Megowan v. Com., 2 Met. (Ky.) 3.

Divers Other Days.—Smith v. Com., 79 Ky. 493. See Our House v. State, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 172; State v. Cofren, 48 Me. 364; Mayor of N. Y. v. Mason, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 142; State v. Jones, 39 Vt. 370; State v. Munger, 15 Vt. 290; State v. Pillsbury, 47 Me. 449.

Keeping for Sale.—Com. v. Hersey, 144 Mass. 297.

Blanks, Omissions, etc.—State v. Brooks, 33 Kan. 708; State v. Buck, 78 Me. 193; Com. v. Butler, 83 Mass. (1 Allen) 4; Savage v. Com., 84 Va. 582, 619; 5 S. E. Rep. 563.

"Then and There"—Failure to Repeat.—In State v. Buck, 78 Me. 193, it is said that an indictment charging the keeping and sale at a time and place stated is not bad for omission to repeat the time and further allegation that defendant thereby maintained a nuisance. State v. Brady (R. I.), 12 Atl. Rep. 238; State v. Doyle, 15 R. I. 527.

It seems that in an indictment for sale to a minor it is not necessary to repeat the words "then and there." Shaffer v. State, 106 Ind. 319; Com. v. Hersey, 144 Mass. 297; State v. Hopkins, 5 R. I. 53; State v. Bruce, 26 W. Va. 153.

1. McMillan v. State, 18 Tex. App. 375. See Warwick v. State, 48 Ark. 27; State v. Mohr, 53 Iowa 261; Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 122 Mass. 8; Com. v. Sheehan, 105 Mass. 174; Com. v. Blanchard, 105 Mass. 173; State v. McGough, 14 R. I. 63; Bilbro v. State, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 534. Contra, State v. Learned, 47 Me. 426; State v. Benjamin, 49 Vt. 101.

2. Defences, Exceptions, etc., to Indictment.—For a full discussion of this subject see INDICTMENT, vol. 10.

For cases relating to "intoxicating liquors" see Bogan v. State 84 Ala. 449; Tatum v. State, 63 Ala. 147; Koopman v. State, 61 Ala. 70; Weed v. State, 55 Ala. 13; Elam v. State, 25 Ala. 53; Mogler v. State, 47 Ark. 109; State v. Bailey, 43 Ark. 150; State v. Scarlett, 38 Ark. 563; State v. Devers, 38 Ark. 517; Thompson v. State, 37 Ark. 408; Blackwell v. State, 36 Ark. 178; Williams v. State, 35 Ark. 430; State v. Emerick, 35 Ark. 324; Volmer v. State, 34 Ark. 487; State v. Adams, 16 Ark. 497; Reich v. State, 63 Ga. 616; Newman v. State, 63 Ga. 533; Johnson v. State, 60 Ga. 634; Frankfort v. Aughe, 114 Ind. 77, 600; Brown v. State, 103 Ind. 133; Johnson v. State, 74 Ind. 197; Overdale v. State, 63 Ind. 207; Henderson v. State, 60 Ind. 296; Meier v. State, 57 defendant, where this is required by the statute,¹ and in an infor-

- Ind. 386; Lichtenfels v. State, 53 Ind. 161; Burke v. State, 52 Ind. 461; State v. Buckner, 52 Ind. 278; Stein v. State, 50 Ind. 21; Meyer v. State, 50 Ind. 18; Farrell v. State, 45 Ind. 371; O'Connor v. State, 45 Ind. 347; Lehritter v. State, 42 Ind. 383; State v. Carpenter, 20 Ind. 219; Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 449; Struble v. Nodwift, 11 Ind. 64; Howe v. State, 10 Ind. 423; Kinser v. State, 9 Ind. 543; Bruton v. State, 4 Ind. 601; State v. Watson, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 155; State v. Collins, 11 Iowa 141; State v. Beneke, 9 Iowa 203; State v. Shackle, 29 Kan. 341, 762; Prohibitory Amendment Cases, 24 Kan. 700; State v. Pitzer, 23 Kan. 250; State v. Pittman, 10 Kan. 593; State v. Thompson, 2 Kan. 432; Webster v. Com., 7 Dana (Ky.) 215; Com. v. Harvey, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1; Com. v. Allen, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1; State v. Lang, 63 Me. 215; State v. Brown, 31 Me. 522; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 522; Bode v. State, 7 Gill (Md.) 326; Com. v. Brusie, 145 Mass. 117; Com. v. Luddy, 143 Mass. 563; Com. v. Keefe, 143 Mass. 467; Com. v. Chadwick, 142 Mass. 595; Com. v. McKiernan, 128 Mass. 14; Com. v. Hoyer, 125 Mass. 209; Com. v. Hanley, 121 Mass. 377; Com. v. Davis, 121 Mass. 352; Com. v. Fredericks, 119 Mass. 199; Com. v. Locke, 114 Mass. 288; Com. v. Dunn, 111 Mass. 425; Com. v. Conneally, 108 Mass. 480; Com. v. Grady, 108 Mass. 412; Com. v. Bennett, 108 Mass. 27; Com. v. Shea, 115 Mass. 102; Com. v. Chisholm, 103 Mass. 213; Com. v. Edds, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 406; Com. v. Dunn, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 401; Com. v. Clark, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 367; Com. v. Boyle, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 3; Com. v. Roland, 78 Mass. (12 Gray) 132; Com. v. Water, 77 Mass. (11 Gray) 81; Com. v. Keefe, 73 Mass. (7 Gray) 332; Com. v. Conant, 72 Mass. (6 Gray) 482; Com. v. Clapp, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 97; Com. v. McSherry, 69 Mass. (3 Gray) 481, n.; Com. v. Lafontaine, 69 Mass. (3 Gray) 479; Com. v. Murphy, 68 Mass. (2 Gray) 510; Com. v. Burd- ing, 66 Mass. (12 Cush.) 506; Com. v. Tuttle, 66 Mass. (12 Cush.) 502; Com. v. Wilson, 65 Mass. (11 Cush.) 412; Com. v. Hart, 65 Mass. (11 Cush.) 130; Com. v. Baker, 54 Mass. (10 Cush.) 405; Com. v. Shaw, 59 Mass. (5 Cush.) 522; Com. v. Sloan, 58 Mass. (4 Cush.) 52; Com. v. Roberts, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 505; Com. v. Tower, 49 Mass. (8 Metc.) 527; Com. v. Thayer, 46 Mass. (5 Metc.) 246; Com. v. Thurlow, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 374; Com. v. Odlin, 40 Mass. (23 Pick.) 275; Com. v. Purtle, 77 Mass. (11 Gray) 78; People v. Robbins (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 924; Lutton v. Palmer (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 701; People v. Richmond, 59 Mich. 570; State v. Nerbovig, 33 Minn. 480; Norton v. State, 65 Miss. 297; Trost v. State, 64 Miss. 188; Surratt v. State, 45 Miss. 601; State v. McAdoo, 80 Mo. 216; State v. Taylor, 73 Mo. 52; State v. Jaques, 68 Mo. 260; State v. McBride, 64 Mo. 364; State v. Fanning, 38 Mo. 359; State v. Sutton, 25 Mo. 300; State v. Williamson, 19 Mo. 384; State v. Owen, 15 Mo. 506, 514; State v. Wish- on, 15 Mo. 503; State v. Hornbeak, 15 Mo. 478; State v. Haden, 15 Mo. 447; State v. Buford, 10 Mo. 703; State v. Perkins, 63 N. H. 368; State v. Sav- age, 48 N. H. 484; State v. Blaisdell, 33 N. H. 388; State v. Shaw, 35 N. H. 217; State v. Wade, 34 N. H. 495; State v. Fuller, 33 N. H. 259; State v. McGlynn, 34 N. H. 422; State v. Ab- bott, 31 N. H. 434; State v. Burns, 20 N. H. 550; State v. Adams, 6 N. H. 532; State v. Passaic, 42 N. J. L. (13 Vr.) 87; Roberson v. Lambertville, 38 N. J. L. (9 Vr.) 69; Townley v. State, 18 N. J. L. (3 Harr.) 311; State v. Webster, 18 N. J. L. (5 Halst.) 293; Jefferson v. People, 101 N. Y. 19; People v. McIntosh, 5 N. Y. Cr. Rep. 38; Blaisdell v. Hewit, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 137; People v. Gilkinson, 4 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 26; State v. Stamey, 71 N. C. 202; Becker v. State, 8 Ohio St. 391; Hirn v. State, 1 Ohio St. 15; State v. Duggan, 15 R. I. 403; State v. O'Don- nell, 10 R. I. 477; State v. Barker, 3 R. I. 280; State v. Johnson, 3 R. I. 94; State v. Staley, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 505; State v. Horan, 25 Tex. (Supp.) 271; State v. Freeman, 27 Vt. 523; State v. Clark, 23 Vt. 293; State v. Munger, 15 Vt. 290; Com. v. Young's Case, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 664; Com. v. Hill, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 682; Peer's Case, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 674; Com. v. Hampton's Case, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 590; Sires v. State, 73 Wis. 251; State v. Tall, 36 Wis. 577; Nelson v. United States, 30 Fed. Rep. 112; aff'g s. c., 29 Fed. Rep. 202.

1. State v. Woolsey, 92 Ind. 131.

mation for a search warrant for liquors "owned or kept by any person named or described as particularly as may be," must allege ownership in some specific person;¹ but an indictment against a house as a dram shop and public nuisance, where no lien is sought upon it, need not aver the owners name.²

o. ALLEGATION AS TO PRICE, VALUE, ETC.—In an indictment for selling or bartering liquor without a license, no allegation of the price for which the liquor was sold is necessary.³

p. DESCRIPTION OF PERSONS, ETC.—It is a general rule that in an indictment for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, it is essential to allege the names of the persons selling the liquor, if known or the fact that they were unknown,⁴ particularly is this true where an indictment is found for selling intoxicating liquor

1. State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 64 Iowa 300.

2. Our House v. State, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 172.

3. Forkner v. State, 95 Ind. 406; Schlicht v. State, 56 Ind. 173; Farrell v. State, 45 Ind. 371; O'Connor v. State, 45 Ind. 347; State v. Muntz, 3 Kan. 386; State v. Rogers, 39 Mo. 431; State v. Fanning, 38 Mo. 359; State v. Ladd, 15 Mo. 430; State v. Pischel, 16 Neb. 608; State v. Hines, 13 R. I. 10. Compare State v. Zietler, 63 Ind. 441; Seegur v. State, 6 Ind. 451; Snvder v. State, 5 Ind. 194; Divine v. State, 4 Ind. 240; Neales v. State, 10 Mo. 498.

4. Unlawful Sales Generally.—Dorman v. State, 34 Ala. 216; State v. Walker, 3 Harr. (Del.) 547; Blodget v. State, 3 Ind. 403; State v. Allen, 32 Iowa 491; Capritz v. State, 1 Md. 569; Com. v. Dean, 38 Mass. (21 Pick.) 334; State v. Pischel, 16 Neb. 608; State v. Plainfield, 44 N. J. L. (15 Vr.) 118; State v. Faucett, 4 Dev. & B. (N. C.) 107; State v. Doyle, 11 R. I. 574; State v. Pendergast, 20 W. Va. 672.

Sales Without License.—State v. Jacks, 54 Ind. 412; State v. Stucky, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 289; Wilson v. Com., 14 Bush (Ky.) 159; Com. v. Thurlow, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 374; State v. Schmail, 25 Minn. 368; Roberson v. Lambertville, 38 N. J. L. (9 Vr.) 69; State v. Steedman, 8 Rich. (S. C.) 312; Dixon v. State, 21 Tex. App. 517; Mansfield v. State, 17 Tex. App. 468; Eppstein v. State, 11 Tex. App. 480; Nelson v. U. S., 30 Fed. Rep. 112; U. S. v. Nelson, 29 Fed. Rep. 202.

Describing Person to Whom Sold.—However, there are a number of well considered cases which hold that in an indictment or complaint for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, it is not necessary to allege the names of the persons to whom the liquors were sold or that their names are unknown.

Unlawful Sales Generally.—State v. Bailey, 43 Ark. 150; McCuen v. State, 19 Ark. 630; Myers v. People, 67 Ill. 503; Rice v. People, 38 Ill. 435; State v. Howorth, 70 Iowa 157; State v. Brooks, 33 Kan. 708; State v. Lang, 63 Me. 215; Com. v. Davis, 77 Mass. (11 Gray) 457; Com. v. Wilcox, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 503; Lea v. State, 64 Miss. 201; Riley v. State, 43 Miss. 397; State v. Rogers, 39 Mo. 431; State v. Elam, 21 Mo. App. 290; Osgood v. People, 39 N. Y. 449; State v. Muse, 4 Dev. & B. (N. C.) 319; State v. Hines, 13 R. I. 10; State v. Carter, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 158; State v. Heldt, 41 Tex. 220; State v. Higgins, 53 Vt. 191.

Sales Without License or Authority.—State v. Bailey, 43 Ark. 150; Johnson v. State, 40 Ark. 453; Dansey v. State, 23 Fla. 316; s.c., 2 So. Rep. 692; Hill v. Dalton, 72 Ga. 314; Cannady v. People, 17 Ill. 158; State v. Baughman, 20 Iowa 497; State v. Becker, 20 Iowa 438; State v. Schweiter, 27 Kan. 499; State v. Kuhn, 24 La. An. 474; State v. Fanning, 38 Mo. 359; State v. Spain, 29 Mo. 415; State v. Ladd, 15 Mo. 430; People v. Adams, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 475; State v. Staley, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 565; Cochran v. State, 26 Tex. 678; Mansfield v. State, 17 Tex. App. 468; State v. Munger, 15 Vt. 290; Com. v. Dove, 2 Va. Cas. 26; State v. Ferrell, 30 W. Va. 683; State v. Pendergast, 20 W. Va. 672; State v. Gummer, 22 Wis. 441; State v. Bielby, 21 Wis. 204.

Sales on Sunday or Election Days.—State v. Parnell, 16 Ark. 506; State v. Stamey, 71 N. C. 202; State v. Hickerson, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 375.

after notice¹ or where a part of the penalty is a forfeiture of the license on conviction, a second time, for the same offence.² Any description of the person is good which is sufficient for identification;³ and if the name of the person described is unknown, it will be sufficient to aver that the liquors were sold or kept "by a person unknown."⁴

8. Trial, Practice.⁵

9. Bill of Particulars.—The rules of law governing the granting or withholding of a bill of particulars on the trial of an indictment for a violation of the liquor law are the same as those governing the trial of indictments for other offences; the granting or refusing of such bill is within the discretion of the presiding judge, and his refusal to require one is not subject to exception.⁶

10. Evidence.⁷

11. Verdict, Judgment, etc.—Upon a complaint in a form prescribed by statute, alleging that intoxicating liquors were kept by the defendant for unlawful sale in a shop which is particularly described, a general verdict of guilty is sufficient.⁸

1. State v. Heltsch, 29 Minn. 134.

2. Bode v. State, 7 Gill (Md.) 326.

However, a complaint under the Massachusetts statutes alleging that at a time and place named the defendant "did knowingly permit a certain tenement there situate, which was then and there under the control of said defendant, to be unlawfully used for the illegal sale and keeping of intoxicating liquors therein," is sufficient without averring that the tenement was used by any person named or by any person unknown and other than the defendant. Com. v. Bartley, 138 Mass. 181.

3. Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 140 Mass. 287.

To an indictment of "Zachariah Lawrence," for selling liquor without a license, a plea in abatement by "Zachary Taylor Lawrence" sustained. Lawrence v. State, 59 Ala. 61.

4. Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 116 Mass. 21.

Amendment of Indictment or Information.—In the case of State v. Murphy, 55 Vt. 547, the state's attorney filed an information under the liquor law against the respondent as "Thomas J." for maintaining a nuisance. The respondent pleaded in abatement that his name was "Timothy J.," and the court held that the information was amendable.

Occupation of Defendant Need Not be Specified.—State v. Butcher, 40 Ark. 362; Johnson v. People, 83 Ill. 431; State v. Mercer, 58 Iowa 182; Com. v. Rucker, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 228; Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 116 Mass. 21; Com. v.

Leonard, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 529; Com. v. Pearson, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 449; Austin v. State, 10 Mo. 591; Day v. State, 21 Tex. App. 213. Compare Blackwell v. State, 45 Ark. 90; State v. Martin, 34 Ark. 340; State v. Andrews, 26 Mo. 169; State v. Runyan, 26 Mo. 167.

Indictment of Tavern Keeper.—Hérine v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 295.

Indictment of Distiller.—State v. Kennedy, 1 Ala. 31.

Sunday Sales.—Archer v. State, 10 Tex. App. 482. See Bode v. State, 7 Gill (Md.) 326; State v. Lislés, 58 Mo. 359; People v. Page, 3 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 600; Day v. State, 21 Tex. App. 213.

Sales to Minors.—Com. v. O'Leary, 143 Mass. 95; Com. v. Fowler, 145 Mass. 398; Shaffer v. State, 106 Ind. 319.

5. For a full discussion of the question of the conduct and practice in the trial of an indictment for the violation of a liquor law, see CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, vol. 4, p. 729, and lit. TRIAL, in the same series.

6. Com. v. Wood, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 11.

7. See EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 42, etc., and various subtitles relating thereto.

8. State v. Newlan, 69 Me. 531; State v. McCann, 61 Me. 116; State v. Wiesenhunst (N. C.), 4 S. E. Rep. 533.

For cases relating to the form of verdict on trial for indictment under intoxicating liquor laws, see Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 86 Mass. (4 Allen) 601; Com. v. Munn, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 364; Com. v. Dooly, 72 Mass.

Where the defendant is found guilty upon two or more counts of an indictment, for violating the liquor laws a separate judgment should be rendered on each count;¹ and on conviction of partners jointly indicted for selling liquors without a license, the judgment must be severally against each for the whole penalty.²

12. Sentence, Punishment, etc.—Where there is a conviction under several counts for liquor selling, there should be a separate sentence as to each.³ Upon a conviction for the violation of the provision of the liquor law in selling intoxicating liquors without a license the court has no discretion in regard to punishment, but must impose that provided by the statute.⁴

a. NUMBER OF FINES; JOINT AND SEPARATE.—Where a person is convicted on two or more counts, he is subject to a fine on each count.⁵ And where two persons who have been jointly indicted for carrying on the business of retailing intoxicating liquors without a license, a general fine may be assessed against them if they acted as a firm in carrying on the business, or a separate fine against each if they act individually.⁶

b. AMOUNT OF FINE.—On conviction for violating the revenue law by engaging in the business of a wholesale liquor dealer without license, the amount of the fine is fixed by statute.⁷

c. IMPRISONMENT OR COMMITMENT.—Where the penalty pro-

(6 Gray) 360; State v. McGrath, 73 Mo. 181; Rhoads v. Com. (Pa.) 6 Atl. Rep. 245; State v. Wright, 5 R. I. 287.

1. Kroer v. People, 78 Ill. 294; State v. Leis, 11 Iowa 416; Wrocklege State, 1 Iowa 167.

After a general verdict of guilty on an indictment containing a count charging the defendant with being a common seller of intoxicating liquors during a certain period, and counts for single sales within the time covered by the first count, a nolle prosequi may be entered on all the counts except the first, and judgment rendered upon that for the commonwealth. The Com. v. Jenks, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 490.

2. People v. Walbaum, 1 Dak. 295.

3. Fletcher v. People, 81 Ill. 116.

4. People v. Gilkinson, 4 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 26; Morris v. People, 2 T. & C. (N. Y.) 219. See Wightman v. State, 10 Ohio 452; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328.

Alabama Doctrine.—In McPherson v. State, 54 Ala. 222, it is said that a conviction under the Ala. Rev. Code (§ 3618) for the retailing of vinous or spirituous liquors less than a quart without license, or selling the same to a person of known intemperate habits, the jury must assess the fine and the court in its discretion may add imprisonment and hard labor.

Massachusetts Doctrine.—The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts in Com. v. Fountain, 127 Mass. 452, say that an offence under the Massachusetts statute of illegally keeping intoxicating liquors for sale is not a "similar offence" to that of keeping and maintaining a tenement used for the illegal sale and illegal keeping of intoxicating liquors as provided by the statute of that state, within the meaning of that phrase, giving a judge, where the punishment provided is fine and imprisonment, the discretion to impose either without the other, if it appears that the offender has not before been convicted of a "similar offence."

5. State v. Amba, 20 Mo. 214.

6. Lemons v. State, 50 Ala. 130.

7. McPherson v. State, 54 Ala. 221. See Johnson v. People, 1 Ill. (Breese) 276.

For cases passing upon the amount of fines which can be imposed for a conviction of the violation of the liquor law see State v. Little, 42 Iowa 51; State v. Malling, 11 Iowa 239; Walters v. State, 5 Iowa 507; Richford v. City of Lexington, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 147; Hoyt

vided for a violation of the liquor law is a fine merely, imprisonment cannot be inflicted upon conviction.¹

The term of imprisonment of one convicted of selling intoxicating liquors, is, in each instance controlled by the statute.² And where the sentence is imprisonment and fine, the judgment may provide that in default of payment of the fine, the defendant shall stand committed for an additional term.³

Where the judgment provides that in default of payment of a certain fine the defendant be committed for a certain length of time, it is not defective for failing to provide that he may be released at any time from committal upon payment of the fine, although that right is secured to him.⁴

13. Appeal.⁵

14. Search, Seizure, etc.⁶

15. Civil Damages, Remedies and Proceedings.⁷

v. State, 11 Tex. App. 476; Reg. v. Grannis, 5 Mal. L. Rep. 153.

1. Van Noy v. State, 14 Tex. App. 69. See Ritcher v. State, 63 Miss. 304; People v. Cowles, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 577; Akin v. State, 14 Tex. App. 142; Marxhausen v. Com., 29 Gratt. (Va.) 853.

2. Ex parte Tuicher, 69 Iowa 393; State v. Shaw, 23 Iowa 316; Reg. v. Coulter, 4 Man. L. Rep. 309.

Where a defendant is convicted under several counts of an indictment for selling intoxicating liquors, it is erroneous in the judgment to fix a day and hour when the imprisonment shall commence, under each count; but the sentence to imprisonment should be for a specified number of days, under each count, upon which a conviction is had; the imprisonment under each succeeding count to commence when it ends under the preceding one, without fixing the day and hour of any. Johnson v. People, 83 Ill. 431.

Where a defendant was convicted on two counts of an indictment for selling liquor to one in the habit of getting intoxicated, the punishment being ten days' imprisonment for each offence, it was held to be error to render judgment of imprisonment for twenty days in gross. The imprisonment awarded should be for a specified time under each count, the time under the second to commence when the first ends. Mullinix v. People, 76 Ill. 211.

3. Harris v. Com., 40 Mass. (23 Pick.) 280; State v. Sannerud, 38 Minn. 229; State v. Olson, 38 Minn. 150; State v. Peterson, 38 Minn. 143.

4. State v. Plainfield, 44 N. J. L. (15 Vr.) 118.

One convicted of selling spirituous liquors cannot be discharged by the court with directions that execution for the fine and costs issue against his property. State v. Robinson, 17 N.H. 263.

A common seller of intoxicating liquors, sentenced to imprisonment and payment of fine and costs under St. 1855, ch. 215, § 17, is not entitled to be discharged as a poor convict under Rev. St., ch. 145, § 3, until after three months from the expiration of the time for which he was sentenced to be imprisoned. Gannon v. Adams, 74 Mass. (8 Gray) 395.

Where one has been fined for violating an injunction issued under the prohibitory liquor law, he may, upon default in paying the fine, be imprisoned, under the general provision of Code, § 4509 and under the laws of 1884, ch. 143, § 12, such person cannot avail himself of the benefits of Code, § 4611, which permits a poor person, after having been imprisoned thirty days for failure to pay a fine in a criminal case, to be released upon giving his note for the amount of the fine, together with a written schedule of his property. Hanks v. Workman, 69 Iowa 600.

5. For a full discussion of the subject of "appeal from a judgment" of conviction for a violation of liquor laws, see APPEAL, vol. 1, p. 616, and CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, vol. 4, pp. 882-886.

6. See tit. SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.

7. See CIVIL DAMAGE ACTS, vol. 3, p. 257.

INTOXICATION AS A DEFENCE TO CONTRACTS.

INTOXICATION AS A DEFENCE TO CONTRACTS—(See also EQUITY; CONTRACTS; RESCISSION).

1. Express Contracts, 773.
2. Implied Contracts, 777.
3. When Equity Will Give Relief, 778.

1. To an Express Contract.—An express contract entered into when the obligor is in a state of intoxication so as to deprive him of the exercise of his understanding, is voidable; and the party may, for that cause, avoid it, although the intoxication was voluntary, and not procured through the circumvention of the other party.¹

1. Barrett v. Buxton, 2 Aikens (Vt.) 167; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 691; Ewell's Leading Cas. 728. According to Beverley's Case, 4 Co. 123 b, a party cannot set up intoxication in avoidance of his contract under any circumstance. Although LORD COKE admits that a drunkard, for the time of his drunkenness, is non compos mentis, yet he says, "his drunkenness shall not extenuate his act or offence, but doth aggravate his offence; and doth not derogate from his act, as well touching his life, lands and goods, as anything that concerns him." He makes no distinction between civil and criminal cases, nor intimates any qualification of his doctrine, on the ground of the drunkenness being procured by the contrivance of another who would profit by it. His doctrine is general and without any qualification whatever; and, connected with it, he holds that a party shall not be allowed to stultify himself, or disable himself, on the ground of idiocy or lunacy. The latter proposition is supported, it is true, by two or three cases in the Year Books, during the reign of Edward III and Henry VI, by Littleton, § 405, who lived in the time of Henry VI, and by Stroud v. Marshall, Cro. Eliz. 398, and Cross v. Andrews, Cro. Eliz. 622. Sir William Blackstone, however, who traces the progress of this notion, as he calls it, considers it contrary to reason, and shows that such was not the ancient common law. The register, it appears, contains a writ for the alienor himself, to recover lands aliened by him during his insanity; and Britton states that insanity is a sufficient plea for a man to avoid his own bond. Fitzherbert also contends "that it stands with reason that a man should show how he was visited by the act of God with infirmity, by which he lost his memory and discretion for a time." Blackstone considers the rule as having been handed down from the loose cases in the times of Edward III and Henry VI, founded upon the absurd reason that a man cannot know, in his sanity, what he did when he was non compos mentis, and he says, latter opinions, feeling the inconvenience of the rule, have in many points endeavored to restrain it. 2 Bl. Com. 291. In Thompson v. Leach, 3 Mad. 391, it was held that the deed of a man non compos mentis was not merely voidable, but was void ab initio, for want of capacity to bind himself or his property. In Yates v. Boen, 2 Stra. 1104, the defendant pleaded non est factum to debt on articles, and, upon the trial, offered to give lunacy in evidence. The chief justice at first thought it ought not to be admitted, upon the rule in Beverley's case, that a man shall not stultify himself; but on the authority of Smith v. Carr, in 1728, where CHIEF BARON PENGELLEY, in a like case, admitted it; and, on considering the case of Thompson v. Leach, the chief justice suffered it to be given in evidence, and the plaintiff became nonsuit. The most approved elementary writers and compilers of the law refer to this case, and lay it down as settled law that lunacy may be given in evidence on the plea of non est factum by the party himself; and it is said to have been so ruled by LORD MANSFIELD in Chamberlain of London v. Evans, mentioned in note to 1 Chitt. Pl. 470.

In this country, it has been decided in many instances that a party may take advantage of his own disability, and avoid his contract, by showing that he was insane and incapable of contracting. Rice v. Peet, 15 Johns. 503; Webster v. Woodford, 3 Day 90. These decisions are founded in the law of nature and of justice, and go upon the plain and true ground that the contract of a party non compos mentis is absolutely void, and not binding upon him. The rule in Beverley's case as to lunacy, therefore, is not only opposed to the ancient common law and numerous authorities of great weight, but to the principles of natural right and justice, and cannot be recognized as law; and it is apprehended that the case is to be as little regarded as authority in respect to intoxication, which rests essentially upon the same principle.

INTOXICATION AS A DEFENCE TO CONTRACTS.

It is laid down in Buller's N. P. 172, and appears to have been decided by LORD HOLT in Cole v. Robbins, there cited, that the defendant may give in evidence, under the plea of non est factum to a bond, that he was made to sign it when he was so drunk that he did not know what he did; and in Pitt v. Smith, 3 Camp. Cas. 33, where an objection was made to an attesting witness being asked whether the defendant was not in a complete state of intoxication when he executed the agreement, LORD ELLENBOROUGH says: "You have alleged that there was an agreement between the parties; but there was no agreement if the defendant was intoxicated in the manner supposed. He had not an agreeing mind. Intoxication is good evidence upon a plea of non est factum to a deed, of non concessit to a grant, and of non assumpsit to a promise." Chitty, Selwyn and Phillips lay down the same doctrine; and JUDGE SWIFT, in his digest, says that an agreement signed by a man in a complete state of intoxication is void. 1 Chitty Pl. 470; Selw. N. P. 563; 1 Phil. Ev. 128; 1 Swift's Dig. 173. In these various authorities it is laid down generally, and without any qualification, that drunkenness is a defence, and no intimation is made of any distinction, founded on the intoxication being procured by the party claiming the benefit of the contract. It is true that in Johnson v. Medlicott, 3 P. Wms. 130, that circumstance was considered essential to entitle the party to relief in equity against his contract. In Gore v. Gibson, 13 M. & W. 623, to an action by an endorsee against the endorser of a bill of exchange, the defendant pleaded that when he endorsed the bill he was so intoxicated, and thereby so entirely deprived of sense, understanding and the use of his reason, as to be unable to comprehend the meaning, nature or effect of the endorsement, or to contract thereby; of which the plaintiff at the time of the endorsement had notice. Held, to be a good answer to the action, and not to amount to an argumentative traverse of the endorsement.

To the same effect see 1 Para. on Cont. 384; 1 Chitty on Cont. (11th Am. ed.) 192; Wald's Pollock on Cont. 49, 87; Kent's Com. (13th ed.) 451; Wade v. Calvert, 2 Mill. Const. (S. Car.) 27; Ring v. Huntington, 1 Mill. Const. (S. Car.) 162; Molton v. Camroux, 4 Exch. 17; Yates v. Boen, 5 Str. 1104; Fenton v. Holloway, 1 Stark. 126; Burroughs v. Richman, 1 Green (N. J.) 233; Remicker v. Smith, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 421; Foot v. Tewksbury, 2 Vt. 97; Reynolds v. Waller, 1 Wash. (Va.) 164; Jenners v. Howard, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 240; Harbison v. Lemon, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 51; Reinskopf v. Ragge, 37 Ind. 207; Curtis v. Hall, 1 Southard (N. J.) 361; State Bank v. McCoy, 69 Pa. St. 204; Duncan v. McCullough, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 484; Clark v. Caldwell, 6 Watts (Pa.) 130; Taylor v. Patrick, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 168; Prentice v. Achorn, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 30; Rice v. Peet, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 503; Rutherford v. Ruff, 4 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 364; Williams v. Inabnet, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 343; Foss v. Hildreth, 10 Allen (Mass.) 76; Walker v. Davis, 1 Gray (Mass.) 506; Drummond v. Hopper, 4 Harr. (Del.) 327; Wigglesworth v. Steers, Hen. & Munf. (Va.) 70; Dorr v. Munsell, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 430; Seymour v. Delancy, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 445; Hutchinson v. Brown, 1 Clarke (N. Y.) 408; French's Heirs v. French, 8 Ohio 214; Broadwater v. Darne, 10 Mo. 277; White v. Cox, 3 Hayw. (N. Car.) 79; Lazell v. Pinnick, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 247; Newell v. Fisher, 19 Miss. 431; Pickett v. Sutter, 5 Cal. 412; Phelan v. Gardner, 43 Cal. 306; Mansfield v. Watson, 2 Iowa 111; Holland v. Barnes, 53 Ala. 83; Donnelson v. Posey, 13 Ala. 752; Freeman v. Staats, 8 N. J. Eq. 814.

If one bids at a public sale of real estate and has the property struck down to him, and he afterwards, when in such a state of drunkenness as to suspend the use of reason and understanding, and not to know what he is doing, executes a written contract complying with the terms of the sale and pays a portion of the purchase money, he may avoid the contract and in an action of assumpsit recover the portion of the purchase money paid. Bush v. Breinig, 113 Pa. St. 310.

But the fact that a man possessed of reason and the power of reflection is frequently and even daily intoxicated is not sufficient to invalidate a clear and explicit contract, deliberately made by him on the best terms, and obtained after some effort, with a person who is not proved to have taken advantage of a period of intoxication, which he subsequently declares to be satisfactory, and which is fully executed by the other party. Reinicker v. Smith, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 421.

INTOXICATION AS A DEFENCE TO CONTRACTS.

An assignor of insurance policies may maintain an action to recover the policies or their value on the ground that he was incapacitated by drunkenness to make the assignments, without first having the assignments set aside by a suit in equity. Bursinger v. Bank of Watertown, 67 Wis. 75.

It is a defence in a suit upon a mortgage that the defendant was so intoxicated at the time of signing the same as to be incapable of executing it; and it is not controverted by an allegation in reply that defendant kept and used the goods for which the instrument was given, the claim being upon the written instrument and not for goods sold. It is necessary to show a ratification of the instrument by defendant when sober and in his right mind. Reinskopf v. Ragge, 39 Ind. 207.

Contract Voidable, Not Void.—Although in some of the English cases it is implied that where a party enters into a contract in such a state of drunkenness as not to know what he is doing, his contract is wholly void, in the United States the contract is held to be voidable merely at his option, and capable of ratification by the intoxicated party on becoming sober. See note to Gore v. Gibson, Ewell's Leading Cases, 738; Chitty on Contracts (11th Am. ed.), 192; Wald's Pollock on Contracts, note, 92; 2 Kent's Com. 452; Story on Cont., § 87; Joest v. Williams, 42 Ind. 565; Broadwater v. Darne, 10 Mo. 277; Carpenter v. Rogers, 28 N. W. Rep. (Mich.) 156; Eaton v. Perry, 29 Mo. 96; Mansfield v. Watson, 2 Iowa 111; Allen v. Berryhill, 27 Iowa 534; Musselman v. Cravens, 47 Ind. 1; Mathews v. Baxter, L. R., 8 Exch. 132; Bates v. Ball, 72 Ill. 108. But see 1 Parsons on Cont. 385, note, where after citing authorities the author says: "Some of the above authorities certainly seem to be inconsistent with the principle that a person in a state of intoxication has no agreeing mind, and therefore there never was a contract between the parties. We think this principle, however, the true one." So it cannot be impeached by third persons so long as the party who was intoxicated acquiesces, but it may be avoided by his legal representatives. Wigglesworth v. Steers, 1 Hen. & Munf. (Va.) 70.

Rescission and Ratification of Contracts.—A contract voidable by reason of the incapacity of one of the parties on account of intoxication, may be rescinded by him within a reasonable time after becoming sufficiently sober to know the character of his contract. Cummings v. Henry, 10 Ind. 109; and if he defends against the contract on such a ground, he must show that he has rescinded it by restoring whatever was received as the consideration thereof. Joest v. Williams, 42 Ind. 565; Williams v. Inabnet, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 343; Mathews v. Baxter, L. R., 8 Exch. 132.

The defence in a suit upon a mortgage that the defendant was so intoxicated at the time of signing his name as to be incapable of executing it, is not controverted by an allegation in reply that defendant kept and used the goods for which the instrument was given, the claim being upon the written instrument, and not for goods sold. It is necessary to show a ratification of the instrument by defendant when sober and in his sound mind. Reinskopf v. Ragge, 37 Ind. 207.

Degree of Drunkenness.—To render the transaction voidable, he who sets up intoxication as a defence should have been so drunk as to have drowned reason, memory and judgment, and impaired his mental faculties to an extent that would render him non compos mentis for the time being, especially where there is no pretence that any person connected with the transaction aided in or procured his drunkenness. Bates v. Ball, 72 Ill. 108; Birdsong v. Birdsong, 2 Head (Tenn.) 289. It is not alone the influence of liquor which avoids a contract, but it must be shown to exist to such extent as to seriously impair the reasoning faculties. Pickett v. Sutter, 5 Cal. 412; Cavender v. Wadingham, 5 Mo. App. 457. At the time of making the contract the party seeking to avoid it must have been in such a state of drunkenness as not to know what he was doing. Johns v. Fretchey, 39 Md. 258. The proof must show insanity. Schramm v. O'Connor, 98 Ill. 541. Evidence of a party's condition several hours after the settlement sought to be set aside on the ground of intoxication is admissible as tending to show his condition at the time the settlement was made. Phelan v. Gard-

INTOXICATION AS A DEFENCE TO CONTRACTS.

According to this rule the maker of a promissory note, as between himself and the payee, may avoid it if he can show total intoxication at the time of its execution.¹ This defence may also be set up against those taking the note with a knowledge of the circumstances under which it was made;² but on grounds of public policy and the necessities of commerce, the defence of drunkenness in the maker cannot be set up against the innocent holder of a negotiable note.³

If the party made himself drunk for the purpose of entering ner, 43 Cal. 306. Where a party to a contract is intoxicated at the time of making a contract to the extent only that he does not clearly understand the business, this does not render his contract void or voidable, where no advantage has been gained by dealing with him. Henry v. Ritenour, 31 Ind. 136. See also Belcher v. Belcher, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 121; Wright v. Fisher, 32 N. W. Rep. 605; and where the maker of a promissory note was not so intoxicated at the time he made the note but that he remembered the act and accompanying circumstances the next morning, held, that he could not set up as a defence, in the action upon the note by a bona fide holder, the plea of intoxication. Caulkins v. Fry, 35 Conn. 170.

Where a note is signed by a person who if intoxicated, was yet aware of what he was doing, and not deceived as to the identity of the paper signed, it is not void, and any defence to it must rest on fraud and not on absolute incapacity. Miller v. Finley, 26 Mich. 248. But even if the party was not wholly intoxicated, drunkenness can be set up as a defence only where it was brought about by the other party. Burroughs v. Richman, 1 Green (N. J. L.) 233; 23 Am. Dec. 717.

In some of the English cases there appears to be a distinction between the effect of an extreme state of intoxication that deprives a man of his reason, and the mere inability to form a free and rational judgment of the effect of the contract. In the former case the contract would be wholly void, and in the latter only voidable if known to the other party. See Cooke v. Clayworth, 18 Ves. 12; Wald's Pollock on Cont. 91.

One reduced to such extreme debility by intoxication as to be unable to rise, or sit up in bed unless supported, or to hold a pen and make a mark unless the pen and hand are held for him, can no more execute a conveyance of his property than if intoxicated. Wilson v. Bigger, 7 Watts & S. (Pa.) 111. The same rule applies to parties whose minds are enfeebled by habitual intoxication. Birdsong v. Birdsong, 2 Head (Tenn.) 289.

A Question for the Jury.—It is a question for the jury to decide whether the party entering to the contract was incompetent on account of his intoxication. Cummings v. Henry, 10 Ind. 109; Prentice v. Achorn, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 30; Berkley v. Cannon, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 136.

1. Gore v. Gibson, 13 Mees. & W. 623.

2. Gore v. Gibson, 13 Mees. & W. 623; Pitt v. Smith, 3 Camp. 33; Molton v. Camrony, 2 Exch. 487; Wigglesworth v. Steers, 1 Hen. & Mun. (Va.) 70; Jenners v. Howard, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 240; Clark v. Caldwell, 6 Watts (Pa.) 139; Miller v. Finley, 26 Mich. 248; Daniels on Neg. Inst., § 214.

3. State Bank v. McCoy, 69 Pa. St. 204. In this case the court say: "The note of an insane person or of one perfectly imbecile, which he has been induced to sign by fraud and imposition, is void in the hands of an innocent endorsee; it does not follow that a note given by a person in a state of intoxication is void in the hands of a holder for value without notice of the maker's condition when it was given." There is this difference between the cases. Insanity or total imbecility is a permanent state or condition of the mind, disabling one from taking care of himself. Drunkenness is a temporary disability voluntarily produced, and when men thus temporarily deprive themselves of the use of their reason, and voluntarily expose themselves to fraud and imposition, the law may wisely refuse to treat them with the same tenderness as it does those unfortunate beings who are deprived of their understanding by some providential dispensation; and it may properly hold them to a different into agreements and then avoiding them, the fraudulent intent antedating his drunkenness would render it incompetent for him to avail of the defence.¹

INTOXICATION AS A DEFENCE TO CONTRACTS.

2. Implied Contracts.—With regard to contracts which it is sought to avoid on the ground of intoxication, there is a distinction between express and implied contracts. In many cases the law does not require an actual agreement between the parties, but implies a contract from the circumstances; in fact, the law itself makes the contract for the parties. Thus in actions for money had and received to the plaintiff's use, or money paid by him to the defendant's use, the action may lie against the defendant, even though he may have protested against such a contract. So, a tradesman who supplies a drunken man with necessities may recover the price of them if the party keeps them when he becomes sober, although a count for goods bargained and sold would fail.² The action should not be brought upon the security for goods sold unless it has been ratified.³

measure of responsibility for the consequences of their acts. If a man voluntarily deprives himself of the use of his reason by strong drink, why should he not be responsible to an innocent party for the acts which he performs when in that condition? It seems to me that he ought, on the principle that when a loss must be borne by one of two innocent persons, it shall be borne by him who occasioned it. But there is another and controlling reason for holding the maker liable to the endorsee in such a case, founded on principles of public policy and the necessities of commerce. The exigencies of trade require that there should be no unnecessary impediments to the ready circulation and currency of negotiable paper, but that it should be left free to pass from hand to hand like bank notes, and perform the functions of money untrammelled by any equities or defences between the original parties. If, then, it should be held that the drunkenness of the maker avoids his note in the hands of the endorsee, it is obvious that such a rule would greatly clog and embarrass the circulation of commercial paper, for no man could safely take it without ascertaining the condition of the maker or drawer when it was given, although there might be nothing suspicious in its appearance or unusual in the character of the signature. It is evident that it would be a less evil to exclude the defence of drunkenness, though it might occasionally work individual hardship, than to clog the circulation of commercial paper, to the great inconvenience of the public, by admitting such a defence. If fraud and imposition in obtaining a note will not avoid it in the hands of an innocent endorsee, because such a rule would render commercial paper less valuable and convenient as a medium of exchange, why should the drunkenness of the maker? Why should drunkenness be a defence if there has been no fraud or imposition? And if there has, and this is the ground of defence, why should it not avoid the note in the one case as well as in the other?" See also McSparran v. Neelev, 91 Pa. St. 17; Miller v. Finley, 26 Mich. 248.

But see Daniels on Neg. Inst. (3rd ed.), § 214, where it is said that, "if the drunkenness were so complete as to suspend all rational thought, the better opinion is that any instrument signed by the party would be utterly void even in the hands of a bona fide holder without notice, for, although it may have been the party's own fault, that such an aberration of mind was produced, when produced, it suspended for the time being his capacity to consent, which is the first essential to a contract." Citing Parsons N. & B. 151.

1. 1 Daniels on Neg. Inst., § 215.

2. Gore v. Gibson, 13 Mees. & W. 623; Richardson v. Strong, 13 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 106; 1 Parsons on Contracts (7th ed.), 385; 1 Story on Cont. (5th ed.), § 86.

3. A publican cannot recover for beer furnished to third persons, by the order of an individual who has previously become intoxicated by drinking in his

INTOXICATION AS A DEFENCE TO CONTRACTS.

3. When Equity Will Give Relief.—In general courts of equity, as a matter of public policy, do not incline, on the one hand, to lend their assistance to a person who has obtained an agreement or deed from another in a state of intoxication, and, on the other hand, they are equally unwilling to assist the intoxicated party to get rid of his agreement or deed merely on the ground of his intoxication at the time. They will leave the parties to their ordinary remedies at law, unless there is some fraudulent contrivance or some imposition practiced.¹

house. Brandon v. Ord, 3 C. & P. 440. Reinskopf v. Ragge, 37 Ind. 207.

1. Story's Eq. Jur. (13th ed.), § 231. In Cooke v. Clayworth, 18 Ves. Jur. 12, SIR WILLIAM GRANT states the rule in substantially the same language, and says further: "I say merely upon that ground [intoxication]; as, if there was, as LORD HARDWICKE expresses it in Cory v. Cory, 1 Ves. 19, any unfair advantage made of his situation, or, as SIR JOSEPH JEKYLL says in Johnson v. Medlicott, 3 P. Will. 130, note a, any contrivance or management to draw him into drink, he might be a proper object of relief in a court of equity."

In 2 Kent's Com. (13th ed.) 452, note c, it is said that the rule in equity is, that the court will not interfere to assist a person merely on the ground of intoxication; but if any unfair advantage has been taken of the person's intoxication, it will render all proper aid.

In Newland on Contracts, p. 635, it is said: "Though a man was in a state of drunkenness when he entered into an agreement, equity will not set it aside on that ground alone, especially if it be reasonable; as, for instance, to settle family disputes."

In Hotchkiss v. Fortson, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 67, it was held that where one takes advantage of another to induce him to purchase land at an exorbitant price, the contract will not be set aside. Followed in Belcher v. Belcher, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 121.

To the same effect, see Cory v. Cory, 1 Ves. Sen. 19; Johnson v. Medlicott, 3 P. Wms. 130, n.; Stockley v. Stockley, 1 Ves. & B. 23; Crane v. Conklin, Saxton (N. J.) 346; Rich v. Sydenham, 1 Ch. Cas. 202; Hutchinson v. Tindall, 2 Green (N. J.) 357; Shaw v. Thackery, 1 Sm. & G. 540; Hutchinson v. Tindall 3 N. J. Eq. 357 (where a deed of conveyance, made without consideration, the grantor being intoxicated at the time, was relieved against in equity); Campbell v. Ketcham, 1 Pibb (Ky.)

406; Mansfield v. Watson, 2 Iowa 115; White v. Cox, 3 Hayw. (Tenn.) 79. In Spiers v. Higgins, decided at the rolls in 1814, and cited in Barrett v. Buxton, 2 Aiken (Conn.) 164, a bill filed for specific performance of an agreement which was entered into with the defendant when drunk, was dismissed with costs, although the defendant did not contribute to make the defendant drunk. See also O'Connor v. Rempt, 29 N. J. Eq. 156; Storrs v. Scangale, 48 Mich. 387; Lavette v. Sage, 29 Conn. 577; Morris v. Nixon, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 579.

On the other hand there are authorities which support the proposition that equity will give relief where the drunkenness is so excessive as to deprive a man of his reason, without considering whether he was drawn into drink or unfair advantage taken.

In 1 Maddock's Ch. Prac. the author says: "It never can be said that a person absolutely drunk has that freedom of mind generally esteemed necessary to a deliberate consent to a contract. The reasoning faculty is for a time deposited. At law it has been held that upon a plea of non est factum the defendant may give in evidence that they made him sign the bond when he was so drunk that he did not know what he did. So a will made by a drunken man is invalid. And will a court of equity be less indulgent to human frailty? It seems to be a fraud to make a contract with a man who is so drunk as to be incapable of deliberation."

Nor is the language of JUSTICE STORY altogether favorable to the former position. He says: "But to set aside any act or contract on account of drunkenness, it is not sufficient that the party is under undue excitement from liquor. It must rise to that degree which may be called excessive drunkenness, where the party is utterly deprived of the use of his reason and understanding; for in such a case there can in no just sense

INTRINSIC—INTROMISSION—INTRUDE—INTRUSION.

INTRINSIC.—See note 1.

INTROMISSION.—A term signifying dealings in stocks, goods or cash of a principal coming into the hands of his agent, to be accounted for by the agent to his principal.²

INTRUDE.—See note 3.

INTRUSION.—The entry of a stranger after a particular estate of freehold is determined before him in remainder or reversion.⁴

be said to be a serious and deliberate consent on his part, and without this no contract or other act can or ought to be binding by the law of nature. If there be not that degree of excessive drunkenness, then courts of equity will not interfere at all unless there has been some contrivance or management to draw the party into drink, or some unfair advantage taken of his intoxication to obtain an unreasonable bargain or benefit from him." And in a note: "SIR JOSEPH JEKYLL is said to have intimated an opinion that the having been in drink, is not any reason to relieve a man against any deed or agreement gained from him to encourage drunkenness. Secus, if, through the management or contrivance of him who gained the deed, etc., the party from whom the deed has been gained was drawn into drink. Johnson v. Medlicott, 1734, cited, 3 P. Will. 130, note a. But this distinction seems wholly unsatisfactory; for in each case it is the fraud of the party who obtained the deed or agreement which constitutes the ground of declaring it invalid; and the fraud is in morals and common sense the same, whether the drunken party has been enticed into the drunkenness, or becomes the victim of the cunning of another, who takes advantage of his mental incapacity. The case of Cook v. Clayworth, 18 Ves. 12, requires no such distinction where the circumstances indicate fraud. In this last case, SIR WILLIAM GRANT said: 'At to that extreme state of intoxication that deprives a man of his reason, I apprehend that even at law it would invalidate a deed obtained from him while in that condition.' See also Cole v. Robins, Buller, N.P. 172; Wigglesworth v. Steers, 1 Hen. & Munf. (Va.) 70." Story's Eq. Jur., § 231, and note.

In Hutchinson v. Brown, 1 Clark (N. Y.) 408, it was held that the intoxication of a contracting party is no ground for setting aside the contract, where it was not induced by the other party, unless it is habitual, so as to derange the mind or subject it to frequent fits of derangement, or is so great as to deprive the party of his reason.

In French v. French, 8 Ohio 214, it was held directly that a contract made in such a state of intoxication as to deprive a party of his discretion and ordinary judgment, will be set aside in equity, although the other party had no agency in producing the intoxication; and in Willcox v. Jackson, 1 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 518, the rule is laid down that to justify the setting aside of an act or the cancellation of a contract on the ground of drunkenness, the intoxication must be such as to deprive the party of his reason and understanding; but where one party procures the intoxication of another, in order to take an undue advantage of him, a much less degree of intoxication will warrant a court in declaring a contract fraudulent and void.

1. "The 'intrinsic value' of a thing is its true, inherent and essential value, not depending upon accident, place or person, but the same everywhere and to everyone. Bank notes have, indeed, no intrinsic value." Bank of the State v. Ford, 5 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 698; and see L. R. Junc. Ry. v. Woodruff, 5 S. W. Rep. 793.

2. Stewart v. McKean, 29 Eng. L. & Eq. 391.

3. This word as applied to paupers who have come into a parish and become chargeable, may apply to casual poor, and does not show that they remain there. Reg. v. Willarts, 7 S. B. 516.

4. 3 Bl. Com. 196; Co. Litt. 277 a; Challis on R. P. 182; Hulick v. Scovill, 9 Ill. 170; Birthingright v. Hall, 3 Munf. (Va.) 540. "This entry and interposition of the stranger differs from an abatement in this: that an abatement is always to the prejudice of the heir or immediate devisee; an intrusion is always to the prejudice of him in remainder or reversion." 3 Bl. Com. 169. After an intrusion the remainderman or reversioner has no longer a seisin in law, but only a right of entry. Challis

INVALID—INVASION—INVEIGLE—INVENTION.

INVALID.—Having no force, effect or efficacy; void; null.¹

INVASION.—A hostile force coming upon a state from without,² but a state may be said to be invaded when it is beset by a domestic rebellion.³

INVEIGLE—(See ABDUCTION; KIDNAPPING).—To persuade to something bad; to wheedle; to entice; to seduce; to beguile.⁴

INVENTION—(In the Patent Law).

- I. Definition, 781.
- II. Definition of Mechanical Skill, 781.
- III. Tests to Distinguish Inventive and Mechanical Skill, 781.
- IV. Mechanical Skill Not Patentable, 782.
- V. Means of Distinguishing "Inventive" from "Mechanical Skill," 783.
 1. By an Examination of the Device Itself, 783.
 - a. Change in Form, 783.
 - b. Change of Material, 785.
 - c. Changes in Size, 787.
 - d. Changes in Location of Parts, 788.
 - e. Changes in the Number of Parts, 789.
 - f. Substitution of a Device for Its Equivalent, 789.
 - g. Double Use—Machine or Device, 790.
 - h. Process, Application of Doctrine "Double Use" to, 792.
 - i. Composition of Matter; Application of Doctrine of Double Use, 793.
 - k. Limitations of Doctrine of Double Use, 794.
 - l. Combination and Aggregation, 795.
 - m. Putting Two Old Things Side by Side Without Change of Function, 799.
 - n. Mere Carrying Forward of an Old Idea, 800.
2. Result as Evidence of Invention, 801.
 - a. Novelty and Utility as Evidence of Invention, 801.
 - b. General and Extensive Use of a Device as Evidence of Invention, 803.
 - c. Ineffectual Attempts of Former Inventors, 804.
- VI. Amount of Invention Employed in Contriving Device Unimportant, 805.
 1. Accidental Making of a Device; When Invention, 806.
- VII. Distinction Between Invention and Unpatentable Discovery, 806.
 1. Definition of Unpatentable Discovery, 806.
 2. Subjects of Discovery, 806.
 - a. When Principle Unpatentable, 806.
 - b. How Far Principle May Become Patentable, 807.
 - c. "Effect" or "Result," 809.
- VIII. Joint Invention, 809.
 1. Definition, 809.
 2. Suggestions; When Suggestor Is Inventor, 810.
 3. Right of Mechanic Who Constructs Machine to be Considered Inventor, 811.

on R. P. 182. He may, accordingly, purge the intrusion by a formal and peaceable entry, thus making himself complete owner and capable of conveying from himself either by descent or purchase. Birbright v. Hall, 3 Munf. (Va.) 540.

1. State v. Casteel (Ind.), 110 Ind. 174.

2. 1 Bish. on Cr. L. 161 n; Const. U. S., art. 4, § 4.

3. 1 Bish. on Cr. L. 49; and see Insurance Co. v. Boon, 95 U. S. 117.

4. Worcester, quoted in United States v. Ancarola, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 423; s. c., 1 Fed. Rep. 676, and People v. De Leon, 13 N. Y. St. Rep. 588.

As used in an act against kidnapping, or abduction, "to inveigle involves no physical force, but such mental control over the person inveigled as to induce him to do it, and if this be accomplished by falsehood, by deceit, misrepresentation, or device, whatever it may be which captivates the mind, the crime is committed. The act of the appellant may be briefly stated as follows: with an intent to induce the complainant to leave this State for a wicked purpose, he made false representations which were believed to be true and relied upon, and being relied upon resulted in her departure. She was thus enticed, thus inveigled." The word involves consent. People v. DeLeon, 13 N. Y. St. Rep. 588; s. c., 11 Cent. Rep. 883.

I. DEFINITION.¹—Invention, in the sense of the patent law, is the finding out, contriving or creating of something not existing and not known before² by the action of the intellect.³ It is defined as the work of the head as distinguished from the work of the hands,⁴ and to be the intuitive faculty of the mind put forth in search for new results or new methods,⁵ the indication of genius and the production of a new idea.⁶

II. MECHANICAL SKILL—DEFINITION.—Is the suggestion of common experience which arises spontaneously and by necessity of common reasoning in the minds of those who have become acquainted with the circumstances with which they have to deal,⁷ and consists in the modification of an inventive idea and making it more practical,⁸ and doing what would suggest itself to the common mind.⁹

III. TESTS TO DISTINGUISH INVENTION FROM MECHANICAL SKILL.—The true test whether a device is the result of invention or Under an act "to protect persons of foreign birth against forcible constraint or involuntary servitude," influence brought to bear on parents of children in Italy to induce them to consent that their children should come to this country with a man to earn money for him on the street, is inveiglement. "To inveigle, or persuade, or entice necessarily implies that the person is persuaded or enticed, and yields assent as the result of the persuading or enticing." United States v. Ancarola, 17 Blatchf. 423; s. c., 1 Fed. Rep. 676.

1. Invention and discovery denote sometimes the mental process of the inventor or discoverer, sometimes the thing in which the mental process results; sometimes, moreover, in the same argument or opinion, if not in the same sentence, the word "invention" is used; first, to signify the act of inventing, and then to signify the thing invented." Merwin Patentability of Inventions (1st ed. 1883), p. 1.

Distinction Between Form and Idea.—The distinction between the form and the idea is, however, not entirely neglected, these phrases are used as describing the thing invented "embodied conception." Bischoff v. Wethered, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 812; and the phrase "material reflex and embodiment." Smith v. Nichols, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 118.

2. Ransom v. The Mayor of N. Y., 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 252; Conover v. Roach, 4 Fisher Pat. Cas. 12.

3. Ransom v. The Mayor of N. Y., 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 252.

"Mechanical Operation."—Invention consists primarily in finding out what mechanical operation is necessary to produce the practical result aimed at; and when such operation is hit upon, the mechanical work is easy.

In looking at the completed thing, the mechanical operation is there, but the inventor did not have in advance before him the coacted mechanical operation. Wooster v. Blake, 8 Fed. Rep. 429. Invention is something more than mere improvement; it must involve something more than what is obvious to persons skilled in the art to which the device relates. Pearce v. Mulford, 102 U. S. 112; s. c., 18 Pat. Office Gaz. 1223.

4. Blandy v. Griffith, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas., U. S.

5. Hollister v. Benedict, 113 U. S. 659. "Creating what had not existed before, or bringing to light what lay hidden from vision." Hollister v. Benedict, 113 U. S. 59.

6. N. Y. Belting & Packing Co. v. Magowan, 27 Fed. Rep. 362. An invention is a mental result. New York B. & P. Co. v. Magowan, 27 Fed. Rep. 362.

7. Hollister v. Benedict, 113 U. S. 59.

8. N. Y. Belting & Packing Co. v. Magowan, 27 Fed. Rep. 312.

9. Lorrillard v. Ridgeway, 16 Pat. Office Gaz. 1237; s. c., 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 564.

Instances of What Is Not Invention.—Merely applying better workmanship, Beatty v. Hodges, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 381; making an arrangement which simply economizes space and gives cheapness to the construction, Knox v. Murtha, 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 205; or doing what would suggest itself to any mechanical skill is whether an ordinary mechanic would make it without other suggestion than his knowledge of his art.¹

IV. MECHANICAL SKILL NOT PATENTABLE.—The product of mechanical skill is never patentable.²

skilled mechanic who had the devices before him, Larabee v. Cantlin, Taney Dec. 180, is mere mechanical skill.

1. True Test of Invention.—The true test of an invention is not whether an ordinary mechanic can make the machine, if it is suggested, but whether he would make the machine without suggestion, by means of an ordinary knowledge. Woodman v. Stimpson, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 98.

Mechanic Chargeable with Knowledge of His Art.—An intelligent mechanic is chargeable with a knowledge of the state of the art in relation to the subject upon which he is called to exercise his skill. Treadwell v. Parrott, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 124; s. c., 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 364.

Standard of Mechanical Skill Constantly Rising.—The standard of skill is being constantly raised. The standard of invention is, as a necessary consequence, correspondingly raised. The standard of the date of the invention is that by which the test is to be made. Wilcox v. Bookwalter, 39 Pat. Office Gaz. 1200; s. c., 31 Fed. Rep. 224.

2. Perfection Window Cleaner Co. v. Bosley, 2 Fed. Rep. 574.

If, with the knowledge that the public then had, it required no invention, but simply the ordinary skill and ingenuity of the mechanic, to produce these results; in other words, if the inventive faculty was not at work at all, and was not needed to produce this alleged invention, then the patent would be void, because there would be no invention to be secured to these patentees. Ransom v. Mayor of New York, 1 Fish. 252. There is a limit beyond which mere changes cannot and ought not to receive the protection of letters patent. Kirby v. Beardsley, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 268.

Study Does Not Necessarily Show Invention.—Although the production of a patented device may have required study, effort and experiment, yet, if only mechanical skill was required to produce it, there is no invention. Butler v. Steckel, 27 Fed. Rep. 219.

The patentee claimed the combination of a jet bath and a movable reservoir, and both were old, and a jet bath had formerly been combined with a fixed reservoir. Held, that if the movable reservoir was combined with a jet bath in substantially the same manner as the fixed reservoir, or with no more changes than a mechanic of ordinary skill, with the old improvement, would adopt, the patent could not be sustained. Larabee v. Cortlain, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 5; s. c., 1 Taney Dec. 180. If the article might have been produced by mere mechanical skill only, the patent for it is void. Haselden v. Ogden, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 378. The thing patented, that the patent be valid, must be the product of original thought or inventive skill, and not a mere formal and mechanical change of what was old and well known. Stanley Works v. Sargent, 4 Fisher Pat. Cas. 443; s. c., 8 Blatchf. 545.

Examples of Noninvention.—Door knobs had formerly been made of metal fastened to a metallic shank and spindle by means of making a cavity larger at the bottom than at the top of the knob, and fastening in the shank by a screw formed in the knob by pouring in metal in a fused state; and clay knobs having been used previously, held, unless more ingenuity and skill in applying the old method of fastening the shank and the knob therein were required than were possessed by an ordinary mechanic acquainted with his business, there was an absence of that degree of skill and ingenuity which constitute essential elements of every invention. Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, 10 How. (U. S.) 509.

The mere turning down and cementing the edges of celluloid collars and cuffs in the form of a hem. Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Zylonite Novelty Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 617.

A strip of flexible material coated upon its outer face with abrasive material, and having said face made convex longitudinally and transversely, to be applied to the peripheries of wheels for finishing the heels and edges of boots and shoes. Buzzell v. Fifield, 7 Fed. Rep. 465.

A piece of flat wire pierced with holes through which spurs made of pieces of wire, with the ends cut diagonally, so as to leave them pointed, without further manipulation, were thrust. Washburn

V. MEANS OF DISTINGUISHING "INVENTIVE" FROM "MECHANICAL SKILL"—Means of Distinction.—The distinction between mechanical skill and "inventive genius" is recognized in all cases.¹ Which of them is employed in the production of a device is a question of fact² to be determined (1) by an examination of the device itself, or (2) by the history of the alleged invention.³

1. By Examination of the Device Itself—a. Change in Form.—Changes in the form of a machine which remains substantially the same,⁴ even such as produce a mechanical improve-

& Moen Mfg. Co. v. Haish, 4 Fed. Rep. 900. This case contains also decisions of the validity of several barbed wire fence patents.

An apparatus for heating water, circulating through coils of pipes, to be connected by two readily detachable tubes, with the boiler of a steam fire engine, and also with a tank, so that when the engine is not on duty the hot water will circulate through the boiler and keep the engine ready for immediate use, and through the tank keeping the apparatus in order when the engine was away, held involved invention. Brickhill v. Mayor etc. of City of N. Y., 7 Fed. Rep. 479.

Particular Cases in Which a Lack of Invention Is Considered to be Shown.—Knox v. Murtha, 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 174. Backus Water Motor Co. v. Tuerk, 17 Fed. Rep. 350. Griffith v. Holmes, 8 Fed. Rep. 154; s. c., 20 Pat. Office Gaz. 449; New York Bunging Co. v. Hoffman, 9 Fed. Rep. 199.

Cases in Which Invention Is Held Shown. Tuck v. Bramhill, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 400; Whipple v. Middlesex Co., 14 Fisher Pat. Cas. 41; Smith v. Nichols, 6 Fisher Pat. Cas. 61; Boston Electric Co. v. Fuller, 39 Pat. Office Gaz. 710; s. c., 29 Fed. Rep. 515; Blackman v. Hibbler, 17 Pat. Office Gaz. 107; s. c., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 333; s. c., 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 641; Double Point Tack Co. v. Two Rivers Mfg. Co., 18 Pat. Office Gaz. 683; s. c., 9 Bin (U. S.) 258; s. c., 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 465.

1. Reckendorfer v. Faber, 92 U. S. 347. Mechanical skill is one thing; invention is a different thing. Perfection of workmanship, however much it may increase the convenience, extend the use, or diminish expense, is not patentable. Reckendorfer v. Faber, 92 U. S. 347 (see page 357); Rubber Tip Pencil Co. v. Howard, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 498.

2. It is for the jury to say whether the patent is for such an article as requires and demands for its production the genius of an inventor as distinguished from the ordinary skill of a mechanic. Haselden v. Ogden, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 378. Suits for infringement of patent right in which the validity of a patent is generally on account of non-invention are almost entirely in equity, and an issue for a trial of facts is practically never called for. "As a matter of practice, courts of equity rarely, if ever, require a suit at law to be brought to establish the validity of a patent, preferring usually to hear and determine for themselves all questions that may arise affecting the validity of the same." Wise v. Grand Ave. Ry. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 277.

3. Hull v. Wiles, 2 Blatch. (U. S.) 194; Enterprise Mfg. Co. v. Sargent, 28 Fed. Rep. 185.

4. Under our law a patent cannot be granted for merely a change in form. The act of February 21st, 1793, § 2, so declared in express terms; and though this declaratory law was not re-enacted in the Patent act of 1836, it is a principle which necessarily makes a part of every system of laws granting patents for new inventions. Merely to change the form of a machine is the work of a constructor, not an inventor. Such a change cannot be deemed an invention. Winans v. Denmead, 15 How. U. S. 330.

"Formal Change and Change of Form."—The reader is cautioned that "formal change" and "change of form" are sometimes used synonymously for any change which does not amount to a patentable change and that the latter is sometimes used for change of shapes, strictly, as opposed to change of material, etc.

A slight variation in form is not sufficient to make a thing a patentable new article of manufacture. Hatch v. Moffit, 15 Fed. Rep. 252.

Improvement Must Embody Some Originality.—A formal change, such as ment¹ or make the device more useful² are the mere product of mechanical skill, and not of invention. But where the change of form introduces and employs other mechanical principles or natural powers or a new "mode of operation," and thus obtains a new and useful result;³ or where it works a successful result not before accomplished in a similar way in the art to which it is applied or in any other;⁴ or where form is the substance of the invention, and change of form is the invention,⁵ the changes are held to constitute invention.

a change in proportions, a mere change of form, or a different shape, is not, within the meaning of the patent law, a change sufficient to support a patent; the improvement upon the old contrivance must embody some originality, and something substantial in the change producing a more useful effect and operation. Hall v. Wiles, 2 Blatch. (U. S.) 194. Burdett v. Estey, 15 Blatch. (U. S.) 349; s. c., 15 Pat. Office Gaz. 877.

1. Smith v. Pierce, 2 Robb Pat. Cas. 13; s. c., 2 McLean (U. S.) 176.

2. If two machines be substantially the same, and operate in the same manner to produce the same result, though they differ in form, proportions and utility, they are the same in principle, and the one last discovered can have no other merit than to be an improvement of the other, but for which the inventor can have no patent. If the improvement be in principle, a patent may be obtained for the improvement. Evans v. Eaton, 1 Robb Pat. Cas. 193.

Mere Difference in Application of an Invention.—A mere difference in the manner and form of applying an invention, which is the same in principle with one previously used, will not justify a new patent. Delano v. Scott, 1 Gilp. 489; s. c., 1 Robb Pat. Cas. 700. Nor a mere change in form, the instrument remaining the same in substance and in its mode of operation. Dennis v. Eddy, 4 Fisher Pat. Cas. 423.

Reason for This Rule as Given by the Courts.—While it is perfectly just that every real genuine invention should be protected, it is not just that mere changes of form be protected by law. Hood v. Hicks, 4 Fisher Pat. Cas. 156; s. c., 2 Bin. (U. S.) 169.

3. Winans v. Denmead, 15 How. (U. S.) 330.

Its substance is a new mode of operation, by means of which a new result is obtained. It is this new mode of operation which gives it the character of an invention and entitles the inventor to a patent. Winans v. Denmead, 15 How. (U. S.) 330.

4. Isaacs v. Abrams, 95. This is so even if the change is slight. Isaacs v. Abrams, 13 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 616.

Advantageous Change Produced in Result.—In all prior patents for boiler injectors, the water was allowed to circulate about the nozzle with the double effect of cooling the steam and heating the water, and thereby diminishing its condensing power when it came in actual contact with the steam. The patentee substituted for the conical nozzle a plate or plug with an orifice, so that the steam and water approached each other from opposite directions up to one-sixteenth of an inch from the point of actual contact without affecting each other. Held, invention. Hancock Inspirator Co. v. Jenks, 21 Fed. Rep. 911.

5. Dennis v. Eddy, 4 Fisher Pat. Cas. 423. Where form is the very essence of an invention it is not to be disregarded. New York B. & B. Co. v. Hoffman, 20 Pat. Office Gaz. 1451; s. c., 20 Blatch. (U. S.) 3; s. c., 9 Fed. Rep. 191.

Where Change of Form Not Simply Change of Form.—Where the change of form produces a new effect, of which the jury must judge, it is not simply a change of form and does not come within the inhibition of the statute. Davis v. Palmer, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 298; s. c., 1 Robb Pat. Cas. 518. An invention, though depending upon a change of form, may be, in purpose or effect, a change in a material part of a process of manufacture, and patentable. Aiken v. Dolan, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 197.

Where Form Essence of Invention—Example.—The complainant was the inventor of a shuttle carrier, which by its form acted in the desired manner, "first, to furnish a bearing surface upon which the shuttle is to be supported and carried along with it in its flight; and second, to keep the shuttle in proper

b. Change of Material.—The mere change of one material into another in an instrument or machine, the purpose and means of accomplishment and form and mode of operation being the same is not invention,¹ and invention cannot be inferred because the new device is cheaper and better, or made of material better adapted for its purpose.²

But this rule is not applicable where the substituted material produces a new and useful result, an increase of efficiency, or a decided saving in the operation of the machine where the superiority amounts to a difference in kind.³

proximity to the face plate. These functions being performed by the mechanical form and construction of the carrier, the mechanical form and construction are patentable." Parhard v. Am. Button-hole, Overseaming and Sewing Machine Co., 4 Fisher Pat. Cas. 468.

Change in Form Held Not Invention.—Where a patent claimed a curved or bent reach, resting on a sway bar, and so curved that the fore wheels could pass beneath the arch, and it appeared that a wagon had been constructed with a curved reach resting on a sway bar, but under which the fore wheels could not wholly pass, held, that the greater curvature of the reach, to enable the wheels to pass beneath it, did not constitute invention. Flood v. Hicks, 4 Fisher Pat. Cas. 156; s. c., 2 Binn. (U. S.) 169. An improvement in nail carrier of nailing machine, which consisted in making the edge of the carrier smooth instead of corrugated, cannot be held an invention. Cross v. Union Metallic Fastening Co., 39 Pat. Office Gaz. 364; s. c., 29 Fed. Rep. 293.

1. No one will pretend that a machine, made, in whole or in part, of materials better adapted to the purpose for which it is used than the materials of which the old one is constructed, and for that reason better and cheaper, can be distinguished from the old one; or that, in the sense of the patent law, can entitle the manufacturer to a patent. Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, 11 How. (U. S.) 248; Putnam v. Weatherby, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 497.

2. Hicks v. Kelsey, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 670; s. c., 5 Pat. Office Gaz. 94; Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, 11 How. (U. S.) 248; Brown v. Dist. of Columbia, 127 (U. S.) 579; s. c., 47 Pat. Office Gaz. 399.

A patentright cannot be sustained for making an article of a new material according to a known mode. Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, 2 Robb Pat. Cas. 730.

Change of Material Only Mechanical Skill.—Mere change in material used in the construction of a device is not invention, it is only the exercise of mechanical judgment. Putnam v. Ferring-ton, 9 Pat. Office Gaz. 689; s. c., 2 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 237.

English Example of Rule.—The use of a new material to produce a known article is not the subject of a patent. Rushton v. Crowley, L. R., 10 Eq. 522.

Substitution of Material Held Not Invention.—Substitution of wood for iron, in the "means of connecting the ends of the vertical and horizontal members of a show case frame, consisting of metallic corner piece provided to receive the ends of the different members." Terhune v. Phillips, 99 U. S. 592. Of iron in a frame work formerly made of wood. Holbrook v. Smalls, 10 Pat. Office Gaz. 508; s. c., 2 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 396. Of wood blocks for stone blocks both shaped alike. Brown v. Dist. of Columbia, 127 U. S. 579; s. c., 47 Pat. Office Gaz. 397.

Substitution of papier maché for wire in "dummies," the former material having been used to make lay figures, many of which were draped in suitable clothing, held not invention. Palmenbing v. Buchholz, 13 Fed. Rep. 673.

A metallic slide in place of a wooden slide, with peculiar characteristics possessed by the metallic slide. Carter v. Messenger, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 34.

A double "T" slide being old, and a wooden double edged or dove tailed slide, being old, it is not patentable invention to make either of metal instead of wood. Carter v. Messenger, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 34.

No Invention Although Superior Article Produced.—The substitution of metal for India rubber springs in manufacture of corsets not invention. Florsheim v. Schilling, 26 Fed. Rep. 256.

Change of Material in a Process.—Changing the kind of ink used to print on rubber cloth is not invention. Brigham v. Coffin, 37 Fed. Rep. 689.

3. Goodyear D. V. Co. v. Willis, 7

In a manufacture, the change of one material into another well known material, where no results beyond increase of cheapness or durability is produced, is not invention;¹ but a change which produces new properties of the articles manufactured is invention.² Change of material used in a process is considered under equivalents.

Pat. Office Gaz. 41; s. c., 1 Flippin (U. S.) 388; s. c., 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 568.

Examples.—The substitution of metal for china in cuspidors, held, "invention, because thereby the fragility of the first material was avoided and the method of manufacturing the metal device being one inappropriate for manufacturing china, a cheaper article equally good was produced. U. S. Stamping Co. v. King, 17 Pat. Office Gaz. 1399; s. c., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 55; s. c., 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 469; s. c., 7 Fed. Rep. 866. Compare Ingersoll v. Turner, 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 89.

Difference of "Kind" Rather than of "Degree."—The substitution of vulcanized rubber in steam gauge cocks for the facing of leather or lead formerly placed on one of the surfaces, which materials were soon destroyed by the steam, leaving the cocks to become worn and leaky by the action of the grit in the water, held to produce a new result, differing from the former one so materially as to produce a difference of kind rather than of degree, and therefore to be an "invention." Dalton v. Nelson, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 357; s. c., 9 Pat. Office Gaz. 1112; s. c., 2 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 225.

The substitution of an India rubber for a cloth covering may be an invention if it is important and valuable. Washing Machine Co. v. Lincoln, 4 Fisher Pat. Cas. 379.

The substitution of gutta percha for indiarubber, in insulating telegraph submarine cables involves "invention." Colgate v. Western Union Tel. Co., 15 Blatchf. (C. C.) 365; s. c., 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 36; s. c., 14 Pat. Office Gaz. 943.

An improvement in bottle fasteners, consisting of a substitution of a movable U shaped wire extending over the top of the cork and connected with another wire surrounding the neck of the bottle for a movable U shaped sheet metal fastener extending over the top of the cork, and connected with a sheet metal strap around the neck of the bottle is an invention, because the wire fastening accomplished a different result, by becoming embedded in the cork by pressure from within the bottle, and yet could be pushed from over the cork with bursting the thumb or the cork. Putnam v. Weatherbee, 2 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 78; s. c., 8 Pat. Office Gaz. 320; s. c., 1 Holmes (C. C.) 497; Putnam v. Yerrington, 9 Pat. Office Gaz. 689; s. c., 2 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 237. This example verges on the question of change of form, and could have been placed under it; illustrating how these rulings run into each other.

1. Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, 11 How. (U. S.) 248.

2. The substitution of a new material for an old, whereby new properties of the article manufactured are developed, as, for instance, the substitution of a rubber for a metal gum plate in artificial teeth, whereby the teeth are held closely, and no crevices left as in the previous metal plates for lodgment of food and elasticity of the plate developed, is "invention." Smith v. Goodyear D. V. Co., 93 U. S. 486; Goodyear D. V. Co. v. Root, 6 Pat. Office Gaz. 154; s. c., 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 384.

Discussion of Hotchkiss v. Greenwood—Limitation of This Doctrine.—Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, 11 How. (U. S.) decides that employing one known material in place of another is not invention, if the result be only greater cheapness and durability of product. It does not decide that the use of one material in the place of another in the formation of a manufacture can in no case amount to an invention or be the subject of a patent. Smith v. Goodyear D. V. Co., 93 U. S. 486.

Examples of Change of Material Where New Properties of the Product Are Developed.—The result of the use of hard rubber in lieu of materials previously used for a plate for holding artificial teeth, or such teeth and gums, is a superior product, having capabilities and performing functions which differ from anything preceding it, and which cannot be ascribed to mere mechanical skill.

c. Changes in Size.—The mere enlargement of a machine, of a part of a machine,¹ or of the mechanism of a combination,² a reduction of the size of an old device so as to make it small enough for a new use;³ or the decrease in the size of an old manufacture;⁴ a change in the proportions of a mechanically combined composition,⁵ is not invention; but where, by these changes, new and improved results are produced, there is invention,⁶ especially in the case of small articles.⁷

but are to be justly regarded as the results of inventive effort, as making the manufacture of which they are attributes a novel thing in kind and patentable as such. Smith v. Goodyear D. V. Co., 93 U. S. 486. The substitution of mushin stiffened with shellac for vulcanized rubber, with or without an intermixture of fibrous or suitable material capable of being shaped into molds, for the tips for the insoles of boots and shoes, whereby the bevelling of the tips formerly necessary was dispensed with, is invention. Shuter v. Davis, 16 Fed. Rep. 564.

Where a Substance in a Weaker Form Is Used.—Hydrated alcohol combined with camphor being a known solvent of pyroxyline, the use of alcohol of less strength, but of strength sufficient for the purpose, is an invention. Spill v. Celluloid Mfg. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 631.

1. Phillips v. Page, 24 How. (U. S.) 164; Planing Machine Co. v. Keith, 101 U. S. 479; s. c., 17 Pat. Office Gaz. 1031.

2. Where an arrangement of mechanism the same as that subsequently patented existed previously, although of a small size and producing a feeble result, the absolute parts, their relative arrangement and their action being the same, it is not invention to increase the size of the parts, or some of them, to adopt them for a more practical purpose. Day v. Bankers and Brokers' Telegraph, 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. 268; s. c., 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 345; s. c., 1 Pat. Office Gaz. 648.

3. Double Pointed Tack Co. v. Two Rivers Mfg. Co., 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 465; s. c., 3 Fed. Rep. 26; s. c., 18 Pat. Office Gaz. 863.

4. Glue Co. v. Upton, 95 U. S. 3.

Part of Machine.—Placing a large register in a stove oven door where a small register had been used previously is not invention. Filley v. Littlefield Stove Co., 39 Pat. Office Gaz. 1203; s. c., 25 Fed. Rep. 282. Making the flange on one side of a connecting slide of an extension table thicker than the other, not invention. Carter v. Messinger, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 34.

Where a Merely Obvious New Result Is Obtained.—The fact that water will flow through a hose wound on a reel if the diameter is large enough, and the curves or angles are not too abrupt, is a matter of common knowledge which no one can appropriate to himself. Preston v. Maynard, 116 U. S. 661; s. c., 34 Pat. Office Gaz. 1507.

Example of Changing Size of Part.—Contracting the lower end of the fire pot in a stove for the purpose of lessening the area of the grate, to enlarge the outside space, not invention. Perry v. Co-operative Foundry Co., 12 Fed. Rep. 436.

5. Analogously change in proportion of manufacture when a mechanically combined material composed of particular ingredients is old, a person who has merely altered the proportions of ingredients or the process of combining them has not invented a new composition of matter. Van Camp v. Maryland Pavement Co., 43 Pat. Office Gaz. 884; s. c., 34 Fed. Rep. 740. To be a new composition of matter the product of the composition must have some distinctly new property or be applicable to some new use. Van Camp v. Maryland Pavement Co., 43 Pat. Office Gaz. 884; s. c., 34 Fed. Rep. 740.

6. The enlargement of the "clinker cleaning passage" from the fire pot to the stove front, if productive of new and useful results, is invention and patentable. Thatcher Heating Co. v. Carbon Stove Co., 15 Pat. Office Gaz. 1051; s. c., 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 68.

Example of Change of Size Held Invention.—Letters patent are not void for want of patent ability as being merely for increasing the size of type for figures. Bruce v. Marder, 10 Fed. Rep. 750; s. c., 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 355; s. c., 22 Pat. Office Gaz. 1039.

7. In patents for small articles slight differences are often important, and, if such things are patentable at all, it

d. Change of Location of Parts.—A change in the location of the parts of a mechanism so long as no different or additional function is performed,¹ does not make the change an invention; must always be in consequence of a more useful adaptation to the needs of commerce, by small changes which in a great machine might be merely alternative ways of reaching a general result. Emerson v. Howe, 8 Fed. Rep. 327.

1. Dederick v. Whitman Agricultural Co., 36 Pat. Office Gaz. 571; s. c., 26 Fed. Rep. 763; Dane v. Ill. Mfg. Co., 6 Fisher Pat. Cas. 124; s. c., 3 Biss. (U. S.) 374; s. c., 2 Pat. Office Gaz. 680.

Transfer of one of the parts whereby it performs double function, even though one of the parts transferred performs a double function, if the same part had been used before to perform the same function, in separate mechanism, its transfer is not invention. Adams v. Bellaire Stamping Co., 36 Pat. Office Gaz. 567; s. c., 28 Fed. Rep. 300.

To authorize a patent the law requires a new thing. It is not satisfied by inventing a new place for an old thing, without change of result. Clark Pomace Holder Co. v. Furguson, 17 Fed. Rep. 79; s. c., 21 Blatchf. (U. S.) 376; s. c., 24 Pat. Office Gaz. 1090.

Examples of Transfer of Parts Held Not Invention.—An improvement in casting steel tire car wheels, by which the molten iron was poured in by openings or spouts at the edge of the mold, instead of as formerly by openings at the center, for the purpose of preventing any foreign matter settling beside the tire and preventing junction. Needham v. Washburn, 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 537; s. c., 7 Pat. Office Gaz. 649. Putting the perforations in an annular outlet in a gas stove (the part where the flame was applied to the gas) closer together and making them more numerous, not invention. Tift v. Sharp, 17 Pat. Office Gaz. 1284; s. c., 18 Blatchf. (U. S.) 138; s. c., 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 416; s. c., 10 Fed. Rep. 673. Ordinary corrugated iron when applied to the roof or sides of a building not giving sufficient air space between the metal sheets and the building, making the air spaces larger and diminishing the surface of iron to be attached to the building, is mechanical skill and not invention. Belt v. Crittenden, 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 131; s. c., 18 Pat. Office Gaz. 191. Arranging a blank book to contain bonds and coupons, the bonds on successive pages and the coupons of each bond on the same page with it, a book having previously been made to contain the coupons without the bonds, grouped together according to the time when they had been paid, is not an invention. Munson v. City of N. Y., 42 Pat. Office Gaz. 1061; s. c., 124 U. S. 601. Two bell cords in a street car passing along the lower margin of the roof of the car on opposite sides, connecting directly with a bell or gong attached to a bell on the driver's platform, held no invention, there being no new result obtained by placing the cord at the edge of the roof instead of the top of the roof. Stephenson v. Brooklyn Crosstown R. R. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 457. See also Royer v. King, 36 Fed. Rep. 899; Schmid v. Schoville Mfg. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 345.

Change of Place of Useless Part Not Invention.—To change the position of a useless appendage of a quadrant shaped platform from the side to the rear required neither ingenuity nor invention. Seymour v. Osborne, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 555.

Change from an Axial Line to Side by Side.—Lifters and forces had been arranged in an axial line for injecting water into boilers, the arrangement of them side by side without any advantage gained thereby is not invention. Hancock Inspirator Co. v. Lalby, 27 Fed. Rep. 88.

Transfer of a Peculiar Shape from One Part to Another.—The change in the method of combining the body and rim of wheels, by transferring the groove or recess to the rim and embracing the body of the wheel, instead of having the groove or recess in the body and embracing the rim, does not involve invention. Sax v. Taylor Iron Works, 39 Fed. Rep. 835; s. c., 40 Pat. Office Gaz. 118; Hollister v. Burnham etc. Co., 113 U. S. 59.

Extreme Case of Change of Place Held Not Invention.—A dredging vessel constructed with a screw, similar to a screw propeller, set in the bow for the purpose of dredging; screw propellers had previously been used to dredge by turning the stern of the vessel towards the sand bar; held, not invention to change the place of the screw from the stern to the

but where the change may have required the employment of new devices or of inventive skill to enable the parts of the devices to operate in their new position or location, invention may be inferred;¹ and where the change of location, which produces a new and useful result, requires new devices, then the location, in combination with the other devices, is patentable.²

e. Changing the Number of Parts of a Device.—Multiplying parts where one had been used before,³ and the use of one being analogous to the others, or leaving out a part which is useless,⁴ or leaving out a part and its function from a machine, is not invention. But where a new and useful result is produced, the device thereby, the multiplication, becomes an invention.

f. Substituting for a Device Its Equivalent.—The mere substitution for a device of its equivalent is not invention.⁵

bow. Atlantic Works v. Brady, 107 U. S. 192; s. c., 33 Pat. Office Gaz. 1330.

1. Moffit v. Cavanagh, 17 Fed. Rep. 336.

New Result Obtained.—Changing the location of a thumbscrew governing a tension device in a sewing machine from a position where it was readily accessible only to the left hand of the operator to the top of the face plate, where it was readily accessible to both hands of the operator, it appearing that new mechanism had to be devised to operate the discs from the new position, is invention. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Stewart Mfg. Co., 20 Pat. Office Gaz. 524; s. c., 8 Fed. Rep. 920.

2. New Devices.—If a change of location of a device requires new devices, and a new and useful result is produced, then the location in combination with the other devices—the means by which the result is obtained, not the result itself—is patentable. Marsh v. Dodge and Stephenson Mfg. Co., 6 Fisher Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 562; s. c., 5 Pat. Office Gaz. 398.

Examples of Changes in Location of Parts Held Invention.—Wooden horse troughs had been made with a covered float and valve both situated at one end and iron trough with supply pipes and overflow. A trough made with a supply pipe valve and float in the interior covered by a case with open water all around, by which contrivance access to all sides of the trough, which was impossible in previous devices, was secured, involved invention. North American Iron Works v. Fiske, 39 Pat. Office Gaz. 1086; s. c., 30 Fed. Rep. 622. See Adams v. Howard, 19 Fed. Rep. 317.

3. Moore v. Thomas, 3 Bann. & Ard.

Pat. Cas. 13; Wilbur v. Beecher, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 132.

The mere duplication of a device for opening a gate for the platforms of railway cars, whereby the gates of two adjoining platforms may be operated simultaneously, does not require invention. Aron v. Manhattan R. R. Co., 34 Pat. Office Gaz. 1508; s. c., 26 Fed. Rep. 314.

The use of two deflecting plates, one on each side of a circular saw, the arc of one deflecting plate being old and the function of the second deflecting plate being analogous to the first, their combination with a saw is not an invention. Dunbar v. Myers, 94 U. S. 187. Putting two locks on a single bolt work is not invention. Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Berkshire Nat. Bank, 17 Fed. Rep. 537.

4. Where a device is made double, and experience shows that one half of it is superfluous, no invention is necessary to dispense with superfluous portion, and a patent for part retained will be held void. McClain v. Ortmyer, 42 Pat. Office Gaz. 724; Seymour v. Osborne, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 555.

"Duplication producing a new and useful result may be patentable. It is often the material part of a discovery, because it may be that which renders useful what was before useless." Parker v. Holme, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas.

Examples of Multiplication of Parts Held Invention.—A number of rollers acting in pairs to do a certain class of work is patentable. Parker v. Holme, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 44. The substitution of a double for a single bar in a spring bed is patentable if the change is not obvious. Ladd v. Tucker Mfg. Co., 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 344.

5. Cockrane v. Waterman, 1 Cranch

g. Double Use—Machine or Device.—The application of an old machine to a similar or analogous subject without change in the manner of applying it and with no result substantially distinct in its nature,¹ the application of an old device to an analogous use in a manner before known,² even if greater utility is produced,³ or making a thing of a shape analogous to the shape

Pat. Dec. 121; s. c., vol. 2 Pat. Office Rep. of 1847, p. 829.

Examples of Parts Held Equivalents.

—A metallic joint being old, and it having been long in use for the purposes required in the machine in question, it is but a known mechanical substitute in the combination for the flexible joint in the prior machine and for the purposes required in the machine in question must be regarded as a mere equivalent. Fisher v. Craig, 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 365.

Substituting Machine for Hand Power.

—There is no invention in stirring a solution by a screw which had formerly been stirred by hand, the screw being a well known device for stirring liquids. Marchand v. Emkin, 34 Pat. Office Rep. 1275. There is no invention in substituting a compound lever for a simple one in order to gain power. Puetz v. Beansford, 31 Fed. Rep. 458; s. c., 39 Pat. Office Gaz. 1083. Substitution for two catches a hinge and a catch, the several parts being old, is not invention. Adams v. Bellaire Stamping Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 360, for a T lever an eccentric lever. Rodebaugh v. Jackson, 47 Pat. Office Gaz. 658; s. c., 37 Fed. Rep. 882.

Chemical Equivalents.—If a process consists of a chemical combination by which the particular result is produced it does not prevent another inventor from making a mechanical combination which produces the same result. New Process Fermentation Co. v. Maus, 20 Fed. Rep. 725.

1. Penna. R. R. Co. v. Locomotive Engine Safety Truck Co., 110 U. S. 490; Blake v. San Francisco, 113 U. S. 679; Miller v. Force, 116 U. S. 22; Stephenson v. Brooklyn Railroad Co., 114 U. S. 149; Morris v. McMillin, 112 U. S. 244.

The mere application of an old apparatus to a new use is not patentable. Bean v. Smallwood, 2 Story (U. S.) 408.

English Cases.—"The law on this subject (double use) is this: you cannot have a patent for applying a well known thing which might be employed for 50,000 different purposes to an operation which is exactly analogous to what was done before." Losh v. Hague, 7 Web. Pat. Cas. (Eng.) 207.

2. Royer v. Chicago Manf. Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 853.

Slight Modifications of the Rule.—The application of an old organism to an analogous use not patentable. Phillips v. Page, 24 How. (U. S.) 164. The mere application of an old device to a new use is not, by itself alone, the subject of a patent. Blatchf. (U. S.) 336. A mere application of the old machinery, in the old manner, to an analogous substance is not invention. Brook v. Aston, 8 E. & B. (2 B. R.) 478. Putting an old thing to a new use is not patentable. Cliff. (U. S.) 538. "The court, in rejecting the patent of Newton, seems to have been mainly governed by the use which was claimed for it, and also that no mention is made of its adaptability as a saw, but if what it actually did was in its nature the same as sawing and its structure and action suggested to the mind of an ordinary skillful mechanic this double use to which it could be adapted without material change, then such adaption to a new use is not a new invention and not patentable." Tucker v. Spaulding, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 453. "The application of old mechanical devices without material change to a use in which they were not before employed but which was known, and had been practiced, does not constitute a patentable invention." Conse v. Johnson, 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 501. A patentee combined a double leather cover (which was well known on certain kinds of balls) and applied it to an equally well known ball of a harder kind; held, double use and no invention. Malin v. Harwood, 3 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 515.

Northrup v. Adams, 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 567. A composition having been described in a former patent, one who applied it to a new use cannot claim it as his invention. U. S. and Foreign Salamander Co. v. Haven, 2 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 164.

3. Application of an Old Device to a an analogous thing had been made before,¹ and the like,² is not invention...

New Thing Not Invention.—Invention or discovery are required as the foundation of a patent; therefore, where the claim rests merely on the application of an old machine to a new use, or an old process to a new result, the patent cannot be sustained, because the patentee has not invented any new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereon. Bray v. Hartshorn, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 538; Conover v. Roach, 4 Fisher Pat. Cas. 12.

Examples of the Application of This Doctrine to Machines.—The discovery that a particular advantage was obtained by the use of a wheel before known, in a manner before known, cannot be called an invention. Losh v. Hague, 1 Webster Pat. Cas. (Eng.) 202.

The patent being for the application of bearings for the purpose of transferring friction from the shoulders to the ends of the axles of wheels of railway carriages; held, that the prior public use of such end bearings on the end of axles in cotton mills or other stationary machinery, would not, but that public use of the same in ordinary carriages upon common roads, would destroy the patent unless the patent contained something new and material, either in principle or in mode of operation, to adapt it to its new use. Knight v. B etc. R. Co., 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 1.

Examples Where a Mechanism Is Transferred from One Machine to Another of an Analogous Kind.—The introduction of a wire into the top of paint cans to prevent collapse of the walls, a similar wire having been formerly used in the head of ice cream freezers, is not invention. Brown v. Hall, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 401; s. c., 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 531.

A bearing surface of vulcanized rubber had been applied to a horse collar to prevent absorption of sweat and formation of wrinkles and to assist in curing skin galls, an application of some material to a new and analogous use as a part of a harness pad not invention. American Saddle Co. v. Hogg, 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 353. Claim of patent was for an improvement in construction of axles for cars and other wheeled carriages. It appeared that the improvement, though it never had been applied to railroad carriages, was well known as applied to other carriages. Held, patent void. Winnans v. Boston & Providence R. Co., 2 Story (U. S.) 412; Hall v. Boot (or Jarvis), Web. 100. A machine to be used under water, substantially like one used on land, is not invention. Bush v. Fox, 5 H. L. Cas. 707; s. c., 2 Jur. N. S. 1029.

The use of a mandrel, shaped like a bottle, in making envelopes for bottles, various shaped articles having been made out of pliable materials by means of mandrels, which were the regular tools therefor, not invention. Patent Bottle Envelope Co. v. Seymer, 5 C. B., N. S. 164; s. c., 5 Jur. U. S. 174. Combination of a device with an exhaust pipe, it having been formerly used with a supply pipe, not invention. Willis v. Davidson, 1 N. R. (Eng.) 234. A fish plate, grooved in the centre and used for holding rails together, is a double use of a fish plate used for strengthening timbers having a like groove. Harwood v. The Great Northern R. R. Co., 29 L. J., Q. B. 193; 11 H. L. Cas. 654.

A Change of a Device from One Manufacture to Another.—A claim for a "circular stove," having a perforated fire pot with a grate bottom, having provision for admission of air below the point of suspension of said fire pot, all the elements of the claim being old, and old in that combination, except the circular cylinder, held, "It is true that the device of Russell" (anticipating device) "was not placed in a circular or 'cannon' stove, consisting of a single cylinder, the Russell stove being composed of two cylinders, but we fail to see that any inventive power was required to apply the same fire pot to a different kind of circular stove." Harles v. Albany Stove Works, 42 Pat. Office Gaz. 95; s. c., 123 U. S. 582.

1. It being old to put a flanged bottom into an iron shell, or into an iron shell washed with tin, or into an iron shell with a lining of sheet tin adhering thereto; and old, also, to provide a soda water fountain with a separable sheet tin lining, it did not involve invention to place a flanged bottom covered with a separable sheet tin lining into a shell lined in a similar manner. Mathews v. Ironclad Mfg. Co., 42 Pat. Office Gaz. 382; s. c., 124 U. S. 347.

2. A roller frame for casters in trunks

h. Process—Application Doctrine, Double Use to.—The application of an old process to a new subject without the exercise of the inventive faculty or the development of any new idea,¹ where no new or useful device is produced thereby,² the application of an old process to produce a new result,³ or the application of must be regarded as a second use of roller frames for other purposes. Session v. Gould, 33 Pat. Office Gaz. 1139. The application of an old and well known form of blade, from a hand tool for trimming side edges, to an old gear cutter for trimming such edges, is merely a case of double use, and therefore not patentable. Bussell Trimmer Co. v. Stephens, 37 Pat. Office Gaz. 1249; s. c., 28 Fed. Rep. 535; Slawson v. Grand St., Prospect Park and Flatbush R. R. Co., 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 210; Pickering v. McCollough, 104 U. S. 310; s. c., 21 Pat. Office Gaz. 73; Hake v. Brown, 37 Fed. Rep. 783.

Changing from One Kind Steam Engine to Another.—Nothing patentable in the application to horizontal steam engine boilers of old devices in the precise combinations in which they had existed in vertical boiler steam engines, no new result being obtained. Scheidler v. Tustin, 23 Fed. Rep. 887. The adaption of a wooden lathe to iron, mere mechanical skill. Howe Machine Co. v. National Needle Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 630.

"Fire Extinguisher and Soda Water Fountain."—An apparatus in which the alkaline solutions for forming carbonic acid gas were kept separate until required to extinguish a fire, when they could be readily mingled, held, no invention, since a similar apparatus had been employed in a soda water fountain for the supply of beverages. Northwestern Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Philadelphia Fire Extinguisher Co., 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 177; s. c., 6 Pat. Office Gaz. 34; 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 177; s. c., 6 Pat. Office Gaz. 64.

A sheath grooved so as to enclose the sheet metal moulding used on the tops of carriage dash boards, the same mechanism having been used to apply the moulding to the tops of combs, is not an invention. Peters v. Active Mfg. Co. 21 Fed. Rep. 319.

Changing the Subject of a Device.—Fastening one piece of wood to another, or one piece of metal to another, or a piece of metal to a piece of wood, by the use of screws or nails, being old, it is not a patentable invention to fasten a metallic slide in the groove of a slide bar by passing a nail or bolt through both. Carter v. Messinger, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 34.

Putting a Cut in a Different Place.—It was commonly known that the effect of a diagonal cut on a penetrating point was to force the point, in being driven away from the cut. Double pointed staples, with a diagonal cut on each point, but the diagonal cut on one point on the upper and outer side, and on the other point on the lower and outer side, were old, the effect in driving being to bring the points nearer together; there was nothing but mechanical skill in putting the diagonal cuts on the same side of each leg so as to incline both points in driving in the same direction. Double Pointed Tack Co. v. Two Rivers Manufacturing Co., 109 U. S. 117; s. c., 25 Pat. Office Gaz. 1075.

1. Brown v. Piper, 91 U. S. 37, nor is its application to a similar or analogous subject, with no change in manner of application and no result substantially distinct, even if the new form had not been contemplated. Howe Machine Co. v. National Needle Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 630.

2. A device or process previously patented and used for one purpose, cannot be patented and used for a similar purpose unless a new and useful device is produced thereby. Byerly v. Cleveland Linseed Oil Works, 31 Fed. Rep. 73.

Example of Double Use of Old Device.—Making dash boards of two pieces of iron which were welded together by pressure from dies when hot, and making the dies of a suitable shape, held, only a double use, there being no invention in adapting dies to the shape desired, nor in using them to swage the pieces of iron and weld them together. Peters v. Mfg. Co., 47 Pat. Office Gaz. 1219.

3. The application of an old process to produce a new result is not a patentable invention; there must also be some new process or mode, but the production of an old result by a new process is patentable. Howe v. Abbott, 2 Story (U. S.) 190.

an old process to a new stage of manufacture,¹ is not invention or the subject of a patent.

Product of Old Process.—The product of an old process applied to a new material is not an invention.²

i. Composition of Matter—Application—Doctrine of Double Use.—A new use of a material or composition previously known,³ or the application of articles existing in a given form and applied to a certain use in substantially the same form to a new use,⁴ or the use of a well known substance in a generally

Example of Old Process to New Devices.—A mode of connecting ships' anchors to the shank by making a cervical opening in the piece of iron forming the flukes (arm piece), through which the shank was passed, the curved end of the shank being welded to the arm piece, is thus commented on: "If the union (of the fluke and arm piece) had been effected in a mode unknown before, as applied in any degree to a similar purpose I should have thought it a good ground for a patent, but unfortunately the mode was well known and long practiced," it being "precisely the mode in which the shank of the mushroom anchor is united to the mushroom top; 'the way in which the different parts of the hammer and pickaxe are united together.'" Brewster v. Hawkes, 4 B. and Ald. (Ex. Rep.) 541. Placing nearer two machines formerly used at a greater distance, similar machines used for a similar purpose upon a similar material, held not invention. Kay v. Marshall, 8 Cl. & Fin. 245.

Application of Process to Another Part of Device.—The application of artificial heat to ripen wine being old, and the application of artificial heat to the outside of casks to ripen wine being old, it is not invention to apply heat to interior of casks to ripen the wine within them. Dreyfus v. Searle, 42 Pat. Office Gaz. 491; s. c., 124 U. S. 60.

Double Use Consisting of the Application of a Process to a Use Analogous to the Original One.—The application of the process of baling hay to short cut hay not invention, short cut hay and the process of baling being previously well known. Faulks v. Kamp, 17 Pat. Office Gaz. 851; s. c., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 432; s. c., 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 73. A mere transfer of a mode of constructing wooden slides to metallic slides not invention. Carter v. Messinger, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 34. The application to palm leaves to curl them of the process used to curl hair for matresses not patentable. Howe v. Abbott, 2 Story (U. S.) 190.

Extreme Case in Supreme Court.—The application of a freezing mixture in a vessel enclosing another vessel that contained articles to be preserved from spoiling is a double use of a process of preserving corpses similarly made. Crown v. Piper, 91 U. S. 27.

The application of the process of doing plasterers' hair up in small packages, placing these packages in larger packages, then comprising the whole, the same process having been applied to other articles, is not invention. King v. Gallun, 109 U. S. 99.

1. Applying the Same Process to a Later Stage.—A patent construed as being at the most the application of "a process of stamping tobacco which was already known to the same tobacco at a later stage in the process of manufacture, held invalid as the application of an old process to a similar or analogous use. Miller v. Foree, 116 U. S. 22.

2. King v. Gallun, 109 U. S. 99.

Plasterers' hair done up in small packages inside larger one and then compressed, such process having previously been used for other articles, it is not an invention. King v. Gallun, 109 U. S. 99.

A new manufacture produced by an old process machine and without the development of any new idea which can be deemed new or original is not an invention. Brown v. Piper, 91 U. S. 37; Piper v. Moon, 6 Fisher Pat. Cas. (U. S.) 180, for examples see Meyer v. Pritchard, 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 101; s. c., 7 Pat. Office Gaz. 1012; s. c., Bann. & Arder Pat. Cas. 261.

3. Mathews v. Skates, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 602.

4. Crandal v. Walters, 9 Fed. Rep. 659.

well known form, but one in which it had not previously been used,¹ is not invention.

k. Limitations of Doctrine of Double Use.—But it is always a question of fact whether the purpose to which a contrivance was before applied and the new purpose are so analogous that there is no invention involved in the change;² a previous and a new

1. Tarr v. Webb, 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. 593; s. c., 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 96; s. c., 2 Pat. Office Gaz. 568.

The Application of This Doctrine to a Material Used in a Manufacture.—

The application of an article to produce a certain result, the party having no claim either to the mode of producing the article or applying it, for obtaining the result, forms no ground for a patent. Regina v. Cutler, 3 C. & K. 215; s. c., 14 Q. B. 372, note.

The use of an old material in an old way to accomplish an old result is not invention. Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Tower, 26 Fed. Rep. 451.

Examples of Application of "Double Use to Materials."—There is no invention in producing upon an old fabric an effect that has been produced on similar fabrics, therefore a paper collar ornamented with devices printed with old machinery is not an invention. Union Paper Collar Co. v. Van Dusen, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 109; s. c., 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. 597.

A dickey having previously been made of two or more thicknesses of linen bound together at the edges by a binding and intended to hang by a tab attached to the collar button, it is not invention to fasten a shirt bosom made precisely like that dickey to the shirt body by means of a row of stitches through the binding. Cluett v. Claffin, 41 Pat. Office Gaz. 1042; s. c., 30 Fed. Rep. 921.

2. Harwood v. Gt. N. Ry. Co., 2 B. & S. (Eng.) 208.

Glass having been formerly engraved by sand by use of a brush with which sand and water were applied, sand thrown against the glass to engrave it by a jet of water or steam while it revolved is invention. Tilghman v. Morse, 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 421.

Extension of Applicability.—A valve peculiarly constructed, having opening above only along part of the line of motion, and which, therefore, applicable only to one kind of engine, another valve having holes all its length and therefore being applicable to all engines, is not a double use. Judson v.

Moore, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 544 (but see p. 555). The use of hoops upon a cast iron cannon not a double use from the use of same on wrought iron cannon. Treadwell v. Parrott, 3 Fish. 124. Application of a suitable fabric to a whip handle held invention. Strong v. Noble, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 477.

Change of Material from One Use to Another Held Invention.—A new and improved roller for wringing machines had been made by surrounding the shaft with a fabric made of fibrous cloth and rubber. This material had been made before in tubes and cut into sections (rings) for stuffing boxes. Held, not double use but inventive genius. Forsyter v. Clapp, 6 Fisher Pat. Cas. 528. Linen faced with paper used for collars, same material having been used for maps, held, invention, not double use. Union Paper Collar Co. v. White, 7 Pat. Office Gaz. 608; s. c., 2 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 60. The patentee made a barrel of a common bolt of one piece of sheet metal, with prongs passing through a hole in the plate, by which it was riveted to the plate itself. Prior to his invention, bolts had been made with a barrel in several pieces and riveted with prongs; with the barrel in one piece, but attached to the flanges; and with the barrel cast in one piece, with flanges which formed the plate. Held, that there was a patentable difference between the devices of the patentee and these prior contrivances. Stanly Works v. Sargent, 4 Fisher Pat. Cas. 443; s. c., 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 345.

The Suggestiveness of Prior Device.—

No use to which an elongated opening, such as is used for fastening parts of chains together, could naturally be applied, would suggest, in an open slotted metallic band tie, the use of the open slot in a rectangular flat buckle for the introduction of a flat band sidewise. Cook v. McComb, 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. 397; s. c., 1 Woods (U. S.) 195; s. c., 2 Pat. Office Gaz. 89.

Wooden pipe was made impervious to water or gas by coating it inside and out with a composition of coal tar and effect and new mode of operation produced,¹ or a new principle² applied, presume invention. An application of an old machine to a new subject may be patentable where a new process is thereby produced,³ and the improvements or particular changes which an inventor makes in adapting a machine to a new use are patentable.⁴

1. Combination and "Aggregation."—A combination⁵ of old sawdust. Tarred pipes rolled in sand were old and sawdust was a known absorbent of sticky substances. Held, not a double use but invention. Hobbie v. Smith, 27 Fed. 656

1. Grosjean v. Peck, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 54. Where adaptations are necessary, work invention. West E. Dy. Mch. Co. v. Arnoux, 20 Fed. Rep. 112.

New Purpose and Different Results.—An article produced by a process which was previously known but used for a somewhat different purpose with different results is patentable. Lockwood v. Cutter Tower Co., 11 Fed. Rep. 724.

2. A mere discovery of a new principle embodied in a new machine is patentable, but a mere discovery of a new principle of operation in an old machine is not patentable. Newton v. Vancher, 6 Ex. Rep. 859; 21 L. J. Ex. 305.

New Principle in New Substance.—Where a new principle, which it required experiment to discover, in a new substance, is used, in connection with an old device, to do a thing not analogous with the thing done originally by it, is an invention of a process. Poillon v. Schmidt, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 299; 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 476.

A person who not merely supplies the public with a new article, but demonstrates unknown susceptibilities of the material out of which it is made, does something more than merely apply an old thing to a new purpose. He produces a new device by giving a new form to an old substance and by suitable manipulation makes its peculiar properties available for a use to which it had not been before applied, thereby distinguishing between it and all other fabrics of the class to which it belongs. Union Paper Collar Co. v. White, 7 Pat. Office Gaz. 698; 2 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 60.

A new composition of matter to which an old contrivance has been applied, and which results in a new and useful article is the proper subject for a patent. The novelty consists in the new composition made practically useful for the purposes of life by the means and contrivances mentioned. It would be a new manufacture and none the less so because the means employed to adapt the new composition to a useful purpose was old and well known. Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, 11 How. (U. S.) 248.

Where it has been stated that a special agent of boneblack can be used to remove a discoloring agent and it has been discovered by the patentee that coal oil can be purified by filtering through it, can it be said that the latter is a double use of the former? National Filtering Oil Co. v. Arctic Oil Co., 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 416; s. c., 4 Fish. Pat. Cas. 514.

Material.—Patenting a material for one purpose does not necessarily invalidate patenting it for another and not analogous purpose. Newton v. Vancher, 6 Exch 859.

An invention of sheeting metal so compounded of zinc and copper that it would, when placed in water, rust just sufficiently to prevent accumulation of barnacles on it is an invention, even though a plate had been made previously of a similar proportion of the same metals, it being held that unless some application of them could be shown to that same purpose it was not a double use of the first plate. Muntz v. Foster, 2 Web. Pat. Cas. (Eng.) 96.

3. It cannot be doubted that a novel process, or method, the operation that amounts to a successful application of known things to a practical use, is patentable as an art. Roberts v. Dickey, 1 Pat. Office Gaz. 4; s. c., 4 Brew. (U. S.) 260; s. c., 4 Fish. Pat. Cas. 532.

4. If a man claims the improvements or particular changes which he makes in the construction of an old machine in adapting it to a new use, which the old machine could not be applied to without such changes, his patent may be sustained. Phillips v. Page, 24 How. (U. S.) 164.

5. New and Useful Combination, Though Elements Old.—Each and all of devices must produce a new and useful result, the joint product of the elements of the combination. These results must be a result of the combination, and not a mere "aggregate" of several results, each the complete product of one of the combined elements brought together and allowed to work out its own effect,¹ in order to be an invention.

Tests.—The tests to distinguish a combination from an "aggregation" are that the result in the former is produced by the union of the several elements;² that the elements co-operate with³ the separate elements of a combination may be well known and old. Nevertheless if the combination is new and useful and requires more than mere mechanical skill to produce it, it is patentable. May v. County of Fond du Lac, 27 Fed. Rep. 691. Almost all mechanical inventions at this day are the embodiment and adaption of mechanical appliances that are old. Crandall v. Watters, 9 Fed. Rep. 659. The connection or combination of a patented device with other devices may be the subject of a valid subsequent patent. McMillan v. Rees, 1 Fed. Rep. 722.

1. Hailes v. Van Wormer, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 353; Double Pointed Tack Co. v. Mann, 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 468; Niles Tool Co. Works v. Betts Machine Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 301. A mere aggregation of parts whereof the patentee has not the exclusive right to either and in which the parts have no new principle and produce no new result which is due to the combination itself is not patentable. Sarven v. Hall, 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. 415; Wood v. Packer, 17 Fed. Rep. 650. A combination is patentable only when a new and useful result is produced by the combined elements. Railway Registering Co. v. North Hudson Co. R. Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 411. The parts must be so "united" as to produce such result. Wood v. Packer, 17 Fed. Rep. 650.

2. General Test of Patentable Combination.—A combination must embrace (1) a novel assemblage of parts involving invention; (2) a co-operation of those parts to produce a common result. Hoffman v. Young, 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 316; s. c., 2 Fed. Rep. 74.

The patentability of a combination is not affected by the circumstance that the elements combined produce distinct subsidiary results, if, while producing these results, they also co-operate to produce an ultimate result which is either different from or resultant of the several particular results produced by the subordinate combinations. Waring v. Wilkinson, 15 Pat. Office Gaz. 246; 18 Pat. Office Gaz. 794.

Waring v. Wilkinson, 15 Pat. Office Gaz. 246.

Separate Patents for Severable Parts.—Where by the omission of some of the elements of such former machine and the addition of other elements not useful in the old machine an improvement results, such improvement may be patentable. Coupe v. Weatherhead, 16 Fed. Rep. 673.

Production New Force or Effect.—If it produce a different force, effect, or result in the combined forces or processes from that given by the different parts and a new result is produced by their union. Niles Tool Co. v. Betts Machine Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 301.

If it forms a new machine of distinct character or formation, or produces a result which is not a mere aggregate of separate contributions, but is due to the joint and co-operative action of all the elements. Niles Tool Works v. Betts Machine Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 301; Shipman Engine Co. v. Rochester Tool Works, 44 Pat. Office Gaz. 1067; s. c., 34 Fed. Rep. 747.

Others' Wordings of These Tests.—If a new result is produced by the union of the several elements, it is invention; if not, a mere aggregation and not invention. Reckendorfer v. Faber, 92 U. S. 347; s. c., 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 68; s. c., 5 Pat. Office Gaz. 697; s. c., 10 Pat. Office Gaz. 71; s. c., 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 229.

3. If one part does not co-operate with the others but each works out its own separate result, it is not invention. Swift v. Whisen, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 343; s. c., 2 Bond (U. S.) 115; Hoffman v. Young, 18 Pat. Office Gaz. 794; Stephenson v. Brooklyn, C. T. R. R. Co., 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 473; s. c., 14 Fed. Rep. 457.

Co-operation means that every part or coact¹ upon each other to produce it. But they need not act simultaneously.²

must have its subfunction to perform, and each must have a certain relation to, and dependence upon, the others. Hoffman v. Young, 18 Pat. Office Gaz. 794; s. c., 2 Fed. Rep. 74; s. c., 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 316.

The parts must dependently co-operate. Wood v. Packer, 17 Fed. Rep. 650. All the elements must enter into the combination so that each qualifies the others and a new result is obtained produced by the combined action of all the component parts. Clark Pomace Co. v. Ferguson, 17 Fed. Rep. 79.

1. Another Word Used Synonymously Is "Coaction."—There must be coaction among the elements of a combination of old devices to take it out of the category of mere aggregation of parts; some new and peculiar function produced by such combination must be developed, in order that the combination may be an invention and not a mere exhibition of mechanical skill. Scott Mfg. Co. v. Sayre, 35 Pat. Office Gaz. 255, s. c., 26 Fed. Rep. 153; Brinkerhoff v. Aloe, 37 Fed. Rep. 92.

A More Useful Result or Old Result in Cheaper Way Sufficient.—A combination that produces by its joint action a new and useful result or an old result in a cheaper or otherwise more advantageous way. Niles Tool Works v. Betts Machine Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 301; Railway Register Mfg. Co. v. North Hudson Co. R. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 411; Railway Register Mfg. Co. v. North Hudson Mfg. Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 411.

Elements Need Not Coact on Each Other if They Co-operate.—There is no patentable combination in a mere aggregation of old devices which produce no new effect or result due to their concurrent or successive joint and co-operating action; it is by no means essential to a patentable combination that the several devices or elements thereof should coact upon each other. It is sufficient if all the devices co-operate with respect to the work to be done and in furtherance thereof, although each device may perform its own particular function only. Stutz v. Armstrong, 20 Fed. Rep. 843.

2. Hoffman v. Young, 2 Fed. Rep. 74.

A claim is not invalid upon the ground that the several elementary parts of a combination have no conjoint action, and no active connection to produce a joint result, where there was invention in the combination. Hoe v. Cottrell, 1 Fed. Rep. 597. They must be united for a common end—a unitary result. Hoffman v. Young, 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 316; s. c., 2 Fed. Rep. 74.

Examples of Aggregation.—Putting a mirror on the roof of the front platform of a street car, and a glass panel in the front end of the car over the door, is a mere aggregation of separate devices. "Neither of these three elements . . . performs any new office or imparts any new power to the others, and combined they do not produce any new result, or any old result more cheaply or otherwise more advantageously." Stephenson v. Brooklyn R. Co., 114 U. S. 149.

A washer put on a bucket and held by a staple, into which the eye of the staple is placed, its purpose being to keep the bail from rubbing the paint of the bucket, is an aggregation, neither the washer modifying the action of the staple or the staple the action of the washer. Double Pointed Tack Co. v. Two River Mfg. Co., 109 U. S. 117.

Combinations Held to Produce No New Results and Therefore to be Not Patentable.—The combination of a cracker machine and an automatic stopping device. Duesh v. A. J. Medlar Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 619. Attaching a device for holding books to the bottom of a desk lid. Peard v. Johnson, 23 Fed. Rep. 507. In stoppers for glass jars, putting together the screw plate of one device and the lining of another. Consolidated Fruit Jar Co. v. Bellaire Stamping Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 91. Device composed of parts which are old, excepting the precise lines of the cuts and shape of the openings (which are not material, and as they produce a result which is the mere aggregate of separate contributions, not patentable. Mosler Safe & Lock Co. v. Mosler, 22 Fed. Rep. 901; Husselman v. Gaar, 29 Fed. Rep. 318. Combining a reticulated covering and slats in a cover. Hayes v. Bickelhaupt, 21 Fed. Rep. 566; Waterclosets Novel Iron Works v. Skirm.

"Aggregation"—Each Part Producing Only Its Well Known Effect.—A small cylindrical box, perforated at the ends with holes, and having the perforations closed by wax or wafer or paper pasted on, to retain the contents while the box is being transported, the wax or wafer being removed or the paper punctured when it is desired to permit the contents to pass through the holes. The box was old, the closing of the packages with wax, wafer or pasted paper is also old. Each of these devices produces its obvious well known result, and each produces in combination no other effect than each produced separately. This is aggregation, not legitimate combination. Sawyer v. Bixby, 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. 283.

Omission of Part.—The omission of a part where the function performed by it is omitted is not invention.¹

A pavement was formed of blocks of wood cut from the trunks and branches of trees, set with their fibers vertical upon a bed of broken stone, the space within filled with sand or gravel; all the elements were old and the improvement simply consisted in taking a known material (wooden blocks) and constructing a pavement in a well known manner. Held, not invention, but mechanical skill. Phillips v. Detroit, 111 U. S. 604.

The combination of an old rawhide fulling machine with an automatic reverser, held, aggregation. Royer v. Coupe, 38 Fed. Rep. 115. See also Schlict & Field v. Sherwood Letter File Co., 36 Fed. Rep. 587.

Where a Device Is Superior in Appearance, or Utility.—Patentee took a lantern top, such as could have then been found in use, and secured it by a hinge and catch substantially as lanterns had previously been fastened; held, although no former lantern was equal to it in form and convenience, it was aggregation and not invention. Adams v. Bellaire Stamping Works, 36 Pat. Office Gaz. 567; s. c., 28 Fed. Rep. 360. Putting an additional window, which does nothing but allow light to traverse a part previously dark, in a fare box, and accomplishing this result without aid from the other parts, is an aggregation, not an invention. Slawson v. Grand St., Prospect Park and Flatbush R. Co., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 512; s. c., 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 21c. A patent for a combination of a fire lighter and a bundle of kindling wood is void. Alcott v. Young, 21 Pat. Office Gaz. 251; s. c., 9 Fed. Rep. 450. A piece of rubber fastened to one end of a piece of wood which forms a pencil is not invention, for a handle in common does not create a new or combined operation. Reckendorfer v. Faber, 92 U. S. 347. A combination of a fire lighter and a bundle of kindling wood. Alcott v. Young, 21 Pat. Office Gaz. 361; s. c., 9 Fed. Rep. 450. A glass chimney base and a mica chimney top. Blackman v. Hibbler, 17 Blatchf. (C. C.) 333; s. c., 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 641. A camera and a finder located thereon, each working independently. Schmid v. Schoville Mfg. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 345.

Use in Succession of Well Known Instruments.—The use in succession of two distinct pairs of dies, of well known kinds, not combined in one machine, nor co-operating to one result, but each pair doing by itself its own work, is not a patentable invention. Beecher Mfg. Co. v. Atwater Mfg. Co., 114 U. S. 523.

Example Where Superiority of Device Did Not Arise from Combination.—If the superiority of a wheel arose from the fact that two devices combined in it, each of which was better intrinsically than the other and yet each operating independently of the other, the combination would be but the exercise of judgment in the choice of parts, and not invention. Sarven v. Hall, 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. 41c.

Examples of Devices Held Not Aggregation.—The combination of a wire gauze and a grating and a point, the object being that they may be driven into the earth and serve as a filter without being injured in the driving, and the combination of a grating and a wire gauze so that the water may be controlled in its ingress into the pump, held not aggregation. Christman v. Rumsey, 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 506; s. c., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 148. The application to safe doors of chronometric mechanism for automatic locking and unlocking at predetermined times, required invention. Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Norwich Nat. Bank, 6 Fed. Rep. 377. Cases in which combination held not aggregation but invention. Booth v. Parks, 1 Flippin (C. C.) 381; s. c., 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 225; Loom Co. v. Higgins, 105 U. S. 580; Temple Pump Co. v. Rubber Bucket Mfg. Co., 39 Pat. Office Gaz. 467.

1. Omission of Parts of Combination—When Invention.—The reconstruction of a machine, so that a less number of parts will perform all the requirements of a greater, may be an invention of a high order, but the omission of a part with a corresponding omission of the function, so that the remaining parts do precisely what they did before, cannot be more than a mere matter of judgment, depending upon whether it is desirable to have the machine do more or less. McClain v. Ortemager & Sons, 2 Pat. Office Gaz. 724; s. c., 4 Fed. Rep.

m. Putting Two Old Things Side by Side Without Change of Function.—The use of two or more old things side by side¹ or placing two old elements side by side in a combination,² the placing together of parts which had previously been used for the same purposes as in the patent, though not in the same combination,³ is not invention.

A process of curing fish by the removal of the mucous membrane, it not being previously known that such membrane was injurious to the keeping qualities of the fish, is an invention. Crowell v. Harlow, 1 Fed. Rep. 140.

1. Lake v. Fitzgerald, 6 Fisher Pat. Cas. 420. This case is referred to in "double use," and the close connection of the two can easily be seen. Adams v. Bellaire Stamping Co., 36 Pat. Office Gaz. 1149; s. c., 28 Fed. Rep. 360. Application of blast of hot air formerly used for dispersion of moisture and dry molds here used for drying and heating interior of cask preparatory to pitching. "The patentee took old and well known mechanical contrivances for accomplishing useful results and applied them to a new purpose. In this there was nothing to support a claim for a patentable invention or process. The various instrumentalities operated just as they had previously operated when the blast was used for other purposes. They employed old mechanism without producing a new effect. It may be true that this device produced a better result, but that of itself was not enough to sustain the patent. Gottfried v. Brewing Co., 22 Pat. Office Gaz. 497; s. c., 9 Fed. Rep. 762. There is no invention in making a scale pan of glass with glass legs made integral therewith, and suspending it by branching metal bows passing through holes in said legs, glass and glazed porcelain scales being old and metallic scale pans suspended on branching bows being old. Fuschmer v. Baumgarten, 26 Fed. Rep. 858; s. c., 36 Pat. Office Gaz. 167.

Full Statement of the Rules and Its Reasons.—Where the mode of construction of the article claimed, the materials employed and the purpose for which it was to be used had all been described separately in earlier patents, although the article itself had never been described in any previous patent, and to that extent was novel and was of great utility, it did not require invention to produce it. Gardner et al. v. Herz, 35 Pat. Office Gaz. 999; s. c., 118 U. S. 180.

2. An ingenious arrangement of old parts which produces a device in its entirety novel and useful is not necessarily invention. Calkins v. Oshkosh Carriage Co., 36 Pat. Office Gaz. 1149; s. c., 27 Fed. Rep. 296. A new combination of old parts may sometimes perhaps often, be so obvious as to merit no title to invention. Enterprise Mfg. Co. of Pennsylvania v. Sargent, 37 Pat. Office Gaz. 891; s. c., 28 Fed. Rep. 185. Any new combination of old ingredients is patentable when any new result follows, but the mere exercise of judgment of mechanical skill, of selecting a few ingredients from a larger number already known and specified in former patents, is not invention. Welling v. Crane, 14 Fed. Rep. 571; s. c., 23 Pat. Office Gaz. 189.

Putting a stereoscope on a stand like those used for cameras, telescopes, etc., not patentable; such use is only putting an old stand to a new use. Quirole v. Ardito, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 400. The application to a bar in use on one kind of wrench of a nut in use on another kind is not invention. Collins Co. v. Coes, 21 Fed. Rep. 38, overruling 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 548. Putting flanges to the gutters on a cover to stiffen them is mere mechanical skill. Haynes v. Biuckelhaupt, 21 Fed. Rep. 567; s. c., 29 Pat. Office Gaz. 368. The adaptation of an automatic device known and in use before the plaintiffs patent to a steam fire engine is not such an invention as will sustain a patent. Blake v. San Francisco, 113 U. S. 679.

3. In trucks already in use on railroad cars, the ring bolt which held the

n. Mere Carrying Forward of Old Idea.—Any mere carrying forward of new or more extended application of the original thought in which substantially the same thing is accomplished in substantially the same way by substantially the same means with better results,¹ or a change where the only difference is one of degree as to quantity of product or of convenience as to charcar to each truck passed through a bolster supporting the weight of the car and through an elongated opening in the plate below, so as to allow the swivelling of the truck upon the bolt and lateral motion in the truck and the bolster was suspended by divergent pendent links from the brackets on the frame, whereby the weight of the car tended to counteract any tendency to depart from the line of the track. Held, that a patent for employing such a truck for the forward truck of a locomotive with fixed driving wheels was void. Penna. Railroad Co. v. Truck Co., 110 U. S. 490; s. c., 27 Pat. Office Gaz. 207. A solid conical bolt having existed, adding a screw thread to it is not invention. Hall v. McNeal, 107 U. S. 90; s. c., 23 Pat. Office Gaz. 937. In a "clamping finger" in a lead pencil the slots, screw threads, etc., were all old, and some had been previously combined with each other, therefore putting two or more slots in a tube threaded inside and slewed outside is not invention. Holland v. Shipley & Tyndall Mfg. Co., 127 U. S. 396; s. c., 44 Pat. Office Gaz. 231.

Where an element of a claim performs no other or different function in a new combination than it has performed in other combination there is no invention in merely changing its location in the new combination to adapt it to a modification of form of one of the other elements. Phipps v. Yost, 26 Fed. Rep. 447.

1. Sawyer v. Miller, 12 Fed. Rep. 725; Smith v. Nichols, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 112. It is the invention of what is new, and not the arrival at a comparative superiority or greater excellence in that which is already known, which the law protects as exclusive property, and which it secures by patent. Smith v. Nichols, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 112.

Merely improving the conceptions of another by chance in form, proportion, or degree, is not such an invention as will sustain a patent. Theberath v. Celluloid Harness Trimming Co., 15 Fed. Rep. 246.

Mere Improvement, Not Invention.—

Merely making an article better than it was before does not in itself involve invention. Crouch v. Roemer, 103 U. S. 797; s. c., 19 Pat. Office Gaz. 1067. "Slight variations in form or superior smoothness" (in an article in which smoothness was desirable) will not make things new articles of manufacture. Hatch v. Moffitt, 15 Fed. Rep. 252. The adjustment of the various parts of a combination may be novel and the result useful, yet it may only exhibit the expected skill of a mechanic and not the creative work of an inventor. Calkins v. Oshkosh Carriage Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 296.

Examples of Above Doctrine.—Manufacture.—Where a textile fabric, having a certain substantial construction and possessing essential properties, has been long known and in use; a patent is void when all that distinguishes a new fabric is a higher finish, greater beauty of surface, the result perhaps of greater tightness of weaving, and due to the skill or observation of the workman or perfection of machinery employed. Smith v. Nichols, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 112. The improvement consisted in increasing the size and distance apart of the India rubber cords in a fabric was properly rejected, that not being considered an invention in the sense of the law. Smith v. Nichols, 6 Fisher Pat. Cas. 60.

Machine.—When a firm bed and an open joint for foot hold had been obtained before by using parallelopeds with rough surface in conjunction with a filling of sand, it required no invention to secure the entire result by selecting stones with rougher side surface and dispensing with artificial means for keeping the stones apart; the change was only of degree, only carrying forward the old idea and doing what had been done before in substantially the same way, but with better results. Guidet v. City of Brooklyn, 21 Pat. Office Gaz. 1692; s. c., 105 U. S. 550.

Process.—The substitution of dissolved bone for ground bone as a fertilizer not an invention, but mere carrying on of a thought to produce a better product.

acter of the device,¹ is not invention. But where the new idea engrafted upon an old invention is distinct from it and not a mere carrying forward of the idea contained in it, it is an invention.²

2. Result as Evidence of Invention—a. Novelty and Utility of Result as Evidence of Invention.—In determining whether a device is an invention or not, the result that has been produced by a change can be taken into consideration with it,³ and the novelty of a result or its superior utility is evidence of invention.⁴

Boykin v. Baker, 9 Fed. Rep. 699; s. c., 4 Hughes (U. S.) 82.

1. Perry v. Co-operative F. Co., 12 Fed. Rep. 149.

Change Only in Degree.—Where the results are produced by mere mechanical skill or where the change is only in degree and not new, the improvement is not patentable. Wood v. Packer, 17 Fed. Rep. 650.

The design of the patent laws is to reward those who make some substantial discovery or invention which adds to our knowledge and makes a step in advance in the useful arts. It is never their object to grant a monopoly for every trifling device, every shadow or shade of an idea which would naturally and spontaneously occur to any skilled mechanic or operator in the ordinary progress of manufactures. Atlantic Works v. Brady, 107 U. S. 192.

Change Producing Better Result Sometimes Patentable.—An arrangement of mechanical operations that produces an old result in an easier or better manner is understood to be patentable. Cochrane v. Deener, 94 U. S. 789; Telephone Cases, 126 U. S. 1; s. c. (Dolbear v. Amer. Bell Tel. Co.), 42 Pat. Office Gaz. 271; Hake v. Brown, 47 Pat. Office Gaz. 1071.

The apparatus was a grate which will discharge a greater quantity of refuse at one revolution than a previous one and with which the poker would be of a more convenient shape. Perry v. Co-operative Foundry Co., 12 Fed. Rep. 149.

2. Heald v. Rice, 104 U. S. 739; s. c., 21 Pat. Office Gaz. 1443.

Difference in the Use of the Word "Improvement."—An improvement may not be merely a new application of a prior invention, but it may be an article complete in itself and involve an invention. Lindsay v. Stein, 10 Fed. Rep. 907.

3. Hall v. Wills, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 194.

Reason.—Because the result, if greatly more beneficial than it was with the old contrivance, reflects back, and tends to characterize in some degree the importance of the change. Hall v. Wills, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 194.

4. Smith v. Goodyear, 93 U. S. 486.

Example of Novelty Presuming Invention.—Where the result produced by an aggregation of parts is the transmission of signals to a car when in motion, which had never been produced before the combination was adopted, and some of the parts in the combination performed a new function, the whole combination produces a new result, and is an invention. Western Electric Mfg. Co. v. Chicago Electric Mfg. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 601.

The patentability of an alleged invention is, in many cases, most satisfactorily shown by its utility. Penna. Salt Mfg. Co. v. Thomas, 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. 148; s. c., 8 Phila. 144.

Increase in Product Presumes Invention.—Such a combination of known devices as to give a loom the capacity of weaving fifty yards of carpet a day, instead of forty, is patentable. Loom Co. v. Higgins, 105 U. S. 580.

Utility Evidence of Some New Principle.—Superior utility in the defendant's device (a wheel) is evidence that some new principle, or mechanical power, or new mode of operation, producing a new kind of result, has been. This utility, however, must be derived from the changes introduced, not from use of better material or greater care or skill in manufacture. Many v. Sizer, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 17.

New and Useful Result.—A new combination of known devices, producing a new and useful result (as that of greatly increasing the effectiveness of the machine), is evidence of invention, and may be the subject of letters patent. Loom Co. v. Higgins, 105 U. S. 580. In determining whether there was invention in any particular combination, the important point is to ascertain whether novelty and utility exist. Hoe v. Cottrell, 1 Fed. Rep. 597.

In the older cases, where both novelty and superior utility existed in the device, they were considered conclusive evidence of invention.¹ This ruling has been modified by the later cases,² and it is now held that a device must show invention as well as novelty and utility to be patentable.³

1. If a new or improved useful result is effected by means before well known, or any useful result is produced by a new mechanical device, or combination of old mechanical devices, in both cases the exercise of invention must be presumed, because both are proper subjects of a patent. McMillin v. Barclay, 5 Fisher Pat. Cas. 191; s. c., 4 Brews. (U. S.) 275.

Courts Not Exacting in Proving Invention in New or Useful Device.—"When a device produces or has a new mode of operation which accomplishes beneficial results, courts look with favor upon it, and are not exacting as to the degree of inventive skill which was required to produce it; there must be some, but a little will suffice." Hoe v. Cottrell, 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 257; s. c., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 546; s. c., 18 Pat. Office Gaz. 59.

Rearrangement of Combination, Producing New and Improved Results, Invention.—Where the arrangement of a patented combination, many of whose elements were in use before the patent was granted, has many advantages over the previous device and is an improvement thereon, held, a new combination. Nat. Car Brake Shoe Co. v. Boston & Albany R. R. Co., 15 Fed. Rep. 46.

A change in an old device, which produces a new and useful result, is patentable. Sewing Machine Co. v. Frame, 24 Fed. Rep. 596.

Nothing has a greater tendency to prove that these changes involve some functional difference beyond mere mechanical perfection and adjustment than the greatly improved result attending the change. Pearl v. Ocean Mills, 11 Pat. Office Gaz. 2; 2 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 469; Patterson v. Duff, 20 Fed. Rep. 641.

Example.—The changes necessary to convert old time locks, that unlocked at predetermined times, into structures which should also lock at predetermined times, required the exercise of inventive power. Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Norwich Nat. Bank, 6 Fed. Rep. 377.

Slightness of Change Not Fatal.—When the change in construction and mode of operation is slight, but the consequences of the change are considerable, as established by the affidavits of persons who have made actual tests of the devices in question, there is sufficient invention to support a patent. In re John C. Walsh, 1 Mc A. 530.

The Production of a Machine Better for Some Things Is Invention.—A new thing produced better for some purposes than had been produced before, although it appears easy of accomplishment when seen, is such success as is within the benefits of the patent law. Davis v. Fredericks, 19 Fed. Rep. 99.

Public Benefit Part of the Consideration.—Where the improvement and consequent public benefit is great, very little evidence of invention is required. Asenus v. Alden, 27 Fed. Rep. 684.

Attainment of Same Result in Better Manner.—A device which, while it may not effect any new result, does attain the same result in a better manner than was before known, and is therefore a valid subject for a patent. Detroit Lubricator Co. v. Renchard, 9 Fed. Rep. 293.

New Mode of Operation and Better Result, Invention.—Where a combination produces a new mode of operation, and a more efficient machine, and the conception involved thought and intellect, it implies invention. Wisner v. Grant, 7 Fed. Rep. 485.

If an article is rendered salable which was before unsalable, this is evidence of invention. Sargent v. Yale Lock Mfg. Co., 17 Pat. Office Gaz. 106; s. c., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 249; s. c., 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 579.

2. This doctrine has lately been much restrained in its application. The utility of a device and the fact that it has superseded all others previously employed for like purposes, is proper to be considered and in some cases is almost if not quite decisive. It does not of itself establish the fact that it is the product of the inventive faculties. Phillips v. Detroit, 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 347.

3. Novelty and increased utility in an improvement does not necessarily make it an invention. Hollister v. Benedict, 113 U. S. 59.

b. General and Extensive Use of a Device as Evidence of Invention.—The extensive use of a device is evidence that it is the product of the inventive faculties,¹ especially where it is also generally accepted by the public,² was imitated by others³ in the trade, or drove out other prior inventions.⁴ It is, however,

Under the constitution a patent can only be granted for an invention, and under the statute the thing for which a patent may be granted must be not only new and useful, but must amount to an invention or discovery. Spill v. Celluloid Mfg. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 631; May v. County of Fond du Lac, 27 Fed. Rep. 691. Must also amount to an invention or discovery. May v. County of Fond du Lac, 27 Fed. Rep. 691.

Judicial Discussion of Change of Rule.—Formerly, when a change or device was new, and accomplished beneficial results, courts, in determining the question of its patentability, were not rigid in requiring evidence of inventive genius, but since the decision in Hollister v. Benedict (113 U. S. 54; see supra) more stress must be laid on the presence or absence of mechanical skill. Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Comstock & Cheney, 27 Fed. Rep. 358.

Great Utility May Result from Mechanical Change.—Utility does not establish invention. Great utility may have some bearing on the question of invention, yet great utility may sometimes result from changes in mechanical devices which embrace no invention. Sax v. Taylor Iron Works, 30 Fed. Rep. 835.

Where the Merits Arose from Something Else than the Invention.—Where the merit of a machine consists in its being able to overcome a prejudice against machine-made goods and not in the invention of any radically new process for making goods by machinery, it is not properly patentable. Butler v. Steckel, 27 Fed. Rep. 219.

1. Shedd v. Washburn, 9 Fed. Rep. 904.

2. General acceptance and extensive use evidence of invention. Washburn v. Haish, 4 Fed. Rep. 900.

3. Over thirty devices, embodying substantially the device of the patentee, having entered the field since his patent went before the public, shows invention. Shannon v. J. M. W. Jones Stationery and Printing Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 205; Hancock Ins. Co. v. Jenks, 21 Fed. Rep. 911.

Merits Quickly Appreciated.—Where the merits of the invention were quickly appreciated by the public, and it was accepted and adopted by the trade and went into general use, it will be sustained. Strobridge v. Lindsay, 2 Fed. Rep. 692.

4. When an invention involves reflection and experiment to bring it to practical maturity, its evident utility, indicated by its prompt displacement of other devices and extensive use strongly attest its patentable merit. Lorillard Co. v. McDowell, 2 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 531.

The fact that as soon as a patented improvement was made and introduced its advantages over devices which had preceded it became manifest at once, and it commended itself to the public as a practical and desirable improvement, affords a safer criterion of inventive novelty than any subsequent opinion of an expert or intuition of a judge. Palmer v. Johnson, 34 Fed. Rep. 336.

May Always be Considered as an Element.—Whether the single fact that a device has gone into general use and displaced other devices previously employed for analogous uses establishes in all cases or not that the latter device involves patentable invention, it may always be considered as an element in the case, and, when the other facts leave it in doubt, is sufficient to turn the scale. Smith v. Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co., 93 U. S. 486; Shipman Eng. Co. v. Rochester Tool Co., 44 Pat. Office Gaz. 1067; s. c., 34 Fed. Rep. 747.

This Evidence Is of Great Weight in a Doubtful Case.—In doubtful cases involving the validity of a patent, the fact that the article made by the use of the process described in the patent has been extensively sold, is a consideration of great weight with the court. Watson Packing Co. v. Chicago Packing & Prov. Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 547.

Where an article is of great utility, has superseded older articles, and is largely recognized by the public and licensees as a useful invention, there is a strong presumption in favor of its patentability. Lindsey v. Stein, 10 Fed. Rep. 907; Eclipse Windmill Co.

not conclusive, though highly persuasive evidence, and will not per se sustain a patent.¹

c. Ineffectual Attempts by Former Experimenters.—Ineffectual attempts by previous experimenters to obtain the result desired are evidence that the inventor had more than mere mechanical difficulties to overcome.² Where the time during which the experiments lasted is long, the simplicity of the change is of little importance,³ and the evidence of invention may be conclusive.⁴ But where the inventor had, by a simple and obvious

v. May, 17 Fed. Rep. 344; Pickering v. Miller, 25 Pat. Office Gaz. 89.

1. Not Conclusive but Highly Persuasive Evidence.—The utility of a machine, instrument or contrivance as shown by the public demand for it, while not conclusive, is highly persuasive evidence of novelty and invention. Hill v. Biddle, 27 Fed. Rep. 560, but not enough per se to sustain a patent. Wilson Packing Co. v. Chicago Packing Co., 7 Fed. Rep. 547; s. c., 21 Pat. Office Gaz. 411.

Although a device may be evidenced by public favor and extensive use to be an improvement on older devices, the question is whether it is a patentable improvement. Consolidated Fruit Jar Co. v. Bellaire Stamping Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 91.

While the fact that a device, is useful and has superseded all others previously employed for like purposes is proper to be considered, and in some cases is almost if not quite decisive, it does not of itself establish the fact that it is the product of the inventive faculties. Phillips v. Detroit, 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 347; s. c., 17 Pat. Office Gaz. 191. The improvements were prima facie due to mechanical skill. Held, that the device had commended itself to public favor was no proof of invention. Corbin etc. Co. v. Eagle Lock Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 338.

2. Terry Clock Co. v. New Haven Clock Co., 17 Pat. Office Gaz. 909; s. c., 3 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 332.

3. A change, simple as it may be, was not made for twenty-five years after the device came into common use, and was useful; held, invention was to be inferred. Collins Co. v. Coes, 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 548; s. c., 3 Fed. Rep. 225.

4. When skill has been obviously reaching out for years and finally some one, by a new device of a new process which no one else had thought of accomplishes it, the fact is indication of invention and may be conclusive. Wilcox v. Bookwalter, 31 Fed. Rep. 224 (see 230); s. c., 39 Pat. Office Gaz. 1200.

Where the attention of persons skilled in the art had been directed for many years to the discovery of a more convenient and effective contrivance and the patentee was the first to produce it; held, something more than mere mechanical skill was required to produce it. Niles Tool Co. v. Betts Machine Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 301.

Where Device Also Went Into General Use.—Others having endeavored unsuccessfully to accomplish what the complainant achieved and also that the device of complainant was at once accepted by the public, the fact of success and acceptance by the public in a field where others had tried and failed is sufficient evidence that the device was both new and useful. Ward v. Grand Detour Plow Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 696.

If an article be new and useful, the fact that no mechanic ever made it is sufficient proof that it required invention. Dederick v. Cassell, 20 Pat. Office Gaz. 1233; s. c., 9 Fed. Rep. 306. Where an old device or machine is taken in hand, and by changing its form or structure the defects are removed and a different and greatly improved result obtained, it may safely be affirmed it required invention. Asmus v. Alden, 27 Fed. Rep. 684.

It is urged that as the edge rolling of metals and spiral springs are well known in the arts before the date of the patent in question, the alleged invention described in it is without patentable merit. This is sufficiently answered by the fact that Pickering was the first to conceive the idea of constructing a spring of the peculiar form described in his patent whereby improved results were accomplished, and that the public has attested its superior utility and value by adopting it instead of other springs then in use. These facts imply the exercise of suffimodification of a former device, made a machine which would do something that had long been sought to be done by complex mechanism, there is no evidence of invention.¹

VI. AMOUNT OF INVENTION EMPLOYED IN CONTRIVING DEVICE UNIMPORTANT.—The validity of a patent is not to be determined by the amount of invention required to produce it,² provided it be something more than the "shadow or shade of an idea."³

cient inventiveness to sustain a patent. Miller v. Pickering, 40 Leg. Int. 187. s. c., 16 Fed. Rep. 540; s. c., 25 Pat. Office Gaz. 89.

"In the multiplicity of printing press mechanism had not been hit upon its utility was universally recognized. It being plain that, in order to make the combination, some changes were necessary, satisfies me that the result required changes which the mere skill of the skilled mechanic would not suggest." Hoe v. Cottrell, 53 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 256. Although paper bag machines were old and had been constructed by various persons, in various forms, with more or less utility, for more than twenty years, this particular device had not been hit upon. Paper Bag Co. v. Murphy, 13 Pat. Office Gaz. 366; Union Paper Bag Co. v. Pultz & Walkley Co., 15 Pat. Office Gaz. 423; s. c., 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 160; s. c., 3 Bann. & Ard. 403.

1. The problem before the inventor had been to make pretzels by machinery instead of by hand. Various dies had been made by which dough had been cut into different shapes. The inventor simply contrived a die which cut the dough into the shape of a pretzel. Prior to his time pretzel machines had been unsuccessfully endeavored to be made to draw out the dough and plate it as in hand made pretzels. The court held this was not invention, saying, "I cannot see that the mere fact that others were so long wandering by the wrong path is any evidence that it requires invention to accomplish what has been done by taking the direct path as pursued by these patentees." Butler v. Steckel, 27 Fed. Rep. 219; s. c., 36 Pat. Office Gaz. 455.

2. Potter v. Holland, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 382.

If any is required in the production of a device, the law will not attempt to measure its extent or degree. Washburn & Wren Mfg. Co. v. Haish, 4 Fed. Rep. 900.

Degree of Mental Labor and Inventive Skill—With regard to the degree of mental labor and inventive skill required in the work of invention, the law has no nice or rigid standard. There must be some inventive skill exercised, but the degree of that skill is not material. It frequently happens that, in the progress of the mechanic arts, the time arrives when the whole atmosphere of inventive thought is quickened with the life of an approaching discovery; that many lines of investigation and experiment, converging for a long time towards a point, almost but not quite reaching it, when at last some mind, by a happy thought, supplies some new element or instrument and gives birth to the organized idea. Clark Patent Co. v. Copeland, 2 Fisher Pat. Cas. 221. A patented invention is a mental result. Smith v. Nichols, 6 Fisher Pat. Cas. 61. The validity of a patent does not depend upon the opinion formed after the event as to the ease with which the mind could form the idea embodied by the invention. Colgate v. West. Union Tel. Co., 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 37; s. c., 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 365; s. c., 14 Pat. Office Gaz. 37.

3. Atlantic Works v. Brady, 107 U. S. 192; Perry v. Co-operative Foundry Co., 12 Fed. Rep. 149.

The subject matter, to be patentable, must require invention, but not necessarily painful or long study, or embodied alone in complex mechanism. A single flash of thought may reveal to the inventor the new idea, and a frail and simple contrivance may embody it. Magic Ruffle Co. v. Douglas, 2 Fisher Pat. Cas. 330. It is of no consequence how much or how little labor, study or thought the invention may cost, if it really be a new and useful invention. Many v. Sizer, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 17. It matters not how the thought (which is the basis of the invention) is acquired or brought into action, whether by sudden conjecture or chance experiment, or by the labors and investigations of a life, or that it proves preeminently serviceable and profitable to the industries and enjoyments of life,

The slightness of the labor or thought involved,¹ or the simplicity or frailty of the device employed,² are no reason that it should not be the product of the inventive faculties.

1. Accidental Making of a Device; When Invention.—That the invention was the result of accident does not invalidate the patent for it.³ But a device made accidentally without any knowledge how to accomplish it, or to duplicate it, is not invention.⁴

VII. DISTINCTION BETWEEN INVENTION AND UNPATENTABLE DISCOVERY—1. Definition of Unpatentable Discovery.—A discovery in its unpatentable sense is a bringing to light of things that existed before, but were not known before.⁵

2. Subjects of Discovery.—The subject of a discovery may be:

a. When Principle of Nature, Force or Law Acting Upon Matter is unpatentable. By "principle," in the patent law, is understood or only to a very small degree. Carr v. Rice, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 108. A combination, if simple and obvious, yet entirely new, is an invention. 1 Robb. Pat. Cas. 490; s. c., 4 Mason (U. S.) 371.

1. Stewart v. Mahoney, 4 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 84; s. c., 5 Fed. Rep. 302.

Neither does the validity of a patent depend upon an opinion, formed after the event, respecting the ease or difficulty of the result. Forbush v. Cook, 2 Fisher Pat. Cas. 668.

2. The simplicity of an invention, so far from being an objection to it, may constitute its great excellence and value. Indeed, to produce a great result by simple means, before unknown or unthought of, is not unfrequently the peculiar characteristic of the very highest class of minds. STORY, J., Ryan v. Goodwin, 1 Robb Pat. Cas. 725; s. c., 3 Sumner (U. S.) 514.

3. Accidental Making—English Authorities.—May be the result of accident, dependent on no theory, but on a lucky experiment. Liardel v. Johnson, Webster's Pat. Cas. (Eng.) 54. And it is not essential that labor, thought or money should have been bestowed on the invention. Crane v. Price, Webster Pat. Cas. (Eng.) 411.

American Authorities.—An invention is not like a will, depending on intention. It is a fact, and if the fact exists, it does not appear material whether it came by design or accidentally, without being bidden. Badische Anilin & Soda Fabrik v. Cochrane, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 155. Stephens v. Salisbury, 1 Mc A. Pat. Cas. 379.

4. Pelton v. Walters, 7 Pat. Office

Gaz. 425; s. c., 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 599.

A simple successful use of a cutter intended to cut leather, but having the same construction of a subsequently patented glass cutter to cut glass, is not invention of a glass cutter. Monce v. Adams, 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 126. (See p. 133); s. c., 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 1; s. c., 7 Pat. Office Gaz. 177.

A man had made a close joint, impervious to steam, upon the neck of a glass globe. He afterwards tried to make another, but broke many bottles in his attempt, and did not succeed, except partially, in a single instance. Held, that he had not made an invention. Pelton v. Walters, 1 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 603; s. c., 7 Pat. Office Gaz. 425.

5. Ex parte Kemper, Cranch Pat. Dec. 89; s. c., Pat. Office Rep. for 1847, vol. 2, 797. Morton v. N. Y. Eye and Ear Infirmary, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 320.

In this case the court said: "The real discovery was that this well known inhalation of known agents [ether] (in increased quantities) would produce insensibility to pain. . . . The effect alone was new, and to that only can the term "discovery" apply. . . . This mere discovery, however novel and important, is not patentable." Morton v. N. Y. Eye and Ear Infirmary, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 320.

Example of "Discovery."—A party cannot obtain a patent for a plan of packing ice by putting the blocks on edge, although he was the first to discover the beneficial effects of that mode, for it was a mere discovery of a new effect of that which existed before. Ex

a fundamental truth (in science), an original cause or motive.¹ Such a principle or force, or their synonymous terms, cannot by themselves be patented.²

b. How Far Principle May Become Patentable.—The embodiment of a principle or a force³ in a machine⁴ or a process⁵ is an invention, and the patent is not void, even if this embodiment paris Kemper, Cranch Pat. Dec. 89; s. c., Pat. Office Rep. for 1847, vol. 2, 797.

1. Le Roy v. Tatham, 14 How. (U. S.) 156.

The words "power," law of nature, etc., seem generally used in their regular meaning.

Principle is defined as "mode of operation" in Burr v. Duryee, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 531.

2. Le Roy v. Tatham, 14 How. (U. S.) 156; Evans v. Eaton, 1 Peters (C. C.) 322; Morton v. N. Y. Eye and Ear Infirmary, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 320; O'Reilly v. Morse, 15 How. (U. S.) 62; Hatch v. Moffitt, 15 Fed. Rep. 252; Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Berkshire Nat. Bank, 17 Fed. Rep. 531.

Examples of "forces," "steam power," "electricity," Leroy v. Tatham, 14 How. (U. S.) 156.

A new power of nature would not be patentable. Le Roy v. Tatham, 14 How. (U. S.) 156.

Idea Unpatentable.—Wicke v. Ostrum, 103 U. S. 461; Burr v. Duryee, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 531; Case v. Brown, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 531.

3. The distinction between a patent for a principle and a patent which can be supported is, that there must be an embodiment of the principle in some practical mode described in the specification for carrying it into actual effect; and then a patent may be taken out, not for the principle, but for the mode of carrying the principle into effect. Le Roy v. Tatham, 22 How. (U. S.) 132; Wintermute v. Reddington, Fisher Pat. Cas. 239. The idea he could not patent, but the contrivance to make it practically useful he could. Wicke v. Ostrum, 103 U. S. 461; Case v. Brown, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 531.

Explanation of Above Doctrine.—He then controls his discovery through the means by which he has brought it into practical action, or their equivalents, and only through them. It is then an invention, although it embraces a discovery. Sever the force or principle discovered from the means or mechanism, and it immediately falls out of that domain and eludes his grasp. Every invention may, in a certain sense, embrace more or less of discovery . . .

but it by no means follows that every discovery is an invention. It may be the soul of an invention, but it cannot be the subject of exclusive control of the patentee or the patent law, until it inhabits a body, no more than can a disembodied spirit be subjected to the control of human laws. Morton v. N. Y. Eye Infirmary, 2 Fisher Pat. Cas. 320; s. c., Blatchf. (U. S.) 116; Tyler v. Devlin, 1 A. L. J. 248.

4. Patentee restricted to particular device, by which he has undertaken to avail himself of that principle. Steam Gauge and Lantern Co. v. St. Louis R. R. Supplies & Manufacturing Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 491; Stainthorp v. Elkinton, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 349.

"A machine is a concrete thing, consisting of parts, or of certain devices or combination of devices. The principle of a machine is properly defined to be its 'mode of operation,' or that peculiar combination of devices which distinguishes it from other machines." Burr v. Duryee, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 531.

5. In all such cases, application of principle; the processes used to extract, modify and concentrate natural agencies constitute the invention. The elements of the power exist; the invention is not in discovering them, but in applying them to useful objects. Le Roy v. Tatham, 14 How. (U. S.) 156; O'Reilly v. Morse, 15 How. (U. S.) 62.

There can be no patent for a mere principle, nor can the discoverer of a natural force or a scientific fact obtain a patent therefor; but if he invents a process by which a certain effect of one of the forces of nature is made useful to mankind, and fully describes and claims that process, and describes a mode or apparatus by which it may be usefully applied, he is entitled to a patent for the process, and is not restricted to the particular form of mechanism or apparatus employed. American Bell Tel. Co. v. Dolbear, 15 Fed. Rep. 448.

Invention Good Although Principle Discovered.—Doubtless an invention is the only means by which the principle or force can be used.¹

may be good though the subject of it consists in the discovery of some principle of science or property of matter never before known or used, by which some new and useful result is obtained, and such invention or discovery may be the subject of a valid patent without including in the claim any new arrangement of machinery to accomplish the object, provided the inventor describes, as required by the patent law, the method, process or means of applying the invention to practical use and of obtaining the described new and useful result. Household Co. v. Neilson, 1 Webster's Pat. Cas. (Eng.) 683.

Discovery of Application of Property of Nature.—Where a party has discovered a new application of some property in nature, never before known or in use, by which he has produced a new and useful result, the discovery is the subject of the patent, independently of any peculiar or new arrangement of machinery, for the purpose of applying the new property in nature. Silby v. Foote, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 260.

Distinction Between Claim for Process and Principle of Nature.—The patent of Neilson for a hot blast smelting furnace, the claim is thus explained and commented on, explaining the previous comments by American courts: "But upon full consideration we think the plaintiff does not merely claim a principle, but a machine embodying a principle, and a very valuable one. We think the case must be considered as if, the principle being well known, the plaintiff had first invented a mode of applying it by a mechanical apparatus to furnaces; and his invention consists in this, by interposing a receptacle for heated air between the blowing apparatus and the furnace. In this receptacle he directs the air to be heated by the application of heat externally to the receptacle, and thus he accomplishes the object of applying the blast, which was before of cold air, in a heated state to the furnace. Webster's Rep. [Eng.] 371."

In this passage we think the court of exchequer drew the true distinction between a mere principle as the subject of his patent and a process by which a principle is applied to effect a useful result. That a hot blast is better than a cold blast for smelting iron in a furnace was the principle or scientific fact discovered by Neilson. And yet being nothing but a principle he could not have a patent for that. But having invented and practically exemplified a process for utilizing this principle, namely, that of heating the blast in a receptacle between the blowing apparatus and the furnace—he was entitled to a patent for that process. Tilghman v. Procter, 102 U. S. 707.

Latest Cases Distinguishing Invention and Principle.—In this art, or what is the same thing under the patent law, this process, this way of transmitting speech electricity, one of the forces of nature, is employed; but electricity left to itself will not do what is wanted. The art consists in so controlling the force as to make it accomplish the purpose. It had long been believed that if the vibrations of air caused by the voice in speaking could be reproduced at a distance by means of electricity the speech itself would be reproduced and understood. How to do it was the question. Bell discovered that it could be done by gradually changing the intensity of a continuous electric current so as to make it correspond exactly to the changes in the density of the air caused by the sound of the voice. This was his art. Dolbear v. American Bell Telephone Co., 126 U. S. 1 (Telephone Cases); s. c., 43 Pat. Office Gaz. 377.

Latest Constructions of O'Reilly v. Morse, 15 How. (U. S.) 62.—The eighth claim of Morse's patent has been held to be invalid because it was regarded by the court as being not for a process but for a mere principle. It amounted to this, namely, a claim to the exclusive right to the use of electro magnetism as a motive power for making intelligible marks at a distance—that is, a claim of the exclusive use of one of the powers of nature for a particular purpose. It is not a claim of any particular machinery, nor a claim of any particular process for utilizing the power but a claim of the power itself; a claim put forward on the ground that the patentee was the first to discover that it could be thus employed. Tilghman v. Procter, 102 U. S. 707.

1. It may be that electricity cannot be used at all for the transmission of speech, except in the way Bell has discovered. But that does not make his claim, one for the use of electricity, distinct from the particular process

c. Effect or Result.—An effect or result is not patentable; the invention consists in the means by which the result is produced.¹

VIII. JOINT INVENTION—1. Definition.—A joint invention takes place where each party invents or discovers something essential to the whole,² or where the completed invention is the gradual result of the combined mental operations of two persons;³ but with which it is connected in this patent. Telephone Cas. 126 U. S. 1; s. c. (Dolbear v. American Bell Telephone Co.), 43 Pat. Office Gaz. 377.

1. Leroy v. Tatham, 14 How. (U. S.) 156; Sangster v. Miller, 2 Fish. Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 563; Carr v. Rice, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 325; Burr v. Durgee, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 531.

A person cannot patent a result, but only the means or art by which the result may be effected. New Process Fer. Co. v. Mans, 20 Fed. Rep. 725.

It is not purpose or results that are the subjects of a patent, but the instrumentality, contrivance or machinery through the agency of which results are effected. Ex parte Merrill, 1 McArthur (Sup. Ct. D. C.) 301.

A new effect produced by old agents operating by old means upon old subjects, however novel and important, is not patentable. It is nothing more than the application of a well known agent, by well known means, to a new and more perfect use. Morton v. N. Y. Eye Infirmary, 2 Fisher Pat. Cas. (C. C.) 320; s. c., 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 116.

Distinction Between Decision on Eighth and Other Claims.—In O'Reilly v. Morse, 15 How. (U. S.) 62, it was decided that a claim in broad terms (p. 86) for the use of the motive power of the electric or galvanic current, called "electro magnetism, however developed for making or printing intelligible characters, letters, signs at any distances," although "a new application of that power" first made by Morse, was void, because (p. 120) it was a claim for "a patent for an effect produced by the use of electro magnetism distinct from the process or machinery necessary to produce it," but a claim (p. 85) for "making use of the motive power of magnetism when developed by the action of such currents or current, substantially as set forth in the foregoing description . . . as means of operating or giving motion to machinery, which may be used to imprint signals on paper or other suitable material, or to produce sounds in any desired manner, for the purpose of telegraphic communication at any distance," was sustained. The effect of that decision was, therefore, that the use of magnetism as a motive power, without regard to the particular process with which it was connected in the patent, could not be claimed, but its use in that connection could.

In the present case the claim is not for the use of a current of electricity in its natural state, as it comes from the battery, but for putting a continuous current in a closed circuit into a certain specified condition, suited to the transmission of vocal and other sounds, and using it in that condition for that purpose, hence parallel with second quoted clause. Dolbear v. Bell Telephone Co., 126, U. S.; s. c., 43 Pat. Office Gaz. 377.

The plaintiff cannot claim the double dropping of corn,—that is a result or an effect; he can only claim the double dropping by the particular mode which he has devised, and "the so combining" of two sides, one of which is at or near the reed hopper, etc., with a lever as that" a certain result will be obtained, is a claim for a principle or result. Case v. Brown, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 320.

But a claim for a combination of devices, when "so arranged as to produce a specified mechanical result," is not a claim for a function. Renwick v. Pond, 2 Pat. Office Gazette, 392; s. c., 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 39.

Arrangement of Machinery Intended to Secure Operation of Principle.—The arrangement of machinery is designed to secure the operation of laws whose operation is certain to follow such arrangements of it, and those laws are the laws operative, and it is because those known laws are certain to follow such an arrangement that the arrangement is made. The arrangement is none the less an invention because it brings into operation the laws of nature. Hammerschlag v. Scamoni, 7 Fed. Rep. 584.

2. Slemmer's Appeal, 58 Pa. St. 155.

3. Barrett v. Hall, 1 Mason (U. S.)

where one person invents one part of a device and another another, each is a separate inventor of his own contrivance, and not a joint inventor of the whole machine.¹

2. Suggestion; When Suggestor Is an Inventor.—Where an idea is suggested by one and is carried out by another, the two are joint inventors;² but the mere suggestion of ideas which are developed by another does not give any right to the invention,³ and 447; Stearns v. Barrett, 1 Mason (U. S.) 153. Neither of them could justly claim to be the sole inventor; the invention is joint, and they are jointly entitled to a patent. Barrett v. Hall, 1 Mason (C. C.) 447; Stearns v. Barrett, 1 Mason (C. C.) 153.

Extreme Case of Joint Invention.—A man had made a model of a device which he was satisfied would be useful; he then communicated with another party, who suggested certain improvements, and assisted him in contriving them; held, joint invention. Warden v. Fisher, 11 Fed. Rep. 505; s. c., 21 Pat. Office Gaz. 1957.

1. Worden v. Fisher, 21 Pat. Office Gaz. 1957; s. c., 11 Fed. Rep. 505.

If the joint invention is the final one of a series of complete separate inventions, made by one inventor alone before he was joined by his associate inventor, they are joint inventors only to the last invention. Mfg. Co. v. Corbin, 103 U. S. 786; s. c., 20 Pat. Office Gaz. 297.

2. Suggestion to Patentee When Making a Joint Invention.—Worden v. Fisher, 21 Pat. Office Gaz. 1957; s. c., 11 Fed. Rep. 505. If one suggests an idea in a general way and the other falls in with it and by his aid develops it and makes it a practical device. Gottfried v. P. Best Brewing Co., 17 Pat. Office Gaz. 675; s. c., 5 Bann. & Ard. Pat. Cas. 4. If one conceives the entire invention and another makes a suggestion of practical value which the first one failed to think of but which is needed to make the conception a success. Consolidated Bunting Co. v. Woerle, 38 Pat. Office Gaz. 1015; s. c., 29 Fed. Rep. 449.

Where an idea is suggested by one and utilized by another semble, a joint patent should be taken out. Thomas v. Weeks, 2 Paine (U. S.) 92.

3. Blandy v. Griffith, 3 Fisher Pat. Cas. 609. "Is no more the inventor than the tools with which he wrought."

Employer and Employee.—If an employer conceives the result embraced in an invention, or the general idea of a machine upon a particular principle, and then, to carry his conception into effect, it is necessary to employ manual dexterity or even inventive skill in mechanical details and arrangements requisite for carrying out the original conception, in such cases the employer will be the inventor and the servant the mere instrument through which he realizes his ideas. King v. Gedney, 1 Mc. A. Pat. Cas. 443; Wellman v. Blood, 1 Mc. A. Pat. Cas. 432.

The inventor is he whose "inventive suggestiveness" produced the invention, not the mechanic whose only function was to materialize it. Yorder v. Mills, 25 Fed. Rep. 821.

Employee's Suggestions Belong to the Main Inventor.—Where a person has discovered an improved principle in a machine, manufacture or composition of matter, and employs other persons to assist him in carrying out the principle, and they in course of that employment make valuable discoveries ancillary to the plan and preconceived design of the employer, such suggested improvements are in general to be regarded as the property of the party who discovered the original improved principle and may be embodied in his patent as part of his invention. Agawam Co. v. Jordan, 7 Wall (U. S.) 583.

Roberts v. Dickey, 4 Brewster (U. S.) 260.

Suggestions Which Give No Right to Invention and Do Not Invalidate a Patent.—Suggestions by another person which do not amount to patentable inventions or improvements. Pennock v. Dialogue, 4 Wash. (C. C.) 538. Suggestions by others as to mere alteration of form or proportions. Watson v. Bladen, 4 Wash. (C. C.) 580. Suggestions made to the inventor while experimenting upon and during the progress of the development and testing his invention. Spaulding v. Tucker, 1 Dead. (U. S.) 649. Suggestions as to the possibility of making the improvement subsequently patented. Bell v. Daniels, 1 Bond (U. S.) 212. A mere suggestion that a given result may be obtained. Graham v. Gammon, 7 Biss.

even important suggestions give no right against an inventor who was the first to combine and arrange his device into a complete and efficient invention.¹

Suggestions, to give entire right of the invention to the suggestor, must convey such information as would enable an ordinary mechanic, without the exercise of special skill, to construct the complete device.²

3. Right of Mechanic Who Constructs Machine to be Considered as Inventor.—If the conception of the invention be practically complete in the mind of the inventor, the artisan who embodies it in a device is not an inventor.³

(U. S.) 490. Or suggestions about the way an improvement may be carried out. Judson v. Moore, 1 Bond (U. S.) 285. A mere hint as to how the patented improvement might be made. Alden v. Dewey, 1 Story (U. S.) 336.

Suggestions from Scientists.—Neither the enquiries that may have been made, nor the information or advice that may have been received from men of science in the course of the patentee's researches can impair his right to the character of an inventor. It can make no difference whether he derived his information from books or from conversations with men skilled in the sciences. O'Reilly v. Morse, 15 How. (U. S.) 62.

Conversations About Invention.—Mere conversations about the practicability of an improvement will not defeat a patent. Judson v. Moore, 1 Bond (U. S.) 285.

Suggestion from Efforts of Previous Experiments.—The prior efforts of unsuccessful experiments, though they may have suggested the construction of the patent he finally adopted, will not invalidate a patent. Whittlesey v. Ames, 9 Biss. (U. S.) 225.

1. Although the idea of the invention and hints concerning it came to the patentee from others, still, if he was the first who gave that idea a useful and practical form his rights will not be defeated. Teese v. Phillips, 1 Mc. Al. (S. Ct. D. C.) 48; Bell v. Daniels, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 372; Mathews v. Skates, 1 Fisher Pat. Cas. 602.

Inventor He Who First Gave Practical Form.—Not the man who may form an imperfect machine which may suggest to a higher and more practical mind valuable ideas, but he who embodies those ideas in a practicable form, is the inventor. Pitts v. Edmonds, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 168.

2. Agawam Co. v. Jordan, 7 Wall.

(U. S.) 583; Slemmer's Appeal, 58 Pa. St. 155; Watson v. Belfield, 35 Pat. Office Gaz. 1112; s. c., 26 Fed. Rep. 536.

Where the employer has conceived the plan, the employee's suggestions must amount to a complete invention, containing the substance of all that is embodied in the patent subsequently issued to the employer, to render the patent void. Agawam Co. v. Jordan, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 583; Collar Co. v. Van Dusen, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 530. But if the whole or any of the essential parts or principles of a machine are invented by another, and introduced into the machine upon his suggestion, the whole patent is void. Watson v. Bladen, 4 Wash. (C. C.) 580; Pitts v. Hall, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 229.

What Suggestions Render a Patent Void.—A patent for an invention communicated to the patentee by another person is void. Alden v. Dewey, 1 Story (U. S.) 336.

Information to a patentee sufficient to enable him to construct his improvement. Judson v. Moore, 1 Bond (C. C.) 285; Pitts v. Hall, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 229.

Making a Device at Instance of Another.—Paper maker who devises a paper possessing certain qualities, at the instance of one who merely requested that such a paper be made for him, can be considered at most only as a joint inventor with him. Union Paper Collar Co. v. Van Deusen, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 109.

Reducing to Practice the Theory of Another.—A man who reduces to practice the theory of another, who assists in the reduction of it to practice, cannot be considered as the sole inventor of the machine. Arnold v. Bishop, 1 McA. Pat. Cas. 30.

3. See infra, this article, JOINT INVENTION.

INVENTORY—INVESTIGATE—INVESTITURE.

INVENTORY—(See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS; GUARDIAN AND WARD; INSOLVENCY; SCHEDULES).—An inventory is a list, schedule, or enumeration in writing, containing, article by article, the goods and chattels, rights and credits, and, in some cases, the land and tenements, of a person or persons.¹

INVESTIGATE—INVESTIGATION.—To make search or enquiry for truth or facts.²

INVESTITURE.—Delivery of seisin.³

1. 1 Bouv. L. Dict. 837; 1 Abb. L. Dict. 643. The inventory is to be made in the presence of at least two of the creditors of the deceased or legatees, or next of kin, and in their default and absence, of two honest persons. The appraiser must sign it and make oath or affirmation that the appraisement is just to the best of their knowledge. 1 Bouv. L. Dict. 837. See generally Ayl. Pan. 414; Bac. Abr., Executors, etc. (E. 11); Ayl. Par. 305; 14 Vin. Abr. 465; Com. Dig., Administration (B. 7); 3 Burr. 1922; 2 Bla. Com. 514; Love Wills, 38; 2 Ecccl. 322; Wms. Ex., Index; 8 S. & R. 128.

Assignment.—Where the assignor, in a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, has made and filed a correct inventory of his assets and list of creditors as required by the statute, the assignment is not invalidated by the mere fact that the assignee has failed to affix his certificate thereto within ten days after the execution of the assignment (see 1697, R. S.); the provision as to such certificate not requiring it, in terms, to be affixed before the filing of the list and inventory, and being merely directory. Steinlein v. Halstead, 52 Wis. 289. See also Swart v. Thomas, 26 Minn. 141; Farwell v. Gundry, 52 Wis. 268; Haben v. Harshaw, 59 Wis. 403.

Attachment.—In a proceeding under the act of 1805, the omission of the sheriff to sign the inventory and appraisement was held to be a mere irregularity, not affecting the validity of the proceeding. Mitchell v. Eyster, 7 Ohio, 1 pt. 257.

Insolvency.—The inventory of an insolvent's estate should be made as full and complete as possible; but in the enumeration of his losses and debts there is no special reason for much exactness or detail. Wilson v. His Creditors, 32 Cal. 406.

2. "Much stress is laid by appellant on the fact that it does not appear in so many words, that the commissioners of public works did, in fact, investigate whether there was any real estate which would be specially benefited to the extent of the assessment, over and above the city at large." This was unnecessary if there was a substantial compliance with the requirement to make such investigation, nor was it necessary to go upon the ground to make the investigation. "Full investigation of a subject, be it moral, political or philosophical, can generally be better pursued in the closet than in the open air, in crowded streets. Eminent lexicographers define investigation to be, the action or process of searching minutely for truth, facts or principles; a careful enquiry to find out what is unknown, either in the physical or moral world, and either by observation or experiment, or by argument and discussion." Wright v. Chicago, 48 Ill. 285.

A legislative investigation is within the meaning of that term as used in an act compelling persons concerned in bribery "to attend and testify upon any trial, hearing, proceeding, or investigation in the same manner as any other person;" and providing that "the testimony so given shall not be used in any prosecution or proceeding, civil or criminal, against the person so testifying." The term is not confined to investigations in the course of criminal prosecution. People v. Sharp, 107 N. Y. 427; s. c., 37 Abb. L. J. 69, overruling, s. c., 5 N. Y. Cr. Rep. 388.

3. Whar. Law Lex.; and see 2 Bl. Com. 209.

"Vestimento is seisin, investure (whence the Saxon term, vest), a metaphor, the feudists, took from clothing; by which they meant to intimate 'that the naked possession was clothed with solemnities of the feudal tenure.'" LORD MANSFIELD in Taylor v. Atkyns, 1 Burr. 109.

INVESTMENT—(See CHARITY AND TRUSTS FOR CHARITABLE USES; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS; GUARDIAN AND WARD; PERPETUITIES; TAXATION; TRUSTS; TRUSTEES; WILLS).

Definition, 814.

I. Investment of Trust Funds at Common Law, 814.

1. What Is Required of the Trustee Personally, 814.

- (1) Good Faith and Diligence, 814.
- (2) Sound Discretion, 815. [815.

2. Personal Securities Not Favored, 815.

- (1) Notes, Bonds, etc., Insufficient, 815.
- (2) All Personal Securities Disfavored, 816. [817.

(3) Private Corporation Stock,

(4) Preferred Stock Secured by Mortgage, 818.

(5) Railroad Bonds, 818.

(6) Investment by Testator in Secured Bonds, 819.

(7) Investment by Testator in Bank Stock, 819.

(8) Investments in Business or Trade, 819,

(9) When Previous Investment in Trade May be Continued, 820.

3. Investment in Public Funds, 821.

(1) Favored by the Courts, 821.

(2) Secured Annuities, 821.

(3) Government Securities, 821.

4. Investment in Real Securities,

(1) First Mortgages, 822. [822.

(2) Second Mortgages, 823.

5. Changing Investments, 823.

(1) Not Optional by the Trustee,

(2) May be Ordered, 824. [823.

II. Trust Investments Regulated by Statute, 824. [824.

1. Statutory Directions in England,

(1) Modification of the English Rule, 824.

(2) Retroactive Effect, 824.

2. Statutory Directions in the United States, 825.

(1) Designation of Securities by the Legislature, 825. [825.

(2) Designation Left to the Courts,

3. Regulation of Trust Investments by the Courts, 826.

(1) Court Orders in Particular Cases, 826.

(2) General Orders, 826.

(3) Obedience the Criterion as to Liability, 827.

(4) Limitation of the Court's Power, 827.

(5) Voluntary Action by the Trustee, 827.

(6) Unconstitutional Orders, 827.

4. Statutory Regulation of Trust Funds Held by Public Corporations as Trustees, 828.

(1) Funds for Special Uses, 828.

(2) Diversion of Trust Funds, 829

(3) Legislative Decision, Between Towns Claiming Trusteeship, 829.

III. Investments as Affected by Provisions in the Trust Instrument, 830.

1. When the Instruction Is Positive, 830.

(1) Strict Construction, 830.

(2) Directions as to the Amount to be Invested, 830.

(3) Restrictions, 830.

(4) General and Special Instructions, 830.

2. When the Instruction Leaves Discretion in the Trustee, 831.

(1) Alternate Direction, 831.

(2) General Directions — How Qualified by Law, 832.

(3) Directions to Employ Funds in Trade, etc., 832.

(4) Investments in Stocks Approved, When, 833.

(5) Indefinite Instructions, 833.

IV. Liability of Trustees, 833.

1. For Delay in Investing, 833.

(1) When Investment Should be Made, 833.

(2) What is Reasonable Time, 834.

(3) Interest During Delay, 834.

(4) Reparation for Losses from Delay, 835.

2. For Commingling Trust Funds with His Own, by Trustee, 835.

(1) By Commingling the Funds in Any Way, 835.

(2) By Using Trust Funds in His Own Business, 835.

3. For Holding Trust Property in His Own Name, 836.

(1) By Taking Mortgage in His Own Name, 836. [836.

(2) By Taking Title to Himself,

4. For Speculating with Trust Funds, 837.

(1) Profits Enure to the Cestui que Trust, 837.

(2) Purchases May be Taken by the Cestui que Trust, 837.

5. For Losses on Unauthorized Investments, 838.

(1) Losses on Investments Made in Contravention of Common Law, 838.

- (2) In Violation of Statutory Inhibitions, 838.
- (3) In Disregard of Legal Direction in the Trust Instrument, 838.
6. Rights and Liabilities of an Interested Trustee Acting for Others Interested, 838.
 - (1) A Trustee Creditor May Pay Himself with Other Creditors Under Given Circumstances, 838.
 - (2) Trustee Representing Coparties in Litigation, 838.
7. Liability to Pay Interest on Balances, 839.
 - (1) How Balances Should be Ascertained, 839.
 - (2) When Liable to Interest on Balances, 839.
8. When Liable for Compound Interest, 840.
 - (1) On Illegal Commissions, 840.
 - (2) For Breach of Trust, 840.
 - (3) For Refusing to Account, 840.
9. When Trustees Are Not Liable, 841.
 - (1) When Authorized by the Cestui que Trusts, 841.
 - (2) When There Is Depreciation of Securities Without Their Fault, 842.
 - (3) Not for Fraud of Agents When Not Attributable to Trustee, 842.
 - (4) Not for Paying Premiums from Trust Funds When Authorized to Invest in Bonds, 842.
 - (5) When They Have Done Their Duty, 842.

DEFINITION.—Investment, with reference to money, is the loaning or placing of it to produce interest or profit. With respect to trust funds, it is the loaning or placing of them by the trustee to produce interest or profit for the benefit of the cestui que trust.¹

I. INVESTMENT OF TRUST FUNDS AT COMMON LAW—1. What Is Required of the Trustee Personally—(1) Good Faith and Diligence.—The rule is universal that the trustee, in the investment of trust funds, must act in good faith, use sound discretion and reasonable vigilance, and select such securities as the court will approve. He must do as a good business man would do in putting out his own money for the purpose of producing income without greatly risking its safety, yet confine himself to such investments as the law of his State and the rule of court favor. However the rule as to the security may vary in the several States, may have been modified in them and in England by statute, or may be controlled by trust instruments, it remains everywhere the same with respect to the required honesty, diligence and intelligence of the trustee, his keeping within the line of duty, and his selection of such securities as the law allows. This rule has been broadly stated not only in the States of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey, where the strictness of the English law with respect to securities has prevailed, but in other States, and in England.²

1. Invest.—To lay out money or capital in some permanent form so as to produce an income." Abbott's Law Dict.

"A sum is 'invested' whenever its amount is represented by anything but money." The Parker Mills v. Commrs. etc., 23 N. Y. 242.

Cases showing the meaning of "investment": People v. Utica, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 358, 384; Scott v. Depeyster, 1

Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 513; N. Y. Fire Ins. Co. v. Ely, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 678; Shoemaker v. Smith, 37 Ind. 122; Duncan v. Maryland Sav. Inst., 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 299.

2. Diligence, Good Faith, etc.—"The measure of diligence and care required of a trustee is precisely that which a man of ordinary prudence would practice in the care of his own estate. This rule has been so often laid down in our

(2) Sound Discretion.—The good motives of a trustee will not shield him from blame and loss if he does not observe the other requirements mentioned. He may neglect his duty without any dishonest design; he may trust injudiciously to improper agents; he may unnecessarily delay in investing; he may fail to call in the fund when he should do so; he may omit to sell at the proper time. While strongly laying down the rule that good faith and reasonable diligence, etc., are always required, the English courts of chancery have repeatedly held that trustees cannot exonerate themselves for neglect of duty on the plea that they acted with good motives; and this is the general rule.¹

2. Personal Securities Not Favored.—(1) Notes, Bonds, etc., Insufficient.—At common law there seems to be no settled rule as to the securities to be selected, further than that the safest rather than the most productive must be chosen. What is the most safe and therefore the right security is left to the determination of the chancery courts when they have no statutory or instrumental direction, but are governed by equity in their administration of the common law. Personal securities are not favored, since they are not safe. Though a good business man sometimes risks his own money in consideration of high interest or large possible profits on such inadequate surety, the trustee, acting as he does in a fiduciary capacity, cannot imperil the funds of the cestui que trust for such purpose, nor excuse himself for loss on the plea that he did as a discreet business man might have done with his own money. The English courts have strongly con-books that it seems unnecessary to refer to authorities on that point. A reasonable degree of vigilance and the exercise of good faith is the standard of the trustee's duty." Fahnestock's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 46.

"The just and true rule is that the trustee is bound to employ such diligence and such prudence in the care and management as, in general, prudent men of discretion and intelligence in such matters employ in their own like affairs." Mills v. Hoffman, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 594.

Courts will be slow to hold a trustee guilty of a breach of trust, so long as he acts in good faith. Investing, after the fund had become payable, was excused. Perrine v. Vreeland, 33 N. J. Eq. 102.

In Massachusetts, it is well settled that nothing more can be required of a trustee than good faith, sound discretion, ordinary business prudence and intelligence, and regard for income and the safety of the investment. Bowker v. Pierce, 130 Mass. 262.

So in New Hampshire. French v. Currier, 47 N. H. 88, 99.

So in Vermont. Barney v. Parsons, 54 Vt. 623.

Good faith, reasonable diligence and strictly keeping within the line of duty, are required of trustees; and, if not observed, they are held responsible for losses. Clough v. Bond, 3 Mylne & Craig (Eng.) 490.

But the security must be such as the court will approve, or the trustee will be held liable for losses, notwithstanding his good faith. Hansom v. Allen, 2 Dick. (Eng.) 498; Peat v. Crane, 2 Dick. (Eng.) 498 n.

Where a trustee "acts in such a manner as a prudent man would act in relation to his own property, he is entitled to the protection of the court." Otherwise he is personally responsible for the consequences. Harrison v. Mock, 10 Ala. 185, 193.

1. English Authorities.—"It will be found to be the result of all the best authorities on this subject, that although a personal representative, acting strictly within the line of his duty, and exercising reasonable care and diligence, will not be responsible for the failure or depreciation of the fund, in which any demned the risking of trust funds on such security.¹ Trustees cannot loan on a mere promissory note, though there be several endorsers or obligors.² Nor can an executor do so, though the testator may have set him the example.³ The fact that a trustee has shown his personal confidence in a personal security by risking his own private funds thereon is no justification for his investment of trust funds in the same way.⁴ If his object is merely to accommodate the borrower, it has been held that the loan cannot be legalized afterwards by the cestui que trust himself;⁵ for the act of loaning trust funds on an unsecured note is a breach of trust, not only in England, but it has been so held in this country.⁶

(2) All Personal Securities Disfavored.—The courts of England have so often reprobated personal securities for trust funds that they may be said to have established the rule that such funds cannot be loaned on such securities.⁷ And though this rule has part of the estate may be invested, or for the insolvency or misconduct of any person who may have possessed it; yet if that line of duty be not strictly pursued, and any part of the property be invested by such personal representative, in funds or upon securities not authorized, or be put within the control of persons who ought not to be entrusted with it, and a loss is thereby eventually sustained, such personal representative will be liable to make it good, however unexpected the result, however little likely to result from the course adopted, and however free such conduct may have been from any improper motive. Thus, if he omit to sell property when it ought to be sold, and it afterwards be lost without any fault of his, he is liable." Clough v. Bond, 3 Mylne & Craig 495.

See Oliver v. Court, 8 Price 127; Lawson v. Copeland, 2 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 156; Phillips v. Phillips, Freeman C. C. (Eng.) 11; Powell v. Evans, 5 Ves. 839; Bacon v. Bacon, 5 Ves. 331; Hanbury v. Kirkland, 3 Simons 265; Underwood v. Stevens, 1 Merivale 712; King v. King, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 552; Hart v. Ten Eyck, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 62; Thompson v. Brown, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 619.

1. "No rule is better established than that a trustee cannot lend on mere personal security, and it ought to be rung in the ears of everyone who acts in the character of trustee." Holmes v. Dring, 2 Cox 1.

"The court will always discourage lending trust moneys on private security, though large interest may be given." Adye v. Feuilliteau, 1 Cox 24; 3 Swanst. 84.

"A promissory note is evidence of debt, but no security for it." Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 81, note a.

"Lending on personal credit, for the purpose of a larger interest, is a species of gambling." Adye v. Feuilliteau, 1 Cox 25.

2. There may be several obligors, but that will not render their promise to pay any better compliance with the rule that inhibits personal security for trust funds, and holds the trustee responsible for loss. Clark v. Garfield, 8 Allen (Mass.) 427.

3. The fact that a testator has trusted a certain person on his individual promise, does not justify the executor in doing so. Styles v. Guy, 1 Mac. & G. 423.

4. Bond.—The fact that a trustee was accustomed to loan his private money on bond, was held no justification for loaning trust funds on such security. Adye v. Feuilliteau, 3 Swanst. (Eng.) 84; s. c., 1 Cox 24; Holmes v. Dring, 2 Cox 1.

5. It has been held that when a trustee has loaned on personal security and with the object of favoring the borrower, his illegal act cannot be subsequently ratified by the cestui que trust so as to legalize it. Bateman v. Davis, 3 Mad. (Eng.) 98.

6. It is a breach of trust to loan trust funds on a promissory note not secured. Johnston v. Maples, 49 Ill. 101. Compare Pope v. Matthews, 18 S. Car. 444. Or to loan to a co-trustee. Gleadow v. Atkin, 2 Cr. & J. (Eng.) 548.

7. Personal Securities.—It is well est-not been stringently followed in all of the United States, it has been repeatedly asserted in New York, Pennsylvania and other States.¹

(3) Private Corporation Stock.—The courts of England, acting under the common law without statutory direction or specification in the trust instrument, have condemned the investment of trust funds in bank stock or the stock or shares of any private corporation. They deem such investments too precarious, too much subject to the fluctuations of trade and the money market, and too much dependent upon the action of boards of directors, to afford any adequate and certain security. No exception is made in favor of any such stock, though it may be considered good by discreet business men who invest their own funds therein and thus evince their confidence.²

But in some of our States the courts have acted upon a different rule, and held that investment of trust funds in the stocks of private corporations may be properly ordered by them in the absence of statutory prohibition.³ While it has been so held in established that trustees cannot invest in personal securities; and this may be considered a rule of English law. Pocock v. Reddington, 5 Ves. 799; Powell v. Evans, 5 Ves. 841; Howe v. Earl of Dartmouth, 7 Ves. 150; Collis v. Collis, 2 Sim. 365; Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 62; Darke v. Martyn, 1 Beav. 525; Anonymous, Lofft 492; Watts v. Girdleson, 6 Beav. 188; Terry v. Terry, Pr. Ch. 273; Keble v. Thompson, 3 Bro. Ch. 112; Graves v. Strahan, 8 De G. M. & G. 291; Adye v. Feuillateau, 1 Cox 24; s. c., 3 Swanst. 84; Wilkes v. Steward, G. Coop. 6; Holmes v. Dring, 2 Cox 1; Fowler v. Reynal, 3 Mac. & G. 500; Vigras v. Binfield, 3 Mad. 62; Clough v. Bond, 3 M. & Cr. 496; Knight v. Plymouth, 1 Dick. 120; s. c., 3 Atk. 480; Speight v. Gaunt, 22 Ch. Div. 727; Ex parte Belchier, 1 Ken. 38.

1. And this rule relative to the investment in personal securities has been frequently held in the United States. Clark v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 58 How. (N. Y.) 21; Goodwin v. Howe, 62 How. (N. Y.) 134; Adair v. Brimmer, 74 N. Y. 539; Ormiston v. Olcott, 84 N. Y. 339; Ackerman v. Emott, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 626; Smith v. Smith, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 281; King v. Talbot, 40 N. Y. 76; Mills v. Hoffman, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 594; In re Foster, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 387; Baker v. Disbrow, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 348; Bates v. Underhill, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 365; Judd v. Warner, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 104; Lefever v. Hasbrouck, 2 Dem. (N.

Y.) 567; Nyce's Est., 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 254; Wills's Appeal, 22 Pa. St. 330; Wilson's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 95; Swoyer's Appeal, 5 (Pa.) 377; Gray v. Fox, 1 N. J. Eq. (Sax.) 259; Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192; Gray v. Fox, 1 N. J. Eq. (Sax.) 259; Spear v. Spear, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 184; Moore v. Hamilton, 4 Fla. 112; Sullivan v. Howard, 20 Md. 191; Garesche v. Priest, 78 Mo. 126; s. c., 9 Mo. App. 270.

Where personal security is permissible, the trustee should call in the fund when it is unsafely invested in such security. Brazer v. Clark, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 96.

See Harding v. Larned, 4 Allen (Mass.) 426; Clark v. Garfield, 8 Allen (Mass.) 427.

2. Investment in Corporation Stock.—It has been frequently held in England that trust funds cannot be invested in bank shares, manufacturing companies' stock, or the stock or shares of any private corporation, however apparently safe and good. Powell v. Cleaver, 7 Ves. 142 n.; Howe v. Dartmouth, 7 Ves. 150; Haynes v. Redington, 1 Jo. & Lat. 589; Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. 440; Clough v. Bond, 3 M. & Cr. 496; Band v. Fardell, 7 De G. M. & G. 633; Emelie v. Emelie, 7 Bro. P. C. 259; Mills v. Mills, 7 Sim. 501; Hancorn v. Allen, 2 Dick. 499 n.; Peat v. Crane, 2 Dick. 499 n.

3. Such stocks may be taken as security for trust funds, when there is no statutory inhibition, under order of some of the more conservative States, in Massachusetts (which, with the other New England and most of the western and southern States, have been liberal in respect to trust investments) such stocks are generally treated as proper securities; and investments of trust funds in banking, insurance, manufacturing and other private corporation stocks, are freely allowed.¹

In Pennsylvania, though such investments were formerly permissible under statutory authorization, they are now forbidden by the constitution of the State.²

(4) Preferred Stock Secured by Mortgage.—Distinction was made between a loan on preferred and one on common stock of a private corporation. In the one case there was a lien upon the income which was amply secured by the real estate of the corporation; in the other there was no such security, and the trustee was held to have committed a breach of trust for investing trust funds in the common stock under these circumstances.³

(5) Railroad Bonds.—But railroad bonds have been held not permissible, though secured by mortgage on the roadbed, fran-court. Tucker v. Tucker, 33 N. J. Eq. 235; Woodruff v. Ward, 35 N. J. Eq. 467; Gillespie v. Brooks, 2 Redf. (N. Y.) 349.

1. Such stocks are considered proper securities in Massachusetts. Harvard College v. Amory, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 446; Lovell v. Minot, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 116; Kinmouth v. Brigham, 5 Allen (Mass.) 270; Clark v. Garfield, 8 Allen (Mass.) 427; Brown v. French, 125 Mass. 410; Bowker v. Pierce, 130 Mass. 262.

Even promissory notes, when corporation stocks are pledged as collaterals, have been held sufficient. Lovell v. Minot, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 116.

Interest bearing securities are recognized as proper, in some of the States, for the investment of funds in an administrator's hands. Dortch v. Dortch, 71 N. Car. 224; Moore v. Felkel, 7 Fla. 44.

2. Constitutional Prohibition.—Investment of trust funds in private corporation stock or bonds is inhibited by the constitution of Pennsylvania. Const. Pa., art. 3, § 22.

For the course of decisions on the subject of investment in private corporation stocks, pro and con, mostly in exposition of statutes. See Nyce's Estate, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 254; Morris v. Wallace, 3 Pa. St. 319; Pray's Appeal, 34 Pa. St. 100; Twaddell's Appeal, 5 Pa. St. 15; Rush's Estate, 12 Pa. St. 375; Burton's Estate, 1 Pars. (Pa.) 24; Worrell's Appeal, 9 Pa. St. 508; 23 Pa. St. 44; Stanley's Appeal, 8 Pa.

St. 431; Hemphill's Appeal, 18 Pa. St. 303; Ihmsen's Appeal, 43 Pa. St. 431; Pleasant's Appeal, 77 Pa. St. 356.

These cases were discussed in 25 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.), p. 21, in the leading article, and reference made to McCahan's Appeal, 7 Pa. St. 56; Angue's Estate, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 137; Seidler's Estate, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 85; Gaw's Estate, 34 Leg. Int. 66; s. c., 24 Pitts. L. J. (Pa.) 128; Shield's Estate, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 307; Jack's Appeal, 94 Pa. St. 367; Pleasanton's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 362; Eyster's Appeal, 16 Pa. St. 372; Fahnestock's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 46.

3. Coal Lands, etc.—Where real estate security was allowed, it was held that a company, owning coal lands and a canal, and which gave the trustee a preferred claim on their income, substantially gave real security, as the realty held by the company exceeded in value the sum of the debts. Twaddle's Appeal, 5 Barr. (Pa.) 15; Rush's Estate, 12 Pa. St. 375. But an investment in the common stock of the same company was held not such security as the law requires a trustee to obtain when loaning trust funds, and it was decided that he had committed a breach of trust in taking such security. The difference between the two loans was that the first was on preferred stock while the second was on stock of the same company not preferred. Worrell's Appeal, 9 Pa. St. 508. See Hemphill's Appeal, 18 Pa. St. 303.

chise, etc., for the reason that the trustee could not himself directly enforce the collection of the bonds by foreclosure.¹

(6) Investment by Testator in Secured Bonds.—When, however, an executor forms an investment already made by the testator in bonds secured by mortgage on real estate, it was not held a breach of trust when he continued the investment. The exercise of his sound discretion was properly respected by the court, and the investment was apparently free from such risk as would have made it his duty to withdraw the trust fund.² Indeed, circumstances may be such that a prudent executor may even add to the sum already loaned by the testator; for instance, when further advancement is necessary to secure it.³

(7) Bank Stock.—If the trustee finds that the fund which he is appointed to administer has been already invested; if he is an executor, and the fund was put into bank stock by the testator, he is not to be held responsible for the loss of it by the failure of the bank.⁴

Where bank stock is allowable security, he has no right to convert it into bonds.⁵ He should discreetly select good bank stock when he makes that species of security his choice; and, if it is at par when chosen, subsequent loss will not be attributed to his fault.⁶

A trustee, however, should not invest in new stocks paying no dividends, in the hope of their rising in value. Such a risk has been held a breach of trust.⁷

(8) Business or Trade.—If a trustee cannot entrust the money of others in his care to private corporations for its management, he certainly cannot employ it himself in his own business, nor

1. Mortgage of Railroad Bed, etc.—Railroad bonds secured by mortgage on the franchise, bed and other property of the railway company, were held not proper security for the loan of trust funds. The reason given was that the trustee could not foreclose the mortgage, but would be driven to the usual mode of enforcing such bonds, and therefore he had little more than mere personal security. Mant v. Leith, 15 Beav. 524; Allen v. Gaillard, 1 S. Car. 279; Robinson v. Robinson, 11 Beav. 371.

2. Investment by Testator in Bonds.—An executor commits no breach of trust by allowing trust funds to remain where they were invested by the testator himself in bonds secured by mortgage on the real estate, tolls, etc., of a turnpike company. Miller v. Proctor, 20 Ohio St. 444.

3. A trustee may even loan additionally to secure an investment made by the testator in a mortgage, provided the circumstances of the case warrant it. Collinson v. Lister, 20 Beav. 356.

4. Investment Made by Testator.—An executor is not at fault nor responsible for the loss of an investment in bank stock, when it is lost by the failure of the bank, if the investment was made by the testator himself. Parker v. Glover, 42 N. J. Eq. 559, in exposition of a statute; Pope v. Matthews, 18 S. Car. 444.

5. He has no right to convert bank stock into bonds as an investment, though empowered to sell the personal estate. Columbus Ins. etc. Co. v. Humphries, 64 Miss. 258.

6. Trust funds were invested in a certificate of deposit of a national bank when the stock was at par. Loss following, the trustee was held not liable for it. Hunt's Appeal, 141 Mass. 515.

7. New Stocks.—It would generally be held a breach of trust for a trustee to invest in stocks of new corporations or companies, taking the risk attending loans to such untried and adventurous companies, though he act in good faith and risk his private funds in the same risk it in the hands of merchants or any tradesmen as capital to earn profits, nor speculate with it in any way, directly or indirectly. If he should do so, at his own volition, without authority from the court, or the trust instrument, or the cestui que trust, he would commit a breach of trust. He would be held responsible for any loss, and he would be denied any personal profit should the venture prove remunerative.¹

(9) When Previous Investment in Trade May be Continued.—

There are circumstances, however, under which courts will grant orders for the temporary continuance of trust funds in trade, when they have been already invested, as when the executor of the estate of a deceased partner acts with the survivors in closing out the stock in trade.² But, beyond what he finds already employed in the business, he should not risk the trust fund. Even when authorized to conduct "legitimate business" for the benefit of an heir, he must not invest the whole estate in it, though it be a continuance of the testator's business.³ He may be obliged, by contracts previously made, to employ trust funds in fulfilment of obligations assumed by the testator;⁴ or he may be empowered by the cestui que trusts to continue an established line of trade for a given time and purpose;⁵ but if not thus obligated by the testator's contracts, or authorized by those for whom he acts, he should not allow the funds to remain at the risk of business casualties, but should withdraw them immediately.⁶ Even way and at the same time. Ihmsen's Appeal, 43 Pa. St. 431; Kimball v. Redding, 31 N. H. 352.

1. Business or Trade.—To employ trust funds in speculation, risk them in ordinary trade, or do mercantile or other business upon them without express authority, is a breach of trust, and if loss ensue, the trustee is responsible, while he cannot avail himself of profits if the venture prove successful. Kyle v. Barnett, 17 Ala. 306; Martin v. Raborn, 42 Ala. 648; Flagg v. Ely, 1 Edm. (N. Y.) 206; King v. Talbot, 40 N. Y. 76; Stedman v. Fieder, 20 N. Y. 437; Featherstone v. Fenwick, 17 Ves. (N. Y.) 298; French v. Hobson, 9 Ves. 103; Ex parte Garland, 10 Ves. 129; Crawshay v. Collins, 15 Ves. 218; Brown v. De Tastel, Jac. 284; Cook v. Collingridge, Jac. 607; Docker v. Somes, 2 M. & K. 655; Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 2 Keen 722; Booth v. Booth, 1 Beav. 125; Munch v. Cockerell, 5 M. & Cr. 178; Lucht v. Behrens, 28 Ohio St. 231; Pitkin v. Pitkin, 1 Conn. 307; Alsop v. Mather, 8 Conn. 584; Muntz v. Brown, 11 La. Ann. 472.

2. An executor, however, may let the surviving partner of the testator sell out the joint stock in regular course of trade. Thompson v. Brown, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 619; Stern's appeal, 95 Pa. St. 504; Merritt v. Merritt, 62 Mo. 150. See Laughlin v. Lorenz, 48 Pa. St. 275; Jones v. Walker, 103 U. S. 444.

3. Trust Fund in Business.—An executor cannot legally use all the estate in continuing the testator's business, when authorized to carry on "some legitimate business" for the benefit of the testator's son, after the payment of debts and expenses. Re Sharp, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 516.

4. Continuance of Business by Use of Trust Money.—The trustee is not liable for carrying out contracts made before his appointment, when beyond his control. Collinson v. Lister, 20 Beav. 356.

5. It has been held that when those for whom the trustee acts are all competent to contract, and all legally empower him to continue the funds of an estate in business till an heir shall have become of age, he may comply by rendering himself responsible for subsequent loss. Poole v. Munday, 103 Mass. 174.

6. But trustees, when not bound by previous contract or otherwise to continue the funds in the business in which they are already employed, should with-though thus authorized, he ought not to leave the fund with that of a firm which has been dissolved subsequent to the authorization.¹

3. Investment in Public Funds.—(1) Favored by Courts.—Public securities have been the most highly favored. The theory is that governments are perpetual and their obligations sure. However fallacious the theory has proved to be in the case of State bonds in some of our States, courts presume the stability of the authority under which they sit, and generally credit the plighted faith of its promises to pay. In England, before statutory authorization for investments of trust funds in other securities, when courts were left to their own judgment as to what should be the guaranty of payment, government securities were considered the only safe and proper ones. And they are still the most highly favored, and have often been held the only ones which courts will order when they are not controlled by statutory direction, or by the trust instrument²

(2) Secured Annuities.—When the rule was held more firmly than now since its relaxation by statute, courts made a distinction between investments in annuities (of which the dividends were payable by directors while the government was pledged to pay the principal) and stock of private corporations controlled in both respects by their directors; a distinction between "south sea or bank annuities" on the one hand, and "south sea or bank stock" on the other.³

(3) Government Securities.—In New York, the most approved securities are government and State bonds, or first mortgages on real estate, without any expressed preference for either. These are not only the most favored, but may be said to be the only securities for trust funds that the courts are sure to approve, and that the trustee may safely rely upon to save him from liability for losses; yet the courts there hold no inflexible rule upon the subject.⁴

draw them. Murray v. Glasse, 23 L. J. Ch. 124.

1. When authorized to continue funds employed in a partnership, the trustee must withdraw them upon the death of a member of the firm, or upon dissolution of the partnership in any other way. Cummins v. Cummins, 8 Ir. Eq. 723.

2. Public Funds.—It seems that the chancery courts of England approved of none but public funds as security for trust investments, when the character and sufficiency of the security is left for them to determine, uncontrolled by statute or by direction in the trust instrument. Vigrass v. Binfield, 3 Mad. 62; Tebbs v. Carpenter, 1 Mad. 290; Collis v. Collis, 2 Sim. 365; Keble v. Thompson, 3 Croch. 112; Pocock v. Reddington, 5 Ves. (Eng.) 799; Howe

v. Earl of Dartmouth, 7 Ves. 150; Holland v. Hughes, 16 Ves. 111; Drake v. Martyn, 1 Beav. 525; Watts v. Girdlestone, 6 Beav. 188; Fowler v. Reynal, 3 Mac. & G. 500; Graves v. Strahan, 8 De G. M. & G. 291.

3. Stocks and Annuities.—It was formerly held in England that "neither South Sea stock nor bank stock is considered a good security, because it depends upon the management of the governors and directors, and is subject to losses;" but that an investment "in South Sea or bank annuities, where the directors have nothing to do with the principal, and have only to pay the dividends and interest until such time as the government pay off the capital, would be good security." Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. 444.

4. General Rule in New York.—"From

Unless the trustee is protected by an order of court, he cannot invest in any other than the two classes of security above named without incurring the risk that the courts will hold him for losses, in New York, and also in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. He is not at liberty to select bank or railroad stock.¹

4. Investment in Real Securities—(1) First Mortgages.—Before the passage of Lord St. Leonard's act, it was questionable in England whether first mortgages on land were such securities for trust funds as the courts ought to approve.² They are now allowed, but there must be an excess of value in the mortgaged real estate above the sum loaned.³ Junior mortgages are gener-our examination of the authorities and the cases referred to, we have come to the conclusion that as a general rule it is the duty of trustees to invest funds held by them in government or State securities, or in bonds and mortgages, on unencumbered estate; that, while this rule is not arbitrary and inflexible so as to admit of no possible exceptions, it is the basis upon which trustees should usually act; that, in any event, the trustee is bound to employ such diligence, care and prudence, in the management of the trust, as diligent, careful, prudent men of discretion and intelligence generally employ in their own like affairs; and that for a neglect to make use of such diligence, care and prudence, the trustee becomes liable."

Mills v. Hoffman, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 594.

See Adair v. Brimmer, 74 N. Y. 539; Clark v. St. Louis, Alton etc. Rd., 58 How. (N. Y.) 21; In re Foster 15 Hun (N. Y.) 387; Baker v. Disbrow, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 348; Bates v. Underhill, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 365; Judd v. Warner, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 104; Ormiston v. Olcott, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 270; s. c., 84 N. Y. 339; Goodwin v. Howe, 62 How. (N. Y.) 134; cited in article Investment of Trust Funds, 25 Am. L. Reg. 227.

1. "By the later decisions in that State [New York], investments in bank or railroad stock have been held to be at the risk of the trustee, and it has been intimated that the only investments that a trustee can safely make without an express order of court are in government or real estate securities. King v. Talbot, 40 N. Y. 76 (affirming s. c., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 453); Ackerman v. Emott, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 626; Mills v. Hoffman, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 594; 2 Kent Com. 416, n. b. So the decisions in New Jersey and Pennsylvania tend to disallow investments in the stock of banks or other business corporations, or otherwise than in the public funds or in mortgages of real estate. Gray v. Fox, 1 N. J. Eq. (Saxton) 259, 268; Halsted v. Meeker, 3 Green (N. J.) 136; Lathrop v. Smalley, 8 C. E. Green (N. J.) 192; Worrell's Appeal, 9 Pa. St. 508, and 23 Pa. St. 44; Hemphill's Appeal, 18 Pa. St. 303; Ihmssen's Appeal, 43 Pa. St. 431." Lamar v. Micon, 112 U. S. 452.

2. Real Estate Securities.—Whether, in the absence of statutory authorization, trustees could loan on real estate mortgages, was a question in England. The affirmative was held. Pocock v. Redington, 5 Ves. 800; Brown v. Litton, 1 P. Williams 141; Knight v. Plymouth, 1 Dickens 126; Lyse v. Kingdon, 1 Coll. 188.

And the negative was held in other cases. Barry v. Marriott, 2 De G. & Sm. (Eng.) 491; Ex parte Franklyn, 1 De G. & Sm. (Eng.) 531.

Under the Lord St. Leonard's act, mortgages on realty are held good securities. Stickney v. Sewell, 1 M. & C. 8; Macleod v. Annesley, 16 Beav. 600; Norris v. Wright, 14 Beav. 307.

3. Trust funds should be loaned, not on mere personal security, like a promissory note, but "on some such security as binds land, or something, to be answerable for it." Ryder v. Bickerton, 3 Swanst. 81, n.; s. c., 1 Eden 149, n. Same principle, Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 535, 545.

Loans on real mortgages are allowed in England, as proper investment of trust funds, when there is proper margin of value of the real estate, above the sum loaned. Norris v. Wright, 14 Beav. 307; Drosier v. Brereton, 15 Beav. 221; Macleod v. Annesley, 16 Beav. 600; Ingle v. Partridge, 34 Beav. (Eng.) 411; Stickney v. Sewell, 1 M. & C. 8; Phillipson v. Gatty, 7 Hare 16; Farrar v. Barraclough, 2 Sm. & Gif. 231; Jones v. Lewis, 3 De G. & Sm. 471; Brown v. Litton, 1 P. Williams 141.

ally disapproved there,¹ and are not favored in this country.²

When a second mortgage had been taken under the belief that it was a primary one—the belief being induced by the fraud of the mortgagor—a guardian, who had thus lent his ward's money and lost it, was not held liable for the loss.³

(2) Second Mortgages.—On the other hand, where trustees knowingly loaned money of a trust estate upon a junior mortgage, they were held not at liberty to do so, though they had not been instructed what security to require, but had been left to their own discretion. They were bound in law to exercise a sound discretion, and the risk of the money on a second mortgage was not considered a rightful exercise of it.⁴ But, while this was held in New York, a trustee was more liberally treated in Pennsylvania, when there was loss on a second mortgage. His good faith and general prudence were considered.⁵

5. Changing Investments.—(1) Not Optional by the Trustee.—It has been frequently held, both in England and in the United States, that after trust funds have been regularly invested, the trustee cannot change them at his option by substituting one security for another. There should be permanency in the investment, just as in the monetary dispositions of good business men. Intervals between loans would result in loss of interest, and, therefore, in wrong to the cestui que trust.⁶

1. Second Mortgages.—But loans of trust funds on second mortgages are not favored. Robinson v. Robinson, 11 Beav. 371; Lockhart v. Reilly, 1 De G. & J. 476.

2. Such loans have been held objectionable in this country. Nance v. Nance, 1 S. Car. 209; Wilson v. State, 33 N. J. Eq. 524; Bogart v. Van Velsor, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 718.

3. Guardian Mortgage.—A guardian lent his ward's money on second mortgage security, honestly believing it to be first mortgage, but being deceived by the mortgagor, who, between the time of the examination of the records and the execution of the mortgage to the guardian, had given another mortgage which was recorded first. The guardian was not held liable, though the investment proved worthless. Slanter v. Favorite, 107 Ind. 291; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 106.

4. Discretionary Power.—Where testamentary trustees were allowed discretion in dealing with a trust estate, and not instructed what investment to make, they were yet not free to loan to each other; or to take a second mortgage as security. Re Petrie, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 352; Re Cant, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 269.

5. Where an executor allowed another to secure to him trust money by secondary mortgages, and to collect the rents (part of which the mortgagor failed to pay over according to agreement), it was held that considering the good faith of the executor, and his management as within ordinary prudence, he was not personally responsible for the rents which had not been collected by him. Dabney's Appeal, 120 Pa. St. 344.

6. Change of Investments.—Trustees cannot change at will the investments of trust funds properly made. Pawlett v. Herbert, 1 Ves. Jr. 297; Witter v. Witter, 3 P. Williams 100; Underwood v. Stevens, 1 Mer. 712; Lawson v. Copeland, 2 Bro. Ch. 157; Bryce v. Stokes, 11 Ves. 324; Tebbs v. Carpenter, 1 Mad. 208; Crackelt v. Bethune, 1 J. & W. 586; Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 672; Watts v. Girdlestone, 6 Beav. (Eng.) 190; Fyler v. Fyler, 3 Beav. 550; De Manneville v. Crompton, 1 V. & B. 359; Fowler v. Reynall, 3 M. & G. 500; Adams v. Clifton, 1 Russ. 297; Broadhurst v. Balquy, 1 N. C. C. 16; Hanbury v. Kirkland, 3 Sim. 265. See Stephens v. Milnor, 24 N. J. Eq. 358; Pleasant's Appeal, 77 Pa. St. 356; Baldwin v. Hatchett, 56 Ala. 461; Mosman v. Bender, 80 Mo. 579.

(2) Changes May be Ordered.—Changes or reinvestments, however, may be ordered by the chancery courts when the safety of the fund or the interest of the beneficiary requires it. The trust funds may be withdrawn and reloaned; the trustee may buy and sell to effect such purposes under judicial order, and this is consonant with the common law.¹

II. TRUST INVESTMENTS REGULATED BY STATUTES—1. Statutory Directions in England—(1) Modification of the English Rule.—The stern rule that formerly prevailed in England relative to trust investments has been much relaxed by acts of parliament, so that now securities are not limited to public funds or real estate mortgages, but some classes of stocks are approved by the courts—certainly when directed by trust instruments.² It has been held, however, that a fund or stock, to be approved as good security, should be guaranteed by the government in some way.³

(2) Retrospective Effect.—The courts have held to a strict construction of the statutory authorization, and some of the decisions go so far as to disapprove investments made in authorized securities, before the authorization. There does not seem to be uniformity on this point.⁴ The act (called Lord St. Leonard's act"), though retrospective, leaves the courts free to order the change of investments.⁵ Since the passage of that act, first real mortgages with good margins are favored as securities for trust funds, though formerly were not, or, at least, they were

1. Reinvestment.—"For effectuating the trust most safely and beneficially, the common law authorized the trustee, with the sanction of a court of equity, to reinvest, and, for that purpose, to sell and buy whenever found useful." Allen v. Graves, 3 Bush (Ky.) 491.

One holding a fund, as trustee for remainder men, may change transient security into cash to be permanently invested for their benefit. Mason v. Commerce Bank, 90 Mo. 452.

2. Statutory Modification of Former English Rule.—From a liberal treatment of trustees, the chancery courts of England had come to hold them for losses on all investments in funds except in consols, when parliament interfered; but now stock in the Bank of England and the Bank of Ireland, or real estate mortgage, is considered good security. Stats. 22 & 23 Vict., ch. 35, and 23 & 24 Vict., ch. 38; Lewin on Trusts (7th ed.), 252-7.

3. Construction of Lord St. Leonard's Act.—"In order to come within the description, 'government or parliamentary stock or funds,' a fund ought to be either managed by parliament, or paid out of the resources of the British government, or at least guaranteed by that government." Brown v. Brown, 4 K. & J. 704.

The provision expounded: "It shall be lawful for any trustee, executor or administrator to invest any fund in his possession, or under his control, in any securities the interest of which is or shall be guaranteed by parliament." 30 & 31 Vict., ch. 132, § 2.

4. Investment in Stocks, Under Statute.—Although the act of 22 and 23 Vict., ch. 35 (called "Lord St. Leonard's act"), authorized the investment of trust funds in certain specified stocks, it was held that it did not authorize investment of trust funds, settled before the enactment, in those stocks. Re Miles's Will, 5 Jur. (N. S.) 1266; Dodson v. Sammell, 6 Jur. (N. S.) 137.

Decisions do not well agree upon this, and some are to the contrary. See Page v. Bennett, 2 Gif. 117; Mortimer v. Picton, 4 De G. J. & S. 166; Simpson's Trusts, 1 John. & H. 89.

5. The act has been made retrospective (23 & 24 Vict., ch. 38), but does not apply to funds previously specifically settled so as to leave no power in the courts to change the investment. Ward's Settlement, 2 John. & H. 191; In re Wilkinson, L. R., 9 Eq. 343; Ex parte grudgingly approved when allowed at all.¹ Even when authorized by the trust instrument they were disapproved by the court, at least in one instance, in which the reason given was general in character; but, under statutory modification, the rule of practice is to accept real securities when not inhibited by the trust instrument.²

2. Statutory Directions in the United States.—(1) Designation of Securities.—In Massachusetts, the statute on the subject provides that courts of probate may direct the investment of trust funds of estates.³ In Maine, courts direct trust investments on application; and in New Hampshire and Vermont, they usually approve any good and productive investment.⁴ In New Jersey, the courts have statutory authorization to order investments without limit as to the class of securities to be chosen; but, in the exercise of their discretion under the authority, they almost wholly confine themselves to real and government securities.⁵ In Pennsylvania the constitution prohibits the investment of trust funds in bonds or stock of private corporations.⁶ The statutes authorize the proper courts to direct the investment of trust funds in real security or in "the stock or debt" of the United States, of the State of Pennsylvania, or of the city of Philadelphia, and exempts trustees for loss on such investments. Also, investments may be made in the same manner in any bonds or certificates of debt legally issued by any counties, cities, school districts or municipal corporations of that State, with the same protection against loss.⁷ Also, under court order, "ground rents" as well as other real estate are declared proper security for trust funds.⁸

(2) Designation Left to the Courts.—Some of the States have prescribed no class of securities, and courts may direct the investments, in their orders, generally speaking. In Georgia, a statute

Great Northern R. Co., L. R., 9 Eq. 274.

1. Loans on Mortgages, in England.—Before statutory authorization, when real estate security was left for the approval or disapproval of the chancery courts, loans on mortgages of land were not generally much favored by the courts. Ex parte Carthorpe, 1 Cox 182; Bocock v. Reddington, 5 Ves. 800; Ex parte Johnson, 1 Moll. 128; Norbury v. Norbury, 4 Mad. 191; Ex parte Franklin, 1 De G. & Sm. 531; Barry v. Marriott, 2 De G. & Sm. 491; Ex parte Ridgeway, 1 Hag. 309; Ex parte Ellice, Jacob 234; Widdowson v. Duck, 2 Mer. 494; Brown v. Litton, 1 P. Wms. 141; Knight v. Plymouth, 1 Dickens 126.

2. Real Security—Change of Rule.—It was said that though express power to lend on real security was given, the court would not approve a loan upon a mortgage, for the reason that "in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred" the expense of the mortgage was greater than the increase of income. Barry v. Marriott, 2 De G. & Sm. 491.

But now, under statutory authorization for investments of trust funds on real securities, the rule seems to be that unless such security is inhibited by the trust instrument, it may be accepted. Lewin on Trusts (8th ed.), 313; Perry on Trusts (3rd ed.), § 457.

3. Stat. of 1873, ch. 224, § 1 et seq.

4. Knowlton v. Brady, 17 N. H. 458; Kimball v. Reding, 31 N. H. 352; French v. Currier, 47 N. H. 88; Barney v. Parsons, 54 Vt. 623.

5. Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192; Tucker v. Tucker, 33 N. J. Eq. 235; Gray v. Fox, 1 N. J. Eq. (Sax.) 259; Woodruff v. Ward, 35 N. J. Eq. 467.

6. Const. Pa., art. 3, § 22.

7. Act of May 8th, 1876, extending the act of 1832.

8. Act April 13th, 1854.

requires investment in State securities when the trustee is not controlled by a judicial order to invest in some other.¹ The code of Alabama permits trustees to select any good security, and they are not held responsible for unintentional mistakes in choosing resulting in loss.² In Mississippi, the trustee is required to invest under judicial order, so held with respect to investment of a guardian for his ward.³

In Missouri, the courts direct the investments upon application.⁴ In Maryland, there seems to be no statutory limitation to real and government securities, for, besides these, the courts approve of good bank stock as security.⁵

In States where the securities are not designated by statutes, as well as those in which they are, trustees may be directed by court orders to invest in securities not prohibited, so as to hold the trustees harmless in case of loss.

In Michigan, a trust fund created by an independent instrument separate from a deed conveying the land which is to secure the trust investment, is not governed by the statute which prescribes that every disposition of realty shall be to the person or persons who are to have the right of possession, etc. The two deeds passed upon were made at different times, and could not be considered as one transaction.⁶

3. Regulation of Trust Investments by the Courts—(1) Court Orders in Particular Cases.—When under statutory requirement, or in pursuance of the general powers of chancery courts, orders are made designating what security must be taken by the trustees, they cannot disobey without incurring liability for losses. The order may be made with reference to a particular case, or it may be general.⁷

(2) General Orders.—Pursuant to statute, a general order was made in England specifying the securities that would be acceptable to the courts, including some classes of stocks of private corporations, and even exchequer bills, as well as real estate.⁸

1. Georgia Statute.—Investment must be made in State securities, unless the trustee acts under judicial order to invest in other securities; and a deviation from this statutory rule, made in January, 1863, puts the investment at his risk. Cobb's Digest, 333; Brown v. Wright, 39 Ga. 96; Moses v. Moses, 50 Ga. 9, 30.

2. Alabama Stat.—Trustees may invest on bond and mortgage or good personal security and are held harmless for losses when acting prudently and in good faith. Code of 1867, § 2426; Foscue v. Lyon, 55 Ala. 440, 452.

3. Coffin v. Bramlitt, 42 Miss. 194. See Smyth v. Burns, 25 Miss. 422.

4. Gauble v. Gibson, 59 Mo. 585.

5. Murray v. Feinour, 2 Md. Ch. 418; Gray v. Lynch, 8 Gill (Md.) 410; Hammond v. Hammond, 2 Bland (Md.) 306; Evans v. Iglehart, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 171.

6. The statute of Michigan requiring that every disposition of land shall be directly to the person in whom the right of possession and profits is intended to be vested, etc., does not apply to a trust not expressed in the deed but created by an independent instrument executed at a different time. Loring v. Palmer, 118 U. S. 321.

7. Court Orders.—Trust investments are frequently made under order of court. It may be in a particular case, with reference to a particular fund, or by a rule of court designating the kind of securities that may be chosen. Wheeler v. Perry, 18 N. H. 307.

8. In England, "in pursuance of

(3) Obedience the Criterion as to Liability.—Whether the trustee is held for loss or not depends upon his obedience or disobedience of the court order.¹

This distinction has been repeatedly drawn in this country with respect to investments in the stock of private corporations. It would not do to allow investments of trust funds in the shares of such corporations indiscriminately, for there is a great variety in such securities, some being very safe and good, while others would afford no certain security.²

(4) Limitation of Court's Power.—There is a limit even in the power of courts to designate the investment. For instance, it has been held that a county court could not legally order an executor to buy new supplies of merchandise for the purpose of continuing the business that the testator had left.³

The trustee is bound to obey the court order prescribing the investment. He may be proceeded against summarily in case of neglect or refusal, and may be compelled to deliver the trust funds to the court, to be there retained till his compliance with the order.⁴

(5) Voluntary Action by Trustee.—When the statute is not imperative with reference to investments under judicial order, a trustee acting upon his own motion, but with honest purpose, cannot be said to commit a breach of trust. If he should not show sound discretion in his selection of the security, he might be held for loss, however.⁵

(6) Unconstitutional Orders.—Though the court should issue an order pursuant to statutory direction, neither the judicial com-statute, a general order was issued in 1861, as follows: 'Cash under the control of the court may be invested in bank stock, East India stock, exchequer bills, and £2 10s. annuities, and upon freehold and copyhold estates respectively in England and Wales,' etc. Perry on Trusts, § 455.

1. When a trustee invested in funds adopted by the court, he was held harmless in case of loss. Peat v. Crane, 2 Dick. 498, n. But not when the court had not adopted the security. Hancorn v. Allen, 2 Dick. 498, n.

2. An investment of trust funds in the corporate stock of an ordinary business enterprise, without an order of court authorizing it, "constitutes a well recognized violation of duty on the part of the trustee." Tucker v. State, 72 Ind. 242, citing King v. Talbot, 40 N. Y. 76; Allen v. Gaillard, 1 S. Car. 279; 13 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.) 201; Hill on Trustees, *369; Perry on Trusts, §§ 552-3. Compare Ferguson v. Epes, 77 Va. 499; Sharpe v. Rockwood, 78 Va. 24.

3. It was held in Illinois that a county court could not confer on an executor authority to invest trust funds in the purchase of new goods to continue mercantile business; and that the executor could not purchase them for the purpose without the consent of the cestui que trust. Field v. Colton, 7 Bradw. (Ill.) 379.

4. Disobedience of Order.—When a trustee, appointed by the court, fails to invest trust funds as directed by it, he may be proceeded against by rule, with his sureties as codefendants to the rule; and, under this proceeding, he may be ordered to return the funds to the court, where they will remain in judicial custody till the order be obeyed relative to the investment. Dickinson v. Trout, 8 Bush (Ky.) 441.

5. If an executor should invest without being ordered to do so by the court, though he would thus incur a personal risk, he would not be held to have made a breach of trust, if the investment was an honest and judicious one. Statutes are not all imperative that investments mand nor the investment made in compliance with it will hold good if the statute itself was violative of the constitution.¹ Illustration of this may be found in cases of investments in "Confederate" bonds. The Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly and emphatically held that the legislative authorization of investments therein was unconstitutional, and gave no valid power for the loaning of trust funds on such securities. Not only the legislative action, but the orders of courts pursuant thereto, and decisions sustaining it, have been condemned by the supreme court.²

4. Statutory Regulation of Trust Funds Held by Public Corporations as Trustees—Funds for Special Uses.—It has been considered questionable whether public corporations can be directed by statute in their management of trust funds devoted to special uses which are neither public nor charitable. Doubtless they may be with regard to the latter, but whether a fund which such a corporation has been empowered to employ specifically to a different use may be directed by the legislature, quære.³ The power of a legislature to change the control of a charitable trust from one public corporation as trustee to another, does not affect the question.⁴

shall be made only under judicial order. Smith v. Wilmington Coal Co., 83 Ill. 498; Richardson v. Knight, 69 Me. 285.

1. An order of court directing an investment pursuant to an act of the legislature will not justify the investment, if the statute itself is not constitutional. Horn v. Lockhart, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 570.

2. "Confederate" Bonds.—"The investment in bonds of the confederate States was clearly unlawful, and no legislative act or judicial decree or decision of any State could justify it. The so-called confederate government was in no sense a lawful government, but was a mere government of force; having its origin and foundation in rebellion against the United States. The notes and bonds issued in its name and for its support had no legal value as money or property, except by agreement or acceptance of parties capable of contracting with each other, and can never be regarded by a court sitting under the authority of the United States as securities in which trust funds might be lawfully invested. Thorington v. Smith, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 1; Head v. Starke, Chase's Dec. (U. S.) 312; Horn v. Lockhart, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 570; Confederate Note Case, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 548; Sprott v. United States, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 459; Fretz v. Stover, 22 Wall.

(U. S.) 198; Alexander v. Bryan, 110 U. S. 414." Lamar v. Micon, 112 U. S. 452, 476.

For a list of decisions on "confederate" securities with respect to trust investments, see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 7, p. 351.

3. Public Corporations as Trustees.—Whether the legislature can control public corporations which are entrusted with funds for specific uses, when those uses are not public or charitable, "is left in doubt by the cases." Dillon's Man. Corp. (3rd ed.), § 80.

4. It was held to be competent for the legislature of Pennsylvania to take from Philadelphia the administration of charitable trusts under the will of Stephen Girard, and those of others, and give it to a board called "Directors of City Trusts." Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. St. 169.

"A municipal corporation may be a trustee, under the grant or will of an individual or of a private corporation, but only, as it seems, for public purposes germane to its objects." SHARSWOOD, J., in Phila. v. Fox, 64 Pa. St. 169, citing The Mayor v. Elliott, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 170; Cresson's Appeal, 30 Pa. St. 437; Vidal v. Mayor (Girard's Exrs.), 2 How. (U.S.) 127, 189; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174. Compare Mayor v. Gloucester, 1 H. L. Cas. 285.

It has been held that a municipal corporation can be a trustee only for public purposes.¹

(2) Diversion of Trust Funds.—Whether such a public corporation may be charged with trust funds for other than public or charitable uses or not, it has been frequently decided that it cannot divert such funds to uses other than those designed when the trust was conferred.²

(3) Legislative Decision Between Towns Claiming Trusteeship.—Though the legislature, under constitutional restraint, may be of limited power to control all trusts held by public corporations, yet it was held competent for such body to determine which of two town corporations, formed from one which had held a trust, should succeed to the trusteeship, or which was the original corporation, and how it should administer the trust for both.³

1. It cannot, as the trustee of a charity, claim a vested right and prevent the State from changing it as the public interests may demand. Montpelier v. East Montpelier, 29 Vt. 21; Girard v. Philadelphia, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 14; Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465; McDonough Will Case, 15 How. (U. S.) 367.

If in accord with proper corporation purposes, a trust for charitable objects may be held and administered by a city or other public corporation, though not expressly authorized by charter so to do. McDonough v. Murdock, 15 How. (U. S.) 367; Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465; Lawrence County v. Leonard, 34 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 104; Barnum v. Baltimore, 62 Md. 275; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 203. Compare Mason v. Church, 27 N. J. Eq. 47.

Cities and like corporations may be trustees for funds given for corporate purposes which have been considered charitable, or which are governed in some respects as charitable uses, such as donations for public buildings, maintenance of a fire department, building or maintaining water works, making public improvements, sustaining the inhibition of distilling and selling spirituous liquors, for the payment of debts, and for public institutions. Coggeshall v. Pelton, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 292; Humane Fire Co.'s Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 389; Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 98; Bethlehem v. Perseverance Fire Co., 81 Pa. St. 445; Jones v. Williams, Amb. 651; Howse v. Chapman, 4 Ves. 542; Attorney General v. Heelis, 2 Sim. & S. 67; Haines v. Allen, 78 Ind. 100; Dickson v. United States, 125 Mass. 311; Newland v. At- torney General, 3 Mer. 684; Ashton v. Langdale, 4 Eng. Law & Eq. 139; United States v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315; Beaumont v. Olivevia, L. R., 6 Eq. 534; British Museum v. White, 2 Sim. & S. 594; Town of Hamden v. Rice, 24 Ct. 350; Cresson's Appeal, 30 Pa. St. 437.

2. It seems well settled that a city or other municipal trustee cannot apply trust funds otherwise than for the trust purpose with which it is charged. Trustees v. Bradbury, 2 Fairf. (11 Me.) 118; Poultney v. Wells, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 180; Montpelier v. E. Montpelier, 27 Vt. 704, & 29 Vt. 12; White v. Fuller, 39 Vt. 193; Harrison v. Bridgeton, 16 Mass. 16; Plymouth v. Jackson, 15 Pa. St. 44; Daniel v. Memphis, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 582; Aberdeen v. Saunderson, 8 S. & M. (Miss.) 670; Holland v. San Francisco, 7 Cal. 361; Chambers v. St. Louis, 29 Mo. 543.

3. It was held that, upon the division of a town holding a trust, the legislature could decide which new corporation should hold the trust for the benefit of the inhabitants of both. North Yarmouth v. Skillings, 45 Me. 133. See Trustees etc. v. Bradbury, 11 Me. 118; Norris v. Abington Academy, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 7; Bass v. Fontleroy, 11 Tex. 608; Louisville v. University, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 642.

But in New Hampshire, it was held that a new town, made by division of a town previously existing and holding a trust, was not entitled to any portion of the trust fund; that it was incompetent for the legislature to direct a different distribution from that directed by the donor of the fund to the original corporation. Greenville v. Mason, 53 N. H. 515.

III. INVESTMENTS AS AFFECTED BY PROVISIONS IN THE TRUST INSTRUMENT—1. When the Instruction Is Positive—(1) Strict Construction.—When the instrument leaves the trustee no discretion, but specifies precisely what security shall be selected, he is bound to obey implicitly. It must, however, be such direction as is consonant with law and practicable.¹

(2) Directions as to the Amount to be Invested.—If a stated sum is directed to be invested in a particular security, the trustee cannot invest a greater amount therein, unless there is no direction as to a remaining portion of the trust fund. In such case, if the security is such as the courts generally approve, he may invest more in it.²

(3) Restrictions.—Not only in respect to the amount designated in the instrument, but in all other matters lawfully enjoined, he must comply with the instructions. He cannot depart from the letter and spirit of the directions so far as to loan on a note when a bond is required; to substitute his own judgment for that of another person named in the trust instrument as the one to select the security; to loan to a less number of persons than the instrument requires as obligors, and the like. At the same time he must take his instructions with the law, and not do an illegal thing under color of the letter of his instructions.³

(4) General and Special Instructions.—A trustee cannot loan on a mortgage of real estate as security, when instructed to invest in the public funds.⁴ When a will is the instrument, there may be general powers conferred so as to justify an executor in disregarding clauses of the will designating a particular investment; the general powers may give him discretion, though the spirit of the instructions as a whole cannot be disregarded.⁵ Instructed

1. Strict Construction of the Investment.—Courts will hold trustees to the exact obedience of the directions in the instrument. Ackerman v. Emott, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 626; King v. Talbott, 40 N. Y. 76; Buttrill v. Shiel, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 457; Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 596; Womack v. Austin, 1 S. Car. 421; Sanders v. Rogers, 1 S. Car. 452; Banister v. McKenzie, 6 Munf. (Va.) 447; Gilbert v. Welsch, 75 Ind. 557; Bromley v. Kelly, 39 L. J. Ch. 274; Mortimore v. Mortimore, 4 De G. & J. 472; Harris v. Harris, 29 Beav. 107; Smyth v. Burns, 25 Miss. 422; Kenzie v. Anderson, 2 Woods (U. S.) 357.

2. They must not invest more money in a security designated in the instrument than the sum therein specified, if the security is not such as would be held proper in the absence of such direction. Payne v. Collier, 1 Ves. Jr. 170.

3. Directed to loan on bond, they cannot loan on a mere promissory note. Greenwood v. Wakefield, 1 Beav. 576.

Nor on foreign railroad bonds, though authorized to invest in foreign bonds or stocks. In re Langdale's Settlement, L. R., 19 Eq. 39. Nor without the approval of a person designated in the instrument, on whose judgment the loan is directed to be made. McIntire v. Zanesville, 17 Ohio St. 352. Nor in other than freehold security, when the instrument confines the direction to that. Wyatt v. Wallace, 8 Jur. 117. Nor can the loan be made to two persons only, when the instrument requires three. Earlom v. Saunders, Amb. 340; Hereford v. Ravenhill, 5 Beav. 51.

4. Direction in the instrument to invest in public funds precludes loans upon real estate mortgages. This is true in England, where the latter securities are allowable now under statute. The instrument governs. Waring v. Waring, 3 Ir. Ch. 331; Pride v. Fooks, 2 Beav. 430.

5. "Power under a will to change investments, etc., may control other to invest in real estate, he was held justifiable in purchasing with it a right of dower.¹

Though, as a general rule, a trustee must make his investment within the State, he was sustained in purchasing a dwelling elsewhere to accommodate the beneficiary residing there, though the trust instrument merely instructed him to invest in a dwelling house.²

2. When the Instruction Leaves Discretion in the Trustee—(1) Alternate Direction.—Under the strict rule which formerly prevailed in England, it was held that where the trust instrument instructed the trustee to invest in public funds or other good securities, he yet could not legally invest in south sea stock.³ Trustees, however, in England, have not been invariably held for losses upon investments made in that stock when they have acted honestly and within the line of duty; and it is not the rule in the *United States*⁴ to hold trustees liable for stock investments generally considered good, when they have such discretion given them.

When the alternation in the instrument was "real estate or clauses directing a particular investment, under appropriate circumstances." See Stephens v. Milnor, 24 N. J. Eq. 358; Pleasant's Appeal, 77 Pa. St. 356. Schouler's Ex. & Adms., § 335, n.

1. Purchasing Real Estate.—A trustee was directed to invest in productive real estate, and it was held that he might purchase dwellings, and even a right of dower, in executing his trust. Parsons v. Winslow, 16 Mass. 361; Amory v. Green, 13 Allen (Mass.) 413.

And to prevent loss a trustee may buy real estate with trust money. Royer's Appeal, 11 Pa. St. 36; Billington's Appeal, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 55; Bonsall's Appeal, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 263. Compare Oeslager v. Fisher, 2 Pa. St. 467.

2. And, under direction to invest in a dwelling house, the trustee was held to have done his duty when he bought one in a foreign jurisdiction where the beneficiary was residing. Amory v. Green, 13 Allen (Mass.) 413. See Denton v. Sanford, 103 N. Y. 607.

The general rule is that the trustee must invest within the State. Ormis-ton v. Olcott, 84 N. Y. 339.

3. Bank Stock, etc.—The trust instrument required investment in government funds or other good securities. The trustee invested in South Sea stock. There was a loss, and the court held him responsible, saying that neither South Sea stock nor bank stock could be considered good security, since it depended upon the management of the governor and directors, and the capital might be altogether lost. Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. 440, 444. Such strictness would not be held now in this country, nor even in England, when the trust instrument uses such alternate expressions as above noted.

4. Even LORD HARDWICKE, who rendered the above decision, had previously held a trustee harmless for loss on South Sea stock, and had said: "To compel trustees to make up a deficiency not owing to their wilful default, is the hardest demand that can be made in a court of equity." Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Atk. (Eng.) 513; s. c., West Ch. (Eng.) 31.

"Suppose a trustee, having in his hands a considerable sum of money, places it out in the funds, which afterwards sink in their value, or on a security at the time apparently good which afterwards turns out not to be so, for the benefit of the cestui que trust, was there ever an instance of the trustee's being made to answer the actual sum so placed out? I answer, No. If there is no mala fides, nothing wilful in the conduct of the trustee, the court will always favor him." LORD HARDWICKE, in Knight v. Plymouth, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 480; s. c., 1 Dickens 120-7, relied upon by him in Ex parte Belchier, Ambler 218, 219; s. c., 1 Kenyon 38, 47. Above cases cited are quoted by MR. JUSTICE GRAY in Lamar v. Micon, 112 U. S.

other security," an English court held that the investment should be in real estate.¹

(2) General Directions—How Qualified by Law.—Unrestricted instruction in the instrument to employ the trust fund was held to justify the trustee in employing it in business;² but where a loan was evidently contemplated, though the terms were vague, the ruling was against the use of a trust fund in that way.³

Personal securities are not favored by the English courts, even where general discretion is given by the trustee. Courts there will construe the instrument strictly in the interest of the public and the cestui que trust, and require unmistakable authorization to justify investment in such securities.⁴

Though the discretion given plainly leaves the trustee free to loan on such securities, the law will not hold him harmless if he has loaned to accommodate a fellow trustee or a relative, and the loan has resulted in loss. Having the good of another, rather than that of the cestui que trust in view, he could not be said to have acted in perfectly good faith.⁵

(3) Directions to Employ Funds in Trade, etc.—When the intent is clear and the authorization definite, the trustee may and should obey the instrument; should invest in personal and not real securities, when thus required; should employ the fund in trade (though his own judgment might not approve) when thus directed to do so. But though he be an executor positively directed by the will he executes to continue the testator's business,

452. The rule was afterwards more strict in England, till modified by statute.

1. Construction of Alternate or Indefinite Directions—Ground Rents, Land.

—It was held that when the instrument authorized investment in ground rents, redeemable ground rents were included. Ex parte Huff, 2 Pa. St. 227. When the investment was directed to be in real estate or other security, the court held that the true intent was to invest in land, and that other security was not allowable, if this could be done to advantage. Earlom v. Saunders, Amb. 340.

2. Discretion Given in the Instrument.

—When the trustee is directed to employ the fund, without any specification as to the security, the court thought that he might employ it in trade, in the particular case, without incurring liability. Dickinson v. Player, C. P. Coop. 178.

3. When the direction is to put the money at interest or "other way of improvement," it was held not sufficient to justify the trustee in embarking in business with it. Cock v. Goodfellow, 10 Mod. 489.

4. "If trustees have a discretion as to the kind of investments, it is not sound discretion to invest in personal securities." Perry on Trusts, § 453.

General authority to a trustee leaving him to his discretion, when not couched in definite terms, will not justify him in lending trust funds on personal security. Wynne v. Warren, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 118; Pocock v. Reddington, 5 Ves. 799; Wilkes v. Steward, G. Coop. 6; Mills v. Osborne, 7 Sim. 30.

The authorization should be specific and in due form, when a wife gives written consent that trust funds belonging to her may be loaned to her husband. Cocker v. Quayle, 1 R. & M. 535; Pickard v. Anderson, L. R. 13 Eq. 608.

5. Authority, in the instrument, to loan a personal security, will not shield the trustee from loss if he has loaned with the object of accommodating one of his kinsmen; or, where there are co-trustees, if they have loaned to one of themselves for such purpose. De Jarnette v. De Jarnette, 41 Ala. 708; Langston v. Ollivant, G. Coop. 33i.

he must not use more of the funds than are necessary, nor prolong the business beyond reasonable time.¹

(4) Investment in Stocks Approved.—Under instrumental authorization to invest in public funds or good, remunerative stock, with full discretion, the executor of the will which thus empowered him chose insurance and manufacturing companies' stock, and the court approved, taking into consideration the productiveness of the investments as well as their safety.²

Such directions by a decedent must be in his will, or at least in writing, to justify a trustee or executor in following them.³

(5) Indefinite Instruction.—When the direction merely requires "good and sufficient security," and there is no statutory designation of securities, the trustee should apply to the court for an order; so held in England, and also in this country in some instances.⁴

IV. LIABILITIES OF TRUSTEES—1. For Delay in Investing—(1) When Investments Should be Made.—The rule of law is that the trustee should invest within reasonable time. If the time is fixed by statute or the trust instrument, he must comply with the re-

Forbes v. Ross, 2 Cox 113; Cock v. Goodfellow, 10 Mod. 489; Stickney v. Sewell, 1 M. & Cr. 814; Fitzgerald v. Pringle, 2 Moll. 534; Francis v. Francis, 5 De G., M. & G. 108.

1. If the instrument is a will, and the testator has directed the executor to continue an established business for a reasonable time, the latter may do so without incurring liability to distributees for losses. Paddon v. Richardson, 7 De G., M. & G. 563. In such case, however, only the money already employed in the business can be used—no new investment, it was held. McNeille v. Acton, 4 De G., M. & G. 744.

2. When the instrument was a will directing the trustee, to invest with good security, "in safe and productive stock, either in the public funds, bank shares or other stock, according to their best judgment and discretion, hereby enjoining on them particular care and attention in the choice of funds, and in the punctual collection of the dividends, interest and profits thereof, and authorizing them to sell out, reinvest and change the said loans and stocks from time to time, as the safety and interest of the said trust fund may, in their judgment, require," the court held investment in incorporated insurance and manufacturing companies to be proper. It broadly laid down this rule: "All that can be required of a trustee to invest is that he shall conduct himself faithfully and exercise a sound discretion. He is to observe how men of prudence, discretion and intelligence manage their own affairs, not in regard to speculation but in regard to the permanent disposition of their funds, considering the probable income, as well as the probable safety of the capital to be invested." Harvard College v. Amory, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 446. And this is the rule at present in Massachusetts. Brown v. French, 125 Mass. 410; Bowker v. Pierce, 130 Mass. 262.

3. Unwritten directions made by the decedent will not warrant an executor or administrator to divert trust funds. Malone v. Kelley, 54 Ala. 532.

Specific legacies already invested with security, need not be disturbed by the executor. Ward v. Kitchen, 30 N. J. Eq. 31.

4. "Good and Sufficient Security."—When the trust instrument directs that the fund be invested in "good and sufficient security" (a phrase often employed), it is the duty of the trustee to select such security as the statutes recognize as such; or, in the absence of statutory direction, to apply to the court for designation. If he act at discretion, the court will judge whether his selection of security was proper. Nance v. Nance, 1 S. Car. 209; Womack v. Austin, 1 S. Car. 421; McCall v. Peachy, 3 Munf. (Va.) 288; Trustees v. Clay, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 385; Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. 440; Ryder v. Bickerton, 3 Swans. 80, n.; Booth v. Booth, 1 Beav. 125; De quirement, or the onus is upon him to show why not. When there is time thus fixed, the courts will determine what time is reasonable.¹

He must, within reasonable time, withdraw funds already invested if the law requires a different security for trust funds than that which the testator took when he invested them as his own, and he must reinvest with proper security without unnecessary delay.²

(2) What Is Reasonable Time.—Reasonable time may be more or less extended, according to the duty required and the difficulty of investing to the best advantage. A year was not deemed unreasonable when the investment was to be in real estate.³ An executor held trust funds a year before buying United States stock without incurring the disapproval of the court.⁴ Half, and even one fourth of that time have been held sufficient—the character of the investment and the circumstances being always considered. And sometimes immediate investment will be required, any delay being unreasonable.⁵

(3) Interest During Delay.—The beneficiary of the trust is not to lose by reason of the trustee's failure to invest at the proper time. If it is the trustee's fault that the fund is not productive, he must repair it by paying legal interest for the time unnecessarily delayed. The rule is that he is liable to be made to pay simple interest.⁶

Manneville v. Crompton, 1 V. & B. 259.

1. Time of Investment.—When no time is specified, the courts will adjudge what is a reasonable period within which trust funds should be invested. Johnson v. Newton, 11 Hare 160; Parry v. Warrington, 6 Mad. 155.

2. And an executor must invest trust funds within reasonable time, though they have been invested by the testator himself in securities other than those designated by law for the investment of trust funds. He must convert them into proper securities without unreasonable delay. Pray's Appeal, 34 Pa. St. 100; Hemphill's Appeal, 18 Pa. St. 303. Compare Smith v. Smith, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 283.

3. Within One Year.—Courts will judge as to the reasonableness of the time taken to select and effectuate a proper investment. A year may not be too long for finding and buying suitable land, and examining and deciding upon the title, etc. Johnson v. Newton, 11 Hare 160; Parry v. Warrington, 6 Mad. 155; Wyatt v. Wallis, 1 Coop. 154, n.

4. An executor, charged to invest in stock of the United States, delayed a year, and was not deemed derelict in his duty. Cogswell v. Cogswell, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 231.

5. Six Months or Less.—As "reasonable time" depends on the character of the directed investment, and the circumstances of each particular case, six months may be long enough; there may be sufficient, and immediate action may be necessary to avoid liability on the part of the trustee. Armstrong v. Walkup, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 608; Hooper v. Royster, 1 Munf. (Va.) 119; Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 543; Frey v. Frey, 2 C. E. Green (17 N. J. Eq.) 71; Duncomb v. Duncomb, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 508; Manning v. Manning, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 527; Warrell's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 44; Merrick's Estate, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 485.

6. Interest Charged.—If no investment be made within such time as the court deems reasonable, the trustee will be charged with simple interest for the time he needlessly withholds the trust fund from investment. Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 535; Duncomb v. Duncomb, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 508; Forbes v. Ross, 2 Cox 115; Hughes v. Empson, 22 Beav. 181; Johnson v. Prendergast, 28 Beav. 480; Flan-

(4) Reparation for Losses.—He is also liable for any losses that may have been caused by failure to invest, when he can show no good reason for his neglect, when the procrastination was intentional, when his tardiness is attributable to his want of business energy, or from an indifference akin to bad faith.¹

2. For Commingling Trust Funds with His Own by Trustee—(1) By Commingling the Funds in Any Way.—Whatever the way in which the funds are intermixed, whether by the trustee's depositing them with his personal money in bank, purchasing property partly for himself and partly for the cestui que trust without any designation of the interest of either, keeping his accounts so as to confound his own with the money held in trust, or creating confusion of interests in any one of many conceivable ways, he becomes responsible for not only the interest which the trust funds would have yielded if separately invested, but also for all losses which the intermingling may have caused.²

(2) By Using Trust Funds in His Own Business.—More reprehensible still is the trustee's employing trust funds in his private business. He has no right to subject them to the fluctuations of trade, though confidently believing in his own judgment and honest intent. His duty is to invest them, and borrowing them himself is not complying with this duty. He thus not only jeopardizes the sacred trust which he has assumed, but, even if suc-agan v. Nolan, 1 Moll. 85; Moyle v. Moyle, 2 R. & M. 710; Johnson v. Newton, 11 Hare 160; Cogswell v. Cogswell, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 231; Williamson v. Williamson, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 298; Mimose v. Cox, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 441; Carter v. Cutting, 5 Munf. (Va.) 223.

1. Interest and Loss.—If the trustee fails to invest within reasonable time, he is chargeable with interest and liable for losses attributable to his neglect. Garniss v. Gardner, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 128; Schieffelin v. Stewart, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 620; Chase v. Lockerman, 11 G. & J. (Md.) 185; Lomax v. Pendleton, 3 Call. (Va.) 538; Lyse v. Kingdom, 1 Call. (Va.) 184; Bates v. Scales, 12 Ves. 402; Ryder v. Bickerton, 3 Swanst. 80; Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. 440; Handly v. Snodgrass, 9 Leigh (Va.) 484; Shipp v. Hettrick, 63 N. Car. 329; Owen v. Peebles, 42 Ala. 338; In re Thorp, Davies (U. S.) 290; Aston's Estate, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 228; Clough v. Bond, 3 M. & Cr. (Eng.) 496; Byrchall v. Bradford, 6 Mad. 235; Johnson v. Newton, 11 Hare (Eng.) 160; Phillipson v. Gatty, 7 Hare 516; Challen v. Ship-pam, 4 Hare 555; Watts v. Girdlestone, 6 Beav. 188; Matthews v. Brice, 6 Beav. 239; Byrne v. Norcott, 13 Beav. 336;

Robinson v. Robinson, 1 De G., M. & G. 256; Fletcher v. Walker, 3 Mad. 73; Massey v. Banner, 4 Mad. 419; McDonnell v. Harding, 7 Sim. 178; Munch v. Cockerell, 9 Sim. 115; Lowry v. Fulton, 9 Sim. 115; Moyle v. Moyle, 2 R. & M. 701.

2. Commingling Trust and Private Funds.—Liability for interest and loss. Robinett's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 174; Gilbert's Appeal, 78 Pa. St. 266; Dyott's Estate, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 557, 565; Mer-rick's Estate, 2 Ash. (Pa.) 485; Com. v. McAlister, 28 Pa. St. 480; In re Thorp, Davies (U. S.) 290; McKenzie v. Anderson, 2 Woods (U. S.) 357; Munford v. Murray, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; Spear v. Tinkham, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 211; De Peyster v. Clarkson, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 77; Case v. Abeel, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 393; Kellett v. Rathbun, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 102; Garniss v. Gardner, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 128; Beverleys v. Miller, 6 Munf. (Va.) 99; Leake's Executors v. Leake, 75 Va. 794; Peyton v. Smith, 2 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. Car.) 325; Kerr v. Laird, 27 Miss. 544; State v. Cheston, 51 Md. 352; Diffenderfer v. Winder, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 311; Jameson v. Shelby, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 198; Henderson v. Henderson, 58 Ala. 582; Kirkman v. Benham, 28 Ala. 501; Dit-cessful in his ventures, he puts a temptation in his own way. The law does not tolerate such dispositions of trust funds, but holds the trustee liable for all the damages which his illegal course may cause.¹

3. For Holding Trust Property in His Own Name—(1) By Taking Mortgage in the Trustee's Own Name.—It is held to be a mingling of trust with private funds when a trustee acts in his own name and private capacity when taking real estate security for the loan of trust money. Such conduct is held highly reprehensible. It is not only unjust to those whose interests are entrusted to his care, but it is detrimental to the public weal. The emphatic denunciations of such conduct by the English courts have been followed by reprobation as strong in this country.²

(2) By Taking Title in His Own Name.—So if the trustee, taking a trust deed to secure a loan of the trust money which he administers, has land conveyed to himself in his own name, he acts beyond the line of his duty. He thus makes himself not only liable in damages for any loss that may ensue, but puts the cestui que trust in a position where he may elect to claim the damages in case of loss, or to claim the land itself in case he chooses to adopt the investment. The principle has been often held that the beneficiary may avail himself of any benefit which his wrongdoing trustee may have meant to enure to himself, not-mar v. Bogle, 53 Ala. 169; Henderson v. Henderson, 58 Ala. 582; Calvert v. Marlow, 6 Ala. 337; Nettles v. McCown, 5 S. Car. 43; Perkins' Estate, 59 Vt. 348; Hedricks v. Tuckwiller, 20 W. Va. 489; Hanbest's Estate, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 72.

1. Using Trust Funds in His Own Business—Trustee Liable.—Manning v. Manning, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 527; Brown v. Ricketts, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 303; Adye v. Feuilletau, 1 Cox 25; Tebbs v. Carpenter, 1 Mad. 304; Piety v. Stace, 4 Ves. 622; In re Hilliard, 1 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 90; Docker v. Somes, 2 M. & R. 655; Palmer v. Mitchel, 2 M. & R. 672, n.; Kyle v. Barnett, 17 Ala. 306; Land's Appeal, 58 Pa. St. 142; Norris' Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 106; Hook v. Dyer, 47 Mo. 214.

Depositing trust funds on trustee's private account. Williams v. Williams, 55 Wis. 300; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 708; Hanbest's Estate, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 72; Kirby v. State, 51 Md. 383; Thompson v. Brooke, 76 Va. 160.

2. Devastavit.—A trustee must not mingle trust funds with his own money. "If a trustee lend the trust fund and take a note and mortgage to himself individually, he thereby mingles the trust funds with his own individual funds, and may be charged with a devastavit at the election of the cestui que trust." De Jarnette v. De Jarnette, 41 Ala. 708; citing Pennell v. Deffield, 23 Eng. L. & Eq. 460.

Among other authorities cited to show that the principle has been long recognized by the courts as "essential to the general interests of mankind," are the following: Freeman v. Fairlie, 3 Merivale 28; Wren v. Katron, 11 Ves. 377; Routh v. Howell, 3 Ves. 565; Ex parte Hilliard, 1 Ves. 89; Roche v. Hart, 11 Ves. 61; Massey v. Banner, 4 Mad. 413; Fletcher v. Walker, 3 Mad. 73; Robinson v. Ward, Ry. & M. 274; Verner's Estate, 9 Watts (Pa.) 250; West Br. Bank v. Fulmer, 3 Pa. St. 390; McAllister v. Com., 30 Pa. St. 536; Com. v. McAllister, 28 Pa. St. 480; Royer's Appeal, 11 Pa. St. 36; Kellett v. Rathbun, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 102; Case v. Abeel, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 393; Mumford v. Murray, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; In the Matter of Stafford, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 353; Lewin on Trusts, *pp. 296, 333; 2 Story Eq., § 1270; Fonblanque's Eq. 474, n.; Dayton on Surrogates, 489; Hill on Trustees, 376; Hagthorp v. Hook, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 270; Rorke v. McConville, 4 Redf. (N. Y.) 291; Lacoste's Estate, Myrick's Probate (Cal.) 67.

withstanding the form of title which the trustee may hold.¹

4. For Speculating with Trust Funds—(1) Profits Enure to the Cestui que Trust.—It is not permissible that the trustee may enrich himself from the funds which he administers. He cannot speculate with them without going out of his line of duty. Should he illegally do so, he is liable for all the losses that may result from his ventures, while all the profits belong to the cestui que trusts. If there are no profits he may be required to pay interest for the time the fund was thus unlawfully employed. If he has purchased anything for himself with the trust funds, the property may be claimed by the estate or person for whom he was legally bound to act.²

(2) Purchases May be Taken by the Cestui que Trust.—Even though a trustee, who has obtained an order of court to sell property of the estate he administers, be authorized by the order to bid at the public sale, he cannot thus buy land or other property for himself. Should he bid it in, those whom he is legally bound to represent may elect to take it. Should he thus buy and then dispose of it at a profit, the gains enure to them and not to himself. The rule with respect to private purchases, that losses are his and gains are theirs, applies to purchases at judicial sales with full force, even when he is specially authorized to bid. Ordinarily he cannot legally bid or become the buyer when he is the seller.³

1. Investment in Trustee's Own Name.—Should a trustee take the title to land himself, in trust, instead of a mortgage upon it as security for the cestui que trust, the latter may adopt the action and take the land. Bonsall's Appeal, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 266; Billington's Appeal, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 55; Royer's Appeal, 11 Pa. St. 36; Kaufman v. Crawford, 9 W. & S. (Pa.) 131; Matthews v. Hayward, 2 S. Car. 239; Morton v. Adams, 1 Strobh. Eq. (S. Car.) 72; Keth v. Richmond etc., 4 Gratt. (Va.) 482; Eckford v. De Kay, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 89; Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; Winchelsea v. Nordcliffe, 1 Vern. 134.

2. Speculating.—"It is a well settled rule that where a trustee speculates with the trust funds he may be held to profits or interest at the option of the cestui que trust: profits, if the investment has been successful; and interest, if it has been disastrous. In no event will the trustee be allowed to make a profit out of the trust funds. The law holds out no inducements to trustees to misapply the estate. He may lose, but he cannot make by so doing. It is equally clear that when the trust funds can be fairly traced into the purchase of any particular stock, the latter shall be held to belong to the estate, if the cestui que trust so elect." Norris's Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 106; Sequin's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 139; McLaughlin v. Fulton, 104 Pa. St. 161.

3. Speculating Purchases.—Profit cannot be legally made out of a trust fund, by the trustee, for his own benefit. Gains are to enure to the cestui que trust.

A trustee, at a judicial sale of land made upon his own application for the order, cannot become a purchaser and use trust funds in payment, and then resell by way of speculation, so as to enrich himself. Whatever profit he thus makes belongs to the cestui que trust. This is so, though the order of court allowed him to bid at the judicial sale. Baker's Appeal, 120 Pa. St. 33; Sequin's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 139; McLaughlin v. Fulton, 104 Pa. St. 161. Compare Patterson's Appeal, 118 Pa. St. 571.

When land is sold by an agent of a trustee, and the latter has no authority conferred by the deed of trust to appoint an agent, no title passes to the purchaser. Fuller v. O'Neil, 69 Tex. 349; Graham v. King, 50 Mo. 22; Bales

5. For Losses on Unauthorized Investments—(1) Losses on Investments Made in Contravention of Common Law.—Whenever a trustee invests in derogation and violation of law, he takes the risk of any loss that may result, and the courts will treat him as having acted in bad faith, and will hold him accountable.¹

(2) In Violation of Statutory Inhibitions.—So if he wantonly disregards statutory directions, the loss, if any, will fall upon himself.²

(3) In Disregard of Legal Directions in the Trust Instrument.—So if he sets up his own will against that expressed in the instrument under which it is his duty to act, he makes himself liable for losses.³ And generally, when left to his own discretion, he may be held liable for losses when he has not obtained an order of court for the investment.

6. Rights and Liabilities of an Interested Trustee Acting for Others Interested—(1) A Trustee Creditor May Pay Himself with Other Creditors Under Given Circumstances.—While the rule that a trustee cannot act in his own interest is inflexible, there may be circumstances under which a trustee may act for himself in connection with others, in his administration of a trust, without violation of the spirit of the rule. One who was winding up the affairs of an insolvent corporation, having paid the other creditors, afterwards paid himself a credit due him by the corporation. The court held it inequitable to hold him to be a violator of the rule, and said that it was never applicable to such a case. Acting in good faith, and in perfect fairness to the other creditors, there was no good reason why he should not be paid as a creditor while acting in the capacity of trustee.⁴

(2) Trustee Representing Coparties in Litigation.—When a trustee represents the interests of others with which his own is indissolubly conjoined, he should be compensated from the com-

v. Perry, 51 Mo. 451; Powell v. Tuttle, 3 N. Y. 396.

A trustee cannot claim title in himself adverse to that of the cestui que trust whose interest he represents. "A contrary rule would render it extremely hazardous to entrust property to another; and would, in many instances, enable an unscrupulous trustee to profit by violating the terms of his agreements." Neyland v. Bendy, 69 Tex. 711.

1. See authorities cited supra, this title, INVESTMENT OF TRUST FUNDS AT COMMON LAW.

2. See supra, this title, TRUST INVESTMENTS REGULATED BY STATUTE.

3. See supra, this title, INVESTMENTS AS AFFECTED BY PROVISIONS IN THE TRUST INSTRUMENT.

4. Exception to the Rule.—The rule remains unimpaired that a trustee cannot buy trust property at a sale of it provoked by himself, unless he have leave of court so to do. But it was held not to be contrary to this rule, when a stockholding creditor, who had been made trustee of the stock of an insolvent corporation, paid himself four years after he had paid the other creditors. It was held on a bill filed for an amount, that he had acted within the law. The court said: "The complainants are in a court of equity, and there is no equity in what they ask. The principle which they invoke was never intended for such a case, and to apply it here would work the very reverse of equity." Patterson's Appeal, 118 Pa. St. 571. See Grim's Appeal, 105 Pa. St. 375.

mon property managed by him, or be paid by the others proportionably to their interest, for the outlay he has made in behalf of all. Should he act upon his own motion, and institute proceedings for the benefit of all without being authorized to represent the coparties in interest, they would yet be equitably bound to share the expense of the outlay if they should accept the benefits of it. But should he fail of success, they would not be so bound when they had not employed him.¹

7. Liability to Pay Interest on Balances.—(1) How Balances Should be Ascertained.—The trustee should charge himself with all the income for the current year, and credit himself with all the disbursements and his commissions at his annual settlement. The balance in his hands is chargeable with legal interest, as a general rule, it is held, though it seems that it should not be so when he has possessed it so little while that no opportunity for desirable investment may have occurred.²

(2) When Liable for Interest on Balances.—Holding balances after time and opportunity for investing have occurred, mingling them with his own funds or using them as his own in business, failing to render his account at the proper time so that the balance can be ascertained, or withholding the turning of them over to those entitled to receive them after balances have been struck, will render the trustee liable for interest at the legal or agreed rate, for all the time the money was unlawfully detained by him. The authorities on this subject are numerous, both in England and the United States.³

1. Trustee Representing Coparties in Interest.—"When many persons have a common interest in a trust property or fund, and one of them, for the benefit of all and at his own expense, brings a suit for its preservation or administration, the court of equity in which the suit is brought will order that the plaintiff be reimbursed his outlay from the property of the trust, or by proportional contribution from those who accept the benefit of his efforts. See Trustees v. Greenough, 105 U. S. 527, where the subject is discussed by MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY, and the cases cited; and Central Railroad Co. v. Pettus, 113 U. S. 116." And the court say that one bringing adversary proceedings to take trust property from those entitled to it, and failing in his suit, cannot have reimbursement for his outlay in such proceeding. Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S. 567.

2. Interest on Balances.—"The proper mode of taking the account of trustees is to treat all the income of the trust received during the current year as unproductive, and to charge against the income of the current year all the disbursements, including the compensation or commissions of the trustees for the same year, and to strike a balance, upon which, as a general rule, interest is to be allowed. Boynton v. Dyer, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Pettus v. Clawson, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 92; Jones v. Morrall, 2 Sim. (N. S.) (Eng.) 241; De Peyster v. Clarkson, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 77; Vanderheyden v. Vanderheyden, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 287; Luken's Appeal, 47 Pa. St. 356; Reynolds v. Walker, 29 Miss. 250; Roach v. Jelks, 40 Miss. 754; Crump v. Gerock, 40 Miss. 765." Perry on Trusts, § 468. See INTEREST, vol. 11. Compound interest on balances: In re Sanderson (Cal.), 15 Pac. Rep. 753.

3. Rule Respecting Interest.—"If a trustee retains balances in his hands which he ought to have invested, or delays for an unreasonable time to invest, or if he mingles the money with his own, or uses it in his private business, or deposits it in bank in his own name, or in the name of the firm of which he is a member, or neglects to settle his account for a long time, or to distribute

8. When Liable for Compound Interest—(1) On Illegal Commissions.—Should a trustee retain trust money as his own, on the pretence of paying himself commissions to which he is not entitled, he may be charged compound interest on the amount thus withheld.¹

(2) On Sums Withheld from Court.—If he fails to obey an order of court directing him to produce funds which are in litigation, compound interest on them may be exacted for the time in which he delays.²

(3) For Breach of Trust.—If he wantonly commits a breach of trust with respect to the fund with which he is charged, the court may require him to restore what he has taken, and compound interest may be exacted of him.³

(4) Refusing to Account.—If a trustee disobeys a judicial order requiring him to render his account, he may be compelled to pay compound interest for the time of delay. The cestui que trust or pay over the money when he ought to do so, he will be liable to pay simple interest at the rate established by law as the legal rate in the absence of special agreements. Burdick v. Garrick, L. R., 5 Ch. 241; Blogg v. Johnson, L. R., 2 Ch. 225; Berwick v. Murray, 7 De G. M. & G. 843; Treves v. Townshend, 1 Bro. Ch. 384; Forbes v. Ross, 2 Bro. Ch. 430; Piety v. Stacy, 4, Ves. 620; Ashburnham v. Thompson, 13 Ves. 402; Bates v. Scales, 12 Ves. 402; Pocock v. Reddington, 5 Ves. 794; Sutton v. Sharp, 1 Russ. 146; Crockett v. Bethune, 1 J. & W. 122; Atty. Gen. v. Tolly, 2 Sim. 515; Heathcote v. Hulme, 1 J. & W. 122; Brown v. Sansome, 1 Mc. & G. 327; Westoven v. Chapman, 1 Coll. 177; Robinson v. Robinson, 1 De G. M. & G. 247; Jones v. Foxall, 15 Beav. 392; Saltmarsh v. Barrett, 21 Beav. 349; Knott v. Cottee, 16 Beav. 77; Roche v. Hart, 11 Ves. 58; Lincoln v. Allen, 4 Bro. P. C. 553; Young v. Comb, 4 Ves. 101; Dawson Massey, 1 Ball & B. 231; Hicks v. Hicks, 3 Atk. 274; Perkins v. Boynton, 1 Bro. Ch. 375; King v. Talbott, 40 N. Y. 76; Nelson v. Hagerstown Bank, 27 Md. 51; Cook v. Addison, L. R., 5 Ch. 466; Duffy v. Duncan, 35 N. Y. 187; Young v. Brush, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 294; Owen v. Peebles, 42 Ala. 338; Wistar's Appeal, 54 Pa. St. 60; Newton v. Bennett, 1 Bro. Ch. 359; Littlehales v. Gascoyne, 3 Bro. Ch. 73; Franklin v. Firth, 3 Bro. Ch. 433; Longmore v. Broom, 7 Ves. 124; Trimleston v. Hammill, 1 Ball & B. 385; Tebbs v. Carpenter, 1 Mad. 290; Mousley v. Carr, 4 Beav. (Eng.) 49; Hoskins v. Nichols, 1 N. C. C.

Eng. 478; Beverleys v. Miller, 6 Munf. (Va.) 99; Diffenderffer v. Winder, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 311; Mumford & Murray, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; Jacot v. Emmett, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 142; Kellet v. Rathbun, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 102; De Peyster v. Clarkson, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 77; Garniss v. Gardiner, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 128; Spear v. Tinkham, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 211; Manning v. Manning, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 527; Brown v. Rickett, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 303; Williamson v. Williamson, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 298; Kerr v. Laird, 27 Miss. 544; Handly v. Snodgrass, 9 Leigh (Va.) 484; Dillard v. Tomlinson, 1 Munf. (Va.) 183; Carter v. Cutting, 5 Munf. (Va.) 223; Wood v. Garnett, 6 Leigh (Va.) 271; Griswold v. Chandler, 5 N. H. 492; Lund v. Lund, 41 N. H. 355; Turney v. Williams, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 172; Wright v. Wright, 2 McCord Ch. (S. Car.) 185; Knowlton v. Bradley, 17 N. H. 458," etc.; Perry on Trusts, § 468.

1. Compound Interest.—For retaining money as commission when not allowed by law or under order of court, a trustee may be charged compound interest on the sum thus retained. McKnight v. Walsh, 23 N. J. Eq. 136, and 24 N. J. Eq. 498.

2. If he fail to bring a litigated sum into court when ordered to do so, he may be made to pay compound interest on it for the time he thus withholds it: Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192; Latimer v. Hanson, 1 Bland (Md.) 51; Winder v. Diffenderffer, 2 Bland (Md.) 166.

3. Compound interest may be charged when there is an intended breach of is entitled to what he would have had if the trustee had made his settlements regularly so that the balances in his favor would have been upon interest from the time of their ascertainment; and justice to him requires that the interest should be compounded in case such settlements were not made at the regular times. And the trustee is not too rigidly dealt with when required to pay such interest for his culpable neglect. He is chargeable on reasonable presumptions of what he may have made. Besides, the public is interested in having settlements duly made.¹

9. When Trustees Are Not Liable—(1) When Authorized by Cestui que Trust.—Though trustees invest in improper securities, or such as the courts are known to avoid when ordering trust investments, yet they will not be responsible for losses nor be held for interest if the interested parties for whom they act have themselves directed the investment. Those parties, when of age and capable of contracting in all respects, estop themselves from complaining when they have instigated the transaction which results to their own detriment. Had the court acted for them and ordered investment in the security which proved inadequate, the trustees would not have been more clearly blameless than when the cestui que trust gave the direction.²

trust on the part of the trustee. Fall v. Simmons, 6 Ga. 265; Kenan v. Hall, 8 Ga. 417; Cartledge v. Cutliff, 21 Ga. 1; Clemens v. Caldwell, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 171.

1. So, when he refuses to render his account. Bryant v. Craig, 12 Ala. 354; Smith v. Kennard, 38 Ala. 695; Jannison v. Hapgood, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 77; McElhenny's Appeal, 61 Pa. St. 188; Knott v. Cottee, 16 Beav. 77; Swindall v. Swindall, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. C.) 285. See Scott v. Crews, 72 Mo. 261.

Compound interest may be exacted, whether there was malfeasance on the part of the trustee or not, if he has so employed the trust fund that he may reasonably be presumed to have received from it profits equivalent to compound interest. Docker v. Somes, 2 My. & K. (Eng.) 655; Atty. Gen. v. Alford, 4 D. M. & G. (Eng.) 843; Burdick v. Garrick, 5 Ch. App. (Eng.) 233; Tedds v. Carpenter, 1 Madd. (Eng.) 290; Crockett v. Bethune, 1 Jac. & W. (Eng.) 586; Boynston v. Dyer, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Fay v. Howe, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 527; Elliott v. Sparrell, 114 Mass. 404; Wendell v. French, 19 N. H. 205; Lund v. Lund, 41 N. H. 355; De Peyster v. Clarkson, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 77; Garniss v. Gardiner, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 128; Utica Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 520; Barney v. Saunders, 16

How. (U. S.) 535; Utica Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 520; Prescott's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 430; Hood's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 396; Manning v. Manning, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 527; Spear v. Tinkham, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 211; Ackerman v. Emmott, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 626; Lansing v. Lansing, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 182; McKnight v. Walsh, 24 N. J. Eq. 498; McCall's Estate, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 357; English v. Harvey, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 305; Harland's Accounts, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 323; Lukens's Appeal, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 48; Light's Appeal, 24 Pa. St. 180; Clemens v. Caldwell, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 171; Kyle v. Barnett, 17 Ala. 306; Williams v. Petticrew, 62 Mo. 460; Scott v. Crews, 72 Mo. 261; Fall v. Simmons, 6 Ga. 265; Kenan v. Hall, 8 Ga. 417; Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Harris & Gill (Md.) 11; Myers v. Myers, 2 McCord Ch. (S. Car.) 214; Wright v. Wright, 2 McCord Ch. (S. Car.) 185; Johnson v. Miller, 33 Miss. 553.

2. Investments Under Authorization of the Cestui Que Trust.—When the trustee acts for those who are capable of contracting; and under power from them to make a specified investment, he is not liable for interest or losses, though the investment be not such as the courts would have directed. Poole v. Munday, 103 Mass. 174; Nyce's Appeal, 5

(2) When There Is Depreciation of Securities Without His Fault.—If the investment is a good one when made, the trustee is not liable for a subsequent depreciation of the security. An apparently good first mortgage, which, after the investment, proves inadequate security, will not be held to have been improperly chosen; but the selection of second mortgage railroad bonds, which deteriorate subsequently, would render the trustee liable for loss.¹ But if the trustee has manifested due diligence in the selection, has consulted good business men and been advised in favor of a particular fund not inhibited by law, and the fund was generally thought to be safe, he ought not to be held liable for losses beyond his control.²

(3) Fraud of Agents.—When the investment is permissible by the terms of the trust, and made in good faith, and with business prudence, the trustee is not liable for loss occasioned by the fraud of a necessary agent.³

(4) Premiums On Bonds.—A trustee may pay premiums on bonds in which he invests trust funds. He may withhold dividends resulting from the investment, to restore the capital to the original sum which the payment of the premiums had diminished. And the market quotations as to the value of the bonds, after investment, do not affect his responsibility relative thereto.⁴

(5) When Trustees Have Done Their Duty.—Finally, there is no liability when the trustee has done his full duty.⁵

Watts & S. (Pa.) 254; Booth v. Booth, 1 Beav. 125; Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 64; Langford v. Gascoyne, 11 Ves. 333; Brice v. Stokes, 11 Ves. 319; Montfort v. Cadogan, 17 Ves. 489; Nail v. Punter, 5 Sim. 555.

1. Loss on Mortgage.—A trustee is not chargeable for loss when the security was a mortgage on real estate worth fifty per cent. more than the sum loaned, but which afterwards depreciated for cause beyond the trustee's control.

But for loss resulting from his having taken second mortgage bonds of a railroad company, the trustee was held liable. Clark v. Anderson, 13 Bush (Ky.) 111.

2. Losses Beyond Trustee's Control.—A faithful trustee who has invested in funds generally considered good at the time, or who has trusted necessarily to others who were deemed trustworthy, is not to be held for losses occasioned by the subsequent deterioration of the funds or the mala fides of the agent. Knight v. Plymouth, 1 Dickens 120; s. c., 3 Atk. 480; Ex parte Belchier, 1 Ken. 38; s. c., 1 Amb. 218.

3. Fraud.—"A trustee must not choose investments other than those which the terms of his trust permit." A trustee is only bound to conduct the business of his trust in the same manner in which an ordinarily prudent man of business would conduct his own. A trustee held not liable for loss by reason of the fraud of his broker. (LORD HARDWICKES in Knight v. Plymouth, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 480, followed.) Speight v. Gaunt, 22 Ch. Div. 727, 739, 762; 9 App. Cas. 19.

4. Bond Premiums.—An investment in 4 per cent. bonds of the government was held judicious, although the purchaser had paid a premium of three per cent., and the trust fund might have commanded a higher rate in other securities. Emery v. Batchelder, 78 Me. 233.

A trustee bought bonds at a premium for a permanent investment. He was held not bound to pay to the life-tenant the entire net income. He may make successive deductions to restore the capital to what it was before the premium was paid. The quotations in the market meanwhile (or the fluctuation in the price of the bonds bought), do not affect the transaction nor his rights and liabilities. New England Trust Co. v. Eaton, 140 Mass. 532; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 493.

5. "If there is no mala fides, nothing wilful in the conduct of the trustee, the

INVOLUNTARY—INVOLVED—IRREGULARITY.

INVOLUNTARY.—See note 1.

INVOLVED.—Directly affected.²

I O U.—A memorandum of debt, consisting of these letters; a sum of money and the debtor's signature is termed an I O U, these letters representing the words "I owe you."³

IRREGULARITY.—(See NULLITY and the different practical titles). The want of adherence to some prescribed rule or mode of proceeding; it consists either in omitting to do something court will always favor him; for, as a trust is an office necessary in the concerns between man and man, and which, if faithfully discharged, is attended with no small degree of trouble and anxiety, it is an act of great kindness in anyone to accept it. To add hazard or risk to that trouble, and subject a trustee to losses which he could not foresee, and consequently not prevent, would be a manifest hardship, and would be deterring everyone from accepting so necessary an office." Knight v. Plymouth, 1 Dickens 120; s. c., 3 Atk. 480.

"It will be found to be the result of all the best authorities upon the subject, that although a personal representative, acting strictly within the line of his duty, and exercising reasonable care and diligence, will not be responsible for the failure or depreciation of the fund in which any part of the estate may be invested, or for the insolvency or misconduct of any person who may have possessed it, etc." Clough v. Bond, 3 Mylne & Craig, 490; Fahnestock's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 46; Mills v. Hoffman, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 594; Perrine v. Vreeland, 33 N. J. Eq. 102; Bowker v. Pierce, 130 Mass. 262; French v. Currier, 47 N. H. 88; Barney v. Parsons, 54 Vt. 623; Harrison v. Mock, 10 Ala. 185, 193.

Authorities on Trust Investments.—Perry on Trusts and Trustees (3rd ed., 1882); Sanders on Uses and Trusts (2nd Am. ed., 1885); Lewin on Trusts and Trustees (2nd Am. ed., 1858); Hill on Trustees (4th Am. ed., 1867); Tiffany and Ballard's Law of Trusts and Trustees, 1862; Zinn's Leading Cases on Trusts, 1873; Schouler on Executors and Admsrs. (2nd ed., 1889); Croswell on Executors (announced), 25 Am. L.

1. The service of Italian children brought to this country with their parents' consent by a man, to earn money for him on the streets, is involuntary servitude. "They were incapable of exercising will or choice affirmatively on the subject." They were cast off by their parents in violation of the law of Italy, and their being in this country at all with the defendant, was, on all the facts, really involuntary, although the sham form of their consent was gone through with." U. S. v. Ancarola, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 423; s. c., 1 Fed. Rep. 676.

On the use of the expression "involuntary servitude" in the thirteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, see the Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 36.

2. Williams v. W. U. Tel. Co., 1 Civ. Pro. Rep. (N. Y.) 194.

In interpreting a constitutional provision giving superior courts original jurisdiction "in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property," it was said: "It is difficult to define with precision the word 'involve,' as it is employed in that section. The primary signification is to 'roll up or envelop,' and it also means 'to comprise, to contain, to include by rational or logical construction;' but none of these express the precise idea, and its exact synonym may not be found in a single word. The idea intended to be embodied in the phrase 'cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property' may be expressed by the paraphrase, 'cases at law in which the title or possession of real property is a material fact in the case, upon which the plaintiff relies for a recovery or the defendant for a defence.' When the title or claim of title, the possession or right of possession of real property, or any right growing out of or dependent upon either is alleged in the pleadings, as an issuable fact, the case is within the meaning of the constitution." Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338; Copertini v. Oppermann (Cal.), 18 Pac. Rep. 256.

3. Abbott's Law Dict. See also BILLS AND NOTES, p. 322.

that is necessary for the due and orderly conduct of a suit, or doing it in an unseasonable time or improper manner.¹

1. Sidd Pr. 434; Barton v. Sanders (Oreg.), 16 Pac. Rep. 923; Ex parte Schwartz, 2 Tex. App. 80; Repls. of Bourdeaux v. The Treasurers, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 142; Ex parte Gibson, 31 Cal. 625; Downing v. Still, 43 Mo. 317; Bowman v. Tallman, 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 634; s. c., 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 84; Prior v. Hall, 13 Civ. Pro. Rep. (N. Y.) 87; MacNamara on Nullities and Irregularities, 6. It is the technical term for every defect in practical proceedings or the mode of conducting an action or defence as distinguished from defects in pleadings. It is a comprehensive term, including all formal objections to practical proceedings. 3 Chit. Gen. Pr. 509; Prior v. Hall, 13 Civ. Pro. Rep. (N. Y.) 87; Ex parte Gibson, 31 Cal. 625.

Irregularity is to be distinguished from illegality, which is predicable of radical defects only, and signifies that which is contrary to the principles of the law as distinguished from mere rules of procedure. It denotes a complete defect in the proceedings. That which is illegal or ultra vires renders the proceedings void, an irregularity renders them voidable only. Tidd Pr. 435; Archb. Pr. 1192; Ex parte Gibson, 31 Cal. 625; Barton v. Sanders (Oreg.), 16 Pac. Rep. 923; Ex parte Schwartz, 2 Tex. App. 80.

"Sometimes the term 'irregular process' has been defined to mean process absolutely void, and not merely erroneous and voidable. Woodcock v. Bennet, 1 Cow. 735. But usually this term has been applied to all process not issued in strict conformity with the law, whether the defect appear upon the face of the process, or by reference to extrinsic facts, and whether such defects render the process absolutely void or only voidable.

"A sale under process absolutely void, from defects apparent upon the face of the writ, could convey no title to any purchaser; and where it is merely erroneous and voidable, the general rule is that the defects which render it so can only be taken advantage of, in direct proceedings for the purpose of having the errors, corrected, and unless reversed or set aside by the court from which it issued, such process will be deemed valid for all purposes as regards strangers, and in collateral actions." Doe v. Harter, 2 Ind. 252.

"No order, which a court is empowered, under any circumstances in the course of a proceeding over which it has jurisdiction, to make, can be treated as a nullity, merely because it was made improvidently or in a manner not warranted by law or the previous state of the case. . . . It is a mere error or irregularity, which can only be taken advantage of by appeal." Tallman v. McCarty, 11 Wis. 401.

"Void process is such as the court has no power to award, or has not acquired jurisdiction to issue in the particular case, or which does not in some material respect comply with the legal requisites of such process, or which loses its vitality in consequence of non-compliance with a condition subsequent, obedience to which is rendered essential. Irregular process is such as a court has general jurisdiction to issue, but which is unauthorized in the particular case by reason of the existence of some fact or circumstance, rendering it improper in such a case." An attorney who causes void or irregular process to issue is liable for damages occasioned thereby. In the case of void process, this liability attaches at once; in case of irregular process, the proceeding must be vacated or annulled by the court before an action can be maintained. Fischer v. Langbein, 103 N. Y. 84.

The entry of judgment for default of an answer by a court having jurisdiction to do so, but before the expiration of the time within which an answer might have been filed, is irregular but not void, and cannot be vacated by motion after the term. Salter v. Hilgen, 40 Wis. 363. The assumption by a court of a jurisdiction which it has not legally is not a mere irregularity. Prior v. Hall, 13 Civ. Pro. Rep. (N. Y.) 87.

A distinction is also taken between irregular and erroneous proceedings.

"It is well settled that where a judgment is reversed for error, the sale under the execution shall not be avoided.

. . . But there is a marked distinction between judgments reversed for error, and executions set aside for irregularity; in the latter case the party is never excused, if the irregularity be such as renders the process void. One case is the fault of the party, the other

IRRELEVANT—IRRESISTIBLE VIOLENCE.

IRRELEVANT—(See EVIDENCE; PLEADING; RELEVANT).—Impertinent; inapplicable.¹

IRREPARABLE INJURY.—See INJUNCTION.

IRRESISTIBLE VIOLENCE.—The same as vis major.²

is considered the error of the court.

In Parsons v. Lloyd, 3 Wils. 345, DE GREY, CHIEF JUSTICE, observes: 'There is a great difference between erroneous process and irregular (that is to say, void) process. The first stands valid and good until reversed, the latter is an absolute nullity from the beginning. The party may justify under the first until it be reversed, but he cannot justify under the latter because it was his own fault that it was irregular and void at first.' . . .

When, however, the term irregularity is used, and unexplained, it must be understood, as in Parsons v. Lloyd, and refers to void process." Woodcock v. Bennet, 1 Cow. 734.

"A judgment, however erroneous, rendered at one term, cannot be set aside at a subsequent term. But a judgment irregular, rendered at one may be set aside at a subsequent term. An erroneous judgment is one rendered according to the course and practice of the courts, but contrary to law; as where it is for one party when it ought to be for the other; or for too little or too much. An irregular judgment is one contrary to the course and practice of the courts, as judgment without service of process." Wolfe v. Davis, 74 N. Car. 599.

In doubtful cases the courts incline to treat defects as irregularities rather than nullities. MacNamara on Nul. & Irreg 6; Salter v. Hilgen, 40 Wis. 363.

"It is also said that an irregularity may be waived, while a nullity cannot; but the caution is added that waiver in the strict sense of the term is meant, and that the rule must not be carried so far 'as to suppose that at any period or under any circumstances, this objection must, of necessity, be available.'" Ibidem. "It is often waived by the subsequent action of a party, as by an appearance after defective process, so that the judgment will be valid notwithstanding such defect." Downing v. Still, 43 Mo. 317. An irregularity must be taken advantage of at the first opportunity after it is discovered or it will be considered waived. Bowman v. Tallman, 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 634; s. c., 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 84.

Where the record of a lower court states that the judgment of a justice was reversed for irregularity, the inference is that the court did not go into the merits. Clarke v. Fulse, 1 Penn. (N. J.) 263.

An illegal distress is not an irregular distress within the meaning of a statute providing that irregularity shall not make the distrainer a trespasser. Russell v. Buckley, 25 N. B. 264.

A statute provided that applications for highways be referred by the court to committees, to be heard by them after such notice as the court should order, and that the proceedings might be set aside for "irregular and improper conduct." The sitting without notice being given, although the court failed to order it, is irregular and improper. "It is true that this was primarily an error of the court, but this error took from the committee their jurisdiction." Shelton v. Town of Derby, 27 Conn. 414. And the action of a member of the committee by which one party gained an unfair advantage at the hearing is irregular and improper conduct. Harris v. Town of Woodstock, 27 Conn. 567.

1. "Matter is said to be irrelevant in a pleading which has no bearing upon the subject matter of the controversy and cannot affect the decision of the court." Schofield v. State Nat. Bank, 9 Neb. 321; Fabbriotti v. Launitz, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 743. "A pleading is irrelevant which has no substantial relation to the controversy between the parties to the suit. The word irrelevant is comparatively of modern introduction in England. It is used in parliamentary debate in that country to signify 'unassisting, unrelieving,' which are in accordance with the etymology of the word. But in Scotland, according to Mr. Elphinstone, it has been for a considerable period a jurisprudential word, and is there used in the same sense as the more appropriate word irrelevant. It has, I believe, uniformly received the same interpretation in the courts in this country, where it has been very generally used." Seward v. Miller, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 313.

2. Walker v. Guarantee Association, 18 Q. B. 286.

IRRIGATION.

1. Irrigation in General, 846.
2. Present Law of Irrigation, 847.
3. English Doctrine, 849.
4. French Law, 851.
5. American Doctrine, 851.
6. Pacific Coast Doctrine, 852.
7. Injurious Diminution, 854.
8. Natural and Artificial Wants, 857.
9. Reasonable Use, 858.
10. Total Consumption, 860.
11. Return of Surplus, 861.
12. Riparian Proprietors and Appropriators, 861.

1. Irrigation in General—Definition.—Irrigation is the operation of watering lands for agricultural purposes by artificial means.¹

Subordinate to Rights of Coproprietor.—It is the doctrine, which is supported by the later cases, that irrigation is not a natural want, authorizing an exclusive or undue appropriation by one proprietor,² but that the right to irrigate, when not indispensable, but used simply to increase the products of the soil, would be subordinate to the right of a coproprietor to supply his natural wants, and that of his family, tenants and stock; as to quench thirst, and to the right to use the water for necessary domestic purposes.³

Liberal View of Use of Water for Irrigation.—The most liberal use of water for purposes of irrigation was, however, favored in the earlier cases.

1. Rap. & L. Law Dict. 682. It is also defined as the act of wetting or moistening the ground by artificial means, in 1 Bouv. L. Dict. (15th ed.) 839.

Prevalence, Regulations, etc.—Concerning the prevalence of irrigation and the methods of effecting it, see article "Irrigation," 9 Am. Cycl. 414. The right to appropriate water for irrigation purposes is discussed in the note to Tolle v. Carreth, 98 Am. Dec. 540. The regulations of irrigation in different countries and localities is discussed, and a full review of the doctrines concerning irrigation is given in Fleming v. Davis, 37 Tex. 173, 199.

2. Gould on Waters, § 217, and cases cited.

3. Baker v. Brown, 55 Tex. 577.

Contract to Dig Ditch.—Where several persons agreed to form a company and dig a ditch across specified lands, to be dug and sustained by the parties to the contract in proportion to the lands benefited, and the company was dissolved before the ditch was dug, it was held that this agreement did not give an individual member of the company, after dissolution, a right to dig a ditch across another individual member's land. Stewart v. Stevens (Colo.), 15 Pac. Rep. 786.

Rights of Consumers.—Under the Colorado Const. (art. 16, §§ 5-8), declaring unappropriated water of natural streams "public" property, subject to appropriation for the "use of the people," free of charge, the distributor of water to consumers for hire not being the proprietor of water unappropriated by it, a demand of $10 per acre, in advance, for "the right to receive and use water" from its canal is in violation of the constitutional right to the use of unappropriated waters free of charge. Wheeler v. Northern Colo. Irrigating Co. (Nev.), 17 Pac. Rep. 487.

Irrigation Bonds.—The California "Act to provide for organization and government of irrigation districts," etc. (Sess. Laws Cal. 1887, p. 29), authorizing such a district to issue bonds signed by its president and secretary for raising money to conduct necessary irrigating canals, etc., and levy assessments for the payment thereof upon the real estate of the district, is not unconstitutional as contemplating unequal taxation, or taxation for other than a public purpose, and the secretary of an irrigation district may be compelled by writ of mandate to sign bonds issued for such purpose. Turlock Irrigation Dist. v. Williams (Cal.), 18 Pac. Rep. 379.

Thus it has been declared that it may be admitted that the purpose of irrigation is one of the natural uses, such as thirst of people and cattle, and household purposes, which must absolutely be supplied, and that the appropriation of the water for this purpose would, therefore, afford no ground of complaint by the lower proprietor if it were entirely consumed.¹

Approximation to General View.—A near approach to the general view is formulated in the rule that by our law "the riparian proprietors are entitled to a reasonable use of the waters of the stream for the purpose of irrigation," and that what "is such reasonable use is a question of fact, and depends upon the circumstances appearing in each particular case."²

2. Present Law of Irrigation.—Comprehensive Statement of Present Law.—A very comprehensive statement of the present law on this subject, contained in Gould on Waters, § 217, and quoted in Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 401, and in the note to Tolle v. Correth, 98 Am. Dec. 543, reads as follows: "The right of a riparian proprietor to divert the water of a stream for the purpose of irrigation is recognized in England,³ and generally in this country."⁴

1. Rhodes v. Whitehead, 27 Tex. 304; s. c., 84 Am. Dec. 631, 634, citing Evans v. Merriweather, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 492; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 106. See explanation in Union Mill etc. Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 176; s. c., 28 Fed. Dec. 769, 780, and quoted in Tolle v. Correth, 30 Tex. 362; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 540, 542.

Water Maxims.—In the case last cited, referring to cases holding a different view, it is said: The authorities cited from the distinguished courts of New York, Massachusetts and England are founded on the principle, or maxim, "The water runs, and let it run." "Every one has a right to have the advantage of a flow of water in his land without diminution or alteration." A moment's reflection will enable anyone to see the propriety of these maxims where water is useful only in its flow, and is subservient to mechanical or manufacturing purposes. But in a country or state where water is useful for agricultural purposes, and where the sovereign power grants, for a nominal consideration, water for the purposes of irrigation, these maxims do not apply; instead thereof we must substitute, "Water irrigates, and let it irrigate." Compare Fleming v. Davis, 37 Tex. 173, 194, 196.

2. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 394. So it is laid down that whether "the use of the water for the purpose of irrigation is reasonable and lawful as against another proprietor would depend upon the facts of the particular case. If the stream should be sufficiently large to admit of reasonable irrigation without unreasonably impairing the rights of other proprietors, then it would be reasonable and lawful, otherwise it would not. Baker v. Brown, 55 Tex. 577.

3. See Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 353; Sandwich v. Great Northern Railway Co., 10 Ch. D. 707, 711; Chasemore v. Richards, 2 H. & N. 190; 5 H. & N. 982; 7 H. L. Cas. 349; Sampson v. Hodinott, 1 C. B., N. S. 590; Greenslade v. Haliday, 6 Bing. 379; Hall v. Swift, 6 Scott 167; Strutt v. Bovington, 5 Esp. 56; Gale & Whatley on Easements, 284.

4. Blanchard v. Baker, 8 Me. 253, 266; Davis v. Getchell, 50 Me. 602; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 638; Newhall v. Iesson, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 595; Elliot v. Fitchburg Railroad Co., 10 Cush. (Mass.) 194; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 85; Colburn v. Richards, 13 Mass. 420; Anthony v. Lapham, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 175; Cook v. Hull, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 269; Paine v. Woods, 108 Mass. 160, 173; Garwood v. New York Central Railroad Co., 83 N. Y. 400, 405; Farrell v. Richards, 30 N. J. Eq. 511; Union Mill Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 176; s. c., 28 Fed. Dec. 769; Union Mill Co. v. Dangberg, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 450; s. c., 28 Fed. Dec. 736; Ingraham v. Hutchinson, 2 Conn.

According to the later decisions, this is not a natural want, authorizing an exclusive or undue appropriation by one proprietor, but the use of the stream for this purpose must be reasonable, and must not materially affect the application of the water by other riparian proprietors.¹

The extent of each proprietor's right to thus withdraw the water depends upon the circumstances of the case. The owner of a large tract of porous land abutting on one part of the stream could not lawfully irrigate such land continually by canals and drains, and so cause a serious diminution of the quantity of water, though there may be no other loss to the natural stream than that arising from the necessary absorption and evaporation of the water employed for that purpose.²

If the water used for irrigation is not abstracted on a person's own land, but is withdrawn at a distance above it or returned at a distance below it, this would have a material bearing upon the question of reasonable use with respect to an opposite or other proprietor affected by such diversion.³

So a riparian proprietor who obstructs the stream by a dam for the purpose of overflowing and irrigating his land, or who diverts the water for such purposes excessively, and without returning the surplus into the natural channel, is liable to the owner of a mill below, the operation of which is thereby impeded,⁴ or to another proprietor below, who only uses the water for irrigation, and is deprived of that right to an unreasonable extent.⁵

Former More Extended Recognition in Certain Jurisdictions.—The right to use water for purposes of irrigation was formerly recognized to the widest extent, even in those jurisdictions where it is now considerably restricted.⁶

584; Wadsworth v. Tillotson, 15 Conn. 365; Gillett v. Johnson, 30 Conn. 180; Randall v. Silverthorn, 4 Pa. St. 173; Miller v. Miller, 9 Pa. St. 74; Tolle v. Correth, 31 Texas 362; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 540; Fleming v. Davis, 37 Tex. 173; Stein v. Burden, 29 Ala. 127; 24 Ala. 130; Potier v. Burden, 38 Ala. 651; Blessing v. Blair, 45 Ind. 546; Ferrea v. Knipe, 28 Cal. 341.

1. Ibid.—According to earlier authorities, irrigation is a natural want. See Gould on Waters, § 205, citing Weston v. Alden, 8 Mass. 136; Bent v. Wheeler, cited in Sullivan's Land Titles, 273; Perkins v. Dow, 1 Root (Conn.) 535; Hayward v. Mason, 1 Root (Conn.) 537; Blanchard v. Baker, 8 Me. 253. Contra, later, see Baker v. Brown, 55 Tex. 577.

2. Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 353, 371.

3. Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 353; Union Mill Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. (U.

S.) 176; Stein v. Burden, 29 Ala. 127; 24 Ala. 130; Wadsworth v. Tillotson, 15 Conn. 365.

4. Cook v. Hull, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 269; Colburn v. Richards, 13 Mass. 420.

5. Anthony v. Lapham, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 175; Cummings v. Barrett, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 186; Bent v. Wheeler, 3 Dane Abr. 16.

6. Thus in an early Massachusetts case it is said (according to Pomeroy on Riparian Rights, § 142): "A man owning a close on an ancient brook may lawfully use the water thereof for the purposes of husbandry, as watering his cattle, or irrigating the close; and he may do this either by dipping water from the brook and pouring it upon his land, or by making small sluices for the same purpose; and if the owner of a close below is damaged thereby, it is damnum absque injuria." Weston v. Alden, 8 Mass. 136. But it is remarked in a subsequent case in Maine that

3. English Doctrine—Statement of.—In England, there are various cases which seem to refer with approbation to the "American" doctrine of irrigation;¹ but the maintenance and the scope of the different English doctrine is shown in a case which decides that the use of water by a defendant for irrigation was no injury to the plaintiff, a mill owner, in fact or law, where the irrigation took place only at intermittent periods when the river was full, etc.;² and in another case where, on the other hand, the court said that the detention for the purposes of irrigation was, under the circumstances of that case, necessarily injurious, the effect being wholly to prevent the natural course of the stream for a certain number of hours.³

In the former of these cases it is substantially laid down that in England no such liberal use of the stream for purposes of irrigation would be permitted as in America and elsewhere; that the extent of the allowable use was a question of degree, though it was exceedingly difficult to define precisely the limits which separate the permitted and reasonable use of the stream from its wrongful application; and that it must depend upon the circumstances of each case whether there was a lawful enjoyment of the water, if it was again returned into the stream with no other diminution than that which was caused by the absorption and evaporation attendant on the irrigation of the lands of the adjoining proprietor.⁴

"although by the case of Weston v. Alden, 7 Mass. 136, the right of irrigation might seem to be general and unlimited; yet subsequent cases have restrained it consistently with the enjoyment of the common bounty of nature by other proprietors, through whose land a stream had been accustomed to flow. Colburn v. Richards, 13 Mass. 420; Cook v. Hull, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 269; Anthony v. Lapham, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 175. And the qualification of the right by these later decisions is in accordance with the common law." Blanchard v. Baker, 8 Me. 253, 266.

1. See Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 349; Washb. Easements 234, referring to "two or three recent English cases" where the subject of irrigation is considered and where the courts take occasion to speak of the American cases with approbation.

2. Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 352.

3. Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 Com. B. N. S. 590.

4. See the opinion of PARKE, B., where, after quoting from Kent [3 Com. 429], he says: "In America, as may be inferred from this extract, and as is stated in the judgment of the court of exchequer in Wood v. Waud [3 Ex. 748], a very liberal use of the stream for the purposes of irrigation, and for carrying on manufactures, is permitted. So in France, where every one may use it en bon pere de famille, et pour son plus grand avantage. Code Civil, art. 640, note a, by Paillett. He may make trenches to conduct the water to irrigate his land, if he returns it with no other loss than that which irrigation caused. In the above cited case of Wood v. Waud [3 Ex. 748], it was observed that in England it is not clear that a user to that extent would be permitted; nor do we mean to lay down that it would in every case be deemed a lawful enjoyment of the water if it was again returned into the river with no other diminution than that which was caused by the absorption and evaporation attendant on the irrigation of the lands of the adjoining proprietor. This must depend upon the circumstances of each case. On the one hand, it could not be permitted that the owner of a tract of many thousand acres of porous soil, abutting on one part of the stream, could be permitted to irrigate them continually by canals and drains,

In the same case there was a full discussion of the general right of a riparian proprietor to the flow of the water passing through his land, and the enjoyment of it as subject to the similar rights of all the proprietors on the same bank on each side to the reasonable enjoyment of the natural element, and as not giving a ground of action for any abstraction of the water, however inconsiderable and unproductive of actual damage.¹

Inapplicability to Different Climate Suggested.—It has been suggested, however, in a judicial investigation of the law of irrigation, in the Pacific States and territories, that it would be expected that the decisions in Great Britain and Ireland would not much assist the enquiry, since, owing to the humidity of the cli-and so cause a serious diminution of the quantity of water, though there was no other loss to the natural stream than that arising from the necessary absorption and evaporation of the water employed for that purpose. On the other hand, one's common sense would be shocked by supposing that a riparian owner could not dip a watering pot into the stream in order to water his garden, or allow his family or his cattle to drink of it. It is entirely a question of degree, and it is very difficult, indeed impossible, to define precisely the limits which separate the reasonable and permitted use of the stream from its wrongful application; but there is often no difficulty in deciding whether a particular case falls within the permitted limits or not."

1. "It was very ably argued before us," said the learned judge just quoted, "by the learned counsel for the plaintiffs, that the plaintiffs had a right to the full flow of the water in its natural course and abundance, as an incident to the property in the land through which it flowed, and that any abstraction of the water, however inconsiderable, by another riparian proprietor, and though productive of no actual damage, would be actionable, because it was an injury to a right, and if continued would be the foundation of a claim of adverse right in that proprietor. We by no means dispute the truth of this proposition with respect to every description of right. Actual perceptible damage is not indispensable as the foundation of an action. It is sufficient to show the violation of a right, in which case the law will presume damage. Injuria sine damno is actionable, as was laid down in the case of Ashby v. White, 2 L. Raym. 938, by LORD HOLT, and in many subsequent cases, which are all referred to, and the truth of the proposition powerfully enforced, in a very able judgment of the late MR. JUSTICE STORY in Webb v. Portland Mfg. Co., 3 Sum. 189. But in applying this admitted rule to the case of rights to running water and the analogous cases of rights to air and light, it must be considered what the nature of those rights is, and what is a violation of them. The law as to flowing water is now put on its right footing by a series of cases beginning with that of Wright v. Howard, 1 Sim. & S. 190, followed by Mason v. Hill, 3 Barn. & Adol. 304, and 5 Barn. & Adol. 1, and ending with that of Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 748, and is fully settled in the American courts. See 3 Kent Com. 439, 445. The right to have the stream to flow in its natural state, without diminution or alteration, is an incident to the property in the land through which it passes; but flowing water is publici juris, not in the sense that it is a bonum vacans, to which the first occupant may acquire an exclusive right, but that it is public and common in this sense only: that all may reasonably use it who have right of access to it; that none can have any property in the water itself, except in the particular portion which he may choose to abstract from the stream and take into his possession, and that during the time of his possession only. See 5 Barn. v. Adol. 24. But each proprietor of the adjacent land has the right to the usufruct of the stream which flows through it. This right to the benefit and advantage of the water flowing past his land is not an absolute and exclusive right to the flow of all the water in its natural state. If it were, the argument of the learned counsel, that every abstraction of it mate of those islands, it must rarely happen that any use for irrigation can be reasonable.¹

4. French Law.—By the laws of France, every proprietor of land bordering on a running stream may use it for the purpose of irrigating his land, and when his estate is intersected by such water he may divert it for purposes of irrigation, provided he restore it at the boundary of his property to its ordinary channel. And in all disputes respecting the right to take water from running streams, the courts are enjoined to reconcile as much as possible the interests of agriculture with the respect due to property and the rights of individuals.²

5. American Doctrine—Reasonable Use and Return of Surplus.—The right of a riparian proprietor to the reasonable use of the waters of a stream for purposes of irrigation is generally recognized by the American authorities.³

But even where it has been considered that a riparian proprietor had authority to make use of a stream for purposes of irrigation, and thus by that use divert a portion of it, this has been held under the condition that such diversion was, under all the circumstances, a reasonable use of the stream, and that the sur-would give a cause of action would be irrefragable; but it is a right only to the flow of the water, and the enjoyment of it, subject to the similar rights of all the proprietors of the bank on each side to the reasonable enjoyment of the same gift of Providence. It is only, therefore, for an unreasonable and unauthorized use of this common benefit that an action will lie; for such a use it will."

1. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 397, here stating that for any purpose the use must be reasonable, the maxim, which every riparian proprietor is bound to respect being sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas." This case furnishes, at pp. 397-400, the foregoing account of the English doctrine concerning irrigation, and its observation thereon, here given, is also quoted in Pomeroy v. Riparian Rights, § 40, p. 251, where it is said: In regard to the right of a riparian proprietor to use the water of the stream for irrigation, the rule in England appears to be that he may do so, provided he restores the water to its channel in a volume substantially undiminished. Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 352; Swindon Water Works v. Wilts Canal Co., L. R., 7 H. L. 697; Earl of Sandwich v. Great Northern Ry., L. R., 10 Ch. 707, 711; Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 C. B., N. S. 590; Miner v. Gilmour, 12 Moore P. C. 156; Norbury

v. Kitchie, 9 Jur., N. S. 132; 1 Add. Torts, § 89)." The same statement of the English view is made in the note to Davis v. Getchell, 79 Am. Dec. 643.

2. Code Napoleon, liv. 2, nos. 640-645; Pomeroy on Riparian Rights, § 142, p. 252; referring to 1 Add. Torts, § 89. See also quotation from Embrey v. Owen, 6 Ex. 352, in Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 398.

3. Thus WESTON, J., in Blanchard v. Baker, 8 Me. 253, observes: "A riparian proprietor may make a reasonable use of the water itself for domestic purposes, for watering his cattle, or even for irrigation, provided it is not unreasonably detained, or essentially diminished." So in Gillett v. Johnson, 30 Conn. 180, BUTLER, J., thus speaks of the right of a defendant to irrigate as limited: "She was bound to apply the water in such a reasonable manner and quantity as not to deprive the plaintiff of a sufficient supply for his cattle. The claim of the defendant was that she had a right to divert the whole for the purpose of irrigation, regardless of the rights of the plaintiff. Such diversion was unreasonable and therefore illegal." Again, in Arnold v. Foot, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 330, it is said: "The defendant has a right to use so much as is necessary for his family and cattle, but he has no right to use it for irrigating his meadow, if he thereby deprives the plus of the water thus used must be returned into its natural channel.¹

Controlling Circumstances and Rights of Other Proprietors.—

"Under the rules of the common law," it is remarked in a leading case of recent date, "the riparian proprietors would all have the right to a reasonable use of the waters of a stream for the purpose of irrigation. It is declared in all of the authorities upon this subject that it is impossible to lay down any precise rule which will be applicable to all cases. The question must be determined in each case with reference to the size of the stream, the velocity of the water, the character of the soil, the number of proprietors, the amount of water needed to irrigate the lands per acre, and a variety of other circumstances and conditions surrounding each particular case;"² and "the true test in all cases" is "whether the use is of such a character as to materially affect the equally beneficial use of the waters by the other proprietors."³

6. Pacific Coast Doctrine—In General.—In the Pacific States and territories, the right to use water for purposes of irrigation is expressly recognized,⁴ and it is considered that irrigation must be held in that climate "to be a proper mode of using water by a riparian proprietor;" "the lawful extent of the use depending upon the circumstances of each case."⁵

With reference to these circumstances, it is laid down that "the use must be reasonable," and that "the right must be exercised plaintiff of the reasonable use of the water in its natural channel." The supreme court of Massachusetts has also said: "Every man through whose land the water passes may use it for irrigating his land; but he must so use it as to do the least possible injury to his neighbor, who has the same right." Anthony v. Lapham, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 175.

1. Newhall v. Ireson, 8 Cush. 595. The foregoing review of the cases is derived from Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 401, 402.

General Principle.—In Pomeroy on Riparian Rights, § 142, it is said that on "examining the decision; in the eastern States, and the opinions of the text writers, we shall find, notwithstanding some diversity of language, the same thread of principle running through them all, namely, that the use must be reasonable, due regard being had to the equal rights of all the riparian owners."

2. Jones v. Adams (Nev.), 6 Pac. Rep. 442, 444.

3. Jones v. Adams (Nev.), 6 Pac. Rep. 442, 444, where it is further said:

"In Vansickle v. Haines, the court quoted with approval the doctrine announced by SHAW, C. J., in Elliot v. Fitchburg R. Co., 10 Cush. 194 [8. c., 57 Am. Dec. 85], that a portion of the water of a stream may be used for the purpose of irrigating land we think is well established as one of the rights of the proprietors of the soil along and through which it passes. Yet a proprietor cannot, under color of that right, or for the actual purpose of irrigating his own land, wholly obstruct or divert the water course, or take such an unreasonable quantity of water, or make such unreasonable use of it, as to deprive other proprietors of the substantial benefits which they might derive from it if not diverted or used unreasonably." Numerous authorities were cited in support of this doctrine. Vansickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249; Farrell v. Richards, 30 N. J. Eq. 511.

4. Jones v. Adams (Nev.), 6 Pac. Rep. 442, 444.

5. Union M. & M. Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 176; 8. c., 28 Fed. Dec. 769, 781.

so as to do the least possible injury to others;" and that there "must be no unreasonable detention or consumption of the water."¹ Diminution of Flow as Affecting Other Proprietors.—It is pointed out, however, that when it is said that such use must be made of the water as not to affect the material rights of other proprietors, it is not meant that there cannot be any diminution or decrease of the flow of water; for if this should be the rule, then no one could have any use of the water for irrigation, which must necessarily, in order to be beneficial, be so used as to absorb more or less of the water diverted for this purpose;"² and that "under the principles of the common law in relation to riparian rights, if applicable to our circumstances and condition, there must be allowed to all, of that which is common, a reasonable use."³

Summary of Principles.—According to a summary of principles governing in the Pacific States and territories, the conclusions which may be reached are that there is no right to use the water for the irrigation of nonriparian lands; that a prior appropriation can give no exclusive right to the use of the waters for irrigation and no superior right as to the quantity of water that may be consumed in that manner; that the equitable principle of relative equality must be preserved between all the riparian owners; that it is a part of the general riparian right to use the water for irrigation if the size of the stream is such that no injury is thereby done to any other proprietor; and that irrigation is not one of the natural wants, for which the whole stream may be consumed if necessary, but is subordinate to these uses.⁴

Riparian Rights and Prior Appropriators.—By the common law, the fact of ownership of lands on both sides of a river would give the proprietors the right to the usufruct of the waters as riparian owners, and that, too, notwithstanding the prior appropriation thereof by other parties; but it would be otherwise under the law as settled on the Pacific coast by the adjudications of the courts and the long established customs of the country,

1. Union M. & M. Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 176; s. c., 28 Fed. Dec. 769, 781, where it is further remarked: "That there may be some diminution and some detention follows necessarily from any use whatever. How long it may be detained or how much it may be diminished can never be stated as an arbitrary or abstract rule."

2. Jones v. Adams (Nev.), 6 Pac. Rep. 442, 444.

3. Jones v. Adams (Nev.), 6 Pac. Rep. 442, 445. Consult further, on Pacific coast doctrine, Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 394-409; cited to the effect that a riparian proprietor may take water from the stream for necessary household purposes, and may make reasonable use of it for purposes of irrigation; in Swift v. Goodrich, 70 Cal. 103, 105.

4. Pom. Riparian Rights, § 139. The cases reviewed as a basis for these deductions are Ellis v. Tone, 58 Cal. 289; Vansickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249; Union Mill Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 176; Learned v. Tangeman, 65 Cal. 334; Baker v. Brown, 55 Tex. 577.

Only Rule of General Application.—In the same work, in answer to the enquiry whether, aside from these specific principles, "there is any general law, applicable to all cases alike, governing the riparian right of irrigation," it is said that as a result of all the authorities it may be stated that the only rule ratified and confirmed by the legislation of congress;¹ and this doctrine has been considered applicable in the Pacific States and territories, to irrigation as well as to mining.²

7. Injurious Diminution—In General.—It has been submitted whether it may not fairly be deduced from the authorities that for an essential diminution of the water of a water course, which which admits of general application is this: The use of water for irrigation must in all cases be reasonable, regard being had to the rights and needs of all the other proprietors on the same stream, and reasonableness is a question of fact, to be determined upon all the circumstances of the particular case."

1. Hill v. Lenormand (Ariz.), 16 Pac. Rep. 266.

2. Hill v. Lenormand (Ariz.), 16 Pac. Rep. 266, 268, where it is said by WRIGHT, C. J.: "We deem no doctrine more clearly and thoroughly settled on this coast than this doctrine of water rights. It is par excellence the doctrine of the Pacific coast. Among the earliest apprehensions of the miners was the paramount importance of water. Among the miners the custom early grew of according to him the best right who was first in time. The privileges of irrigation soon became gauged by the same rule; so that now this doctrine is thoroughly interwoven into the jurisprudence of the coast, and may not be questioned. Riparian rights are the same here as elsewhere, wherever they apply; but they do not apply where the rights of prior appropriators have intervened. As is very generally the case in the Pacific States and territories the conditions are so changed that riparian rights do not attach . . . Mr. Gould, in his admirable work on Waters (section 228), says: In California Nevada, and other Pacific States and territories, the common law rule upon this subject has been modified, owing to the peculiar condition of the settlers and miners upon the public lands, and the right to running water exists without private ownership of the soil, upon the ground of prior location upon the land, or prior appropriation of the water. . . . The federal government by act of congress, July 26th, 1866 (section 2339, Rev. St. U. S.) confirmed all rights to the use of water acquired by prior appropriation; and by the act of congress of July 9th, 1870, it is provided that all patents granted or pre-emptions or homesteads allowed, shall be subject to any vested or accrued water rights, etc., acquired under the ninth section of the said act of July 20th, 1866. These federal statutes have been repeatedly construed by the courts of last resort on the Pacific Coast and we believe uniformly in harmony with the views expressed herein, unless it was in Van Sickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249, which was expressly overruled by the later case of Jones v. Adams. See Jones v. Adams (Sup. Ct. Nev.), 6 Pac. Rep. 442; Kaylor v. Campbell (Sup. Ct. Oreg.), 11 Pac. Rep. 301; Farley v. Irrigating Co., 58 Cal. 142; Basey v. Gallagher, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 670; Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 453; Lux v. Haggin, 4 Pac. Rep. 919, and cases there cited.' [Consult also to like purport, Dyke v. Caldwell, 18 Pac. Rep. (Ariz.) 276, 278, quoting Basey v. Gallagher, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 670, which itself relies on Atchison v. Peterson, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 507.]

"By the common law of England," according to the recent California case of Stanford v. Felt, 71 Cal. 249, "the right of the riparian proprietor to the flow of a stream is inseparably annexed to the soil, and passes with it, not as an easement or appurtenance, but as part and parcel of it. Use does not create the right, and disuse cannot destroy or suspend it. The right of such proprietor extends to the natural and usual flow of all the water of the stream, unless when the quantity has been diminished as a consequence of the reasonable use or appropriation of it by other riparian owners for proper and legitimate purposes. Ferreira v. Knipe, 28 Cal. 341; 87 Am. Dec. 128; Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255; 10 Pac. Rep. 674. The uses by the riparian owner of the water for domestic purposes, for irrigation, and for the propulsion of machinery, are recognized as proper and legitimate purposes. This we regard as the law of this State. See Ferreira v. Knipe and Lux v. Haggin, supra. It appears to be law, that where all the water of a stream is needed for domestic purposes and for watering cattle, nature has directed to run in a certain and determinate channel for any purpose, the law in this country will not interpose.¹

So far as the question may be supposed to imply that an upper proprietor may not "essentially" diminish the water by using it for domestic purposes, and for watering cattle, the weight of authority is stated to be that he may, if necessary, consume all the water of the stream for those purposes.²

Kent's View Considered.—CHANCELLOR KENT, who is sometimes quoted as proving that water cannot be employed for irrigation, sometimes that it may be, says: "Streams of water are intended for the use and comfort of man; and it would be unreasonable and contrary to the general sense of mankind to debar any riparian proprietor from the application of water for domestic, agricultural or manufacturing purposes, provided the use of water be made under the limitation that he do no material injury to his neighbor below him, who has an equal right to the subsequent use of the same water;"³ but it has been recently suggested that this language, although a very distinct statement of the general proposition, "ought not to be taken literally, unless the words 'material injury' be impressed with a signification the equivalent of a substantial definition of capacity in a lower proprietor to employ the water for useful purposes."⁴ and is thus consumed by one proprietor, the law allows such use. But in making such reasonable use of water, such proprietor must return the surplus which remains after such use to the natural channel of the stream (Dilling v. Murray, 6 Ind. 324; 63 Am. Dec. 385; Gould on Waters, § 213); and if this is not done, the diversion will be restrained at the suit of a riparian owner below. Nor is the owner lower down the stream required to show, in order to procure an injunction, any actual present damage. The diversion by lapse of time may grow into a right. Crandall v. Woods, 8 Cal. 136; American Co. v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 361; Gould on Waters, § 214; Moore v. Water Works, 68 Cal. 148; 8 Pac. Rep. 816; Navigation Co. v. Water Works Co., L. R., 9 Ch. 451; L. R., 7 H. L. 697. To prevent such result, an injunction will be awarded. Parker v. Griswold, 17 Conn. 287, affirming Chapman v. Manufacturing Co., 13 Conn. 268."

1. Angell on Water Courses (7th ed.), § 129.

2. See Gould on Waters, § 205. "Such is the California rule. Ferrea v. Knipe [28 Cal. 341] . . . and Hale v. McLea [53 Cal. 578] . . ." Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 395.

3. 3 Kent Com. 440.

4. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 396, where it is further said: "The adjective is prefixed to 'injury,' and the words seem to have reference to the enjoyment of the use by the inferior owner, not to his mere abstract right to the use as against others than riparian owners, and to intimate that he cannot complain of the reasonable exercise of the use by another who possesses the general right in common with himself. The passage, as a whole, may be fairly said to convey the idea that water may be used for agricultural or manufacturing purposes when such use does not materially deprive the lower proprietors of water, either for drinking or for agriculture, etc. Undoubtedly, as against an appropriation by a mere wrong-doer, a riparian proprietor may insist upon the entire and complete natural flow of the stream. The employment by KENT of the words 'material injury' implies that every diminution is not any injury, and it excludes, where water is reasonably used above for irrigation, mere sentiment or the consideration of a diminution from the natural flow, so far merely as such flow pleases the eye or gratifies a taste for the beautiful. Of course, in ascertaining whether irrigation is reasonable, its effect in depriving the lower proprietor of natural irrigation, is to

Reasonable Appropriation, but No Total Diversion.—CHIEF JUSTICE SHAW lays down the doctrine that the use of the water of streams cannot be said to be wrongful or injurious to a proprietor lower down, so long as the stream is not wholly obstructed or diverted, or no larger appropriation of the water running through it is made than a just and reasonable use.¹

Beneficial Use by All Riparian Proprietors.—At the same time it is pointed out that this rule "that no riparian proprietor can wholly abstract or divert a water course by which it would cease to be a running stream, or use it unreasonably in its passage, and thereby deprive a lower proprietor of a quality of his property deemed in law incidental and beneficial, necessarily flows from the principle that the right to the reasonable and beneficial use of a running stream is common to all the riparian proprietors, and so each is bound so to use his common right as not essentially to prevent or interfere with an equally beneficial enjoyment of the common right by all the proprietors."² be considered with the other circumstances. Moreover, as we have seen, it is established that, so far as the use for domestic purposes [is concerned], all the water of a stream may, if necessary, be exhausted. In that case the lower proprietor receives none of it, and CHANCELLOR KENT cannot have intended that material 'diminution' always means material 'injury.'

1. See Elliot v. Fitchburg R. Co., 10 Cush. 193-195; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 85, 87, where, referring to the facts of the particular case and an instruction asked by one of the parties to the suit, it is said: "This appears to have been a small stream of water; but it must, we think, be considered that the same rules of law apply to it and regulate the rights of riparian proprietors, through and along whose land it passes, as are held to apply to other water courses, subject, of course, to this consideration: that what would be a reasonable and proper use of a considerable stream, ordinarily carrying a large volume of water for irrigation or other similar uses, would be an unreasonable and injurious use of a small stream just sufficient for domestic uses, for farm yards and watering places for cattle. The instruction requested by the plaintiff is, we think, founded on a misconception of the rights of riparian proprietors in water courses passing through or by their lands. It presupposes that the diversion of any portion of the water of a running stream, without regard to the fitness of the purpose, is a violation of the right of every proprietor of land lying below on the same stream, so that, without suffering any actual or perceptible damage, he may have an action for the sole purpose of vindicating his legal right. The right to flowing water is now well settled to be a right incident to property in the lands. It is a right publici juris, of such character that while it is common and equal to all through whose land it runs, and no one can obstruct or divert it; yet, as one of the beneficial gifts of Providence, each proprietor has a right to a just and reasonable use of it as it passes through his land; and so long as it is not wholly obstructed or diverted, or no larger appropriation of the water running through it is made than a just and reasonable use, it cannot be said to be wrongful or injurious to a proprietor lower down."

2. Elliot v. Fitchburg R. Co., 11 Cush. 193; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 85, 88, where it is further said: "Were it otherwise, and were it an inflexible rule that each lower proprietor has a right to the full and entire flow of the natural stream, without diminution, acceleration or retardation of the natural current, it would follow that each lower proprietor would have a right of action against any upper proprietor for taking any portion of the water of the stream for any purpose. Such a taking would be a disturbance of his right; and if taken by means of a pump, a pipe, a drain, or otherwise, though causing no substantial damage, it would be a nuisance, and warrant the lower proprietor in entering the close of the upper to abate it.

Instances of Unwarranted Diversion.—Hence the owner of land bordering on a stream has no right to divert the water for the purposes of irrigation, and thereby diminish the quantity which has been accustomed to flow to a mill of forty years' standing, so as to impede its operation.¹

So there is no right, as between conflicting mill owners, to deepen the channel running from the main stream, divert the water, use it and fail to return it, as such action does not fall within the principle of irrigation.²

8. Natural and Artificial Wants—Nature of Distinction Made.—There can be little doubt, under the authorities, that for a riparian proprietor entirely to consume water (except ordinarily for domestic purposes, etc.) is to use it unreasonably.³

But in answering the question whether this is the case, a distinction has been made between natural wants, such as the need of quenching of thirst and the use of water for household purposes and the watering of cattle, and artificial wants, such as the need of water for irrigation.⁴

Ordinary and Extraordinary Purposes.—The distinction between natural and artificial "wants" seems to have been derived from a distinction previously recognized, and which has sometimes been designated as a difference between the use of water for "ordinary" and "extraordinary" purposes.⁵

Colburn v. Richards, 13 Mass. 420. It would also follow, as the legal and practicable result, that no proprietor could have any beneficial use of the stream without an encroachment on another's right, subjecting him to actions toties quoties, as well as to a forcible abatement of the nuisance."

Then applying these views to the particular case, it is said: "If the plaintiff could, in a case like the present, have such an action, then every proprietor on the brook, to its outlet in Nashua, would have the same; and because the quantity of diminution is not material, every riparian proprietor on the Nashua would have the same right, and so every proprietor on the Merrimac river to the ocean. This is a sort of reductio ad absurdum, which shows that such cannot be the rule, as was claimed by the plaintiff."

1. Cook v. Hull, 3 Pick. 269, 271, distinguishing Weston v. Alden, 8 Mass. 136, and explaining and following Colburn v. Richards, 13 Mass. 420.

2. Blanchard v. Baker, 8 Me. 253, 266.

3. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 406.

4. See Evans v. Merriweather, 3 Scam. 492, 495, where the supreme court of Illinois said: "The use must be a reasonable one. Now, the question fairly arises, is that a reasonable use of running water, by the upper proprietors, by which the fluid is entirely consumed? To answer the question satisfactorily it is proper to consider the wants in regard to the element of water. These wants are either natural or artificial. Natural are such as are absolutely necessary to be supplied in order to his existence; artificial, such only as by supplying them, his comfort and prosperity are increased. To quench thirst and for household purposes water is absolutely indispensable. In civilized life water for cattle is also necessary. These wants must be supplied or both man and beast will perish. The supply of a man's artificial wants is not necessary to his existence; he could live if water was not employed in irrigating his lands or in propelling his machinery. In countries differently situated from ours, with a hot and arid climate, water doubtless is indispensable for the cultivation of the soil, and in these water for irrigation would be a natural want."

5. Thus LORD KINGSDOWN, in Miner v. Gilmore, 12 Moore, P. C. 156, said: "By the general law applicable to riparian proprietors, each has a right to

The real difference pointed out between these classes of uses is that, as is assumed, water may be used for ordinary purposes without regard to the effects of such use, in case of deficiency below, while with reference to extraordinary uses the effects on those below must always be considered in determining its reasonableness.¹

Doubt Thrown on Such Classification.—It may be doubted, however, as is suggested in the most notable of recent cases on the law of irrigation, whether an arbitrary classification can be made which is applicable everywhere where the common law prevails.²

9. Reasonable Use—Doctrine Concerning.—Of course, in ascertaining whether irrigation is reasonable, its effect in depriving the lower proprietor of natural irrigation is to be considered with other circumstances.³

The question whether the use is reasonable is stated to be "not so much whether the water below is diminished thereby as whether the lower proprietor is materially 'injured' by the dimi-what may be called the ordinary right of a use of water flowing past his land,—for instance, to the reasonable use of the water for domestic purposes, and for his cattle, and this without regard to the effect that such use may have, in case of deficiency, upon the proprietors lower down the stream. But further, he may have the use of it for any purpose, or what may be deemed the extraordinary use of it, provided he does not thereby interfere with the lawful use of it by other proprietors, either above or below him. Subject to this condition, a riparian proprietor may dam up a stream for the purpose of a mill, or divert the water for the purpose of irrigation. But he has no right to interrupt the regular flow of the stream, if he thereby interferes with the lawful use of the water by other proprietors, and inflicts on them a sensible injury."

1. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 407, where it is said that LORD KINGS-DOWN'S instances "indicate that he was using them as illustrations of the relative importance of the uses by him mentioned."

2. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 407. "Even the use of water of a stream for potation," it is explained in this case, "may not be of paramount importance, when the stream is small and the particular proprietor is amply supplied with water for such purpose by living springs independent of the creek; and it may happen, all the conditions being considered, that the exhaustion of an entire stream by large bands of cattle ought not to be permitted. Or indeed, it might be that a flouring mill would be of more relative consequence than the cultivation of the ground. See Erie with respect to riparian rights in Mexico. This last, however, is hardly a supposable use since the general introduction of steam as a proper power. The distinction between natural and artificial 'wants' would be, under supposable conditions, somewhat fanciful. The urging and pressing necessity of a particular use, as distinguished from another, may itself depend on circumstances. We cannot say that it is always reasonable, in a 'hot and arid climate,' to elevate irrigation to the rank of primary uses, to which drinking usually belongs. If that should be adopted as the uniform rule, the upper proprietor might perhaps exhaust all the water for irrigation to the entire exclusion of those below him. 'A proposition inconsistent with the doctrine universally admitted that all proprietors have the same rights.' Van Hoesen v. Coventry (10 Barb. 518). The reasonable usefulness of water for irrigation is always relative. It does not depend on the convenience of or profitable results to the particular proprietor, but upon the reasonable use, reference being had to the needs of all the other proprietors on the stream. It depends, in other words, on all the circumstances."

3. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 396.

nution, injured by not receiving the benefit in due proportion of the enjoyment to which he and the other proprietors are entitled." ¹

Relative Character.—The rule laid down on the subject is that "the reasonable usefulness of a quantity of water for irrigation is always relative. It does not depend on the convenience of or profitable results to the particular proprietor, but upon the reasonable use, reference being had to the needs of all the other proprietors on the stream. It depends, in other words, on all the circumstances." ²

Question of Degree Dependent on Circumstances.—In a more general discussion it is similarly said that what is a just and reasonable use of the waters of a stream by a riparian proprietor "may often be a difficult question, depending on various circumstances;" ³ and that it is "to a considerable extent a question of degree," but that "still the rule is the same; that each proprietor has a right to a reasonable use of it for his own benefit, for

1. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 397, where it is further remarked: "It is obvious that the use of water for the purposes of irrigation always involves some loss by evaporation and absorption, and must often result in a sensible and clearly perceptible reduction of the quantity in the channel. An entire diversion of a water course by an upper riparian proprietor (or a diversion of a part of it) for irrigation, without restoring to the channel the excess of the water not actually consumed, is never allowed. Whether or not a diversion of water is reasonable, is a question not so much as mentioned by any writer or judge. The very proposition assumes the right of the proprietor above to use the water for his own purposes, to the exclusion of the proprietors below—a proposition inconsistent with the doctrine universally admitted that all proprietors have the same rights. Van Hoesen v. Coventry, 10 Barb. 518, 522."

2. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 408. It is further said on this point in the opinion by McKINSTRY, J.: "We anticipate the objection that this is not an absolute rule at all, but . . . the very nature of the common right is such that a precise rule as to what is reasonable use by any one proprietor cannot be laid down. A stream may be so small that any use for irrigation may deprive all the others of any like use, and the same may be true of a larger stream, where the use is by several of a large number of proprietors. The effect might be that while there might be sufficient water to supply several for irrigation, there would not be enough for all, and so all might be deprived of the benefit. But the private interests of all would, in most cases, if not in every case, lead to an avoidance of the supposed evil. It is not to be doubted that the riparian proprietors would settle by convention upon a plan by which each could secure a reasonable use for irrigation purposes, as by authorizing each to stay the flow at recurring periods, or otherwise distributing it for their mutual and common benefit." The foregoing matter from Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, is also quoted, in connection with extracts from English cases, as if incorporated in the principal opinion in the note to Tolle v. Correth, 98 Am. Dec. 540, 544.

3. Elliott v. Fitchburg R. Co., 10 Cush. 193; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 85, 87, where it is further said on this point: "To take a quantity of water from a large running stream for agriculture or manufacturing purposes would cause no sensible or practicable diminution of the benefit to the prejudice of a lower proprietor; whereas, taking the same quantity from a small running brook, passing through many farms would be of great and manifest injury to those below who need it for domestic supply or watering cattle, and therefore it would be an unreasonable use of the water, and an action would lie in the latter case, and not in the former."

domestic use, and for manufacturing and agricultural purposes."¹

Test of Reasonable Use of Water Course.—In attempting to determine what is the test of a reasonable use, the question is stated in another way to be, where parties have a right to make a reasonable use of the water for irrigation, when does their use become unreasonable?²

The conclusion reached upon a review of various authorities³ is, "that the use which is unreasonable is such as works actual, material and substantial damage to the common right; not to an exclusive right to all the water in its natural state, but to the right which each proprietor has as limited and qualified by the precisely equal right of every other proprietor."⁴

10. Total Consumption—Not to Detriment of Adjoining Proprietors.—The inference must not be drawn "that in any case a riparian proprietor may take all the water of a stream for the purpose of irrigation, to the detriment of adjoining proprietors, for this is not the rule."⁵

Nor does the common law deprive all of the right to use, but, on the contrary, allows all riparian proprietors to use it in any manner not incompatible with the rights of others.⁶

Statements of Law Explained.—When it is said that a proprietor has the right to have a stream continue through his land, it is not intended to be said that he has the right to all the water, for that would render the stream, which belongs to all the proprietors, of no use to any; but what is meant is, that no one can absolutely divert the whole stream, but must use it in such manner as not to injure those below him.⁷

1. Elliott v. Fitchburg R. Co., 10 Cush. 193; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 85, 87. The requisites of reasonable use by mill owners are fully discussed in Mason v. Hoyle, 14 Atl. Rep. 786; s. c., 38 Alb. L. J. 212.

2. Union Mill etc. Co. v. Dangberg, 2 Sawy. 450; s. c., 28 Fed. Dec. 736, 739.

3. Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason 297; s. c., 28 Fed. Dec. 749, 751, where JUDGE STORY is said to have expressed the rule as clearly as it can be stated. Embrey v. Owen, 6 Ex. 353; Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. 326.

4. Union Mill etc. Co. v. Dangberg, 2 Sawy. 450; s. c., 28 Fed. Dec. 736, 740, where HILLYER, J., further says: "The rule leaves the common right equal in times of plenty and of scarcity. Because the river is low and there is not sufficient water to drive plaintiff's mill, the proprietors above can not be debarred from all use. They may still use the water, taking care to do no material injury to the common right of plaintiff, having regard to the then stage of the river. And at all times every proprietor may, in the exercise of this common right, consume so much water as is necessary for his household and domestic purposes, and for watering his stock."

5. Warren v. Quill, 8 Nev. 218, as quoted in Jones v. Adams, 6 Pac. Rep. (Nev.) 442, 443.

6. Vansickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249.

7. Vansickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249, nearly as quoted in Jones v. Adams, 6 Pac. Rep. (Nev.) 242, 243, where it is further said: "In Union M. & M. Co. v. Ferris [2 Sawy. 176], where both the parties obtained the title in fee to their lands prior to the act of congress the question as to the rights of riparian proprietors on a stream was elaborately discussed. The defendant claimed that in a hot and arid climate like Nevada, the use of water for irrigation was a natural want; that the upper proprietor

11. Return of Surplus—Action for Failure to Return Surplus.—An action lies (see Pomeroy on Riparian Rights, section 144) where the owner of land through which a natural stream flows diverts the water for the purposes of irrigation without returning the surplus into the natural channel, whereby the owner of land below, entitled to use the water in the same manner, is deprived of his privilege.¹

Governing Principle.—For it is an ancient and well established principle that the water of a stream cannot lawfully be diverted unless it is returned again to its accustomed channel before it passes the land of a proprietor below; and the right of irrigation can be exercised only by returning what is not wanted for this purpose to its accustomed channel.²

12. Riparian Proprietors and Appropriators—Estoppel.—An upper riparian proprietor who enters into an agreement purporting to be a lease with a lower proprietor, whereby the latter grants to him for a certain term the right to the use of the waters of an adjoining stream for domestic purposes and for irrigation, is not, upon the expiration of the agreement, estopped from asserting his

on the stream might consume all the water for the purpose of irrigating his land; and that such use would be reasonable. The court, in considering this question, said: "To lay down the arbitrary rule contended for by the defendant, and say that one proprietor on the stream has so unlimited a right to the use of the water for irrigation, seems to us an unnecessary destruction of the rights of other proprietors on the stream, who have an equal need and an equal right." "What would be a reasonable amount of water for irrigation," says MCFARLAND, J., in a very recent case, "is a question that must depend upon the particular circumstances of each case in which it arises, and it is a question which will often be of difficult solution; but it is clear that in no case can he, for that purpose, as against a lower proprietor, use all the water of the stream. That could be done, if at all, only where the whole of the water was absolutely necessary for strictly domestic purposes, and to furnish drink for man and beast." Gould v. Stafford, 18 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 879.

1. Anthony v. Lapham, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 175, 176, where the court said: "This case is to be supported, if at all, upon the authority of Weston v. Alden [8 Mass. 136.] The difference is that there the defendant took the water by small sluices over the land and returned it into the natural channel. Here the water was stopped by a dam. A great deal of it was absorbed by the land or lost by evaporation and the surplus was not returned into the natural channel; so that the plaintiff was deprived of the privilege which belonged to him. Every man, through whose land water passes, may use it for watering his cattle or irrigating his land, but he must use it in this latter way so as to do the least possible injury to his neighbor who has the same right."

2. Blanchard v. Baker, 8 Me. 253, 266. So it is said of an upper riparian proprietor, diverting water for purposes of irrigation, that "he must see to it that the surplus after use be returned to the stream." Gould v. Stafford, 18 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 879.

Waste Water.—"The disposition of waste water was considered where, in a former proceeding, plaintiff and others had been adjudicated to be the owners of the waste water of defendants' ranch, which was defined to be that portion of said waters which is not necessary to irrigate . . . ranch and for household purposes thereon." (Cave v. Crafts, 53 Cal. 135.) In an action by plaintiffs to restrain defendants from interfering with the use of the water in question, it was held, under the former decision, that the defendants were entitled to use the water only on their ranch, and only so much as was necessary for the immediate purposes clearly defined in the adjudication, and that testimony tending to show how much right as a riparian proprietor to the use of the waters of the stream.¹

Extent of Use of Water from Spring.—The upper proprietor of land in which originates a spring forming a stream running through his land and into the land of another, may divert the stream and cause it to overflow and irrigate his land, provided it resumes its natural channel before it enters the land of the lower proprietor; and he is not liable for injury to such proprietor unless he wantonly and maliciously uses the stream and takes more water than is necessary for agricultural purposes.²

Prescriptive Right.—If one goes upon the public lands of the United States and appropriates water for a lawful purpose, and subsequently maintains a ditch to conduct water used for irrigation, watering stock, and other domestic purposes, and is permitted to continue in its adverse enjoyment and use for more than water was required by defendants for these purposes, and how much had been diverted to other uses should have been admitted. Byrne v. Crafts, 15 Pac. Rep. 300; s. c., 73 Cal. 641.

1. Swift v. Goodrich, 70 Cal. 103.

Riparian Proprietors, etc.—The doctrine of estoppel has, however, been applied in an action by a party deriving title to the water of a canon from one who, while owner, represented to one of the defendants, who he knew was thinking of purchasing certain land, that the right to use water from said canon therefor was appurtenant thereto, thus inducing defendant to purchase the land. Subsequently plaintiff's grantors, in order to save waste, proposed to run a pipe across defendant's land. Defendant assented on condition that the pipe should be so laid that he would be enabled to use therefrom the quantity of water to which he had theretofore been entitled. This was done, and defendants used the same until the bringing of this action, for the purpose of irrigation, and for domestic and stock purposes. It was held that the plaintiff was estopped from interfering with the rights acquired by the defendants to the use of the pipe, and its appurtenances, so long as the same remained as conduit of the water over their land. Alhambra Addition Water Co. v. Richardson, 12 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 343. The decision in bank, however, reported in 72 Cal. 598, discusses prescriptive right of diversion, etc. One who stands passively by and allows another to open out fields and irrigate them with water for sixteen years, under the belief that he has a vested right to an equal user thereof, is estopped from subsequently denying this right. Dalton v. Rentonia, 15 Pac. Rep. (Ariz.) 37.

When Injunction Refused.—In an action for damages and for an injunction to restrain defendant from constructing and maintaining an irrigating ditch through plaintiff's land, the court will refuse to grant the injunction, and will assess nominal damages where it appears that defendant, with plaintiff's knowledge and consent, entered upon the land and commenced the construction of the ditch; that plaintiff then denied defendant's right, and forbade all further work; that the damage caused by constructing and maintaining the ditch will be merely nominal; that defendant is not insolvent and unable to respond in damages, and that plaintiff's remedy at law is ample and adequate. Hoye v. Sweetman, 12 Pac. Rep. (Nev.) 504; following Thorn v. Sweeney, 12 Nev. 251.

2. Tolles v. Correth, 31 Tex. 362; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 540, 542, where MORRILL, C. J., says, for the court, that the lower proprietor "is presumed to know that whoever owned the land above and adjoining his land had a right to use the water running through it and on it for irrigating the land," and that when such lower proprietor "erected his mill he could lessen" the upper proprietor's "vested rights," and that whatever damage the former "may sustain is damnum absque injuria." But in Fleming v. Davis, 37 Tex. 173, it is held that while the law of Texas recognizes the right of the riparian proprietor to appropriate water for the purpose of irrigation, still the owner of a head spring has no right to exhaust the water flowing from it, to the injury of the lower proprietor.

ten years, such appropriation ripens into a title which cannot be disturbed by one succeeding to the rights of the United States.¹

Vested Rights.—Appropriation of the use of water for mining and irrigation, under established customs in the arid regions, and the acts of congress,² is a vested right, and all subsequently acquired rights or titles are subject thereto.³

Allegation of Riparian Ownership.—In a suit brought to recover damages for diverting water claimed for irrigating purposes, and for an injunction, where defendant made no claim to be the riparian proprietor of the streams, but claimed the waters by prior appropriation and prescription, it was held that to support the claim for damages the material allegations in the complaint were prior appropriation of the water by the plaintiff and the diversion thereof by the defendant, and that it was unnecessary to aver riparian ownership in the plaintiff.⁴

Prior Appropriation.—Prior appropriation of all the waters of a stream, applied to irrigating purposes, gives the better right to the tributaries and all the direct and immediate sources of supply of the stream; and when this right once vests, it must be protected and upheld.⁵

Diversion of Water.—In an action to enjoin an upper riparian proprietor from diverting water from a creek for irrigating purposes, evidence that persons other than defendants have also diverted water from the stream is admissible only on the issue as to the amount of damages.⁶

Colorado Doctrine of Appropriation, etc.—One who has made an appropriation of the waters of a stream for irrigation acquires a prior right thereto in Colorado, as against a riparian owner who obtained a patent from the United States after such appropria-

1. Tolman v. Casey, 15 Oreg. 83, 88, concerning prescriptive right of diversion; see Water Co. v. Richardson, 72 Cal. 598.

2. Act of July 26th, 1866, confirming all water rights acquired by prior appropriation, and act of July 9th, 1870, declaring that all patents, etc., shall be subject to vested and accrued water rights.

3. Hill v. Lenormand, 16 Pac. Rep. (Ariz.) 266.

4. Jerrett v. Mahan, 17 Pac. Rep. (Nev.) 12.

5. Malad Val. Irr. Co. v. Campbell, 18 Pac. Rep. (Idaho) 52. This case also holds that rights cannot be acquired to the waters of springs situated along the channel of a stream, and which constitute its direct source of supply, by entering upon, cleaning out, and thereby increasing the water supply, as against prior appropriations, in good faith, of the whole of the waters of the stream. It is further questioned, but not decided, whether one can bring water from another or independent source into a natural stream, whose waters have been appropriated, and use the channel of such stream to conduct the waters thus brought in to another point, to be then diverted and used.

Notice of Appropriation.—A person who gives notice of the appropriation of water has a reasonable time thereafter to complete his canal; and he exercises due diligence in perfecting his rights where he posts a notice of appropriation of water for the purposes of irrigation on December 12th, 1885, digs a ditch fifteen or twenty feet long, and lets water into it, and in that month and January, makes a survey, and does no more work until the latter part of February, because he is building a house on his land. Dyke v. Caldwell, 18 Pac. Rep. (Ariz.) 276.

6. Gould v. Stafford, 18 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 879.

tion, and before the act of congress of July 9th, 1870, amending the act of July 26th, 1866, which amendment provides that patents thereafter issued shall be subject to any vested or accrued water rights. Furthermore, under the statutes of that State, the waters of a stream can be diverted by appropriation for purposes of irrigation, to the exclusion of any riparian owner, though the lands to be irrigated are not located on the banks or in the neighborhood of the stream.¹

Resumption by Appropriator After Abandonment.—Although one who has appropriated water for irrigating purposes abandons it, yet it seems that if no new comer enters upon the land and uses the right during his absence, he may, upon his return, resume his rights and avoid the effect of such abandonment.²

Subsequent Homestead Entry, etc.—The prior appropriator of the flow of any water over the public lands of the United States has, by a local custom which is recognized by the United States, a vested right therein which cannot be defeated by one who, having consented to such appropriation, subsequently files a homestead entry and obtains a patent for the land.³

The appropriation of the waters of a navigable stream

1. Hammond v. Rose, 19 Pac. Rep. 466, 467. RISING, C. said in this case: "Since the commencement of this action the questions presented have been passed upon by this court in Coffin v. Ditch Co., 6 Colo. 443. In that case it was held that the common law doctrine giving the riparian owner a right to the flow of water in its natural channel upon and over his lands, even though he makes no beneficial use of it, is inapplicable to Colorado; and that the first appropriator of water from a natural stream for a beneficial purpose has, in the absence of express statutes to the contrary, with the qualifications contained in the constitution, a prior right thereto, to the extent of such appropriation; and that this right is entitled to protection as well after patent to a third party of the land over which the natural stream flows, as when such land is a part of the public domain; and it was further held that the right to water acquired by prior appropriation is not in any way dependent upon the locus of its application to the beneficial use designed."

2. Tucker v. Jones, 19 Pac. Rep. (Mont.) 571. LIDDELL, J., quotes the opinion of the trial judge on this matter, partly as follows: "The appropriation of water, it would seem, stands upon the same footing and basis as the possessing right of land. So, when a party abandons his water right and ceases to use it for some beneficial purpose, it does not become the property of his joint tenant by virtue of such abandonment but reverts to the government, and is thereafter subject to reappropriation just as much as abandoned land. If a stranger can appropriate this land, and gain the benefit of the labor of the original appropriator, why may not the latter return reappropriate and acquire all of his original rights? It seems to me that it is not a debatable question."

Interest in Irrigating Ditch.—Concerning the want of interest in an irrigating ditch on the part of the wife of an abandoning claimant on adjacent land, who had himself taken up an abandoned claim, on the ground that such interest was real property, and could therefore be acquired only in specified modes, and that at any rate her claim was subordinate to that of the owners of other contiguous claims, see Burnham v. Freeman, 19 Pac. Rep. (Colo.) 761.

3. Tenem Ditch Co. v. Thorpe, 20 Pac. Rep. (Wash. Ter.) 588.

In Clough v. Wing, 17 Pac. Rep. (Ariz.) 453; it is held that the common law rule does not apply to a non-navigable stream in Arizona, but that all the waters of the streams in the territory are to be applied to irrigation. The opinion contains an interesting account of artificial irrigation on various lands.

must be shown by an open and physical act, and for a valuable use, properly applied.¹

ISLANDS.

1. Title to Islands, 865.
2. Islands Belonging to the United States, 866.
3. Statutes, 866.
4. Minerals Under Islands, 867.
5. Islands in Unnavigable Rivers, 868.

1. Title to Islands.—New islands arising in the sea or in a navigable river prima facie belong, according to the common law, to the king in England, and in this country to the State. But this rule is not universal.²

1. Clough v. Wing, 17 Pac. Rep. (Ariz.) 453.

2. Morris v. Brook (Delaware C. P.), 53 Am. Rep. 215. "The right to the new islands and also to lands gained by alluvion or in dereliction (in cases where they are not gained by insensible degrees), all of which are governed by the same principles, follows the right to the soil which is covered with water. As the king is the proprietor in general of the soil covered with the sea or a navigable river, it is reasonable that he should have the soil where the water leaves it dry; and this stands on the ground of the prerogative. But where the right to the soil when covered with water belongs to a subject, he is entitled to all these increments (2 Bl. Com. 262; Hale De Jure Maris, ch. 4 and 6). This is illustrated by the law relative to islands arising in private rivers. If an island arises in the middle of such a river, it belongs in common to those who have lands on each side thereof; but if it be nearer to one bank than the other, it belongs only to him who is proprietor of the nearest shore. Yet this, says SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE (2 Com. 261), seems only to be reasonable where the soil of the river is equally divided between the owners of the opposite shores; for if the whole soil is in the freehold of any one man, as it usually is wherever a several fishery is claimed, there it seems just (and so is the constant practice), that the lyotts, or little islands arising in part of the river shall be the property of him who owneth the piscary and the soil. The rules relative to the sea and navigable rivers are formed on the same principles.

"This subject is very satisfactorily explained by LORD HALE in his Treatise De Jure Maris, ch. 4 and 6, to the whole of which I generally refer for the proof of the rule I have stated, that the right to a new island follows the right to the soil on which it was formed. This will be found from those chapters to be the rule with regard to all the maritime increments. I will state here particularly a few passages from them: 'If a subject hath had by prescription the property of a certain tract, or creek, or navigable river, or arm of the sea, even while it is covered with water by certain known metes and extends, though it should be relicted, the subject will have the propriety in the soil relicted.' Harg. Law Tracts 15. 'If a subject hath land adjoining the sea, and the violence of the sea swallows it up, but so that there be reasonable marks to continue the notice of it, or though the marks be defaced, yet if by situation and extent of quality and bounding upon the firm land, the same can be known, though the sea leave the land again, or it be regained by art or industry, the subject doth not lose his propriety; and accordingly it was held by Cooke and Foster, M., 7 Jac. C. B., though the inundation continue forty years. If the marks remain or continue, or extent can reasonably be certain, the case is clear.' Cooke and Foster, M., 15 Jac. C. B.

The case of the Town of Shinbridge, in 18 H. 3, is stated in p. 16: 'The river of Severn had gained upon the town of Shinbridge so much that its channel ran over part of Shinbridge lands, and lost part thereof unto the other side (Aure), and then threw it back to Shinbridge. It shall not belong to Aure, neither was it claimed by the king, though Severn be in that place an arm of the sea; but was restored to Shinbridge as before. The property of the soil was not lost to the owners who had it before.' . . . 'The soil under the water must needs be of the

2. Islands Belonging to the United States.—The fact that persons are on an island belonging to the United States engaged in some particular enterprise and have been there for some time previously does not impair the right of others to land and engage in the like business, nor justify such persons in resisting the landing of others.¹

3. Statutes.—Islands, newly discovered by its citizens, belong to the United States, and until some exclusive rights are obtained in pursuance of the provisions of the act of congress passed in August, 1856, all the citizens of the United States possess equal rights to go there.²

The New York laws, 1878, ch. 190, making it a misdemeanor to remove sand, etc., from the shore of Staten Island, in Southfield, is constitutional and valid against one having title to the beach.³

same propriety as it is when it is covered with water. If the soil of the sea, while it is covered with water, be the king's, it cannot become the subject's because the water has left it. But when the land as it stood covered with water, did by particular usage or prescription belong to a subject then recessus maris, so far as the subject's particular interest went while it was covered with water, so far the recessus maris vel brachii ejusdem belongs to the same subject.' . . . 'As touching islands arising in the sea, or in the arms or creeks, or havens thereof, the same rule holds which is before observed touching acquets by the reliction or recess of the sea, or such arms or creeks thereof. Of common right and prima facie it is true they belong to the crown, but where the interest of such districtus maris, or arm of the sea, or creek or haven, doth in point of propriety belong to a subject, either by charter or prescription, the islands that happen within the precincts of such private propriety of a subject will belong to a subject according to the limits and extent of such propriety, for the propriety of such a new accrued island follows the propriety of the soil before it came to be produced. This principle, so strongly supported by authority, and so evidently grounded on reason and justice, proves that Wilson's Bar is not to be considered as a new island belonging to the commonwealth and the subject of a grant from the commonwealth, but that it is a part of that island, and the property of the owner of that island. Though the surface of the lower part of that island was destroyed by the force of the winds and waves, and it was consequently overflowed by the water of the river, yet the owner did not lose the propriety of the remaining soil covered by the water. If it was regained either by natural or artificial means, it continued to belong to the original proprietor. He might embank it and thereby again exclude the waters if circumstances permitted. The earth deposited on it by the river became his by the right of alluviation, and of course this island formed on it by such deposit became his, and though it probably has now extended beyond the limits of the old island, the addition is plainly an alluvion, as it has arisen from gradual and imperceptible accretions.'" WILSON, J., in Morris v. Brooke (Delaware C. P.), 53 Am. Rep. 215.

1. People v. Batchelder, 27 Cal. 69.

2. Individuals cannot obtain a right to the exclusive possession of islands in the sea by virtue of discovery, irrespective of the statute. American etc. Co. v. United States etc. Co., 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 23.

But where the plaintiffs, while an island remained in an unoccupied condition, by their agents went upon and expended money in erecting works and making improvements and mining guano, which they conveyed to the shore, it was held, that they were entitled to be protected by injunction in the enjoyment of such property, and in the possession of the guano so mined. American etc. Co. v. United States etc. Co., 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 23.

3. Hodges v. Perine, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 516.

4. Minerals Under Islands.—A patent entitling the patentee to coal and minerals under the bed of a navigable river from low water mark on one shore to the same line on the other does not entitle him to the minerals under an island within the bounds of his patent, which was subject to application and sale under laws existing before the law under which his patent was granted, and still in force.¹

1. Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Winchester, 109 Pa. St. 572; s. c., 58 Am. Rep. 740.

"The act of April 11th, 1848, of the legislature (Pa.) provided for application, survey and grant of a quantity not exceeding one hundred acres of the bed of any navigable river, beginning at a point designated in the application, at low water mark on the bank of said river and pursuing the course of said river at low water mark to a designated point; thence at right angles across said river to low water mark; thence along the shore at low water mark to a point opposite the place of beginning. A warrantee under this act has the 'right to dig and mine for iron, coal, limestone, sand and gravel, fire-clay and other minerals,' but he takes no title to the soil or sand or anything in the bed of the river. His grant is confined within the limits of low water mark, and this recognizes the principle that a grant of land by the commonwealth, bounded on one side by a large navigable river, vests in the grantee the entire land to the line of low water mark. The riparian owner has the right of soil to ordinary low water mark of the river, subject to the public right of passage for navigation, fishing and other proper use of the highway to the mark of ordinary high water. Wood v. Appal, 63 Pa. St. 210. Between high and low water mark, the title of the riparian owner is qualified, being subject to the right of navigation over it and improvement of the stream as a highway. Wainwright v. McCullough, 63 Pa. St. 66. In that case it was said that the land lying between the low water line of the island as fixed by the commissioners, and the top of the island bank, is a part of the island. And in Hartley v. Crawford, 32 P. F. S. 478, it was again remarked that the riparian rights of the owner of an island attached to the land between the bluff bank to which the survey came and the ordinary low water mark; and subject to the rights of the public, the owner of the island might use the sandy or pebbly beach or shore. Although the principle may not have been necessary to the decision in Wainwright v. McCullough, 63 Pa. St. 66, or in Hartley v. Crawford, 32 Pa. St. 478, and therefore not authoritatively ruled, its assertion shows how naturally it comes into view in considering the bounds of an island as defined in the statutes providing for sales of that kind of land. No difference is made in the laws providing for surveys and sales of land, respecting the shore of the main land and the shore of islands. It would be difficult to conceive a reason for a difference. In either case, the river being a bound, the grantee takes to low water mark, subject to the right of the public to use the river as a highway, but as to all below the surface, without clog or qualification. If the title to any of the land remained in the commonwealth, a grant of the minerals under the bed of a river, within the limits of low water mark, would be held as strictly within said limits as if all the land bordering on the river had been disposed of to purchasers. So also if the act of 1848 does not apply to minerals under islands in the river Susquehanna, then owned by the Commonwealth, said islands embrace all within the limits of low water mark.

"The act of 1848 contained no repealing clause, and repealed no prior statute by implication, unless there was such positive repugnancy between its provisions and the prior statute, that they cannot stand together or be consistently reconciled. It is general, applying to all navigable rivers, and the statutes relating to sale of islands in the river Susquehanna apply to no other; but the repugnancy between a local statute and a subsequent general statute must be as strongly marked, to say the least, to repeal by implication, as if both were general. Sifted v. Commonwealth, 104 Pa. St. 179; Harrisburg v. Sheck, 104 Pa. St. 53. No mention is made of islands in the act of 1848. On its face, the warrantee is entitled to the minerals under the bed of the river, without exception. Of course, it was not intended that he should have a right to dig and

5. Islands in Unnavigable Rivers.—An island in an unnavigable river (not legally appropriated otherwise), if on one side of the dividing line, belongs to the owner of the bank on that side; if in the middle of the river, the owners of the banks hold it in severalty, the dividing line running as if there was no island in the river. If there are several borders, the island is apportioned according to their lines on the main.¹

ISSUE—(See LEGACIES AND DEVICES; REMAINDERS AND EXECUTOR'S INTERESTS; VESTED AND CONTINGENT LEGACIES; WILLS).

- I. Definition, 869.
- II. Issue Construed; Children, 872.
 - 1. Issue Explained by Children and Vice Versa; Form of Peculiar Expressions, 872.
 - 2. Issue Correlative with Parent; Sibley v. Perry, 875.
- III. Whether Issue Is a Word of Purchase or Limitation, 876.
 - 1. In Deeds and Marriage Articles, 876.
 - 2. In Wills, 877.
 - a. General Principle—Issue Compared with Heirs of the Body, 877.
 - b. Limitation to A and His Issue—When No Gift Over, 879.
 - c. Limitations to A for Life, and After His Decease to His Issue—When No Gift Over, 886.

- (1) As to Realty, 886.
- (2) As to Personalty, 890.
- (3) Effect of Cy. Press Doctrine, 891.

IV. Dying Without Issue—When Referred to Prior Objects, 891.

- 1. In Default of Such Issue, 891.
- 2. In Default of Issue, 894.
 - a. As to Personalty, 894.
 - b. As to Realty, 896.

V. Dying Without Issue—Definite and Indefinite Failure of Issue, 899.

- 1. General Rule, 899.
- 2. Without Having Issue—Before He Has Any Issue—Without Children—Issue Alive, Surviving, or, Who Shall Attain Twenty-one, 902.
- 3. Without Leaving Issue—With-mine and carry away the minerals in the islands which had been already granted. The presumption is against an intent to invade vested rights of property. Then, the statute must be so construed that the bed of the river between the shores of the main land, shall not include land, called islands, which had been previously granted to purchasers under the laws of the State. It seems equally clear that by like construction, it shall not include islands which, under prior existing laws, were subject to application and sale. Those laws provided for the sale of land, without exception of any part thereof; the act of 1848 provided for the sale of minerals under a river bed—under land covered with water. The purpose of the former was a sale of the entire land; of the latter, a sale of only the minerals under the surface. Title to the surface remains in the commonwealth as to all grants under the act of 1848. There is no intent that said act shall apply to any land or island which were subject to sale under other laws. We are not convinced that the court erred in any of the rulings set forth in the first six specifications of error.” TRUNKY, J., in Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Winchester, 109 Pa. St. 572; 8. c., 58 Am. Rep. 740.

1. Hopkins' Academy v. Dickinson, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 548; Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 97; Ingraham v. Wilkinson, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 268; Pratt v. Lamson, 2 Allen (Mass.) 284.

Where an island is so formed, in the bed of a river not navigable, as to divide the channel and lie partly on each side of the thread of the river, it will be divided between the riparian proprietors on the opposite sides of the river according to the original thread of the river. Deerfield v. Arms, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 41.

Islands in an unnavigable river, if altogether on one side of the dividing line, belong to him who owns the bank on that side; if formed in the middle of the river they are appropriated to the owners of the bank in severalty, according to their original dividing line, the filum aquæ, as it is where the waters

- out Leaving Issue Behind Him, 904.
4. With Leaving Issue at Time of Death, 906.
 5. Gift over Expressly Limited to Take Effect on, at, or After Decease of First Taker, 906.
 6. Effect of the Word "Then," 908.
 7. Die Under Twenty-one and Without Issue—Unmarried, or Before Marriage, and Without Issue, 909.
 8. Gift Over, if A Survives B and Dies Without Issue, or in Case the Issue Die Under Age, 911.
 9. Dying Without Issue in Lifetime of Person Living at Testator's Decease, or Before Possession or Period of Distribution, 912.
 10. Gift Over to Survivors or to Persons "Then Living," 912.
 11. Gift Over to Person Named, 915.
 12. Direction to Pay Money, 915.
 13. Personal Trust, 915.
 14. Gift Over for Life, 916.
 15. Bequest of Perishable Goods; Original Estate Devised. Per Autre Vie, 916.
 16. Effect of Power of Appointment, 917.
 17. Failure of Testator's Own Issue, 917.
 18. Effect of Alternative Limitations, 918.
 19. Statutory Changes, 918.
- VI. Dying Without Issue Referred to Death in Lifetime of Testator, 919.
- VII. Effect of Limitation Over Upon Preceding Limitation, 921.
1. Where the Failure of Issue Is Indefinite, 921.
 2. Where the Failure of Issue Is Definite, 924.

I. DEFINITION.—Issue, when a word of limitation, means lineal descendants indefinitely, and hence heirs of the body;¹ when a word of purchase uncontrolled by the context, lineal descendants in being at a specified time, and under a devise or bequest to the issue of A, all lineal descendants in being at the time the gift takes effect are entitled per capita.²

begin to divide. Ingraham v. Wilkin- son, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 268.

Islands in rivers fall under the same rule as to the ownership of the soil and its incidents as the soil under water does; if not otherwise lawfully appropriated, they belong to the riparian proprietor on one side, or are divided in severalty between the proprietors on both sides according to the original dividing line, or filum aquæ, as it would run if the islands were under water. The filum aquæ is ascertained by measurement across from ordinary low water mark on one side to the same on the other side, without regard to the channel or depth of water. When the island is appropriated the boundary is then midway between that and the main land. McCullough v. Wall, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 68.

1. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *411, § III. 2 a, n. (2); Doe ex dem. v. Emaus, Penn. (N. J.) 967, 971.

2. Wms. Exrs. *1112; Prior on Issue, § 7; LORD HARDWICKE in Wythe v. Blackman, 1 Ves. Sr. (Eng.) 200; Davenport v. Hanbury, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 257; Freeman v. Parsley, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 421;

Slater v. Dangerfield, 15 M. & W. (Eng.) 263; Bernard v. Montague, 1 Mer. (Eng.) 434; Clay v. Pennington, 7 Sim. (Eng.) 370; Hall v. Nalder, 22 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 242; 17 Jur. 224; South v. Searle, 2 Jur. N. S. (Eng.) 390; In re Jones's Trusts, 23 Beav. (Eng.) 242; Robinson v. Sykes, 23 Beav. (Eng.) 40; Maddock v. Legg, 25 Beav. (Eng.) 531; In re Corrie's Will, 32 Beav. (Eng.) 426; In re Corlass, L. R., 1 Ch. D. (Eng.) 460; 45 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 118; 24 W. R. (Eng.) 204; 33 L. T., N. S. (Eng.) 630; Morgan v. Thomas, 9 Q. B. D. (Eng.) 646; Denio's Trusts, 1r. Rep., 10 Eq. 86; Ralph v. Carrick, 11 Ch. D. (Eng.) 885; Hobgen v. Neale, L. R., 11 Eq. (Eng.) 48; Ferril v. Talbot, Ril. Ch. (S. Car.) 247; Beckam v. Dessaus, 9 S. Car. 546; McPherson v. Snowden, 19 Md. 197; MILLER, J., in Goldsbrough v. Martin, 41 (Md.) 488, 501; Price v. Disson, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 168, 177; Weehawken Ferry Co. v. Sisson, 2 Green (N. J.) 475; HOAR, J., in Houghton v. Kendall, 7 Allen (Mass.) 76. See Also Edwards in Bibb, 43 Ala. 666; Kleppner v. Laverty, 70 Pa. St. 70; Wistar v. Scott, 105 Pa. St. 200, 214; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 197; Barry's Appeal (Pa.), 8 Cent. Rep. 131.

Where the word "issue," or the words "heirs of the body" are used in a devise, they must have one of two meanings, either the indefinite lineal succession of heirs of the body, or the particular individuals who at a given time answer the description of issue. Ferril v. Talbot, Ril. Ch. 247; STARRETT, J., in Wistar v. Scott, 105 Pa. St. 200, 214.

Issue Includes Descendants.—"The word issue includes all remote descendants of the person whose issue is spoken of, and the burden lies upon him who contends that it is to be restricted to a narrower signification." ROMILLY, M. R., in Ross v. Ross, 20 Beav. 649; Slater v. Dangerfield, 15 M. & W. (Eng.) 263; Leigh v. Norbury, 13 Ves. 344; JAMES, L. J., in Ralph v. Carrick, 11 Ch. D. (Eng.) 883; JESSEL, M. R., in Morgan v. Thomas, 9 Q. B. D. (Eng.) 646; South v. Searle, 4 W. R. (Eng.) 470; Harrison v. Symons, 14 W. R. (Eng.) 959; Re Howard's Trusts, 7 Ir. Ch. R. 344; Donoghue v. Brooks, Ir. R., 9 Eq. 487; Denio's Trusts, Ir. Rep. 10 Eq. 86.

In Massachusetts, a similar construction of the word issue as applied to the descent of estates is enforced by statute. Mass. Gen. Sts., ch. 3, § 7, cl. 9. Bigelow v. Morong, 103 Mass. 288, 289. But in California Civil Code, § 1386, issue is used in same sense as child. In re Newman's Estate (Cal.), 16 Pac. Rep. 887.

In New York, in Taft v. Taft, 3 Dem. (N. Y.) 86, it was held that the word issue in a will, where no light is thrown upon its meaning by the context or by extrinsic circumstances, must be construed to denote lineal descendants of the first degree to the exclusion of remoter kindred. This decision purports to be formed upon the statement of CHANCELLOR KENT, 4 Kent Com. *278, n. (d), and Palmer v. Horn, 84 N. Y. 516. See also Murray v. Bronson, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 218, 230. The decisions in the two latter cases depend upon the principles explained in section II. CHANCELLOR KENT merely says: "The term issue is generally used by the testator as synonymous with child or children." In matter of Cornell, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 88, the words "I give, devise and bequeath all my estate, real and personal, unto my brothers who shall survive me, and to the issue of such of my brothers as have heretofore died or may hereafter die," without anything in the context restricting the meaning of the word "issue," were held to include the descendants of a deceased brother and not confined to their children. Palmer v. Horn, 84 N. Y. 516, was cited by counsel contending for the restricted construction. This would seem to establish that no new rule of construction was introduced by Palmer v. Horn, and that the statement of ROMILLY, M. R., in Ross v. Ross, is as applicable in New York as elsewhere. See also the earlier case of Kingsland v. Rapelje, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 1.

Adopted Children.—The adoption of an illegitimate child by the father and his wife, under N. H. St., G. L. ch. 188, § 4, does not render such child his issue so as to defeat a remainder created by will, and made contingent upon his leaving no issue. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 64 N. H. 407. See In re Newman's Estate (Cal.), 16 Pac. Rep. 887; In re Sessions' Estate (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 249.

Otherwise where an illegitimate daughter was legitimated by special act of assembly and made "capable to inherit and transmit any estate as fully as if born in lawful wedlock," and gift over was to take effect on death "without an heir." McGunnigle v. McKee, 77 Pa. St. 81.

Step Children.—The legal signification and meaning of the term issue, children or grandchildren, and every word of the like kind, when used in a will as descriptive of persons who are to take as devisees or legatees, applies to those only who are of the blood of the testator or person named as the parent and does not comprehend those who may have acquired the name or character of children by marriage." But the rule will yield where there is a clear or manifest intention to the contrary expressed in the will. Barnes v. Greenzabach, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 41, 43, 44; Hussey v. Berkley, 2 Eden (Eng.) 194; s. c. nom. Hussey v. Dillon, Ambler (Eng.) 603. See Lawrence v. Hebbard, 1 Bradf. Sur. (N. Y.) 252.

Testator directed the remainder of his personal estate to be divided into six equal parts, and he bequeathed to his stepdaughter M, one share; to his daughter S, one share; to the children of his daughter E, one share; to the children of his daughter M, one share; to the children of his daughter B, one share; and to the children of his son J, one share: but if his said children or his said stepdaughter should die without issue, the share or portion which would have gone to such issue to be divided equally among the survivors of his children or grandchildren. The daughter B died without issue; the stepdaughter M married and died leaving issue. Held, that the issue of M had no title to any part of B's share. Barnes v. Greenzabach, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 41.

Issue Take per Capita.—Under a limitation in a deed or will to the "lawful issue of A," children and grandchildren take per capita. Leigh v. Norbury, 13 Ves. (Eng.) 340; Freeman v. Parsley, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 420. See Morgan v. Thomas, 9 Q. B. D. (Eng.) 646; Denio's Trusts, Ir. Rep. 10 Eq. 86; Ralph v. Carrick, 11 Ch. D. (Eng.) 883; Louis v. Louis, 9 Jur. N. S. 244; Re Corrie's Will, 32 Beav. (Eng.) 426.

Testator gave an annuity of $10,000 for life and a power to dispose by will of one sixth of his residuary estate to each of his children. He also provided, in another item of the will, that if one son should have no other "issue or descendants" than a son who was then living, his power of disposition by will should be limited to $50,000, and in default of appointment, that that sum should be held in trust for the grandson, with the further provision that, "if it shall happen that my said son shall leave other issue or descendants, living at his death, besides his said son, my grandson, then the foregoing provisions of my will are to apply to him as well as to my other children." The son left no other child than the grandson, who was a minor at the time of the testator's death, but was afterwards married and had children living at the time of the death of testator's son. Held, that the words "issue or descendants" include the children of the testator's grandson, and that, therefore, the contingency named in the will never happened, and the grandson was entitled to a share with the other children named in the will. Barry's Appeal; Harrison's Estate (Pa.), 18 Cent. Rep. 131.

Under a devise of a contingent remainder, upon the determination of a precedent life estate to "the male issue then living of testator's son R,"—R taking no interest, and the testator's intent being unexplained by the context—the words "male issue," etc., are words of purchase, designating a class of devisees, to wit: all the lineal descendants of R, who are males, living at the determination of the life estate, and such male lineal descendants take in equal shares, whether they be of the same generation or not, and whether they trace descent from R through males or through females. Wistar v. Scott, 105 Pa. St. 200.

When Issue Take per Stirpes—Substitutional Gifts.—Where the gift to the issue is substitutional, they take per stirpes. Minchell v. Lee, 17 Jur., pt. 1 (Eng.) 727. See Atwood v. Alford, 4 W. R. (Eng.) 956; L. R., 2 Eq. (Eng.) 479; Rowland v. Gorsuch, 2 Cox (Eng.) 189.

"A gift to issue is substitutional when the share which the issue are to take is by a prior clause expressed to be given to the parent of such issue, and a gift to issue is an original gift when the share which the issue are to take is not by a prior clause expressed to be given to the parent of such issue." KINDERSLEY, V. C., in Lamphier v. Buck, 2 Drew & Sm. (Eng.) 484, 494. See Re Turner, 2 Drew & Sm. (Eng.) 501. See further, as to the distinction, In re Merrick's Trusts, L. R., 1 Eq. (Eng.) 551; Hurry v. Hurry, L. R., 10 Eq. (Eng.) 346; In re Woolrich, Harris v. Harris, L. R., 11 Ch. D. (Eng.) 663; 48 L. J., Ch. (Eng.) 321; Colthurst v. Carter, 15 Beav. (Eng.) 421; Cost v. Winder, 1 Coll. (Eng.) 320; Heasman v. Pearce, L. R., 7 Ch. App. (Eng.) 660; Mitcheson v. Buckton, 23 W. R. (Eng.) 480; Humphrey v. Humphrey, 8 Jur., N. S. (Eng.) 500; s. c., 2 Drew & Sm. (Eng.) 49; Alexander v. Jolly, 55 L. T., Ch. (Eng.) 574; Joseph v. Ulitz, 34 N. J. Eq. 1; McPherson v. Snowden, 19 Md. 197; Dexter v. Inches (Mass.), 17 N. E. Rep. 551. See also LEGACIES AND DEVISES.

Issue Take Jointly.—At common law a gift to the issue of A, simpliciter, creates a joint tenancy. Davenport v. Hanbury, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 258.

Objections to Distribution per Capita.—The rule of distribution which allows grandchildren or great-grandchildren to share per capita with children in a devise or bequest to issue, is generally admitted to frustrate the intention of the testator. CHANCELLOR KENT was of opinion that issue is generally used by the testator as synonymous with child or children. 4 Comm. *278, n. (b). And in Freeman v. Parsley, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 420, LORD LOUGHBOROUGH expressed regret that there was no medium between total exclusion of grandchildren and allowing them to share equally with their parent. Mr. Redfield (2 Red. Wills, *42, *43) is of opinion that most testators employ the term issue in the sense of descending heirs. Therefore it is submitted that the construction of a bequest to the issue of A, most consistent with the intention of the testator, would be to allow all children of A, living at the time of distribution, to share per capita, to the exclusion of more remote descendants, unless such descendants are the issue of a deceased child, in which case they should take a child's share, as representing their parent.

II. ISSUE CONSTRUED; CHILDREN—1. Issue Explained by Children and Vice Versa—Force of Peculiar Expressions.—When the word issue in one part of the limitation is explained by the word children in another part, as when there is a gift over in case the issue or children die under twenty-one, the inference seems irresistible that the testator intends the word issue throughout to denote children.¹

Title of Issue Under Statutes to Prevent Lapse.—See LEGACIES AND DEVISES.

Real Estate.—Prima facie under a devise to the issue of A, as purchasers, the intent indicated by the use of the word issue, to let in the whole line of descendants, can best be carried out by conferring an estate tail on that descendant of A who would be his heir in tail if he were dead. Such construction receives some color from the language of EYRE, C. J., in Whitelock v. Heddon, 1 Bos. & P. (Eng.) 243; but the weight of authority is decidedly against it; and since the passage of statutes enabling the tenant in tail to bar the entail at pleasure, the reasoning upon which it is founded appears inapplicable. But whatever may be the case when the word issue simply is used, if to a gift to issue as purchasers there be added any words denoting that they are to take as tenants in common, or in any other way inconsistent with an estate tail, the same rule will be applied as is adopted in the case of personality. Mogg v. Mogg, 1 Meriv. (Eng.) 6, 4.

In Cook v. Cook, 20 Vern. (Eng.) 545, it was held that under a devise to the issue of J S, children and grandchildren took concurrently an estate for life. In Dalzell v. Welch, 2 Sim. (Eng.) 319, real estate was devised to R D for life, remainder to and among his issue as he should appoint, remainder to his issue living at his death, in fee. Held, that an appointment to the children, excluding the grandchildren, was invalid.

1. 2 Jarm. (5th Am. ed.) *440; Ryan v. Cowley, Ll. & Go. temp. Sug. 7; Cursham v. Newland, 2 Bing. N. C. 58; Mandeville v. Lackey, 3 Ridg. P. C. (Eng.) 352; Marshall v. Weeding, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 4; Bradley v. Cartwright, L. R., 2 C. P. (Eng.) 511; Eastwood v. Anson, 38 L. J., Exch. (Eng.) 74; 4 L. R., Exch. 141; 19 L. T., N. S. 834; Livesay v. Walpole, 23 W. R. 825; Hedges v. Harpur, 3 De G. & J. (Eng.) 129; Bryan v. Mansion, 5 De G. & S. (Eng.) 737, 743; Baker v. Bayldon, 31 Beav. (Eng.) 209; L. R., 9 Q. B. D. (Eng.) 643, 646; Lippincott v. Warder, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 115; Walker v. Milligan, 9 Wright (Pa.) 178; Riehl's Appeal, 4 Smith (Pa.) 97; Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. St. 481; Hill v. Hill, 74 Pa. St. 173; King v. Savage, 121 Mass. 303. See also Bristow v. Warde, 2 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 336; Hampson v. Brandwood, 1 Mad. (Eng.) 381; McNamara v. Lord Whitworth, Coop. (Eng.) 241; Horsepool v. Watson, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 383; Earl of Oxford v. Churchill, 3 Ves. & B. (Eng.) 59; Carter v. Bentall, 2 Beav. (Eng.) 551; Bradshaw v. Melling, 19 Beav. (Eng.) 417; Hill v. Hill, 74 Pa. St. 173; Price v. Sisson, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 168, 177; Arnold v. Brown, 7 R. I. 188, 195; Burleson v. Bowman, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 111; Edwards v. Bibb, 43 Ala. 666.

As to what words will be sufficient to restrict "issue" to children in an executed settlement, see Re Denio, Ir. Rep., 10 Eq. 81; Re Heath, 23 Beav. (Eng.) 193; Marshall v. Baker, 31 Beav. 608; Re Meade's Trusts, 7 L. R., Ir. 51; Williams v. Jekyl, 2 Ves. Sr. 681; Hampson v. Brandwood, 1 Mad. (Eng.) 381, 388; Fitzherbert v. Heathcote, cited, 4 Ves. (Eng.) 794; Earl of Sussex v. Temple, 1 Ld. Raym. 310.

Under the word "issue," in marriage articles, explained by the subsequent use of the word children, grandchildren cannot take. Adams v. Law, 17 How. (U. S.) 417.

As to construction applied to articles for a settlement, Campbell v. Sandys, 1 Sch. & Lef. (Eng.) 281; Stonor v. Curwen, 5 Sim. (Eng.) 264; Lester v. Tidd, 29 Beav. (Eng.) 618.

A testator by his will gave a fund to trustees "in trust for the lawful issue of F H surviving him, equally to be divided between them if more than one.

And if but one, then for such only child," with a gift over "in default of issue of F H becoming entitled." The issue of F H who survived him were a son, a daughter, four children of the son and six children of the daughter. Held, that by the use of the word "child" the testator had himself interpreted the word issue and that the word issue must be restricted to children and the fund go in moieties between the surviving son and daughter. In re Hopkins, 9 L. R., Ch. D. 131, 134; 26 W. R. 629; 47 L. J., Ch. D. 672.

Bequest to S for life, and, after her death, to "the issue of S, to be equally divided amongst such issue, share and share alike, and their issue; and in case of only one child her surviving then to such only surviving child." Held, that the term "issue" meant children and that grandchildren of S whose parents were alive at her death were not entitled. "If the limitation over had been to the issue of S, share and share alike, without more, the grandchildren as well as the children would be entitled to take; but the limitation over to one child, in case S left but one surviving her, demonstrates, I think clearly, that in the use of the word issue she meant children; nor is it helped by the limitation over to the issue, and their issue, of S, for the issue of her issue are but lineal descendants, and are equally contracted and limited by the limitation over to her only surviving child, if she died leaving but one." JOHNSON, Ch., in Burleson v. Bowman, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 111, 112.

For a case in which "issue, male and female," was construed sons and daughters, see Crozier v. Crozier, Dru. & War. (Eng.) 373. See also Murray v. Addenbrook, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 407.

"It is a well settled rule of construction, and one to which, from its soundness, I shall always strictly adhere, never to put a different construction on the same word where it occurs twice or oftener in the same instrument, unless there appear a clear intention to the contrary." LORD CHANCELLOR SUGDEN, in Ridgway v. Munkettrick, Dru.

& War. (Eng.) 84; Peel v. Catlow, 9 Sim. (Am. ed.) 372, 376, 377.

See the principle applied as to deeds in Campbell v. Sandys, 1 Sch. & Lef. (Eng.) 281; Swift v. Swift, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 168.

This rule of construction will be followed although an intestacy be the consequence. Goldie v. Greaves, 14 Sim. (Eng.) 348.

Where the limitation over is on failure of issue generally, but the testator, in another passage, refers to the same persons by the name of children, and thereby explains that by the word issue he means children, the effect is the same as if the limitation over were expressly on failure of children. Smith Ex. Int., § 547. Sheffield v. Lord Orrery, 3 Aik. (Eng.) 282; Fearne, Cent. R. 471; Deming v. Sherratt, 2 Hare (Eng.) 14.

In Ellis v. Selby, 7 Sim. 352, testator bequeathed his funded property in trust for W R E for life, and after his death for his issue at twenty-one; and also his bank stock in trust after the death of F B for W R E for life; and after his death in trust for the child or children of W R E in such manner as he had directed respecting his funded property. Held, that issue in the first part of the will must be construed as children. See Peel v. Catlow, 9 Sim. (Eng.) 372; Jennings v. Newman, 10 Sim. (Eng.) 219; Goldie v. Greaves, 14 Sim. (Eng.) 348; Benn v. Dixon, 16 Sim. (Eng.) 21; Bryan v. Mansion, 5 De G. & S. (Eng.) 737; Farrant v. Nichols, 9 Beav. (Eng.) 327; Edwards v. Edwards, 12 Beav. (Eng.) 97; Heath's Settlement, 23 Beav. 193.

It is not, however, a necessary result of the word issue being used in the sense of children in one clause that it is to be similarly construed in another clause, where it is surrounded by a different context. Carter v. Bentall, 2 Beav. (Eng.) 551; Hedges v. Harpur, 9 Beav. (Eng.) 479; Re Corrie's Will, 32 Beav. (Eng.) 426; Caulfield v. Maguire, 2 Jo. & Lat. (Eng.) 176; Louis v. Louis, 9 Jur., N. S. (Eng.) 244; Head v. Randall, 2 Yo. & Coll. C. C. (Eng.) 231; Williams v. Teale, 6 Hare (Eng.) 239. See the principle applied to marriage settlements, Re Warren's Trusts, 26 Ch. D. (Eng.) 208; 53 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 787; Re Biron, 1 L. R. Ir. 258. Still less can issue be restricted to children merely to make two different bequests correspond. Waldron v. Boulter, 22 Beav. (Eng.) 284.

Children Construed Issue.—The word

issue will not be cut down to children by the mere circumstance of the words issue and children being previously used synonymously if in those prior instances there was fair ground to conclude that both terms were used in the sense of issue. An estate was conveyed, after estates tail, to the use of four parties and their heirs, in trust, to sell, and the proceeds of the sale to be equally divided amongst these four parties or the respective issues of their bodies; in case they or any of them should happen to be dead at the time of the failure of the issue male to whom the estates tail were limited, share and share alike, namely to each of them or their respective children, one-fourth part thereof, provided, that if any of them should happen to be dead without issue, when there should be such a failure of issue, then to be equally divided among the survivors, or survivor, or their respective children, in case any of them should also be dead leaving issue of their bodies. Held, that issue was not restrained to children, but that all the children and grandchildren of each party took one-fourth per capita. The principal ground of the decision was that the testator had in view a time for the execution of the trusts which might be deferred till long after the death of all the children of the parties, the gift over, on the parties dying without issue, was also thought material. Wythe v. Thurlstone or Wythe v. Blackman, Amb. (Eng.) 555; 1 Ves. Sr. 196; 3 Ves. 258.

A remainder was limited to the "issue or children" of testator's daughters, on the death of the last surviving daughter, the property "to be equally divided among all such issue or children, share and share alike," etc. Held, that the word "issue" should be read as enlarging the scope of the limitation, and not as equivalent merely to "children," and that the issue of deceased children took by right of representation. Hall v. Hall, 140 Mass. 267. See also Vollar v. Carter, 4 El. & Bl. (Eng.) 173; 1 Jur., N. S. (Eng.) 279; 24 L. J., Q. B. (Eng.) 56.

In Dalzel v. Welch, 2 Sim. 319, testator, in a former bequest, had used the words issue and children indiscriminately and synonymously, and had made gift over, in default of issue living at death. He then bequeathed other estates to D for life, and after his decease among the issue of his body, as he should appoint; in default of appointment, among the issue living at his death equally in fee; and in case he should die in the lifetime of B, without issue of his body living at the time of his death, over. Held, that children meant issue and that an appointment by D, in favor of children only, was invalid, on the ground of its excluding the donee's grandchildren and great-grandchildren, who were objects of the power as being included under the denomination of issue. Compare Ryan v. Cowley, Ll. & Go. (Eng.) 10; Carter v. Bentall, 2 Beav. (Eng.) 551.

In the leading case of Gale v. Bennett, Amb. (Eng.) 681, testator bequeathed personal property upon trust for his daughter H for life and for her children at twenty-one; and in default of such issue, in trust for his other daughters, who should be living at the time of the death and failure of issue of H, and the child or children of such as should then be dead, as tenants in common; such children only to take their parent's share, but if there should be none of his other daughters, nor any issue of his other daughters, then living, over. H died childless. Held, that the grandchildren of another daughter of the testator, who died in his lifetime, were entitled, the word child in that part of the bequest being used as synonymous with issue. This case can be distinguished from Earl of Oxford v. Churchill, 3 Ves. & B. (Eng.) 68, but seems inconsistent with Swift v. Swift, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 168. In the latter case, however, Gale v. Bennett, Amb. (Eng.) 681, was not cited, and cannot, therefore, be considered overruled. See Horsepool v. Watson, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 383; Doe d. Simpson v. Simpson, 5 Scott (Eng.) 770; 4 Bing. N. C. 333; 3 M. & Gr. (Eng.) 929; Harley v. Mitford, 21 Beav. (Eng.) 280.

Royle v. Hamilton, 4 Ves. (Eng.) 437; Stonor v. Curwen, 4 Sim. (Eng.) 264.

Lawfully Begotten by A.—These words are not per se enough to limit a bequest to the issue of A to his children. Evans v. Jones, 2 Coll. (Eng.) 516; Caulfield v. Maguire, 2 Jo. & Lat. (Eng.) 176; Hayden v. Wiltshire, 3 T. R. (Eng.) 372. Compare Hampson v. Brandwood, 1 Madd. (Eng.) 381; Gordon v. Hope, 3 De G. & D. (Eng.) 352.

Offspring.—As to when this word will be construed issue and vice versa, Lister v. Tidd, 29 Beav. (Eng.) 618; Thompson v. Beasley, 3 Drew. (Eng.) 7; Bramble v. Billups, 4 Leigh (Eng.) 90; Allen v. Markle, 36 Pa. St. 117.

2. Issue Correlative with Parent—Sibley v. Perry.—When the word issue is used in reference to the parent of that issue, as where the issue are to take the share of the deceased parent, it must mean his children, that is, the word parent confines the word issue to the children of the taker.¹

1. ROMILLY, M. R., in Ross v. Ross, 20 Beav. (Eng.) 645; 649, Sibley v. Perry, 7 Ves. (Eng.) 522; Pruen v. Osborne, 11 Sim. (Eng.) 132; Hawk. Wills, *88. See also Ridgway v. Munketrick, 1 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 84; Crozier v. Crozier, 3 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 386; Edwards v. Edwards, 12 Beav. (Eng.) 97; Smith v. Horsfall, 25 Beav. (Eng.) 628; Maynard v. Wright, 26 Beav. (Eng.) 285; Rhodes v. Rhodes, 27 Beav. (Eng.) 413; Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. St. 481; King v. Savage, 121 Mass. 303; Palmer v. Horn, 84 N. Y. 516; Murray v. Bronson, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 217; Barstow v. Goodwin, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 416; King v. Savage, 122 Mass. 303.

In Sibley v. Perry, 7 Ves. (Eng.) 522, on which the principle is founded, a testator having bequeathed a sum of stock to A and B, with a direction that if either died before him, her lawful issue were to take the share to which their parents would have been entitled, and another sum of stock "to C and his lawful issue, if he, the parent, shall then be dead," bequeathed £140 stock to each of the lawful issue of D, E and F, who should be alive at the time of his death. D, E and F were dead at the time the will was made. Each of their descendants living at the testator's death claimed the sum of £140. LORD ELDON held that the occurrence of the word "parent" in the former bequests showed that the issue there spoken of were children only, and the word being thus once used in a restricted sense, should receive the same interpretation in the subsequent bequests.

The rule is the same if the gift be to the children of A living at a given period, and the issue of such as shall be then dead such issue to take their parent's share, although the gift to issue is distinct from the direction as to taking the share of the parent. Smith v. Horsfall, 25 Beav. (Eng.) 628; Maynard v. Wright, 26 Beav. (Eng.) 285.

The rule applies to devises of real estate. Bradshaw v. Melling, 19 Beav. (Eng.) 417.

Also, where the direction is that the issue shall take their father's or mother's share. Buckle v. Fawcett, 4 Hare (Eng.) 536. See Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. St. 484.

Where the gift is "to the issue of A then living, and the child or children of such of them as shall then be dead," issue means children. Fairchild v. Bushell, 32 Beav. (Eng.) 158.

Where a gift is made to issue, and the testator proceeds to speak of "issue," of such former mentioned "issue," it is clear he did not in the first instance use the word issue in its most comprehensive sense; and if he has also called the first "parents" of the second, the sense to which the word is limited must be that of children. Pope v. Pope, 14 Beav. (Eng.) 593; Williams v. Teale, 6 Hare (Eng.) 239.

Nor does it seem to be absolutely essential to such construction that the testator should have referred to the first mentioned "issue" as parents of the second. See MAULE, J., in Doe v. Rucastle, 8 C. B. (Eng.) 880.

Exception—Ross v. Ross.—A gift over in case the original legatees die without leaving any issue affords strong grounds for retaining the primary and more extended meaning of the word issue in the preceding gift; since by construing it as children in both clauses, it is clear that though the gift would take effect, yet it would do so at the expense of the remoter issue, who would take nothing; or by giving the word "issue," in the gift over only, its natural acceptance; the gift over is prevented taking effect, and intestacy is the consequence. This construction is also aided by a distinct gift to the issue followed by a direction that the issue shall take only a parent's share, as distinguished from a case like Sibley v. Perry, where the only gift to the issue is contained in the direction that they shall take the shares which their respective parents would have taken if living. In Ross v. Ross, 20 Beav. (Eng.) 645, testator bequeathed personality upon trust for his niece, C R for life, with remainder to the children of C R, who should be living at her decease equally, and the "issue, if any, then living of such of her children as may have died in her lifetime, each of her surviving children to take an equal share, and the issue, if more than one, of such of her children as may have died in her lifetime to take equally amongst them the part or share which their parent would have been entitled to if he or she had survived the said C R, and if but one, then to take a child's share." There was a gift over to residue on death of all testator's nieces, without leaving a child or issue. One of C R's children predeceased her, leaving no children, but only a grandchild, who survived C R. Held, that such grandchild took a child's share with C R's children. Assuming that upon the death of C R there was only a great-grandchild of C R alive, that great-grandchild, according to the construction contended for, could not take. "But then one of two things would follow, you must either cut down the meaning of the words of the gift over which I have just read, and then say that notwithstanding there was issue living of one of the nieces at the death of the survivor, or possibly a great many, thirteen or fourteen grandchildren, nevertheless, they should take nothing, and it should fall into the residue; or, if you give those words their natural acceptation, and say that that gift over does not take effect, you thus produce an intestacy, though there were a great number of grandchildren, who according to the construction of the word issue, of a child in the gift over, were objects of the testator's bounty. Now I find it extremely difficult to come to the conclusion that the testator could possibly, by the frame and scope of the will, have meant that. The whole thing is set right if you refer (which I admit is doing some violence to the language) in this part of the first gift to the issue, if more than one of them, such children to take equally amongst themselves that part or share which their parent would have been entitled to; if you refer the word parent there to such one of the children of the children of C R, that is, to the grandchildren of C R, who, if that parent had lived, would have taken the share which the child of C R, if that child had lived, would have taken; that is to say, it carries on the distribution per stirpes, not merely through the first degree but extending it even to the second. That makes intelligible the subsequent expression, 'that if there be but one of such issue, then that one is to take a child's share, but not a parent's share.' Therefore . . . I am of opinion that the word issue in this case is confined to the children of the parent, but that the word parent here does not mean the children of C R, but may mean a grandchild of C R. This makes the expression "issue," in the first part of the will, consistent with the use of it in the gift over, and is the only way in which the various parts of the will can be made quite consistent." ROMILLY, M. R., pp. 652, 653.

III. WHETHER ISSUE IS A WORD OF PURCHASE OR LIMITATION—

1. In Deeds and Marriage Articles.—In a deed, the word issue is always a word of purchase.¹

See also Pope v. Pope, 14 Beav. (Eng.) 591, 594; Anson v. Harris, 19 Beav. (Eng.) 210; Robinson v. Sykes, 23 Beav. (Eng.) 40; Rhodes v. Rhodes, 27 Beav. (Eng.) 413; King v. Savage, 122 Mass. 303.

Deeds.—The doctrine of Sibley v. Perry, 7 Ves. (Eng.) 522, applies to deeds as well as wills.

Harrington v. Lawrence, cited, 11 Sim. (Eng.) 138; Tatham v. Vernon, 29 Beav. (Eng.) 604; Barracough v. Shillito, 53 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 841; s. c., 32 W. R. (Eng.) 875. See also Anderson v. St. Vincent, 4 W. R. (Eng.) 304; 2 Jur., N. S. (Eng.) 607.

1. Elphinstone on Deeds, 318; Co. Litt. 20 b; LORD HARWICKE, in Bagshaw v. Spencer, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 582; KENYON, C. J., in Doe v. Collis, 4 T. R. 299; Lewis v. Bowers' Case, 11 Rep. 79 b; s. c., Tud. L. C., Real Prop. 37; SUGDEN, C., in Rochefort v. Fitzmaurice, 2 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 17; Williams v. Jekyl, 2 Ves. Sr. (Eng.) 681.

"In a deed no word, except the word 'heirs,' will pass an estate of inheritance, and hence the word issue cannot be a word of limitation. It is therefore a word of purchase in this case, because that is the only construction by which it can become operative, not because it is aptly a word of purchase." 2 Fearne, Cont. Rem. 249, § 509.

A limitation of real estate to issue gives life estates only. Rochefort v. Fitzmaurice, 2 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 17; Barron v. Barron, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 366;

2. In Wills—a. GENERAL PRINCIPLE—ISSUE COMPARED WITH HEIRS OF THE BODY.—Issue is prima facie a word of limitation, and means heirs of the body,¹ but may be construed a word of purchase if such is the intention of the testator to be collected from the will, and to show such intention requires a less demonstrative context than in the case of the more technical expression, heirs of the body.²

Fitzherbert v. Heathcote, cited in Bayley v. Morris, 4 Ves. (Eng.) 794.

It follows that a limitation to "A and his issue," there being no issue alive at the date of the deed, gives a life estate to A, and the issue take nothing, even if the limitation is in remainder, and issue are born before it takes effect. Makepiece v. Fletcher, 2 Com. Rep. (Eng.) 457; Wheeler v. Duke, 1 Cr. & Mee. (Eng.) 210; Dawson v. Dawson, 13 Ir. L. R. 472. See also Rocheport v. Fitzmaurice, 2 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 17; Barron v. Barron, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 366; Fitzherbert v. Heathcote, cited in Bayley v. Morris, 4 Ves. (Eng.) 794.

If there are issue at the date of the deed, such issue take per capita and jointly. Leigh v. Norbury, 13 Ves. (Eng.) 344; in Davenport v. Hanbury, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 257.

Executory Trusts—Marriage Articles.—Marriage articles are to be treated only as a memorandum of intentions which are to be carried out in such way as to effect the intention of the parties. But the court always carries out the executed settlement as it finds it. PEARSON, J., in re Warren's Trusts, 26 Ch. D. (Eng.) 217. Compare Re Dixon's Trusts, 1r. Rep., 4 Eq. 12.

There is no difference between the construction to be put on an executory trust created by marriage articles and on an executory trust created by will except so far as the former, by its very nature, furnishes more emphatically the means of ascertaining the intention of those who created the trust. Sackville West v. Holmesdale, 4 L. R., H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 543; 39 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 505.

In the case of an executory trust by marriage articles, in favor of a person in esse, and his issue, his children will take as purchasers, even in the absence of any indication that they should take by purchase; because they are considered as purchasers for valuable consideration; and in the case of an executory trust, the intent that the issue should take by purchase can be effectuated without sacrificing the primary intent of admitting all the issue; for the conveyance to be made in pursuance of the trust can be so framed that all the descendants shall take, before the estate can revert, or go over. So that where it is agreed to limit lands in remainder to or for the issue of the tenant for life, a strict settlement will be directed to be made upon the first and other sons in tail, remainder to the daughters. Smith Ex. Int., § 262.

Where the limitation to the ancestor, viewed by itself, would create a mere equitable estate, and the limitation to the issue a legal estate, or vice versa, the issue will take by purchase, in the same manner as the heirs of the body under similar circumstances. And if the issue cannot take by purchase, on account of the rule against perpetuities, the word issue will be construed a word of limitation, in cases where but for that rule it would be construed a word of purchase. Smith Ex. Int., § 262. As to executory trusts by will, see § III, 2 b, n.

¹ Roe d. Dodson v. Grew, Wilmot (Eng.) 272; Roddy v. Fitzgerald, 6 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 823; Woodhouse v. Herrick, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 352; Slater v. Dangerfield, 15 M. & W. (Eng.) 263; Bradley v. Cartwright, L. R., 2 C. P. (Eng.) 511; Guthrie's App., 37 Pa. St. 9; Angle v. Brosius, 43 Pa. St. 189; Ogden's App., 70 Pa. St. 501; Wistar v. Scott, 105 Pa. St. 200, 214; Reinvehl v. Shirk, 119 Pa. St. 108; King v. Savage, 121 Mass. 303; O'Byrne v. Feeley, 61 Ga. 77; Allen v. Craft (Ind.), 7 West Rep. 512, 517. In the absence of explanations, words showing that the term issue was used in a restrictive sense it is to be construed a word of limitation. Robins v. Quinliven, 79 Pa. St. 335; Carroll v. Burns, 108 Pa. St. 386; 55 Am. Rep. 778; Allen v. Craft (Ind.), 7 West Rep. 512, 517.

² Lees v. Mosley, 1 Yo. & Coll. (Eng.) 606. See also LORD KENYON, in Doe v. Collis, 4 T. R. (Eng.) 294; SIR EDWARD SUGDEN, in Ryan v.

Cowley, Ll. & G (Eng.) 7; Hawkins on Wills, 192; Bradley v. Cartwright, L. R., 2 C. P. (Eng.) 511; Re Wynch's Trusts, 5 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 188; s. c., 27 Eng. C. L. & Eq. Cas. 375; Smith Ex. Int., § 528; Wood, V. C., in Kavanagh v. Morland, Kay (Eng.) 24; 1 K. & J (Eng.) 362.

"Upon a careful examination of the authorities, we think that it may be safely laid down as a rule that in a devise, technical words or words of definite meaning shall always be construed according to their legal or definite effect, unless from other inconsistent words in the will it be quite clear that they are used in some other definite sense. Thus, if the words 'heirs of the body,' which are technical words, properly admitting only of one meaning, are used, it becomes necessary to show affirmatively that the testator meant clearly to use them as words of purchase, or more correctly, as words descriptive, not of all the descendants of the body, but of one definite class only of such descendants; it is not enough to raise a reasonable doubt whether he intended to use them as words of limitation, or to show a probable conjecture that he intended to designate children only by that phrase. Another instance of the application of the rule may be found in that class of cases in which 'sons' or 'children,' which in their proper sense are words of purchase, have been held to be words of limitation. There in like manner it must be demonstrated from the will, affirmatively and clearly, that by these expressions the testator meant all the descendants of the body to take as heirs.

"There is, however, a third class of cases, where a testator uses in his will an expression, in its ordinary use not of a technical nature and capable of more meanings than one. Now here the investigation takes a different course. It will be merely directed to the solution of the question in what sense the testator intends to use the expression, and to ascertain whether the evidence preponderates in favor of the one rather than the other meanings of the word in question, regard being always had to the prima facie sense, or to that in which the word is most ordinarily used, in weighing the evidence contained in the will upon which the court is ultimately to decide. The first point, therefore, to be considered is whether 'issue' be a word of this nature. Now we think that this sufficiently appears by referring to the various authorities. The first is the statute De Donis, 13 Ed. I, ch. 1, in which this word is used, and in which it sometimes means children and sometimes all the descendants, according to the context in which it is found. Thus, after stating the cases of estates upon condition, etc., it proceeds thus: 'In all the cases aforesaid after issue begotten and born (post prolem suscitata et exeuntem) between them to whom the lands were given under such condition heretofore, such feoffees had power to alien.' There it is plain issue means child, for the power exists as soon as the child is born.

"Again, the statute speaks of land reverting to the donor: 'If issue fail, in that there is no issue at all; or if any issue be and fail by death, or heir of the body of such issue failing.' In this sentence the word is used in two senses; first, as intending all descendants; and secondly, as including the children only; and here, too, the Latin word used in the original is not 'proles,' as before, but 'exitus' throughout the sentence. This appears a decisive authority for its double meaning, and the books abound with others to the same effect. In all of them it is treated as a word capable of being used in different senses, either as including all descendants, in which case it is of course a word of limitation, or as confined to immediate descendants, or some particular class of descendants living at a given time. Probably it will be found most frequently used in the former sense, and it therefore most frequently has the effect of giving an estate tail to the ancestor. It might even, perhaps, be conceded that this is prima facie its meaning. But the authorities clearly show that whatever be the prima facie meaning of the word 'issue,' it will yield to the intention of the testator to be collected from the will; and that it requires a less demonstrative context to show such intention than the technical expression 'heirs of the body' would do." ALDERSON, B., in Lees v. Mosley, 1 Yo. & Coll. (Eng.) 606. See also Slater v. Dangerfield, 15 M. & W. (Eng.) 263.

In Roe v. Grew, 2 Wils. (Eng.) 322, it was said that issue is a word of purchase or limitation, as will best effectuate the intention of the testator, and in Ginger v. White, WILLES, C. J., says: "It does not, ex vi termini, create an estate tail in a will as heirs of the body do in a deed, but only where it appears that the intent of the testator was that

b. LIMITATION TO A AND HIS ISSUE; WHEN NO GIFT OVER.—A limitation to A and his issue, there being no issue in esse at the time the limitation takes effect, in the absence of expressions indicating an unequivocal contrary intent, gives A an estate tail in realty,¹ the word should have that construction, or at least where it does not appear that the intent of the testator was otherwise." In Mandeville v. Carrick, 3 Ridg. P. C. (Eng.) 352, it was said that as issue cannot be used as a word of limitation in a deed, it is therefore even in a will technically a word of purchase. On the other hand, LORD THURLOW speaks of a devise to A and his issue as "the aptest way of describing an estate tail according to the statute." Hockley v. Mawbey, 1 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 149. In other cases the word is said to be ambiguous. Earl of Oxford v. Churchill, 3 Ves. & Bea. (Eng.) 67; Lyon v. Mitchell, 1 Madd. (Eng.) 473; Tate v. Clarke, 1 Beav. (Eng.) 105; Doe d. Gallini v. Gallini, 3 Ad. & El. (Eng.) 340.

It is submitted that the only way in which these conflicting positions can be reconciled is by adopting the principle stated in the text and explained by ALDERSON, B., in Lees v. Mosley. The case of Doe d. Cole v. Goldsmith, 7 Taunt. (Eng.) 209; 2 Marsh. (Eng.) 517, can only be distinguished from Hockley v. Mawbey by the substitution of issue for heirs of the body. Compare the limitations in Doe d. Davy v. Burnisall, 6 T. R. (Eng.) 30; Lees v. Mosley, 1 Yo. & Coll. (Eng.) 589; Merest v. James, 1 Brod. & Bing. (Eng.) 484, with those in Doe d. Strong v. Goff, 11 East (Eng.) 668, so severely criticized by both LORD ELDON and LORD REDESDALE in Jesson v. Wright, 2 Bligh (Eng.) 1.

In the United States the position in the text is sustained by STRONG, J., in Angle v. Brosius, 43 Pa. St. 187; Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. St. 481; Kleppner v. Laverty, 70 Pa. St. 70; Wistar v. Scott, 105 Pa. St. 200, 214; Reinvehl v. Shirk, 119 Pa. St. 108; Chelton v. Henderson, 9 Gill (Md.) 436; McPherson v. Snowden, 19 Md. 197, 228; Estate of McDonnell, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 94; O'Byrne v. Feeley, 61 Ga. 77; King v. Savage, 121 Mass. 303.

In Kingsland v. Rapelye, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 1, it was said that the words "lawful issue" have as extensive an import as "heirs of the body," and when used in a device, by which the immediate devisee takes an unrestricted freehold, without any words to modify or restrict its meaning and application, it is a word of limitation and of the same effect with heirs of the body. This decision rests upon English authorities decided before Lees v. Mosley, 1 Yo. & Coll. (Eng.) and so far as inconsistent with the views expressed by BARON ALDERSON cannot be considered of value outside of New York. Moreover, the above expression is not really inconsistent with Lees v. Mosley, and only amounts to a statement of the prima facie meaning of the word.

When the word issue is manifestly used as descriptive of devisees, and is also restricted to such issue as shall be living at a specified time, it is always construed as a word of purchase embracing all lineal descendants of the person named, in being at the time specified, unless it clearly appears from the context that the testator intended otherwise. STERRETT, J., in Wistar v. Scott, 105 Pa. St. 200, 215; citing Hayton v. Wilshire, 3 T. R. (Eng.) 372; Hockley v. Mawbey, 1 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 150; Freeman v. Parsley, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 421; Leigh v. Norbury, 13 Ves. (Eng.) 340; Wythe v. Thurlston, Amb. (Eng.) 555; Davenport v. Hanbury, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 257; Hawkins's Wills, 187, 188; Cook v. Cook, 2 Vern. (Eng.) 545; Bradshaw v. Melling, 19 Beav. (Eng.) 417; Ross v. Ross, 20 Beav. (Eng.) 645.

1. Wild's Case, 6 Co. (Eng.) 16 b, 17 a; Prior on Issue, § 43; Smith Ex. Int., §§ 503, 506; Lyons v. Mitchell, 1 Madd. (Eng.) 473; Tate v. Clark, 1 Beav. (Eng.) 100; LORD HALE, in King v. Melling, 1 Vent. (Eng.) 220; Cook v. Cook, 2 Vern. (Eng.) 545; Broadhurst v. Morris, 2 B. & Ad. (Eng.) 1. See Davie v. Stevens, 1 Doug. (Eng.) 321; Searle v. Barter, 2 Bos. & Pul. (Eng.) 485. The effect is the same where the limitation is to A and his children, there being no children in esse at the time the will takes effect. Byng v. Byng, 10 H. L. C. (Eng.) 178; Wild's Case, 6 Co. (Eng.) 16 b, 17 a; Clifford v. Koe, 5 App. Cas. (Eng.) 447; Shearman v. Angel, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 351.

As to the application of the princi-and an absolute interest in personality;¹ but if there are ple see Re Buckmaster's Estate, 47 L. T. (Eng.) 514.

The rule which construes "issue" as a word of limitation in devises and executed trusts does not apply so strictly to a direction to settle lands by way of executory trusts. Meure v. Meure, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 265; Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville, Cos. & Talb. (Eng.) 3; Parker v. Bolton, 5 L. J., Ch., N. S. (Eng.) 98; Hadwen v. Hadwen, 23 B. 551. See observations of PEARSON, J., in Re Warren's Trusts, 26 Ch. D. (Eng.) 217. Compare CHRISTIAN, L. J., in Re Dixon's Trusts, Ir. Rep., 4 Eq. 12; Smith Ex. Int., § 506.

The principle in the text is founded upon Wild's Case, 6 Co. (Eng.) 16 b, 17 a, and has been recognized in Chrystie v. Phyfe, 19 N. Y. 344, 354; Rogers v. Rogers, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 503; Guthrie's App., 37 Pa. St. 9; 21; Haldeman v. Haldeman, 40 Pa. St. 29; Angle v. Brosius, 43 Pa. St. 187; Wheatland v. Dodge, 10 Met. (Mass.) 502; Nightingale v. Burrell, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 104; Biggs v. McCarty, 86 Ind. 352, 357; Miller v. Hurt, 12 Ga. 359; Jackson v. Coggin, 29 Ga. 403; Hoyle v. Jones, 35 Ga. 40; Moon v. Stone, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 130; McCroan v. Pope, 17 Ala. 612; Mimmo v. Stewart, 21 Ala. 682; Van Zant v. Morris, 25 Ala. 285; Shearman v. Angel, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 351; Parkman v. Bowdoin, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 359. Compare Hilleary v. Hilleary, 26 Md. 275; Jones v. Jones, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 236; Gilpin v. Williams, 25 Ohio St. 283.

In Carr v. Estill, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 309, the supreme court of Kentucky declined to follow Wild's case, and held that a devise to a woman and "her children," she being unmarried and having no children at the time, conferred an estate for life, with remainder to after-born children. See Stonebraker v. Zollickoffer, 52 Md. 155, 159. But compare Benson v. Wright, 4 Md. Ch. 278; Shotts v. Poe, 47 Md. 513.

Quere, whether the decision could have been the same if the limitation had been to A and her issue. Wild's case has never been followed in Tennessee. Turner v. Ivie, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 222.

Care must be taken to distinguish a limitation to A and his children from a limitation to the children after the decease of the parent. Chrystie v. Phyfe, 19 N. Y. 344, 354; Akers Exrs. v.

Akers, 8 C. E. Green (N. J.) 26; Beacroft v. Strawn, 67 Ill. 28, 33.

For further discussion see WILLS.

Child en Ventre sa Mere.—The fact that there is, at the time of the devise, a child of the devisee en ventre sa mere, does not take the case out of the rule. Roper v. Roper, L. R., 3 C. P. (Eng.) 32, 35. But see Cleveland v. Spilman, 25 Ind. 95.

1. Prior on Issue, § 43; Wms. Exrs. —, *1110; Houston v. Ives, 2 Eden (Eng.) 216; Gawler v. Cadby, Jal. (Eng.) 346; Chandler v. Price, 3 Ves (Eng.) 99; Dorm v. Penny, 19 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 547; Crawford v. Trotter, 4 Madd. (Eng.) 361; Parkin v. Knight, 15 Sim. (Eng.) 83; Martin v. Swannell, 2 Beav. (Eng.) 249; Beaver v. Nowell, 25 Beav. (Eng.) 587; Stokes v. Heron, 12 Cl. & F. (Eng.) 161. See also Lyon v. Mitchell, 1 Madd. (Eng.) 467; Gibbs v. Tait, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 132; Turner v. Capel, 9 Sim. (Eng.) 158; Butler v. Ommamney, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 70; Pearson v. Stephen, 2 Dav. & Cl. (Eng.) 328; s. c., 5 Bligh 203; Tate v. Clarke, 1 Beav. (Eng.) 100; Dick v. Lacey, 8 Beav. (Eng.) 214; Hedges v. Harpur, 9 Beav. (Eng.) 479; s. c., 3 De G. & J. (Eng.) 129; Prentice v. Brooke, 5 L. R. Ir. 435, 453; In re Stanhope's Trusts, 27 Beav. (Eng.) 200; Merryman v. Merryman, 5 Munf. (Va.) 440.

So in South Carolina, if there is no bequest over. Henry v. Archer, Bailey's Eq. (S. Car.) 535, 545. See Ferril v. Talbot, Riley (S. Car.) 247.

So where the bequest was to A and his children. Payne v. Hanklin, 5 Sim. (Eng.) 458; Read v. Willis, 1 Coll. (Eng.) 86; Scott v. Scott, 15 Sim. (Eng.) 47; Snowball v. Proctor, 2 Yo. & Coll. (Eng.) 478; s. c., 7 Jur. (Eng.) 619; Dougherty v. Dougherty, 2 Strobh. (S. Car.) Eq. 63; Shearman v. Angel, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 351; Van Zant v. Morris, 25 Ala. 285.

In some cases it has been laid down that under a bequest to A and his children, A takes for life only with remainder to his children, if any should be subsequently born. Audsley v. Horn, 26 Beav. (Eng.) 195; s. c., 1 De G. F. & J. (Eng.) 226. See also Paine v. Wagner, 12 Sim. (Eng.) 188; s. c., 2 Dr. & W. (Eng.) 107; Bain v. Lescher, 11 Sim. (Eng.) 397; Armstrong v. Armstrong, L. R., 7 Eq. Cas. 1018; In re Owen's Trusts, L. R., 12 issue in esse, they take concurrently with A as purchasers.¹

Eq. Cas. 316. MR. HAWKINS considers this untenable in the present condition of the law. Hawkins on Wills, app. II, p. *316. See Re Parkinson's Trusts, 1 Sim., N. S. (Eng.) 245. As to recognition of rule in Wild's Case in United States, see ante.

The position in the text is not affected by Ex parte Wynch, 5 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 188, approving Knights v. Ellis, 2 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 570, unless there is something to show that the word issue was intended as a word of purchase, or to confine the first taker to an estate for life. See § III, 2 c, (2). Still less can it be considered inconsistent with Audsley v. Horn, 1 De G. F. & J. 226, since in that case the bequest was to A and her children. Now as children is prima facie a word of purchase, while issue is a word of limitation, it is manifest that circumstances under which the former will be held a word of purchase cannot affect the construction of the latter. On the other hand it would seem to be equally clear that whenever the word children is construed a word of limitation, a fortiori would the word issue be so construed? See observations of ALDERSON, B., in Lees v. Mosley, § III, 2 a, note.

On the other hand, in Hawkins on Wills, *197, it is said: "The rule that issue is prima facie a word of limitation does not extend to bequests of personal estate. . . . On this point Ex parte Wynch establishes a distinction with respect to issue similar to that in Forth v. Chapman, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 663, with respect to 'die without leaving issue.' . . . And although it was formerly held that a bequest of personal estate to A and his issue was an absolute gift to A (Parkin v. Knight, 15 Sim. 83), it would appear that this construction would not now be adopted, even though, as was the case in Parkin v. Knight (but also in Forth v. Chapman), real and personal estate be given together by the same words. A gift of real estate to A and his issue of course confers an estate tail, but a bequest of personal estate to A and his issue would seem to be governed by the same rules (so far as the gift to the issue is concerned), as a bequest to the issue of A simpliciter. Thus, if the gift be immediate, A and his issue (if any), living at the testator's death, would take in joint tenancy, and if the gift be deferred, issue subsequently born before the period of distribution would be admitted along with them, and if no issue had come into existence before the period of distribution, A would take the whole." No authority is cited in support of these views; they have, however, been approved in general terms in Myer's Appeal, 49 Pa. St. 111.

In this case, however, as in Ex parte Wynch, the preceding bequest was to A for life, and hence necessarily governed by different principles. § III, 2 c, (2).

MR. HAWKINS substantially agrees with the text when he says: "If no issue had come into existence before the period of distribution, A would take the whole." He differs, however, from the text, in inferring from Ex parte Wynch that the rule that issue is prima facie a word of limitation does not extend to bequests of personal estate. All that that case decided was that a gift expressly for life to the first taker rebutted the prima facie presumption. In the absence of such controlling expression it was expressly admitted that the prima facie meaning prevailed. See § III, 2 c, (2), note; Myer's Appeal, 49 Pa. St. 111, cannot be construed as going further. Compare Smith's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 9; Pott's Appeal, 30 Pa. St. 168. See also LORD CHELMSFORD, in Williams v. Lewis, 6 H. L. C. (Eng.) *1013, *1020, *1021; Prentice v. Brooke, 5 L. R. Ir. 435, 453.

1. Wild's Case, 6 Co. (Eng.), 16 b, 17 a; Clay v. Pennington, 7 Sim. (Eng.) 370. See Nightingale v. Burrell, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 104; Biggs v. McCarty, 86 Ind. 352, 357; Jackson v. Coggin, 29 Ga. 403; Hoyle v. Jones, 35 Ga. 40; Mimmo v. Stewart, 21 Ala. 682; Van Zant v. Morris, 25 Ala. 285; Hawkins on Wills, 197; Hathaway v. Leary, 2 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 264; Shearman v. Angel, 1 Bailey Ch. (S. Car.) 361; Johnson v. Johnson, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) 345; Cleveland v. Spilman, 25 Ind. 95.

"If A devises his lands to B and to his children or issues, and he hath not any issue at the time of the devise. . . the same is an estate tail; for the intent of the deviser is manifest and certain that his children or issues should take, and as immediate devisees they cannot take, because they are not in rerum natura, and by way of remainder they cannot take, for that was not his intent, for the gift is immediate, therefore there such words shall be taken as words of limitation, scil. as much as children or issues of his body But if a man devises land to A and to his children or issue, and they then have issue of their bodies, there this express intent may take effect, according to the rule of the common law, and no manifest and certain intent appears in the will to the contrary. And therefore in such case they shall have but a joint estate for life." Wild's Case, 6 Co. (Eng.) 16 b, 17 a.

That a gift to A and his issue or to A and his children confers a joint interest has never been doubted where the word used is "children." Alcock v. Allen, 2 Freem. (Eng.) 185; Buffar v. Bradford, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 220. See Hathaway v. Leary, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 264; Shearman v. Angel, 1 Bailey's Ch. (S. Car.) 362; Johnson v. Johnson, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) 345.

So as to personality, 2 Wms. Exrs. *1094; De Witte v. De Witte, 11 Sim. (Eng.) 41; Paine v. Wagner, 12 Sim. (Eng.) 184; Beales v. Crisford, 13 Sim. (Eng.) 592; LORD CHELTENHAM in Crockett v. Crockett, 2 Phill. C. C. (Eng.) 555; Gordon v. Whieldon, 11 Beav. (Eng.) 170; Atcheson v. Atcheson, 11 Beav. (Eng.) 485; Mason v. Clarke, 17 Beav. (Eng.) 130; see Cunningham v. Murray, 1 De G. & J. (Eng.) 366; Combe v. Hughes, L. R., 14 Eq. 415; Newhill v. Newhill, 12 Eq. Cas. 432; s. c., L. R., 7 Ch. App. 253; Roper v. Roper, L. R., 3 C. P. (Eng.) 35; Annable v. Patch, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 360; Parker v. Converse, 5 Gray (Mass.) 336, 339; Biggs v. McCarty, 86 Ind. 352, 357; Jackson v. Coggin, 29 Ga. 403; Hoyle v. Jones, 35 Ga. 40. But see Audley v. Horn, 1 De G. F. & J. 226. Otherwise of course where the word children has been explained by a preceding limitation to testator's "living heirs." McKee's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 571.

Opinions have, however, been entertained that in a gift to A and his issue, the word issue is always a word of limitation; whether there be any issue or not, and that, therefore, under any circumstances, A takes an estate tail in realty and an absolute interest in personality. This is the effect of the judgment of LORD HARDWICKE, in Lampley v. Blower, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 397, and is sustained by Jarman's Powell on De- vises, vol. 2, p. 508, and 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *411. See also Harvey v. Towell, 7 Hare (Eng.) 231, 235. LORD HARDWICKE gets rid of the authority of Wild's Case by stating that when it was decided it had not been fully settled that "issue" was a word of limitation as strong as "heirs of the body," and it is on the same ground of an inflexible force in the word issue that MR. JARMAN founds his conclusion. That issue is not as fully a word of limitation as heirs of the body is evident from the judgment of BARON ALDERSON, in Lees v. Mosley (see III, 2 a, n), so that the foundation for the argument fails; but it is not a little singular that in King v. Melling, 1 Vent. (Eng.) 229, the only case cited by LORD HARDWICKE and MR. JARMAN to sustain their position, LORD HALE, apparently with a view to preventing the inference they draw from his decision expressly says: "If the devise were to B, and the issue of his body, having no issue at the time, it would be an estate tail; I agree, it would be otherwise if there were issue at the time." And that this is no mistake of the reporter appears by the same passage occurring in 3 Keb. (Eng.) 98. The judgment of LORD WORTHINGTON, in Houston v. Ives, 2 Eden (Eng.) 216, leads to the same result, for he comes to the conclusion that, in a joint gift to the ancestor and issue, "issue" was equivalent to "heirs of the body," expressly on the ground that there were no issue at the time. See Clay v. Pennington, 7 Sim. (Eng.) 370; Prior on Issue, §§ 45, 46.

In the case of personality since the decision in Ex parte Wynch, 5 De G. M. & G. 188, there would seem to be no room for doubt. Hawkins on Wills, *197, ante, note. Nevertheless it is said by SERGEANT WILLIAMS that "where personal estate is given in terms which, if applied to real estate, would create an estate tail, the property so bequeathed vests absolutely in the first taker, and consequently devolves at his death on his executors and administrators, whether he has issue or not." 2 Wms. Exrs. *1107, citing Lyon v. Mitchell, 1 Madd. (Eng.) 475; Ward v. Bevil, 1 Y. & Jerv. (Eng.) 525; Byng v. Lord Strafford, 5 Beav. (Eng.) 558; Williams v. Lewis, 6 H. L. Cas. *1013, *1020; Bennett v. Bennett, 2 Drew. & Sm. (Eng.) 226.

In none of these cases, with the exception of Lyon v. Mitchell, 1 Madd. 467, was the bequest to A and his issue simpliciter. In that case the personal estate was directed to be divided equally amongst testator's four sons, share and share alike, as tenants in common, and to the issue of their several and respective bodies lawfully begotten, with a limitation over to survivors in case any of them died without issue living at time of his death. Testator died leaving four sons and two daughters. Whether or not he left any grandchildren, issue of the sons, does not appear (p. 468). There were none at time of making will (p. 473). Held, that the sons took absolute interests, but that on the death of any one of them without issue his share survived to his brothers. Much reliance was placed by PLUMER, V. C., upon the fact that the words of distribution were annexed to the bequest to the sons and not to that to the issue, "because if it had been intended that the issue were also to take with their parents the natural course would have been to give the property to J, E, B and G and their issue; to take as tenants in common, share and share alike, but by interposing the words share and share alike between the persons who are named and the issue it seems more natural the first persons named, namely, the four sons, are the persons who are to take share and share alike as tenants in common, and all that follows is only to express by words of limitation the quantum of interest they are to take." Much reliance was also placed upon the fact that the four sons, when the will was made, had no issue, and that therefore if the bequest to the issue of the sons was by words of purchase it was in favor of persons not existing. Subsequent cases hold this latter circumstance immaterial, provided there were issue in esse at the time the limitation to the ancestor takes effect (see post). Since, therefore, it does not distinctly appear that there were issue in esse at the time the will took effect, and the decision was expressly placed upon the ground that the words of distribution were annexed only to the gift to the ancestor, and that there were no issue in esse at the time of making the will, this case affords no support to the position that a bequest to A and his issue, there being issue in esse at the time the gift takes effect vest the absolute interest in A. All that can be inferred from it is that words of distribution annexed solely to the gift to the ancestor prima facie show that the word issue is used as a word of limitation. In the absence of binding authority, it is submitted that the position taken in the text and sustained by Hawkins on Wills is more in accordance with the spirit of the decision in Ex parte Wynch, § III, c (2), and Lees v. Mosley, § III, 2 a, n. (3), than to vest the sole and absolute interest in the first taker. Compare 2 Wms. Exrs. *1110, n., *1114. See however Prentice v. Brooke, 5 L. R. Ir. 435, 453.

Cases like Goodright v. Wright, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 397, better reported 1 Strange (Eng.) 127, and Ward v. Bevil, 1 Y. & Jerv. (Eng.) 525, can generally be referred to the effect of a gift over upon indefinite failure of issue or explained upon the principle of substitution.

Thus where a testator bequeathed all his personal property not before disposed of by will to trustees in trust for his five sons "and their respective issue (if any), such issue to take per stirpes and not per capita, to be divided amongst them in equal shares and proportions, the shares of such of them as shall have attained the age of twenty-one to be paid them respectively forthwith after my decease, and the shares of such of them as shall be under the age of twenty-one years to be paid to them when and as they shall respectively attain such age," it was held by the house of lords, reversing the M. R., that the issue of the sons were intended to take no interest, but by way of substitution in the event of any one of the sons dying in the testator's lifetime, and hence the sons who survived that period took absolutely. Pearson v. Stephens, 2 Dow. & Cl. (Eng.) —; s. c., 5 Bligh, N. S. 203.

To this principle may be referred Gibbs v. Tait, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 132; Donn v. Penney, 19 Ves. Jr. 544; Dick v. Lacey, 8 Beav. (Eng.) 214; Hedges v. Harpur, 3 De G. & J. (Eng.) 129; 9 Beav. (Eng.) 479; Butler v. O'maney, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 70; Prentice v. Brooke, 5 L. R. Ir. 435. See Re Stanhope's Trusts, 27 Beav. (Eng.) 201; Lampley v. Blower, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 397.

To justify such a construction there must be something in the will to show that the issue were meant to take by substitution for their parents. As to what circumstances will be held sufficient for that purpose, each case must stand much upon its own footing. Prior on Issue, §§ 77, 78; Re Stanhope's Trusts, 27 Beav. (Eng.) 201, 204; Bebb v.

Beckwith, 2 Beav. (Eng.) 308; Slave v. Fooks, 9 Sim. (Eng.) 386; Prentice v. Brooke, 5 L. R. Ir. 435. For further discussion see LEGACIES and DEVISES.

In Audsley v. Yard, 1 De G. F. & J. 226, it was said that the proper construction of a bequest to A and her children was to A for life, with remainder to the children. But in that case there were no children in esse at time the bequest took effect. This case, of course, cannot be considered as deciding the nature of the corresponding limitation where the word issue is used. It does, however, afford ground for believing that slight circumstances will be considered sufficient to show that the testator intended the issue to take in remainder after the parent. Hawkins on Wills, *197; 2 Jarman on Wills (3rd Am. ed.), 240, n. (f).

Thus if there is a gift over in the event of A dying without issue living at his death, the issue will take as purchasers in remainder after the death of A. Henry v. Means, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 328; Cleveland v. Havens, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 101.

For analogous cases where the word children is used see Crawford v. Trotter, 4 Madd. (Eng.) 361; Morse v. Morse, 2 Sim. (Eng.) 485; Crocket v. Crocket, 2 Phill. C. C. (Eng.) 553; Vaughan v. Headfoot, 10 Sim. (Eng.) 639; De Witte v. De Witte, 11 Sim. (Eng.) 41; Dawson v. Bourne, 16 Beav. (Eng.) 29; Mason v. Clarke, 17 Beav. (Eng.) 126, 131; Cormack v. Copous, 17 Beav. (Eng.) 397; Sisson v. Seabrey, 1 Sumn. (C. C.) 242; Nebinger v. Upp, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 68; Bridges v. Wilkins, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 342; Faribault v. Taylor, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 219; Goss v. Eberhart, 29 Ga. 546; Dunn v. Bank of Mobile, 2 Ala. 152; Furlow v. Merrill, 23 Ala. 705; Shearman v. Angel, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 357.

A gift to the survivors of a class and the issue of such survivor, such issue to take their parents' share only, is a gift to the parents for life with remainder to their children, and not in substitution. Parsons v. Coke, 21 Drew. (Eng.) 296.

Time When Existence or Nonexistence of Issue Is Important.—Under the rule in Wild's Case, 6 Co. (Eng.) 16 b, 17 a, the existence or nonexistence of issue or children at the time the devise or bequest takes effect and not merely at the time it is made, is important as affecting the construction of the instrument. Such is not the literal language of all the cases, but since the impossibility of giving the children or issue an estate jointly with their ancestor is the main reason for giving the ancestor an estate tail, and as this impossibility does not exist if there are children or issue living at the time of the testator's death, whatever might have been the case at the date of the will, the existence or nonexistence of issue at the death of the testator, if the gift be immediate, would seem to be the important point.

Thus in Buffar v. Bradford, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 220, a testator devised real and personal estate to A and the children of her body. A had no child at the time of making the will, but one was born in the testator's lifetime and A predeceased him. It was contended that A took an estate tail, and that therefore the devise lapsed, but LORD HARDWICKE held the child entitled. See Butler v. Ommaney, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 70; Donn v. Penny, 19 Ves. Jr. 544.

But in Goodright v. Wright, 1 Strange 25, 32, and Lyon v. Mitchell, 1 Madd. (Eng.) 467, the limitations were held to create estates tail expressly on the ground that the testator could not be "supposed to have had any particular affection for the issue, there being none in esse at the time of the devise."

If the gift be deferred, the ancestor will take jointly with children or issue living at the testator's death and with those subsequently born before the period of distribution. Hawkins on Wills, *197, *199; Cunningham v. Murray, 1 De G. & S. (Eng.) 366.

Devise to A and his issue living at his death creates an estate tail in A. University of Oxford v. Clifton, 1 Eden (Eng.) 473; Jenkins v. Hughes, 8 H. L. Cas. 571, 585.

In such case it is clear the issue cannot take as joint tenants with him, since the objects are not ascertainable until the death of the parent. It is only through him that they can become entitled, and the case falls, therefore, within the principle of the rule in Wild's case, namely, that the parent must take an estate tail in order to let in the other objects. Had the devise been to A for life with remainder to the issue living at his death, the case would have been different. All the objects might then have taken by purchase. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.), *413. See Lethrenhier v. Tracy, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 774, 784; s. c., Amb. (Eng.) 204, 220.

Words of Distribution and Limitation.—If there are issue in esse at the time the will takes effect, superadded words of limitation and distribution, annexed to the interest of both parents and issue, merely denote the quantity and quality of the estate devised.¹ Superadded words of distribution and limitation annexed to the interest of the issue alone, there being issue in esse, confer upon the ancestor an estate for life with remainder to the issue.² If there are no issue, neither words of distribution³ nor limita-

1. This is undoubtedly the case where the word used is children. Co. Litt. 9 a; Oates d. Hatterley v. Jackson, 2 Stra. (Eng.) 1172.

And if the position taken in Wild's Case, 6 Co. 16 b, 17 a, that issue in being at the time the devise takes effect take jointly with their parents, is correct, the decision in Oates d. Hatterley v. Jackson could have been the same had issue been the word used.

Effect of Superadded Words When No Issue in Esse.—The insertion of superadded words of tenancy in common or inheritance annexed to the interest of both parents and issue militates so strongly against the issue taking by descent from the ancestor, that it is apprehended they must at least render that construction untenable, even when there are no issue in esse at the time the will takes effect. Prior on Issue, § 58.

Superadded Words Annexed to Interest of Parent Alone.—Words importing tenancy in common annexed to the interest of the parent alone rebut the presumption that the issue take as purchasers. Lyon v. Mitchell, 1 Madd. (Eng.) 467, ante, § III, b, n. (3). See also Hawkins on Wills, *194; Smith Ex. Int., § 529; Prior on Issue, §§ 54, 57.

2. When the word used is children, they take as purchasers. When the gift is to issue, the limitation will be construed as if to A for life, and after his decease to his issue. See § III, 2. Whether the word employed is issue or children, the great difficulty is to determine whether the superadded words are annexed to the interest of the ancestor or the issue. Thus devise to A and to all and every the child and children, whether male or female, of her body lawfully issuing and unto his, her and their heirs and assigns forever as tenants in common. A died in lifetime of testator, leaving ten children, who survived her. Held, that A took an estate for life, with remainder to the children in fee. Jeffery v. Honeywood, 4 Madd. (Eng.) 398. But under a devise to A and her children begotten by B her husband and their heirs forever, A and her children take a fee as joint tenants. Oates d. Hatterley v. Jackson, 2 Stra. (Eng.) 1172.

The only substantial difference between the cases seems to be the substitution of the words his, her or their in Jeffery v. Honeywood for the simple "their" of Oates v. Jackson, 2 Str. 1172, thereby showing the testator's idea that it was probable that only one, and that either male or female, might become entitled to his bounty, whereas, if he had intended the mother to take as tenant in common in fee with her children, in no case could his estate have gone to one male, for even if the mother had died in his lifetime, leaving one son, her share must, it is apprehended, have lapsed. In Oates v. Jackson, on the contrary, the testator intended more than one person to take in fee, and this raises an inference equally strong, that he meant to apply the word heirs, according to the natural purport of the sentence, to the mother as well as the children, especially as there was only one child at time of making his will. See also Gardner v. Pulteney, 2 Eden (Eng.) 323; Prior on Issue, § 54.

Superadded words of distribution alone, unless the fee or absolute interest were vested in the issue, would probably be insufficient. See Ogden's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 501, 509; Roddy v. Fitzgerald, 6 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 823.

As to superadded words of limitation alone, compare III, e.

3. Tate v. Clarke, 1 Beav. (Eng.) 100; Ogden's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 501, 509. See LORD CRANWORTH'S comment upon Tate v. Clarke, in Ex parte Wynch, 5 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 210.

"It is well settled that a devise to the lawful issue of the first taker is prima facie a limitation to the heirs of the body of the devisee, and therefore vests a fee tail; and this is the case even where the devise to the first taker is ex.

tion annexed to the interest of the issue will prevent an estate tail vesting in the ancestor,¹ but words of distribution and limitation together may have such effect.²

c. LIMITATION TO A FOR LIFE, AND AFTER HIS DECEASE TO HIS ISSUE; WHEN NO GIFT OVER—(1) As to Realty.—Under the rule in Shelly's case, a devise to A for life, and after his decease to his issue, vests in A an estate tail.³

pressly for life. It requires more than mere words of distribution to limit this prima facie effect of the phrase. The words "in equal shares," without something else to indicate the intention of the testator, will not reduce the inheritance to a mere life estate. Even the words 'as tenants in common' will not of themselves limit the entail." AGNEW, J., in Ogden's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 509; Smith on Ex. Int., § 475.

1. Franklin v. Lacy, 6 Madd. (Eng.) 258; s. c., 2 Bligh (Eng.) 59, n. See Smith Ex. Int., § 516; LORD TALBOT, in Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville, Cas. Talb. (Eng.) 3.

Limitation to A and Particular Class of Issue.—In Franklin v. Lacy the limitation was to A, and the issue of his body lawfully to be begotten and to the heirs of such issue forever chargeable with a mortgage. Whether or not the result would have been the same if the limitation had been to a particular class of issue different from that which would have taken by descent may well be considered doubtful. In Lovelace v. Lovelace, Cro. Eliz. 40, a devise of gavelkind lands (Perot's Case, Moore (Eng.) 368, 371) to a man and his eldest issue male, was held to confer an estate for life only, though he had no child, and it was said that the construction would have been the same though he had a child. This decision was approved by LORD, C. J. EYRE, in Dobber d. Trollope v. Trollope, Ambler (Eng.) 453, 463, in a passage in which he distinguished it from a devise to a man and his eldest heir male. The authority of Lovelace v. Lovelace has been much impaired by Doe d. Garrod v. Garrod, 2 Barn. & Ad. (Eng.) *87; 22 E. C. L. 46.

The latter case may perhaps be distinguished from it by the fact that there was a gift over if the life tenant had no son. Compare § III, c. (1).

2. Doe d. Davy v. Burnalls, 6 Durn. & E. (Eng.) 30, 34; s. c., Burnalls v. Davy, Bos. & Pul. (Eng.) —; Doe d. Gilman v. Elvey, 4 East (Eng.) 313.

See Powell v. Board of Missions, 49 Pa. St. 46, 53. Under such a limitation the ancestor takes for life only, and the issue a remainder in fee, which will be vested or contingent according to the nature of the ulterior limitations.

Effect of Expressing an Implied Condition.—A limitation to A and his issue, if he should leave any issue, will not of itself create a contingent interest in favor of the issue by purchase, and prevent the ancestor from taking an estate tail, because the condition is necessarily implied.

Smith Ex. Int., § 518; Shaw v. Weigh, 2 Stra. (Eng.) 798; 2 Strange (Eng.) 798; s. c., 1 Eq. C. Abr. 184, pl. 28.

3. Jarman on Wills, *335; Shaw v. Weigh, 2 Stra. (Eng.) 798; Franks v. Price, 6 Scott 710; s. c., 5 Bing. N. C. 37; s. c., 3 Beav. 182; Roddy v. Fitzgerald, 6 H. L. C. (Eng.) 823. See LORD HALE, in King v. Mellings, 1 Vent. (Eng.) 229; ALDERSON, B., in Lees v. Mosley, 1 Yo. & Coll. (Eng.) 610; Goodright v. Wright, 1 Stra. (Eng.) 321. Roe v. Davis, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 332; Carroll v. Burns, 108 Pa. 386.

In Harrison v. Harrison, 7 M. & Gr. 938 (E. C. L. R., vol. 49) the testator devised his estates to his children as tenants in common, with remainder to their issue as tenants in common with no gift over; the words importing distribution among the issue being held to mean distribution per stirpes only. The children were held to take as tenants in common in tail. The case is thus an authority that under a devise to A for life, with remainder to his issue, if neither words of limitation nor distribution be annexed to the gift to the issue, A takes an estate tail, although there be no gift over on failure of his issue, and although the issue be capable of taking the fee as purchasers. Hawkins on Wills, *190. See Fearne 181, 182, 183, 184, 193; Kingsland v. Rapelye, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 6; Paxson v. Leferts, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 59, 75; Rancel v. Creswell, 30 Pa. St. 158; Al-

Words of Distribution and Limitation.—Where there is a devise to one for life, with remainder to his issue as tenants in common, with a limitation to the heirs general of the issue, the issue take as purchasers in fee.¹ Words of distribution annexed to the gift to the issue, although unaccompanied by superadded words of limitation, produce the same effect if, by the terms of len v. Markle, 36 Pa. St. 117; Angle v. Brosius, 43 Pa. St. 189; Robins v. Quinliven, 29 Smith (Pa.) 333; Buist v. Dawes, 4 Strobbh. Eq. (S. Car.) 37; Bramble v. Billups, 4 Leigh (Va.) 90.

In what States the rule is abolished, see ESTATES, 6 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law, 878; also rule in Shelly, LEGACIES AND DEVISES.

On the principle that under a gift to a class of persons after a life estate, no particular members of the class, whether born at the date of the will or living at the testator's death, are considered as favored objects of testator's bounty, to the exclusion of those who subsequently come into existence during the life estate, it would seem that the existence of issue at the time the will takes effect would not alter the construction. Prior on Issue, § 66.

There is a dictum to the contrary by BARON ALDERSON in Lees v. Mosley, 1 Yo. & Coll. (Eng.) 610, and also by LORD HALE in King v. Melling, 1 Vent. (Eng.) 229.

The fact that the first taker is given an equitable life estate with a legal remainder will not be enough to rebut the prima facie meaning of issue, and the estates will vest as soon as the trust is executed, or if it is held not to be enforceable. Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 31. See Ogden's Appeal, 2 P. F. S. (Pa.) 501; Dobson v. Ball, 10 P. F. S. (Pa.) 427; Yarnall's Appeal, 20 P. F. S. (Pa.) 335.

Effect of Power of Appointment.—The mere fact that the limitation to the issue is by power of appointment, as in a gift to A for life, with a power of appointment among any of the issue of his body, and in default of appointment, to such issue, with a gift over on death without having issue, does not prevent the operation of the rule. Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 31, 39.

But in this case an estate tail would have been implied from the gift over, even if there were no gift of a remainder directly to the issue of a class. "Among" was not regarded as a word of distribution. 39 Pa. St. 39 40.

Otherwise where the gift to the issue is "to be divided between and amongst them in such manner, shares and proportions as A should by will appoint." Crozier v. Crozier, 3 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 373, 383.

1. Per PARKE, J., in Slater v. Dangerfield, 15 M. & W. (Eng.) 273; Greenwood v. Rothwell, 5 Man. & G. (Eng.) (44 E. C. L. R.) 628; 6 Beav. (Eng.) 492; Lees v. Mosley, 1 Yo. & Coll. (Eng.) 589. See 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) 438, 439; Parker v. Clarke, 3 Sm. & G. (Eng.) 161. See Roddy v. Fitzgerald, 6 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 83; Clifford v. Coe, L. R., 5 App. Cas. (Eng.) 447; Kavanagh v. Morland, Kay (Eng.) 16; Doe d. Gilman v. Elvey, 4 East (Eng.) 313; Golder v. Cropp, 5 Jur., N. S. (Eng.) 562; Parker v. Clarke, 6 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 104; Bradley v. Cartwright, L. R., 2 C. P. 511; s. c., 15 W. R. (Eng.) 122; Smith Ex. Int., § 488; Fearne 154; Colclough v. Colclough, Ir. Rep., 4 Eq. 263; Abbott v. Jenkins, 10 S. & R. (Eng.) 296; Powell v. Board of Missions, 49 Pa. St. 46, 54; Robins v. Quinliven, 79 Pa. St. 333; Moore v. Parker, 12 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 123; Contra, Kingsland v. Rapelye, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 1.

The result is the same whether the fee is given by the technical words "heirs and assigns," or by such words as "estate," "part," "share," etc., occurring in the description of the subject of the gift, or words imposing a pecuniary charge upon the issue, and whether the gift to the issue be direct or by implication, from a power to appoint them, and whether there is a gift over on general failure of the issue of the ancestor or not; and the same rule applies where the issue would take an estate tail. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *439; citing Greenwood v. Rothwell, 5 Man. & G. 628; Slater v. Dangerfield, 15 M. & W. 263; Golder v. Cropp, 5 Jur., N. S. 562; Crozier v. Crozier, 3 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 373; Bradley v. Cartwright, L. R., 2 C. P. 511; Montgomery v. Montgomery, 3 Jo. & Lat. 47; Lees v. Mosley, 1 Yo. &

the devise, the issue, taking by purchase, can take the fee.¹ Superadded words of limitation which do not enlarge the cause of descent, as a devise to A for life, with remainder to his issue, and the heirs of their bodies, or to his issue male and the heirs male of their bodies, annexed to the gift to the issue, unaccompanied by words of distribution, afford no ground for excluding

Col. (Eng.) 389; Parker v. Clarke, 6 D. M. & G. 104.

A devise was "unto my daughter for her natural life, and after her death to her issue and their heirs forever, in the proportions to which they would be entitled under the intestate laws of Pennsylvania, respectively, and free, clear and discharged from any estate claim or control of her present or any future husband." Held, that the daughter took an estate for life. Robins v. Quinliven, 79 Pa. St. 333.

In Carroll v. Burns, 108 Pa. St. 386, testatrix devised real estate "unto her three daughters, to have and to hold to them during their natural lives, and after their death then to the lawful issue of her said three daughters and the heirs and assigns of such issue. It was urged in argument that the case was indistinguishable from Robins v. Quinliven, since the words "in the proportion to which they would be entitled under the intestate laws of Pennsylvania," merely defined the term "heirs" in the intestate law of the State. Held, that words of distribution could be implied from the latter expression, and the daughters took an estate tail. Compare Cockin's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 26.

1. Montgomery v. Montgomery, 3 Jo. & Lat. (Eng.) 47; Crozier v. Crozier, 3 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 373; Hawkins on Wills, *193; Kavanagh v. Merland, Kay (Eng.) 16; Bradley v. Cartwright, L. R., 2 C. P. (Eng.) 521. See 4 Kent *221, *229, *430; Myers v. Anderson, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 344; Heather v. Winder, 5 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) N. S. 41.

Devise to wife for life; remainder to her son and his issue lawfully begotten or to be begotten, to be divided among them as he should think fit, and in case he should die without issue over, held, that as the issue were to take the estate distributively in proportions to be fixed by the son, they took as purchasers. Hockley v. Mawbey, 1 Ves. (Eng.) 142.

Devise to A for life; should she die leaving her surviving any issue of her body, then to such issue, to be divided share and share alike. Held, A took a life estate, remainder to the issue living at the time of her death as purchasers. Estate of McDonnell, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 94.

"Thus if the devise be of an 'estate,' or of the testator's 'part' of lands to one for life, with remainder to his issue, or issue male, share and share alike (Montgomery v. Montgomery, 3 Jo. & Lat. (Eng.) 47), or if the devise be to A for life with remainder to his issue, to be divided amongst them as A should appoint, subject to the payment of an annuity by the persons becoming entitled under the devise (Crozier v. Crozier, 3 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 373), the issue take a constructive fee simple as purchasers. So if the devise be to A for life, with remainder to his issue as tenants in common with a gift over in the event of the issue dying under twenty-one (Doe v. Burnsall, 6 T. R. (Eng.) 30), the issue taking the fee by force of the gift over take as purchasers." Hawkins on Wills, *193, *194.

As to effect of gift over, see post, § VII.

The doctrine that words of distribution alone annexed to the gift to the issue would control the meaning of the word issue, though ineffectual with regard to the more highly technical words "heirs of the body," if the issue taking by purchase could take the fee, is founded upon Hockley v. Mawbey, 3 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 82, and expressly laid down in Montgomery v. Montgomery, 3 Jo. & Lat. (Eng.) 47, and Crozier v. Crozier, 3 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 373, and recognized in Kavanagh v. Merland, Kay (Eng.) 16. See also Roddy v. Fitzgerald, 6 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 823; Bradley v. Cartwright, L. R., 2 C. P. (Eng.) 521.

Since "heirs of the body" are more strongly words of limitation than issue (Lees v. Mosley, ante, p. —), wherever words of distribution have been held sufficient to control the former a fortiori will they control the latter; and in some instances they have been held sufficient to control even the technical meaning of "heirs of the body." Miles v. Allen, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 88; Cham-

the rule, and the ancestor takes an estate tail,¹ whether or not superadded words of limitation which change the course of descent, unaccompanied by words of distribution, as a devise to A, and after his decease to his issue and their heirs, or the heirs of such issue, without a gift over on failure of issue of A, will vest the fee in the issue as purchasers, is a point upon which there is much conflict of authority. The better opinion appears to be that it will.²

bers v. Payne, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 400; Myers v. Anderson, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 344.

Words of Distribution Referred to First Takers.—"Where the devise is not to one, but to several, as tenants in common for life, with remainder to their issue 'as tenants in common,' or 'equally to be divided,' the words of distribution may be referred to the first takers, so as to import distribution among the issue per stirpes only, and thus the first takers may be to take estates tail as tenants in common, although the issue might be capable of taking the fee as purchasers." Hawkins on Wills, *104; citing Tate v. Clarke, 1 Beav. (Eng.) 100; Harrison v. Harrison, 7 Man. & G. (Eng.) 938; s. c., 49 E. C., L. R. (Eng.); Smith Ex. Int., § 529. See also Lyon v. Mitchell, 1 Madd. (Eng.) 467, 472.

1. Roe v. Grew, Wilmut (Eng.) 272. See Hodgson v. Merest, 9 Price (Eng.) 556; Hamilton v. West, 10 Ir. Eq. Rep. 75; Parker v. Clarke, 3 Smale & G. (Eng.) 161.

A devise to A for life, with remainder to his issue and their heirs, or heirs and assigns, followed by a gift over on failure of issue of A, vests in A an estate tail; the limitation to the heirs general of the issue being restrained to heirs of the body by force of the gift over, so as to reduce the devise to one, to A for life, with remainder to his issue and the heirs of their bodies. Hawkins on Wills, *195. See Frank v. Stovis, 3 East (Eng.) 348; Denn v. Puckley, 5 T. R. (Eng.) 299; Franklin v. Lacy, 6 Madd. (Eng.) 258. See Paxson v. Lefferts, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 59; Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. St. 484.

2. In Montgomery v. Montgomery, 3 Jo. & Lat. (Eng.) 47, LORD ST. LEONARDS laid down the affirmative of the proposition, relying upon the authority of Doe d. Cooper v. Collis, 4 T. R. (Eng.) 294, where it was held that under a devise of one moiety of an estate to A and his heirs, and the other moiety to B for life, and after his decease to his issue and their heirs, the issue took by purchase. A contrary view was expressed by LORD CRANWORTH, C., in Parker v. Clarke, 6 D. M. & G. (Eng.) 109, and the tendency of Roddy v. Fitzgerald, 6 H. L. C. (Eng.) 823, and later cases, to put issue on the same plane with "heirs of the body," so far as reconcilable with Lees v. Mosley, ante, III, 2 a, n., appears to favor his position.

As sustaining the position taken by LORD ST. LEONARDS, see Hamilton v. West, 10 Ir. Eq. Rep. 75; Dodds v. Dodds, 10 Ir. Ch. Rep. 476; Morgan v. Thomas, 51 L. J., Q. B., N. S. 289; Daniel v. Whartherby, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 639; Shreve v. Shreve, 43 Md. 382.

CHANCELLOR KENT says that if the limitation be to the issue and to their heirs, this constitutes them purchasers, as it shows an intention to give them an estate not inheritable from the first taker, but an original estate, inheritable from themselves as a new stock of descent. 4 Kent 221. So where the devise is to A for life, and if she leave lawful issue, to the issue in fee. Timanus v. Dugan, 46 Md. 402, 418.

In North Carolina it is held that the act of 1784, converting estates tail into estates in fee simple, has the effect of putting devises and bequests on the same footing in respect to the construction of gifts to A for life, with remainder to the heirs of his body, his issue, etc., so that any words which in a bequest of personalty would be construed words of purchase, will be so construed in a devise of realty made since that act. Ward v. Jones, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 405.

In South Carolina, the fact that estates tail have never existed, has been held to produce the same effect upon the construction of such devises. Buist v. Dawes, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 423. In the latter State, in a devise to A for life, remainder to his issue forever, it has been held that the words "forever," being equivalent to a limitation in fee to the issue, they take as purchasers. Myers v. Anderson, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 344; M'Lure v. Young, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 559.

(2) As to Personality.—Under a bequest of personal estate or chattels, real to A for life, and after his decease to his issue, A takes for life only, and the issue take in remainder as purchasers.¹

But in Pennsylvania a devise to A for life and, after his death, to his issue and the heirs and assigns of such issue, gives A an estate tail, which is converted into a fee simple by virtue of the act of April 27th, 1855. Carroll v. Burns, 108 Pa. St. 386. In this State the rule seems to be that the word issue in a will, "when used in reference to persons not then born, and not used in the singular number to describe a particular person, but in the plural number to point out the line of descent, is synonymous with the words heirs of the body, and that words of limitation engrafted on a devise to the issue of the devisee for life, never make the issue purchasers, though such words serve to limit a fee and not a fee tail. They have this effect only where they would carry the estate into a different channel from that in which it would flow by giving to the first taker an inheritance." GIBSON, C. J., in Paxson v. Loefferts, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 59, 65. See Kleppner v. Laverty, 70 Pa. St. 70, 73.

1. Knight v. Ellis, 2 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 570, Ex parte Wynch, 5 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 188; Jackson v. Calvert, 1 J. & H. (Eng.) 235; Goldney v. Crabb, 19 Beav. (Eng.) 338; Myers's Appeal, 49 Pa. St. 111, Albee v. Carpenter, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 382; Edelen v. Middleton, 9 Gill (Md.) 161. Contra, Moore v. Paul, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 358.

Where the gift, after the gift to the first taker, is to the heirs of the body, the courts have held, on analogy to devises of real estates, that the words are so clearly words of limitation that even the express restriction of the first bequest to a life estate is not sufficient to exclude their prima facie meaning.

Where there is nothing to show that the word issue was not intended as a word of limitation, or an intention to confine the first taker to a life estate, it has been held to be a word of limitation when used with reference to personal estate equally with the words "heirs of the body." So again, where there is no express gift to the issue, but, after an indefinite gift, there is a gift over in default of issue of the first taker, then the first taker, in the case of real estate, is considered, by implication, to take a gift to him and his issue, and the same rule has been adopted with regard to personality.

In all these cases the rule applied to real estates derived from principles of tenure has been made the foundation of the rule for construing bequests of personality, but in all either the technical words "heirs of the body" have occurred or there has been nothing to show that the words "issue," "children," and the like, have not been intended merely to define or explain the extent of the interest given to the first taker, and there is nothing in these decisions compelling the court to hold that where technical words are not used and where the interest of the first taker is expressly confined to the life estate, it is bound to act in the construction of the bequest as personality on principles derived from the law of tenure, and not resting on intention. Hence, under a bequest of an annuity to A "for her life and the issue from her body, lawfully begotten, on failure of which, to revert to my heirs," with request that B and C would act as trustees, so that it might be secured for her sole use and benefit, A takes for life only, with a gift, in the nature of a remainder, to her children. Ex parte Wynch, 5 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 188, 204, 209. See Myers's Appeal, 49 Pa. St. 111; Moore v. Paul, 29 Grant (U. S.) Ch. 287.

In Moore v. Paul, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 358, CHANCELLOR DURGAN considered Knight v. Ellis overruled by Atty. Gen. v. Bright, 2 Keen (Eng.) 57. This, however, is denied in Ex parte Wynch.

Even in South Carolina, however, under a bequest to a son for life and after his death to be equally divided between his two daughters during their lives, and after their deaths to be the absolute property of their issue, the daughters, after the son's death, take only a life estate and, on their deaths, their issue take as purchasers. Myers v. Anderson, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 344, 47 Am. Dec. 537.

For a general discussion of the rule that words which create an estate tail in realty create an absolute interest in personality, see WILLS.

(3) Effect of Cy Pres Doctrine.—Where a testator, by the frame of the original limitation, clearly expresses an intention that all the descendants of a certain party shall take, and that all or some generations of the issue shall take for life only, and the intention is frustrated by the rule against perpetuities, the court considering the paramount intention to be that all the descendants shall take, and the intention to give life estates only as subordinate thereto, confers estates for life upon as many of the parties designated (whether they constitute an entire generation of issue or certain members of a generation) as are born or in ventre sa mere in the testator's lifetime, and estates tail on their children and the unborn members of the same generation.¹ The doctrine does not extend to limitations in a deed.²

IV. DYING WITHOUT ISSUE—WHEN REFERRED TO PRIOR OBJECTS

—1. In Default of Such Issue.—The expression “in default of such issue” imports a definite or indefinite failure of issue according to the degree of comprehensiveness of the antecedent expressions to which the restrictive words “such issue” refer. If the antecedent expression is sufficiently comprehensive to comprise all the issue in general, or all the issue male or female, the words “such issue” refer to an indefinite failure as much as the word issue when standing unrestricted. But if the antecedent expression comprises some only of the issue in general, or of the issue male or female, the words “such issue” refer only to a failure of the particular issue before spoken of.³ Thus, with regard to per-

1. Prior on Issue, § 84. See Humberstone v. Humberstone, 2 Vern. (Eng.) 737; 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 332; Puc. Ch. 455; Gilb. Eq. Cas. 128; 1 Eq. Cas. Ab. 207, Pl. 8; Wollen v. Andrews, 2 Bing. (Eng.) 126; Mortimer v. West, 2 Sim. (Eng.) 274; Goodlit C. Cross v. Woodhull, Willes (Eng.) 592; Monkhouse v. Monkhouse, 3 Sim. (Eng.) 119.

In order that the cy pres doctrine may be applied to the devise, the testator must show that he intended all generations of the issue to take. Prior on Issue, § 87; Seward v. Willock, 5 East (Eng.) 108; Bennett v. Lowe, 7 Bing. (Eng.) 535; Bristowe v. Warde. See also Pitt v. Jackson; Nicholl v. Nicholl, 2 W. Black. (Eng.) 1159.

On the authority of Routledge v. Dorril, 2 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 356, the doctrine is said not to apply to personal estate. Prior on Issue, § 96.

Where the gift is of realty and personality combined, a construction which will give an analogous effect to the devise of each may be thought to be warranted by Mogg v. Mogg, 1 Mer. (Eng.) 654, in which freehold and leasehold estates were devised, in trust, for the children of S M, and, after their decease, to their lawful issue as tenants in common, and in default of such issue, over. S M survived the testator, and it was held that her children took absolute interests in the leaseholds. No reason is given for the decision, but the argument in favor of the children taking an absolute interest proceeded to a great extent on the cy pres doctrine, and the only way in which the case can be reconciled with Knight v. Ellis, 2 Bro. C. C., is that it was impossible to give the issue an estate by purchase, as was done in the latter case, on account of the rule against perpetuities. Prior on Issue, §§ 96, 314. Compare Ex parte Wynch, 5 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 188, 204, 209.

2. Adams v. Adams, Cowp. (Eng.) 651; Brudenell v. Elwes, 1 East (Eng.) 442; 17 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 382.

3. Smith Ex. Int., § 543. See also King v. Stafford, 7 East (Eng.) 521; Goodright v. Lloyd, 4 Man. & Sel. (Eng.) 88; Foster v. Lord Romney, 11 East (Eng.) 594; Hay v. Lord Coventry, 3 D. & E. (Eng.) 83; Lady Dacre v. Doe, 3 D. & E. (Eng.) 112; Lewis d. Ormonde v. Waters, 6 East (Eng.) 336.

sonal estate, it is clear that whatever be the class of issue included in the preceding gift, whether children, sons or daughters, and whatever the extent of interest given to those objects, the bequest over, in default of such issue is construed to mean in default of such children, sons or daughters.¹ With regard to real estate also, the words "in default of such issue," "for want of such issue," or "on failure of such issue," following an express devise to any particular class of issue, as children, sons or daughters, will be construed to mean in default of such children, sons or daughters, and being exclusively referential, will not enlarge or in any manner affect any of the prior estates.²

Thus, under a devise to A for life, and then to his issue and their heirs, and in case A should die without issue, or all such issue should die without issue, over, the words referring to A's dying without issue refer to his dying without children, but the words providing for the event of all such issue dying without issue, clearly show that by heirs of the issue the testator meant heirs of the body, and consequently that the children of A were intended to take an estate tail. So that there is a life estate with a contingent remainder over in tail, followed by a limitation which is to take effect either as an alternative, if there should be no children, or as a remainder after an estate tail in the children, and there should afterwards be a failure of issue. Smith Ex. Int., § 542.

Where the word issue occurring in an express devise or bequest to issue is therein explained to mean children, the words in default or for want of such issue, immediately following are construed in default of such children. Ryan v. Cowley, 1 Ll. & G. (Eng.) 7. See Gawler v. Cadby, Jac. (Eng.) 346, 348; Bryan v. Mansion, 5 De G. & S. (Eng.) 737.

Under a devise to A for life without impeachment of waste, and if he have issue male, then to such issue male and his heirs forever; and if he die without issue male, then to B and his heirs forever, the words referring to the failure of the issue male, refer to the nonexistence of sons or a son, and the devise to the issue male is a contingent remainder to the eldest or only son in fee; and the devise over is a concurrent remainder as regards the estate of the prior taker, and an alternative limitation, in regard to the limitation, to the issue to take effect merely as a substitute for that limitation in the event of no son being born. Smith Ex. Int., § 540; Lodington v. Kime, 1 Salk. (Eng.) 224.

1. Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.), *454; Maddox v. Staines, 2 P. W. (Eng.) 421; s. c., Dom. Proc., 3 B. P. C. Toml. (Eng.) 108; Stanley v. Leigh, 2 P. W. (Eng.) 685; s. c., 3 Myl. & Cr. (Eng.) 153.

If the prior gift is confined to children who survive their parent, a gift over in default of such issue or (which is the same) in default of issue becoming entitled, means in default of children who survive their parent. In re Hopkins' Trusts, 9 Ch. D. (Eng.) 131.

2. Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.), *454; Lethrenhier v. Tracy, Amb. (Eng.) 204, 220; Denn d. Briddon v. Page, 11 East (Eng.) 603, n.; s. c., 3 Durn. & East (Eng.) 87, n.; Hay v. Lord Coventry, 3 Durn. & East (Eng.) 83; Doe d. Comberbach v. Perryn, 3 Durn. & East (Eng.) 384; Goodtitle d. Sweet v. Herring, 1 East (Eng.) 264. See Wright v. Leigh, 15 Ves. (Eng.) 564; Parr v. Swindels, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 283; Bridger v. Ramsey, 10 Hare (Eng.) 320; Bevan v. White, 7 Ir. Eq. Rep. 473; Farrant v. Nichols, 9 Beav. (Eng.) 327, 330, 331; Re Arnold's Estate, 33 Beav. (Eng.) 163; Re Pollard's Estate, 3 De J. & S. (Eng.) 541; Allgood, et al. v. Blake, 8 L. R. Exch. (Eng.) 160; 42 L. J. Exch. (Eng.) 101; 21 W. R. (Eng.) 599; 29 L. T. N. S. 331. So where the expression is "issue as aforesaid." Walker v. Petchell, 1 B. C. (Eng.) 652.

This is true whether the objects of the preceding devise take estates of inheritance or only estates for life. Rex v. Marquis of Stafford, 7 East (Eng.) 521; Doe d. Tooley v. Gunnis, 4 Taunt. (Eng.) 313; Ashley v. Ashley, 1 Dowl. & Ryl. (Eng.) 52; s. c., 5 B. &

Ald. (Eng.) 464; Hay v. Earl of Coventry, 3 Durn. & E. (Eng.) 83; Doe d. Phipps v. Lord Mulgrave, 5 Durn. & E. (Eng.) 320; Foster v. Romney, 11 East (Eng.) 594; Goodright v. Jones, 4 M. & S. (Eng.) 88; Purcell v. Purcell, 2 Dru. & War. (Eng.) 219, n.; Ryan v. Cowley, Ll. & G. Cas. temp. Sugd. 7. See Torrance v. Torrance, 4 Md. 11; Tongue v. Nutwell, 13 Md. 415; Edelen v. Middleton, 9 Gill (Md.) 161; Nebinger v. Upp, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 65; George v. Morgan, 4 Har. (Pa.) 95; Walker v. Milligan, 9 Wright (Pa.) 178.

This is clearly the case where the prior limitations are in tail. Doe d. Phipps v. Lord Mulgrave, 5 T. R. (Eng.) 320.

So, where the prior limitations are to children and their heirs, a gift over in default of such issue means in default of such children. Doe d. Comberbach v. Perryn, 3 T. R. (Eng.) 484; Rex v. Marquess of Stafford, 7 East (Eng.) 521.

But if there is anything to show that the children were intended to take estates tail, the words in default of such issue may be referred to the word heirs so as to cut down the estates to estates tail.

Thus where the devise was to the testator's eldest son for life, remainder to a trustee to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to the first and other sons of the testator's eldest son and their heirs and for want of such issue to his second son B for life with similar remainders, it was held that the word issue in the limitation over referred to the heirs of the sons, and consequently that they took successive estates tail, which would effectuate the apparent intention of the testator to continue the estates in his family. Here the words first and other evidently imported that the sons were to take successively, and there was no mode of giving effect to that intention except to cut down the fee simple of the sons to an estate tail. Lewis d. Ormon v. Waters, 6 East (Eng.) 237. Compare Ginger d. White v. White, Willes (Eng.) 352.

So where the expression "such issue" is controlled by a subsequent clause showing an estate tail to have been intended. Biddulph v. Lees, 8 E. & B. (Eng.) 289.

"Even though the limitation be to children simply, so that they could only take for life, a gift over in default of such issue will be construed referentially." Hay v. Earl of Coventry, 3 T. R. (Eng.) 83; Denn d. Breddon v. Page, 3 T. R. (Eng.) 87, n.; s. c., 11 East (Eng.) 603, n.; Ashley v. Ashley, 6 Sim. (Eng.) 358; Bridger v. Ramsay, 10 Ha. (Eng.) 320; Re Arnold's Estate, 33 B. 163.

So where the prior devise embraces a single child only the words "for want of such issue" are construed "for want of such child," and do not have the effect of conferring an estate tail on the parent of that child. Doe v. Carlton, 1 Scott N. R. (Eng.) 290; s. c., 1 Mann. & Gr. (Eng.) 429. See Foord v. Foord, 3 B. P. C. (Toml. ed.) 124.

"On the other hand, where there is a limitation to a first son without more, followed by limitations in default of such issue to the other sons in tail, the court will lay hold of small circumstances to give the first son also an estate tail. Thus in Evans d. Brooke v. Astley, 3 Burr. (Eng.) 1569, there was the circumstance that the testator referred to the earlier limitations as including the "parent and his descendants." In Clements v. Parke, 3 Doug. (Eng.) 384, the limitation to the first son was referred by the word likewise to other limitations in fee. Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 537. Compare Doe d. Harris v. Taylor, 10 Q. B. (Eng.) 718; Barnacle v. Nightingale, 14 Sim. (Eng.) 456; Galley v. Barrington, 2 Bing. (Eng.) 387; In re Denny's Estate, 1 Ir. R., 8 Eq. 427.

"Such" Rejected.—"The prima facie meaning of the word such is to refer the word with which it is coupled to earlier words, so that the latter word is only a compendious statement of the earlier limitations; it may, however, have a converse effect if there is anything upon the will to show that the testator used the earlier word in the sense of the later, and the word such may be rejected if the term with which it is coupled and that to which it refers are so inconsistent with each other that the testator cannot have meant the one as a mere compendious reference to the other. Thus, a devise to A and his heirs, and in default of such issue over would, perhaps, in a will cut down A's estate to an estate tail. See Jelle v. Cook, 1 P. Wms. 70. And in Parker v. Toofal, 11 H. L. (Eng.) 143, where the devise was to Thomas for life, remainder to the first son of the said Thomas in tail male lawfully begotten, severally and successively; and for want of such lawful issue either of

2. In Default of Issue—a. As to Personality.—In regard to personal estate, words denoting a failure of issue, following a bequest to children, refer to the objects of that gift.¹ It would also seem to be the better opinion that where the prior gift is expressly to “issue,” and that word is restricted by the context to issue of a particular class, or existing at a particular time, the words importing a failure of issue will be referred to such prior objects.²

Thomas or of James, over, the word such was practically rejected and Thomas took an estate tail.” Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.), 537.

1. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.), *448; Roper on Legacies, *1554; Pleydell v. Pleydell, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 748; Maddox v. Staines, 2 P. Wms. (Eng.) 421; Tucker v. Harris, 5 Sim. (Eng.) 538; Malcolm v. Taylor, 2 Russ. & M. (Eng.) 416, 421; Bradshaw v. Skilbeck, 2 Bing., N. S. (Eng.) 182; Trickey v. Trickey, 3 Myl. & K. (Eng.) 560; Ellicombe v. Gompertz, 3 Myl. & Cr. (Eng.) 127; Walker v. Petchell, 1 C. B. (Eng.) 652; Leming v. Sherratt, 2 Hare (Eng.) 14; Minter v. Wraith, 13 Sim. (Eng.) 52; Doe d. Lyde v. Lyde, 1 Durn. & E. (Eng.) 596; Salkeld v. Vernon, 1 Ed. (Eng.) 64; Vandergucht v. Blake, 2 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 534; Farthing v. Allen, 2 Madd. (Eng.) 310; Robinson v. Hunt, 4 Beav. (Eng.) 450; Cormack v. Copous, 17 Beav. (Eng.) 307; In re Wyndham's Trusts, L. R., 1 Eq. 290; In re Sander's Trusts, L. R., 1 Eq. 675; Bryan v. Manson, 5 De G. & S. (Eng.) 737; Davies v. Merceron, L. R., 4 Ch. D. (Eng.) 182; 35 L. T., N. S. 701; Chism v. Williams, 29 Mo. 288. Compare Observations of Lord COTTENHAM in Ellicombe v. Gompertz, 3 Myl. & Cr. (Eng.) 127; TURNER, L. J., Pride v. Fooks, 4 Jur., N. S. (Eng.) 678; s. c., 3 De G. & J. (Eng.) 252; 4 D. M. G. (Eng.) 88.

“But where the prior gifts to the children are not vested, so that there may be issue who may not take under them,—for instance, children of children who die before the time of vesting,—it is less easy to admit the referential construction, and it seems that without some further indications to be collected from the will, it will not be adopted. Pride v. Fooks, 3 De G. & J. (Eng.) 252; Walker v. Mower, 16 B. 365.

“And the same is the case where the gifts to the children are only to arise upon a contingency, as for instance, if the legatee marries. Andree v. Ward, 1 Russ. (Eng.) 260. Campbell v. Hard- ing, 2 R. & M. (Eng.) 390; 2 Cl. & Fin. (Eng.) 431; 8 Bl. (N. S.) 469.

“But if there is anything to assist the referential construction, it will be adopted. Malcolm v. Taylor, 2 R. & M. (Eng.) 416.

“And when there is elaborate provision made for the issue of children dying before the time of vesting and born within the limits of perpetuity, a gift over in default of issue may very well be referred to the prior limitations. Ellicombe v. Gompertz, 3 Myl. & Cr. (Eng.) 127; Trickey v. Trickey, 3 M. & K. (Eng.) 560.

“The referential construction will not be adopted where the bequest is in joint tenancy to A and her children, with a gift over in default of issue. In this case the whole is already disposed of, whether children are born or not, and in the absence of some further indication of intention there can be no reason for attempting to make the gift over valid in order to divest absolute interests. Fisher v. Webster, 14 Eq. (Eng.) 283.” Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 539, 540.

2. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *450; Leeming v. Sherratt, 6 Jur. (Eng.) 663; Gawler v. Cadby, Jac. (Eng.) 346, 348; Bryan v. Manson, 5 De G. & S. (Eng.) 737.

Contra, Campbell v. Harding, 2 Russ. & Myl. (Eng.) 390; s. c., nom. Candy v. Campbell, 8 Bligh, N. S. (Eng.) 79; Andree v. Ward, 1 Russ. 260. See also K. BRUCE, V. C., in Pye v. Linwood, 6 Jur. (Eng.) 618; BACON, V. C., in Fisher v. Webster, L. R., 14 Eq. (Eng.) 283.

Testator gave certain pecuniary legacies to his daughters respectively, one half to be invested and secured from the control of any husband, the interest to be paid to them in the meantime and the principal disposed of as they should direct to their issue, but in case they should die without issue, he gave the principal among the survivors of his children in equal shares. Held, that the first bequest was limited to issue living at the death of the children, and the gift over on failure of issue referred to the same objects. Leeming v. Sherratt, 2 Hare (Eng.) 14.

Mr. Jarman is of opinion that Andree v. Ward, 1 Russ. (Eng.) 260, by reason of the strong tendency of recent cases towards the referential construction, would not now be followed. But in Allanson v. Clitherow, 1 Ves. (Eng.) 24 (an executory trust of realty), the words "die without issue" were held nonreferential under similar circumstances. See Campbell v. Harding, 2 R. & M. (Eng.) 390; 8 Bli., N. S. (Eng.) 469; 2 Cl. & Fin. (Eng.) 421; cited in Pye v. Linwood, 6 Jur., N. S. (Eng.) 618; Fisher v. Webster, L. R., 14 Eq. (Eng.) 283.

In THEOBALD on Wills these decisions are classed as an exception to the general principle on the ground that the gift to the children was contingent. Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.), 534, 540.

The general principle in the text is thus stated by LORD COTTENHAM in Ellicombe v. Gompertz, 3 Myl. & Cr. (Eng.) 127: "Provision is made for certain members of a class answering a particular description, and then a gift over is made on failure of the class. If it be clear that the whole of the class were not to take, the gift over, though made to depend on the failure of the whole class, will be construed to take place upon the failure of that description of the class who were to take; and, on the other hand, if it appeared that all the class were intended to take, although some only are enumerated and the gift over be upon the failure of the whole class, the court will adopt such a construction as will extend the benefit, in the best way the law will admit to the whole class." Hence held that the words "from and immediately after the decease of all the sons and grandsons of" A were confined to such sons and grandsons as were included in the preceding gifts.

Bequest to daughter A for life and after her decease to her children at twenty-one; and in case any of such children should die under twenty-one and have one or more children who should survive A, and live to attain the said age, the last mentioned children should be entitled to their parent's share; provided that in case any child of A should die under twenty-one, his, her or their share, or shares, should go to the survivors of the said children, and the issue of any deceased child or children who should marry and die under the said age; provided further that if there should be no child of A, or, there being any such, no one child living to attain the age of twenty-one years, nor leave any issue who should attain thereto, then over. Held, that the gift over must be intended to take effect on the failure of the former gifts; and such former gifts were confined to those grandchildren who should survive the daughter and must therefore have been born in her lifetime: the gift over was valid. Trickey v. Trickey, 3 M. & K. (Eng.) 560.

Bequest to each of testator's two daughters for life, and after her death unto and equally among all and every such child and children she might happen to leave at her decease, and in case she should die without issue, then to such persons and in such manner as she should by will appoint. The will then contained a gift of the residue to testator's son. The daughter died leaving grandchildren, but no children living at her death. Held, that "die without issue" meant such issue as was before mentioned, i. e., children living at the daughter's decease, and there being none, the power of appointment had arisen. In re Mercedon's Trusts, L. R., 4 Ch. D. (Eng.) 182.

See also Hillersdon v. Lowe, 2 Hare (Eng.) 355; Cardigan v. Curzon, How. L. R., 9 Eq. 358.

When Failure of Issue Is Restricted to Failure at Ancestor's Death.—Westwood v. Southey. "The ground on which the court has used violence with the words, and interpolated the word 'such,' is this, that if there were no restriction on the generality of the words 'dying without issue,' the limitation over would be void. But where the dying without issue is either in terms, or, by the proper construction, limited to dying without issue living at the death, there is no reason for interpreting the words as meaning 'such issue as before mentioned'. . . Such a construction might in fact wholly defeat the testator's intention; for the tenant for life might have an only child, who might attain twenty-one, marry and have children, and die before the tenant for life, and then the child and issue of that child would be excluded." KINDERSLEY, V. C., in Westwood v. Southey, 2 Sim. (Eng.) N. S. 192, 202. See also Walker v. Mower, 16 Beav. (Eng.) 365; Madden v. Ikin, 2 Dr. & Sm. (Eng.) 213; PARKER, V. C., in Bryan v. Mansion, 5 De G. & S. (Eng.)

b. As to Realty.—MR. JARMAN, after an elaborate examination of the English authorities, comes to the conclusion:¹ 1. That the words in default of issue, or expressions of a similar import, following a devise to children in tail or in fee simple, mean in default of children.² This is free from all doubt. 2. That these words following a devise to all the sons successively in tail male, and daughters concurrently in tail general, are also to be construed as signifying such issue, even in the case of an executory trust.³ 3. That words devising over the property on a failure of issue male following a devise to the whole line of sons successively in tail male, are also referential to those objects;⁴ but not where such sons take for life only, in which case the words in question raise an implied estate tail in the parent.⁵ 4. That where there is a prior devise to a definite number of sons only in tail male, with a limitation over in case of default of issue, or issue male of the parent, an estate tail will be implied in the parent 737; In re Biron, 1 L. R., Ir. 258. But in Pride v. Fooks, 4 Jur. N. S. (Eng.) 678, s. c., 3 De G. & J. (Eng.) 252, TURNER, L. J., declined to express any opinion upon Westwood v. Southey. MR. THEOBALD considers this principle applicable to devises of realty. See § IV, 2 b, *.

1. 2 Jarman on Wills (3rd Am. ed.) *398, (5th Am. from 4th Eng. ed.) *483.

2. Goodright v. Dunham, Doug. (Eng.) 764. See also Ginger d. White v. White, Willes (Eng.) 348, Malcolm v. Taylor, 2 Russ. & Myl. (Eng.) 416; Doe v. Selby, 2 B. & C. (Eng.) 926; Doe v. Duesbury, 8 M. & W. (Eng.) 514; Baker v. Tucker, 3 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 106; s. c., 14 Jur. (Eng.) 771; Smith Ex. Int., §§ 541, 581, 582, 583; Daly v. Koons, 90 Pa. St. 246; Lawrence v. Lawrence, 105 Pa. St. 335, 341.

"If, after a prior devise to the ancestor, the property is devised to his unborn sons, daughters or children and their heirs, the words in default of issue, etc., of the ancestor will be construed to refer simply to the sons, daughters or children, instead of being referred also to their heirs and of being regarded as showing that the heirs meant are heirs of the body, as they would where the property is devised to the ancestor and his heirs, with a devise over in default of issue, without any intermediate devise to the sons, daughters or children; in which case, as has already been shown, the word heirs means heirs of the body. But if the object of the intermediate devise is to create a perpetual succession of life estates, it will be disregarded and the ancestor will take an estate tail in possession." Smith Ex. Int., §§ 582, 583.

Where property is devised to a person and his heirs, with a devise over if he should die without having issue, or, having such issue, such issue should die under twenty-one without issue, the failure of issue which is meant is a failure of issue of the children of the prior taker, at the death of such children under age; so that the failure of issue is definite, and the limitation over good as an executory devise. Smith Ex. Int., § 552, pp. 279, 280. See Berg v. Anderson, 22 P. F. S. (Pa.) 87, 91; Nicholson v. Bettie, 7 P. F. S. (Pa.) 384, 387.

Mr. Jarman is of opinion that the introduction of the word leaving would not vary the construction, since the words "without issue" and "without leaving issue" are indistinguishable in regard to their importing an indefinite failure of issue in reference to real estate. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *462.

3. Blackborn v. Edgley, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 600; Morse v. Marquess of Ormonde, 5 Madd. (Eng.) 99; s. c., 1 Russ. 382; Peyton v. Lambert, 8 Ir. Com. L. Rep. 485.

4. Barnfield v. Popham, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 54, 760; 1 Eq. Cas. Ab. (Eng.) 183; 2 Vern. (Eng.) 427, 449.

5. 2 Jarman on Wills (3rd ed.) *398; Wright v. Leigh, 15 Ves. (Eng.) 464. Later cases establish that the estate tail in the parent is subject to the children's life estate. Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 539; 2 Jarman on in order to give a chance of succession to the other sons.¹ 5. That in the case of executory trusts, words importing a dying without issue, following a devise to the first and other sons of a particular marriage in tail male, authorize the insertion of a limitation to the parent in tail general in remainder expectant on those estates.² 6. That such words (whether they refer to issue or issue male) succeeding a devise to the eldest son in tail are not referable to such son exclusively, but create in the parent an implied estate tail,³ in remainder expectant on the estate tail of the son;⁴ and which rule also, it seems, applies where the children take estates tail.⁵ 7. That the circumstance of the preceding devise to children, etc., being subject to a contingency, is rather unfavorable to the construction which reads words importing a failure of issue to refer to a failure of the objects of such preceding limitation.⁶

Wills (5th Am. ed.) *483; Doe v. Gallini, 3 A. & E. (Eng.) 340; Parr v. Swindels, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 283, LORD KINGSDOWN, in Towns v. Wentworth, 11 Moo. P. C. C. 546.

1. Langley v. Baldwin, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 759; 1 Ves. Sr. (Eng.) 26; Atty. Gen. v. Sutton, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 754; s. c., in Dom. Proc. (Eng.) 3 B. P. C. Toml. (Eng.) 75.

2. Allanson v. Clitherow, 1 Ves. Sr. (Eng.) 24.

3. Stanley v. Lennard, 1 Ed. (Eng.) 87; Key v. Key, 4 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 73. This rule applies whether the eldest son takes for life or in tail. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *483.

4. Doe d. Bean v. Halley, 8 Durn. & E. (Eng.) 5. So where the eldest son takes for life only. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *483.

5. Doe v. Gallini, 5 Br. & Ad. (Eng.) 621; 3 Ad. & E. (Eng.) 340.

6. Doe v. Lucraft, 1 M. & Scott (Eng.) 573; Franks v. Price, 6 Scott (Eng.) 710; s. c., 5 Bing. N. C. (Eng.) 37; 3 Beav. (Eng.) 182; Alexander v. Alexander, 16 C. B. (Eng.) 59; Doe v. Gallini, 3 Br. & Ad. (Eng.) 621; 3 A. & E. (Eng.) 340. See LORD CRANWORTH, in Jenkins v. Hughes, 8 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 593.

The following classification of cases has also been suggested:

"1. If the devise is to A for life, then to his children, so that they take vested estates in fee or tail, and in default of issue of A, over, issue means the issue before mentioned, and A's estate will not be enlarged. Foster v. Hayes, 2 E. & B. (Eng.) 27; s. c., 4 E. & B. (Eng.) 717; Towns v. Wentworth, 11 Moo. P.

C. (Eng.) 526; Smyth v. Power, 10 Rep., 10 Eq. 192.

"And this is the case though the children included under the prior limitations may be sons only, and not daughters, and though the prior estates may be in 'ail male. Turk v. Frenchman, 2 Dyer (Eng.) 171; Baker v. Tucker, 11 Ir. Eq. 104; s. c., 3 H. L. Cas. 106.

"Quare whether it makes any difference in the construction of the gift over in default of issue that the ancestor has children living at the date of the devise. See Doe d. Todd v. Tuesday, 8 M. & W. (Eng.) 514, commented on in Foster v. Hayes, 4 E. & B. (Eng.) *730 (E. C. L. R., vol. 82).

"2. If however, the prior limitations include less than the whole number of sons the referential construction will not be adopted. Langley v. Baldwin, 1 Eq. Ab. (Eng.) 185, pl. 29, cit. 1 P. W. (Eng.) 759; Atty. Gen. v. Sutton, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 753; s. c., 3 B. P. C. (Eng.) 75; Stanley v. Lennard, Amb. (Eng.) 355; 1 Ed. (Eng.) 87; Key v. Key, 4 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 173.

"The referential construction is, however, more readily adopted where the limitations are to some of the issue at twenty-one, and there is a gift over in default of issue who attain twenty-one. Sanders v. Ashford, 28 Beav. (Eng.) 6-9.

"3. If the failure of issue is restricted to a failure at the death of the parent, the referential construction will not be adopted, as it might have the effect of divesting the interests of children who had died before the tenant for life leaving children. Westwood v. Southey.

Devise of Reversion.—Where a testator, having a reversion in fee expectant on estates tail in the sons or other partial issue of some person other than the testator himself, devises the estates in the event of that person dying without issue, the question arises whether these words refer to the determination of the subsisting estates, so that the testator shall be considered as devising his reversion, or to an indefinite failure of issue, rendering the limitation over void for remoteness.¹ In such cases it appears to be

2 Sim. (Eng.) N. S. 192; Ex parte Hooper, 1 Dr. (Eng.) 264; Re Tookey's Trust, 21 L. J., Ch. 402; In re Biron, 1 L. R. Ir. 258.

"4. If the gift is to A for life, then to such issue as he should appoint by will, and if A dies without issue over, issue in the gift over is held to refer to the issue before mentioned; that is to say, issue living at the death of A. Target v. Gaunt, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 432; Hockley v. Mawbey, 1 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 143; s. c., 3 B. C. C. (Eng.) 82; Leeming v. Sherratt, 2 Ha. (Eng.) 14; Hanan v. Drew, 10 Ir. Eq. 333; Eastwood v. Airson, L. R., 4 Ex. (Eng.) 141.

"5. When the limitations to issue are contingent upon attaining a certain age, it seems the referential construction would not be adopted. Doe d. Rew v. Lucraft, M. & Sc. (Eng.) 573; s. c., 8 Bing. (Eng.) 386, Franks v. Price, 6 Scott (Eng.) 710; s. c., 5 Bing. N. C. (Eng.) 37; 3 Beav. (Eng.) 182.

"6. In wills, before the Wills act, where the devise to children is without words of limitation, so that they only take estates for life, the referential construction will not be adopted, but the parent will take an estate tail in remainder after the life estates. Parr v. Swindels, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 283; Bennett v. Lowe, 5 M. & Pay (Eng.) 485; 7 Bing. 535, is not inconsistent with this rule, since the gift over was not upon an indefinite failure of issue. And Wright v. Leigh, 15 Ves. (Eng.) 564, which conflicts with the latter branch of this rule, would probably not now be followed."

The principle of this classification is that where the intention is to benefit all the issue, notwithstanding the incomplete enumeration of them under the special limitation, the gift over in default of issue will give the parent an estate tail, but where the issue intended to be benefited are sufficiently indicated by the special limitations, the failure of issue will be construed to mean such issue as before mentioned. Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 538.

No classification upon the subject should be accepted without great caution. In Key v. Key, 4 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 73, 88, TURNER, L. J., says: "It is obvious no general rule can be laid down upon a subject on which the testator's intention, expressed by the will, must, in each case, be the only guide." This view, if adopted, would relegate the whole question to the individual discretion of the presiding judge. All that need be said on the subject is that the above classifications have been suggested, and would seem to be sustained in the main by the authorities, and in the absence of a contrary intent appearing in the instrument, would probably be followed by the courts, when applicable.

1. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *489; Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 546, 547; Sugd. Law of Prop. *351 (Law Lib., vol. 64; Eno v. Eno, 6 Hare (Eng.) 171. See SHADWELL, V. C., in Ingerton v. Jones, 3 Sim. (Eng.) 409; Jones v. Morgan, Butl. Fea. App. (Eng.) 578; s. c., 3 B. P. C. (Toml. ed.) 322; Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 442; Lytton v. Lytton, 4 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 441.

"If the event upon which the reversion is expressed to be devised is larger than and includes the event upon which it comes into possession, the devise will be good if in effect the two events are the same, and the intention is merely to devise the reversion. If, for instance, the reversion falls into possession on failure of issue by a particular wife of the testator, and the testator devised it upon a general failure of issue, the devise is good, as the birth of issue by a second marriage would revoke the will. Jones v. Morgan, Fearne C. R. App. 577; 3 B. C. C. (Eng.) 322; Lytton v. Lytton, 4 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 441.

In the same way if the testator recites that he is entitled to the reversion of certain estates on the death of a son without issue generally, and then devises the reversion on failure of such a sound rule of construction that whenever it may be collected from the general context of the will that it is the testator's intention to dispose of his reversionary interest expectant on the subsisting estates tail, such intended disposition will not be defeated by his neglect to adapt his language with precision to the events upon which the reversion will fall into possession.

V. DYING WITHOUT ISSUE—DEFINITE AND INDEFINITE FAILURE OF ISSUE¹—1. General Rule.—In the absence of express legislation, words referring to the death of a person without issue, whether the terms be "if he die without issue," "if he have no issue," or "for want" or "in default of" issue, unexplained by the context, are construed to mean a general indefinite failure of issue; i. e., a failure at the death or at any time afterwards.² The rule ap-issue, the devise is good, the intention being clear to devise the reversion. Lewis v. Templar, 33 Beav. (Eng.) 625; Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 547.

On the other hand, it has been held that where a testator, who has the reversion in fee by settlement, expectant on estates in tail male in his sons, and estates in tail general in his daughters, devises the estate in default of issue generally, the words "in default of issue" will not be referred to the issue who take under the settlement, so that the testator shall be considered as devising his reversion, but will be construed in their indefinite sense, although thereby the limitations in the will are rendered void from remoteness. Lanesborough v. Fox, Cas. temp. Talb. (Eng.) 262; Banks v. Holme, 1 Russ. (Eng.) 394. n.; Bristow v. Boothby, 2 Sim. & Stu. (Eng.) 465.

Mr. Prior is of opinion that this view is the more correct. Prior on Issue. §§ 230, 231; 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *490. But Mr. Jarman clearly shows that the decision in Lanesborough v. Fox, Cas. temp. Talb. 262, may be referred to the fact that the testator had made the limitation over dependent upon failure of issue of the third person and also "for want of heirs male" of his own body, and that therefore unless the words could be held to refer to issue living at the decease of the testator (§ 5.17), which could not have been done without difficulty, as the testator had a son living, the devise was void.

In Morse v. Lord Ormonde, 1 Russ. (Eng.) 406, LORD ELDON spoke of Banks v. Holme as a "very strong decision," and it cannot be reconciled with Jones v. Morgan, 3 Brown P. C. (Toml. ed.) 323.

But in Bristow v. Boothby, 2 Sim. &

St (Eng.) 465 under a limitation by marriage settlement to the husband and wife for life, remainder to the sons in tail male, remainder to the daughters in tail general, with a power to charge the estates in case all the children of the marriage died without issue, the court refused to confine the latter expression to the issue who were comprised in the limitations of the estate and held the power void. This case, therefore, sustains Mr. Prior's position, unless the principle upon which it was decided is to be shaken by LORD ELDON's criticism of the analogous case of Banks v. Holme, 1 Russ. 394. n.

1. "A definite failure of issue is where a precise time is fixed by the will for the failure to occur, as in the case of a devise to A, but if he dies without lawful issue living at the time of his death, then over to B; an indefinite failure of issue means a failure whenever it shall happen sooner or latter, without any fixed period within which it must happen—the time when the issue of the first taker shall become extinct." WOODWARD, J., in Vaughan v. Dickes, 8 Harr. (Pa.) 509, 513.

2. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *498; Hawkins on Wills *205; Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 541; Everest v. Gell, 1 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 286; Chandless v. Price, 3 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 99; Rawlins v. Goldfrap, 5 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 440; Crooke v. De Vandes, 9 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 197; Boehm v. Clarke, 9 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 580; Barlow v. Salter, 17 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 479; Donn v. Penny, 1 Mer. (Eng.) 20; Doe v. Richard Owens, 1 B. & Ad. (Eng.) 318; Crane v. George Roch, 7 Bing. (Eng.) 226; Lepine v. Ferard, 2 R. & My. (Eng.) 378; Campbell v. Harding, 2 R. & My. (Eng.) 390; Burley v. Evelyn, 16 Sim. (Eng.) 290;

Caulfield v. Maguire, 2 Jo. & Lat. (Eng.) 176; Fisher v. Webster, L. R., 14 Eq. (Eng.) 283; Lees' Case, 1 Leon. (Eng.) 285.

To ascertain the intention every part of the will may be examined. Lucas v. Duffield, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 456.

In the middle States the rule has been followed and recognized in Williamson v. Daniel, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 568; Parkman v. Bowdoin, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 359; Lillibridge v. Adie, 1 Mason (U. S.) 224; Osborne v. Shrieve, 3 Mason (U. S.) 391; Pinckney v. Pinckney, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 269, 274; Tator v. Tator, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 431; Ferris v. Gibson, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) 707; Conklin v. Conklin, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 64; Jackson v. Billinger, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 368; Miller v. Macomb, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 229; Coe v. De Witt, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 428; Guernsey v. Guernsey, 36 N. Y. 267; 271; Haynes v. Witmer, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 400; Amelong v. Dorneyer, 16 Ser. & R. (Pa.) 323; Heffner v. Knopper, 6 Watts (Pa.) 18; Eichelberger v. Barntz, 9 Watts (Pa.) 447; George v. Morgan, 16 Pa. St. 95; Vaughn v. Dickes, 20 Pa. St. 509; Wynn v. Story, 38 Pa. St. 166; Covert v. Robinson, 46 Pa. St. 274; Allen v. Henderson, 49 Pa. St. 333; Mengel's Appeal, 61 Pa. St. 248; Gast v. Baer, 62 Pa. St. 37; Kleppner v. Laverty, 70 Pa. St. 70; Greenawalt v. Greenawalt, 71 Pa. St. 483; Ingersoll's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 240; Riggs v. Sally, 15 Me. 408; Fisk v. Keene, 35 Me. 349; Hall v. Chaffee, 14 N. H. 219; Ladd v. Harvey, 21 N. H. 514, 526; Pinkham v. Blair, 57 N. H. 227; Brattleboro v. Mead, 43 Vt. 556; Nightingale v. Burrell, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 104; Hall v. Priest, 6 Gray (Mass.) 18; Allen v. Trustees etc., 102 Mass. 262, 264; Dart v. Dart, 7 Conn. 251; Burrough v. Foster, 6 R. I. 534; Arnold v. Brown, 7 R. I. 188; Hull v. Eddy, 14 N. J. L. 169; Rowe's Exrs. v. White, 16 N. J. Eq. 411; 84 Am. Dec. 169; Den v. Small, Spencer, (N. J.) 151; Moore v. Rake, 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 574; Condict v. King, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 375; Hollett v. Pope, 3 Harr. (Del.) 542; Davis v. Abbott, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 137; Newton v. Griffith, 1 Harr. & G. (Md.) 111; Torrance v. Torrance, 4 Md. 11; Jackson v. Dashiell, 3 Md. Ch. 257; Huxford v. Milligan, 5 Md. 542; Dickson v. Satterfield, 53 Md. 317; Tinsley v. Jones, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 289; Thomason v. Andersons, 4 Leigh (Va.) 118; Williamson v. Ledbetter, 2 Munf. (Va.) 521; Sydners v. Sydners, 2 Munf. (Va.) 263; Carter v. Tyler, 1

Call (Va.) 163; Hill v. Burrow, 3 Call (Va.) 342; Norton v. Fripp, 1 Speers (S. Car.) 250; Cox v. Buck, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 604; Presley v. Davis, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 105; McCorkle v. Black, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 407; Lyons v. Walker, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 307; Curry v. Sims, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 489; Cruger v. Hayward, 2 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 94; Mazyck v. Vanderhurst, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 48; Postell v. Postell, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 390; Mangum v. Piester, 16 S. Car. 316; Rice v. Satterwhite, 1 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. Car.) 69; Bailey v. Davis, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 108; Matthews v. Daniels, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 42; Brantly v. Whitaker, 5 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 225; Moye v. Moye, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 359; Lillibridge v. Ross, 31 Ga. 730; Moody v. Walker, 3 Ark. 198; Robinson v. Bishop, 23 Ark. 378; Watkins v. Quarles, 23 Ark. 179; Bramlet v. Bates, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 554; Randolph v. Wendell, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 647; Bowman v. Tucker, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 650; Kirk v. Ferguson, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 479; Randolph v. Wendell, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 646; Chism v. Williams, 29 Mo. 288; Voris v. Sloan, 68 Ill. 588.

In Kentucky and Ohio the rule has been rejected and the words "die without issue," or "without leaving issue," or "heirs of the body," "die without children," or other words of similar import, are to be interpreted, according to their plain, popular and natural meaning, as referring to the time of the person's death, unless the contrary intention is plainly expressed in the will or is necessary to carry out its undoubted purposes. SWAN, J., in Parish v. Ferris, 6 Ohio St. 563, 578; Niles v. Gray, 12 Ohio St. 320; Collins v. Collins, 40 Ohio St. 355; Daniel v. Thompson, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 533; Sale v. Crutchfield, 8 Bush (Ky.) 636. See also Birney v. Richardson, 5 Dana (Ky.) 424.

In Connecticut, such expressions have the effect of enlarging an estate for life or an indefinite devise to a fee tail, which is in that state an estate for life in the first donee, with remainder in fee to his issue living at his death; but a devise to A and his heirs, and in case A die without "issue," or "children or their legal representatives," over, is in the first instance an estate in fee simple in A, defeasible upon the event of his dying without issue, children or their legal representatives, living at the time of his death; but upon his subsequent marriage and the birth of a child the estate becomes at once absolute alien-plies both to real and personal property,¹ with this distinction, that in the case of personalty, words prima facie importing an indefinite failure of issue yield more readily to expressions and circumstances in the will tending to restrict them to the sense to dying without issue living at the death.² able and infeasible. Hudson v. Wadsworth, 8 Conn. 358; Bullock v. Seymour, 33 Conn. 289. But see Clarke v. Terry, 34 Conn. 176.

Compare Holmes v. Williams, 1 Root (Conn.) 335; 1 Am. Dec. 49, Williams v. Dickerson, 2 Root (Conn.) 191; 1 Am. Dec. 66.

This construction is analogous to that placed upon a conditional fee at common law before the statute De Donis, 13 Edw. 1.

As to the effect of the statute abolishing estates tail upon the practical application of the rule, see Dennett v. Dennett, 43 N. H. 499, 501; Moore v. Moore, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 651, 660; SWAN, J., in Parish v. Ferris, 6 Ohio St. 563, 578.

See also Doe v. Allaire, Spencer (N. J.) 6, 27; Morehouse v. Cotheal, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 430; Blair v. Vanblarcum, 71 Ill. 290; Eaton v. Shaw, 18 N. H. 321; Goodell v. Hibbard, 32 Mich. 47.

In Georgia the tendency is to reject the rule and lay hold of slight circumstances to exclude its operation. Harris v. Smith, 16 Ga. 548, Griswold v. Greer, 18 Ga. 550; Sheftall v. Roe, 30 Ga. 453; Lillibridge v. Ross, 31 Ga. 730, 735.

As to effect of special statutes, see post.

1. Hawkins on Wills, *206; 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *498; Beauclerk v. Dermer, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 313; Candy v. Campbell, 2 Cl. & F. (Eng.) 421. See Moody v. Walker, 3 Ark. 147; Randolph v. Wendel, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 647; Usitton v. Usitton, 3 Md. Ch. 36; Davidge v. Chaney, 4 Har. & M. (Md.) 393; McGraw v. Davenport, 6 Port. (Ala.) 319; Cox v. Buck, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 604; Chism v. Williams, 29 Mo. 209; Hall v. Priest, 6 Gray (Mass.) 22; Moffatt v. Strong, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 14; Condict v. King, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 375; Fairchild v. Crane, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 105.

In Pennsylvania, it was said in Eachus's Appeal, 91 Pa. St. 105, 108, that in gifts of personalty the phrase "die without issue" meant die without issue living at the death of the person the failure of whose issue is spoken of. This position is said to be founded upon the English decisions before the statute

1 Vict., ch. 26, § 29, and Still v. Spear, 3 Grant (Pa.) 306. Thus broadly stated it is submitted that it cannot be sustained. The English decisions above cited support the text. In Still v. Spear the words were "without leaving issue." Smith's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 9; Pott's Appeal, 30 Pa. St. 168, and Mengel's Appeal 61 Pa. St. 248, which were not cited, sustain the text.

"There is perhaps no case in which the limitation over of personal estate, after an indefinite dying without issue, whether the first limitation were indefinite or expressly for life, has ex vi termini been confined to a dying without issue at the time of the death, but the courts have seized with avidity on any circumstance, however trivial, denoting an intent to fix the contingency at that period." GIBSON, C. J., in Seibert v. Butz, 9 Watts (Pa.) 494. See Eichelberger v. Barnitz, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 293, 295; Ingersoll's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 240; Snyder's Appeal, 95 Pa. St. 174, 183.

2. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *504, *505.

"The rule [i. e. above distinction] may have been arrived at in the case of personal estate from the circumstance that it is not necessary to construe limitations over to be remainders; and unless some period is limited, the apparent intention of the testator will be entirely defeated in the event of the legatee not leaving any issue living at his death; whereas, in the case of real estate, the limitation, if construed as a remainder, would not fail altogether, but would take effect upon the determination of the estate, the e being nothing to prevent this in the rule against perpetuity, and the construction being assisted by the rule that in such cases the limitation must be construed as a remainder, if possible, instead of an executory devise." PAGE WOOD, V. C., in Parker v. Birks, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 160, 163.

"In relation to executory bequests of personal estates, these words may be restricted to mean a dying without issue living at the death of the party, by any clause or circumstance in the will that

2. Without Having Issue—Before He Has Any Issue—Without Children—Issue Alive, Surviving, or, Who Shall Attain Twenty-one.—The words “if he die without leaving issue,”¹ or “before he has any issue,”² or “without children” (where the context shows that the word children is used in the sense of issue)³ import an can indicate or imply such intention in the testator; and in order to support the limitation over, if they can, courts generally incline to lay hold on any expression or circumstance in the will that seems to afford a ground for such construction.” BUCHANAN, C. J., in Biscoe v. Biscoe, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 232, 237.

See also Woodland v. Wallis, 6 Md. 151; Budd v. State, 22 Md. 48; Wallis v. Woodland, 32 Md. 101; Clogett v. Worthington, 3 Gill (Md.) 83; Edelen v. Middleton, 9 Gill (Md.) 161; Davidge v. Chaney, 4 H. & M. (Md.) 393; Usiton v. Usiton, 3 Md. Ch. 36; Allender v. Sussan, 33 Md. 11; Morehouse v. Cotheal, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 430; Brummet v. Barber, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 543, 551; De Treville v. Ellis, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 40; Cudworth v. Thompson, 3 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 256; Clifton v. Haig, 4 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 330; Porter v. Ross, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 196.

In North Carolina, since the act of 1784, abolishing entails, executory limitations of land and chattels are to be construed alike upon the presumption that the intention of the testator is that in each case the estate should go over on the same event. Hence a devise over of land upon the death of the first taker “without leaving issue,” or a limitation to survivors, will be good. Jones v. Spaight, 1 Car. L. Repos. (N. Car.) 544; Zollicoffer v. Zollicoffer, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) L. 438, 441. See Clapp v. Fogleman, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 468; Smith v. Chapman, 1 H. & M. (Va.) 240; Flinn v. Davis, 18 Ala. 132; Forman v. Troup, 30 Ga. 496.

1. Hawkins on Wills, *206; Lees' Case, 1 Leon. (Eng.) 335; Cole v. Goble, 13 C. B. (Eng.) 445; E. C. L. R., vol. 76; Eastwood v. Lockwood, L. R., 3 Eq. Cas. (Eng.) 487, 495. See Vaughan v. Dicks, 20 Pa. St. 509; Davidson v. Davidson, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 163; Newton v. Griffith, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 111; Arnold v. Brown, 7 R. I. 188, 197.

But where there is a devise to A for life, “and if he has issue to A in fee, but if he die without issue then to B,” the restricted construction has been adopted. Shriver's Lessee v. Lynn, 2 How. (U. S.) 43; Clagett v. Worthington, 3 Gill (Md.) 83; Sheftall v. Roe, 30 Ga. 453. Contra, Waddell v. Rettew, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 231; Arnold v. Brown, 7 R. I. 188; Collis v. Kemp, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 78. So as to personalty, where the gift is to A indefinitely. Badger v. Harden, 6 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 148.

2. Newton v. Bernardine, Moore (Eng.) 127, pl. 275; Arnold v. Brown, 7 R. I. 188, 197.

In some cases the words “die before having issue” are read “die without having had any issue,” and the estate becomes absolute on the birth of issue. Sadler v. Wilson, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 296; Marshall v. Rives, 8 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 88; Dashell v. Dishell, 2 Har. & G. (Md.) 127; Ray v. Euslin, 2 Mass. 562.

3. Raggett v. Beatty, 5 Bing. (Eng.) 243; Doe v. Webber, 1 B. & Ald. (Eng.) 713; Parker v. Birks, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 156.

The words “child” or “children” have not the technical force of the word issue in a limitation over, and generally refer to the time of the death of the first taker. Morgan v. Morgan, 5 Day (Conn.) 517; Barney v. Arnold, 1 N. Eng. R. 138; Richardson v. Noyes, 2 Mass. 56, 61; Smith v. Hunter, 23 Ind. 580; Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 385, 387; Hull v. Eddy, 14 N. J. L. 169, 175. Compare Bullock v. Seymour, 33 Conn. 289.

The real distinction running through the cases appears to be that “children” is a word of personal description; issue proprio vigore indicates succession. Children will not be construed to mean issue unless the context of the will affirmatively shows that the testator intended to use it in that sense, and the inclination of the court against such construction is greater in the case of personal than in that of real estate. STRONG, J., in Bedford's Appeal, 40 Pa. St. 18, 22; citing Stone v. Maule, 2 Sim. (Eng.) 490. See also Brummet v. Barber, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 543; Mathis v. Hammond, 6 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 399, 402, 403; Sherman v. Sherman, 3 indefinite failure of issue.¹

Barb. (N. Y.) 385; Doe v. Webber, 1 B. & Ald. (Eng.) 713; Parker v. Birks, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 156.

Thus the words die "without leaving issue" or "children," in bequests of personalty, in the absence of controlling context, have been held to import a definite failure of issue. Clapp v. Fogleman, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 466; Boone v. Barnes, Rich. Eq. Cas. (S. Car.) 357.

But where there was a gift of real and personal estate to A for life, with gift over in case of his death "without leaving any child, or children, or their descendants," it was held that the gift over was upon an indefinite failure of issue in order to carry out the manifest intention that the issue should take, by raising an estate tail, by implication. Addison v. Addison, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 58.

Devise to A, his heirs and assigns forever, but if A should die without leaving any child or children, to B, C, D, E and F, their heirs and assigns forever as tenants in common, with a limitation over to survivors in case any of them died under age and without issue. The testator, in a certain event, devised other property, subject to the same mode of distribution among the five devisees over as the before mentioned property given to A "in case he died without issue." Held, that the testator had, by the latter clause, expressly declared the meaning of the prior devise to be, if the first taker should die without issue. Doe v. Simpson, 5 Scott (Eng.) 770; 4 Bing. N. C. (Eng.) 333; 3 M. & G. (Eng.) 929. See also Beson v. Cosby, 4 De G. & S. (Eng.) 261; Egan v. Morris, 2 Ll. & Goo. (Eng.) 297.

Under a devise to A and her heirs, if she has any child; if not, after the death of herself and her husband, over, it has been held that A took an estate tail. Doe v. Banister, 7 M. & W. (Eng.) 292; Goodtitle v. Woodhull, Willes (Eng.) 592.

Words which would restrain the meaning of dying without issue to a dying at the death a fortiori have such restraining effect upon the phrase "dying without children." Thus, under a devise to A to hold "to her and her children forever," with a limitation over, if she should die leaving no children, the children take by purchase. Hannan v. Osborn, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 336.

So under a devise to A and her children, "the children taking their mother's share." Smith's Estate, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 348. Compare § II, 2.

Or to A "and such children as shall at her death be living and attain twenty-one. Tayloe v. Gould, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 388. Or simply be then living. Huber's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 348. Or if she leaves any at her death. Dougherty v. Dougherty, 2 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 63. Or at her death to be equally divided between her children share and share alike. Bool v. Mix, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 119; Moon v. Stone, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 130; Bowers v. Bowers, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 293; Stubbs v. Stubbs, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 43; Williams v. Sneed, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 533. Or as tenants in common. Chew's Appeal, 37 Pa. St. 23.

Where the whole of a fund is given to the same persons and the limitation over of one moiety is thus explained to be intended to take effect on failure of children, instead of an indefinite failure of issue, but the limitation over of the other moiety on failure of issue of the prior taker, or on his decease without issue, is not so explained, the limitation over of the latter moiety will be construed to be intended to take effect on an indefinite failure of issue, though there may appear to be no reason for supposing but that both were intended to go over in the same event. Smith Ext. Int., § 548; Carter v. Bentall, 2 Beav. (Eng.) 551; Kirkpatrick v. Kirkpatrick, 13 Ves. (Eng.) 476.

"Issue Alive," "Surviving," or "Who Shall Attain Twenty-one."—A bequest over on the death of A "without issue alive," or "without surviving issue," imports a failure of issue at his death. Den v. Schenk, 3 Hals. (N. J.) 29; Nicholson v. Bettie, 57 Pa. St. 386; Kleppner v. Lavery, 70 Pa. St. 70.

A bequest over on death of A "without issue who shall attain twenty-one," means "an immediate defect consequent on the death of all A's issue before reaching their majority," an event which must take place, if at all, within twenty-one years after his own decease. Westenberger v. Reist, 13 Pa. St. 594, 601. See Manice v. Manice, 43 N. Y. 303.

1. Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 541; 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *498; Hawkins on Wills, *213; Forth v. Chapman, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 663; Doe d.

3. Without Leaving Issue—Without Leaving Issue Behind Him.—

With regard to real estate, the words "die without leaving issue," or "leaving no issue," import an indefinite failure of issue;¹ but with regard to personalty, a failure at the death of the person spoken of.² The distinction exists although the words in ques-

Cadogan v. Ewart, 7 Ad. & El. (Eng.) 636; s. c., 3 Nev. & P. (Eng.) 197; Doe d. Todd v. Duesbury, 8 M. & W. (Eng.) 530; Barnford v. Lord, 14 C. B. (Eng.) 708; Bias v. Smith, 2 H. & N. (Eng.) 105; Frakes v. Stanley, 24 Beav. (Eng.) 485.

1. See Allen v. Trustees, 102 Mass. 262; Kelley v. Meins, 135 Mass. 231; Malcolm v. Malcolm, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 472; Hawley v. Northampton, 8 Mass. 38; Whitford v. Armstrong, 9 R. I. 394; Ferris v. Gibson, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 707; Foley v. Foley, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 235; Miller v. Macomb, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 229; Eichelberger v. Barnitz, 9 Watts (Pa.) 447; Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 31; Wynn v. Story, 38 Pa. St. 166; Haldeman v. Haldeman, 40 Pa. St. 29; Middleswaith's Admr. v. Blackmore, 74 Pa. St. 414, 419; Reinvehl v. Shirk, 119 Pa. St. 108; Moorehouse v. Cotheal, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 430; Chetwood v. Winston, 40 N. J. L. 337; Newton v. Griffith, 1 Harr. & G. (Md.) 111; Tongue v. Nutwell, 13 Md. 415.

"Yet when used in connection with other words naturally meaning descendants of the first generation, and other issue representing children, or by the statute of distributions, *leave*s would retain its proper signification and be adequate as to any estate to restrict the failure of issue within the recognized limits of entailment." WARDLAW, Ch., in Addison v. Addison, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 28, 61. See Whitworth v. Stuckey, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.), 404; Perry v. Logan, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 202; Carr v. Jeannerett, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 66; Cudworth v. Thompson, 3 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 256; Robards v. Jones, 4 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 53; Jones v. Speight, 1 Car. L. R. 544.

Thus the words die "without leaving lawful issue surviving," or "leaving no issue or child," have been held to create a definite failure. Nicholson v. Bettle, 57 Pa. St. 386; Hill v. Hill, 74 Pa. St. 173; Clapp v. Fogleman, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 466. So "if he should leave no children." Wight v. Barry, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 105; Van Dyke v. Vanderpool, 1 McCarter (N. J.) 198; Fairchild v. Crane, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 105;

Hull v. Eddy, 14 N. J. L. 169. Or "leaving no lawful issue surviving then living." Manice v. Manice, 43 N. Y. 303. See Westenberger v. Reist, 13 Pa. St. 594.

See further, as to what words or circumstances will restrain the meaning of the phrase "leaving no issue" to a definite failure, Eaton v. Straw, 18 N. H. 320; Dunn v. Bray, 1 Call (Va.) 338; Goodell v. Hibbard, 32 Mich. 47; Shiver's Estate, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 354; Bentley v. Naufman, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 352; Middleswarth v. Blackmore, 74 Pa. St. 414.

In Georgia and Alabama it is held that the words "die without leaving issue" import a definite failure of issue in devises of realty as well as bequests of personalty. Griswold v. Greer, 18 Ga. 550. See Flinn v. Davis, 18 Ala. 132; Edwards v. Bibb, 43 Ala. 666, 675.

2. Roper on Legacies, *551; Forth v. Chapman, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 663; Atkinson v. Hutchinson, 3 P. W. (Eng.) 258; Sabbarton v. Sabbarton, Cas. temp. Talb. (Eng.) 55, 245; Sheppard v. Lessingham, Amb. (Eng.) 122; Gordon v. Adolphus, 3 B. P. C. (Toml. ed.) 306; Taylor v. Clarke (2nd ed. Eng.) 202; Daintry v. Daintry, 6 T. R. (Eng.) 307; Radford v. Radford, 1 Kee. (Eng.) 486; Mansel v. Grove, 2 Y. & C. C. C. (Eng.) 484; Daniel v. Warren, 2 Y. & C. C. C. (Eng.) 290; Heather v. Winder, 5 L. J. (N. S.) Ch. 41; Hawkins v. Hamerton, 16 Sim. (Eng.) 421; Barnford v. Chadwick, 2 W. R. (Eng.) 530; Atkinson v. Hutchinson, 3 P. Wms. (Eng.) 258; Taylor v. Clarke, 2 Eden (Eng.) 202; Forth v. Chapman, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 663; Sheffield v. Lord Orrery, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 288; Lampley v. Blower, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 396; Stafford v. Buckley, 2 Ves. Sr. (Eng.) 180. See Southby v. Stonehouse, 2 Ves. Sr. (Eng.) 616; Daintry v. Daintry, 6 T. R. (Eng.) 307; Martin v. Long, Prec. Ch. (Eng.) 15; Goodtitle v. Pegden, 2 T. R. (Eng.) 720; Read v. Snell, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 642, 646; Mansell v. Grove, 2 Yo. & Coll. (Eng.) 484; Ladd v. Harvey, 21 N. H. 514, 527; Downing v. Wherrin, 19 N. H. 9; Albee v. Carpenter, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 382; Hall v. Priest, 6 Gray

tion are applied to both descriptions of property in the same sentence.¹ The words behind him, in the phrase "die without leaving issue behind him," or "leaving no issue behind him," create a definite failure of issue whether applied to real or personal estate.²

(Mass.) 18; Theological Seminary v. Kellogg, 16 N. Y. 83; Rathbone v. Dyckman, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 9; Still v. Spear, 3 Grant (Pa.) 306; Eichelberger v. Barnitz, 9 Watts (Pa.) 447; Bedford's Appeal, 40 Pa. St. 18; Nicholson v. Bettie, 57 Pa. St. 386; Biscoe v. Biscoe, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 232; Usitton v. Usitton, 3 Md. Ch. 36; Edelen v. Middleton, 9 Gill (Md.) 161; Allender v. Sussan, 33 Md. 11; Robert v. West, 15 Ga. 123; Moore v. Howe, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 199; Newman v. Miller, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 516; Robarós v. Jones, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) 53; Miller v. Williams, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 500; Perry v. Logan, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 202; Mazyck v. Vanderhurst, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 48; Flinn v. Davis, 18 Ala. 132; Bethea v. Smith, 40 Ala. 415.

The restrictive force of the word leaving, as applied to either real or personal estate, was at one time denied. Porter v. Bradley, 3 T. R. (Eng.) 146; Patterson v. Ellis, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 259. But is now firmly established as to personality. Crook v. De Vandes, 9 Ves. 197, 203; Elton v. Eason, 19 Ves. 77; Daintry v. Daintry, 6 T. R. (Eng.) 314; 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *499.

Real estate directed to be converted is for the purpose of this distinction regarded as personality. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *498. See Farthing v. Allen, 2 Mad. (Eng.) 310; Hawkins v. Hamerton, 16 Sim. (Eng.) 410.

The principle applies to bequests of leaseholds as well as personal chattles. Forth v. Chapman, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 663; Allender v. Sussan, 33 Md. 11.

1. Forth v. Chapman, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 663; Nazyck v. Vanderhurst, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 48.

In Alabama, it seems that the words "without leaving issue," in a gift of realty and personality together, will be construed to import a definite failure of issue. Edwards v. Bibb, 43 Ala. 666. See Also Clapp v. Fogleman, 1 Dev. & Bat. (N. Car.) Eq. 466; Jenkins v. Jenkins, 64 N. H. 407, 408.

See further, as to the distinction between real and personal estate. Crook v. De Vandes, 9 Ves. (Eng.) 203; Radford

v. Radford, 1 Kee. (Eng.) 486; Doe v. Ewart, 7 Ad. & El. (Eng.) 636.

Supplying the Word Leaving.—Where the testator in one part of the will uses the phrase "without leaving issue" and in another "without issue," the latter expression will be construed to correspond with the former where the general plan of the will seems to authorize it. 1 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *487, *531, *532; 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.), *500, n.; Sheppard v. Lessingham, Amb. (Eng.) 122; Radford v. Radford, 1 Kee. (Eng.) 486. See also Albee v. Carpenter, 12 Cush (Mass.) 382; Arnold v. Brown, 7 R. I. 188; Dumond v. Stringham, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 104; Norris v. Beyea, 13 N. Y. 273.

Thus where the limitation was to testator's brothers, E and C, or the heirs of their bodies, but if either brother should die leaving lawfully begotten heirs of his body, then the share or portion of such brother should descend to such lawfully begotten heirs; but if one brother should die without lawful issue then to the surviving brother, and in case both brothers should demise without issue lawfully begotten, over, held, that the gift over was good. "The first contingency is expressly on either brother dying leaving lawfully begotten heirs of his body. Then come the words, 'but if one brother shall die without lawful issue'—evidently meaning without leaving lawful issue at the time of his death—and last comes the contingency of 'both brothers demise without issue lawfully begotten,' by a natural if not necessary implication meaning without leaving issue at the time of their death." Greenway v. Greenway, 2 De G., F. & J. (Eng.) 128, 137.

But if there is anything in the limitations of the will to indicate that the testator intended each expression to have its individual force, the word leaving will not be supplied. Particularly will this be so where the effect of supplying the word is to divest the interest of a child who happened not to survive its parent. Pye v. Linwood, 6 Jur. (Eng.) 618.

2. Sheffield v. Lord Orrery, 3 Atk.

4. Without Leaving Issue Living at Time of Death.—If the gift over is expressly limited to take effect on the preceding devisee dying without leaving issue living at the time of his death, a definite failure of issue is created.¹

5. Gift Over Expressly Limited to Take Effect On, At or After Decease of First Taker.—In regard to personality, in the absence of controlling context, a gift over if A die without issue, expressly limited to take effect on, at or after his decease, restrains the indefinite meaning of the phrase “die without issue” to a failure of issue at A’s death.² So with regard to real estate where the words are at or on,³ and it is immaterial whether A takes the fee or only a (Eng.) 282, 287; Porter v. Bradley, 3 T. R. (Eng.) 143; Eichelberger v. Barritz, 9 Watts (Pa.) 447; Nicholson v. Bettle, 57 Pa. St. 384, 387.

1. Doe d. Barnfield v. Welton, 2 B. & P. (Eng.) 324. See Verulam v. Bathurst, 13 Sim. 374; WOODWARD, J., in Vaughan v. Alicks, 8 Harr., 20 Pa. St. 513; Henry v. Means, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 328. A fortiori then is this true of personality, and it is immaterial whether the gift be of the subject itself or only of the use. Cleveland v. Havens, 2 Beas. Ch. (N. J.) 101. Nevertheless, if words of the preceding limitation are such as would create an estate tail in realty, or an absolute interest in personality, the restricted construction will not affect the nature of the preceding estate. See post, § VII, 2.

2. Nichols v. Hooper, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 198; Pinkbury v. Elkin, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 563; Trotter v. Oswald, 1 Cox (Eng.) 317; Wilkinson v. South, 7 T. R. (Eng.) 555; Brackshaw v. Vile, 1 S. & St. (Eng.) 604; Dunk v. Fenner, 2 Russ. & My. (Eng.) 557; Strafford v. Powell, 1 Ba. & Be. (Eng.) 1; Smith Ex. Int., § 557; Roper on Legacies, *1549; Fea. C. R. (10th ed.) 471.

In regard to personal estate LORD HARDWICKE seemed to be of opinion that “on” and “after” were equivalent. Beauclerk v. Dormer, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 309, 313. It is quite probable, though, that the latter word is not quite so strong. Such is the case in regard to real estate. PAGE WOOD, V. C., in Parker v. Birks, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 165.

In Dorm v. Penny, 19 Ves. 548, 1 Mer. 22, SIR WM. GRANT intimated a doubt whether the word after was rightly held restrictive in Pinbury v. Elkin. See also Barlow v. Salter, 17 Ves. (Eng.) 483. But after Trotter v. Oswald, 1 Cox (Eng.) 312, and Wilkinson v. South, 7 T. R. (Eng.) 555, Mr.

Jarman thinks its authority must be considered established. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *525.

“Immediately after” is stronger than “after,” on account of the greater definiteness of the expression. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *523, 525; Stratton v. Payne, 3 B. P. C. (Toml. ed.) 99, cited in Read v. Snell, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 647.

3. Parker v. Birks, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 156; Ex parte Davies, 2 Sum. N. S. (Eng.) 114; Coltsman v. Coltsman, L. R., 3 H. L. (Eng.) 121; Doe d. Smith v. Webber, 1 B. & Ald. (Eng.) 713; Doe d. King v. Frost, 3 B. & Ald. (Eng.) 546; Heard v. Horton, 1 Denio (N. Y.) 165; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 659; Jones v. Jones, 20 Ga. 701.

So if the devise to A is in terms sufficient to give a constructive (though not an express) fee simple, as if the devise be to A, he paying £50 with a gift over if A die without issue, to take effect on the death of A. Hawkins on Wills, *207; Blinston v. Warburton, 2 K. & J. (Eng.) 400.

After.—There seems no reason to doubt that in the case of realty the words “after his decease” would prima facie mean immediately after, and receive the same construction as in the case of personality. Such was, in fact, the construction of a gift of all the residue, “both real and personal.” Trotter v. Oswald, 1 Cox (Eng.) 317. So where property was devised to B after the death of A. Theological Seminary v. Kellogg, 16 N. Y. 84. See Downing v. Wherrin, 19 N. H. 9; Atwell v. Barney, Dudley (Ga.) 207.

The distinction between the words on and after appears to be that the latter indicates a punctum temporis somewhat less exactly than the former, and hence is not quite so strong. PAGE WOOD, V. C., in Parker v. Birks, 1 K. & J.

life estate owing to the absence of words of limitation.¹

(Eng.) 165. See Walter v. Drew, Com. Rep. (Eng.) 373; Doe d. Cock v. Cooker, 1 East (Eng.) 229; Jones v. Ryan, 9 Ir. Eq. Rep. 249. Compare Ex parte Davies, 2 Sim., N. S. (Eng.) 114, where the word was at. Olivant v. Wright, 24 W. R. (Eng.) 84.

At and On.—There is no distinction between at and on. KINDERSLEY, V. C., in Ex parte Davies, 2 Sim., N. S. (Eng.) 114.

Context may of course show that the recognized construction of on or at was not intended. Peyton v. Lambert, 8 Jr. Com. L. Rep. 485.

1. Theobald on wills (2nd ed.) 543; Coltsman v. Coltsman, L. R., 3 H. L. (Eng.) 121.

"Where the preceding devisee would take the fee, the convenience is all on the side of the restricted construction, which renders such fee defeasible on his not leaving issue at his death, and places the estate out of the power of the first taker, who might, if he were tenant in tail (as he would be if the words were construed to mean an indefinite failure of issue), defeat the ulterior estate. To prevent this consequence, the courts have generally, in such cases, lent a willing ear to the arguments in favor of the restricted (and which we have seen to be the popular) interpretation of these words. On the other hand, where the first devise would confer an estate for life only, the restricted construction imputes a very improbable intention to the testator; for, as it raises no estate tail in the first devisee, nor (it should seem) an implied estate by purchase in the issue, the land goes absolutely from the devisee at his death, whether he leave issue or not; and that event is material only as bearing on the right of the ulterior devisee; for, although the property ceases to belong to the prior devisee, whether he leave issue surviving him or not, yet it is to pass over to the remainder man only in case the prior devisee do not leave issue, which it is hard to suppose could have been really meant." 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *519, *520.

Accordingly the rule, extracted from the earlier cases, is: "That when there is nothing in the will to give an estate to the issue, or to give the ancestor more than a life interest, words in the limitation over not directly expressing, but which in the generality of cases would be considered as intimating, an intention on the part of the testator that the failure of issue should be confined to a limited period, shall not have this effect; but that, on the contrary, the gift over shall, if possible, be construed as taking effect on an indefinite failure of issue, for the purpose of creating an estate tail in the ancestor and thereby securing a dissolution of the property to his issue. Prior on Issue, § 104. Approved by PAGE WOOD, V. C., in Blinston v. Warburton, 2 K. & J. (Eng.) 400, 405. This construction is supported by Simmons v. Simmons, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 22; Wyld v. Lewis, 1 Atk. (Eng.) 432; s. c., West's Rep. 311; Butt v. Thomas, 2 Ex. (Eng.) 235; 1 H. & N. (Eng.) 109; Hawkins on Wills, *207; 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.), *520; Hellem v. Severs, 24 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 320, 327.

From LORD HARDWICKE's memorandum, added to his own note to Wyld v. Lewis, West's Rep. 311, it appears that the prevailing idea in his mind was to put such construction upon the will as would secure the estate to the testator's grandchildren. Nor will the restricted construction be adopted where the gift to the first taker standing alone, would confer an estate tail. Hawkins, *207; Hellem v. Severs, 24 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 320, 327; Riggs v. Sally, 3 Shep. (Me.) 408, 411.

The preceding estate tail would not be cut down by a gift over on definite failure of issue, under any circumstances. See post, § VII, 2. Otherwise where the devise to the first taker is a constructive fee. Blinston v. Warburton, 2 K. & J. (Eng.) 400.

Such, then, being the preceding state of the law, what construction is to be placed upon Coltsman v. Coltsman? Are the above distinctions entirely abolished, or only modified? In this case testator devised and bequeathed to his son, John Coltsman, "all those my property, lands, tenements and premises at and about Flesk Castle," and also "my lands, tenements and premises at Dick's Grove." He afterwards made a codicil, in which he said: "If it should happen that my son, John Coltsman, die without heirs of his body, lawfully, etc.; in that case, and in default of such heirs, I do hereby devise and direct that my lands, etc., at Flesk Castle . . . and also my lands at Dick's Grove," all subject to an annuity to his wife, and

6. Effect of the Word "Then."—In the absence of controlling context, the word "then" in a gift to A, and if A die without issue, then to B, is a particle of reference connecting the consequence with the premises, meaning in that event, or if that happens, rather than an adverb of time, and does not affect the construction either in regard to real or personal estate.¹

with reasonable provision for his son's wife, "shall, at my son's death, descend and be transferred to my grandson, D. C." Held, that, as to both devises, the words "at my son's death" restrained the words "die without heirs of the body" to a failure of issue at the son's death; that, as to Flesk Castle, the word property carried the fee, and the effect of the will and codicil together was to create an executory devise over in the event of John Coltsmann dying without heirs of his body living at his death; but, as to Dick's Grove, the words of limitation over, being the same, must be construed in the same way and, as under the words of the will, as the law then stood, John Coltsmann took an estate for life only; the gift over took effect as a contingent remainder, in the event of John Coltsmann dying without heirs of his body living at his death.

Mr. Theobald seems to be of opinion that this decision has abolished the distinction laid down by Mr. Prior.

[In 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *520, *521, it is suggested that] The English editor of the 4th London edition of Jarman on Wills seems to be of opinion that Coltsmann v. Coltsmann may be reconciled with the view taken by Mr. Prior and Mr. Jarman by restraining its application to cases in which the fee simple and the life estate are both devised to the same person, with a gift over if he die without issue, and afterwards both given over in one and the same sentence at his death. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *520, 521.

This position is strengthened by the fact that it was unnecessary to decide whether the estate of John Coltsmann was for life only, with contingent remainder to D. C., or enlarged to a fee tail by the gift over; as in one case his disentailing deed destroyed the contingent remainder and in the other barred the entail, and in either gave him the fee. This view is also strengthened by the fact that Wylde v. Lewis, West's Rep. 311, was not cited.

On the other hand, it should be observed that the position that the words

"at my son's death" in the limitation over should have the same construction as to Dick's Grove that they had in the case of Flesk Castle (see p. 132) is inconsistent with the position that John Coltsmann's estate could be enlarged by the limitation over, to an estate tail; for those words in the case of Flesk Castle created a definite failure of issue, and a gift over on definite failure of issue has no effect on the preceding limitation. Moreover, the opinion of LORDS CRANWORTH and CHELMSFORD was express that John Coltsmann took an estate for life only, with contingent remainder to D. C. (see pp. 134, 136).

The case was not cited in Hillem v. Severs, 24 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 320, and the court does not appear to have been aware of its decision.

1. Beauclerk v. Dormer, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 308; Stanley v. Lennard, 1 Ed. (Eng.) 87; LORD BROUGHAM, in Campbell v. Harding, 2 Ry. & My. (Eng.) 411; Pye v. Linwood, 6 Jur. (Eng.) 619; Gill v. Barrett, 29 Beav. (Eng.) 372; Peyton v. Lambert, 8 Ir. Com. L. Rep. 485; Thomas v. Mann, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 238; Royall v. Eppes, 2 Munf. (Va.) 479; Mathews v. Page, 1 Mur. (N. Car.) 42; Bryson v. Davidson, 1 Mur. (N. Car.) 143; Porter v. Ross, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 196; Clifton v. Haig, 4 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 330.

In some cases in regard to personal estate the words "then and in that case," when somewhat aided by the context have been held sufficient to restrain the words "dying without issue" to the death of the person spoken of, but it seems that they have no appreciable effect upon a devise of realty. Diehl v. King, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 29, 32; Lawrence v. Lawrence, 105 Pa. St. 335. See Royall v. Eppes, 2 Munf. (Va.) 479; Timberlake v. Graves, 6 Munf. (Va.) 174; Josetti v. McGregor, 49 Md. 202, 313.

But unless aided by context it can have no restraining effect even in case of personality. Bryson v. Davidson, 1 Mur. (N. Car.) 143; Chism v. Williams, 29 Mo. 288, 296; Thomas v. Mann, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 238.

7. Die Under Twenty-one and Without Issue—Unmarried, or Before Marriage, and Without Issue.—Where the dying without issue is combined with an event personal to the devisee, as where the devise is to A and his heirs with a limitation over if he die under twenty-one and without issue,¹ or die without issue and unmar-

The Georgia cases manifest such a clear intent to evade the indefinite construction, that they cannot be relied upon outside the State. See Harris v. Smith, 16 Ga. 550; Griswold v. Greer, 18 Ga. 550.

The phrase "then after his decease," "then upon his death," has a restraining effect when uncontrolled by the context, by reason of the "on" or "after," rather than the word "then." Wilkins v. South, 7 T. R. (Eng.) 555; Payton v. Lambert, 8 Ir. Com. L. Rep. 485.

But in Snyder's Appeal, 95 Pa. St. 174, 183, "then" was held an adverb of time and sufficient by itself to create a definite failure of issue.

1. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *506, 507; Hawkins on Wills, *212; Smith Ex. Int., §§ 549, 551, 552; Hinde v. Lyon, 3 Leon (Eng.) 64; Price v. Hunt, Pollex. (Eng.) 645; Hanbury v. Cockerill, 8 Vin. Ab. Dev. 2. (a), pl. 4; Anon Dyer, 124 a, 354 a; Eastman v. Baker, 1 Taunt (Eng.) 174; Toovey v. Bassett, 10 East (Eng.) 460; Right v. Day, 16 East (Eng.) 67; Glover v. Monckton, 3 Bing. (Eng.) 13; s. c., 2 E. C. L. R.; Doe d. Johnson v. Johnson, 8 Ex. (Eng.) 81; Gwyne v. Berry, Ir. Rep., 9 C. L. 494; Morris v. Morris, 17 Beav. (Eng.) 198; Beachcroft v. Broome, 4 D. & E. (Eng.) 441; Glover v. Monckton, 3 Bing. (Eng.) 15; Bell v. Scammon, 15 N. H. 381; Downing v. Wherrin, 19 N. H. 9; 49 Am. Dec. 139; Ray v. Euslin, 2 Mass. 554; Parker v. Parker, 5 Met. (Mass.) 154; Jackson v. Blansham, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 54; Norris v. Beye, 13 N. Y. 273; Welsh v. Elliott, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 205; Hauer v. Sheetz, 3 Yea. (Pa.) 205; Holmes v. Holmes, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 253; Eichelberger v. Barnitz, 9 Watts (Pa.) 447; Thornton's Exrs. v. Krepps, 37 Pa. St. 391; Doebler's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 9; Berg v. Anderson, 72 Pa. St. 87; Beltzhoover v. Costen, 7 Barr (Pa.) 13. See also Holcomb v. Lake, 1 Dutch. (N. J.) 605; Brogdon v. Walker, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 285; Chew v. Weems, 1 Harr. & M. (Md.) 463; Dallam v. Dallam, 7 Harr. & J. (Md.) 172; Watkins v. Sears, 3 Gill (Md.) 172; Neal v. Cosden, 34 Md. 421;

Carpenter v. Boulden, 48 Md. 122; Adams v. Chaplin, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 265; Rivers v. Fripp, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 276; Perry v. Logan, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 202; Carr v. Jeannerett, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 66; Massie v. Jordan, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 646.

Where the gift over is to take effect in case the first taker "die under twenty-one and without issue," or "in his minority and without issue," or "under twenty-one or without issue" (or being read and), both contingencies must occur to enable the gift over to take effect. Hauer v. Sheetz, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 205; Holmes v. Holmes, 5 Bin. (Pa.) 253; Welsh v. Elliott, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 205; Beltzhoover v. Costen, 7 Barr (Pa.) 13; Thornton's Exrs. v. Krepps, 37 Pa. St. 391; Neal v. Cosden, 34 Md. 421.

If the first taker dies without issue after having attained twenty-one, his estate is not defeated. Grimball v. Patton, 70 Ala. 626; Williams v. Dickerson, 2 Root (Conn.) 191; Neal v. Cosden, 34 Md. 421.

Where the gift over was to take effect in case the testator's son should not live to attain twenty-one, or in case, he should live to attain such age, but should afterwards die without lawful issue, and the son attained twenty-one, it was held that he took a fee with an executory devise over, in the event of his dying without having issue living at his death. Glover v. Monckton, 3 Bing. (Eng.) 13.

So where the words were, "if he die without issue, either before or after coming of age." Booker v. Booker, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 508.

Bequest to A, "when he shall arrive at twenty-one years of age," and "if he should die without issue," over. Held, if A should attain his majority, receive the estate, and then die without issue, the limitation over will be good. Sims v. Conger, 39 Miss. 231; 77 Am. Dec. 671.

Where Devise to First Taker Is in Tail.—Where the devise to the first taker is an estate tail, a gift over, if such first devisee dies under age and without issue, takes effect as a contingent remainder dependent upon the ried, or before marriage, or without leaving a husband or wife¹—double contingency of the first taker dying under the specified age and without issue. Grey v. Pearson, 6 H. L. Cas. *60, 61. See Marshall v. Grime, 28 Beav. (Eng.) 375.

This necessarily follows from the fact that a gift over, or definite failure of issue, has no effect upon the preceding limitation. See post, § VII, 2.

Or Construed And.—If the gift over be in case A die under twenty-one, or without issue, or will be construed and, "to avoid the mischief which would otherwise happen of carrying over the estate if the first devisee died under the age of twenty-one, though he had left issue, when it was the apparent intention of the deviser that both events should happen, the dying under twenty-one and without issue, before the estate should go over." ELLENBOROUGH, C. J., in Right v. Day, 16 East (Eng.) 67, 68. See also Arnold v. Buffum, 2 Mas. (U. S.) 208, 222; Ray v. Euslin, 2 Mass. 554; Parker v. Parker, 5 Met. (Mass.) 134, 136; Hunt v. Hunt, 11 Met. (Mass.) 88; Jackson v. Blansham, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 54; Hauer v. Sheetz, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 203; Rapp v. Rapp, 6 Barr (Pa.) 45; Beltzhoover v. Costen, 7 Barr (Pa.) 13; Holcomb v. Lake, 1 Dutch. (N. J.) 605; Abrahams v. English, 2 Harr. (N. J.) 280; Doe v. Mugway, 3 Green (N. J.) 330; Doe v. Roe, 1 Harr. (Del.) 476; Brogdon v. Walker, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 285; Dallam v. Dallam, 7 Harr. & J. (Md.) 172; Watkins v. Sears, 3 Gill (Md.) 492; Chew v. Weems, 1 Harr. & M. (Md.) 463; Witsell v. Mitchell, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 289; Carr v. Jeannerett, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 66; Perry v. Logan, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 202; Munroe v. Holmes, 1 Brevard (S. Car.) 319; Bostick v. Smith, 1 Spears (S. Car.) 258. The fact that the devisees were of full age at the time the will was made does not affect the construction. Beltzhoover v. Costen, 7 Barr (Pa.) 13.

But if the devise to the first taker, instead of being to A and his heirs forever, or to A for life, and after his death to his heirs (which confers a fee under rule in Shelly's case), is to A and the heirs of his body, or in any other words which vest an estate tail in the first taker, or will retain its natural construction. Mortimer v. Hartley, 6 Ex. (Eng.) 46, 60, 62. See Grey v. Pearson, 6 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) *60, *61. Contra,

Ward v. Waller, 2 Spears (S. Car.) 786.

For further discussion of changing words in testaments, see WILLS.

And Construed Or.—Where the limitation over was to take effect in case the legatees or devisees die unmarried and without issue, the clause has been sometimes construed in the disjunctive, and the gift over held to take effect on the death of one married but without leaving issue. Wilson v. Bayly, 3 B. P. C. (Toml. ed.) 195; Hepworth v. Taylor, 1 Cox (Eng.) 112; Maberly v. Strode, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 350; Bell v. Phynn, 7 Ves. (Eng.) 459; Mackenzie v. King, 12 Jur. (Eng.) 787; 17 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 448.

But where the limitation over was to take effect if the devisee died "under the age of twenty-one and without issue," and the devisee attained twenty-one, but died without issue; held, that the words must be read in their ordinary sense as written, and that the limitation over depended upon the double event of the devisee dying under twenty-one and without issue, which, not having happened, the limitation over did not take effect, but the estate descended to the heir at law of the testator. Grey v. Pearson, 6 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) *60, *61.

This case has been considered as overruling Bell v. Phynn, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 350; and Maberly v. Strode, 7 Ves. (Eng.) 459, by SIR J. ROMILLY, in Seecombe v. Edwards, 28 Beav. (Eng.) 440; L. R., 1 Eq. 680. See also Dillon v. Harris, 4 Bligh, N. S. (Eng.) 329.

1. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.), *507; Doe d. Johnson v. Johnson, 8 Ex. (Eng.) 81; Doe d. Everett v. Cooke, 7 East (Eng.) 269; Doe d. Baldwin v. Rawding, 2 B. & Ald. (Eng.) 441; Jones v. Sotheron, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 126; Downing v. Wherrin, 19 N. H. 9; 49 Am. Dec. 139; Garland v. Watt, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 287; Schultz v. Schultz, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 358.

Contra, O'Donohoe v. King, 8 Ir. Eq. Rep. 185.

Where the devise was to S and his heirs, but in case S should die before attaining twenty-one, or after having attained that age should die unmarried, or having been married should die without lawful issue, then over, it was held that S took an estate in fee with which is the meaning of unmarried in this connection¹—the indefinite meaning of the words die without issue is restrained to a dying under the given age and leaving no issue surviving, or unmarried, before marriage, or without leaving a husband or wife.² The principle applies with even greater force to bequests of personality.³

8. Gift Over if A Survives B and Dies Without Issue, or in Case the Issue Die Under Age.—If the event with which the dying without issue is associated is not personal to the devisee, as where the gift over is to take effect if A survives B (a preceding devisee) an executory devise over on the happening of any of the three specified events, and that the last event was his death without leaving issue surviving him. Doe d. Johnson v. Johnson, 8 Ex. (Eng.) 81. Compare Gleated v. Gleated, 26 Beav. (Eng.) 621; Deihs v. King, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 32. But in O'Donohoe v. King, 8 Ir. Eq. Rep. 191, the court considered the principle of Glover v. Monckton, 3 Bing. (Eng.) 13, inapplicable to a gift over, "if A died unmarried and without issue," unless assisted by the context. It should also be observed that the construction in Doe v. Johnson was somewhat aided by the context. It is believed, however, that the weight of authority is decidedly in favor of the position in the text.

In Pennsylvania, the words "unmarried and without issue," were said to be sufficient to create a definite failure of issue. SERGEANT, J. in Eichelberger v. Barnitz, 9 Watts (Pa.) 447.

But later cases hold that the indefinite construction will be retained, in devises of realty, unless the restricted force of the word "unmarried" is aided by the context. Matlack v. Roberts, 54 Pa. St. 148.

But see McCullough v. Fenton, 65 Pa. St. 418, 427. On the other hand, a devise over on death before marriage is itself restrictive. Jessup v. Smuck, 16 Pa. St. 327.

In regard to personality, the words "unmarried and without issue," are in themselves sufficient to create a definite failure of issue.

Deihs v. King, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 32; Rapp v. Rapp, 6 Pa. St. 49.

1. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *507.

"The word unmarried means either never having been married or not having a husband or wife at the time. The former is the ordinary signification and it was so used in the cases stated above (i. e. Wilson v. Bayly, 3 B. P. C. Toml (Eng.) 195; Hepworth v. Taylor, 1 Cox (Eng.) 112; Maberly v. Strode, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 450; Bell v. Phynn, 7 Ves. (Eng.) 459; Mackenzie v. King, 12 Jur. 787; s. c., 17 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 448), where, however, the effect of such construction was to render the word inoperative. But the sound rule in such cases would seem to be to construe the expression as used in the latter, being its less accustomed sense, which has the two-fold advantage that it removes the necessity of changing the particle and to or, and gives effect to all the testator's words." 1 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *521.

2. Thus where there was a gift over in case the devisee "should die under the age of twenty-one years, unmarried and without lawful issue," another devisee died under age and without issue, but leaving a husband surviving, it was held the gift over failed. Doe d. Baldwin v. Rawding, 2 B. & Ald. (Eng.) 441. See also Doe d. Everett v. Cooke, 7 East (Eng.) 269; Re Sanders' Trusts, L. R., 1 Eq. 675; Mangham v. Vincent, 9 L. J., N. S., Ch. (Eng.) 329; s. c., 4 Jur. (Eng.) 452. Compare In re Thistlewayte's Trust, 31 Eng. L. & Eq. 547; Radford v. Willis, L. R., 7 Ch. (Eng.) 7.

For further discussion of meaning of word unmarried in wills and marriage settlements, see LEGACIES AND DEVISES, AND WILLS.

3. Martin v. Long, 2 Vern. (Eng.) 151; Pawlett v. Doggett, 2 Vern. (Eng.) 86; Bradshaw v. Skelbeck, 2 Bing. N. S. (Eng.) 182; Morris v. Morris, 17 Beav. (Eng.) 198; Deihs v. King, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 28; Eichelberger v. Barnitz, 9 Watts (Pa.) 447; Rapp v. Rapp, 6 Pa. St. 45; Grimball v. Patton, 70 Ala. 626; Sims v. Conger, 39 Miss. 231; s. c., 77 Am. Dec. 671.

and dies without issue,¹ or if A should die without issue, or such issue should die under the age of twenty-one years,² the preceding principle has no application, and A takes an estate tail.

9. Dying Without Issue in Lifetime of Person Living at Testator's Decease, or Before Possession or Period of Distribution.—Where the dying without issue is restricted to some definite period collateral to the devisee, as where the gift over is to take effect in case he should die without issue in the lifetime of some person living at the testator's decease,³ or before the time fixed for possession or distribution,⁴ the failure of issue is restrained within the prescribed period.

10. Gift Over to Survivors or to Persons "Then Living."—In regard to personal estate, prima facie, a bequest over to the survivor or survivors of two or more persons after the death of one without issue, affords the presumption that an indefinite failure of issue could not have been intended.⁵ But in regard to devises of

1. Fekes v. Standley, 24 Beav. (Eng.) 485.

2. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *508; SHADWELL, V. C., in Grimshawe v. Pickup, 9 Sin. (Eng.) 596. But see Booker v. Booker, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 505.

The contingency of the issue dying under age is comprised in the contingency expressed by the preceding words, and therefore superfluous. But see Smith Ex. Int., § 260.

3. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *508; Hawkins on Wills, *211, *213; Pells v. Brown, Cr. Jac. (Eng.) 590; Jarman v. Pye, L. R., 2 Eq. (Eng.) 784. See Doe d. Knight v. Chaffey, 16 M. & W. (Eng.) 656; Toman v. Dunlap, 18 Pa. St. 72; Daley v. Koons, 90 Pa. St. 246; Goldsbrough v. Martin, 41 Md. 488; Lesley v. Collier, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 125.

The principle has been applied to both real and personal estate. Hawkins on Wills, *211.

4. Crowder v. Stone, 3 Russ. (Eng.) 217. See as to realty Bennett v. Lowe, 5 M. & Pay. (Eng.) 485; 7 Bing. (Eng.) 535; Ex parte Bate, 11 W. R. (Eng.) 417, 1 N. R. (Eng.) 470.

"Death without lawful" issue denotes generally an indefinite failure of issue. But in this case a time is limited within which the failure of issue is to take place, and that is the time when the fund is to become divisible." So held where the bequest over was to take effect on the death of any of the legatees without lawful issue before their respective shares should become due and payable. Crowder v. Stone, 3 Russ. (Eng.) 217.

5. Sir J. Leach, 2 My. & K. (Eng.) 441; Hughes v. Sayer, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 534; Messey v. Hudson, 2 Mer. (Eng.) 133; Ranelagh v. Ranelagh, 2 My. & K. (Eng.) 441; Turner v. Frampton, 2 Coll. (Eng.) 231; Westwood v. Southey, 2 Sim. N. S. (Eng.) 192; Fisher v. Barry, 2 Hog. (Eng.) 153; Roper on Legacies, *1548. But Gray v. Shawne, 1 Eden (Eng.) 157.

Reason for Rule—Effect of Superadded Words of Limitation.—The reason for the construction is that "it will be intended that the survivor was meant individually and personally to enjoy the legacy, and not merely to take a vested interest which might or might not be accompanied by actual possession." SIR W. GRANT, M. R., in Massey v. Hudson, 2 Mer. (Eng.) 133.

Hence, if the word survivor means, not the person surviving the failure of issue but the longest liver of the legatees, so that one legatee surviving another would take a transmissible interest before the failure of issue, the reason of the rule does not exist and the failure of issue will not be restricted. Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 545; Chadock v. Cowley, Cro. Jac. (Eng.) 695.

For the same reason words of limitation superadded to the word survivor repel the presumption arising from the use of that word that a merely personal benefit was intended; for though there should be no such failure of issue as would enable the survivors personally to take, yet his representatives would be entitled to claim in his right whenever the failure of issue should happen. Massey v. Hudson, 2 Mer. (Eng.) 134.

realty in England, it seems a gift to survivors has no restrictive effect.¹

See also O'Donohue v. King, 8 Ir. Eq. Rep. 185.

"Where words of inheritance or succession are superadded to the limitation in favor of survivors, who are to take after a general failure of the issue of the first taker, such issue cannot take as purchasers. The ulterior limitation over in such a case would itself fail for remoteness, and therefore cannot import such restrictive modification to the words heirs of the body or issue living at the death of the first taker." DARGAN, Ch., in Barksdale v. Gamage, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 271, 273; Presley v. Davis, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 108. Contra, Threadgill v. Ingram, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 577.

It is a very grave question whether the unrestricted construction is adopted in such cases merely by reason of the addition of the superadded words of succession or limitation or because the survivor takes a transmissible interest. In other words is the unrestricted construction due to the use of the words of limitation ipso facto or to the effect produced by them? The former view seems to be the more accurate, since the restricted construction has prevailed in consequence of the use of the word survivor in several cases where such survivor has taken a transmissible interest. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *528. See Hughes v. Sayer, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 534; Turner v. Frampton, 2 Coll. (Eng.) 331; Westwood v. Southey, 2 Sim., N. S. (Eng.) 192; Greenwood v. Verdon, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 74.

Both Theobald and Smith seem to be of opinion that the transmissibility of the interest and not the form of expression is the important matter. Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 545, 546; Smith Ex. Int., §§ 553, 555. See also the language employed in Presley v. Davis, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 105, 62 Am. Dec. 396; Assignees of Leadbeater, Ir. R., 8 Eq. 422; McClenaghan v. Bankhead, Ir. R., 8 C. L. 195; Taylor v. Walker, 13 W. R. (Eng.) 986; Garratt v. Cockerell, 1 Y. & C. C. C. (Eng.) 494; Harris v. Davis, 1 Coll. (Eng.) 416.

1. Hawkins on Wills, *210. See Chadock v. Cowley, Cro. Jac. 695; Roe v. Scott, Fearne C. R. 473, n.; Taylor v. Walker, 13 W. R. (Eng.) 986; Estate of Assignees of Leadbeater, Ir. R., 8 Eq.; McClenaghan v. Bankhead, Ir.

Rep., 8 C. L. 195; Greenwood v. Verdon, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 74.

In the last two cases the possibility of applying the principle to real estate was impliedly recognized, although the decision turned in both cases upon another point.

Gift to Persons Then Living.—On the principle that a personal benefit was intended a gift to "the then surviving legatees," or to "persons then living," the persons being such as must be ascertained within the limits of perpetuity, has been construed to create a definite failure of issue. This principle applies to both real and personal estate. Greenwood v. Verdon, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 74; Murray v. Addenbrook, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 407. See 2 Jarman on Wills *512, *528; Theobald on Wills (2d ed.) 544; Campbell v. Harding, 2 R. & Myl. (Eng.) 390; Langley v. Heald, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 96.

In such cases the failure of issue contemplated is not a failure at the death of the ancestor, but at any time during the lives of legatees to take under the gift over, and the principle of Crowder v. Stone (see ante, 9) applies. See also Jarman v. Pye, L. R., 2 Eq. (Eng.) 784.

The gift over, however, must not embrace an indefinite range of unborn persons, and where the class to whom the property is given would include persons coming into being at any time before the failure of issue takes place, there is no reason for adopting the restrictive construction. Webster v. Parr, 26 Beav. (Eng.) 236; Prior on Issue, p. 85; Distouches v. Walker, 2 Ed. (Eng.) 261; Candy v. Campbell, 8 Bl. N. S. (Eng.) 469.

When, however, it is once ascertained by the description of the ulterior legatees as living at the period of failure, that failure at the death of the party is meant, an alternative gift to take effect if none of those legatees are then living, to others not so described, must also be valid. Jones v. Cullimore, 3 Jur., N. S. (Eng.) 444; Gee v. Liddell, L. R., 2 Eq. (Eng.) 341.

"If the event which is made the condition precedent of the ulterior gift is not the fact of the legatee surviving the extinction of issue, but merely that of his surviving the person whose failure of issue is referred to, no ground is thereby laid for the restricted construction, as the ulterior gift might be intended to confer a vested interest on the death of such person, to take effect in possession in favor of the representatives of the legatee on the failure of issue at any remote period." 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *528. See Garratt v. Cockerell, 1 Yo. & Coll., C. C. (Eng.) 494.

In the United States.—Where the limitation over is to others, or survivors of a class of, or surviving heirs or children of, the first taker, a definite failure of issue is generally intended. In many States the principle applies to devises and bequests alike. Jackson v. Chew, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 153; 7 Abbott v. Essex Co., 18 How. (U. S.) 202, 215-217; Anderson v. Jackson, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 382; Lion v. Burtis, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 408; Fosdick v. Cornell, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 440; Moffat v. Strong, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 12; Pinckney v. Pinckney, 1 Bradt., (N. Y.) 269; Dumond v. Stringham, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 104; Wilkes v. Lion, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 385; Cutter v. Doughty, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 513; Norris v. Beyea, 13 N. Y. 273; Pinkham v. Blair, 57 N. H. 227, 240; Kimball v. Penballow, 60 N. H. 448; Den v. Shenk, 3 Hals. (N. J.) 29; Fairchild v. Crane, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 108; Heddel v. Wells, Spencer (N. J.) L. 223; Groves v. Cox, 40 N. J. L. 40, 44; Zollicoffer v. Zollicoffer, 4 Dev. & Bat. L. (N. Car.) 438; Threadgill v. Ingram, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 577; Porter v. Ross, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 196; Southerland v. Cox, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 394; Hilliard v. Kearney, 1 Busb. Eq. (N. Car.) 221; Lowry v. O'Bryan, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 262; McCorkle v. Black, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 407; Carson v. Kennerley, 8 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 259; Gillam v. Caldwell, 11 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 73; De Treville v. Ellis, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 40; Stevens v. Patterson, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) Eq. 42; McGraw v. Davenport, 6 Port. (Ala.) 319; Williams v. Graves, 17 Ala. 62; Gray v. Bridgforth, 4 Geo. (Miss.) 312; Rucker v. Lambdin, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 31; Birney v. Richardson, 5 Dana (Ky.) 427; Hart v. Thompson, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 487; Deboe v. Lowen, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 616; Lewis v. Claiborne, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 369; 26 Am. Dec. 270; Turner v. Ivie, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 222; Booker v. Booker, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 505; Williams v. Turner, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 289; Moody v. Walker, 3 Ark. 148; Cooper v. Hayes, 96 Ind. 386.

But in some cases it has been held in conformity with the English decisions that a gift to survivors has no restrictive force in devises of realty. Jackson v. Dashiell, 3 Md. Ch. 257; Hoxton v. Archer, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 199; Bells v. Gillespie, 5 Rand. (Va.) 273; Broadus v. Turner, 5 Rand. (Va.) 308; Nowlin v. Winfree, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 348. Compare Williams v. Graves, 17 Ala. 62; Mayer v. Wiltberger, Ga. Dec., pt. 2, 27; Forman v. Troup, 30 Ga. 496, 499; Burton v. Black, 30 Ga. 638; Cox v. Buck, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 604; Morgan v. Morgan, 5 Day (Conn.) 517; Dart v. Dart, 7 Conn. 250; Clarke v. Terry, 34 Conn. 176; Burrough v. Foster, 6 R. I. 534; Morris v. Potter, 10 R. I. 58, 69.

In Massachusetts, Hall v. Priest, 6 Gray (Mass.) 18, follows the English authorities; but later authorities favor the restricted construction, even as regards devises of realty. Richardson v. Noyes, 2 Mass. 62; Brightman v. Brightman, 100 Mass. 238; Allen v. Trustees, 102 Mass. 262; Hooper v. Bradbury, 133 Mass. 303; Abbott v. Essex Co., 2 Curtis (U. S.) 126; 18 How. (U. S.) 203.

As to Maine, see Richardson v. Richardson (Me.), 16 Atl. Rep. 250.

In Pennsylvania the restrictive force of a gift to survivors has been recognized in bequests of personality. Mifflin v. Neal, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 460; Rapp v. Rapp, 6 Pa. St. 49; Bedford's Appeal, 40 Pa. St. 22.

Also in blended dispositions of real and personal estate. Ingersoll's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 240. But see Smith's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 9. But 'not in devises of realty alone. Caskey v. Brewer, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 441; Lapsley v. Lapsley, 9 Pa. St. 130; Wall v. Maguire, 24 Pa. St. 248; contra, Johnson v. Currin, 10 Pa. St. 498. See Clark v. Baker, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 470; Haines v. Witmer, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 400.

Rest—Remainder—Others.—The words "rest," "remainder," or "others," are not equivalent to survivor, and afford no presumption that a definite failure of issue was intended.

The term survivors has the restrictive operation where benefit to the persons in life not transmissible to heirs and representatives is intended. The vice of remoteness is not escaped where the gift over is to persons in being by name or to survivors and their heirs and representatives, for in these cases the heirs and representatives would be entitled to take at whatever time the issue

11. Gift Over to Person Named.—The fact that the gift over is to particular individual, specified by name, is not in itself sufficient to restrict the failure of issue, on the ground that a personal enjoyment was intended. This applies to both real and personal estate.¹

12. Direction to Pay Money.—A direction in the will for the payment of a sum of money upon the decease of the person upon the failure of whose issue the gift over is to take effect, or within a short time afterwards, imports a definite failure of issue. This applies both to real and personal property.²

13. Personal Trust.—A personal trust created by the gift over stands on the same footing as a personal interest,³ and raises a of the first taker might fail. Presley v. Davis, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 105; 62 Am. Dec. 396.

See also Smith Ex. Int., §§ 553, 555. So where survivor is construed other. Richardson v. Richardson (Me.), 16 Atl. Rep. 250; Allen v. Trustees, 102 Mass. 262. See Clark v. Baker, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 470; Haines v. Witmer, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 400; Lapsley v. Lapsley, 9 Pa. St. 130; Smith v. Osborne, 6 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) *374; 2 Redfield Wills (2nd ed.) *374. But see Cooper v. Hayes, 96 Ind. 386.

Where a testator bequeaths personal estate to his two daughters and directed that upon the demise of either of them without issue, the share of her so dying should go to her sister without adding the words executors, administrators and assigns, the limitation over was construed as if it were a limitation to the survivor, because the dying of one without issue seemed to mean a dying without issue in the lifetime of the other. Smith Ex. Int., § 556; Mac Kinnon v. Peach, 2 Keen (Eng.) 555. But see Green v. Rod, Fitzgibb. (Eng.) 68, stated Fearne 481. See Fearne 483.

1. Lord Beauclerk v. Dormer, 1 Atk. (Eng.) 307; Barlow v. Salter, 17 Ves. (Eng.) 307; Fearne C. R. 481; Usitton v. Usitton, 3 Md. Ch. 36; Presley v. Davis, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 105.

In some cases where a gift over is made to certain persons in being, without words of limitation, it has been considered as intended as a personal benefit to those persons and the gift will be construed to take effect on the death of the first legatees without issue during the lives of the ultimate legatees. Eichelberger v. Barnitz, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 293. See Deihl v. King, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 33; Timberlake v. Graves, 6 Munz. (Va.) 175; Biscoe v. Biscoe, 6

Gill & J. (Md.) 232; Woodland v. Wallis, 6 Md. 151; Budd v. State, 22 Md. 48; Clifton v. Haig, 4 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 330.

2. Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 543; Nichols v. Hooper, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 198; 2 Vern. (Eng.) 686; Doe d. Smith v. Webber, 1 B. & Ald. (Eng.) 713 (E. C. L. vol. 5); King v. Frost, 3 B. & Ald. (Eng.) 546; Blinston v. Warburton, Fearne C. R. 471; 2 K. & I. (Eng.) 400. See Goodwin v. Clarke, 1 Lev. (Eng.) 35; In re Rye's Settlement, 10 Hare (Eng.) 106; Smith Ex. Int., §§ 560, 561; Hill v. Hill, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 419; Eaton v. Straw, 18 N. H. 329; Buchanan's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 448; Hauer v. Sheetz, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 205; Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. St. 485; Coyle's Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 243; Middlewarth's Admr. v. Blackmore, 74 Pa. St. 414. Compare James's Claim, 1 Dal. (Pa.) 47; Evans' Lessee v. Davis, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 332; Criley v. Chamberlain, 13 P. F. S. (Pa.) 481.

But in Standley v. Feakes, 24 Beav. (Eng.) 485, 488, it was held that a direction that the lands were to be sold by prior devisee's executors and proceeds divided did not prevent an estate tail vesting in such prior devisee, because such sale was not confined to the lifetime of the executors but could be well executed by the court at any time in the future.

But if the trust to sell is vested in the testator's and not in the devisee's executors, the reasoning upon which this case proceeds has no application. Re Chisholm, 17 Grant (U. C.) 403, 406; Canadice v. Scott, 22 Grant (U. C.) 426. See Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. St. 485. As to when a power to sell is annexed to the office of executor, see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, § VIII, 4, n., 7 Am. & Eng. Enc., p. 201.

3. See § V, 10, n.; 2 Jarman on Wills like presumption that a definite failure of issue was contemplated.¹

14. Gift Over for Life.—If all the ulterior limitations dependent upon the failure of issue are for life only, the better opinion seems to be that the failure of issue will be construed to mean a failure at the death of the prior taker whose issue is referred to, otherwise where some only of the ulterior limitations are for life.²

15. Bequest of Perishable Goods—Original Estate Devised Pur Autre Vie.—It seems to be the better opinion that the mere fact that

(5th Am. ed.) *526; Re Chisholm, 17 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 403; s. c., 18 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 467; Canadice v. Canadice, 22 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 426.

Mr. Fearn placed Keily v. Fowler upon this ground—Fearne C. R. 482—though wrongly, as Mr. Jarman alleges, as the trust in that case was transmissible. In Bigge v. Beasley, 1 B. C. C. (Eng.) 187, LORD THURLOW said it would “be better to say that in Keily v. Fowler there was no rule of construction than Mr. Fearn’s.” Nevertheless Mr. Jarman urges that although the doctrine was misapplied by Mr. Fearn on principle, a personal trust meaning thereby one not transmissible in nature, raises as strong a presumption against an indefinite failure of issue as a personal interest, and the later Canadian cases sustain his position. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *526.

As to whether a power to executors to sell is transmissible, see Sugd. on Powers (8th ed.), 129 et. seq. See also EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, § VIII, 4, n., 7 Am. & Eng. Enc., p. 201.

Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) 514, 515; Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 546; Smith Ex. Int., § 559; Roper on Legacies, *1550; Roe v. Jeffery, 7 T. R. (Eng.) 589; Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 449; Ide v. Ide, 5 Mass. 502; Wilson v. Wilson, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 328; Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. St. 485; Finlay v. Riddle, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 139; Drury v. Grace, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 356. Contra, Hawkins on Wills, *210; Rye’s Settlement, 10 Hare (Eng.) 106, 111; Dale v. McGuinn, 15 Grant. (U. C.) Ch. 101; Watkins v. Sears, 3 Gill (Md.) 496. See Stevenson v. Jacobs, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 558.

The reason for the exception is that “it is not likely, in such case, that the testator was contemplating an indefinite failure of issue, as that might and most probably would not happen until very many years after the death of the objects of the ulterior limitations.” Smith Ex. Int., § 559.

But the reason applies equally well to the creation of a contingent remainder for life after an estate tail. Moreover the creation of life estates after the failure of issue is perfectly consistent with an intention that the tenants for life should take, if the issue failed, in their lifetime. See TURNER, V. C., in Rye’s Settlement, 10 Hare (Eng.) 106, 111.

1. Barlow v. Salter, 17 Ves. (Eng.) 479. See also Doe d. Jones v. Owen, 1 B. & Ad. (Eng.) 318; Peyton v. Lambert, 8 Ir. Com. L. Rep. 485; Boehm v. Clark, 9 Ves. (Eng.) 580.

“Where the entire interest is given over, the mere circumstance that one taker is confined to a life interest furnishes no indication of an intention to make the whole bequest depend on the existence of that person at the time when the event happens on which the limitation over is to take effect.” See W. Grant in Balow v. Salter, 17 Ves. 483.

2. 2. Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *526, *527.

Non constat, that the testator did not intend the gift over to take effect on an indefinite failure of issue, provided such failure occurred while the subject matter of the bequest remained intact. The remark of TURNER, V. C., in Rye’s Settlement, 10 Hare (Eng.) 111, as to the restraining power of a gift over for life, seems to apply.

But Mr. Fearn refers the decision in Keily v. Fowler, where the subject matter of the bequest consisted of twenty cows and a horse, in part to this ground. Fearne C. R. (Butler’s ed.) 484, n. See also Richardson v. Noyes, 2 Mass. 56.

In some cases the principle has been applied to a bequest of slaves. Royall v. Eppes, 2 Munf. (Va.) 479; Biscoe v.

the subject matter of the bequest consists of perishable goods, and cannot survive an indefinite failure of issue, in itself affords no ground for restraining the failure of issue to the death of the first taker.¹

16. Effect of Power of Appointment.—Where the preceding gift to the issue is implied in a power of appointment, as where the gift is to A for life, and after his death to such of his issue as he should appoint, and in case he should die without issue, over, the failure of issue will be restrained to the death of the first taker, since such issue must be intended as A should, or at least might, appoint to, which must be intended issue then living. The principle applies to both real and personal estate.²

17. Failure of Testator's Own Issue.—Where a testator, having no issue, devises or bequeaths property in default or on failure of issue of himself, and there are found amongst the ulterior limitations provisions which could not reasonably be meant to take effect upon an indefinite failure of issue, such as directions for the payment of debts, the limitation over is contingent on the event of his leaving no issue surviving him, and the contingency determined at his death.³

Biscoe, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 232; Woodland v. Wallis, 6 Md. 151.

Where the Original Estate Devised Is Pur Autre Vie.—Where the estate devised is pur autre vie, a limitation over in default of issue is good, since it cannot be held to mean a failure, which might take place after the determination of the estate. Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 546; see Croly v. Croly, Batty (Ir.) 1; Manning v. Moore, Alc. & Nap. (Ir.) 96; Lee v. Flinn, Alc. & Nap. (Ir.) 418.

1. Target v. Gaunt, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 432; 10 Mod. (Eng.) 402; Gilb. Eq. Cas. (Eng.) 149; Atkinson v. Hutchinson, 3 P. W. (Eng.) 432; Hockley v. Mawbey, 1 Ves. Jr. 143, s. c., 3 B. C. C. (Eng.) 82; Leeming v. Sherratt, 2 Hare (Eng.) 14; Keating v. Keating, Ll. & G. temp. Plunk. (Eng.) 291; Smith Ex. Int., § 557; Roper on Legacies, *1555; Balgny v. Hamilton, More (Eng.) 186. The authority of Target v. Gaunt, 1 P. W. 432; may be considered shaken by Simmons v. Simmons, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 22, but was acknowledged in Eastwood v. Arison, L. R., 4 Ex. (Eng.) 141. But compare Martin v. Swannel, 2 Beav. (Eng.) 249; Crozier v. Crozier, 2 Con. & L. (Eng.) 204; 3 D. & War. (Eng.) 373. See also Torrance v. Torrance, 4 Md. 11; Newman v. Miller, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 518; Woodley v. Findlay, 9 Ala. 716.

Mr. Jarman is of opinion that where there is an express limitation to the issue in default of appointment, such limitation will not be confined by implication to issue living at the death on the ground that the power embraces such objects only. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *531. See Smith v. Death, 5 Mad. (Eng.) 371; Seale v. Barter, 2 B. & P. (Eng.) 285; Davidson v. Proctor, 19 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 396; 14 Jur. (Eng.) 32; Roddy v. Fitzgerald, 6 H. L. Cas. 823; Jesson v. Wright, 2 Bligh (Eng.) 1.

2. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *530; Eastwood v. Arison, L. R., 4 Ex. (Eng.) 141. But see Jesson v. Wright, 2 Bligh (Eng.) 1.

In Eastwood v. Arison, testator devised land to A, "and if he should die without issue, that property shall return to the E family, but if he lives to have children he shall have power to make a will of it to his children." Held, that the issue on failure of which the property was to return to the E family meant the children to whom A had power to leave it if he should have any, and that again meant children living at the time of his death, as it was to such children alone that he could leave the property by will. A therefore took for life only.

3. French v. Caddell, 3 B. P. C., Toml. ed. (Eng.) 257; Wellington v. Wellington, 4 Burr. (Eng.) 2165; 1 W. Bl. (Eng.) 645; Lytton v. Lytton, 4 B. C. C. (Eng.) 441; Sanford v. Irby, 3 B.

18. Effect of Alternative Limitations—Failure of Issue Confined to Period of Distribution or Possession.—If real estate be devised to A and his heirs, with a gift over if A die leaving issue, and a gift over if A die without issue, the words die without issue may be restrained to the event of A dying without issue before the period of possession or distribution (whether the devise be immediate or in remainder), in order to avoid an absolute inconsistency with the prior devise in fee to A.¹

19. Statutory Changes.—In England, by the stat. 1 Vict., ch. 26, § 29, in all wills made or republished on or after January 1st, 1838, in any devise or bequest of real or personal estate, the words "die without issue," or "die without leaving issue," or "have no issue," or any other words which may import either a want of or a failure of issue of any person in his lifetime or at the time of his death, or an indefinite failure of issue, shall be construed to mean a want or failure in his lifetime or at his death, unless the words are referential to the objects of the prior estate, or preceding gift,² or are so clearly and explicitly used to denote an indefinite failure of issue as to exclude the statutory rule of construction.³ Similar statutes have been adopted in New York;⁴ New Jersey,⁵ Maryland,⁶ Virginia,⁷ West Virginia,⁸ North Carolina,⁹ South Carolina,¹⁰ Georgia,¹¹

& Ald. (Eng.) 654; Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.), 542; 2 Jarman on Wills, *501; Rye's Settlement, 10 Hare (Eng.) 106. See also Doe v. Lucraft, 1 M. & Sc. (Eng.) 573; 8 Bing. (Eng.) 386.

It seems that the mere fact that the gift over is dependent upon the failure of testator's own issue, unassisted by the context, is not sufficient to create a definite failure. Bagot v. Legge, 12 W. R. (Eng.) 1097; 4 N. R. (Eng.) 492.

1. Hawkins on Wills, *213; Gee v. Manchester, 17 Q. B. 737 (E. C. L. R., vol. 79); Clayton v. Lowe, 5 B. & Ald. 636 (E. C. L. R., vol. 7). Compare Fisher v. Webster, L. R., 14 Eq. (Eng.) 283; Olivant v. Wright, 24 W. R. (Eng.) 84; Ladd v. Harvey, 21 N. H. 515; Arnold v. Brown, 7 R. I. 188, 197; Allen v. Trustees, 102 Mass. 262; Richardson v. Richardson (Me.), 16 Atl. Rep. 250; Ingersoll's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 240. Compare § VI, note.

2. See § IV.

The referential construction is not affected by the act.

See Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.), 535; 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.), 494; Green v. Green, 3 De G. & S. (Eng.) 480.

3. Prior on Issue, § 2; Hawkins on Wills, *214; 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *533; Smith Ex. Int., § 563. As to the construction of the act, see In re O'Bierne, 1 Jo. & Lat. (Eng.) 352; Meredith v. Treffry, 12 Ch. D. (Eng.) 172.

A similar statute exists in Ontario. R. S. O., ch. 106, § 31.

4. 2 Rev. Stats., pt. 2, ch. 1, § 22, taking effect January, 1830.

5. Act of March 12th, 1851, R. S. 1877, p. 1248; pl. 25; Convict v. King, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 375. See Morehouse v. Cotheal, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 430.

6. Act of 1862, Rev. Code, 1878, art. 49, § 9. See Mason v. Johnson, 47 Md. 347.

7. Act March 12th, 1819, Code 1873, title 33, ch. 112, § 10. See Schultz v. Schultz, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 358; Wine v. Markwood, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 43.

8. R. S., 1879, ch. 82, § 10.

9. Act taking effect January 15th, 1828; Bat. Rev., ch. 42, § 3. See Garland v. Watt, 4 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 287; 42 Am. Dec. 120; Spruill v. Moore, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 284; 49 Am. Dec. 428.

10. Act of December 20th, 1853, Gen. Stats., 1882, § 1862.

11. Act of February 11th, 1854, Code 1882, § 2251. Worrill v. Wright, 25 Ga. 659; Gibson v. Hardaway, 68 Ga. 370. Compare Harris v. Smith, 16 Ga.

Alabama,¹ Mississippi,² Kentucky,³ Tennessee,⁴ Wisconsin,⁵ Michigan,⁶ Missouri,⁷ Minnesota,⁸ California,⁹ Dakota,¹⁰ Montana,¹¹ Nevada,¹² Idaho¹³ and New Mexico.¹⁴

VI DYING WITHOUT ISSUE REFERRED TO DEATH IN LIFETIME OF TESTATOR.—In the absence of special circumstances, it seems to be the better opinion that the words "dying without issue" will not be confined to a dying of the prior taker in the lifetime of the testator since where the context is silent, words referring to the death of the prior taker, in connection with some collateral event, apply to the contingency happening as well after as before the death of the testator.¹⁵

545; Griswold v. Griswold, 18 Ga. 545, 550.

1. Code taking effect January 1st, 1853; Code 1876, § 2181.

2. Act of June 13th, 1822, Rev. Code 1880, § 1203. Powell v. Brandon, 24 Miss. 343; Kirby v. Calhoun, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 462.

3. Rev. Stats. 1877, p. 586. Compare Moore v. Moore, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 651, 660; Sale v. Crutchfield, 8 Bush (Ky.) 636, 648.

4. Comp. Stats. 1871, § 2009.

5. R. S., 1878, § 2046.

6. Code taking effect March, 1847. How. An. Stats. 1882, § 5538. See Goodell v. Hibbard, 32 Mich. 48, 55.

7. Rev. Code of 1845, R. S. 1879, § 3942. Faust v. Birner, 30 Mo. 414.

8. Stat. at Large 1873, ch. 32, § 22.

9. Act of April 27th, 1855, Civ. Code 1872, § 1071.

10. Rev. Civ. Code, § 617.

11. Stimson's Dig. Am. Stat. Law, § 1415.

12. Nevada Comp. L. (1873) 271.

13. Idaho (1874-1875). p. 604, 45.

14. New Mexico Comp. Law (1884), § 1424.

Construction.—The English act does not apply where the words are "die without heirs of the body," as in that case there is no ambiguity. Harris v. Davis, 1 Coll. (Eng.) 416. Dawson v. Small, L. R., 9 Ch. (Eng.) 651.

But under the American statutes, with the exception of New Jersey and Maryland, the same rule of construction is applied to the words "die without heirs," or "heirs of the body," as is by the English statute applied to "die without issue." Hawkins on Wills, *215, note.

But if the words "heirs," or "heirs of the body" are used in the sense of issue, the statute, even in Maryland, applies. Gambrill v. Forest Grove Lodge, 66 Md. 17; s. c. (Md.), 10 Atl. Rep. 596.

In Alabama, California and Dakota, the rule is expressly stated to extend to both realty and personality. Stimson's Am. Stat. Law (January 1st, 1886), § 1415, and note at beginning of ch. 3, p. 173.

In Georgia, the provision not being restricted to one species of property, applies to both; as is probably the case in the other States mentioned. Ga. Code (1861), § 2225.

This statutory rule of construction will, of course, yield to a contrary intention appearing in the will; and in some of the States the legislature has been careful so to provide. Stimson's Am. Stat. Law (January 1st, 1886), § 1415, citing statutes of N. J., Md., W. Va., N. C., Tenn.; also § 2800, citing statutes of Cal., Dak. and Mon.

The statute does not apply where the words importing a failure of issue would, under the old law, have been construed not to refer to an indefinite failure of issue. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *534; Morris v. Morris, 17 Beav. (Eng.) 198; Jarman v. Vye, L. R., 2 Eq. (Eng.) 784.

15. Smith v. Stewart, 4 De G. & S. (Eng.) 252; 2 Jarm. (5th Am. ed.) *783; Allen v. Farthing, 2 Medd. (Eng.) 310; s. c., 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.), *783; Edwards v. Edwards, 15 Beav. (Eng.) 245; Child v. Giblett, 3 My. & K. (Eng.) 71. See also Gawler v. Cadby Jac. (Eng.) 346; Gosling v. Townshend, 17 Beav. (Eng.) 245; s. c., 2 W. R. (Eng.) 23; Johnston v. Antrobus, 21 Beav. (Eng.) 556; Randfield v. Randfield, 8 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 225, 236; Bowers v. Bowers, L. R., 5 Ch. (Eng.) 244; Re Heathcote's Trusts, 22 W. R. (Eng.) 42; 29 L. T., N. S. 445; Olivant v. Wright, 24 W. R. (Eng.) 84; Parry v. Daggs, 26

W. R. (Eng.) 353; Ware v. Watson, 7 D. M. & G. (Eng.) 248; O'Mahoney v. Burdett, L. R., 7 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 388, 395. See Lewin v. Killey, L. R., 13 App. Cas. (Eng.) 783; Britton v. Thornton, 112 U. S. 526, 533.

As to what limitations will be held substitutional, see Lampley v. Blower, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 397; Butler v. Ommaney, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 70; Pearson v. Stephens, 5 Bligh, N. S. (Eng.) 203; s. c., Dow & Cl. (Eng.) 328; Gibbs v. Tait, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 132; Doe v. Sparrow, 13 East (Eng.) *359; Prior on Issue, pl. 77-83.

But where the prior limitation expressly confers a fee simple in realty or an absolute interest in personalty, and there are alternative limitations over, which collectively provide for the death of the devisee or legatee under all possible circumstances, the words of contingency apply exclusively to the happening of the event in the testator's lifetime, in order to avoid repugnancy, inasmuch as the alternative limitations, if not so restricted, would reduce the prior devise in fee or absolute interest to an estate for life. Clayton v. Lowe, 5 B. & Ald. (Eng.) 636. See Gee v. Manchester, 17 Q. B. 737 (E. C. L. R., vol. 79); s. c., 19 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 151, 14 Jur. (Eng.) 825; Woodburne v. Woodburne, 23 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 336. Compare Ingersoll's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 240; Clough v. Clough, 15 (N. H.) Atl. Rep. 127; Chaplin v. Doty, 15 (Vt.) Atl. Rep. 362; Barrell v. Barrell, 38 N. J. Eq. 60, 63.

But this reason does not apply where there are no words in the primary bequest expressly giving an absolute interest, as there is no danger, in such case, of imputing two inconsistent intentions to the testator in refusing to hold the bequest absolute upon the testator's death. Cooper v. Cooper, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 658. See also Bowers v. Bowers, L. R., 5 Ch. (Eng.) 244; Gosling v. Townshend, 2 W. R. (Eng.) 23; Rogers v. Waterhouse, 4 Drew (Eng.) 329. But see Rogers v. Rogers, 7 W. R. (Eng.) 541.

As to effect of limitation to survivors in case of death of first taker without issue, see WALWORTH, Ch., in Moore v. Syms, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 119, 150; Tier v. Pennell, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 354; Hurlburt v. Emerson, 16 Mass. 244; Williamson v. Chamberlain, 2 Stock. Ch. (N. J.) 373; Wurts v. Page, 4 C. E. Green (N. J.) 365; Hansford v. Elliott, 9 Leigh (Va.) 79; Drayton v. Drayton, 1 Dessaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 324; Elliott v.

Smith, 1 Dessaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 499; Hilliard v. Kearney, 1 Busb. Eq. (N. Car.) 221; Ruff v. Rutherford, 1 Bail. Ch. (S. Car.) 7. See also Cross v. Coltart, Weekly Notes, 1884 (Eng.), p. 123; Buckle v. Farvett, 4 Hare (Eng.) 536; Giles v. Smith, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 360; Waugh v. Waugh, 2 My. & K. (Eng.) 41.

In United States.—The principle in the text has been followed in Britton v. Thornton, 112 U. S. 526, 533. See also Buchanan v. Buchanan, 99 N. Car. 308; Williams v. Lewis, 100 N. Car. 142; Kelley v. Meiers, 135 Mass. 231; Greer v. Wilson, 108 Ind. 322. Compare Price v. Johnson, 90 N. Car. 592; Fields v. Whitfield (N. Car.) 7 Rep. 780, 783; Suydam v. Thayer, 94 Mo. 49.

But in many States the supreme court declined to follow the principle of the text. Held, that in the absence of context or circumstances showing a contrary intent, the words dying without issue referred to a dying within the lifetime of the testator. Quackenbos v. Kingsland, 102 N. Y. 128; 55 Am. Rep. 771, 778; Livingstone v. Greene, 52 N. Y. 118, 124; Embury v. Sheldon, 68 N. Y. 227, 233; Nellis v. Nellis, 99 N. Y. 505; Moore v. Lyons, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 119, 125; Kerr v. Bryan, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 51; Leonard v. Kingsland, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 431; Shoonmaker v. Stockton, 37 Pa. St. 461; Waugh's Appeal, 78 Pa. St. 436; Mickle's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 514; s. c., 13 Phila. (Pa.) 281; Hancock's Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 283. Compare Wurts v. Page, 4 Green, C. E. (N. J.) 365; Baldwin v. Taylor, 37 N. J. Eq. 78; Denise v. Denise, 37 N. J. Eq. 163, 169; Barrell v. Barrell, 38 N. J. Eq. 60, 63; Burdge v. Walling, 16 (N. J.) Atl. Rep. 51; Phelps v. Robbins, 40 Conn. 250, 267; White v. White, 52 Conn. 518; Coe v. James, 54 Conn. 511; s. c., 9 Atl. Rep. 392; Phelps v. Phelps, 55 Conn. 359; Chaplin v. Doty (Vt.), 15 Atl. Rep. 362; Hall v. Chaffee, 14 N. H. 215; Clough v. Clough (N. H.), 15 Atl. Rep. 127; Birney v. Richardson, 5 Dana (Ky.) 424; Trabue v. Terry (Ky.), 9 S. W. Rep. 161; Edwards v. Bible, 43 Ala. 666; s. c., 54 Ala. 475; Harris v. Smith, 16 Ga. 545; Griswold v. Greer, 18 Ga. 545, 550.

As to what will be sufficient evidence of a contrary intent see Van Derzee v. Slingerland, 103 N. Y. 47; Matter of New York etc. R. Co., 105 N. Y. 89, 93; 49 Am. Rep. 478; Mickey's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 514.

VII. EFFECT OF LIMITATION OVER UPON PRECEDING LIMITATION

—1. Where the Failure of Issue Is Indefinite.—In regard to real estate, where the issue are not mentioned in the preceding limitation, a devise in fee to the first taker will be restrained, or devise for life enlarged to an estate tail by a gift over on an indefinite failure of issue. When there is an express devise to the issue in general, or issue male or female, eo nomine, interposed between the prior devise to the ancestor, and the subsequent devise over on an indefinite failure of his issue in general, or issue of the given description, and the word issue in the intermediate devise would be construed a word of limitation if there were no such devise over, the devise over does not prevent the word issue from being construed as a word of limitation, but operates in aid of that construction.¹ With regard to personalty, a bequest to A,

The tendency is to lay hold of slight circumstances. Buel v. Southwick, 70 N. Y. 581; Hennessy v. Patterson, 85 N. Y. 91, 92; Nellis v. Nellis, 99 N. Y. 505; Tyson v. Blake, 22 N. Y. 558.

For further discussion see LEGACIES AND DEVISES. See also WILLS.

A testator having given the residue and remainder of his estate, real and personal, to J B, "his heirs and assigns forever," charged with the payment of debts, funeral expenses and certain small legacies, added the following proviso: "Provided, that in case the said J B doth not return to Philadelphia, from his present intended voyage to South America, or in case he doth not return to Philadelphia within a reasonable time after my decease, but departs this life without lawful issue, then and in such case or cases all my said message, lot and residuary estate, real and personal, intended for the said J B shall go to A B subject to the same charges. Held, that the proviso was to be taken to refer to a dying without issue on the contemplated voyage, and J B having returned from the voyage in the lifetime of the testator took a fee simple in the real estate. McCarthy v. Dawson, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 4.

1. This construction will be adopted whether the prior limitation is in words which would pass a fee or indefinite or expressly for life. Smith Ex. Int., §§ 564-568; SHADWELL, V. C., in Mackell v. Weeding, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 4; Prior on Issue, §§ 184, 185. See Chapman d. Scholes v. Scholes, 2 Chitty 643; Denn d. Slater v. Slater, 5 D. & E. (Eng.) 335; Doe d. Neville v. Rivers, 7 D. & E. (Eng.) 276; Doe d. Ellis v. Ellis, 9 East (Eng.) 382; Tenny d. Agar v. Agar, 12 East (Eng.) 252; Romilly v. James, 6 Taunt. (Eng.) 263;

Dansey v. Griffiths, 4 Man. & Sel. (Eng.) 61; Doe d. Jones v. Owens, 1 B. & Ad. (Eng.) 318; Doe d. Cadogan v. Ewart, 7 Ad. & El. (Eng.) 636. See also Parker v. Tootal, 11 H. L. Cas. 143; Dainty v. Dainty, 6 T. R. (Eng.) 307; Doe d. Blandford v. Applin, 4 D. & E. (Eng.) 82; Doe d. Cock v. Cooper, 1 East (Eng.) 229; Ward v. Bevil, 1 You. & Jer. (Eng.) 512. See also 4 Kent Com., *276 et seq.; Fisk v. Keene, 35 Me. 349; Parker v. Parker, 5 Met. (Mass.) 134; Wheatland v. Dodge, 10 Met. (Mass.) 502; Hall v. Priest, 6 Gray (Mass.) 18; Haymond v. Howe, 12 Gray (Mass.) 49; Williams v. Hitchborn, 4 Mass. 189; Hawley v. Northampton, 8 Mass. 3; Nightingale v. Burrell, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 104; Simonds v. Simonds, 112 Mass. 157; Turrill v. Northrop, 51 Conn. 33; Manchester v. Durfee, 5 R. I. 549; Jackson v. Bellinger, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 368; Paxon v. Lefferts, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 59; Shoemaker v. Huffnagle, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 437; Willis v. Bucher, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 369; Eichelberger v. Barnitz, 9 Watts. (Pa.) 447; Shoofstall v. Powell, 1 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 19; Lapsley v. Lapsley, 9 Pa. St. 130; Hansell v. Hubbell, 24 Pa. St. 244; Doyle v. Mallady, 33 Pa. St. 264; Greenawalt v. Greenawalt, 71 Pa. St. 438; Middleswarth v. Blackmore, 74 Pa. St. 414; Lawrence v. Lawrence, 105 Pa. St. 335; Condict v. King, 13 N. J. Eq. 375; Waples v. Harman, 1 Harr. (Del.) 223; Roach v. Martin, 1 Harr. (Del.) 548; Hoxton v. Archer, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 109; Tate v. Tally, 3 Call. (Va.) 354; Goodrich v. Harding, 3 Rand. (Va.) 280; Thomason v. Anderson, 4 Leigh (Va.) 118; Wright v. Cahoon, 12 Leigh (Va.) 370; Beasley v. Whithurst, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 437; Whitworth v. Stuckey,

1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 404; Goodall v. Hibbard, 32 Mich. 47.

Thus a devise to A and his heirs, and if A dies without issue, over, creates an estate tail in A. Brice v. Smith, Willes (Eng.) 1; Tenny v. Agar, 12 East (Eng.) 253; Dansey v. Griffiths, 4 M. & S. (Eng.) 61. See Albee v. Carpenter, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 382; Wynn v. Story, 38 Pa. St. 166; Seely v. Seely, 44 Pa. St. 434; Moody v. Snell, 81 Pa. St. 359; Cleveland v. Havens, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 101; s. c., 78 Am. Dec. 90; Rowe's Exrs. v. White, 16 N. J. Eq. 411; s. c., 84 Am. Dec. 169.

So a devise to A or to A for life, and if he dies without issue, over, will also create an estate tail. Lee's Case, 1 Leon (Eng.) 285; Robinson's Case, Willes (Eng.) 3; 1 P.W. 605; 3 Wills 246; Medicott v. Joslin, 2 Brod. & B. (Eng.) 632; Doe v. Gallini, 3 A. & E. (Eng.) 340; Denn v. McMurtrie, 3 Green (N. J.) 276.

The reason for the rule is that in the former case "the testator has explained himself to have used the word heirs in the qualified and restricted sense of heirs of the body, and in the latter he has, by postponing the ulterior devise until the failure of the issue of the prior devisee, afforded an irresistible inference that he intended that the estate to be taken by the prior devisee under the indefinite devise should be of such a measure and duration as to fill up the chasm in the disposition, and prevent the failure of the ulterior devise, which as an executory devise to take effect on a general failure of issue, would of course be void for remoteness." 1 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *554; Paxon v. Lefferts, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 59.

Estate tail and not estate for life passes by devise of land to be equally divided among three persons, with a subsequent provision that in case one of them shall die without issue the property given to him shall descend to the testator's heirs in fee. This is not a case to which the statute (R. S. C. 59, § 9) abolishing the rule in Shelly's case applies. Hayward v. Howe, 12 Gray (Mass.) 49; 71 Am. Dec. 734; Whitcomb v. Taylor, 122 Mass. 249.

Exceptions.—A, having a son and two daughters, provided by will—"If it shall happen my son B and my two daughters die without issue of their bodies lawfully begotten, then all my lands shall remain to my nephew D and his heirs." Held (1) that no express estate was given to the children; (2) that they took no estate by implication, because then it must be either a joint estate for life, with several inheritances in tail or several estates tail in succession, one after another. The latter it could not, be because it was uncertain which should take first; nor the former, because the heir at law could be disinherited without a necessary implication, which in this case there was not, for it was only a designation and appointment when the land should come to the nephew. Gardner v. Sheldon, Vaugh. 259; 1 Eq. Ca. Ab. 137, pl. 6; 1 Freem. (Eng.) 11.

But this case has been considered shaken by Tenny d. Agar v. Agar, 12 East (Eng.) 252; Romilly v. James, 6 Taunt. (Eng.) 263; 1 Marsh. (Eng.) 592.

Again, where the person on whose general failure of issue a devise is expressly made expectant is the heir at law of the testator, he becomes by the application of the rule under consideration, tenant in tail by implication in precisely the same manner as if there had been a prior devise to him and his heirs in the will. 1 Jarman (5th Am. ed.) *556; citing Goodridge v. Goodridge, Willes (Eng.) 369, 7 Mad. 453; Daintry v. Daintry, 6 T. R. 307. See Smith Ex. Int., §§ 585, 588.

Smith Ex. Int., § 569. See Franklin v. Lay, 6 Mad. (Eng.) 258; Murthwaite v. Barnard, 2 Brod. & Bing. (Eng.) 623; Murthwaite v. Jenkinson, 2 Bar. & Cres. (Eng.) 359; Denn d. Webb v. Puckey, 5 Durn. & East (Eng.) 299; Frank v. Stevin, 3 East 548; Doe d. Dobson v. Grew, 2 Wils. (Eng.) 322; s. c., Fearne, 182; King v. Burchell, Amb. (Eng.) 379; s. c., Fearne 363, 364; Marshall v. Bonsfield, 2 Mad. (Eng.) 166.

Gift to Issue by Way of Remainder.—

Thus where the preceding devise is to A for life and after his decease to his issue, an estate tail would be created without, and necessarily with, the aid of the limitation over. Sparrow v. Shaw, 2 Sab. (Eng.) 798; s. c., nom. Shaw v. Wright, 3 Bro. P. C. (Eng.) 120.

So where the preceding devise is to A for life and after his decease to the issue of his body and the heirs of the body of such issue. Merest v. Hodgson, 9 Gri. (Eng.) 556. See Franklin v. Lay, 6 Mad. (Eng.) 258; Roe v. Grew, Wilmot (Eng.) 272; but see Loddington v. Kime, 1 Salk. (Eng.) 224; 1 Lord and if he dies without issue, over, confers an absolute interest.¹ So where the preceding bequest to A is expressly for life.² But Raym. (Eng.) 203; s. c., nom. Carter v. Bernardiston, 3 Bro. P. C., Toml. ed. (Eng.) 64.

So where the limitation is to A for life, with remainder to his issue and their heirs or heirs and assigns, followed by a gift over on failure of issue of A, A takes an estate tail; the limitation to the heirs general of the issue being restrained to heirs of the body by force of the gift over, so as to reduce the devise to one to A for life with remainder to his issue, and the heirs of their bodies. Frank v. Stevin, 3 East (Eng.) 348; Denn v. Puckey, 5 T. R. (Eng.) 299; Franklin v. Lay, 6 Madd. (Eng.) 258. See Paxon v. Lefferts, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 59; Taylor v. Taylor, 63 Pa. St. 484; Kleppner v. Laverty, 70 Pa. St. 70; Gonzales v. Barton, 45 Ind. 295.

In this case the better opinion would seem to be that the estate tail in A is implied from the gift over, since it is doubtful if, without such gift over, the issue would not take by purchase. See LORD ST. LEONARDS in Montgomery v. Montgomery, 3 Jo. & Lat. (Eng.) 47. See also Myers v. Anderson, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 344; M'Lure v. Young, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 559; Ward v. Jones, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 400. Contra, Parker v. Clarke, 6 D. M. & G. (Eng.) 109; Williams v. Williams, 33 Weekly Rep. (Eng.) 118; Carroll v. Barns, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 553. See as to superadded words of limitation § III, 2, c.

Where lands are devised to A for life with remainder to his issue, share and share alike as tenants in common, or with other words implying that the issue are to take concurrently, and there is a gift over on failure of issue of A, inasmuch as the issue, if taking by purchase, would take for life only, the words implying distribution are rejected and A is held to take any estate tail in order to carry out the general intention that all the issue should take. Hawkins' Wills *190. Doe d. Blandford v. Aplin, 4 T. R. (Eng.) 82; Doe d. Cock v. Cooper, 1 East (Eng.) 229; Ward v. Bevil, 1 Yo. & Jer. (Eng.) 513. See Murthwaite v. Jenkinson, 2 B. & C. (Eng.) 357; Kavanagh v. Morland, Kay (Eng.) 16; Woodhouse v. Herrick, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 352; Roddy v. Fitzgerald, 8 H. L. Cas. (Eng.); Ogden's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 501.

In such case there is no authority for the construction which would give the issue estates for life by purchase, with an estate tail in remainder only to the parent by implication. COMPTON, J., in Roddy v. Fitzgerald, 8 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 823, 859.

Whether the construction would be the same in the absence of a gift over may well be questioned. But see Doe v. Rucestle, 8 C. B. (Eng.) 876 (E. C. L. R. vol. 54), where the gift over was a definite failure of issue.

As a part of the context the devise over, following a limitation to A with remainder to his issue and their heirs, or to the issue as tenants in common, must certainly be taken into consideration in determining whether the word issue in the preceding devise is to be taken as a word of purchase or limitation, although the better opinion seems to be that the presence of the devise over is not indispensable to the latter construction. See PARKE, B., in Slater v. Dangerfield, 15 M. & W. (Eng.) 275; Jackson v. Calvert, 1 J. & H. (Eng.) 235; WOOD, V. C., in Woodhouse v. Herrick, 1 K. & J. (Eng.) 352. See Parker v. Clarke, 6 D. M. & G. (Eng.) 109; Hayes' Inquiry 302; Phillips v. James, 2 Dr. & Sm. (Eng.) 404; 3 D. J. & S. (Eng.) 72; Williams v. Williams, 33 Weekly Rep. (Eng.) 118; Carroll v. Burns, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 553.

1. Coms.Exrs. *1110; Everest v. Gell, 1 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 286; Chandless v. Price, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 99; Ward v. Bevil, 1 Yo. & Jer. (Eng.) 513. See Re Andrews' Will, 27 Beav. (Eng.) 608; 6 Jur., N. S. (Eng.) 114; Henderson v. Cross, 7 Jur., N. S. (Eng.) 177; s. c., 9 W. R. (Eng.) 263; Smith's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 2; Mengel's Appeal, 61 Pa. St. 248; Usittton v. Usittton, 3 Md. Ch. 36; Shephard v. Shephard, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 142; s. c., 46 Am. Dec. 41; Schultz v. Schultz, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 358.

"The reason for this is clear; the first bequest carries the whole interest in the property; the second is void for remoteness, and therefore does not derogate from the estate created by the first." Prior on Issue, § 186. See Re Andrews' Will, 27 Beav. (Eng.) 608.

2. Prior on Issue, § 187; Fearnce Cont. Rem. 486; Roper on Legacies, *1526; Love v. Windham, 1 Lev. (Eng.) 290.

if the preceding bequest is to A for life, and after his decease to his issue, with a gift over if he die without issue, the issue take in remainder as purchasers under the preceding bequest, and the gift over being construed referentially, a definite failure is created.¹

2. Where the Failure of Issue Is Definite.—A gift over upon a definite failure of issue will in no wise alter the construction of the preceding limitation. Its only effect will be to engraft upon it an executory devise or contingent remainder to operate upon the happening of the events specified.²

See LORD THURLOW's opinion in Atty. Gen. v. Bayley, 2 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 558; and in Knight v. Ellis, 2 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 578. See also Brooks v. Lord Lake, 10 Jur. (Eng.) 485; Bradshaw v. Skilbeck, 1 Bing. N. C. (Eng.) 188; Lepine v. Ferrad, 2 Ru. & My. (Eng.) 378; Mogg v. Mogg, 1 Mer. (Eng.) 654; Williams v. Lewis, 6 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) *1020; Byng v. Lord Stafford, 5 Beav. (Eng.) 558; Bennett v. Bennett, 2 Dr. & Sm. (Eng.) 266; Addison v. Addison, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 58. See Seibert v. Butz, 9 Watts (Pa.) 494; Pott's Appeal, 30 Pa. St. 168. Compare § V, 1, n. (2).

But in Target v. Gaunt, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 433, LORD MACCLESFIELD states the rule to be directly contrary, and Boehm v. Clarke, 9 (Ves.) 580, and Barlow v. Salter, 17 Ves. (Eng.) 479. SIR W. GRANT seems to consider the question still open.

The reason for the rule as stated in the text is thus explained by Roper: Bequest to A for life, and, if A dies without issue, to B, gives A an absolute interest, for A, the legatee, being entitled by the express bequest for life only, and B, the legatee over, being entitled to nothing upon the single event of A's death, but upon that event coupled with a general failure of A's issue, if A were not considered as taking immediately for himself and his issue, the interest between his death and the event upon which B could take would be undisposed of; therefore as the words are large enough, the court implies an intention in the testator to transmit the legacy to A's issue; but as chattels cannot be entailed, an absolute interest in them ex necessitate must vest in B. Roper on Legacies, p. *1526, citing Brooks v. Lord Lake, 10 Jur. 485.

1. Prior on Issue, §§ 244, 257, 301, 316; Hawkins on Wills, *197; Knight v. Ellis, 2 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 570; Atkinson v. Paice, 1 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 91;

Ex parte Wynch, 5 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 188; Goldney v. Crabb, 19 Beav. (Eng.) 338; Parker v. Clarke, 6 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 104; Hedges v. Harpur, 3 De G. & J. (Eng.) 129; Stewart v. Jones, 3 De G. & J. (Eng.) 532; McGarry v. Thompson, 29 Grant (U. C.) Ch. 287. But see Pott's Appeal, 30 Pa. St. 168. Compare Myers' Appeal, 49 Pa. St. 111. See ante, §§ III, 2, C. (2), IV, 2.

Otherwise where the bequest is to A for life and after his decease to his heirs male. Williams v. Lewis, 6 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) *1013, *1020.

The principle in the text applies also to a devise of chattels real. Hawkins on Wills, *197.

Limitation to A and His Issue.—Under a limitation to A and his issue, with a gift over on an indefinite failure of issue, A takes an estate tail in realty and an absolute interest in personalty whether there are issue in being at the time the will takes effect or not. Prior on Issue, § 189 et seq.; Seale v. Bailes, 2 B. & P. (Eng.) 485; Broadhurst v. Morris, 2 B. & Ad. (Eng.) 1; Goodright v. Wright, 1 P. W. (Eng.) 397; s. c. 1 Strange (Eng.) 25; Franklin v. Lay, 2 Bligh (Eng.) 59, n.; Doe d. Gilman v. Elvey, 4 East (Eng.) 313. See ante, § III, 2 b.

2. Prior on Issue, § 173; Smith Ex. Int., § 584; Greene v. Ward, 1 Russ. (Eng.) 262; Doe d. Herbert v. Selby, 2 Barn. & Cr. (Eng.) 926; Smith v. Horlock, 7 Taunt. (Eng.) 129; Burnett v. Lowe, 7 Bing. (Eng.) 535; Murthwaite v. Jenkinson, 2 B. & C. (Eng.) 357; Kavanagh v. Morland, Kay (Eng.) 16. See also Doe d. Barnfield v. Welton, 2 Bos. & Pal. (Eng.) 324; Plunket v. Holmes, 1 Lev. (Eng.) 11.

Where there is an express devise interposed between the prior devise to the ancestor and the limitation over on an indefinite failure of his issue, and that intermediate devise is not to his issue

ITEM.—Also; moreover; besides; in addition to.¹

eo nomine, but to his sons, daughters or children, indefinitely or for life, or in tail; the sounder construction, upon principle, if not upon authority, would seem to be that the words introducing the limitation over raise an estate in him, by implication, in remainder after the estate limited by the intermediate devise to his sons, daughters or children, unless the object of the intermediate devise is to create a perpetual succession of life estates. Smith Ex. Int., § 576. See Parr v. Swindels, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 283; Franks v. Price, 5 Bing. N. C. (Eng.) 87.

Where there is an express devise to the issue in general or issue male or female, eo nomine, indefinitely or for life or in tail, interposed between the prior devise to the ancestor and the subsequent devise over on an indefinite failure of his issue in general or issue of the given description, and the intent is clear and unequivocal that the word issue shall be taken to be a word of purchase and it would be so construed if there were no such devise over; the better opinion would seem to be that the addition of the devise over does not prevent the word issue from being so construed, and the intermediate devise from conferring a distinct estate upon the issue, unless the object of the intermediate devise is to create a perpetual succession of life estates; but yet that it raises an estate tail, by implication, in favor of the ancestor, to take remainder after the intermediate estate conferred upon the issue. Smith Ex. Int., § 571. Thus, "if there be a gift to the issue, and a limitation in the will with reference to them, which has the effect of giving them the fee simple, then if there be a gift over, in case of dying without issue, the gift over affords no evidence of intention to justify the application of the rule in Shelly's case, because the fee was in the issue and the words dying without issue are consequently held to mean only such issue as were before mentioned, as in the case of Hockley v. Mawbey, 1 Ves. Jr. 142, and Leming v. Sherratt, 2 Hare (Eng.) 14.

But it must first be made out that the fee is in the issue as purchasers." Kavanagh v. Morland, Kay (Eng.) 16.

A limitation over in case the prior devisee die without leaving issue living at his death is not considered explanatory of the species of issue included in the prior devise, and does not prevent the prior devise taking an estate tail under it. The result simply is that if the tenant in tail has no issue at his death, the devise over takes effect; if otherwise, the devise over is defeated notwithstanding a subsequent failure of issue. 2 Jarman on Wills (5th Am. ed.) *445. See Lyon v. Mitchell, 1 Madd. (Eng.) 467; Hutchinson v. Stevens, 1 Keen (Eng.) 240; Broadhurst v. Morris, 2 B. & A. (Eng.) 1.

1. It does not mean "in like manner." It is used to show that what follows is intended to be in addition to what precedes, or it is only made use of to distinguish the clauses in the will. Evans v. Knorr, 6 Rawle (Pa.) 69. "Item is an usual word in a will to introduce new distinct matter; therefore a clause thus introduced is not influenced by, nor to influence a precedent or subsequent sentence unless it be of itself imperfect and insensible without reference." Hopewell v. Ackland, 1 Salk. 239; Horwitz v. Norris, 60 Pa. St. 282; Hoxton's Lessee v. Gardiner, 1 H. & M. (Md.) 459. "'Item' shows that the testator is dealing with a new subject, and that the words following apply to that only, and not to the preceding matter, unless the intention that they should do so is plain." Doe v. Westley, 4 B. & C. 669.

"The terms 'item,' 'further,' 'moreover,' are commonly used in the beginning of a new devise or bequest, without indicating any particular intention in the disposition of the property." Burr v. Sim, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 264.

It is, however, sometimes construed conjunctively in the sense of 'and' or 'also,' and need not necessarily be construed as independent of the preceding clause. Cheeseman v. Partridge, 1 Atk. 438; Castledon v. Turner, 3 Atk. 259.

JAIL.—See PRISONS.

JAIL LIBERTIES.—See PRISONS.

JEFAILS—(See AMENDMENTS).—An oversight in pleading; a mistake, or error; strictly, the acknowledgment of an error.¹

JEOPARDY—(See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW).

- I. Definition, 926.
- II. Universality of the Principle, 926.
- III. To What Jeopardy Applies, 927.
- IV. Essential Elements of Jeopardy, 928.
 1. Court of Competent Jurisdiction, 928.
 2. Sufficient Indictment or Information, 930.
 3. Issue Joined, 932.
 4. Legal Fury, 933.
 5. Fury Charged with Prisoner, 933.
 6. The Same Offence, 934. [933.
 - a. Where the Same Act Constitutes Several Offences, 936.
 - b. Offences Covering the Same Period, 939. [939.
 - c. Greater and Lesser Offences, 942.
 - d. Offences of the Same Genus, 942.
 - e. The Test as to the Identity of the Offences, 947.
- V. The Plea of Jeopardy Where Sustained, 947.
 1. Examination Before Committing Magistrate, 947.
 2. Examination Before Grand Jury, 948.
 3. Demurrer to Indictment, 948.
 4. The Plea of Guilty, 949. [949.
 5. The Entry of a Nolle Prosequi, 949.
 6. Discharge of the Fury, 950.
 7. The Rendition of a Verdict, 956.
 8. Jeopardy of a Codefendant, 957.
 9. Offences Against Different Jurisdictions, 958.
- VI. Waiver of Jeopardy, 959. [959.
 1. Consent to Discharge of Fury, 959.
 2. Dismissal on Defendant's Motion, 960.
 3. Fraudulent Procurement of Defendant, 963.
- VII. The Defence, How Made, 964.
 1. Allegations of the Plea, 964.
 2. The Replication, 966.
 3. Evidence in Support of the Plea, 966.
 4. The Trial of the Issue, 969.
 5. The Determination of the Issue, 969.

I. DEFINITION.—The word jeopardy signifies danger or peril; and in law the term is applied to the situation of a prisoner where a jury is sworn and empanelled to try his case and charged with his deliverance, upon a valid indictment,² and it is well settled at common law,³ and by a constitutional enactment of the United States,⁴ that no person shall be subject to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb for the same offence.

II. UNIVERSALITY OF THE PRINCIPLE.—The principle of jeopardy is found in one of the maxims of the civil law,⁵ and embodied in the very elements of the common law.⁶ It is an ancient and well

1. Burr. Law. Dict.; 3 Bl. Com. 407. F'ai failli was the expression in which the ancient pleader acknowledged his error. Statutes of jeofails are statutes of amendments.

2. Bouv. L. Dict., tit. Jeopardy; Abb. L. Dict., tit. Jeopardy; Kendall v. State, 65 Ala. 492; State v. Redman, 17 Iowa 329; Cooley's Const. Lim. 326.

Webster's definition is, exposure to death, loss or injury, hazard, danger, peril.

3. 4 Black. Com. 315.

4. Const. U. S., Amend. 5.

5. Bouv. L. Dict. (15th ed.) tit. (nom. bis in idem).

But the finding of a similar maxim in the civil law, "nom. bis in idem," would indicate that the principle is a part of that universal law of reason, justice and conscience, of which CICERO said: "Nor is it one at Rome and another at Athens, one now and another in the future, but among all nations it is the same." Lactantius Inst. Div., bk. 7, ch. 8.

6. 4 Black. Com. 335; U. S. v. Gilbert, 2 Sim. (U. S.) 42; People v. Goodwin, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 201; and see Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 501.

The safeguard is broader than the great commentator BLACKSTONE stated established principle which is a part of that universal law of reason, justice and conscience, which reaches its culmination in our national constitution.¹ This provision in the United States constitution, however, is exclusively a restriction upon federal power, and does not limit the power of a state over its citizens;² but substantially the same restriction is contained in the constitution,³ or adopted by the legislature⁴ of nearly every state in the Union, the common law rule of no second jeopardy for the same offence, as distinguished from the constitutional one, having been generally adopted.⁵

III. TO WHAT JEOPARDY APPLIES.—While the words “life and limb,” used in the constitutional provision, would seem to indicate that it was intended to apply only to the higher crimes, it, being a remedial provision, is liberally construed, and is as a general rule applied to all indictable offences, including misdemeanors.⁶

it, for two kindred maxims of the common law, “nemo debet bis vexari pro una et eadem causa,” and “nemo debet bis puniri pro uno delicto,” have long guarded the rights of successful litigants in civil, and prevented oppression in criminal cases, not only so far as life is concerned, but also with respect to property, limb and liberty. 17 Am. L. Rev. 735.

In considering this question one should remember that at the time it became embedded into the constitutional jurisprudence of our English forefathers, twice in jeopardy only applied to life and limb and did not apply to misdemeanors. Hale P. C., vol. 1, ch. 3, vol. 2, ch. 19.

1. State v. Benham, 7 Conn. 414; Mount v. State, 14 Ohio 295; State v. Norvell, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 24; U. S. v. Keen, 1 McLean (U. S.) 429.

The declaration is not that a person shall not be twice tried for the same offence, but that he shall not be twice put in jeopardy. Hilands v. Com., 111 Pa. St. 1.

This constitutional provision, it has been said, extends to the common law maxim, which was limited to felonies, to all grades of offences; and it is but the application to the administration of criminal jurisprudence of a more general maxim, that no one shall be twice vexed for one and the same cause. The object of incorporating it under the fundamental law was to render it, as respects criminal causes, inviolable by any department of the government. State v. Behimer, 20 Ohio St. 572; Whart. Pl. & Ev., § 574.

2. Prescott v. State, 19 Ohio St. 187;

Twitchell v. Com. 9 Pa. St. 211; U. S. v. Barnhart, 22 Fed. Rep. 285; 10 Sawy. (U. S.) 491.

The supreme court of the State having denied a claim of immunity, specially set up under article 5 of amendments of the federal constitution, protecting any person from twice being put in jeopardy for the same offence, the supreme court of the United States has jurisdiction to review that decision. Bohanan v. Nebraska, 118 U. S. 231.

3. Bish. Cr. L. (7th ed.), § 981; Whart. Cr. Pr. (8th ed.), § 490.

The constitutions of the United States and all the States except six, namely: Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Virginia and Vermont, contain this prohibition against double punishment in very similar terms, and it being thus made a part of the fundamental law the decisions must conform therewith, except in the six States above mentioned. 7 Am. L. Rev. 735.

4. 17 Am. L. Rev. 735; Greenwook v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 576.

5. 24 Cent. L. J. 563.

The plea of once in jeopardy under our constitutional provisions is similar to the plea of autrefois acquit or autrefois convict at common law. Whart. Pl. & Ev., § 537 (1875).

6. McCauley v. State, 26 Ala. 135; Jones v. State, 15 Ark. 261; State v. Lavinia, 25 Ga. 311; Campbell v. State, 11 Ga. 353; Williams v. Com., 29 Pa. St. 102; State v. Weaver, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 203; State v. Lee, 10 R. I. 494; State v. Rankin, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 145; State v. Connor, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 315; Com. v. Olds, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 137; Day v.

IV. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF JEOPARDY—1. Court of Competent Jurisdiction.—Legal jurisdiction does not arise if the court has no jurisdiction of the offence,¹ or power to hear or determine the cause.² But where there are two or more courts, each of which has jurisdiction, the court first assuming jurisdiction, takes exclusive cognizance of the case,³ and a conviction or an acquittal in such court is a bar to an indictment in any other court;⁴ but after

Com., 23 Gratt. (Va.) 915; Brink v. State, 18 Tex. App. 344; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 317.

There is, however, an apparent tendency, in some of the courts to hold the doctrine more strictly in the higher crimes, especially those punishable with death, than in ordinary misdemeanors. Bish. Cr. L. (7th ed.), § 990; and see People v. Olcott, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Cas. 301; Williams v. Com., 2 Gratt. (Va.) 567; U. S. v. Morris, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 23; Com. v. Cook, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 577.

1. Ball v. State (Ark.), 2 S. W. 462; Severin v. People, 37 Ill. 414; O'Brian v. State, 12 Ind. 369; State v. Odell, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 156; State v. M'Cory, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 5; Com. v. Peters, 53 Mass. (12 Metc.) 387; Com. v. Goddard, 13 Mass. 455; Com. v. Hyde, Thatch. Cr. Cas. (Mass.) 112; People v. Tyler, 7 Mich. 161; Montross v. State, 61 Miss. 429; Marston v. Jenness, 11 N. H. 156; State v. Britton, 48 N. J. L. 371; s. c., 7 A. 679; Com. v. Myers, 1 Va. Cas. 188.

On an indictment for felony, a plea of former conviction is not supported by proof of an acquittal of the same charge before a justice, and conviction of a misdemeanor included in such felony, the justice having no jurisdiction over felonies. State v. Nichols, 38 Ark. 550.

An acquittal by a jury, in a court of the United States, of a defendant who is there indicted for an offence of which that court has no jurisdiction, is no bar to an indictment against him, for the same offence, in a State court. Com. v. Peters, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 387.

One charged before a police court with being a disorderly person, and discharged with formal objections to the jurisdiction of the court may be arrested again immediately on a warrant of a justice of the peace on like complaint. State v. Britton, 47 N. J. L. 251.

Change in the Law.—If, after the commission of the offence, the law is repealed, and another substituted without any saving clause relative to past crimes, no court will have jurisdiction and a trial will be a nullity. Packer v. People, 8 Colo. 361; Garvey's Case, 7 Colo. 384.

A special plea of autrefois convict to an indictment before a court that had no jurisdiction over the offence is bad. Reich v. State, 53 Ga. 73; 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 543.

Where one pleaded, in bar to an indictment for assault and battery, a former conviction for the same offence before a justice of the peace, and it appeared from the record that the justice first ordered the defendant to recognize for his appearance at the common pleas, and then, on the defendant pleading guilty, revoked the order and sentenced him to pay a fine, the plea was held sufficient. Com. v. Goddard, 13 Mass. 455.

2. Dunn v. State, 2 Ark. 229; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 54; State v. Payne, 4 Mo. 376; State v. Hodgkins, 42 N. H. 474; Hodges v. State, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 7; Wilson v. State, 16 Tex. 246; Flournoy v. State, 16 Tex. 30.

One convicted of murder wholly without authority of law cannot base a plea of once in jeopardy on such conviction. Packer v. People, 8 Colo. 361.

A conviction for an assault and battery, by the city court of Little Rock, Arkansas, under the act of 1840, which is held to be void, is coram non jure, and absolutely void, and constitutes no bar to a prosecution, in the circuit court, for the same offence. Rector v. State, 1 Eng. (Ark.) 187.

A prisoner is not put in jeopardy by being put on trial before a judge and jury at a special term of court not called as authorized by law. Dunn v. State, 2 Ark. 229; s. c., 42 Am. Dec. 689; People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467.

3. U. S. v. Barnhart, 22 Fed. Rep. 285; 10 Sawy. (U. S.) 491; Burdett v. State, 9 Tex. 43.

4. When a mayor's court and the county court have concurrent jurisdiction of the offence of keeping a disorjurisdiction has been assumed by one court the defendant will not be put in jeopardy by a trial in another court of concurrent jurisdiction,¹ and a judgment of an inferior court is no bar to the prosecution in a higher court for a higher grade of the offence of which the inferior court has no jurisdiction.² A conviction or an acquittal by a justice, on a charge of which he had jurisdiction only to examine the accused and hold to bail, or discharge, is void, and no bar to an indictment for the same offence,³ as well as a conviction or an acquittal pronounced in a case in which the preliminary jurisdictional requisites, as complaint, process, etc., had been omitted.⁴ Not only must the court have jurisdiction of the offence, but it must have been committed within the territorial limits of its jurisdiction. If committed elsewhere, a former jeop-derly house, an acquittal in the mayor's court is a bar to an indictment in the county court. Handley v. State, 16 Tex. App. 444.

A conviction in an inferior court having concurrent jurisdiction of the offence must stand upon an equal footing. It cannot be claimed that a rightful conviction in one court has more or less efficacy in protecting a respondent from further prosecution than a similar conviction in a court of concurrent jurisdiction. In Hawkins' Pleas of the Crown, ch. 35, § 10, it is said "an acquittal in any court whatever which has jurisdiction of the cause is as good as if in the highest court." "A fortiori," says PARKER, C. J., in Com. v. Goddard, 13 Mass. 455, "should a conviction be good in such case."

1. While after indictment and before trial, a justice of the peace took jurisdiction of the same offence, before whom the offender was tried and sentenced, the court held that the conviction and sentence was no bar to the indictment. Burdett v. State, 9 Tex. 43.

2. White v. State, 9 Tex. App. 390.

A conviction of an assault before a justice is not a bar to an indictment for a higher grade of assault not within the justice's jurisdiction, although based on the same assault. Boswell v. State, 20 Fla. 869.

3. State v. Morgan, 62 Ind. 35; O'Brian v. State, 12 Ind. 369; State v. Odell, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 156; State v. Payne, 4 Mo. 376; Foust v. State, 85 Tenn. 342; Hodges v. State, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 7.

4. Conviction before a justice of the peace, in the absence of any charge is void, and no bar to a subsequent indictment. Bigham v. State, 59 Miss. 529.

On a trial for an aggravated assault defendant pleaded former conviction before a justice of the peace. It appeared that the justice acted without affidavit or warrant, and no witnesses were examined, and that defendant pleaded guilty to a single assault. Held, no bar. Warriner v. State, 3 Tex. App. 104; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 124.

The judgment of a justice of the peace, on a conviction for a misdemeanor, upon the voluntary appearance of the offender, without process, prosecutor, or the hearing of evidence, is extrajudicial, and is no bar to an indictment in the circuit court. State v. Atkinson, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 677.

Information of Offender.—A conviction before a justice of the peace, and a sentence to pay a fine, on the confession or the information of the offender himself, is no bar to an indictment for the same offence. Com. v. Alderman, 4 Mass. 477.

A former conviction for intoxication, rendered by a justice of the peace against one of his own complaint, is not a bar to the prosecution previously instituted by the State's authority for the same offence, though the form is determined by the statute. A formal complaint is necessary, under Const. Vt., ch. 1, art. 2, and R. L., §§ 1667, 1719, 1749, to confer jurisdiction on the magistrate. State v. Wakefield (Vt.), 15 A. 181.

Change of Venue.—The court to which a change of venue in a criminal cause is taken acquires no jurisdiction of the cause until there is filed in it a transcript of the record and proceedings in the cause from the original court, duly certified by the clerk under the seal of the court; and therefore a trial of the defendant upon a transcript without a seal would be no jeopardy, and no defence against a trial upon the same ardly is no defence;¹ and if the court derives its existence from an unconstitutional statute,² or holds a term not authorized by law,³ its judgments are no bar.

2. Sufficient Indictment or Information.—Former jeopardy is a good defence where the acquittal or conviction is upon a valid indictment sufficient in form and substance to sustain a conviction,⁴ and not otherwise;⁵ and no jeopardy arises on the trial of an in-record after it is perfected by the seal. Ball v. State, 48 Ark. 94; Am. Dec. 1886, 2 S. W. 462.

1. Nicholson v. State, 72 Ala. 176; Campbell v. People, 109 Ill. 565; Com. v. Roby, 29 Mass. (12 Pick.) 496; State v. Barnhart, 22 Fed. Rep. 285; 10 Sawy. (U. S.) 491.

The North Carolina courts have jurisdiction only of offences committed within the territorial boundaries of that State, and if they are committed in another State, that is a matter of defence under the plea of "not guilty." State v. Mitchell, 83 N. C. 674.

2. Rector v. State, 1 Eng. (Ark.) 187; and see McGinnis v. State, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 43.

3. Dunn v. State, 2 Pike (Ark.) 239; Rex v. Bowman, 6 Car. & P. (Eng.) 101.

4. Kendall v. State, 65 Ala. 492; State v. Ward, 48 Ark. 36; Black v. State, 36 Ga. 447. Compare U. S. v. Bigelow, 3 Mackey (D. C.) 393; U. S. v. Phillips, 5 Mackey (D. C.) 250.

A verdict of acquittal or conviction, on a good indictment, is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offence, though no judgment is entered. State v. Norvell, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 24.

An indictment must not only state all the facts which constitute the offence intended to be charged, but must state them with such certainty and precision that the defendant may judge whether they constitute an indictable offence or not, and may demur or plead accordingly, and may plead his conviction or acquittal in bar of another prosecution for the same offence. Fink v. Milwaukee, 17 Wis. 26.

5. State v. Cheek, 25 Ark. 206; People v. McNealy, 17 Cal. 333; People v. March, 6 Cal. 543; State v. Woodruff, 2 Day (Conn.) 504; Black v. State, 36 Ga. 447; Gerard v. People, 4 Ill. (3 Scam.) 362; Mount v. Com. 2 Duv. (Ky.) 93; Com. v. Bakeman, 105 Mass. 53; Com. v. Keith, 49 Mass. (3 Metc.) 531; Com. v. Loud, 44 Mass. (3 Metc.) 328; Cochrane v. State, 6 Md. 400; 2

Hale, P. C. 248; State v. Williams, 5 Md. 82; People v. Cook, 10 Mich. 164; Kohlheimer v. State, 39 Miss. 548; People v. Barrett, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 66; State v. Ray, 1 Rice (S. Car.) 1; 8 c. 33 Am. Dec. 90; Pritchett v. State, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 285; Walton v. State, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 687; State v. Garrigues, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 241; Com. v. Chichester, 1 Va. cas. 312.

That a former jury was empanelled to try the same offence, but the cause was dismissed for a defect in the indictment before any evidence was admitted, is not sufficient to bar a subsequent indictment for the same offence. State v. Priebnow, 16 Neb. 131.

On an indictment for felony, a vol. pros., entered with the assent of the court, even after the jury is empanelled and proof heard, where the indictment is bad, does not operate as an acquittal of the prisoner, there having been no legal jeopardy. Walton v. State, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 687.

The State after entering a vol. pros. on an indictment may frame a new bill containing other counts and repeating the former charge in the same words. State v. Tindal, 5 Harring. (Del.) 488.

No Legal Crime.—A judgment quashing an indictment on the ground of the unconstitutionality of the statute under which the charge is brought, when the accused has not been tried as to his guilt or innocence under the charge, will not be a bar to a subsequent prosecution of the accused under the same charge. State v. Taylor, 34 La. An. 978.

As the Indiana statutes recognize no such offence as that of "unlawfully carrying a dangerous weapon," a conviction of an offence so designated is not a bar to a prosecution for a statutory offence. Davidson v. State, 99 Ind. 366.

Larceny from Bailor.—Prisoner was indicted for stealing a pair of boots, the property of A, and acquitted. He was then indicted again for stealing the same boots, laid as the property of B, and dictment found by an illegally organized grand jury;¹ but it is otherwise where the indictment is merely voidable for matters not appearing on the record.² There is no jeopardy, however, where the indictment is quashed because of the incompetency of some of the grand jurors finding it;³ the test question being whether or not the indictment or complaint is so utterly defective that the merits could not be tried and no judgment, either of conviction or acquittal could be pronounced upon it;⁴ and in proceedings on a pleaded autrefois acquit. It appeared that A was a boy fourteen years of age, living with and assisting B, who was his father; that the boots were the property of B, but that, at the time they were stolen by the prisoner, A had, temporarily, in his father's absence, the charge of the stall from which they were stolen. Held, 1, that A was not a bailee, and that the ownership of the boots could not properly be laid in him; 2, That the plea of autrefois acquit could not be sustained notwithstanding the power of amendment given by 14 and 15 Vict., ch. 100. Reg. v. Green, 37 Eng. Law and Eq. 597.

How Pleaded.—Such a defence does not call for a plea in abatement under Bat. North Carolina Rev., ch. 33, § 70, which was enacted to cover cases where the offence was committed in the state, but which was charged to have occurred in the wrong county. State v. Mitchell, 83 N. Car. 674.

In Missouri a second indictment may be found for the same offence, although the first has been sent to another county and after a nol. pros. entered as to the first, the second may be tried in the county where found. State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 695.

1. Finley v. State, 61 Ala. 201; Kohlheimer v. State, 39 Miss. 548.

2. Kohlheimer v. State, 39 Miss. 448.

3. Brown v. State, 5 Eng. (Ark.) 607.

Where the defendant was indicted and convicted of murder, and on appeal a new trial was ordered, on the ground of objection to a juror, whereupon, on motion of the prosecution, the indictment was set aside on account of irregularities in summoning and empanelling the grand jury, on which new trial the prisoner was convicted; it was held, that the second trial and conviction did not put the prisoner "twice in jeopardy for the same offence," as it is apparent that the prisoner was not put in jeopardy by the first trial, which had been held to be erroneous. People v. March, 6 Cal. 543.

4. Johnson v. State, 82 Ala. 29; State v. Ward, 48 Ark. 36; s. c., 2 S. W. 101; People v. Clark, 67 Cal. 99; People v. McNealy, 17 Cal. 332; Black v. State, 36 Ga. 447; State v. Clark, 69 Iowa 196; s. c., 28 N. W. 537; Mount v. Com., 2 Duv. (Ky.) 93; Com. v. Peters, 53 Mass. (12 Metc.) 387; Com. v. Roby, 29 Mass. (12 Pick.) 502; Com. v. Goddard, 13 Mass. 455; State v. Owen, 78 Mo. 367; People v. Barrett, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 66; State v. Holly, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 262; State v. Ray, 1 Rice (S. Car.) 1; Walton v. State, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 687; Com. v. Curtis, Thatch. Cr. Cas. (Mass.) 202; Com. v. Chichester, 1 Va. Cas. 312; King v. Emden, 9 East (Eng.) 439; Reg. v. Drury, 3 Car. & K. (Eng.) 190; s. c., 3 Cox C. C. 544.

A conviction on a void indictment, not followed by punishment, is not a bar to a subsequent indictment for the same offence. U. S. v. Jones, 31 Fed. Rep. 725.

One convicted under an illegal indictment, or to whom a new trial has been awarded, is not exempt from a second prosecution for the same offence. Simco v. State, 9 Tex. App. 338.

After prosecuting under an indictment which has been ignored, the State is not barred, in new proceedings, from selecting indictment or information, as provided by the constitution. State v. Ross, 14 La. An. 364.

Discharge of the jury before verdict, without objection, upon sustaining defendant's objection to the indictment that it did not charge the commission of a crime, will not support the plea of autrefois acquit. State v. Priebnow, 16 Neb. 131.

Where the attorney general entered a nol. pros. to an indictment after the jury had been sworn to try it, because it did not allege the value of the property stolen. Held, that the defendant had not been put in jeopardy, so that he could be tried under a second indictment. State v. Crutch, 1 Houst. Crim. C. (Del.) 204.

second indictment it is immaterial whether the first one was in fact quashed or not.¹

3. Issue Joined.—There must be an issue formed before jeopardy can attach,² and it will not attach where the defendant has made a plea of guilty through fear,³ or where the plea has been erroneously entered by the clerk.⁴

A prosecuting attorney without leave of the court amended his indictment shortly before trial, and the defendant made no objection thereto on the trial. Held, that the prosecuting officer could not treat the amendment as a nullity, but that the defendant having been acquitted on trial on the amended indictment, a subsequent prosecution for the same offence was barred, if the indictment, as amended, was sufficient. People v. Cook, 10 Mich. 164.

Evidence that, on the defendant's motion, judgment was arrested on the first indictment because it was insufficient, will not maintain a plea of former conviction. State v. Sherburne, 58 N. H. 535.

Mistake in Allegation of Time.—Where, after the jury was empanelled, the indictment was found to charge the offence at a future time and was quashed, it was held that the prisoner was not in jeopardy. State v. Jenkins, 20 s. c., 351.

An information for murder charged the commission of the offence on a day subsequent to the date of its filing; the mistake being discovered on the trial, the jury was discharged, on motion of the prosecution, before verdict. A new information was then filed, to which the defendant pleaded that he had been once in jeopardy for the same offence. Held, that a conviction upon this information would have been a nullity, and that it was not admissible to sustain the plea. People v. Larson, 68 Cal. 18.

Misdescription.—An indictment for manslaughter, quashed, justly or erroneously, for misdescription of the mortal wound, is no bar to a second indictment for the same offence. Com. v. Gould, 12 Gray (Mass.) 171.

One cannot plead former jeopardy who was formerly indicted under a wrong given name, a nol. pros. having been entered on the discovery of the error. Branch v. State, 20 Tex. App. 399.

1. State v. Vincent, 91 Mo. 662.

In Georgia, however, it was held that a verdict of not guilty, rendered under an erroneous decision of the court that the indictment upon which it is rendered is insufficient to support a conviction, will protect the accused against a subsequent conviction for the same offence, though rendered, without evidence, on motion of the defendant, upon the ground that the indictment was insufficient. Black v. State, 36 Ga. 447.

2. Ned v. State, 7 Port. (Ala.) 187; Bell v. State, 44 Ala. 393; Grogan v. State, 44 Ala. 9; Lee v. State, 26 Ark. 260; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 60; Boswell v. State, 111 Ind. 47; s. c., 9 West. Rep. 262.

Until the defendant has entered his plea, or it has been entered for him upon his refusal to plead, he cannot be put in jeopardy. Weaver v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 563.

After a verdict the court cannot order a plea of "not guilty" to be entered for the defendant without his consent, and then render judgment against him on the verdict. Davis v. State, 38 Wis. 487.

If there is no arraignment or a waiver of it, the trial is a nullity and jeopardy does not attach. Newson v. State, 2 Kelley (Ga.) 60; Davis v. State, 38 Wis. 487; Douglass v. State, 3 Wis. 820.

There was a failure to arraign the accused on the second trial; it was held that the defendant had not waived his right, by not pleading, to insist on a former conviction. State v. Martin, 30 Wis. 216; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 567. See State v. Brannon, 55 Mo. 63; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 643; Lesslie v. State, 18 Ohio St. 390; Thompson v. State, 9 Tex. App. 649.

The jury was sworn to try the case before the defendant had been arraigned or had entered his plea. The court immediately, over the objection of the defendant, arraigned the defendant, and, upon his refusal to plead, entered a plea of not guilty for him. The jury was then re-sworn, and the defendant convicted. It was held that the defendant was not put in jeopardy by the jury being sworn before arraignment and plea. Weaver v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 563.

3. Sanders v. State, 85 Ind. 318.

4. One is not put in jeopardy by an

4. Legal Jury.—If there is not a complete panel of jurors, the trial is a nullity and jeopardy does not attach,¹ and a trial without a jury is void and not a putting in jeopardy.²

5. Jury Charged with the Prisoner.—The jury is said to be charged with the prisoner when the twelve jurors are duly empanelled and sworn;³ and when they are thus sworn to try the accused on the charge preferred, jeopardy attaches.⁴ If it attaches for the mo-erroneous entry of the clerk that he had pleaded "not guilty," the same being amended after a continuance of the cause without trial to the next term. Phillips v. People, 88 Ill. 160.

Plea by Attorney.—In a prosecution for felony, a plea of not guilty by an attorney is a nullity: such plea must be pleaded by defendant in person, and that fact should appear by the record. State v. Conkle, 16 W. Va. 736.

1. Bell v. State, 44 Ala. 395; Moore v. Clegg, 72 Ind. 358; Allen v. State, 54 Ind. 461; Brown v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 561; Brown v. State, 16 Ind. 496; Cancemi v. People, 4 Smith (18 N. Y.) 128; State v. Burket, 2 Treadw. Const. (S. Car.) 155.

The discharge of two jurors after arraignment, but before introduction of any evidence, on the ground that they were on the grand jury that found the indictment, and the consequent impaneling of a new jury, does not render a conviction by the latter a case of second jeopardy. Watkins v. State, 60 Ga. 601.

2. State v. Mead, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 309; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 661.

3. Madden v. Emmons, 83 Ind. 331; McFadden v. Com., 23 Pa. St. 12; Hilands v. Com., 111 Pa. St. 1; Harris Cr. L. 311.

In the case of Newsom v. State, 2 Kelly (Ga.) 60, the court say that, "What we understand by charging the jury with the case, or submitting the case in charge to the jury," is "that they are thus charged to make enquiry into the truth of the fact alleged on one side and denied on the other, and all things being ready for the trial, the clerk concludes his charge to the jury with these words, 'hear your evidence.' In the judgment of this court, when a case is given in charge to a jury in England, it is submitted to a jury in Georgia."

4. Kendall v. State, 65 Ala. 492; Bell v. State, 44 Ala. 395; Grogan v. State, 44 Ala. 9; Cobia v. State, 16 Ala. 781; Whitmore v. State, 43 Ark. 271; State v. Ward (Ark.), 2 S. W. 191; People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467; People v.

Horn, 70 Cal. 17; Newsom v. State, 2 Kelly (Ga.) 60; Wright v. State, 5 Ind. 292; Weinzorpfli v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 186; State v. Walker, 26 Ind. 346; Morgan v. State, 13 Ind. 215; Maden v. Emmons, 83 Ind. 331; Weaver v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 563; State v. Redman, 17 Iowa 329; People v. Barker, 60 Mich. 277; Ah King v. People, 4 Cal. 307; State v. Ephraim, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) L. 162; Spier's Case, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 491; Price v. State, 19 Ohio 423; Com. v. Cook, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 577; Hilands v. Com., 111 Pa. St. 1; McFadden v. Com., 23 Pa. St. 12; State v. Norvell, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 24; State v. Connor, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 311; Gruber v. State, 3 W. Va. 699; Reg. v. Oulaghan, Jebb (Eng.) 270.

The putting in of a plea does not put the defendant in jeopardy, as that must be done before the jury is sworn. Com. v. Dunham, Thatch. C. C. (Mass.) 513; People v. Fisher, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 9; Com. v. Drew, 57 Mass. (3 Cush.) 279.

One is not in jeopardy until the whole jury is sworn. Before this, the court, for cause, may order a new drawing. Alexander v. Com., 105 Pa. St. 1.

The discharge of a defendant prosecuted for bastardy, by reason of the relator's failure to appear, does not bar another prosecution. State v. Barbour, 17 Ind. 526.

A discharge from a former indictment upon payment of costs, in consequence of the refusal of the prisoner to prosecute further, is no bar to a subsequent indictment. State v. Blackwell, 9 Ala. 79.

The charging of the jury here regarded, is similar to the State's statement to the jury of its cause of action, as it takes place immediately after the jury is sworn, and after an old form it is an address to the jury, as follows: "Gentlemen of the jury, look upon the prisoner and hearken to his charge; he stands indicted by the name of A B, late of the parish of, etc., laborer, for that he (reading the indictment). Upon this indictment he has been arment only, it is sufficient to put the accused within the provision of the constitution.¹

6. The Same Offence.—A former trial and acquittal is no bar unless the offences charged in both indictments are the same, both in law and in fact,² and if it appears that the second case is for the raigned; upon his arraignment he hath pleaded not guilty; your charge, therefore, is to enquire whether he be guilty or not guilty, and hearken to the evidence." 1 Whart. on Cr. L., § 590.

"Twice put" in jeopardy, and "twice put on trial," says CHIEF JUSTICE TAYLOR, in Spier's Cas. (1 Dev. N. Car. 491), "convey to the mind several and distinct meanings, for we can readily understand how a person has been put in jeopardy, upon whose case the jury have not passed. The danger and peril of a verdict do not relate to a verdict given. When the jury are empanelled on the trial of a person charged with a capital offence, and the indictment is not defective, his life is in peril, or jeopardy, and continues so throughout the trial."

But there is a very respectable holding to the effect that the jeopardy does not attach until verdict is rendered. Com. v. Olds, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 137; People v. Westchester, 1 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 659; United States v. Perez, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 579; U. S. v. Gilbert, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 19; State v. Moor, 1 Walk. (Miss.) 134; Swindel v. State, 32 Tex. 102; O'Brian v. Com., 6 Bush (Ky.) 563; Wilson v. Com., 3 Bush (Ky.) 105.

Other cases hold that jeopardy only begins after verdict. U. S. v. Perez, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 579; People v. Goodwin, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 187; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 203; U. S. v. Gilbert, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 19; State v. Moor, Walk. (Miss.) 134; s. c., 12 Am. Dec. 541; Taylor v. State, 35 Tex. 97; Moseley v. State, 33 Tex. 671; State v. Champeau, 52 Vt. 313; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 754.

1. 1 Bish. Cr. L. (7th ed.), § 1013; Morgan v. State, 13 Ind. 215; Wright v. State, 7 Ind. 324.

2. 4 Black. Com. 336; 1 Russ. on Crimes 829; Wilkinson v. State, 59 Ind. 416; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 596; Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 496; Burns v. People, 1 Park. (N. Y.) Cr. 182; People v. Nichols, 3 Park. (N. Y.) Cr. 579; People v. Burch, 5 N. Y. Cr. Rep. 29, 30; State v. Steward, 11 Oreg. 52, 238; State v. Herrick, 3 Nev. 259; State v. Spear, 6 Mo. 645; Morman v. State, 24

Miss. 54; Com. v. Foster, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 1; U. S. v. Wilson, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 150.

In a prosecution for a second offence, a conviction of a previous offence is equally conclusive whether defendant's plea in the previous case was guilty, not guilty, or nolo contendere. State v. Fagin, 64 N. H. 431; 6 N. Eng. 669.

A conviction on one of several counts in an indictment for the same offence, and a discontinuance as to the residue, is a bar to a subsequent indictment for the same charges. U. S. v. Keen, 1 McLean (U. S.) 429.

Conviction for keeping a disorderly house is a bar to a prosecution for the same offence at any time prior to the finding of the indictment. U. S. v. Burch, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 36; Dixon v. Corp. of Wash., 4 Cranch (U. S.) 114.

Where an affidavit made before a justice charges an indictable offence above the grade of an assault, for which the defendant is subsequently indicted and acquitted, such acquittal may be pleaded in bar of further proceedings before the justice. State v. Wightman, 26 Mo. 515.

Where an information to award an additional punishment sets forth a previous conviction and sentence upon an indictment embracing an averment of two former convictions and sentences, it was held, that the judgment and sentence upon the indictment was a bar to any further sentence upon the information for the same offences. Plumbly v. Com., 2 Metc. (Mass.) 413.

Where defendants are bound to keep the streets of an incorporated town in order, and several streets are presented on the same day, and several bills are found, a conviction on one may be pleaded in bar to the others. State v. Fayetteville, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 371.

Defendant was acquitted of the charge of carrying a pistol. Held, to bar a prosecution for carrying the same pistol at another place sixty yards away, to which he immediately went. Smith v. State, 79 Ala. 257.

A conviction or an acquittal upon an indictment under Rev. Sts. of Massachusetts, ch. 126, § 5, for burning a building, which does not aver that the same transaction as the first, it is immaterial if the offence is called by a different name.¹

building alleged to have been burned was "other than is mentioned" in section 3 of the same chapter, is a bar to a second indictment, under section 3 for the same burning. Com. v. Squire, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 258.

Different Court.—Where a party has been tried in a county court, on an indictment for an affray, he cannot be again tried for the same act in the superior court on a bill for assault and battery. State v. Stanly, 4 Jones (N. Car.) L. 290.

A party regularly convicted of assault and battery before a justice of the peace, cannot be prosecuted for the same offence in the court of common pleas. Bruce v. State, 9 Ind. 206.

Where proceedings were commenced against a person for an alleged offence, upon a complaint and warrant, before a justice of the peace, in a matter where he has final jurisdiction, and the accused is arraigned, tried and discharged as not guilty, and judgment has been entered thereon, he cannot be again put on trial, under another similar complaint and warrant for the same offence. Stevens v. Fassett, 27 Me. 266.

A judgment rendered by a justice of the peace, under the Kentucky act of 1802, upon a warrant for a breach of the peace, committed by an assault and battery, is a bar to an indictment for the same assault and battery. Com. v. Miller, 5 Dana (Ky.) 320.

A conviction by a justice of the peace for a misdemeanor, in Tennessee, under the act of 1848, ch. 66, is a bar to a subsequent prosecution, for the same offence by indictment or presentation, and, it seems, it would be so even if that act were unconstitutional. McGinnis v. State, 9 Humph (Tenn.) 43.

Discharge Under Habeas Corpus.—A person, discharged under the Habeas Corpus act of South Carolina, from prison, having been committed on a charge of murder, was held to be protected thereby from a subsequent prosecution on the same charge, as in case of a former acquittal. State v. Fley, 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 338.

1. Moore v. State, 71 Ala. 307; Holt v. State, 38 Ga. 187; State v. Layton, 25 Iowa 193.

In Texas Const., art. 1, § 14, as to second jeopardy, "same offence" means not the same eo nomine, but the same criminal act or omission. A conviction of "swindling" is a good bar to a prosecution for "uttering a forged instrument." Hirshfield v. State, 11 Tex. App. 207.

Where the gravamen of a riot is an assault and battery, a final judgment in the prosecution for an assault will bar a prosecution for the riot. Wininger v. State, 13 Ind. 540.

A conviction for simple larceny of a hat is a bar to an indictment for larceny of the same from a shop, the stealing in both cases being the same. State v. Wiles, 26 Minn. 381.

A plea of an acquittal by a justice of the peace is a sufficient bar to an indictment for an assault and battery, which alleges that "the life of the prosecutor was put in great danger," etc. Com. v. Cunningham, 13 Mass. 245. These words are used merely of course, and do not import a high and aggravated battery. Com. v. Cunningham, 13 Mass. 245. See also State v. M'Cory, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 5.

In Hinkle v. Com., 4 Dana (Ky.) 518, it was held that although setting up a gaming table and keeping a gaming table and inducing others to bet at it are distinct offences, yet where they are committed by one person at the same time, they are but one offence, may be laid in one count, and warrant but one penalty.

A conviction as a "common seller of liquor," under Vermont, St. 1852, is a conclusive bar to all complaints for sales prior to filing the complaint on which the conviction was had. State v. Nutt, 2 Wms. (28 Vt.) 598.

Variation in Name.—B's indictment in the circuit for wounding Jackson Perkins with a stone, a deadly weapon, held, barred by B's conviction before a justice for a breach of the peace, by assaulting and beating F. J. Perkins. Com. v. Bright, 78 Ky. 238.

An indictment charging one with stealing the property of A and B is barred by the dismissal of a former indictment charging him with stealing at the same time and place like property of A. Williams v. Com., 78 Ky. 93.

"I have bought of Barnhardt Krummer two frocks for seven dollars. Ask your employers for the money, and let him have it." (Signed) "Mrs. Williams." B. K. was indicted for forg-

a. Where the Same Act Constitutes Several Offences.—Where the same act constitutes a crime against several persons, a conviction or acquittal as to one bars an indictment as to another,¹ and where the same act constitutes several different crimes a conviction or acquittal as to one also bars a subsequent prosecution as to another.² The same individual may, however, at the same time, and ing this instrument, and for uttering it to Samuel Williams, Jr. (a son of Samuel Williams), as the act of his mother. Held, that the instrument, in connection with the intrinsic facts, was within the statute of forgery, and that an acquittal on the indictment on the merits, was a bar to a subsequent indictment for obtaining the money from S. W., Jr., by the false pretences that the instrument was true. People v. Krummer, 4 Parker (N. Y.) C. R. 217.

In State v. Benham, 7 Conn. 414, it was held that having in possession at one time several forged bank notes of different banks, with intent to pass them and defraud the person who should take them, and the several banks, constitute but one offence. So in State v. Eggesht, 41 Iowa 574; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 612, it was held of uttering four forged checks of different parties at the same time.

1. Clem v. State, 42 Ind. 420; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 369; Woodford v. People, 62 N. Y. 117; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 463; State v. Damon, 2 Tyler (Vt.) 387.

In State v. Merritt, Phillips (N. Car.) 134, the indictment charged an assault on A; the proof showed that a gun was fired at A and B, the shot passing between them. The indictment was held good, the court observing that an indiscriminate assault upon several is very clearly an assault upon each individual. But it is not held that separate indictments would lie. In State v. Comms., 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 371, distinguished from the principal case on the grounds that it was a case of mere omission of duty, the court, however, observed, this notion of rendering crimes, like matter, infinitely divisible, is repugnant to the spirit and policy of the law, and ought not to be countenanced.

Where K, with two others, was indicted for riotously, etc., assembling to disturb the peace, and for riotously, etc., beating M, a plea that K had been before indicted for an assault and battery on said M, being the same offence, and that on the trial the riotous conduct, now charged on K and others, was shown in aggravation of said assault and battery, and that he had been convicted of the same, was held to be a good bar. Com. v. Kinney, 2 Va. Cas. 139.

Where in one transaction the defendant stole the cattle of two different owners, and was indicted separately for each theft, it was held that a conviction on one indictment was a bar to the trial on the other, but an acquittal was not a bar. Wright v. State, 17 Tex. App. 152.

2. State v. Colgate, 31 Kan. 511; Triplett v. Com., 84 Ky. 193; State v. DeGraffenreid, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 287; Williams v. State, 24 Tex. App. 69.

An acquittal under an indictment for burglary in breaking and entering a dwelling with intent to steal, is a bar to a subsequent indictment for grand larceny, when the alleged taking was connected with a part of the same transaction constituting the alleged burglary at the same place and on the same occasion. Triplett v. Com., 84 Ky. 193.

An indictment charged burglary and theft in the same count. The court in its charge submitted the charge of burglary only, and the jury found a general verdict of guilty of burglary. Held, that the verdict conformed to the indictment, and the charge of the court, the judgment and sentence conformed to the verdict; and the conviction was for burglary alone, but operated to bar any further prosecution for the theft charged in the indictment. Turner v. State, 23 Tex. App. 512; s. c., 2 S. W. 619.

Although the Missouri statute permits burglary and larceny to be charged in the same count of an indictment, they are not one offence, but separate offences; and where, upon the trial of such an indictment, defendant is acquitted of the burglary and convicted of the larceny, he cannot, upon a new trial upon the same indictment, be convicted of burglary. State v. Bruffer, 75 Mo. 389. Compare State v. Gannon, 1 Mo. App. 502.

Defendant being tried for both burglary and larceny upon an indictment in one count, as permitted by statute, was acquitted of burglary and convicted of in the same transaction, commit two or more distinct crimes, in which case a prosecution for one is no bar to an indictment for another,¹ the distinction being that in the former case, the indictlarceny. A new trial being granted, held, that he could not be held to answer for the burglary upon the second trial. State v. Bruffey, 75 Mo. 389.

1. State v. Standifer, 5 Port. (Ala.) 523; Crocker v. State, 47 Ga. 568; Fant v. People, 45 Ill. 259; Olathe v. Thomas, 26 Kan. 233; Hilands v. Com., 114 Pa. St. 372; Campbell v. State, 22 Tex. App. 262.

An acquittal upon an indictment for a felony constitutes no bar to an indictment for a misdemeanor; and an acquittal for a misdemeanor is no bar to an indictment for felony. People v. Saunders, 4 Parker (N. Y.) C. R. 196; Reg. v. Gilmore, 15 Cox Cr. Cas. 85; s. c., 36 Eng. Rep. 500.

New York Code Crim. Proc., § 720, providing that a charge once dismissed by a grand jury cannot be again submitted except by direction of the court, does not apply when the charge subsequently considered is for an offence different from that previously dismissed. People v. Warren, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 440.

Illinois Act of June 23rd, 1883, respecting second and third offences, is not unconstitutional; second conviction need not be for same crime as former. Kelly v. People (Ill.), 3 West 45.

Contempt of Court.—A person may be indicted for an assault, committed in view of the court, though previously fined for contempt for the same act. State v. Yancy, 1 N. C., L. R. 519; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 553; State v. Woodfin, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 199; 2 Bish. Cr. L., § 264.

Conviction of Assault After Acquittal of Murder.—On an indictment for murder in the statutory form, charging merely that the prisoner feloniously, wilfully, and of malice aforethought, did kill and murder the deceased, no conviction could be had of an assault, and consequently an acquittal on such an indictment is no bar to a prosecution for an assault for the same act. Reg. v. Smith, 34 U. C., Q. B. 140; 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 511.

An acquittal of the charge of murder is not a bar to a prosecution for being an accessory before the fact. Morrow v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 475.

Acquittal under an indictment which, as permitted in Mississippi Code 1880, § 3016, charges murder, without aver-ring an assault and battery, does not bar a subsequent indictment for the latter offence. Moore v. State, 59 Miss. 25.

A former conviction for concealing the birth of a bastard child is no defence to an indictment for the murder of such child. The Code, § 1004; State v. Morgan, 95 N. Car. 641.

Assault and Battery.—A person convicted of an assault and battery committed in a riot may still be tried and convicted of the riot. U. S. v. Peaco, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 601; Scott v. U. S., 1 Morris (Iowa) 142.

On trial of an information charging assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill, a plea of autrefois acquit, referring to the prosecution of the same defendant on a charge of robbery at the same time, is not good. State v. Helveston, 38 La. An. 314.

A conviction or an acquittal for a simple assault and battery, before a court of competent jurisdiction to try the same, does not bar a subsequent prosecution for the same assault with intent to commit a felony. State v. Hattabough, 66 Ind. 223. Or an indictment for a riot out of which the assault and battery arose. Freeland v. People, 16 Ill. 380.

An acquittal on an indictment for a felonious assault will not bar a prosecution for the same offence as a common assault and battery, before a justice of the peace. State v. Wightman, 26 Mo. 515.

In Mississippi, an assault with intent to kill, and an assault with intent to commit manslaughter, are different crimes, and differently punished; and a prisoner who is indicted for the former and convicted of the latter is convicted of another and different offence than that charged in the indictment. Norman v. State, 24 Miss. 54.

A charge of assault and battery, presented in the lifetime of the person assaulted, and dismissed by one grand jury after his death, does not prevent another grand jury from finding an indictment for manslaughter based upon the same assault. People v. Warren, 109 N. Y. 615.

To an indictment for shooting with intent to kill a human being, the respondent pleaded former acquittal. It appeared, from the plea, that he had been formerly prosecuted for maliciously shooting and wounding a horse, on which charge he had been acquitted, and the plea alleged the identity of the two offences. Held, that a demurrer to this plea was properly sustained. The two offences are essentially different, and could not be legally identical, although both offences might have been committed in one and the same transaction. State v. Horneman, 16 Kan. 452; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 427.

Rape.—Where a person of color has been acquitted upon an indictment for a rape, and is subsequently indicted for an assault with intent to commit the rape upon a white female, under the act of 1823, he cannot object upon the trial that the evidence offered proves an actual rape, because the jury may convict for the specific charge contained in the indictment, if the evidence proves that charge, notwithstanding it may prove the other charge for which the prisoner has been formerly tried and acquitted. State v. Jesse, 3 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 98.

Bigamy.—A former acquittal of bigamy constitutes no defence against a charge of adultery. Swancoat v. State, 4 Tex. App. 105.

Larceny.—An indictment for stealing a hog cannot be pleaded in bar to an indictment for wilfully killing the same hog. State v. Ellison, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 229.

A former acquittal on a charge of petit larceny is no bar to a prosecution for obtaining goods on false pretences, although both indictments were for the same transaction, if in fact the evidence was incompetent to warrant a conviction on the charge of petit larceny. Dominick v. State, 40 Ala. 680. Or for obtaining the same goods by conspiracy. State v. Sias, 17 N. H. 558; or for receiving stolen goods. Foster v. State, 39 Ala. 229.

Notwithstanding a conviction of cattle theft under Texas Pen. Code, art. 749, by driving cattle from their accustomed range, and the assessment of a fine, defendant may again be found guilty of theft and imprisoned. (Overruling Sisk v. State, 9 Tex. App. 90) Campbell v. State, 22 Tex. App. 262.

Forgery.—A prisoner, acquitted of the forgery of an order, and also of falsely uttering, as true, a forged order, cannot plead that acquittal to a subsequent indictment, charging him with having fraudulently obtained sundry goods by means of a false privy token and counterfeit letter, which privy token was the same order, of the forgery and uttering of which he had been acquitted. Com. v. Quann, 2 Va. Cas. 89.

Arson.—One put on trial for the statutory offence of burning an untenanted house is not in second jeopardy from having been acquitted, by direction of the judge, of arson. State v. Jenkins, 20 S. Car. 351.

Intoxicating Liquors.—A person convicted of being a common seller of spirituous liquors cannot plead this conviction in defence of a single act of sale; they are different offences. State v. Maher, 35 Maine (5 Red.) 225; State v. Coombs, 32 Me. (2 Red.) 529.

An acquittal of the offence (Conn. Gen. St., p. 520) of keeping intoxicating liquors for sale is no bar to a conviction of the offence (§ 43) of keeping a place in which it is reputed that they are kept for sale. State v. Moriarty, 50 Conn. 415.

A conviction for selling a pint of liquor without a license is no bar to an indictment for selling it to a minor without the written consent of his parent or guardian. Ruble v. State (Ark.), 10 S. W. 262.

A defendant may be legally convicted of retailing without a license, and of trading with a slave, in South Carolina, though both offences arise out of the same act. State v. Glasgow, Dudley (S. Car.) 40.

Disorderly House.—A conviction for keeping a faro bank, contrary to a municipal bylaw, is no bar to an indictment for keeping a disorderly house, on the same evidence. U. S. v. Hood, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 133.

Disturbance.—Defendant was indicted for unlawfully disturbing a religious assembly. The disturbance consisted in firing a pistol. He was convicted and sentenced, and afterwards indicted for an attempt to commit murder by shooting at another with a pistol. The shooting was the same for which he had previously been convicted. Held, that this fact constituted no bar to the second indictment. State v. Ross, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 442.

The Test.—In Womack v. State, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 508, it is held that when two persons are killed by one act the defendant may be indicted for the single act of killing both; but to constitute such single offence, something more should appear than that they were committed on the same occasion.

ment was such that the accused might have been convicted upon proof of the facts set forth in the second indictment, while in the latter case, additional or other facts are required to be proven.¹ Out of the same facts, however, a series of changes may be preferred, in such a manner as to render a prosecution a bar to any subsequent prosecution for any one or more of the series.²

b. Offences Covering the Same Period.—A prosecution for an offence covering a certain period is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for an offence consisting of the same acts covering a portion of the period;³ but if the indictment charges the commission of the crime from one given time to another, and the evidence is confined to the time thus carved out, the prosecution will be no bar to a subsequent prosecution for the commission of such crime at another or other times.⁴

c. Greater and Lesser Offences.—Where a greater offence includes a lesser one, being placed in jeopardy under an indictment for the included offence only, constitutes a bar to a prosecution for the greater offence;⁵ so, upon a trial for the higher grade of or in the progress of the same affray. It is sufficient now to say, without attempting to establish an abstract proposition which shall serve as a test in all cases, that if the physical acts of assault and killing are distinct, and the intention to kill one is an intention formed and existing distinct from and independent of the intention to kill the other, the two acts cannot constitute a single offence of murder.

1. See Chit. Crim. Law, 453; 1 Russ. on Crimes, 829, 826; Com. v. Ruby, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 496.

2. See Com. v. Jenks, 1 Gray (Mass.) 490; Reg. v. Elrington, 9 Cox C. C. 86.

3. Com. v. Dunster, 145 Mass. 101; Com. v. Cunningham (Mass.), 5 N. Eng. Rep. 116; s. c., 13 N. E. Rep. 352; Com. v. Robinson, 126 Mass. 259; State v. Nutt, 28 Vt. 598.

Where defendant had been acquitted upon an information before a justice of the peace, charging him with selling whiskey and stomach bitters, held, that, on a second information charging the sale of an intoxicating mixture called "dandelion bitters," it was error to allow evidence of any sales of such mixture during the time covered by the first information. State v. Sterrenberg, 69 Iowa 544.

Where under an indictment for unlawfully selling liquor at different times, a conviction has been had, and there has been no election as to the particular time relied on, the conviction is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for any sale to the same party within the same time. State v. Nunnally, 43 Ark. 68.

4. Huffman v. State, 23 Tex. App. 491.

An acquittal on an indictment for being a common seller of intoxicating liquors on the third of June, and thence to the day of finding of the indictment, is no bar to a prosecution for an unlawful sale on the 2nd of June. Com. v. Keefe, 7 Gray (Mass.) 332.

A judgment that a place is a nuisance between designated days in 1879 is no bar to an indictment of it as a nuisance between designated days in 1880, though the order to abate in the first case has not been obeyed. Gormley v. State, 37 Ohio St. 120.

5. Roberts v. State, 14 Ga. 8; Hickey v. State, 23 Ind. 21; Jackson v. State, 14 Ind. 327; Hamilton v. State, 36 Ind. 280; State v. Murray, 55 Iowa 530; Com. v. Squire, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 258; Com. v. Bosworth, 113 Mass. 200; State v. Snyder, 50 N. H. 150; State v. Buzzell, 58 N. H. 257; People v. Smith, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 46; State v. Lewis, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 98; State v. Ingles, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 4; State v. Smith, 43 Vt. 324; State v. Wiles, 26 Minn. 381; Jones v. State, 1 L. & E. Rep. 174; Com. v. Sheldon, 3 Mass. 188.

Where a prisoner has once been convicted of murder in the second degree, he cannot if he obtains a new trial be convicted of murder in the first degree. Jones v. State, 13 Tex. 168.

an offence consisting of degrees if the defendant is convicted of an inferior grade, such conviction operates as an acquittal of, and will bar a subsequent prosecution for any of the higher grades;¹ and where such a conviction is reversed and a new trial ordered, the new trial must be confined to the particular charge upon which the defendant was found guilty on the former trial.² But if the

1. Smith v. State, 68 Ala. 424; Johnson v. State, 29 Ark. 31; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 430; People v. Appgar, 35 Cal. 389; People v. Gilmore, 4 Cal. 376; State v. McNaught, 36 Kan. 624; State v. Byrd, 31 La. An. 419; State v. Payson, 37 Me. 361; Com. v. Herty, 109 Mass. 348; Hurt v. State, 25 Miss. 378; State v. Brannon, 55 Mo. 63; State v. Ross, 29 Mo. 32; Burns v. People, 1 Park. (N. Y.) Cr. 182; People v. Cignarale, 110 N. Y. 23; Guenther v. People, 24 N. Y. 100; People v. Dowling, 84 N. Y. 478; Parker v. State, 22 Tex. App. 105; State v. Kittle, 2 Tyler (Vt.) 471; State v. Moon, 41 Wis. 684; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 64.

If the offence charged be one consisting of different degrees, the statute (Texas Code Crim. Proc., art. 713) which declares that "The jury may find the defendant not guilty of the higher (naming it) but guilty of any degree inferior to that charged in the information or indictment" is not mandatory so far as acquittal of the higher degree is concerned, but the finding of the lesser degree is per se an acquittal of the higher. Robinson v. State, 21 Tex. App. 160.

Two indictments were found against the prisoner at the same term, the one for burglary and larceny, the other for a robbery, both charging the felonious taking of the same goods. He was found guilty of larceny on the first indictment, and not guilty of the burglary. Held, that he could not be put on trial on the second indictment. State v. Lewis, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 98. See State v. Risher, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 219.

An instruction that the evidence on an indictment for statutory burglary is not sufficient to convict of the breaking and entering, is not equivalent to an acquittal on that part of the charge so as, in case of disagreement of the jury, to constitute a bar to further prosecution for the same offence. People v. Schoemeth, 44 Mich. 489.

When an accused indicted for a crime in the first degree has been convicted of that crime in the third degree, and such conviction has been reversed on appeal, the accused, having, in legal effect, been acquitted of the crime in the higher degree, cannot under the New York Penal Code, "be thereafter indicted or tried for the same crime in any other degree." (Sec. 36.) People v. Palmer, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 397; 5 N. Y. Crim. 101; 6 N. Y. St. Rep. 341.

2. Bell v. State, 48 Ala. 684; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 40; Johnson v. State, 29 Ark. 31; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 154; People v. Appgar, 35 Cal. 389; People v. Gilmore, 4 Cal. 376; Sipple v. People, 110 Ill. App. 144; Logg v. People, 8 Ill. App. 99; State v. Malling, 11 Iowa 239; State v. Tweedy, 11 Iowa 350; State v. McNaught, 36 Kan. 624; Morris v. State, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 762; State v. Ross, 29 Mo. 32; State v. Kattlemann, 35 Mo. 105; State v. Bruffy, 75 Mo. App. 389; People v. Dowling, 84 N. Y. 478; Campbell v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 333; Esmon v. State, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 14; State v. Martin, 30 Wis. 216; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 567; State v. Belden, 33 Wis. 120; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 748; and see Livingston's Case, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 592.

On an indictment for murder there was a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, but an acquittal of murder, and the verdict was set aside on the motion of the defendant and a new trial granted. Held, that the defendant was discharged from the charge of murder, but that a conviction of manslaughter on the same indictment, upon such second trial was valid. Slaughter v. State, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 410.

Accordingly, when the judgment is reversed for an illegal sentence upon a conviction in which there was no error, a new trial cannot be ordered, but the prisoner must be discharged, and this though on a motion in arrest of judgment he asked for a new trial. Shepherd v. People, 11 Smith (25 N. Y.) 406.

Article 783, which declares that "The effect of a new trial is to place the cause in the same position in which it was before any trial had taken place," does not apply in cases admitting of degrees where a party, having been several counts of the indictment are upon the same transaction charging it in different ways, instead of separate and distinct transactions, a new trial would bring up the whole case.¹

The rule as above stated is not, however, universally followed, the principle having been adopted in some courts that a verdict is severable only where there is a conviction or an acquittal on different counts for separate and distinct offences, or where there are several defendants;² but where the indictment, though consisting of several counts, is founded upon a single transaction, the verdict is a unit, and in case of conviction upon one or more counts, a new trial will open the whole case.³

One acquitted or convicted of an offence which necessarily includes a lesser one cannot afterwards be convicted of the latter offence.⁴ An apparent exception to the foregoing rule exists in convicted of a lesser degree, is accorded a new trial. In such cases the rule is that the case stands for trial upon the degree for which the conviction was had, and the degrees inferior thereto; and that, with respect to such degrees, the case stands as if no previous trial had been had. Robinson v. State, 21 Tex. App. 160.

Must be Plead.—A trial on an indictment for murder, conviction and recommendation by the jury to mercy, and on appeal a new trial ordered, not pros. entered, and a new indictment for the same offence. Conviction under the new indictment, without recommendation to mercy, and motion in arrest of judgment, on the ground that the former verdict was acquittal of murder in the first degree, and the prisoner could not be tried for the same offence again. Held, 1, that the question, not having been presented in the pleadings or evidence, was not properly before the court, but, 2, that such state of facts did not bring the case within the rule which prohibits a trial for a higher grade of offence than that found on conviction on a former trial. Mann v. State, 34 Ga.

As to the unconstitutionality of a statute changing the rule that a new trial does not open the case as to the crime of which there has been an acquittal, passed after the crime is committed. See Kring v. State, 107 U. S. 221; s. c., 4 Cr. L. Mag. 550; 16 Cent. L. J. 308; and see Garvey v. People, 4 Crim. L. Mag. 715; s. c., 6 Colo. 559; 45 Am. Rep. 531.

1. State v. Owen, 17 Cent. L. J. 214.

On the second trial the accused may be convicted of an offence which was embraced in the indictment and on which no verdict of acquittal was given. State v. Smith, 53 Mo. 139.

2. State v. Behrimer, 20 Ohio St. 572; see Hurley's Case, 6 Ohio 400.

3. Johnson v. State, 29 Ark. 31; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 154; State v. McCord, 8 Kan. 232; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 469; Veatch v. State, 60 Ind. 291; Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 155.

Where the accused on trial for murder is convicted of the lesser offence of manslaughter, and the verdict is set aside and a new trial granted, at his own instance, he may on the retrial, be convicted of the higher offence of murder. Com. v. Arnold, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 309; s. c., 6 Cr. L. Mag. 61; Bailey v. State, 26 Ga. 579; Bohanan v. State, 18 Neb. 57; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 791.

An indictment contained three counts, one charging the commission of the crime of manslaughter by throwing a glass tumbler against the head of the deceased; in the second, by striking him with the tumbler in hand; the third, by striking the head with the fist. A verdict of guilty on the first, and not guilty on the second and third, was returned. A motion for a new trial was granted, and it was held to be granted as to all three counts. Jarvis v. State, 19 Ohio St. 585; State v. Stanton, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 424; State v. Commrs., 3 Hill (S. Car.) 239.

Where defendant's conviction of a lower degree, under an indictment charging the highest degree, of the crime, is, on his appeal, reversed and a new trial ordered, he can be again tried under the indictment, without regard to the former conviction. People v. Palmer, 109 (N. Y.) 413.

4. State v. Standifer, 5 Port. (Ala.) 523; Fox v. State, (Ark.); 8 S. W. 836;

the case of a prosecution for a misdemeanor before a justice punishable by fine only, it being no bar to a prosecution of a grade of the offence amounting to a felony, of which the justice had no jurisdiction.¹

d. Offences of the Same Genus.—A former prosecution for an offence is a bar to a subsequent prosecution when the former prosecution was for an offence which constitutes an essential element of the latter charge;² thus a conviction for petit larceny is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for grand larceny on the same facts,³

Davis v. State, 45 Ark. 464; Hall v. State, 50 Ark. 28; State v. Hattabough, 66 Ind. 223; State v. Foster, 33 Iowa 525; Triplett v. Com., 84 Ky. 193; Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 502; People v. McGowan, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 386; Case of Sargent, 2 City Hall Rec. (N. Y.) 44; Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 36; State v. Cooper (13 N. J. L.), 1 Green 361; Reg. v. Gould, 9 C. & P. (Eng.) 364; 17 Am. L. Rev. 736.

The plea autrefois acquit is good, if the defendant has been before tried for the same offence, on an indictment on which he might have been lawfully convicted and sentenced. Heikes v. Com., 26 Pa. St. 513.

Inasmuch as a conviction for wilfully driving stock from its accustomed range, etc., can be had under an indictment charging the theft of the stock, it is no objection to the sufficiency of a plea of former jeopardy interposed upon the trial for the wilful driving of the stock, etc., that the indictment under which the former trial was had, charged the theft of the stock. McElMurray v. State, 21 Tex. App. 691.

An indictment contained nine counts for embezzlement and fourteen for larceny. Held, that a general verdict, "guilty of embezzlement," acted as an acquittal on the charge of larceny, and was a bar to any subsequent prosecution therefor. Guenther v. People, 24 N. Y. (10 Smith) 100.

In Missouri an accused was indicted "for robbery in the first degree," which was a sufficient indictment for larceny. Upon the trial the jury found him guilty of robbery "in the second degree." The verdict was set aside, as there were no degrees in robbery. Subsequently the defendant was again tried upon the same indictment and convicted of larceny. This was held error, as the defendant could, upon the first trial, have been convicted of either robbery or larceny but was lawfully convicted of neither; the verdict operated as an acquittal. State v. Brannon, 55 Mo. 63; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 643.

1. State v. Nichols, 38 Ark. 550; Southworth v. State, 42 Ark. 270; Freeland v. People, 16 Ill. 380; State v. Foster, 33 Iowa 525; Com. v. Curtis, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 134; Prime v. State, 41 Tex. 300; White v. State, 9 Tex. App. 390.

2. A conviction on an indictment charging, as a distinct offence, a part of one transaction, bars a prosecution on the other parts. Wright v. State, 17 Tex. App. 152.

In Tennessee, a conviction, judgment and execution, for felony not capital, committed before such conviction, etc. Crenshaw v. State, Mart. & Yerg. 122; see Hawkins v. State, 1 Port. (Ala.) 475; State v. McCarty, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 334.

The prosecution cannot split up the act into several parts. The prosecutor "may carve out as large an offence as he can, but he can carve only one." Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 36; 1 Bish. Cr. L., § 1060; Drake v. State, 60 Ala. 42; Wright v. State, 17 Tex. App. 152.

3. Southworth v. State, 42 Ark. 270; Williams v. State, 42 Ark. 35; State v. Murray, 55 Iowa 530.

Conviction for larceny of a pocket book is a bar to a subsequent indictment for stealing a note in the pocket book at the same time. U. S. v. Lee, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 446.

A conviction for simple larceny of a hat (of the value of four dollars) is a bar to an indictment for larceny of the same from a shop, the stealing in both cases being one and the same. State v. Wiles, 26 Minn. 381; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 621.

When by one act a man was guilty of theft and of swindling, a conviction of one was held to be a bar to the other. State v. Sims, 21 Tex. App. 649.

Where two yearlings are branded at and a prosecution for robbery¹ or burglary² may be barred by a former prosecution for a larceny or other offence where the latter offence must have been included in the former. If the larceny is of several different articles belonging to different persons, it is but one offence, and the prosecution for the larceny of the goods of one will bar a prosecution as to the others;³ but it would be different if the property of the different owners was so separated that each taking would be a distinct and separate act.⁴ The same rule applies in cases of crime against the person, as assault, rape, etc., where the one act is a necessary ingredient of the other,⁵ as well as to arson,⁶ forgery and other offences.⁷ On the other the same time by one not their owner, conviction for the crime of branding one of them is a bar to a prosecution for branding the other. Adams v. State, 16 Tex. App. 162.

1. State v. Mikesell, 70 Iowa 176; but see Wilson v. State, 24 Conn. 57.

A conviction for petit larceny before a justice of the peace is a bar to a subsequent prosecution on indictment for larceny from the person based on the same act. State v. Gleason, 56 Iowa 203.

A trial and acquittal for robbery is a bar to an indictment for larceny, where the property alleged to have been taken is the same. People v. McGowan, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 386.

One cannot be indicted, convicted, and punished for robbery, and also for an assault with intent to commit murder, growing out of the robbery. Wilcox v. State, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 571; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 53.

2. Roberts v. State, 14 Ga. 13; People v. Smith, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 46; State v. Lewis, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 98; s. c., 11 Am. Dec. 741.

Where goods are taken in a burglary, and larceny and burglary are charged in the same count, a conviction of larceny is, it seems, a bar to a subsequent indictment for burglary. Gordon v. State, 71 Ala. 315.

3. Willis v. State, 24 Tex. App. 586.

4. Phillips v. State, 85 Tenn. 551.

5. See Reg. v. Elrington, 9 Cox C. C. (Eng.) 86.

A party charged with an assault and convicted cannot afterwards be punished for the battery committed at the same time. State v. Chaffin, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 493.

In Delaware, a person cannot be indicted both for a riot and disturbing a religious meeting by such riot, as the punishment for the former covers the latter offence. State v. Townsend, 2 Harr. (Del.) 543.

In State v. Shepard, 7 Com. 54, it was held that a conviction for an assault with intent to commit a rape was a bar to an indictment for rape, the court saying: "If the conviction there cannot be pleaded in bar of an indictment for a rape, then he may be tried again; and as he has already suffered, and is still enduring a punishment for the less crime, and may be condemned and suffer for the greater, he may be twice punished for the same act — a doctrine repugnant to well established principles of law."

An acquittal on an indictment for seduction is a bar to a subsequent indictment for fornication and bastardy founded on the same act. Dinkey v. Com., 17 Pa. St. 126.

6. An acquittal of arson of a mill is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for arson of books of accounts at the same time. State v. Colgate, 31 Kan. 511; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 507.

A conviction upon an indictment for arson, is a bar to an indictment for the murder of a person burned in the house, for burning which the accused was convicted of arson. State v. Cooper, 1 Green (13 N. J. L.) 361.

7. In two indictments against the same person for forgery, the first alleged a forged order on "J. Irwin & Co.," the second on "John Irwin & Co.," and this was the only difference between them. Held, that autrefois acquit was well pleaded to the second, the defendant being acquitted on the first. Durham v. People, 4 Scam. (Ill.) 172.

A party cannot be prosecuted, under the act of Tennessee of 1833, ch. 10, § 2, for betting on, and running a race horse, along a public road, as two distinct offences. Conviction for running, is a good bar to a conviction for betting, hand, if the two crimes are entirely separate and distinct acts, however closely they may be connected, and even though some of the ingredients of the one enter into the other, a prosecution for the one will be no bar to a prosecution for the other,¹ and if, after on the same indetical race. Fiddler v. State, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 508.

1. Killing Several Persons.—In Vaughan v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 273, it was held that if the defendant is indicted and acquitted of shooting A, and subsequently indicted for shooting B, the same act of shooting being charged in each case, the former acquittal will not be a bar, because the ground of acquittal might have been that the shot did not strike A, or that the shooting was not with intent to hurt A. Here there was but one discharge of the gun. In Smith v. Com., 7 Gratt. (Va.) 593, a conviction of advising a slave to abscond was held no bar to an indictment for advising another slave to abscond, although the advice was given at one and the same time and by the same words and acts. The court pronounced no opinion, but simply affirmed the conviction. See also State v. Standifer, 5 Port. (Ala.) 523; People v. Majors, 65 Cal. 138; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 295; Teat v. State, 53 Miss. 439; State v. Nash, 86 N. Car. 650; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 472.

A and B were passing along a road together, C killed A, and D killed B. Both were indicted for killing A. C was convicted, and D acquitted. Both were then indicted for killing B. C pleaded autrefois convict. D pleaded autrefois acquit. Held, that the pleas should be overruled. State v. Vines, 34 La. An. 1079.

Murder and Intent to Kill.—A conviction on an indictment for an assault with intent to murder is not a bar to an indictment for murder. Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 496. See Curtis v. State, 22 Tex. App. 227.

In People v. Warren, 1 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 338, it was held that an acquittal of intent to kill A by mixing poison in bread was no bar to a subsequent indictment for attempt to kill B by the same transaction. The court distinguished between the act and intent, saying: "The intent in these cases is the material constituent of the crime. Though the acts may have been the same, the crimes, as characterized by the intent, are different." But in an indiscriminate assault there can be no specific and distinguishable intent.

Killing in Different Ways.—An acquittal on an indictment for a murder committed by shooting with powder and shot from a gun is no bar to an indictment for murder committed by beating upon the head with a gun—the two offences are distinct in regard to legal jeopardy. Guedel v. People, 43 Ill. 226.

Other Assaults.—A party may be convicted upon an indictment for an assault and battery, although he has already been convicted upon an indictment for an assault and battery upon another party, at the same time and place, both assaults having been made during the continuance of a fight in which the defendant and others had engaged. Greenwood v. State, 64 Ind. 250.

The defendant, with three others, was convicted of an affray for beating in public one M. During the affray, the prosecutrix went up to protect M, who was her son, and the defendant struck her. Held, that the conviction for the affray was no bar to this indictment for an assault and battery on the prosecutrix. State v. Parrish, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 322.

A was acquitted on an indictment for the murder of an unborn child, through the use of means designed to produce a miscarriage by the mother. Held, that this was no bar to an indictment against A for attempting to produce such miscarriage by the same or any other means. State v. Elder, 65 Ind. 282; and see State v. Nathan, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 219.

Incest and Adultery.—Pauline Deitz and Pauline Seitz are not idem sonans. An acquittal on a trial for incest with one is not a bar to an indictment for incest with the other. Nance v. State, 17 Tex. App. 385. And a man indicted for adultery cannot plead in bar the former acquittal of his paramour and codefendant. Alonzo v. State, 15 Tex. App. 378; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 207.

Arson.—An acquittal upon an indictment charging the defendant with setting fire to a barn, whereby a dwelling house was burnt, in the night time, and alleging it to be the barn of A and B, is no bar to another indictment for the same offence, alleging it to be the barn of A and C. Com. v. Wade, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 395, and see Com. v. Mortimer, 2 Va. Cas. 325.

On a question of second jeopardy, the effect of nolle prosequi on one count of an indictment for arson, held, to leave the indictment as if the count had never been preferred; and an acquittal on the second count not to preclude re-indictment for arson in the first degree. Walker v. State, 61 Ala. 30.

Burglary and larceny are separate offences, conviction for one of which is no bar to a prosecution for the other. State v. Martin, 76 Mo. 337. Compare State v. Kelsoe, 76 Mo. 505.

A conviction for larceny, on an indictment for breaking and entering with intent to steal, is not pleadable in bar against a subsequent prosecution for the breaking. Wilson v. State, 24 Conn. 57.

And an acquittal for burglary with intent to commit a larceny is no bar to a prosecution for the larceny. State v. Warner, 14 Ind. 572.

Different Larcenies.—Separate indictments charged the defendant with the theft of two horses. He was acquitted on one of the indictments. The horses belonged to different persons, and were a mile apart when taken. Held, that defendant could not plead "former acquittal" in bar to the other indictment. Alexander v. State, 21 Tex. App. 406; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 617.

Where a person was acquitted on a former indictment for the larceny of certain bonds, held, that such an acquittal was not a bar to conviction on an indictment under Massachusetts Gen. Sts., ch. 161, § 39, for fraudulent conversion of the same bonds, it not appearing in the pleadings or evidence at the trial on the latter indictment, that the defendant was not intrusted with the custody of them. Com. v. Tenney, 97 Mass. 50; and see Shubert v. State, 21 Tex. App. 551; Hite v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 357.

An acquittal on the charge of embezzling cloth and other materials of which overcoats are made is no defence to an indictment for embezzling overcoats, although the same facts which were proved on the trial of the first indictment are relied upon in support of the second. Com. v. Clair, 7 Allen (Mass.) 525.

Where a person entrusted by another with goods for a particular purpose obtains money thereon by falsely representing himself as the owner and selling them, he may be indicted as well for embezzling the goods as for obtaining money from the purchaser under false pretences; and a conviction of the latter offence will not bar a prosecution for the former. State v. Faulkner, 39 La. An. 811.

A was indicted for stealing a sheep, charged to be the property of B, and acquitted on the ground that the owner of the property was unknown. He was afterwards indicted for the same offence, the sheep being charged to be the property of some one to the jurors unknown. Held, that the plea of former acquittal was no bar to a conviction on the latter indictment. State v. Revels, Busbee (N. Car.) L. 200.

Robbery and Assault.—A previous trial on the charge of robbery is not a bar to a subsequent indictment for assault with a dangerous weapon, at the same time on the same person. State v. Helveston, 38 La. An. 314.

A conviction of assault with a deadly weapon is not a bar to a prosecution for an attempt to commit robbery committed at the same time. People v. Benson, 6 Cal. 221.

Burglary.—A conviction of burglary, Held, not to bar a separate prosecution for a theft committed at the same time. Howard v. State, 8 Tex. App. 447.

Where the same transaction includes a burglary and a conspiracy to commit burglary, the two offences may be "carved out" of the transaction; and a conviction for the one will not bar a prosecution for the other. Whitford v. State, 24 Tex. App. 489.

Forgery.—An acquittal upon an indictment for forging an order with intent to defraud John Lang, is no bar to an indictment for forging the same order with intent to defraud William Lang. U. S. v. Book, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 294.

Uttering Forged Instrument.—Where a person passes, or attempts to pass, the same forged instrument upon different persons at different times and different places, he is guilty of two separate and distinct offences; and a conviction or acquittal for one alone will not bar a prosecution for the other. Burks v. State, 24 Tex. App. 326.

Where the only recital of evidence in the record of a trial of an indictment for uttering and publishing as true a forged instrument, knowing it to be forged, is a conviction for an assault, the assaulted party dies, the conviction is no bar to an indictment for murder.¹

that the defendant proved that he had been before indicted and tried for the forgery of the same writing, with the uttering of which he was charged in the indictment, and upon such trial had been regularly acquitted, a charge of the court that a trial for, and acquittal of, the forgery of an instrument was not a bar to a subsequent indictment for uttering the same instrument as genuine, knowing it to be forged, was held to be correct. Harrison v. State, 36 Ala. 248.

Illegal Sale of Intoxicating Liquors.—

A former conviction of the principal for the sale of intoxicating liquors is no defence to a subsequent indictment against his clerk for the same act of sale. State v. Finan, 10 Iowa (With.) 19.

Keeping a tenement used for the illegal sale and illegal keeping of intoxicating liquors, and being a common seller of intoxicating liquors during the same time and at the same place, are distinct offences; and a conviction for one is no bar to an indictment for the other, although the same acts are relied on in proof of both charges. Com. v. O'Donnell, 8 Allen (Mass.) 548; Com. v. Bubser, 14 Gray (Mass.) 83; Com. v. Hudson, 14 Gray (Mass.) 11; Com. v. Cutler, 9 Allen (Mass.) 486.

An information charging that the defendant kept intoxicating liquors with the intent to sell, is no bar to an indictment charging that he established and continued a building and place in which he kept liquors with intent to sell. State v. Harris, 64 Iowa 287.

Code Iowa, § 1543, as amended by ch. 143, Laws 20th Gen. Assem., prescribes as punishment for keeping a liquor nuisance a fine not exceeding $1,000, no minimum being prescribed. A subsequent amendment (ch. 66, Laws 21st Gen. Assem.) prescribes as the penalty for such offence a fine not exceeding $1,000, and not less than $300, power being reserved to punish any offence prior to such act. Held, that an acquittal under an indictment charging under the latter amendment is no bar to a trial under an indictment precisely similar to the former one, except that the dates charge an offence under the former amendment. State v. Weber (Iowa), 39 N. W. 286.

Other Crimes and Misdemeanors.—In order that the first of two indictments for keeping a gaming house should bar the other it must appear in proof that the keeping alleged in the two was without intermission; that the dates set out in the indictment show no intermission is not sufficient, as under neither, need the time be proved as laid, and it may be that there was an interval between the times laid. State v. Lindley, 14 Ind. 431.

One cannot plead former acquittal of the offence of keeping a gaming table, because his partner was tried for the same offence and acquitted. Gosforth v. State, 22 Tex. App. 405.

In State v. Fife, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) 1, the defendant traded at the same time with two negroes without permit, and being indicted for the offence in separate indictments, he was held punishable under each. The court disposed of the argument that there was but one injury to the master, by saying that the injury was not an ingredient, or if it was, "it is certainly a repetition of it to buy from another." This begs the whole question by assuming one part of a simultaneous act to be a repetition of another part.

A conviction of keeping a shop open on the Lord's day is no bar to an indictment for a nuisance in keeping the same shop at the same time for the illegal sale and keeping of intoxicating liquors. Com. v. Shea, 14 Gray (Mass.) 386.

A, the agent of a certain lottery scheme, was acquitted on the ground that, in the judgment of the inferior court wherein the prosecution was instituted the statute creating the offence was unconstitutional. B, another agent of the same scheme, was then indicted. Held, that the commonwealth was not estopped from maintaining the prosecution. Justice v. Com., 81 Va. 209.

1. Johnson v. State, 19 Tex. App. 453; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 385; Com. v. Evans, 101 Mass. 25; More v. Com., 108 Mass. 433; Com. v. Drum, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 479; State v. Hattabough, 66 Md. 223; Burns v. People, 1 Park. (N. Y.) Cr. 182; Curtis v. State, 22 Tex. App. 227; Queen v. Morris, Law Rep., 1 C. C. 90.

To an indictment for manslaughter the defendant pleaded a former conviction for assault and battery, from which the person named in the indictment died

e. The Test as to the Identity of the Offences.—On a plea of former acquittal, the true test to determine whether the accused has been put in jeopardy for the same offence is, whether or not the facts alleged in the second indictment, if proved to be true, would have warranted a conviction on the first indictment;¹ or whether or not the second case is precisely the same transaction as the first;² subject to the exception, however, that where, after the first prosecution, a new act intervenes, for which the defendant is responsible, which, together with the facts then existing, constitute a new and distinct crime; a prosecution for the first offence is not a bar to an indictment for the new offence.³

V. THE PLEA OF JEOPARDY WHEN SUSTAINED—1. Examination Before Committing Magistrate.—A discharge by a committing magistrate is not sufficient to sustain a plea of former jeopardy for the same offence,⁴ the magistrate having power merely to examine and after the former conviction. Held, that the plea was not a bar to the indictment. State v. Littlefield, 70 Me. 452.

1. McCoy v. State, 46 Ark. 141; Wilson v. State, 24 Conn. 57; Roberts v. State, 14 Ga. 8; Freeland v. People, 16 Ill. 380; Durham v. People, 5 Ill. (4 Scam.) 172; State v. Holmes, 56 Iowa 588; State v. Keogh, 13 La. An. 243; State v. Birmingham, Busb. (N. Car.) L. 120; Price v. State, 19 Ohio 423; State v. Stewart, 11 Oreg. 238; Hilands v. Com., 114 Pa. St. 372; Hite v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 198; State v. Cameron, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 85; Ex parte Rogers, 10 Tex. App. 655; Irwin v. State, 7 Tex. App. 78; Simco v. State, 9 Tex. App. 338; 7 Crim. Law Mag. 711.

When a party has been indicted for forging certain endorsements on a note, and acquitted, and he is afterwards indicted for uttering and publishing as true a note made by himself, on which the names of certain individuals were alleged to have been forged as endorsers, to which he pleaded his former acquittal the court held, that, as the proof necessary to convict must be the same in both cases, the plea was a good bar. People v. Allen, 1 Park. (N. Y.) C. R. 445.

If a person be indicted for shooting S W, and acquitted thereof, and then indicted for shooting J W, the plea of autrefois acquit will not be supported, although the same act of shooting is charged in each indictment; for the jury who tried the first indictment might have acquitted the prisoner on several grounds, which would not affect the second trial. Vaughan v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 273.

Mississippi Code, § 2857, provides that where an indictment for gaming charges a single offence, other offences may be put in evidence provided that in such case after acquittal or conviction on the merits the accused shall not be again liable for any offence antedating the indictment. Held, not to confer immunity for offences of which evidence was adduced. Pope v. State, 63 Miss. 53.

Where in a single transaction, a party commits two distinct crimes so related to each other that proof to sustain one need not involve the proof necessary to sustain the other, indictments will lie for both and a conviction of one will not bar the other. State v. Faulkner, 39 La. An. 811; 2 S. 539.

2. Roberts v. State, 14 Ga. 8.

Autrefois acquit avails only where the transaction is the same, and both indictments may be, and must be, sustained by the same proof. Autrefois convict only requires the transaction to be the same. Wright v. State, 17 Tex. App. 152.

3. Case of Nicholas, Foster's Cr. L. 64; State v. Hattabough, 66 Ind. 223; Com. v. Evans, 101 Mass. 25; Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 496; Burns v. People, 1 Park. (N. Y.) Cr. 183.

4. Ex parte Fenton (Cal.), 12 P. 267; Bulson v. People, 31 Ill. 409; In re McIntyre, 10 Ill. (5 Gilm.) 422; State v. Hattabough, 66 Ind. 223; State v. Morgan, 62 Ind. 35; Re Garst, 10 Neb. 78; Marston v. Janness, 11 N. H. 156; Ex parte Porter, 16 Tex. App. 321; McCann's Case, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 570; Com. v. Bailey, 1 Va. Cas. 258; Com. v. Meyers, 1 Va. Cas. 188; but discharge or bind over,¹ and even if he has jurisdiction both to try and punish the prisoner, and to examine and send him to the county court for indictment, the plea cannot be sustained if he exercised the latter jurisdiction only.²

2. Examination Before Grand Jury.—An examination of the case, and a failure to find an indictment against the accused, does not put him in jeopardy;³ and though there cannot be two trials, the pendency of one indictment is no bar to a second one for the same crime.⁴ Though the rule is laid down in Indiana that after failure of the grand jury to find an indictment, a prosecution by information cannot be had.⁵

3. Demurrer to the Indictment.—The hearing and decision of a demurrer to an indictment does not constitute a putting the defendant in jeopardy.⁶ The contrary rule, however, seems to have been adopted in New York and California, the demurrer, if sustained, see Morrissey v. People, 11 Mich. 327.

The rule that no person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offence does not apply to the proceeding for surety of the peace. State v. Vankirk, 27 Ind. 121.

Neither a complaint to, and issuing of a warrant by, a justice, no further proceedings being had, nor a conviction before a justice on a confession or testimony given by the offender, is a bar to a subsequent indictment for the same offence. Bradley v. State, 32 Ark. 722.

A was brought before a justice of the peace for examination on the charge of assault with intent, and the record showed a finding of "not guilty." Held, not a bar to an indictment for the same or an inferior assault. Fluty v. State, 45 Ark. 97.

While the finding of a court of enquiry, acquitting the prisoner of all blame in causing the death of another, is not a legal bar to a prosecution, it is entitled to weight as an expression of the views of the military court, of the necessity of using a musket to prevent the escape of the deceased. U. S. v. Clark, 31 Fed. Rep. 710.

The 24 and 25 Vict., ch. 100, § 45, makes a conviction before a magistrate a bar to a civil action for the same assault. A police magistrate, after hearing a case of common assault, ordered the accused to enter into recognizances and pay the recognizance fee, but did not order him to be imprisoned or to pay any fine. Held, that this was not a conviction within the statute. Hartley v. Hindmarsh, Law Rep., 1 C. P. 553.

1. Marston v. Janness, 11 N. H. 156.

2. Wolverton v. Com., 75 Va. 909.

An arraignment before a justice of the peace on a complaint, for an offence of which he has concurrent jurisdiction with the court of common pleas is no bar to an indictment for the same offence. Com. v. Golding, 14 Gray (Mass.) 49.

3. Com. v. Miller, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 61; State v. Whipple, 57 Vt. 637.

A grand jury's dismissal of a charge, followed by a dismissal, under California Penal Code, § 1382, of the action against the defendant, is in the nature of a nonsuit; and another prosecution does not put in second jeopardy. Ex parte Clarke, 54 Cal. 412.

4. U. S. v. Neversen, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 152; State v. Arnold (Mo.), 7 West Rep. 283.

It is no bar to an information for manslaughter that the grand jury has, before its filing, ignored an indictment for murder for the same homicide. State v. Vincent, 36 La. An. 770.

5. State v. Boswell, 104 Ind. 541.

6. State v. Gill, 33 Ark. 129; U. S. v. Phillips (D. C.), 4 Cent. Rep. 620.

An erroneous judgment for the defendant, sustaining a demurrer to an indictment, upon the ground that it contains a misjoinder of offences, does not operate as a bar to a future prosecution, and may be reversed by the court of appeals. Com. v. Anthony, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 399.

If a prisoner demur to an indictment, and the indictment thereupon be quashed, and the prisoner set at liberty, he may be again arrested, and held to answer on a new indictment for the being a bar to a subsequent prosecution, unless the court directs a resubmission of the charge.¹

4. The Plea of Guilty.—The plea of guilty by the defendant and its entry on the record, constitutes a conviction, and is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offence, even though no judgment was pronounced upon it.²

5. The Entry of a "Nolle Prosequi."—Before the jury is empanelled and sworn, the prosecuting officer may enter a nolle prosequi at his pleasure, and it will be no bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same act,³ but if it is entered after the jury is empanelled and sworn, without the consent of the defendant, it is equivalent to an acquittal, and he cannot be again put in jeopardy for the same offence.⁴ Where, however, there is a statute authorizing the entry same offence. Cochrane v. State, 6 Md. 400.

1. A decision on a demurrer only bars a prosecution for the same offence. Code Crim. Proc., § 327; People v. Richards, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 278.

The sustaining of a demurrer to an information, no direction for a new information being given, is a bar to another prosecution; and the case is not altered by the fact that a new information was filed before the judgment on the demurrer. People v. Jordan, 63 Cal. 219.

2. People v. Goldstein, 32 Cal. 432.

3. Doyal v. State, 70 Ga. 134; Reynolds v. State, 3 Kelly (Ga.) 53; Com. v. Wheeler, 2 Mass. 172; People v. Kuhn (Mich.), 11 West 533; s. c., 5 N. W. 88; State v. Andrew, 76 Mo. 101; Lindsay v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 345; Wortham v. Com., 5 Rand. (Va.) 669.

A discontinuance of a prosecution by a prosecuting officer, upon whatever terms it may have been done, leaves the offence in the same position as before the prosecution was instituted. State v. Main, 31 Conn. 572.

Missouri Rev. St., § 1808, provides that if there are at the same time pending against the same defendant two indictments for the same offence or matter, the first indictment shall be deemed to be suspended by the second, "and shall be quashed." Held, that the pendency of the first of two indictments was no bar to a conviction under the second. (Overruling State v. Smith, 71 Mo. 45) State v. Eaton, 75 Mo. 586.

California.—Section 597 of the Criminal Practice act, which empowers courts to set aside indictments on motion of the prosecution, is not limited to cases of defect in the instrument itself, and such a dismissal is no bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offence if it amounts to a felony. People v. March, 6 Cal. 543.

Under the California Code, § 1387, an order of the county court to dismiss a charge does not operate as a bar to another prosecution for the same offence. Ex parte Cahill, 52 Cal. 463.

Where the State's officers stipulate with one who has stolen a horse, that, if he will testify against his confederates, a nol. pros. shall be entered as to him, the State will be bound by the agreement; and a demurrer to his plea setting up the stipulation will be overruled. Hardin v. State, 12 Tex. App. 186.

Defendant was indicted, and an application by the state for a continuance was properly refused, whereupon a nol. pros. was entered, and defendant was at once indicted again in order that he might be held for the next term. Held, that although such practice was reprehensible on the part of the state, defendant could not plead it in bar to a second indictment. Venters v. State, 18 Tex. App. 198.

4. Reynolds v. State, 3 Kelly (Ga.) 53; Mount v. State, 14 Ohio 295; s. c., 45 Am. Dec. 542; Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 155; State v. M'Kee, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) L. 651; s. c., 21 Am. Dec. 499.

The respondent was indicted for larceny, and while being tried, a nol. pros. was entered on that indictment. He was then indicted for burglary in the same transaction, and to this indictment, pleaded his former jeopardy. Held, that the plea was good, and a bar to further prosecution. Jones v. State, 55 Ga. 625; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 510.

In case of an indictment for an assault with intent to murder, the entry, by leave of court and without the deof a nolle prosequi, and the finding of another indictment, such entry will be no bar to a subsequent prosecution.¹ The defendant should demand a verdict where the nolle prosequi is entered upon to prevent a waiver of the jeopardy.²

Some courts have adopted the rule that a nolle prosequi, though against the consent of the defendant, will be no bar to a subsequent indictment if entered by leave of the court.³

6. Discharge of the Jury.—The discharge of the jury in a criminal case upon a valid indictment without the consent of the defendant, not called for by imperious necessity, operates as an acquittal and bars a further trial;⁴ but where the discharge is absodefendant's consent, of a nol. pros., as to so much of the indictment as relates to the murder, will operate as to that part of the charge as an acquittal. Baker v. State, 12 Ohio St. 214.

When upon a valid indictment, the accused is regularly put on trial and the jury have been empanelled and sworn, and the evidence on both sides submitted, the argument of counsel heard and the charge of the court delivered, a nol. pros. is entered by leave of the court and against the will of the accused upon the ground that the proof failed to sustain the indictment, the accused cannot again be held to answer on a new indictment for the same offence. State v. Connor, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 311.

Quare, where the entry of a nol. pros. has the effect of putting an end to the prosecution altogether. Reg. v. Allen, 1 Ellis, B. & S. 850.

Entering a nol. pros. as to a part of the offence, which is not a distinct and independent charge does not avoid or alter the effect of a conviction as a bar. Com. v. Dunster, 145 Mass. 101; Com. v. Cunningham, 104 Mass. 545.

1. Where a statute authorized a nol. pros. to be entered and another indictment to be preferred, where, in the progress of a trial, there shall appear such a variance between the proof adduced and the indictment as will require the acquittal of the accused, unless he will assent to an amendment, it was held to be constitutional and consequently no jeopardy had attached. State v. Kreps, 8 Ala. 951.

2. And it has been said if the defendant does not demand a verdict at the time a nol. pros. is entered upon, he cannot plead that he was once in jeopardy for the same offence, although he objected at the proper time to the entering of a nol. pros. Com. v. Kimball, 73 Mass. (7 Gray) 328. See Kingen v. State, 46 Ind. 132.

3. State v. Champeau, 52 Vt. 313.

Defendant was indicted for theft from H. Franks, and on trial the owner's name was shown to be Frank and nol. pros. was entered against defendant's protest. A plea of once in jeopardy was held bad to a new indictment charging the theft from Franks, the name not being idem sonans. Parchman v. State, 2 Tex. App. 228; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 435.

4. Bell v. State, 44 Ala. 393; Grogan v. State, 44 Ala. 9; State v. Kreps, 8 Ala. 951; Ned v. State, 7 Port. (Ala.) 187; Whitmore v. State, 43 Ark. 271; McKenzie v. State, 26 Ark. 334; Lee v. State, 26 Ark. 260; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 611; People v. Huckeler, 48 Cal. 331; s. c., Am. Cr. Rep. 507; People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467; People v. Cage, 48 Cal. 323; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 436; Reynolds v. State, 3 Kelly (Ga.) 53; Nolan v. State, 55 Ga. 521; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 532; Boswell v. State, 111 Ind. 47; Daggett v. Bonewitz, 107 Ind. 276; Doles v. State, 97 Ind. 555; Maden v. Emmons, 83 Ind. 331; Kingen v. State, 46 Ind. 132; State v. Walker, 26 Ind. 346; Joy v. State, 14 Ind. 139; Morgan v. State, 13 Ind. 215; McCorkle v. State, 14 Ind. 39; Miller v. State, 8 Ind. 325; Wright v. State, 5 Ind. (Porter) 290; Weinzorpflium v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 186; Harker v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 540; State v. Davis, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 345; State v. Redman, 17 Iowa 329; State v. Callendine, 8 Iowa 288; Grable v. State, 2 Green (Iowa) 559; O'Brian v. Com., 9 Bush (Ky.) 333; Com. v. Goodenough, Thatch. Cr. Cas. (Mass.) 132; Com. v. Tuck, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 356; Com. v. Stowell, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 569; Hall v. People, 43 Mich. 417; People v. Jones, 48 Mich. 554; Teat v. State, 53 Miss.

lutely necessary for the purposes of justice no jeopardy attaches.¹

453; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 708; Grant v. People, 4 Park. (N. Y.) Cr. 527; People v. Barrett, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 304; King v. People, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 297; In re Spier, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 491; Hines v. State, 24 Ohio St. 134; Dobbins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 404; Hilands v. Com., 111 Pa. St. 1.; McFadden v. Com., 23 Pa. St. 12; State v. Garrigues, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 241; Brink v. State, 18 Tex. App. 344; State v. I. S. S., 1 Tyler (Vt.) 178; Gruber v. State, 3 W. Va. 699; 1 Bish Cr. L., § 1013; Cooley's Const. Lim. 326; and see State v. Champeau, 52 Vt. 313.

A judgment on the verdict of conviction or acquittal is not necessary, in order that either may constitute a bar to another indictment for the same offence. Mount v. State, 14 Ohio 295.

The consent of a defendant that the jury may separate during the recess of the court, is not a consent that one of them may absent himself and necessitate the discharge of the jury; and such discharge, without his consent, will not deprive him of the defence of former jeopardy against the subsequent prosecution for the same offence. State v. Ward, 48 Ark 36; Hilands v. Com., 111 Pa. St. 1.

Neither the attorney for the State nor the court can arbitrarily take a criminal case from the jury and again hold the person to trial on the charge, although it is newly presented; and where this was done because the name of the government witness had not been endorsed in the indictment, the proceeding was held to operate as an acquittal. State v. Callendine, 8 Clarke (Iowa) 288.

It has been decided in New York that jeopardy does not attach until the verdict is obtained and judgment has passed thereon. But it is held, also, that in such a case the prosecution can not withdraw a juror and thus obtain a new trial; that the objection to such a practice lies back of the constitution and rests upon the principles of the common law, which are essential to the protection of the accused by securing him a speedy and impartial trial and the best means of vindicating his innocence. Klock v. People, 2 Park. (N. Y.) C. R. 676; People v. Goodwin, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 187.

A jury was empanelled and sworn, the indictment was read, and the prisoner pleaded not guilty. Then the State's attorney moved to postpone to a later day of the term, on the ground that his witnesses were not in court. The prisoner objected, but the motion was granted and the jury discharged. Held, that the prisoner was in jeopardy and could not be again put on trial even at the same term. Pizano v. State, 20 Tex. App. 139; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 511.

Where, under an indictment for shooting with intent to kill, it appeared that though the pistol was discharged, the person shot at was not hit. The court, after the evidence was all in and prisoner's counsel was making his argument, discharged the jury without prejudice to the prosecution, but against prisoner's objection. Held, that this was a virtual acquittal, and as conviction could have been had of "shooting at," was a bar to a subsequent indictment for that offence. Mitchell v. State, 42 Ohio St. 383.

1. Nugent v. State, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 72; People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467; Rulo v. State, 19 Ind. 298; Com. v. Bowden, 9 Mass. 494; Com. v. Pun-chase, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 521; Hector v. State, 2 Mo. 166; People v. Goodwin, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 187; State v. Hall, 9 N. J. L. (4 Halst.) 256; State v. M'Kee, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) 651; Mahala v. State, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 532; Fletcher v. State, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 249; U. S. v. Perez, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 579; Rex v. Edwards, 4 Taunt. (Eng.) 309; Reg. v. Bure, 2 M. & R. (Eng.) 472; Hans-com's Case, 2 Hale P. C. (Eng.) 295.

A jury sworn in a criminal case may be discharged by the court under any sudden and uncontrollable emergency, and the discharge is no bar, even in a capital case, to another trial. U. S. v. Shoemaker, 2 M'Lean (U. S.) 114; State v. Coolidge, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 364.

If after the jury are sworn in a criminal case, and depart from the bar, one of the jurors separate from his fellows, whereby the court are compelled to discharge the jury without the consent of the defendant, he may be again put upon his trial upon the same indictment. State v. Hall, 9 N. J. L. (4 Halst.) 256.

An information charged the offence as of a day subsequent to the filing. The mistake was discovered on the trial and the jury discharged on motion of the prosecution. Held, that a plea of

Thus, the sickness of the judge,¹ or of the prisoner,² or of a juror,³ is an emergency which justifies the adjournment of the court or the discharge of the jury; and the prisoner then on trial may be subsequently tried on the same indictment. The ending of the term of court as fixed by law, before the completion of the trial, is not such a jeopardy as will bar the further prosecution of the prisoner,⁴ though if the court has power to extend the term, the discharge is not justified and further prosecution is barred.⁵ Sickness or other incapacity of a witness is not a sufficient reason for discharging the jury,⁶ unless caused by the corrupt procurement of the defendant.⁷ Incompetency⁸ or once in jeopardy could not be based thereon. People v. Larson, 68 Cal. 18.

Upon a showing of reasonable grounds for so doing, the court may discharge the jury, and that, too, against the consent of the accused; but in such event the accused must be present when the order of discharge is made. State v. Wilson, 50 Ind. 487; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 719; McCorkle v. State, 14 Ind. 40; Com. v. Cook, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 577.

1. People v. Hunkeler, 48 Cal. 334; Nugent v. State, Stew. & P. (Ala.) 72.

The sudden calling home of the judge by a telegram on account of the illness of his wife is an emergency which justifies the adjournment of the court and the defendant, pending whose trial such adjournment has taken place, may be tried on the same indictment at a subsequent term. State v. Tatman, 59 Iowa 471.

2. People v. Goodwin, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 187; Sperry v. Com., 9 Leigh (Va.) 623; Elizabeth Meadow's Case, Foster's C. L. 76.

3. Mixon v. State, 55 Ala. 129; People v. Hunkeler, 48 Cal. 331; Doles v. State, 97 Ind. 555; State v. Nelson, 26 Ind. 368; State v. Emery, 59 Vt. 84; U. S. v. Perez, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 579; Whart. Cr. P., § 588; but see Rulo v. State, 19 Ind. 298.

Discharge of a sick juror after counsel had commenced to open the case, but before any evidence offered, and swearing another juror in his place, no objection being made, is no error. Silsby v. Foote, 14 How. (U. S.) 218; Young v. Marine Ins. Co., 1 Cranch (U. S.) 566.

The fact that the court, being authorized by statute, upon sickness of a juror in a criminal cause, to summon another juror and proceed with the trial, refused to do so, but discharged the jury, does not render the discharge operative to bar a second trial. The prisoner has not been put in jeopardy when the jury is discharged. Mixon v. State, 55 Ala. 129.

A discharge of the jury in a capital case, on the ground of the insanity of one of the jurors, without the consent of the prisoner or his counsel, is not a good plea in bar to a further trial of the prisoner, as such discharge is within the discretion of the court. U. S. v. Haskell, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 402.

4. State v. Battle, 7 Ala. 259; Lore v. State, 4 Ala. 173; Powell v. State, 19 Ala. 577; Wright v. State, 5 Ind. 290; Re Scrafford, 21 Kan. 735; State v. Moor, 1 Walk. (Miss.) 134; State v. Tilletson, 7 Jones (N. Car.) L. 114; State v. McLemore, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 680; State v. Brooks, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 70; State v. Mahala, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 532.

5. Com. v. Fitzpatrick, 8 Phil. 613. The jury being discharged before verdict against the will of the defendant, on account of the expiration of the term of court as fixed by law, is unnecessary and amounts to an acquittal. See Wright v. State, 5 Ind. 290; Com. v. Clue, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 498; Miller v. State, 8 Ind. 325; Reese v. State, 8 Ind. 416; Weinzorpflin v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 186.

Where the jury were charged at the trial of a prisoner for murder, and, before they returned their verdict, the term of the court expired, and the jury separated, it was held that the prisoner could not be tried again. In re Spier, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 491; but see Lore v. State, 4 Ala. 173.

6. Rex v. Wade, 1 Wood C. C. (Eng.) 86; Rex v. Oulagen, Jebb., § 270.

7. See State v. Early, 3 Harr. (Del.) 562; State v. Keys, 8 Vt. 57; People v. Cole, 43 N. Y. 508.

8. Stone v. People, 3 Ill. (2 Scam.) 326; Com. v. McCormick, 130 Mass. 61, s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 423; People v. Damon, misconduct¹ of a juror is a sufficient ground for discharging the jury, and no jeopardy will attach; and the rule is the same where the defendant tampers with the jury;² though the opinion that a mere disqualification is not a sufficient reason for a discharge has been extensively adopted.³

The withdrawal of a juror without the consent of the defendant, because of the failure of the evidence to support the prosecution, is unwarranted and the defendant is entitled to an acquittal.⁴

There is a large number of cases holding that the inability of the jury to agree does not present such a case of necessity as would authorize a court to discharge them;⁵ but the prevailing rule 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 351; U. S. v. Morris, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 23.

The court has full power, without a suggestion from either the prosecution or defence, to investigate and discharge a corrupt or incompetent juror at any stage of the trial, in order to protect the administration of justice. U. S. v. Morris, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 23; Grable v. State, 2 Greene (Iowa) 559.

It is no bar to an indictment against several persons jointly, that, at a previous term of court, after the jury was empanelled and the trial begun, the judge, without the consent of the defendants, stopped the trial, and took the case from the jury, because one of the jurors was found to be surety upon a recognizance entered into by one of the defendants before the trial. Com. v. McCormick, 130 Mass. 61; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 423; Henning v. State, 106 Ind. 386.

1. State v. Hall, 9 N. J. L. (4 Halst.) 256; State v. Wiseman, 68 N. Car. 203; State v. Bell, 81 N. Car. 591.

If a juror has fraudulently procured himself to be put on the jury, to acquit the prisoner of murder, the judge may direct the withdrawal of a juror, even if the prisoner was innocent of the fraud, and this constitutes no jeopardy. State v. Washington, 89 N. Car. 535; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 700.

2. State v. Wiseman, 68 N. Car. 203; State v. Bailey, 65 N. Car. 426.

3. Poage v. State, 3 Ohio St. 229; Ward v. State, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 253; Rex v. Wardel, C. & M. (Eng.) 647.

Where a juror, after the case has progressed to the hearing of the evidence, announced that he was a member of the grand jury that found the indictment, and the court, over the objection of the defendant, discharged the jury, it was held that the defendant was entitled to his discharge. It must be observed here that the juror was considered not liable to a challenge upon the part of the State for this cause. O'Brian v. Com., 9 Bush (Ky.) 333; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 715. But such is not the case if the defendant consents to the discharge. Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 155; or does not object. Kingen v. State, 46 Ind. 132.

Where, after a jury has been empanelled and sworn, it appears that a member was disqualified because not a freeholder or householder; but the accused makes no objection, and, notwithstanding, the court discharges the jury, the accused has been in jeopardy. Adams v. State, 99 Ind. 244.

After a criminal trial, and while deliberating upon their verdict, the jury discovered that one of their number was not a resident of the county. Without the knowledge of the court, counsel, or defendant, the jury thereupon dispersed. The court made no effort to reassemble them. Held, that the defendant had thus been placed once in jeopardy, and could not be proceeded against further. Maden v. Emmons, 83 Ind. 331; Klock v. People, 2 Park. (N. Y.) Cr. 676; State v. Garrigues, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 241; Thompson & Merriman on Juries, § 312.

4. State v. Stebbins, 29 Conn. 463; People v. Harding, 53 Mich. 481; s. c., 19 N. W. 155; People v. Barrett, 2 Cal. (N. Y.) 304; State v. Garrigues, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 241; 18 re Spier, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 491; Mount v. State, 14 Ohio 295; U. S. v. Shoemaker, 2 McLean (U. S.) 114; but see Klock v. People, 2 Park. (N. Y.) Cr. 676; State v. Weaver, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 203.

5. People v. Cage, 48 Cal. 324; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 436; Weinzorpfen v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 186; State v. Morrison, 3 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 115; Spier's Case, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 491; State would seem to be that the discharge of a jury without the consent of the defendant, because, after mature deliberation, they are unable to agree on a verdict, is not an acquittal, and does not entitle the defendant to immunity from further prosecution;¹ whether or

v. Garrigues, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 241; Mahala v. State, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 532; State v. Rankin, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 145; Williams v. Com., 2 Gratt. (Va.) 568.

If the court, against defendant's wish, discharges the jury because, after three hours' deliberation, they cannot agree, defendant has been once in jeopardy, and cannot again be tried for the same offence. (Overruling Moseley v. State, 33 Tex. 671; Taylor v. State, 35 Tex. 97.) Powell v. State, 17 Tex. App. 345. Three and one-half hours, Whitten v. State, 61 Miss. 717; eleven hours, State v. Shuchardt, 18 Neb. 454.

In People v. Cage, 48 Cal. 324, an indictment for murder was regularly brought on for trial, a jury empanelled and sworn, evidence introduced, and the case submitted. After the jury had considered their verdict for nearly four days the court ordered the sheriff to enquire of them if they had agreed upon a verdict. They replied that they "had not and could not agree upon a verdict," which reply was reported to the court; whereupon the court adjourned for the term; it was held that the proceedings of the court were irregular, and operated as an acquittal of the defendant, and a bar to a subsequent trial for the same offence.

End of Term.—The discharge of the jury in a capital case on the last day of the term, after they have for five days failed to agree, is not because of an absolute necessity, in the absence of any reason why the term could not be continued, and, if made against the objection of the defendant, is a bar to another trial. Com. v. Fitzpatrick, 121 Pa. St. 109.

A prisoner being on trial for grand larceny, and the cause submitted to the jury, they returned into court, on the last day of the term, and reported that they could not agree, and the court discharged them. Held, that the discharge of the jury was equivalent to a verdict of acquittal. Reese v. State, 8 Ind. 416.

Absolute Necessity.—The court cannot discharge a jury in a capital case because they have not agreed upon a verdict except in a case of absolute necessity. Com. v. Cook, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 577; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 465; Com. v. Clue, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 500.

1. Barrett v. State, 35 Ala. 406; Potter v. State, 42 Ark. 29; Ex parte McLaughlin, 41 Cal. 211; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 272; State v. Updike, 4 Harr. (Del.) 581; Williford v. State, 23 Ga. 1; Lester v. State, 33 Ga. 329; State v. Walker, 26 Ind. 346; State v. Nelson, 26 Ind. 366; Shaffer v. State, 27 Ind. 131; Hoffman v. State, 20 Md. 425; Com. v. Purchase, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 521; People v. Harding, 53 Mich. 481; Price v. State, 36 Miss. 533; People v. Goodwin, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 187; Dobbins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 493; Benedict v. State, 44 Ohio St. 679; McCreary v. Com., 29 Pa. St. 323; State v. M'Kee, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) 655; U. S. v. Perez, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 579.

Where there is no possibility of the agreement of the jury in a criminal case, they may be discharged without the defendant's consent; and a plea of "once in jeopardy" to a subsequent indictment may be overruled. State v. Pool, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 363.

There was no jeopardy, where, in a murder case, the jury having been out ten days, the judge withdrew a juror and ordered a mistrial. State v. Washington, 90 N. Car. 664; State v. Carland, 90 N. Car. 668; and where the jury was discharged after two days' deliberation the plea was held to be bad. Smith v. State, 24 Tex. App. 1; 2 S. W. Rep. 542.

In Com. v. Fells, 9 Leigh (Va.) 613, after nine days' confinement, one of the jurors suffered materially in health, it was held that the jury was properly discharged, and the second trial regular.

There is no former jeopardy when, on a former trial, the jury, without the consent of the defendant, has been discharged, after being out forty-six hours, without coming to an agreement. Brady v. State (Tex.), 1 S. W. Rep. 462.

Where a jury, having been out all night, declared to the court in the morning that they were not likely to agree, and thereupon, in spite of the objection of the prisoner's not they can agree being a question for the sound discretion of the court;¹ but such discharge must be in the presence of the accused,² and the record must show the reason upon which it was based.³

The matter of discharging a jury seems to rest in the sound legal discretion of the court,⁴ subject to review by a higher court and governed by known rules and fixed principles.⁵

counsel, they were discharged and a mistrial ordered to be entered, the prisoner cannot claim an acquittal. Williford v. State, 23 Ga. 1.

Reasonable Time.—An accused has a right to a verdict when once in jeopardy on a valid indictment, Lee v. State, 26 Ark. 260; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 611, and it will operate as a release if the jury be discharged before the expiration of a reasonable time. State v. Leunig, 42 Ind. 541; Dobbins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 493; Ned v. State, 7 Port. (Ala.) 187; Williams v. Com., 2 Gratt. (Va.) 567.

1. Barrett v. State, 35 Ala. 406.

2. Powell v. State, 19 Ala. 577; Ned v. State, 7 Port. (Ala.) 187; Nolan v. State, 55 Ga. 521; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 281; State v. Wilson, 50 Ind. 487; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 529.

3. Benedict v. State, 44 Ohio St. 679; U. S. v. Morris, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 23; Foote v. Silsby, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 445; Affirmed in 14 How. (U. S.) 218.

To justify holding accused to a further trial, after such discharge, the records must show that an obstacle that the law will recognize as a necessity, did in fact exist, that it engaged the attention of the court, and that the order was based thereon, and was the result of consideration and decision; but it need not show all the facts and circumstances which influenced the decision, unless made part thereof by bill of exception. Dobbins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 493.

In regard to the necessity of making this judicial discretion matter of record, JUSTICE WILSHIRE in Lee v. State, 26 Ark. 260; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 611, says that "whenever after a trial has commenced, the judge discovers any imperfection which will render a verdict against the defendant, either void, or voidable, by him, he may stop the trial, and what has been done will be no impediment in the way of any further proceedings. Whenever, also, anything appears showing plainly that a verdict cannot be reached within the time assigned by law for the holding of the court, he may adjudge this fact to exist; and on making the adjudication matter of record, stop the trial with the like result as before. But without the adjudication the stopping of the trial operates to discharge the prisoner.

4. Atkins v. State, 16 Ark. 568; State v. Walker, 26 Ind. 346; Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 496; Price v. State, 36 Miss. 531; People v. Green, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 55; Hurley v. State, 6 Ohio 399; U. S. v. Perez, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 580.

As there was, at the time the fifth amendment to the constitution was adopted, no definite rule of the common law determining when the discharge of the jury in a criminal case was improper, but it was a matter of fluctuating judicial practice, an improper discharge of the jury is not, under the constitution, a bar to further jeopardy. U. S. v. Bigelow, 3 Mackey (D. C.) 393.

As there are circumstances under which it is proper to discharge a jury against defendant's consent, the trial at which a discharge occurred will not be deemed to have placed defendant in jeopardy, unless an abuse of discretion in ordering the discharge clearly appears. Schindler v. State, 17 Tex. App. 408.

A discharge of the jury in a criminal case, in presence of all the officers of the court, except the judge, and of the defendant, but in pursuance of the consent of the court, is not a bar to a new trial. McCorkle v. State, 14 Ind. 39.

A discharge of the jury, in a capital or other case, after a trial has commenced, cannot be pleaded as matter of autrefois acquit, being matter of judicial discretion. U. S. v. Haskell, 4 Wash. C. C. (U. S.) 408; State v. Woodruff, 2 Day (Conn.) 504; People v. Goodwin, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 187; Com. v. Bowden, 9 Mass. 494; U. S. v. Perez, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 579; Com. v. Purchase, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 521; Com. v. Cook, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 577; Com. v. Olds, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 137.

5. Dobbins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 496; M'Kee's Case, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) 651.

7. The Rendition of a Verdict.—A verdict of acquittal or conviction is of itself a bar to a second trial, though there be no judgment upon it,¹ and though the verdict may have been irregular, insufficient or erroneous,² but where it is so defective that no judg-

It is impossible to give what would, in any case, be held to be a correct use of this discretion. It need not be a physical necessity nor an absolute inability to pursue any other course, nor an absolute impossibility to avoid discharging the jury, but merely a need in the higher degree, or highly convenient to the purpose of justice. Reg. v. Newton, 73 Q. B. (Eng.) 734.

1. State v. Benham, 7 Conn. 414; Brennan v. People, 15 Ill. 517; Wakefield v. State, 5 Ind. 195; Teat v. State, 53 Miss. 453; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 708; Hartung v. People, 26 N. Y. 167; s. c., 28 N. Y. 400; Mount v. State, 14 Ohio 295; State v. Norvell, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 24; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 458; but see State v. Herbert, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 87.

The plea of autrefois convict is good although it appear that after verdict at the former trial the indictment was dismissed, and the defendant discharged without day. State v. Elden, 41 Me. 165.

Where the accused, after trial upon the merits, has been acquitted before a justice of the peace, the State cannot, upon appeal to the district court, compel him to stand a second trial. State v. Van Horton, 26 Iowa 402.

Where, on a trial for murder, there was an error in the sentence of death declared against the prisoner, it was held that a wrong judgment having been pronounced, although the trial and conviction were regular, the prisoner could not be subjected to another trial, and would be entitled to his discharge; but that this court had authority, under the New York laws of 1863, ch. 226, upon the ground that the conviction had been legal and regular, and that the error, if any, was in the sentence, to remit the record to the oyer and terminer, with directions to pronounce the judgment prescribed by the act of 1860. Ratzky v. People, 29 N. Y. 124.

Whether "former conviction" can be predicated of a suspended judgment, quære. White v. Com., 79 Va. 611.

2. See Com. v. Loud, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 328.

In a collateral proceeding, as upon a trial for a second offence, a former conviction cannot be questioned for irregularity, as that it was incompetent for the accused to waive a trial by jury in case of felony. Kelley v. People (Ill.), 3 West. 45. And the defendant will be discharged without day, where the original proceedings are reversed for insufficiency of a special verdict. Rhoads v. Com. (Pa.), 4 Cent. 725.

Although the court may have prevented the State from entering a not. pros., or have misdirected the jury, or have admitted illegal or rejected legal evidence, or the verdict be against the evidence; the verdict and judgment of acquittal on an indictment, if fairly obtained, are conclusive, and the defendant cannot be again put in jeopardy for the same offence. State v. Davis, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 345.

Where, on an indictment for murder, a verdict of guilty was received in the absence of the prisoner, and the verdict was, on the defendant's motion, set aside for that irregularity, it was held that he had been once in jeopardy and could not be tried again for the same offence. Nolan v. State, 55 Ga. 521; 21 Am. Rep. 281.

A prisoner, against whom a wrong judgment was pronounced upon a regular trial and conviction, cannot be subjected to another trial. Shepherd v. People, 25 N. Y. 406.

A mistrial and consequent discharge of the jury does not put the accused in legal jeopardy. State v. Blackman, 35 La. An. 483.

When under one indictment for selling liquor within five miles of a church, it was found that the place where the liquor was sold was more than five miles from the church; this does not estop the State from proving, in another indictment, that the same place was less than five miles from the church. State v. Williams, 94 N. Car. 891.

After the swearing of the jury and the opening argument for the government, in a prosecution on a consolidation of fourteen indictments, the judge discharged the jury, and they were then resworn to try one of the indictments. Held, that this discharge of the jury was not equivalent to an acquittal, and was no defence to a second trial. U. S. v. Bigelow, 3 Mackey (D. C.) 393.

ment could be rendered upon it the court may, over the defendant's objection, set it aside and order a new trial.¹

Trial upon the merits is sufficient jeopardy² especially if judgment thereon has been executed and performed,³ but it must appear affirmatively that the former decision was upon the merits.⁴

8. Jeopardy of a Codefendant.—An acquittal or conviction of one of two codefendants jointly indicted is no bar to a prosecution against the other.⁵

Defendant was put on trial for murder. After one of the State's witnesses had been examined and cross-examined, it appeared that the State's witnessess had not been examined before the grand jury; whereupon the jury was discharged and the case continued. Held, that defendant was properly put on trial again at the next term. State v. Parker, 66 Iowa 586.

Where an information fails through a variance, a verdict of acquittal would not benefit the defendant, as he might be again informed against by the attorney for the State. State v. Stebbins, 29 Conn. 463. And where judgment is properly arrested by the circuit court, on a good indictment, the conviction is a bar to a subsequent prosecution, but the supreme court may reverse the judgment of discharge and render judgment on the conviction below. State v. Norvell, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 24.

An indictment for uttering a forged check, alleged that the bank had knowledge of the falsity and forgery, instead of the accused; but, notwithstanding this defect, he was tried, and the jury, without leaving the bar, found him not guilty. Held, that this was a bar to a second trial under a proper indictment; it not appearing that the acquittal resulted from a variance between the indictment and the proof. Croft v. People, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 484.

1. Williams v. State, 45 Ala. 57; State v. Underwood, 2 Ala. 744; Lawrence v. People, 2 Ill. (1 Scam.) 414; Wright v. State, 5 Ind. 527; State v. Redman, 17 Iowa 320; State v. Sutton, 4 Gill (Md.) 494; People v. Olcott, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Cas. 301; Com. v. Hatton, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 623; Com. v. Percavil, 4 Leigh (Va.) 636.

The rejection by the court of an illegal verdict does not operate as an acquittal. An informal verdict may be amended by order of court. Robinson v. State, 23 Tex. App. 315.

When a verdict of guilty is set aside by the court, because not in proper form to sustain a conviction, and a new trial is granted, defendant is not regarded as having been in legal jeopardy, and cannot plead this as a former acquittal; and when this action of the court is had at his instance, it amounts to an express waiver of the right to insist on the constitutional guaranty against being placed a second time in jeopardy for the same offence. Kendall v. State, 65 Ala. 492.

The jury found that H, who was indicted for forging a receipt for the use of Hugh Brison, was "guilty of forging a receipt for the use of Hugh Prison," and the indictment was given up because the verdict could not be supported. This was held not to bar a new indictment, charging H with forging a receipt for the use of Hugh Prison. Pensylvania v. Huffman, Addis. 140.

In Massachusetts it is held that a verdict of guilty, upon which no judgment has been rendered, at the rulings at the trial of which exceptions are pending, is no bar to a complaint for the same offence. Com. v. Fraher, 126 Mass. 265.

2. Burns v. People, 1 Park. (N. Y.) 182; Com. v. Loud, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 328.

3. Com. v. Loud, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 328.

But in Illinois it was held that where a prisoner has been indicted, and found guilty by the verdict of a jury, if the judgment is arrested, even for an insufficient cause, and the defendant discharged, he has not been legally in jeopardy and cannot plead the conviction in bar to a subsequent indictment. Gerard v. People, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 362.

4. Hassell v. Nutt, 14 Tex. 260.

5. People v. Bruzzo, 24 Cal. 41; State v. McClintock, 1 Iowa (Greene) 392.

Defendant and W, partners, were jointly indicted as individuals for keeping and exhibiting a gaming table. Held, on the trial of defendant, that the fact that W had been tried and convicted could not operate as an acquittal of defendant. Goforth v. State, 22 Tex. App. 405.

9. Offences Against Different Jurisdictions.—A person may by a single act violate the laws of two or more jurisdictions, as those of the United States and those of a State. In such case the offender may be punished by either, and a prosecution by the one is no bar in a prosecution by the other.¹ So the general rule is that an acquittal or a conviction and punishment under a city ordinance is no bar to a prosecution for the same offence by the State;² and it has been announced by some of the courts that a city cannot punish an indictable offence;³ though the theory has

On indictment for murder against two, a verdict of acquittal on the evidence being rendered as to one, and the other found guilty of murder in the second degree, which judgment was reversed on error, at the instance of the latter, because the record showed a fatal defect in the formation of the grand jury by which the indictment was found, though no objection was raised to it in the court below on that account, the verdict and judgment operate as a bar to another prosecution of the defendant, who was acquitted, and are available to him under the plea of former acquittal; and as to the other defendant, when again indicted, operate as a bar to a prosecution for murder in the first degree. Berry v. State, 65 Ala. 117.

1. Re Esmond (D. C.), 3 Cent. 523; State v. Rankin, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 145.

One act may be contrary to the law of the United States, and also of the State or of a municipality. In that case each authority may punish for the violation of its law. Hughes v. People, 8 Colo. 536.

One indicted in the United States court for killing an Indian in "Indian country" on the Umatilla reservation in Oregon, for instance, cannot plead a former acquittal in the State court. U. S. v. Barnhart, 22 Fed. Rep. 285; s. c., 10 Sawy. (U. S.) 491.

A conviction and sentence of one, not a member of congress, by the house of representatives, for a breach of privilege, by assault and battery on one of its members for words spoken in debate, are not a bar to a criminal prosecution by indictment for the same assault and battery. U. S. v. Houston, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 261.

2. Mobile v. Allaire, 14 Ala. 400; Hughes v. People, 29 Cal. 257; McRea v. Mayor, 59 Ga. 168; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 390; Wragg v. Penn Township, 94 Ill. 11; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 199; Amboy v. Sleeper, 31 Ill. 499; Waldo v.

Wallace, 12 Ind. 582; Ambrose v. State, 6 Ind. 351; Levy v. State, 6 Ind. 281; State v. Moore, 6 Ind. 436; Preston v. People, 45 Mich. 486; State v. Lee, 29 Minn. 445; s. c., 13 N. W. 913; State v. Oleson, 26 Minn. 507; Greenwood v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 567; Cooley on Const. Lim. 199; Bishop Cr. L., § 1068.

Grant of power to a city to punish for misdemeanors,—as here, keeping a gaming house,—is no surrender of the power of the State to also punish for the same offence. Hankins v. People, 106 Ill. 628.

A conviction under a city ordinance for "disturbing the peace," or for "fighting in the streets," cannot be pleaded in bar to an indictment in the circuit court for the assault and battery committed at the same time. The two offences are not identical. State v. Sly, 4 Oreg. 277; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 51.

It seems that the imposition of a fine by the mayor of a city in the exercise of his police power will not relieve the offender from liability to the State. Shafer v. Munma, 17 Md. 331.

Conviction before the mayor of a town, under an ordinance against gaming, is not a bar to a subsequent indictment under the State law for the act for which he was convicted. Johnson v. State, 59 Miss. 543.

A city ordinance and State law both prohibited the keeping of a bawdy house; the former imposing a fine and the latter either a fine or imprisonment, or both, as a punishment. Held, that as the offences under the ordinance and under the State law were distinguishable, and proceeded upon different grounds, the State having no jurisdiction of offences under the former, and the city none of offences under the latter, a trial and conviction under the ordinance constituted no bar to the prosecution under the State law. Kemper v. Com. (Ky.), 3 S. W. 159.

3. State v. Welch, 36 Conn. 216; Ind.

been adopted to some extent that the municipality is the agent of the State, and the prosecution of an offender under its ordinances is a bar to a prosecution under the laws of the State, because it is virtually the exercise of the power of the State in either case, in the one directly, and in the other by means of its delegated agencies.¹

Mere jeopardy in another State without conviction and punishment is of no avail,² and a prosecution in one county is no bar to an indictment in another county, unless it appears that the offence was committed in the former county.³

VI. WAIVER OF JEOPARDY—1. Consent to Discharge of the Jury.—If the jury is discharged at the request or with the concurrence of the defendant, he has waived any right he might have had to insist, on a second trial, that he had been in former jeopardy;⁴ so if

v. Blythe, 2 Ind. 75; Madison v. Hatcher, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 341; Municipality v. Wilson, 5 La. An. 747; People v. Jackson, 8 Mich. 110; Slaughter v. People, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 324; State v. Thornton, 37 Mo. 360; Jefferson City v. Courtmire, 9 Mo. 683; Commrs. v. Harris, 7 Jones (N. Car.) L. 281; 4 Crim. L. Mag. 496.

1. State v. Cowan, 29 Miss. (8 Jones) 330; Gowan v. State, 29 Mo. 330.

When a properly constituted court acting under the authority of an ordinance of a municipal corporation punishes a person for violation of that ordinance, he cannot be again punished for the same offence under the general laws of the State. State v. Thornton, 37 Mo. 360.

2. Marshall v. State, 6 Neb. 120; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 363.

3. Campbell v. People, 109 Ill. 565; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 621.

4. State v. Slack, 6 Ala. 676; Lee v. State, 26 Ark. 260; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 611; Spencer v. State, 15 Ga. 562; McCorkle v. State, 14 Ind. 39; Com. v. Sholes, 13 Allen (Mass.) 554; Com. v. Stowell, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 572; People v. White (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 34; People v. Gardner, 62 Mich. 307; Klock v. People, 2 Park. (N. Y.) Cr. 676; Hilands v. Com., 111 Pa. St. 1; Com. v. Cook, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 577; State v. McKee, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) 651; Elijah v. State, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 102; Moore v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 493; Williams v. Com., 2 Gratt. (Va.) 567; Kinloch's Case, Foster (Eng.) 16, 22; s. c., 18 How. St. Tr. (Eng.) 395; Rex v. Stokes, 6 Car. & P. (Eng.) 151.

Where, after the evidence is in, the State seeks to introduce additional evidence, and defendant demands a continuance, he cannot object to another trial on the ground that he has been once in jeopardy. State v. Falconer, 70 Iowa 416.

Before going to trial the State asked for a continuance; thereupon the prisoner agreed to go to trial and have the case withdrawn from the jury on a certain contingency. When that arose the prisoner objected to the withdrawal. Held, that he was bound by his agreement and could be convicted on a second trial. Hughes v. State, 35 Ala. 351.

The plea of once in jeopardy was not adopted for the benefit of the defendant; consequently when he has consented to the act, which gives rise to the plea, he cannot take advantage of it. If the jury are sworn, the case is continued or the jury are discharged without rendering a verdict, with his consent, or the judgment is reversed on his application, the plea will not avail him. Peiffer v. Com., 15 Pa. St. 468; Sanders v. State, 85 Ind. 318; People v. Gardner, 62 Mich. 307; 29 N. W. 19; State v. Falconer, 70 Iowa 416; Haskins v. Com. (Ky.). 1 S. W. Rep. 730.

The defendant below was put on trial for a penitentiary offence. After a jury had been empanelled and sworn a juror arose in open court and stated that he had been one of the grand jurors by whom the indictment had been found. Pertinent enquiries had been openly made upon this subject by counsel for the State before the jury was sworn, to which the juror had failed to respond. The defendant's counsel thereupon, in answer to an enquiry by the court, objected to proceeding on the trial with the jury then empanelled, at the same time declining to waive any of the defendant's rights.

he voluntarily absent himself from the court at the time of the return of the verdict;¹ and his consent to the withdrawal of a juror will have the same effect.²

2. Dismissal on Defendant's Motion.—A plea of former jeopardy cannot avail the defendant on the second trial where the verdict on the former trial has been set aside on his own motion,³ and where judgment is arrested on motion of the defendant, a subse-

The jury was thereupon discharged by the court, and another jury was empanelled in the usual mode and the trial proceeded, the defendant objecting thereto. Held, that the discharge of the jury first empanelled was the necessary result of sustaining the objection interposed by the defendant himself, and so did not take place without his consent, but was an act done at his own instance and would not, therefore, operate as an acquittal, nor a bar, to further prosecution. Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 155.

P was put on trial on an indictment for murder, and one witness was examined, when it was discovered that none of the witnesses had been examined before the grand jury, which had returned the indictment on the minutes of the committing magistrate. An application was made by the district attorney to compel P to elect either to allow the cause to be continued or the witnesses to testify, and P moved the court to direct the jury to return a verdict of "not guilty" which being overruled, he elected to continue the case and the jury was discharged. Held, that P had not been put in jeopardy of life and liberty on the first abortive trial and could be tried a second time. State v. Parker, 66 Iowa 586.

1. State v. Battle, 7 Ala. 259; State v. Hughes, 2 Ala. 202; and see Sneed v. State, 5 Ark. 431; State v. Hurlbut, 1 Root (Conn.) 90; Andrews v. State, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 550.

Defendant, while on trial, ran away. Held, that he could not be heard to plead "former jeopardy" in bar of another trial. People v. Higgins, 59 Cal. 357.

Another view which is sometimes taken is that the accused, by voluntarily absenting himself, has waived his right to be present at the receipt of the verdict and cannot insist upon error if the court received it. Price v. State, 36 Miss. 531; Fight v. State, 7 Ohio, pt. 1, p. 180. See Russell v. State, 11 Tex. App. 288.

2. Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 155. But see Rex v. Perkins, Holt (Eng.) 403; Rex v. Kell, 1 Craw. & Dix. C. C. 151.

3. Turner v. State, 40 Ala. 21; Waller v. State, 40 Ala. 325; Sanders v. State, 85 Ind. 318; s. c., 16 Cent. L. J. 476; State v. Redman, 17 Iowa 329; State v. Patterson (Mo.), 3 West. 226; State v. Blaisdell, 59 N. H. 328; People v. Casborus, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 351; State v. Lipsey, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 485; State v. Jeffreys, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 480; Com. v. Clue, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 500; Com. v. Brown, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 207; State v. Sims, 2 Bail. (S. Car.) 29; State v. Greenwood, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 141; Dubose v. State, 13 Tex. App. 418; Ball's Case, 8 Leigh (Va.) 726; Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509; U. S. v. Perez, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 579.

A plea of former acquittal is not sustained by evidence of a record entry showing a verdict of not guilty by consent, but that judgment was to abide the decision of the supreme court in a like case, it not appearing that the supreme court had decided favorably to defendant. State v. Bradley, 45 Ark. 31.

If the jury come to court and render a verdict of guilty, and are discharged, in the absence of the prisoner, who is in the custody of an officer in another room, the prisoner is entitled to a new trial, but he is not entitled to a final discharge. State v. Hayes, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 156; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 630.

An informal and, with greater reason, an illegal verdict may be rejected by the court, and will not operate as an acquittal unless that is plainly intended; and where an informal verdict has been amended, and, therefore, a new trial granted, a plea of acquittal and jeopardy should be stricken out on motion for the State. Robinson v. State, 23 Tex. App. 317.

A former conviction or acquittal will bar a subsequent prosecution. But the conviction or acquittal must be a legal one, upon trial by verdict of a petit quent trial may be had for the same crime.¹ So a prisoner cannot plead former jeopardy in any case if his former conviction was reversed or set aside on a proceeding instituted by himself, even though a part of the punishment may have been inflicted;² as in case of a new trial granted upon his motion,³ or the reversal of jury. The verdict must be a valid one, not subject to be set aside. If the court award a new trial upon quashing the verdict, whether at the instance of the prisoner or on special application, on the application of the prosecution; it is evident, in the eye of the law, the accused has not been in jeopardy. State v. Walters, 16 La. An. 400.

1. Morissette v. State, 77 Ala. 71; People v. Olwell, 28 Cal. 456; People v. Barric, 49 Cal. 342; Gerard v. People, 4 Ill. (3 Scam.) 362; Phillips v. People, 88 Ill. 160; State v. Clark, 69 Iowa 196; People v. Casborus, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 351; State v. Norvell, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 24; Com. v. Hatton, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 623; Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509.

A former trial upon a valid indictment, in which an improper verdict has been rendered, but from which the accused has been released upon a motion for a new trial and one in arrest of judgment, cannot authorize the plea of once in jeopardy, and will not bar a further prosecution on the same indictment. State v. Oliver, 39 La. An. 470.

If a defendant moves in arrest or to vacate a judgment already rendered he will be presumed to waive any objection to being put a second time in jeopardy, and if, after verdict, he obtains an arrest of judgment on a good indictment the court supposing it to be bad, he may be again placed on trial. Joy v. State, 14 Ind. 139.

Defendant was tried for assault with a deadly weapon, and was found guilty of an assault and battery; judgment, upon his motion, was arrested, because only an assault was charged. Held, that he could be tried again for a simple assault. Spipple v. People, 110 Ill. App. 144.

A verdict of guilty upon a former indictment, where there was no judgment upon the verdict, but where the court virtually set the verdict aside by sustaining a motion in arrest of judgment, and also set the indictment aside was not such a former conviction as to bar a prosecution upon a new indictment for the same offence, under § 4364 of the Iowa code. State v. Clark, 69 Iowa 196.

The offence of assault does not include battery, though the latter includes the former. When, therefore defendant, indicted for assault, was convicted of the battery, and obtained a new trial, his conviction, especially as it had been set aside on his own motion, could not be pleaded in bar to a second trial upon the indictment. People v. Helbing, 61 Cal. 620.

2. Jeffries v. State, 40 Ala. 381.

On a trial for murder in the first degree, defendant withdrawing his plea of guilty in the lesser degree, and pleading not guilty of the higher degree, cannot on a trial on the latter plea, plead acceptance of his former plea as an acquittal of the higher degree. People v. Cignarale, 110 N. Y. 23.

3. Kendall v. State, 65 Ala. 492; State v. Slack, 6 Ala. 676; People v. Larson, 68 Cal. 18; People v. Keefer, 65 Cal. 232; Packer v. People (Colo.), 8 Pac. Rep. 564; In re Garvey (Colo.), 3 Pac. Rep. 903; Lane v. People, 10 Ill. (5 Gilm.) 305; Sellers v. People, 6 Ill. (1 Gilm.) 183; Gerard v. People, 4 Ill. (3 Scam.) 362; Joy v. State, 14 Ind. 139; State v. Clark, 69 Iowa 196; State v. Hart, 33 Kan. 218; Haskins v. Com. (Ky.), 1 S. W. Rep. 730; State v. Byrd, 31 La. An. 419; State v. Oliver (La.), 2 So. Rep. 194; People v. White (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 34; State v. Anderson, 89 Mo. 312; State v. Patterson, 88 Mo. 88; Sutcliffe v. State, 18 Ohio 469; Hines v. State, 24 Ohio St. 134; Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 155; Hilands v. Com., 114 Pa. St. 372; State v. Commrs., 3 Hill (S. Car.) 239; Livingston v. Cone, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 593; U. S. v. Harding, 1 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 127.

The constitutional provision that defendant shall not be twice put in jeopardy for the same offence does not operate to prevent a new trial of a charge on which the defendant has once been convicted, after a new trial has been granted on his own motion. Johnson v. State, 29 Ark. 31; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 430.

the judgment of conviction upon his appeal.¹ And this is the rule, even though he does not ask for a new trial, but only for a reversal and discharge from imprisonment.² Neither is the former

One convicted for manslaughter on an indictment for murder, and obtaining a new trial, thereby waives his constitutional right to stand upon his implied acquittal of murder in the first, and may be convicted of murder on the second. Veatch v. State, 60 Ind. 291.

In all cases of prosecutions for matters criminal, in which the accused has been tried and acquitted, and his acquittal has not been procured by his own fraud or evil practice, he shall not again be put in jeopardy by a new trial, granted at the instance of the public prosecutor; though, in all cases of conviction, in such prosecutions, the accused is entitled to a new trial, in the same manner as in civil actions. State v. Brown, 16 Conn. 54. See State v. Anderson, 3 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 751.

No jeopardy attaches until the case is ripe for trial and the trial actually entered upon; and here the case was not ripe for trial, because the plea extorted from the appellant by fear of violence at the hands of a mob, was null, and he was, therefore, not in legal jeopardy. The proceeding adopted by the appellant is, in its general feature, and in its consequences, closely analogous to a motion for a new trial, and as a defendant who takes a new trial granted at his own request, cannot claim that the finding set aside constitutes a prior jeopardy, he cannot do so in a proceeding like this. Sanders v. State, 85 Ind. 318, 332; s. c., 16 Cent. L. J. 476; 44 Am. Rep. 29; 4 Cr. L. Mag. 359.

In Kansas.—After a new trial is granted, the state's attorney, the court consenting, may enter a not. pros. without prejudice to a fresh prosecution. State v. Rust, 31 Kan. 509.

1. Ned v. State, 7 Port. (Ala.) 187; State v. Abram, 4 Ala. 272; Territory v. Dorman, 1 Ariz. 56; People v. Travers (Cal.), 19 P. 268; People v. Olwell, 28 Cal. 456; People v. Hardisson, 61 Cal. 378; In re Garvey (Col.), 3 Pac. Rep. 903; Haskins v. Com. (Ky.), 1 S. W. Rep. 730; State v. Stephens, 13 S. Car. 285; Thompson v. State, 9 App. 649.

A first trial of a criminal case, the judgment in which has been reversed in consequence of an error of the judge in charging the jury, does not bar a second trial on the same indictment. As to second jeopardy, the New Jersey constitution goes no further than to forbid the retrial of a person who has been acquitted. Smith v. State, 41 N. J. L. 598.

The plea of "once in jeopardy," or former "conviction," is not permissible where defendant has been found guilty of murder on a previous trial, but the judgment has been set aside on appeal, the case remanded for further proceedings, and dismissed for a defect in the information. People v. Schmidt, 64 Cal. 260.

A conviction for manslaughter, reversed on appeal, does not sustain pleas of former acquittal and once in jeopardy, on a retrial for murder. People v. Carty (Cal.), 19 P. 490.

Where a judgment of conviction has been reversed on appeal, the case remanded for a new trial, and a not. pros. entered to the second indictment, the defendant may, under 2 Indiana Rev. St. 1876, p. 408, § 141, be tried and convicted upon a third indictment. Patterson v. State, 70 Ind. 341.

Defendant was convicted of a misdemeanor before a justice of the peace. He appealed to the district court. In that court the county attorney filed an information for the same offence, and dismissed the appeal. Held, that defendant could not plead the proceedings in the former case as a bar to the information. State v. Curtis, 29 Kan. 384.

The Record.—Where the record on appeal does not show any action taken on a demurrer to defendant's plea of former jeopardy, and the matter is not mentioned by counsel, defendant will be held to have waived the plea. Johnson v. State (Tex.), 10 S. W. Rep. 235.

2. State v. Abram, 4 Ala. 272; People v. Travers (Cal.), 19 P. 268; People v. Barric, 49 Cal. 342; People v. Olwell, 28 Cal. 456.

Where the defendant appeals from a judgment and procures a reversal, one of the effects of which is the ordering of a new trial, the judgment and verdict in such case must be assumed to be set aside at the instance of the defendant, upon the theory that he who procures the reversal or affirmance of a judgment impliedly assents to all the conviction any bar to a prosecution for a higher degree of the same offence.¹

3. Fraudulent Procurement of Defendant.—A former conviction or acquittal is no defence to a second indictment if the former trial was brought about by the procurement of the defendant,² or if the conviction or acquittal was the result of fraud and collusion on his part.³ But it is said that where the legal penalty, in such consequences legitimately following such reversal or affirmance. Bish. Cr. L., §§ 1004, 10016.

An indictment contained two counts for the same murder; the plea of not guilty was filed and a jury sworn; upon an order of the court the case elected to go upon the first count which was then quashed; by leave of court the second count was not proessed and the defendant discharged on the indictment, but remanded to await the action of the grand jury; a new indictment was found, containing two counts similar to the former ones, and also a third count, charging the murder by a combination of the two means first alleged. Held, that the prisoner had not been in jeopardy under the second count of the indictment, because the allowance of his motion to compel the State to elect amounted to a declaration by him and the court, binding on him, that the two counts set out different offences, and the result of the order was that, by the jury then empanelled, he could be tried on the first only and not on the second; so that he was never in jeopardy as to the second count because not brought to trial on it, nor as to the first because it was bad. Joy v. State, 14 Ind. 139.

1. People v. McCarty (Cal.), 19 P. 490; Veatch v. State, 60 Ind. 291; State v. Miller, 35 Kan. 328.

2. Halloran v. State, 80 Ind. 586; State v. Green, 16 Iowa 239; State v. Little, 1 N. H. 257; Com. v. Alderman, 4 Mass. 477; State v. Yarbrough, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 78; State v. Atkinson, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 677; State v. Lowry, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 34; State v. Clenny, Head (Tenn.) 270; State v. Colvin, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 599; Burdett v. State, 9 Tex. 43; Com. v. Jackson, 2 Va. Cas. 501.

In a prosecution for an aggravated assault, a plea of a former conviction cannot be based on a justice's judgment imposing a nominal fine, and rendered on the submission and demand of the accused, without examination of witnesses. Watson v. State, 5 Tex. App. 271.

3. State v. Reed, 26 Conn. 202; State v. Brown, 16 Conn. 54; Hylliard v. Nickols, 2 Root (Conn.) 176; Pruden v. Northrop, 1 Root (Conn.) 93; Hannaball v. Spalding, 1 Root (Conn.) 86; State v. Jones, 7 Ga. 422; State v. Green, 16 Iowa 239; Com. v. Alderman, 4 Mass. 477; State v. Cole, 48 Mo. 70; State v. Little, 1 N. H. 257; State v. Yarbrough, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 78; State v. Wright, 2 Tread. (S. Car.) 517; State v. Colvin, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 599; State v. Epps, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 552; State v. Atkinson, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 677; State v. Clenny, 1 Head (Tenn.) 270; Com. v. Jackson, 2 Va. Cas. 501; Rex v. Taylor, 5 D. & R. (Eng.) 521; Rex v. Davis, 12 Mod. 9; Rex v. Bear, 2 Salk. 646; 1 Bish. Cr. L., § 1010; Whart. Cr. Pl., § 451.

A plea of former conviction, where it appeared that the defendant had made complaint against himself, and in the absence of the injured party was convicted on his own testimony and suffered a fine imposed by the magistrate, is not sufficient as a defence. State v. Simpson, 28 Minn. 66.

Conviction for a misdemeanor, procured by collusion of defendant with the prosecuting witness, and upon which the full penalty for the offence was not imposed, is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offence. McFarland v. State, 68 Wis. 400.

Where an indictment was brought against a husband for an assault and battery upon his wife, held, that a former conviction for the same offence before a justice of the peace was not a good plea in bar, where said conviction was procured by defendant's father fraudulently and at defendant's request complaining of him, so as to avoid the effect of a complaint which he had reason to believe would be preferred against him by the injured party. Watkins v. State, 68 Ind. 427.

If a witness who has been summoned case, is an exact and certain one, and the accused has borne it in full, it is not fraud, and a subsequent prosecution is barred.¹

VII. THE DEFENCE, HOW MADE.—The general rule is that former conviction or acquittal, to be available as a defence, must be pleaded,² and cannot be considered on a motion to arrest judgment or otherwise;³ but in some of the States the courts will take notice of a former acquittal, although not presented by a former plea.⁴ A former acquittal, if it cannot be pleaded in bar to a subsequent indictment, cannot be taken advantage of as an estoppel.⁵

1. Allegations of the Plea.—Technical accuracy is not required in setting out a former conviction.⁶ It must appear, however, that, in the former case, the court had full legal jurisdiction over the prisoner and the offence at the time of the trial, and that there before the grand jury to testify as to the unlawful sales of liquor, afterwards institutes proceedings before a justice of the peace against one whom he knows to be guilty, and the person thus accused is brought before the justice, pleads guilty, and is fined under the "act for the punishment of small offences," the proceeding is a fraud upon the jurisdiction of the circuit court. And if the accused be afterwards indicted for the same offence by the grand jury before whom the witness had been summoned, and upon the testimony of said witness, the plea of autrefois convict is no bar to the presentment, the proceedings before the justice being in fraud of the law, and in contempt of the court to which the presentment was made. State v. Lowry, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 34.

1. Com. v. Loud, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 328; Raynham v. Rousenville, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 44; State v. Alderman, 4 Mass. 477; State v. Little, 1 N. H. 257; State v. Casey, 1 Busb. (N. Car.) 209; State v. Atkinson, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 677; Hamilton v. Williams, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 15; McFarland v. State, 68 Wis. 400.

2. State v. Barnes, 32 Me. (2 Red.) 530; State v. Morgan, 95 N. Car. 641; Zachary v. State, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 1; Justice v. Com., 81 Va. 209.

Where, on an indictment for murder, the defendant, who on a previous trial had been convicted of murder in the second degree, does not specially plead the former conviction, but merely pleads not guilty, the plea of autrefois acquit as to murder in the first degree will be deemed waived, the record of the former conviction will be excluded, and the same proceedings will be had in organizing the jury as if there had not been a former trial or verdict amounting to an acquittal of murder in the first degree. Jordan v. State, 81 Ala. 20.

3. State v. Barnes, 32 Me. (2 Red.) 530; State v. Morgan, 95 N. Car. 641; Zachary v. State, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 1.

4. Johnson v. State, 29 Ark. 31; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 154; People v. Cignarale, 110 N. Y. 23.

Under the plea of not guilty, the defendant may, it seems, avail himself of the fact that he has been previously put in jeopardy on the same charge. Danneburg v. State, 20 Ind. 181; Veatch v. State, 60 Ind. 291.

In Reg. v. Stanton, 5 Cox C. C. 324, the defendant did not plead his former conviction before two magistrates, the fact, however, appeared on trial, and EARLE, J., said: "In my opinion the conviction (of assault) would have been an estoppel to the indictment for the felonious assault and wounding (with intent to murder), if pleaded, and although it has not been pleaded, I am bound to consider the charge as already adjudicated upon, the prisoner as having undergone the punishment allotted for it," and the prisoner was therefore discharged upon his own recognizance. See for American authorities to the same effect, Wininger v. State, 13 Ind. 540; McGinnis v. State, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 43; State v. Gleason, 56 Iowa 203.

5. State v. Jesse, 3 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 98.

6. State v. Welch, 79 Me. 99.

Where a plea of former acquittal is defective in form, the plea must be aided by the record, and should be sustained if the record of the court in the same case contains everything neces-was due opportunity to enquire into the real merits of the charge.¹

The facts constituting the jeopardy should be alleged.² Thus the former indictment should be set out in full,³ and a lawful conviction or acquittal under it;⁴ together with averments showing with reasonable certainty, the identity of the person,⁵ and that the offence charged in each case was precisely the same, both in law and in fact.⁶

sary to sustain it. Johnson v. State, 29 Ark. 31; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 430.

1. Burk v. State, 81 Ind. 128; State v. Hodgkins, 42 N. H. 474.

When the defendant pleads to an indictment, that he has been tried by a justice of the peace and fined under the Tennessee act of 1848, ch. 55, the plea must state that the justice heard the evidence. State v. Spencer, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 431.

2. Atkins v. State, 16 Ark. 568; Wilson v. State, 16 Ark. 601.

A plea of former conviction, setting out neither the record of the former trial and conviction, the judgment, nor the term of its rendition is insufficient. Blair v. State (Ga.), 7 S. E. Rep. 855.

Such plea, which does not set forth the court, nor the time, nor other circumstances of the trial or acquittal, nor vouch the record, nor show it, when in another court, should be rejected on motion, without plea or demurrer. Wortham v. Com., 5 Rand. (Va.) 669.

3. Henry v. State, 33 Ala. 389; Burk v. State, 81 Ind. 128; Williams v. State, 13 Tex. App. 285.

In a plea of autrefois acquit, it is necessary to set out the indictment; but a variance in the description of the goods stolen in the two indictments is no objection to the plea, when the averment shows that the takings described in the two indictments belonged to the same transaction, and that there was only one larceny. Foster v. State, 39 Ala. 229.

4. Henry v. State, 33 Ala. 389; Burk v. State, 81 Ind. 128; Williams v. State, 13 Tex. App. 285.

A plea of autrefois convict which does not aver that the prior conviction was lawful is insufficient. Stage v. Salge, 2 Nev. 321.

The plea must set forth the cause of the discharge procured by consent of the respondent, in order that the court may be advised whether it was by his consent or not. The discharge of the jury by the consent of the accused is not an acquittal. People v. White (Mich.), 13 West. Rep. 762; 37 N. W. Rep. 34.

Indictment for Assault and Battery.

—Plea of a former conviction before a justice of the peace. Demurrer that the plea does not aver that the proceeding before the justice was not had by the procurement of the defendant. Held, that the plea is good, and that if the State intend to rely on a case of fraud in the former proceeding to avoid the force of the plea, it must be by replication, not by demurrer. State v. Clenny, 1 Head (Tenn.) 271.

To an indictment for larceny, the defendant filed a plea in bar, averring that he had been arraigned on a complaint before a municipal court, "and said complaint was dismissed; and he was lawfully discharged and acquitted on said complaint of the same offence of which he is now charged in said indictment." Held, that a demurrer to the plea was properly sustained. Com. v. Bressant, 126 Mass. 246.

Result of Former Trial.—A plea of former jeopardy must show the result of the former trial. Hensley v. State, 107 Ind. 587.

A plea to an indictment of a former conviction and sentence before a justice of the peace should set forth the amount of the fine imposed. State v. Atkinson, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 677.

5. Baysinger v. State, 77 Ala. 60; Henry v. State, 33 Ala. 389; Williams v. State, 13 Tex. App. 285.

6. Henry v. State, 33 Ala. 389; Baysinger v. State, 77 Ala. 60; Hensley v. State (Ind.), 5 West. Rep. 827; Burk v. State, 81 Ind. 128; McQuoid v. People, 8 Ill. (3 Gilm.) 76; People v. Saunders, 4 Park. (N. Y.) C. R. 106; State v. Stewart, 11 Oreg. 52; Williams v. State, 13 Tex. App. 285.

A plea of prior conviction of an offence, a part of which is charged in the present indictment, is sufficient on demurrer. State v. Locklin, 59 Vt. 654.

A plea of former conviction to an indictment for gaming which does not aver the identity of the offence charged in the indictment with that for which

A plea of former jeopardy, which is bad upon its face, is properly stricken out on motion.¹

2. The Replication.—The proper mode of replying to a plea of former jeopardy is to traverse the alleged identity,² or other material allegations of the plea;³ and when a demurrer to the plea is overruled, the defendant is not entitled to be discharged, but the prosecution may rejoin.⁴

It is held in Kentucky that a plea of former jeopardy need not be traversed by the commonwealth.⁵

3. Evidence in Support of the Plea.—Whether the accused has been previously tried for the same offence is a question to be determined partly by the record of the previous trial,⁶ and partly the former conviction was had is fatally defective. Pope v. State, 63 Miss. 53; Brothers v. State, 22 Tex. App. 447.

On an indictment for involuntary manslaughter, a plea of a discharge or former acquittal under an indictment for murder is demurrable. Hilands v. Com. (Pa.), 5 Cent. Rep. 264.

To an indictment for rape, the prisoner pleaded that he had been convicted before W. B., a justice of the peace, on the oath of the prosecutrix, E. R. J., of an assault and battery upon her, and fined twenty dollars, which fine was paid by him, and that the assault and battery of which he was so convicted, was the same assaulting, etc., charged in the indictment for rape. On demurrer to such plea, it was adjudged bad, on the ground that the facts set forth in it constituted no defence to the indictment for rape. People v. Saunders, 4 Park. (N. Y.) C.R. 196.

In a complaint for search and seizure, an averment of prior conviction that "defendant has been before convicted of unlawfully keeping and depositing in this State intoxicating liquors, with intent that the same should be sold in this State in violation of law," and stating the time, place, and court in which conviction was had, held sufficient. State v. Longley, 79 Me. 52.

1. Shubert v. State, 21 Tex. App. 551; Wortham v. Com., 5 Rand. (Va.) 669.

2. Duncan v. Com., 6 Dana (Ky.) 295.

3. Fraud.—A plea of autrefois convict being replied to specially, and the fraudulent conviction being well set forth in the replication, such replication should be adjudged good, on demurrer. Com. v. Jackson, 2 Va. Cas. 501.

A replication, to a plea of former conviction before a justice of the peace, that the conviction was had by collusion of the accused with the prosecutor; and that the justice did not hear the evidence, is good. State v. Colvin, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 599.

Arrest of Judgment.—A replication of an arrest of judgment is bad; it should show that the indictment was bad, or that a conviction could not have been had under it for the offence charged in the second indictment. Henry v. State, 33 Ala. 389.

No Jurisdiction.—To an indictment for larceny in a dwelling house, the defendant pleaded a former conviction of pilfering, on a complaint before a police court, averring that the articles and the stealing mentioned in the indictment were the same mentioned in said complaint, and that the police court had jurisdiction of the offence. The replication averred that the stealing charged in the said complaint was a larceny in a dwelling house, which was a high and aggravated crime, and that the police court had not jurisdiction thereof. The rejoinder traversed the several averments in the replication. It was held, on special demurrer, that the rejoinder was good, being neither a departure, nor double; and that though the plea was defective in form, for not directly traversing the charge of larceny in a dwelling house, yet that the defect was cured by the pleading over. Com. v. Curtis, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 134.

4. State v. Nelson, 7 Ala. 610.

5. Vowells v. Com., 83 Ky. 193.

6. Bailey v. State, 26 Ga. 579; Campbell v. State, 109 Ill. 565; Walter v. State, 105 Ind. 589; Marshall v. State, 8 Ind. 498; Grisham v. State, 19 Tex. App. 504.

The omission of the warrant from the transcript of a judgment of conviction for assault and battery is immaterial, in by parol evidence in connection with it for the purpose of identification.¹

The burden of maintaining the defence of former jeopardy is upon the person pleading it;² the record of a conviction of one of evidence to show a former conviction. Jenkins v. State, 78 Ind. 133.

If a plea of former jeopardy be tendered by the prisoner, and the attorney for the commonwealth demur to it, this is an admission that the record of acquittal or conviction was produced as it ought to have been. Com. v. Myers, 1 Va. Cas. 188.

It is not essential to the sufficiency of a plea of former jeopardy that a record of the proceedings on the former trial shall be perpetuated by bill of exceptions. Pizano v. State, 20 Tex. App. 139.

An indictment and docket entries are sufficient evidence of a prior conviction, there being no other record and no question of identity. State v. O'Connell (Me.), 6 N. Eng. Rep. 558; 14 Atl. Rep. 291.

On an indictment for assault and battery, it is no objection to the admission in evidence of a justice's record, in order to prove a former conviction, that it does not find that a person present at the commission of the offence was examined as a witness. Goudy v. State, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 548.

A party being indicted for a misdemeanor pleaded a former acquittal, but his counsel could not find the record, nor could the solicitor general find the former indictment. The court ordered the trial to proceed and the prisoner was found guilty. Afterwards the former indictment and record of acquittal were found, the two indictments being identical with the exception that in the former the offence was charged on the first of June instead of May, and the words "a wagoner" were added to the description of a negro. Held, that there could be no doubt of the identity of the offence, and a new trial must be granted notwithstanding the laches of counsel. Dacy v. State, 17 Ga. 439.

1. Emerson v. State, 43 Ark. 372; Swalley v. People, 116 Ill. 247; s. c., 2 West. 39; Walter v. State, 105 Ind. 589; Marshall v. State, 8 Ind. 498; Dunn v. State, 70 Ind. 47; Com. v. Dillane, 11 Gray (Mass.) 67; Gresham v. State, 19 Tex. App. 504; 1 Bish. Cr. L., § 1050; Whart. Cr. Pr., § 481.

Parol Evidence.—The facts relative to the evidence given on the trial before a justice may, in such case, be proved by parol. Goudy v. State, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 548.

Where a person is convicted before a justice and appeals to the district court, and pleads a former conviction, he may, by the testimony of the justice, show the identity of the offences. State v. Maxwell, 51 Iowa 314.

Where a party indicted for an affray pleads that he has been convicted of the same offence upon an indictment, parol proof is admissible to show that the records cannot of themselves sufficiently show, that the two offences were, or were not, identical. Duncan v. Com., 6 Dana (Ky.) 295.

To sustain a plea of autrefois acquit, it is not sufficient merely to put in the record of the first indictment and acquittal. Some evidence must be given to show that the offences charged in the former and present indictments are the same, and this may be done by showing, by some person present at the former trial, what was the offence actually investigated there; and if that is consistent with the charge in the second indictment, it will be a presumptive case, which must be met by the prosecution by proof that the offence charged in the second indictment was not the same as that charged in the first. Regina v. Bird, 2 Eng. Law and Eq. 439.

2. Emerson v. State, 43 Ark. 372; Vowells v. Com., 83 Ky. 193.

To sustain a plea of former conviction, the defendant must not only produce the record of conviction, but show that he has been tried for the same offence for which he is being prosecuted. State v. Blahut, 48 Ark. 34.

Burden of Proof as to Identity of Offences.—In a plea of former conviction, the burden of proof is on the defendant to show the identity of the offences. Jenkins v. State, 78 Ind. 133.

To sustain a plea of former conviction, the burden of proof is devolved upon the defendant to show that the offence charged is the same of which he was formerly convicted; it will not be sufficient to show that the testimony adduced was the same as that introduced on the former trial, where such the same name raises a presumption of identity,¹ and where the offence proved on the former trial corresponds with that alleged in the complaint, the presumption is that they are the same.²

While the record of the former trial is necessary, if it is not accompanied by other evidence, it will be insufficient to sustain the plea,³ it being equally necessary to produce proof that the former prosecution was for the same identical offence;⁴ and it must not only be shown that jeopardy had once attached, but also that it testimony shows several distinct and separate offences. State v. Small, 31 Mo. 197.

In pleading autrefois acquit or convict, the prisoner must be prepared to prove on the spot the truth of his plea by the record, which he must have in poigne, and vouch in support of his plea; and if this proof be not instantly given, the court will overrule the plea; although, for good cause shown, it will give time to plead until the record can be procured. Com. v. Myers, 1 Va. Cas. 188.

The prisoner pleading a former conviction must show the record of the former proceedings, and, especially where the offence is in its nature capable of repetition; there is no presumption that the two indictments, though similar, charge the same offence, as the selling liquors to A B. He must also show by extrinsic evidence that the offence of which he was convicted is the one now charged; if that be proved, then, if upon any state of the evidence he could have been convicted of that offence under the first indictment, the second cannot be maintained. Rocco v. State, 37 Miss. 357.

1. State v. Kelsoe, 11 Mo. App. 91; s. c., 76 Mo. 505.

2. Com. v. Dillane, 11 Gray (Mass.) 67.

3. Boyer v. State, 16 Ind. 451.

Evidence of an order setting aside an indictment and submitting the case to another grand jury. Held, not to sustain a plea of former acquittal. People v. Varnum, 53 Cal. 630.

Where a defendant, indicted in the supreme court, pleads a former conviction in the municipal court of Boston, with a profert of the record, and the prosecuting officer suggests a diminution of the record, and moves for a certiorari to the judge below, commanding him to certify the whole record, the supreme court will grant the motion. Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 496.

The record must show that the defendant pleaded, and in felony cases the pleading cannot be waived. People v. Heller, 2 Utah 133.

In Tennessee a plea of former conviction can only be sustained by proof of a conviction of record. Jacobs v. State, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 196.

In England there can be no plea of autrefois acquit, where there is no judgment on the record, in the former trial. Regina v. Reid, 1 Eng. Law & Eq. Rep. 595.

4. A judgment of conviction of an offence on a specified day, rendered upon a plea of guilty, will not sustain a plea of former conviction in bar of another indictment for a like offence at a different time, without proof that both indictments were for the same offence. State v. Blahut, 48 Ark. 34.

In a plea of autrefois convict to a prosecution for selling liquor without a license, in Vermont, the respondent must show that the conviction was for the same act of selling now complained of. It is not sufficient for him to show that he had been indicted and convicted since the date of the offence now proved against him. State v. Ainsworth, 11 Vt. 91.

If the respondent in the prosecution for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor plead guilty to a certain number of offences, without specifying the times at which such offences were committed, the record becomes conclusive, under the act of 1855 (Acts of 1855, No. 3, p. 8; Gen. Stat. Vermont, ch. 94, §§ 37, 38), that such offences were committed on the day set forth in the complaint; and in another prosecution for offences committed previously to the day alleged in the complaint first tried, the respondent cannot prove by parol that any of such offences are the same ones to which he pleaded guilty in the former prosecution. State v. Haynes, 35 Vt. (6 Shaw) 565.

A plea of autrefois acquit to an indictment for maiming and disabling A, by fracturing his skull, is not supported had not been discharged by operation of law or waived by some act of the defendant.¹

4. The Trial of the Issue.—The issue joined upon a plea of former jeopardy must be tried by a jury; the consent of the defendant cannot confer jurisdiction upon the court to try it;² if the plea is sufficient to admit evidence, the court is bound to submit the issue to the jury.³

But the court may pass upon the question of former jeopardy when there is no question of identity;⁴ and in a proper case it is no invasion of the province of the jury for the court to instruct them that there is no evidence to sustain a plea of former jeopardy.⁵

5. The Determination of the Issue.—The issue raised by the plea of former jeopardy must be determined before any examination can be had on the general issue,⁶ and by a record of acquittal on a charge of feloniously, by lying in wait, disabling the head and right arm of A; the record not showing a good charge of mayhem. Com. v. Somerville, 1 Va. Cas. 164.

1. Hensley v. State, 107 Ind. 587.

2. Buhler v. State, 64 Ga. 504; Grant v. People, 4 Park. (N. Y.) C. R. 527.

The Verdict.—If, to the second indictment, the defendant plead that he had been indicted and acquitted of the shooting of S. W., and that the shooting of which he is now indicted is the same of which he had been acquitted, and no other, and the jury "find that he hath not been before acquitted of the same offence," this verdict is sufficiently responsive to the issue on that plea, and therefore good. Vaughan v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 273.

Where, upon a plea of former acquittal, a jury was empanelled, and evidence put in by the prosecution. Held, that defendant was entitled to a verdict one way or the other, and if, in the absence of overruling necessity, the jury was discharged without having rendered a verdict, defendant was entitled to a final discharge. People v. Jones, 48 Mich. 554.

3. Grisham v. State, 19 Tex. App. 504.

The court erred in striking out a plea of former acquittal, setting up facts which, if true, would have constituted a bar to the prosecution. The issue should, under proper instructions, have been presented to the jury. Troy v. State, 10 Tex. App. 319.

4. State v. Haynes, 36 Vt. 667.

Wherever the offences charged in the first and second indictments are capable of being legally identified as the same offence, by averment, it is a question of fact for the jury to determine, whether the averments are supported, and the offences are the same. In such cases, the replication ought to conclude to the country. But where the plea of autrefois acquit, upon its face, shows that the offences are legally distinct, and incapable of identification by averments, the replication of nul tiel record may conclude with a verification, and the court may decide the issue. Hite v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 357.

5. State v. Pritchard, 16 Nev. 101.

The court cannot instruct the jury to find the prisoner guilty where the plea of former conviction is not conclusively disproved. Nonemaker v. State, 34 Ala. 211.

It is the duty of the court to declare the legal effect of a record which is offered to sustain the plea of autrefois acquit or discontinuance, and the record itself cannot be gainsaid by parol evidence; therefore the court may charge the jury that the pleas are not sustained by the proof, when that is the fact. Martha v. State, 26 Ala. 72.

6. DeArman v. State, 77 Ala. 10; Sipple v. People, 10 Ill. App. 144.

If the defendant in an indictment pleads a former conviction, and also that he is not guilty, he cannot be put on trial, against his objection, upon the last plea, until the first has been decided against him; and, if he is put to trial upon both pleas at once and is found guilty, under a ruling of the judge, that the evidence produced by him does not sustain the plea of former conviction, he will be entitled to a new trial, although upon overruling the plea judgment should be respondeat ouster.¹

JETSAM—(See JETTISON ; WRECK).—Goods cast on the sea to lighten the ship, and which sink and remain under water.²

JETTISON—(See GENERAL AVERAGE ; SHIPPING).

- | | |
|------------------------------------|--|
| I. Definition, 970. | V. Consultation, 976. |
| II. Kinds of Jettison, 970. | VI. Order, 976. |
| III. When Justifiable, 972. | VII. Ownership of Property Jettisoned, 976. |
| a. Peril , 973. | VIII. Jettison as a Basis of General Average, 976. |
| b. Common Danger , 975. | IX. Jettison of Deck Cargo, 976. |
| c. Life , 975. | |
| d. Vice Propre , etc., 975. | |
| IV. Who May Jettison, 975. | |

I. Definition.—Jettison is "the throwing overboard of a part of the cargo, or any article on board of a ship, or a cutting and casting away of masts, spars, rigging, sails, or other furniture for the purpose of lightening or relieving the ship in case of necessity or emergency."³

"Jettison, in its largest sense, signifies any throwing overboard; but in its ordinary sense, it means a throwing overboard for the preservation of the ship and cargo."⁴

II. Kinds of Jettison.—The ordinary case is of a jettison of the evidence did not sustain his plea of former conviction. Com. v. Merrill, 8 Allen (Mass.) 545.

In Massachusetts, on a plea of autrefois acquit or convict, it is not necessary to plead over to the offence, since, if the plea be found against the defendant, he will be put to plead again to the indictment. Com. v. Goddard, 13 Mass. 455.

And in Dakota, after the issue has been found against one who has entered a plea of former conviction or acquittal alone, he will not be permitted to plead "not guilty;" he must unite the two, if he does not wish to stand on the former. People v. Briggs, 1 Dak. Ter. 289.

1. People v. Saunders, 4 Park. (N.Y.) C. R. 106.

2. 1 Bl. Com. 292; Legge v. Boyd, 1 C. B. 93.

3. Gourlie, Gen. Ave. 74; Phillips on Ins. (4th ed.), § 1278.

The word is variously defined: "The casting out of a vessel from necessity a part of the lading." Bouvier, Law Dict. (15th ed.)

"The voluntary throwing overboard of goods, in a case of extreme peril, to lighten and save the ship." Burrill, Law Dict.

"The throwing overboard of goods from necessity to lighten the vessel in a storm or to prevent capture, or for any other sufficient cause." Rapalje & Lawrence, Law Dict.

See also Abbott, Law Dict.; Mozeley & Whitely, Law Dict.; Lawson's Concordance; Butler v. Wildman, 3 B. & Ald. 398 (1820), at 402; Lawrence v. Aberdeen, 5 B. & Ald., at 115 (1821); The Enrique, 7 Fed. Rep. 490, at 495 (1881).

The word is derived, through the French "jet," from the Latin "jactus," which means a voluntary casting away.

4. Per ABBOTT, C. J., in Butler v. Wildman, 3 B. & Ald. 398 (1820), at 402. See also Winfield, Adjudged Words and Phrases.

In that case it was decided that casting overboard a bag of specie to prevent its capture by an enemy was a jettison within the meaning of a policy insuring against loss by jettison, although not such a jettison as would entitle the owner to a general average contribution.

The significance of the word is well stated by BAYLEY, J., at 403: "Jettison, in its largest sense, means any throwing overboard . . . But its true meaning, in a policy of insurance, seems to me to be any casting overboard ex justa causa." Hallett v. Wigram, 9 C. B. 580 (1850); 19 L. J., C. P., at 288.

cargo;¹ but casting overboard ship stores,² cutting away masts or tackle,³ abandoning a boat,⁴ cutting a cable,⁵ or sacrificing an anchor,⁶ have all been held jettison. So any removing of cargo from the vessel and exposing it to a different peril for the sake of the vessel and cargo is an act of jettison;⁷ and the voluntary injury or destruction of the vessel may amount to a jettison.⁸

1. Lex Rhodia, Paulus Sententiæ, lib. 2. The cases of jettison of cargo are, of course, very numerous. The following, not cited elsewhere in this article, are instances: Fletcher v. Alexander, L. R., 3 C. P. 375 (1868); Williams v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 510 (1838); The Ship Nathaniel Hooper, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 543 (1839); Griswold v. Union Mutual Ins. Co., 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 231 (1854); Whitteridge v. Norris, 6 Mass. 125 (1809); Tudor v. Macomber, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 34 (1833); Le Roy v. Gouverneur, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 226 (1800); Hotchkiss v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Robt. (N. Y.) 489 (1863); Gazzam v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 6 Ohio 71 (1833).

2. Price v. Noble, 4 Taunt. 123 (1811); Lewis v. Williams, 1 Hall (N. Y.) 430 (1829); Lowndes Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 92.

3. Birkley v. Presgrove, 1 East 220 (1801); Price v. Noble, 4 Taunt. 123 (1811); Shepherd v. Kattgen, 2 C. P. Div. 578 (1877); Potter v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., 4 Mason (U. S.) 208 (1826); Rogers v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 604 (1841); Patten v. Darling, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 254 (1859); The Margarethe Blanca, 12 Fed. Rep. 728 (1882); The Mary Gibbs, 22 Fed. Rep. 463 (1884); Nickerson v. Tyson, 8 Mass. 467 (1812); Maggrath v. Church, 1 Cai. Cas. in error (N. Y.) 196 (1803); Saltus v. Ocean Ins. Co., 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 138 (1817).

4. Blackett v. Royal Exchange Ass. Co., 2 Co. & J. 244 (1832); Lenox v. United Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 178 (1802); 2 Arnould, Mar. Ins. (5th ed.) 833.

5. Birkley v. Presgrave, 1 East 220 (1801); Maggrath v. Church, 1 Cai. Cas. in error (N. Y.) 196 (1803); Bradhurst v. Columbian Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 9 (1812); Walker v. United States Ins. Co., 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 61 (1824); Lowndes Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 92.

6. Walker v. U. S. Ins. Co., 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 61 (1824).

7. Gourlie, Gen. Av. 75; 1 Parsons, Sh. & Adm. 348.

The intent to destroy the goods is not essential to a jettison. The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 203 (1869), at 232.

If the goods removed are replaced in the ship without damage, obviously no question for a court of law is likely to arise; but if the goods are damaged, the case is otherwise. It has often been decided that a right to a general average contribution exists in such a case, and if this is so, the act must be lawful. That it is essentially a jettison appears from the following cases: "If the object of the removal has been the lightening of the ship for the common safety, and the object of effecting the removal in such a fashion as to avoid jettison has been to do that which must be got overboard something less wasteful than actual jettison, there seems to be no reason whatever for drawing a distinction between such a case, and that of actual jettison, so far as liability to general average is concerned." Per WILLS, J., in Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. v. English Bank of Rio de Janeiro, 19 Q. B. Div. 362, at 372 (1887); Moran v. Jones, 7 El. & Bl. 523 (1857); The Joseph Farwell, 31 Fed. Rep. 844 (1887); Hennen v. Monro, 16 Mart. (La.) 449 (1826); Dilworth v. McKelvy, 30 Mo. 149 (1860); Lewis v. Williams, 1 Hall (N. Y.) 430 (1829); cf. Nelson v. Belmont, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 316 (1856); citing 1 Mageus 160.

8. It is so referred to by BLATCHFORD, J., in Rathbone v. Fowler, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 294 (1869), where a vessel in danger of foundering was run aground in shallow water to save the cargo and ship. "The injury to the ship by her lying on the uneven bottom of the flats where she was stranded, was a voluntary jactus of the ship." No case denies the right of the master so to deal with his vessel. The controversy is in regard to whether the cargo saved must contribute in general average for the loss on the vessel.

Contribution has been allowed in the following cases of voluntary stranding or scuttling: Caze v. Reilly, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 298 (1814); Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 331 (1839); Mutual Safety Ins. Co. v. Cargo of

So, also, a destruction of cargo or supplies for the preservation of the rest; as, for instance, burning spare masts and spars to provide fuel for an engine to be used in pumping a leaking vessel.¹

III. When Justifiable.²—The right to jettison exists at common law,³ and no action can be maintained for casting articles

Brig George, Alc. Adm. 89 (1845); Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. (U. S.) 270 (1850); Rathbone v. Fowler, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 294 (1869); The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 203 (1869); Fitzpatrick v. 800 Bales of Cotton, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 42 (1868); s. c., nom. 800 Bales of Cotton, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 221 (1871); O'Connor v. Schooner Ocean Star, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 248 (1873); Northwestern Trans. Co. v. Continental Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 171 (1885); Merithew v. Sampson, 4 Allen (Mass.) 192 (1862); Gray v. Waln, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 229 (1816); Sims v. Gurney, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 513 (1812); cf. Delons v. Cargo of the Gallatin, 1 Woods (U. S.) 642.

It was refused on grounds not affecting the statement in the text in Steinhoff v. Royal Canadian Ins. Co., 42 Q. B. (U. C.) 307 (1877); Crockett v. Dodge, 12 Me. 190 (1835); Bradhurst v. Columbian Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 9 (1812); Walker v. United States Ins. Co., 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 61 (1824).

English Law.—The law in England is doubtful, as no case has ever been decided upon it, but the practice is opposed to granting a general average in such a case. See Lowndes, Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 120 et seq., which cites the earlier writers. There can be little doubt that the act does not subject the ship owner to liability.

1. This was the final decision in Harrison v. Bank of Australasia, L. R., 7 Ex. 39 (1872), where spare spars were used to mix with coal and keep a donkey engine running. The evidence was that there was danger of foundering unless the pumps were kept going. KELLY, C. B., and BRAMWELL, B., were of opinion that the loss must be made good by a general average contribution, while MARTIN and CLEASBY, B. B., held that the loss should fall on the ship owners.

A similar decision was rendered by LUSH, J., in Robinson v. Price, L. R., 2 Q. B. 91 (1876).

Clearly in both cases the act of destroying part for the safety of the whole was essentially jettison. It would seem immaterial whether goods are thrown overboard, or into the furnace of an engine. Compare Sproat v. Donnell, 26 Me. 185 (1846); Lowndes, Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 79.

2. A distinction between the right to make a jettison and the right to claim a general average contribution for the loss occasioned by it must be kept constantly in mind. The two rights are not co-extensive. A jettison is justifiable in many cases where no right to contribution exists. Accordingly the right to a general average contribution furnishes only a partial test of the propriety of the jettison. The true test is the liability of the person responsible for the jettison in an action of tort brought by the owner of the thing sacrificed for its full value.

The only question not amenable to this test is that of the liability for the jettison of a deck load where no usage to carry such load exists and the shipper has not assented to it. The shipowner is held liable in such a case without regard to the propriety of his action in making the jettison, on the ground of negligence in stowing the goods. It has been suggested, though no case has yet so decided, that under circumstances which justify a jettison of cargo laden under the deck as well, the ship owner may not be liable for jettison of cargo improperly stowed on deck. Royal Exchange Shipping Co. v. Dixon, 12 Ap. Cas. 11 (1886); 3 Asp. Mar. Law Cas. 92; The Wellington, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 279 (1859); Pateron v. Black, 5 U. C. Rep. (Can.) 481 (1848); Carver, Carriage of Goods by Sea, § 15 and notes.

3. This appears clearly from Mouse's Case, 12 Rep. 63 (1609), which was an action of trespass brought by Mouse, a passenger on a ferry boat at Gravesend, against another passenger, for the value of a casket and £113 thrown overboard by the latter in a sudden tempest which arose while being ferried across. "It was resolved, per totam curiam, that in case of necessity, for the saving of the lives of the passengers, it was lawful to away in order to save the lives of crew or passengers,¹ or even of those not at the time passengers;² to save the ship and remaining cargo;³ or to prevent the article from falling into an enemy's hands.⁴

a. Peril.—There must, however, be an imminent danger at the time,⁵ which does not result from any preceding negligence or the defendant, being "a passenger, to cast the casket of the plaintiff out of the barge, with the other things in it; for quod quis ob tutelam corporis sui fecerit, jure id fecisse videtur." It was proved that it was necessary to throw out the cargo.

The same case is referred to in Bird v. Astock, 2 Buls. 280; in Kenrig v. Eggleston, Aleyn 93, and as the Gravesend Barge Case in 1 Roll. Rep. 79; Lowndes, Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 47; Story, Bailments (9th ed.), § 531; Angell, Carriers (5th ed.), § 215. Rossiter v. Chester 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 154 (1843); Whitteridge v. Norris, 6 Mass. 125 (1809); Price v. Hartshorn, 44 N. Y. 94 (1870).

1. Mouse's Case, 12 Rep. 63 (1609); Whitteridge v. Norris, 6 Mass. 125 (1809).

2. Dabney v. New England Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 300 (1867).

In that case a shipmaster, in order to obtain room to accommodate a large number of people rescued by him from a sinking vessel, jettisoned a large part of his cargo. The court held the act justifiable, but a majority decided that no claim for a general average contribution against the insurers of the cargo existed.

3. There can be no necessity of a special citation of cases to this point, as it is universally recognized. Lowndes, Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 44 et seq. The law is well stated by MARSHALL, C. J., in Bentley v. Bustard, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 643 (1855), at p. 680: "Surely the master would not be justified in abandoning the ship and cargo to a total loss merely because he and all on board could save themselves without difficulty, or were in no danger, when by the sacrifice of a small portion of the cargo the entire residue, with the ship, might be saved. The fact that the hazard of life to the crew and others is involved in the danger of the vessel would, doubtless, increase the importance of the crisis, and render more urgent the necessity of doing whatever might be done to insure the common safety; but we do not perceive that it should be absolutely essential to the justification of a jettison."

4. Butler v. Wildman, 3 B. & Ald. 398 (1820).

5. That only an imminent danger will justify the act, appears from all the cases. Price v. Noble, 4 Taunt. 123 (1811); Pirie v. Middle Dock Co., 4 Asp. Mar. Law Cas. 388 (1881); 44 L. J. 426; Lowndes, Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 39; Emerigon XII, § 29; Story, Bailments (9th ed.), § 525; Angell, Carriers (5th ed.), § 215. All practicable means of relieving the vessel must be tried before resorting to a jettison. Bentley v. Bustard, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) at 643 (1855).

It is not essential that the danger be immediate at the moment of the jettison. In the case of Lawrence v. Minutusa, 17 How. (U. S.) 100 (1854), where a heavy iron boiler and chimneys, stowed on deck, were jettisoned in calm weather after the action of the vessel in a storm had proved them a source of grave danger, CURTIS, J., said, at page 110: ". . . We find no reason to doubt that this jettison was thus necessary. It is true that when it was actually made the sea was smooth and the ship in no immediate danger; but it satisfactorily appears that these boilers and chimneys could not be thrown overboard, without the greatest risk, when there was any considerable sea. To require delay until a storm would be, in effect, to prohibit the sacrifice. Precaution against dangers, which are certain to occur, is surely proper."

And in Harrison v. Bank of Australasia, L. R., 7 Ex. 39 (1872), at 52, KELLY, C. B., says: ". . . "A certainty of destruction within a short time, unless prevented, is an emergency and imminent. Suppose a vessel ran for shelter into a river where no supplies could be obtained; suppose she would have to stay a fortnight, unless she got out at the then spring tides; suppose her provisions would fail her in that time; suppose, to get out, she lightens herself by throwing some heavy cargo overboard; would not that be a unskilfulness on the part of the ship owners, or their agents or servants.¹ The evidence of experts is admissible to prove or disprove the peril and establish its cause.²

case of emergency and imminent danger? We think it would, and that such is the result of all the authorities."

1. It is imperative that the necessity for the jettison does not arise from the negligence or other wrong doing of the ship owner. If it does, he will be liable.

This was laid down forcibly in Mouse's Case, 12 Rep. 63 (1609), already cited. It was there "resolved, that although the ferryman surcharge the barge, yet for safety of the lives of passengers in such a time and accident, of necessity, it is lawful for any passenger to cast the things out of the barge; and the owners shall have their remedy upon the surcharge against the ferryman, for the fault was in him upon the surcharge." The Merionethshire, 23 Mitch. Mar. Reg. 1331 (1878); Schloss v. Heriot, 14 C. B. (N. S.) 59 (1863).

So in The Jennie Jones, Deady (U. S.) 82 (1864), where a ship master, who tried to enter the Columbia river without a pilot, was forced to jettison part of the cargo to lighten his vessel after running aground, DEADY, J., said: "I find that the jettison of the libellant's goods, although unavoidable at the time, was nevertheless the direct consequence of the conduct of the master, in entering the river at an improper time of tide and wind, which might have been avoided by waiting a reasonable time for a qualified pilot, and that, therefore, the claimant and schooner are both liable to the libellants for the value of the goods."

The law is admirably stated by MARSHALL, C. J., in Bentley v. Bustard, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) at 643 (1855): "The act itself must be shown to have been caused by one of the dangers of the river, which could not have been avoided, and to have been rendered necessary by circumstances over which the defendants and their agents and servants employed in the navigation of the boat, had no control, which they could not have foreseen and guarded against by the exercise of that vigilance which was appropriate to their respective stations, and called for by the character of the navigation in which they were engaged, and which, when they actually occurred, left no reasonable means of escaping a total loss but by sacrificing a part of the property at risk for the safety of the residue. . . . The single fact that the boat is in such a situation at the time of the jettison, as that, in all reasonable probability, a total loss of both vessel and cargo must ensue if immediate relief be not afforded, will not justify the carrier or his agents in resorting to the extreme measure of casting overboard . . . a portion of the cargo, so as to throw the loss upon all who may be benefited by the sacrifice (though it is at the moment necessary, and prove successful), unless the crisis came without fault, that is, without the want of due care in avoiding and due skill, and diligence, and exertion in overcoming the evil. If, by the use of proper care, and skill, and diligence, and exertion, or activity, the necessity for the sacrifice might have been avoided; or if, though the danger and the crisis could not have been avoided, the sacrifice is thought necessary, and is made only to prevent harm to the boat, or to expedite her on her voyage, the carrier, on account of his fault in the first case, and because in the other he alone is benefited by the sacrifice, must alone bear the consequent loss."

In full accord see also The Hattie Ellis, 22 Fed. Rep. 350; s. c., 20 Fed. Rep. 393, 507 (1884); The Portsmouth, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 682 (1869); Barber v. Brace, 3 Conn. 9 (1819); Chamberlain v. Reed, 13 Me. 357 (1836); Sayward v. Stevens, 3 Gray (Mass.) 97 (1854); Gardner v. Smallwood, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 534 (1805).

One ground of the liability of the ship owner for articles loaded on deck and jettisoned is the negligence presumed by law from such stowing. The cases dealing with this are treated later.

2. Malton v. Neshit, 1 C. & P. 70 (1824); Fenwick v. Bell, 1 C. & K. 312 (1844); but see Sills v. Brown, 9 C. & P. 601 (1840); Price v. Powell, 3 N. Y. 322 (1850); Price v. Hartshorn, 44 N. Y. 94, at 101 (1870).

Such evidence is not favored, however. GROVE, J., in Shepherd v. Kottgea, 2 C. P. Div. 578 (1877) at 584: "In our judgment the beneficial objects of the doctrine and law of general average would be frittered away if, where a sacrifice is made, as seems obviously the case here, to save the whole adventure,

b. Common Danger.—It is not essential that the danger be common to ship and cargo.¹

c. Life.—A jettison to save life is justifiable.²

d. Vice Propre, etc.—When an article becomes in itself a source of danger, its jettison is justifiable.³

IV. Who May Jettison.—The *master*⁴ is ordinarily the proper person to make the jettison, but either *crew*⁵ the showing the burden of such sacrifice could be made to depend upon nice questions of probability afterwards discussed, as to whether the thing might or might not be saved;" and he cited LORD CHIEF JUSTICE COLERIDGE in Corry v. Caulhard, "It is not necessary that the judgment of the master should be borne out by the facts when they come to be examined into; it is enough if he exercise his judgment under all the circumstances."

That the act will be presumed proper, see Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. (U. S.) 100 (1854). "It will be deemed to have been necessary . . . because the person to whom the law has entrusted authority to decide upon it and make it has duly exercised that authority," per CURTIS, J., at p. 110. See also Cameron v. Damville, 1 P. & B. (N. B.) 647 (1878), and Patten v. Darling, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 254 (1859), at 264, where CLIFFORD, J., says: "In contemplation of law he [the master] derives this authority from the implied consent of all concerned, and, in the absence of proof to the contrary, it must be presumed that his decision was wisely and properly made."

1. To entitle the owner of the article jettisoned to contribution, the danger must be common to vessel and cargo; but the cases already cited in the notes to this section of the text make it clear beyond question that a mere danger to life, or to either cargo or vessel, by itself, will be sufficient to justify a jettison. Dabney v. New England Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 300 (1867).

2. Dabney v. New England Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 300 (1867); Mouse's Case, 12 Rep. 63 (1609). But it is not essential to justify jettison that life is endangered. Bentley v. Bustard, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 643 at 680 (1855).

3. Taylor v. Dunbar, L. R., 4 C. P. 206 (putrid meat) (1869); Pirie v. Middle Dock Co., 4 Asp. Mar. Law Cas. 388 (coal on fire) (1881); Da Costa v. Edmunds, 4 Camp. 142; s. c., 2 Chitty 227 (carboys of vitriol loose) (1865);

Johnson v. Chapman, 35 L. J. (N. S.) C. P. 23; s. c., 19 C. B. (N. S.) 563 (lumber loose on deck) (1865); The Merionethshire, 23 Mitch. Mar. Reg. 1331 and 1328 (leaking cans of colodion) (1878); The Eurique, 7 Fed. Rep. 490 (cattle loose on deck) (1881); Slater v. Hayward Rubber Co., 26 Conn. 128 (cargo on fire) (1857); Parsons v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 413 (guano) (1860).

4. 1 Maude & Pollock, Mer. Ship. (4th ed.) 160; Emerigon, ch. 12, § 4.

The Gratitude, 3 Chr. Rob. 240, at 258 (1801). Per CURTIS, J., in Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. (U. S.) 100 (1854) at 109. "The nature of the case imposes on the master the duty and clothes him with the power to judge and determine upon the facts before him, whether a jettison be necessary. He derives this authority from the implied consent of all concerned in the common adventure." Patten v. Darling, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 154, at 264 (1859); Dupont des Nemauss v. Vance, 19 How. (U. S.) 162 (1856).

5. The crew will be justified only in extreme circumstances.

In The Nimrod, Ware (U. S.) 9 (1822), suit was brought for mariners' wages, and the defence was set up that the plaintiff had been guilty of misconduct in throwing overboard part of a deck load. The evidence showed that the master left the deck and that the crew jettisoned the deck load in his absence, but probably with his assent. The language of WARE, J., at p. *13, is important on this point:

"Indeed, for the libellant, the broad ground is assumed that the crew is authorized, without the consent of the master, to throw over a deck load, if, in their judgment, the safety of the vessel requires it. I cannot assent to this doctrine in the unqualified terms in which it has been argued at the bar." And again, at p. *15: "It belongs then to the master to determine when a necessity arises for sacrificing part of the cargo for the preservation of the rest. As a general principle, the crew have no au-or *passengers*¹ may be justified in making it.

V. Consultation.—No consultation of the master with his officers or crew is essential. It is enough that he exercise his judgment under all the circumstances.²

VI. Order.—Generally speaking, the heaviest and least valuable articles should be jettisoned first; but no particular order is essential.³

VII. Ownership of Property Jettisoned.⁴—The ownership of the property jettisoned is not affected, so that if recovered the property belongs to its original owner.⁵

VIII. Jettison as a Basis of General Average.⁶

IX. Jettison of Deck Cargo.—In the absence of usage to stow cargo upon deck, or of the shipper's consent to such storage, the thority to do this without his orders. What they might be justified in doing in extreme cases it is not necessary to decide until those cases occur."

1. Mouse's Case, 12 Rep. 63 (1609), determines that passengers possess this right, and may be justified even where the ship owner will be liable.

In that case, as already stated, suit was brought by one passenger against another for the value of a casket of money jettisoned by the latter in a storm. "It was . . . resolved, that although the ferryman surcharged the barge, yet for safety of the lives of passengers in such a time and accident of necessity, it is lawful for any passenger to cast the things out of the barge."

2. The early writers and some of the foreign codes require a consultation. This is a survival of the custom existing when merchants themselves traveled with their goods (see Lowndes, Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 2, et seq. Gourlie, Gen. Av. 23); but it is not English or American law. A consultation is proper, but not essential.

"The rule of consulting the crew upon the expediency of such sacrifices is rather founded in precedent in order to avoid dispute than in necessity; it may often happen that the danger is too urgent to admit of any such deliberation." Per LORD KENYON, C. J., in Birkley v. Presgrave, 1 East 220 (1801).

"It has been said that there must be a previous consultation, but this may be doubted. Consultation indeed is demonstrative proof that the act was voluntary; but I should think that if it sufficiently appears that the act occasioning the loss was the effect of judgment, it is sufficient; for in time of imminent danger, immediate action may be necessary, and consultation may be destruction." Per TILGHMAN, C. J., in Sims v. Gurney, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 513, at 524 (1812).

In a case of voluntary stranding, the objection that there had been no consultation was raised, and STORY, J., declared, "There is no weight in this objection. A consultation with the officers may be highly proper in cases which admit of delay and deliberation, to repel the imputation of rashness and unnecessary stranding by the master. But if the propriety and necessity of the act are otherwise sufficiently made out, there is an end of the substance of the objection." Columbia Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 331, at 343 (1839).

A consultation is, of course, proper, and not uncommon. See Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. (U. S.) 100 (1854); The Nimrod, Ware (U. S.) 9 (1822); Bentley v. Bustard, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 643 (1855); Curtis, Mer. Seamen 227. The master is not bound by the vote of a majority in consultation. Emerigon, ch. 12, § 4; The Nimrod, Ware (U. S.) 9, (1822). On the subject of consultation generally, see Emerigon, ch. 12, § 40.

3. The Gratitude, 3 Chr. Rob. 240 (1801) at 258; Slater v. Hayward Rubber Co., 26 Conn. 128 (1857).

4. 2 Arnold, Mar. Ins. (5th ed.) 828; 2 Kent, Com. (13th ed.) § 357, and cases cited in notes; Dig. lib. 14, tit. 2, f. 8; 3 Hall's Law Jour. 16; 1 Emerigon, ch. 12, § 40; Marvin, Wreck & Salvage, § 131 and note.

5. Caze v. Reilly, 3 Wash. (U. S.), at 208, per WASHINGTON, J. (1814).

6. See under title GENERAL AVERAGE.

law requires that all cargo shall be stowed under deck. Accordingly a ship owner is liable for the full value of articles stowed on deck, and jettison therefrom.¹

1. "In all cases he [the master] is bound to have the cargo safely secured under deck, unless he is authorized by some local or particular usage or by the consent of the shipper to do otherwise. In all other cases, if he carries the goods on deck, he does it at his own risk, and he becomes an insurer against the usual perils excepted by the bill of lading." Per WARE, J., in The Waldo, 2 Ware (U. S.) 165, at 166 (1841). This liability rests upon the negligence of the master in so loading the goods. To stow on deck is, of itself, bad stowage, or evidence of bad stowage. Royal Exchange Shipping Co. v. Dixon L. R., 12 App. Cas. 11; 3 Asp. Mar. Law Cas. 92 (1886); The Rebecca, Ware (U. S.) *188 (1831); The Waldo, 2 Ware (U. S.) 165 (1841); Waring v. Morse, 7 Ala. 343 (1845); but see Triplett v. Van Name, 2 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 332 (1822); Van Syckel v. Schooner Thomas Ewing, Crabbe (U. S.) 405 (1840); Borland v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 46 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 433 (1880).

The master will not be liable, however, unless the loss was caused by the deck loading.

"Taking a full price and stowing upon deck will subject the owner of the vessel to pay damages, if what is placed on deck be thereby lost or damaged; but if that did not occasion the loss he will be no more liable for damage to that part of the cargo than to the rest of it." Per curiam in Gardner v. Smallwood, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 534 (1805).

Giving a clean bill of lading implies an agreement to ship the goods under deck.

The law is well stated by CURTIS, J., in The Peytonia, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 21 (1854) at p. 23: "Upon a shipment being made, it is an implication of law, in the absence of a special contract, that the master is to sign bills of lading in the usual form, and the effect of such a bill of lading is to oblige the master to carry the goods under deck." By CLIFFORD, J., in Propeller Niagara v. Cordes, 21 How. (U. S.) 7 (1858) at p. 23: "A clear bill of lading in general imports, unless the contrary appears on its face, that the goods are to be safely and properly secured under deck." And by MILLER, J., in The Wellington, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 279 (1859).

This latter case was a libel for the value of 195 barrels of apples, part of a shipment of 635 barrels. The 195 were stowed on deck and jettisoned. MILLER, J., declared "The bill of lading does not state in express terms that the 635 barrels of apples shall be stowed under deck, but this is a condition tacitly annexed to the contract by operation of law; and it is equally binding on the master, and the shipper is as much entitled to its benefits as a contract as if it were stated in express terms."

Evidence.—Accordingly in the following cases, where a clean bill of lading had been given, it was held that the ship owner was liable for the full value of the articles jettisoned, and evidence of usage to shipdeck loads, or of an agreement that the articles should be carried on deck, or of knowledge that they were to be so carried, has been held inadmissible. Stephens v. Australasian Ins. Co., L. R., 8 C. P. 18 (1872); The Paragon, 1 Ware (U. S.) 322 (1836); The Wellington, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 279 (1859); Creery v. Holly, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 26 (1835).

But this rule of evidence is often disregarded, and its validity may now be doubted.

Thus in Vernard v. Hudson, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 405 (1838), at 406*, STORY, J., says: "I take it to be very clear that where goods are shipped under a common bill of lading it is presumed that they are shipped to be put under deck, as the ordinary mode of stowing cargo. This presumption may be rebutted by showing a positive agreement between the parties that the goods are to be carried on deck; or it may be deduced from other circumstances, such, for example, as the goods paying the deck freight only. The admission of proof to this effect is perfectly consistent with the rules of law, for it neither contradicts nor varies anything contained in the bill of lading; but it simply rebuts a presumption arising from the ordinary course of business."

So in Sayward v. Stevens, 3 Gray (Mass.) 97 (1854), where the bill of lading expressly provided that part should be stowed on deck, the judge intimated that ordinarily the presumption could be rebutted by parol proof of an agreement to stow on deck, but in that case held no such evidence could be admitted, since the bill of lading made a provision in regard to the deck load which precluded proof of any other.

If, however, it is the usage in the particular trade to carry deck loads, or if the deck is the proper place to stow the goods, or if the shipper assents to a deck stowage, the ship owner is not liable for the full value, but must contribute toward the loss.¹

In The Delaware, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 579 (1871), where a clean bill of lading had been given, and the attempt was made to show an oral agreement for deck loading, it was held that such evidence was inadmissible, the court, per CLIFFORD, J., holding, in effect, that evidence of usage may be admitted, but evidence of a particular agreement cannot be admitted to rebut the presumption.

To the same effect see Wood v. Schooner Sallie C. Morton, 2 N. J. Law Jour. 301 (1879).

In Johnston v. Crane, 1 Kerr (N. B.) 356 (1841), PARKER, J., said (at p. 362): "In regard to the bill of lading estopping the defendant from showing the assent to the goods being laden on the deck, the question whether a bill of lading operated as an estoppel was distinctly raised in Bates v. Todd (1 Mos. & Rob. 106), and TINDAL, J., said: 'That as between the original parties the bill of lading is merely a receipt, liable to be opened by the evidence of the real facts.' LITLEDALE, J., expressed a similar opinion in Berkley v. Watling (7 Ad. & E. 38), and I do not find that either of these opinions has been controverted."

The rule has been disregarded in the following cases: Royal Exchange Shipping Co. v. Dixon, L. R., 12 Ap. Cas. 11; 3 Asp. Mar. Law Cas. 92 (1886); Cameron v. Damville, 1 P. & B. (N. B.) 647 (1878); Johnston v. Crane, 1 Kerr (N. B.) 356 (1841); Vernard v. Hudson, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 405 (1838); The Waldo, 2 Ware (U. S.) 165 (1841); Wood v. Schooner Sallie C. Morton, 2 N. J. Law Jour. 301 (1879); Barber v. Brace, 3 Conn. 9 (1819); Sayward v. Stevens, 3 Gray (Mass.) 97 (1854); Doane v. Keating, 12 Leigh (Va.) 391 (1841).

Statutory Provisions in England and Canada.—The statute 16 and 17 Vict., ch. 107, makes it illegal to carry deck loads except at certain seasons. Wilson v. Rankin, L. R., 1 Q. B. 162 (1865). Although illegal, such loading does not of itself render an insurance contract on such cargo void. Cunard v. Hyde, 27 L. J., Q. B. 408 (1856). Canada passed a similar act in 1873.

1 The cases in regard to the liability of the ship owner, where either usage or the shipper's consent authorizes the stowing of cargo on deck, are in much confusion, but the statement of the text embodies the present state of the law in most jurisdictions.

That the ship owner is not liable in solido is clear, since his responsibility depends on whether he has been negligent; and, manifestly, there is no negligence in stowing in the manner the usage of the trade or the consent of the shipper authorizes. The question has been whether he is liable for any contribution toward the loss, and whether the other owners of cargo and the underwriters are liable.

Early English Law.—The law of most countries other than England with her dependencies, and the United States, and the early law of these as well, allows no general average or contribution for the loss of deck cargo. If improperly stowed on deck the whole loss falls on the ship owner; if on deck by the consent of the shipper or the custom of the trade, it falls on the shipper. Lowndes, Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 51 et seq.; Gourlie, Gen. Av. 83 et seq.

The reason given is that the deck is an improper place to stow the cargo, which, when stowed on deck, impedes the handling of the vessel, is greatly exposed, and, by its very position, is a standing temptation to make a jettison before one is absolutely necessary.

An exception to the rule was pointed out by Valin, Comm., tit. 8, art. 13, by which contribution was allowed in the case of "boats and other small vessels going from port to port, where the custom is to load goods on the deck as well as below"; and from this exception the modern English and American law has developed.

Underwriters.—The earliest cases involved the liability of the underwriters to make good the loss, and it was held that a policy in the general form did not cover goods stowed on deck, and accordingly the underwriter was not liable. In the absence of usage or consent to deck loading, the law remains the same. Ross v. Thwaite, Park. Ins. (7th ed.) 26 (1776); Backhouse v. Ripley, Park. Ins. (7th ed.) 26 (1802); Smith v. Mississippi, M. & F. Ins. Co., 11 La. 142 (1837); Shackelford v. Wilcox, 9 La. 33, at 39 (1835); Walcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 429 (1827); Taunton Copper Co. v. Merchant's Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 108 (1839); Lenox v. United Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 178 (1802); Atkinson v. Great Western Ins. Co., 4 Daly (N. Y.) 1 (1871); Borland v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 46 N. Y. Supr. Ct. 433 (1880).

Usage.—When a usage to carry deck loads obtains, the underwriter is affected with notice of it, and is liable for what the assured is compelled, or is liable, to pay.

This was first held in Da Costa v. Edmunds, 4 Camp. 142 (1815), which was a suit against underwriters on a policy insuring forty carboys of vitriol from London to Lisbon. The carboys were stowed on deck and properly secured, but were jettisoned in a storm. The underwriters claimed they were not liable for deck cargo. Evidence of usage to stow such goods on deck was admitted, and "LORD ELLENBOROUGH left it to the jury to say whether it was usual to carry vitriol on the deck, and whether these carboys were properly stowed. If there was a usage to carry vitriol on deck, the underwriters were bound to take notice of it, without any communication, and all they could require was that these carboys should be properly stowed in the usual manner. On the other hand, they were not liable if the goods were carried on the deck without such a usage, or if they were not stowed there in a skilful and proper manner." After a verdict for the plaintiff, he refused a rule for a new trial.

Later, a motion to set aside the verdict and enter a nonsuit, on the ground that it was necessary to give notice to the underwriters of the place of stowage, was refused by the court en banc. 2 Chitty Rep. 227 (1815). But see Clarkson v. Young, 24 L. J., N. S. 41 (1870).

The same conclusion was reached in Milward v. Hibbert, 3 Q. B. 120 (1842), where pigs carried on the deck of a steamer in accordance with usage were jettisoned. "The mere fact of stowing them on deck will not relieve the underwriter from responsibility, inasmuch as they may be placed there according to the usage of the trade, and so as not to impede the navigation or in any way increase the risk." Per LORD DENMAN, C. J., at p. 137.

The English Courts, however, have admitted proof of a further usage that the underwriter shall not pay, although but for such usage he would be liable. Miller v. Tetherington, 6 H. & N. 278, and 7 H. & N. 954 (1861); Blackett v. Royal Exchange Ass. Co., 2 C. & J. 244 (1832).

United States, Canada and Australia.

—The law of the United States, Canada and Australia is clear that in such a case the underwriter is liable.

The law in the United States is clearly stated by BLODGETT, J., in Hazleton v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 11 Biss. (U. S.) 210 (1882); 12 Fed. Rep. 159 at p. 162. "I think the rule fairly deducible from the modern cases is that the underwriter upon the hull is liable to contribute to general average for jettison of the deck load when the custom or usage of the trade in which the vessel is employed is to carry part of her cargo on deck. Wood v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 235; 8 Fed. Rep. 27; 14 Phila. (Pa.) 483, 545 (1880); Toledo F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Speares, 16 Ind. 52 (1861); Allegre v. Maryland Ins. Co., 2 G. & J. (Md.) 136 (1830); Lapham v. Atlas Ins. Co., 24 Pick. (Mass.) 1 (1833); Allen v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 85 N. Y. 473 (1881); Merchants and Manufacturers' Ins. Co. v. Shillito, 15 Ohio St. 559 (1864); Orient Mutual Ins. Co. v. Reymershafter, 56 Tex. 234 (1882).

In Allen v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 85 N. Y. 473 (1881), the policy provided that the company should not be liable for deck load unless an agreement to be liable was endorsed on the policy; but the court, per ANDREWS, J., held that this must mean that it should not be liable for cargo carried on deck where there was no usage to carry it so, unless the special agreement be made. In Steinhoff v. Royal Canadian Ins. Co., 42 Q. B. (U. C.) 307 (1877); Marks v. Watson, 2 Kerr (N. B.) 211 (1843); Spooner v. Western Ass. Co., 38 Q. B. (U. C.) 62 (1876). The Canadian courts hold the underwriter liable.

The last case contains an admirable statement of the law and a careful examination of the authorities.

For the Australian law see Lindsay v. Hopkins, 3 W. W. & A'B. Law (Vict.) 5 (1866); Warren v. Swiss Lloyd Ins. Co., 9 Vict. L. R. Law, 397 (1883).

The courts of the United States, Canada and Australia hold that a custom of underwriters not to pay for loss of deck load is immaterial.

In Lindsay v. Hopkins, 3 W. W. & A'B. Law (Vict.) 5 (1866), the declaration averred a usage to carry sheep on deck, and sought to recover as contribution paid for their jettison. The plea set up a custom of underwriters not to pay, and on demurrer it was held per curiam, "The plea does not traverse either the making the policy or the existence of the custom, but seeks to meet a conclusion of law to be drawn from a policy made subject to such a custom—it affords no answer to the declaration." Hazleton v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 11 Biss. (U. S.) 210; 12 Fed. Rep. 159 (1882); The Wm. Gilleem, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 154 (1872); Toledo F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Speares, 16 Ind. 52 (1861).

Consent.—Where the deck load is carried not in accordance with a usage, but simply by the consent of the shipper, the liability of the underwriter has not been determined.

In Smith v. Mississippi M. & F. Ins. Co., 11 La. 142 (1837), the bill of lading showed that the goods were to be carried on deck, but the company did not examine the bill and the application did not refer to it. The court held, that as the company did not know of the deck load, it was not liable for it.

In Lenox v. United Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 178 (1802), the policy was for staves "on the deck and in the hold," yet the company was held not liable for those on deck jettisoned.

In Judah v. Randall, 2 Cai. Cas. in Error (N. Y.) 324 (1805) the owners of a chariot shipped on deck was allowed to recover as for a total loss, but nothing was said as to the lading on deck, and probably such lading was rightful in that case.

In Shackelford v. Wilcox, 9 La. 33 (1835), where the bill of lading specified that part of the cotton in question should be shipped on deck, although there was no jettison and the action was not against insurers, BALLARD, J., declared, "In relation to underwriters without special agreement, and in relation to other owners of the cargo under deck, in cases of jettison, it is well settled that goods stowed on the deck form no part of the cargo."

Apparently the underwriter is liable only when he knows or ought to know of the deck load, and is held by law to assent to it. Mere knowledge is immaterial. Wood v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 235 (1880); Atkinson v. Great Western Ins. Co., 4 Daly (N. Y.) 1 (1871), at p. 28.

Ship Owner.—As against the ship owner the law varies.

The early law held that there was no contribution for loss of a deck load. Lowndes, Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 53; Gourlie, Gen. Av. 83; Triplett v. Van Name, 2 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 332 (1822). And this is still the law of Maine. Dodge v. Bartol, 5 Gr. (Me.) 286 (1827); Cram v. Aiken, 13 Me. 229 (1836); Sproat v. Donnell, 26 Me. 185 (1846).

Dodge v. Bartol, 5 Gr. (Me.) 286 (1822) was case for the nondelivery of flour, of which twenty barrels were to go under deck, and 140 barrels on deck at half freight. It was jettisoned, and the under deck load settled for in general average; but the owner claimed contribution for the deck load as well. The jury found a usage to carry deck loads, and another that the owner could not claim contribution. It was held no contribution was due. Per WESTON, J.: "We cannot find that the exception of Valin has been adopted in this country; and if it is to be considered as qualifying the law here, it cannot extend to vessels like the one in question, nor to voyages of the magnitude and importance of that in which [the vessel] was employed by the plaintiff," i. e., from Georgetown, Me., to Portsmouth, N. H.

Usage.—In England, and elsewhere in the United States, the law is otherwise, and wherever the usage to carry deck load obtains, the shipowner is liable for contribution.

The English law was settled by Gould v. Oliver, 2 Man. & Gr. 208 (1842); 4 New Cas. 134, 5 Scott 445 (1837), where assumption was brought for a general average for jettison of a deck cargo of lumber from Quebec to London, alleging a custom to stow a reasonable part of the cargo on deck. The plea denied liability to contribute for the part on deck, and on demurrer it was held that the shipowner was liable. Per TINDAL, C. J., 5 Scott, at 451: "The question therefore before us is, not whether generally the owner of goods laden on deck, which are thrown overboard for the preservation of the ship and the rest of the cargo, is entitled to contribution against the owner of the ship and of the residue of the cargo; but whether in the special and particular case when the ship owner has laden the goods on deck under a privilege reserved to him by the general usage and practice of the voyage, the owner of the goods may claim contribution from such ship owner. And upon the best consideration we can give to this question, referring at the same time to the foreign authorities, and to the few decisions which have taken place in our own courts, we think the plaintiff entitled in this case to contribution against the ship owner."

In full accord is Hurley v. Milward, 1 Jones & Carey, 224 (1839), and Burton v. English, 10 Q. B. Div. 426, 12 Q. B. Div. 218 (1883).

In the last case, where the charter party provided for a "deck load if required at full freight, but at merchant's risk," the court of appeals, per BRETT, M. R., reversing the decision of COVE, J., held that the right to contribution did not rest upon contract, and so was not covered by the clause of the contract. Accordingly the ship owner was held liable to contribute. Cf. Spooner v. Western Ass. Co., 38 Q. B. (U. C.) 62 (1876).

The law in the United States was settled first in Brown v. Cornwall, 1 Root (Conn.) 60 (1773), an action for an average loss upon horses shipped to St. Croix, W. I., upon deck. It was held, "That although stock upon deck is more exposed to danger, and in a storm exposed the vessel to greater risk than goods in the hold, yet it is the universal custom to ship goods in the hold, with stock upon deck; when the stock is thrown overboard for the express purpose of saving from destruction the cargo in the hold, it is but reasonable that the cargo saved should bear a proportion of the loss which was the price of its ransom."

Barber v. Brace, 3 Conn. 9 (1819), which denied the ship owners' liability, is not in conflict with the earlier case, as it was brought for negligent stowing, and evidence of the custom and of the shipper's assent to the deck stowage was held to disprove the negligence.

In Gillett v. Ellis, 11 Ill. 579 (1850), the same result was reached, the court going on the general custom of lake steamers to carry deck loads, and so in Harris v. Moody, 30 N. Y. 266 (1864), which disregarded Smith v. Wright, 1 Cai. Rep. (N. Y.) 43 (1803), (where the usage was thought hardly well established), and Creery v. Hally, 14 Wend.

(N. Y.) 26 (1835), (where the decision turned on the fact that a clean bill of lading was given). Merchants & Man. Ins. Co. v. Shillito, 15 Ohio St. 559 (1864); Meaher v. Lufkin, 21 Tex. 383 (1858).

In the United States courts the early cases denied contribution. Triplet v. Van Name, 2 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 332 (1822); The Rebecca, Ware (U. S.) *188 (1831). But the later cases grant it. The Paragon, 1 Ware (U. S.) 322 (1836); The Prop. Niagara, 21 How. (U. S.) at 17 (1858); The Neptune, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 193 (1868); The Wm. Gillum, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 154 (1872); Wood v. Schooner Sallie C. Morton (U. S.), 2 N. J. Law J. 301 (1879); The Schooner Mary and Eva, 6 Fed. Rep. 628 (1881); The Eurique, 7 Fed. Rep. 490 (1881); The Adele Thackera, 24 Fed. Rep. 809 (1885); Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. Bradley Fertilizer Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 685 (1888).

The Canadian law is the same. Granselle v. Ferrie, 6 Ohio St. 454 (1842); Paterson v. Black, 5 U. C. Rep. 481 (1848); Gibb v. McDonnell, 7 U. C. Rep. 356 (1850); Cameron v. Damville, 1 P. & B. (N. B.) 647 (1878); cf. Stephens v. McDonnell, Rob. & Har. Dig. 112 (1843).

It would seem that the American and Canadian courts would not follow the reasoning of the English court of appeals in Burton v. English, 12 Q. B. Div. 218 (1883) as to the exemption from liability. The Eurique, 7 Fed. Rep. 490 (1881); Spooner v. Western Ass. Co., 38 Q. B. (U. C.) 62 (1876); Steinhoff v. Royal Canadian Ins. Co., 42 Q. B. (U. C.) 307 (1877). Cf. also The Merionethshire, 23 Mitch. Mar. Reg. 1331 and 1328 (1878).

Consent.—Where the cargo is stowed on deck with the consent of the shipper, the greater number of dicta held that the ship owner is not liable for a loss by jettison, either in solido or for contribution; but the present law in the United States seems to hold him liable for contribution; but not in England.

The early law and practice in England was that the ship owner was not liable, the shipper being held to take all risk by consenting to the stowing on deck. This rested, in fact, on the ground that he who consented to deck stowage could not hold the master liable for negligence. Major v. White, 7 C. & P. 41 (1835); Robinson v. Knights, L. R., 8 C. P. 465 (1873); and really had nothing to do with the liability to contribute. After Gould v. Oliver, 5 Scott 445 (1837), held the ship owner liable where a usage existed, the practice became general to hold all who consented to the deck load, liable to contribution, and to exonerate all who did not, the payment being called "general contribution," and not "general average." Lowndes, Gen. Av. (4th ed.) 55. And the liability of the ship owner was regarded as settled by Johnson v. Chapman, 35 L. J. (N. S.) C. P. 23 (1865); 19 C. B. (N. S.) 563, where, in an action for the freight of a cargo of lumber from Quebec to London, part of which was by consent laden on deck, the defendant claimed contribution for lumber jettisoned. The court, per WILLES, J., held him entitled to the contribution; and WILLES, J., said, at p. 28, or 583: "Then immediately you find that the deck cargo is within the contemplation of the parties, you must deal with it as if shipping a deck cargo was lawful. When you have established that it is a deck cargo, lawfully there by the contract of the parties, it becomes subject to the rule of general average."

But in Wright v. Marwood, Gordon v. Marwood, 7 Q. B. Div. 62 (1881), where cattle laden on deck by consent were jettisoned and suit was brought for a general average, the court reversed the judgment of BRETT, M. R., following Johnson v. Chapman, and held that in the absence of custom the ship owner was not liable, the shipper, by consenting to the deck load, assuming the risk.

The decision goes largely on the ground of the early law and the undoubted fact that owners of cargo under deck are not liable in such a case; and upon the nature of general average. Clearly the claim is not a proper general average, but equally clearly, it would seem, the ship owner should be liable to some extent.

In the United States the cases are far from satisfactory. Those which by their decision or dicta are cited in support of the English view relieving the ship owner of all liability are Smith v. Wright, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 43 (1803); Hampton v. Brig Thaddeus, 4 Martin (La.) 582 (1817); Shackelford v. Wilcox, 9 La. 33 (1835); The Paragon, 1 Ware (U. S.) 322 (1836); Doane v. Keating, 12 Leigh (Va.) 319 (1841); The Peytonia, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 21 (1854); The Wellington, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 279 (1859); The Milwaukee Belle, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 197 (1869); The Delaware, 14

Wall. (U. S.) 579 (1871); The Wm. Gillum, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 154 (1872); Wood v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 71 Fed. Rep. 235 (1880), (semble).

Smith v. Wright, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 43 (1803), was brought by a shipper to recover the value of cotton shipped on deck by his consent. The court held that he was not entitled to recover, and, going upon the evidence of brokers, underwriters, and merchants, that no claim for contribution existed except where the deck load was according to the usage.

Hampton v. Brig Thaddeus, followed Smith v. Wright, and refused contribution for the loss of copper kettles jettisoned from the deck where they had been placed by the plaintiff's consent.

Shackelford v. Wilcox held that the ship owner was entitled to full freight, and refused a claim for damages for lading on deck. There was no jettison, and only a dictum in regard to this question.

Doane v. Keating, 12 Leigh (Va.) 319 (1841), decided squarely against the claim for contribution, the facts showing a deck load by consent, and a justifiable jettison.

The Peytonia was a libel for non-delivery of cargo carried on deck and jettisoned; and CURTIS, J., held the master liable as a consent to such stowing was not proved. The judge stated that the loss was the shipper's, if he consented, but this was obiter. The liability was for bad stowage.

In The Wellington, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 279 (1859), on a libel for the value of 195 barrels of apples shipped under a clean bill of lading and stowed on deck, MILLER, J., refused to admit evidence of a parol agreement to the deck loading, but said, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 280: "It is well understood that when goods are stowed on deck 'with the consent of the owner, no loss by justifiable jettison can be recovered for, unless the accident, by which they are lost, would have been equally fatal if they had been under deck.'" For this he cites Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. (U. S.) 100 (1854), and The Waldo, Davies (U. S.) 161 (1841). But in Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. (U. S.) at 115, CURTIS, J., declared that "[The plaintiff's] right to contribution is not involved in this case," and nowhere discusses that right. The case decides simply that the ship owner is not liable in solido. The Waldo was not a case of jettison or average, and, so far as it goes, is opposed to the statement of MILLER, J. The case of The Wellington rests on the technical rule excluding parol evidence of consent where a clean bill of lading has been given.

The Milwaukee Belle, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 197 (1869), is another decision by MILLER, J., deciding squarely, the plaintiff suing for contribution for the loss by jettison of pig lead, shipped on deck with his consent, that "the rule is also a general rule, that goods laden on deck and jettisoned are not contributed for, and such is particularly the rule when goods are laden on deck by consent of the shipper;" and it was said that the admiralty courts of England and America "have almost uniformly treated the owner of goods on deck with his consent, as not having a claim on the master, in case of jettison, although bound to contribute."

The decision in The Delaware, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 579 (1871), rests upon the same real ground as that of The Wellington, and the statement of CLIFFORD, J., that if goods are carried on deck by consent, the ship owner is not liable is obiter.

The statements in The Wm. Gillum, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 1874, and The Paragon, 1 Ware (U. S.) 322 (1836), are also purely obiter.

The case of Wood v. Phoenix Ins. Co. is against underwriters who knew of the deck stowage and obviously depends on different considerations from those against the ship owner.

That the ship owner is liable for a contribution is decided by The Watchful, 1 Brown Adm. 469 (1874), which was a libel for general average for loss of a deck load of iron from Frankfort to Detroit, Mich., jettisoned under such circumstances that a general average loss would have been due without question but for the fact of the deck loading. The decision by LONGYEAR, J., cites all the cases and expressly disapproves. The Milwaukee Belle, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 197 (1869). After stating the general rule and its exceptions, he says, p. 473: "In all these cases, it is said, the vessel is not liable for the entire loss, because the carrying of the goods on deck cannot be attributed as a fault, but if liable at all, it is for contribution or general average merely. . . . Being carried on deck was undoubtedly the cause of the necessity for the jettison; at least such is the presumption, and being so carried was no less a fault because by consent as to all persons interested not parties or privies to the agreement. The vessel and her owner and master must, however, be held to be bound by the agreement, and as between them and the shipper the fault must be held to have been waived. As to them, therefore, the fact of the one being carried on deck, instead of under deck, must be held to be out of the question. Any other rule would make the shipper run the entire risk in a matter in regard to which the benefits are mutual, which would be unjust. The shipper by his consent waives all claim to entire compensation in case of the jettison of the goods. The master, by taking the goods on board as freight, assumes for the vessel all the ordinary relations between ship and cargo, among which is the ordinary liability to contribution in case of loss by jettison. The only variation from the general rule wrought by the agreement of the shipper, that the goods may be carried on deck, is that, in case of loss by jettison, the vessel shall not be liable for the entire loss, a variation wholly in favor of the owners."

The decision here reached is supported by dicta in the latest cases. The Schooner Mary & Eva, 6 Fed. Rep. 628 (1881); The Eurique, 7 Fed. Rep. 490 (1881); The Hettie Ellis, 22 Fed. Rep. 350 (1884).

Canadian Law.—The Canadian law holds that the loss falls on the shipper. Johnston v. Crane, 1 Kerr (N. B.) 356 (1841).

Usage.—In the following cases a usage was proved as well as a consent, and the decision rests on the usage. Dorsey v. Smith, 4 La. 211 (1832); Dodge v. Bartol, 5 Gr. (Me.) 286 (1827); Meaker v. Luffkin, 21 Tex. 383 (1858); Granselle v. Ferrie, 6 O. S. (Can.) 454 (1842); Spooner v. Western Ass. Co., 38 Q. B. (M. C.) 62 (1876).

Owners of Under Deck Cargo—Usage.—As against the owner of cargo stowed under the deck the cases are not in full accord, yet they seem to determine that where the deck lading is according to custom the cargo under deck must contribute.

Wood v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 8 Fed. Rep. 27 (1881), per McKENNAN, J.: "As a general rule jettison of a deck cargo would not entitle its owners to contribution in general average from the cargo stowed below deck. But where, in pursuance of a general custom of the trade to which the special kind of cargo belongs, the vessels engaged in its transportation are loaded partly on deck and partly under deck, and the deck cargo is necessarily sacrificed for the safety of the rest, the general cargo may be subjected to contribution to pay the loss."

JEWEL—JEWELRY.—See note 1.

Cameron v. Damville, 1 P. & B. (N. B.) 647 (1878). The question rose squarely here between the ship owners and the under deck cargo, and DUFF, J., held, at p. 651: "It is unnecessary to enquire how far third parties without notice would be affected, when the carrying of the articles on deck is sanctioned only by the agreement of the ship owner and freighter. In this case it is found to be sanctioned by the usage and custom of the trade; and all persons engaged in the trade must take notice of the usage."

In full accord is Harris v. Moody, 30 N. Y. 566 (1864), where a lien to compel under deck cargo to contribute was upheld; and the decisions in the following cases seem also in accord: Brown v. Cornwell, 1 Root (Conn.) 60 (1773); Gillett v. Ellis, 11 Ill. 579 (1850).

In Milward v. Hibbert, 3 Q. B. 120 (1842), LORD DENMAN, C. J., declared that usage would affect the question of liability, whoever were the parties, while the owner's consent only when it happened to arise between him and the ship owner.

The following cases, however, hold that the under deck cargo is not liable. In the Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. Bradley Fertilizer Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 685 (1888), the issue was squarely presented, and CARPENTER, J., after finding as a fact that it was a custom to carry deck loads in the trade, and that the under deck cargo owners knew it, said: "The question, then, is whether the existence of this custom is to be held to impose a liability to contribute on the under deck cargo. After mature consideration I am satisfied that it cannot be so held. I see no consideration moving to the shippers of the under deck cargo which could furnish an equitable ground for the imposition of increased liability on them. When a custom exists as in this case to carry a particular kind of goods on deck under particular circumstances, I think the shippers of under deck cargo might be so far affected as that they could not maintain any claim for the increased risk resulting from such shipment."

Granselle v. Ferrie, 6 O. S. (Can.) 454 (1842), contains a statement to the same effect, but refuses to decide the point. Gibb v. McDonnell, 7 U. C. Rep. (Can.) 356 (1850).

Consent.—Where the deck load is carried by the consent of its owners and so by special agreement, all the cases hold that the owner of under deck cargo is not affected and is not liable. Wright v. Marwood, Gordon v. Marwood, 7 Q. B. 62 (1881); Lenox v. United Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 178 (1802); Doane v. Keating, 12 Leigh (Va.) 391 (1841); Gibb v. McDonnell, 7 U. C. Rep. (Can.) 356 (1850).

The usage to carry the deck load must be well established and not too recent. The Eurique, 7 Fed. Rep. 490 (1881); Smith v. Wright, 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 43 (1803); per CLIFFORD, J., in the Propeller Niagara, 21 How. (U. S.) 17 (1858).

The codes of California and of Dakota provide that the owner of things stowed on deck, in case of their jettison, is entitled to the benefit of a general average contribution only in case it is usual to stow such things on deck upon such a voyage. Stim. Am. St., § 4345; Cal. Civil Code, § 2154; Dak. Civil Code, § 1251.

Authorities.—There is no work on Jettison. It is generally treated under General Average, and the text books on that subject may be referred to. Lowndes, The Law of General Average (4th ed.); Gourlie, General Average, and Hopkins, Law of Average (4th ed.), deal best with it. There is a good collection of cases in Pritchard's Admiralty Digest (3rd ed), vol 1, pp. 67 et seq.

1. A watch and chain are not jewels within a statute relieving hotel keepers from liability for loss of "money, jewels or ornaments" of guests when they have provided a safe for the deposit of such. "All that which is useful or necessary to the comfort or convenience of the guest, that which is usually carried and worn as part of the ordinary apparel and outfit, or is ordinarily used, and is convenient for use by travellers as well in as out of their rooms, is left, as before the statute, at the risk of the inn keeper. The words of the statute must be taken in their ordinary sense, in the absence of any indication that they were used either in a technical sense or in a sense other than that in which they are popularly used. A watch is neither a jewel or ornament, as these words are used and understood either in common parlance or by lexicographers. It is not used or carried as a jewel or ornament, but as a time-piece, or chronometer, an article of ordinary wear by most travellers of every class, and of daily and hourly use by all. It is as useful and necessary to the guest in his room as out of it, in the night as in the daytime. It is carried for use and convenience, and not for ornament. But it is enough that it is neither a jewel or ornament in any sense in which these words have ever been used." Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539; s. c., 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 358. The same was held in Bernstein v. Sweeny, 33 N. Y. Super. Ct. 271, where Webster's definition of jewel, "an ornament of dress in which the precious stones form a principal part," was quoted with approval. So it was said in Gile v. Libby, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 70, "the watch and pen and pencil case are certainly valuables, and perhaps might be called jewels, but I think should be considered a part of the traveller's personal clothing or apparel. The legislature certainly did not expect the traveller, after retiring, to send down his ordinary clothing or apparel to be deposited in the safe." See generally on this statute Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 258. Under a statute of similar purport, but whose language was "money, jewelry and articles of gold and silver manufacture," a gold watch was held to be included as an article of gold manufacture. Stewart v. Parsons, 24 Wis. 241.

JOB.—The whole of a thing which is to be done.¹

As to the distinction between a jeweler and a watchmaker, see Howard v. Williams, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 80.

Plain gold earrings and knobs without precious stones are jewelry within the meaning of an act prohibiting the peddling of the same. "Jewelry is not found in any English dictionary, and is probably an Americanism. It is defined in Webster to be jewels in general. He defines a jewel to be 'an ornament worn by ladies,' 'a pendant in the ear.' It is manifest, however, that these are put by way of instances, and not intended as strict definitions.

On the best consideration we have been able to give the subject, we are satisfied that the legislature, in the use of the word 'jewel,' intended to employ it as a generic term, of the largest import, including all articles under the genus." Com. v. Stephens, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 370.

In discussing the use of the term in the custom laws, LACOMBE, J., says: "The word 'jewelry' is generally used as including articles of personal adornment, and the word further imports that the articles are of value in the community where they are used. A belt of cowry shells, a necklace of bears' claws, a head ornament of sharks' teeth, though possessing no value in themselves, are esteemed valuable in the communities where they are worn; and we therefore constantly find them referred to in books written in the English language—books of travel, standard works, encyclopædias, and scientific dissertations upon sociology—we find those articles described in those books as 'jewelry.' The articles of value used for personal adornment in our civilization, are, and for centuries have been, the precious metals—gold and silver, to which, I think, platina is now generally added—and what are known as the precious stones—the diamond, sapphire, ruby, etc. Articles manufactured from these for the purpose of personal adornment are known, as the witnesses on the stand told you, as articles of jewelry, and such testimony is accordant with your own knowledge as to what is the ordinary use of the term 'jewelry.'

"We have found, however, that besides jewelry, there is such a thing as imitation jewelry. Jewelry is of course an expensive article, and as many people desire to wear ornaments without being able to pay the price required for real jewelry, the manufacture and use of imitation jewelry have come into existence. Now, what is an imitation piece of jewelry? It need not necessarily be a counterfeit—that is, it need not be an exact simulation of a particular article, which it is intended to take the place of. If, by a pleasing combination of appropriate materials, by an attractive arrangement of parts, an article is produced bearing a general resemblance to real jewelry ornaments, and suitable for similar uses, it may fairly be called imitation jewelry." Robbins v. Robertson, 33 Fed. Rep. 709; s. c., 37 Alb. L. J. 328.

1. Bouv. Law Dict.; Dixon v. Cory, Penn. (N. J.) 1043.

JOBBER.—A merchant who purchases goods from importers and sells to retailers.¹

JOCKEY.—See note 2.

JOINDER.—(See ACTIONS; DECLARATION; EQUITY PLEADINGS; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS; HUSBAND AND WIFE; PARTIES TO ACTIONS; PLEADING, and the respective actions; ASSUMPSIT; ACCOUNT; CASE; COVENANT; DEBT; DETINUE; EJECTMENT; REPLEVIN; TRESPASS; TROVER and WASTE).

I. Defined, 986.

II. Joinder of Causes of Action in Same Right, 987.

1. Same Cause in Different Counts, 987.

(a) At Common Law, 987.

(b) Statutory and Code Modifications, 988.

2. Different Causes of Action at Common Law, 990.

(a) Joinder in Personal Actions, 990. [990.

(1) General Principles,

(2) When and When Not Permissible, 991.

(b) Joinder in Mixed and Real Actions, 996.

3. Joinder of Different Causes of Action as Affected by Statutory Changes in Forms of Action, 996.

4. Joinder of Different Causes of Action Under the Codes, 1000.

(a) Provisions of the Codes, 1000.

(b) Causes of Action in the Same Class, 1004.

(1) Contracts, 1004.

(2) Recovery of Real Property; Mesne Profits; Damages; Partition; Taxes; Eminent Domain, 1005.

(3) Recovery of Personal Property; Damages; Injuries, Trusts, 1008.

(4) Same Transaction, or Transactions Connected with the Same Subject of Actions, 1009.

(5) Foreclosure of Liens and Personal Judgment, 1010.

(c) Cause of Action By and Against Different Parties, 1014.

(d) Actions Ex Contractu and Ex Delicto, 1015c.

(e) Actions at Law and in Equity, 1015d.

(f) Separate Statement, Cause of Action Defined, 1015h.

5. Joinder in Action on Bonds

I. JOINDER DEFINED.—For the purposes of this article the subject of joinder is restricted to actions and pleas at law, and concerns only the power of the plaintiff to unite in his declaration or complaint, several separate counts and causes of action, and

1. Webster quoted in Stewart v. Winters, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 587. In this case there being a provision in the lease that the premises should be occupied for a regular dry goods business, and for no other, the lessee was enjoined from conducting therein the business of an auctioneer. An auctioneer does not purchase at all; he sells on commission.

In Mollett v. Robinson, L. R., 7 C. P. 104, BLACKBURN, J., defines a jobber as one who buys at a fraction below the market price and sells at a fraction above that price.

He is defined in the law dictionaries (Bouv. Repalcé & L.) to be one who buys and sells articles for others, which is inconsistent with the cases cited.

2. Where one of the conditions of a race was that the riders should be "gentlemen, farmers or tradesmen, never having ridden as regular jockeys or paid riders, one who had been in the habit of riding in races, but had never been paid for so doing, though he had received his expenses, is not a regular jockey or paid rider, which evidently means one who follows the business of

- and Recognizances, 1015k.
 6. Joinder of Statutory and Common Law Actions, 1015l.
 III. Joinder of Actions in Different Rights, 1015m.
 1. Actions By Executors or Administrators, 1015m.
 2. Actions Against Executors or Administrators, 1015p.
 3. Actions By and Against Husband and Wife, 1015s.
 4. Actions By and Against Partners, Guardians, Assignees, etc., 1015n.
 5. Effect of Code Provisions

- Upon Joinder of Actions in Different Rights, 1015x.
 IV. Joinder, When Permitted—When Compulsory—Consolidation of Action, 1015y.
 V. Remedy for Misjoinder, 1015z².
 1. At Common Law, 1015z³.
 2. Under the Codes, 1015z⁴.
 VI. Joinder of Causes of Action in Louisiana, 1015z⁵.
 VII. Joinder of Plea, 1015z⁶.
 VIII. Joinder in Demurrer and in Issue, 1015z¹².
 IX. Joinder of Counties, 1015z¹².

the power of the defendant to unite in his plea or answer several distinct pleas and defences.¹ Joinder by the plaintiff may be of counts or causes of action in the same or in different rights.

II. JOINDER OF CAUSES OF ACTION IN THE SAME RIGHT—1. Same Cause in Different Counts—(a) AT COMMON LAW.—At common law a plaintiff in personal actions was allowed to set forth a single cause of action in as many different counts as he desired,² provided that there was a substantial variation between the counts.³ Each count was required to disclose a distinct right of action, a jockey for a livelihood. Walmsley v. Mathews, 3 M. & G. 133.

1. For joinder in equity pleadings, see EQUITY PLEADINGS, vol. 6, p. 758; subtitle, IV. A, 3 b. MULTIFARIOUSNESS. For joinder of counts in an indictment, see INDICTMENT, vol. 10, p. 599; subtitle, VIII, 16. For joinder of parties, see PARTIES TO ACTIONS. See also the titles above referred to.

2. Joinder of Counts Stating Same Cause of Action at Common Law—In England, before the pleading rules, Hil. T. 4 W. IV. r. v. 5 (1833-4), a declaration might consist of numerous counts, and the jury might assess entire or distinct damages on all the counts; and it was usual, particularly in assumpsit and in actions on the case, to set forth the plaintiff's cause of action in various shapes in different counts, so that if he failed in the proof of one count he might succeed on another. Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.), p. *424; 3 Black. Com. *295; Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), p. 159, § 5, and p. 513; Stephens on Pleading (9th Am. ed.) App., note 4; Onslow v. Horne, 3 Wils. 177, 185; King v. Archbishop of York, 1 Ad. & Ell. 394 (28 E. C. L.); Steuben Co. Bank v. Stephens, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 243; Neal v. Lewis, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 204.

The plaintiff may, also, for the same cause or right of action, insert different counts, setting forth the cause or right of action in various shapes. Shepherd v. Staten, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 79.

Where in trespass for breaking the plaintiff's close and carrying away his chattels, the declaration does not contain account for only taking the chattels, the plaintiff cannot recover for taking them unless he proves a breach of the close. Ropps v. Barker, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 239.

3. Variations in Counts Stating Same Cause of Action.—The variations between these counts must be substantial, otherwise they might be stricken out. Chitty's Plead. (16th ed.), p. *424; Gould's Plead. (5th ed.), p. 159, 160; 3 Black. Com. (Shars.) *295, note 5; Tidd's Practice (3rd Am. ed.), *616; Meeke v. Oxlade, 1 New Rep. (Bos. & Pull.) 289; People v. New York C. P., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 113. But where there is a material difference between the counts, the courts will not determine upon affidavits whether they are well founded in point of fact, for if not, the plaintiff will be sufficiently punished by being deprived of costs, on such of the counts as are found for the defendant. Tidd's Practice (3rd Am. ed.) *616.

though it was sufficient to state matters of inducement in the first count and refer to them in the subsequent counts.¹

(b) STATUTORY AND CODE MODIFICATIONS.—The abuse of the right exercised by the plaintiff at common law of joining different counts setting forth the same cause of action, led in England, to the adoption in 1833-4 of the Hilary Rules, which prohibited such joinders, unless a distinct subject matter of complaint is intended to be established in respect of each,² while the code adopted in England in 1873 requires that each paragraph shall as nearly as may be contain a separate allegation.³ In the United States, the

1. Form of Counts Stating Same Cause of Action at Common Law.—"In framing a second or subsequent count for the same cause of action, care was, and still is, essential to avoid any unnecessary repetition of the same matter, and by an inducement in the first count, applying any matter to the following counts and by referring concisely in the subsequent counts to such inducement, much unnecessary prolixity may be avoided." Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.), *428; Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), p. 158, § 3 and p. 513.

If the prior counts in a declaration in assumpsit set out a consideration, and the last count refers to them, and is founded on the consideration specified in them, it incorporates so much thereof in the last count as to render it valid. Dent v. Scott, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 28.

In declaring upon a contract, which is sufficiently stated in the first count, it need not be repeated in the subsequent counts of the same declaration, but it is enough to declare that it is the same as is set forth in the first count. Griswold v. Nat. Ins. Co., 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 96.

In an action of slander, it is unnecessary to preface each count with all the inducements and allegations contained in the first; a reference in the second count to the allegations in the first is sufficient. Chitty's Pleadings, supra; Loomis v. Swick, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 205; Nestle v. Van Slyck, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 282.

"In order to avoid any objection on the ground of duplicity, it is advisable to insert in the second count for the same cause of action the word 'other goods,' etc. Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) *429; Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), p. 513. But the second count in a writ need not allege that it is for a cause of action other than that of the first count. Ware v. Webb, 32 Me. 41.

2. Same Cause in Different Counts—

Hilary Rules.—The right to state the same cause of action in different counts was so abused and produced such redundancy in pleading, and the necessity for permitting such duplicity having been removed by the statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV, ch. 42, § 23, giving the judge power to amend pending the trial of an action in almost every case of variance, not prejudicing the opponent on the trial of the merits, the rules adopted at Hilary Term, 4 Wm. 4, Reg. 5 (1833-4), after reciting that consequence, then provided that "Several counts shall not be allowed, unless a distinct subject matter of complaint is intended to be established in respect of each. . . . Therefore counts founded on one and the same principal matter of complaint, but varied in statement, description or circumstances only, are not to be allowed." Then follows a number of examples in which it is expressly stated that several counts would not be allowed, viz: contract alleged to be with and without a condition; nondelivery of bill in payment and price of goods sold; not accepting and paying for goods sold; bills and notes, and the consideration therefor; policy of insurance; on policy and common counts to recover premium paid; charter party; demise and use and occupation; misfeasance; nonfeasance; trespass; indebitatus, assumpsit and account stated. But it was expressly provided that "The rule which forbids the use of several counts is not to be considered as precluding the plaintiff from alleging more breaches than one of the same contract in the same count." See these rules given at length in Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.), *430; Stephens on Pleading (9th Am. ed.), App., note (57), p. lxxvii.

3. English Code.—The English procedure act of 1873 (38 & 39 Vict., ch. 77), order XIX, § 4, provides that "Every pleading shall contain, as con-codes have been construed, except in Indiana and Iowa, to prohibit setting forth the same cause of action in different counts,¹ except where that would harass and affect injuriously the rights of the plaintiff.² When such counts are erroneously joined, the remedy is by a motion to elect and strike out, not by demurrer.³ In some other States not practicing under code rules, there are, nevertheless, statutory provisions which seem applicable to this question.⁴

cisely as may be, a statement of the material facts on which the party pleading relies; . . . such statement being divided into paragraphs, . . . and each paragraph containing, as nearly as may be, a separate allegation." L. R., 10 Stat. 796.

1. Same Causes of Action Stated Differently under the United States Codes.

"Since the codes require the facts to be averred as they actually took place it does not in general permit a single cause of action to be set forth in two or more different forms or counts." Pomeroy's Remedial Rights and Remedies (2nd ed.) 640, § 576. Bliss on Code Pleading (2nd ed.) 197, § 119. Nevada Co. & S. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 37 Cal. 282; People v. Slocum, 1 Idaho 62; Stockbridge Iron Co. v. Mellen, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 439; Sipperly v. Troy & Boston R. Co., 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 83; Churchill v. Churchill, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 552; Lackey v. Vanderbilt, 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 155; Dunning v. Thomas, 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 281; Dickens v. N. Y. Central R. Co., 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 228; Ford v. Mattice, 14 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 91; Whittier v. Bates, 2 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 477; Nash v. McCauley, 9 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 159; Pickering v. Miss. Val. Nat. Tel. Co., 47 Mo. 457; Sturges v. Burton, 8 Ohio St. 215; Ferguson v. Gilbert, 16 Ohio St. 88; Muzzy v. Ledlie, 23 Wis. 445.

In Indiana, as the plaintiff is not required to swear to his complaint, he may state one cause of action in different forms. Snyder v. Snyder, 25 Ind. 399; Stearns v. Dubois, 55 Ind. 257.

And in Iowa, the common law rule allowing the same cause to be pleaded in different forms applies. Pearson v. Milwaukee & St. Paul R., 45 Iowa 497; VanBrunt v. Mathers, 48 Iowa 503.

2. United States Codes Exception.—

"Under peculiar circumstances, however, when the exact nature of the plaintiff's right and of the defendant's liability depends upon facts in the sole possession of the defendant and which will not be developed until the trial, the plaintiff may set forth the same single cause of action in varied counts and with differing averments so as to meet the possible proofs which will for the first time fully appear on the trial." Pomeroy's Remedial Rights and Remedies (2nd ed.) 640, § 576; Whitney v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 27 Wis. 327. Compare Brinkman v. Hunter, 73 Mo. 173; Williams v. Lowe, 4 Neb. 382; Jones v. Palmer, 1 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 442; Smith v. Douglass, 15 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 266; Meade v. Mali, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 347; Birdseye v. Smith, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 217; Longprey v. Yates, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 433; Velie v. N. C. Ins. Co., 65 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 1; Supervisors of La Pointe v. O'Malley, 46 Wis. 35.

3. Remedy for Such Misjoinder.—The misjoinder must be made to appear by affidavit, and the remedy is by motion to elect and not by demurrer. M. H. etc. Co. v. Maupin, 79 Ky. 101; Hawley v. Wilkinson, 18 Minn. 525; Hause v. Hause, 29 Minn. 252; Farmers' Bank v. Bayliss, 41 Mo. 274; Strange v. Manning, 99 N. Car. 165; s. c., 5 S. E. Rep. 900; Hillman v. Hillman, 14 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 456; Fern v. Vanderbilt, 13 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 72; Sturges v. Burton, 8 Ohio St. 215; Muzzy v. Ledlie, 23 Wis. 445; Brown v. Carbonate Bank, 34 Fed. Rep. (U. S. C. C. Col.) 776.

4. Statutory Regulations in Other States.—In Pennsylvania and Mississippi, where the practice is not under code regulations, there are statutes providing that the plaintiff's declaration or complaint shall consist of "a concise statement of his demand," or "a statement of facts constituting the cause of action in ordinary and concise language without repetition." See Rev. Code Mississippi 1880, § 1536. Laws of Pennsylvania 1887, p. 271. These provisions would seem to forbid a statement of the same cause of action in different forms.

In Massachusetts, it is provided that "one count only need be inserted for each cause of action, but any num-

2. Joinder of Different Causes of Action—(a) ADMISSIBILITY OF IN PERSONAL ACTIONS AT COMMON LAW—(1) General Principle.—While the right of a plaintiff to join different causes of action in one declaration at common law in certain cases has long been recognized, the rule governing such joinder has been variously stated at various times.¹ The latest authorities state the rule to ber of breaches may be assigned in each count, and where the nature of the case requires it, breaches may be assigned in the alternative. Pub. Stat. 1882, p. 964-5, § 2, par. 4. This does not prevent a statement of the same cause in different forms. Lovett v. Salem & South D. R. Co., 9 Allen (Mass.) 557; Downs v. Hawley, 112 Mass. 237.

In Tennessee, "the declaration shall state the plaintiff's cause of action. It may contain several statements or counts." Code 1884, p. 675, § 3606.

1. Joinder of Different Causes of Action at Common Law—History of Principle.—Perhaps the earliest attempt to lay down a rule regulating joinder of actions is to be found in 34-35 Charles II (1683), where an action had been brought in which plaintiff declared first on a contract to deliver merchantable goods and a breach, and second in a sale of goods with a warranty as to merchantable quality and a delivery of unmerchantable goods. Defendant demurred. The court allowed the joinder, basing the rule upon the different process required in bringing the suit. The court said: "Causes upon contract which are in the right and causes upon a tort cannot be joined, for they do not only require several pleas, but there is several process, the one summons, attachment, etc., the other attachment, etc." Denison v. Ralphson, 1 Vent. 365. See Gilbert's History of the Common Pleas, p. 6.

In 1749 LEE, C. J., said: "The true way to judge of this matter is this, that whenever the same process and judgment are in two counts, they may be joined; otherwise they cannot." Duke of Bedford v. Alcock, 1 Wils. 248, 252.

WILMOT, C. J., in 1766 laid down the rule as follows: "The true test to try whether two counts can be joined in the same declaration is to consider and see whether there be the same judgment in both, and not whether they require the same plea, and wherever there is the same judgment in both I think they may well be joined." Dickon v. Clifton, 2 Wils. 319, 321.

This rule was held to be too large and not universally true, though a good rule among others to determine the question in Mast v. Goodson, 3 Wils. 348, 354 (1772).

In 1786 BULLER, J., criticised this as follows: "Perhaps the rule of judging whether two counts can be joined, by considering whether the same judgment can be given on both, is not true in its extent; but by adding another requisite it is universally true. For wherever the same plea may be pleaded and the same judgment given on two counts, they may be joined in the same declaration." Brown v. Dixon, 1 Tenn. Rep. 274, 276.

In 1836 in the United States, CHURCH, J., went further still: "The general rule on this subject, or the rule controlling the greatest class of cases, probably is, that causes of action, which at common law require the same judgment and the same general issue, may be joined in several counts in one declaration. But to this rule there are many exceptions. Therefore actions of debt on bond and covenant broken, cannot be joined, although the general issue of non est factum and the common law judgment of miser cordia are common to both. Neither can actions of account or replevin, or an action on book, in this State, be joined with any other cause of action. And the reason is that the forms of proceeding in some, as well as the essential nature and forms of the judgment in others, of these actions are different from the forms of proceeding and judgments in all other cases." Whipple v. Fuller, 11 Conn. 582, 586.

And in the fifth edition of Saunders' Reports, published in 1846, the annotator, having criticised at some length the rule that counts may be joined wherever the same plea may be pleaded and the same judgment given (vol. 2, p. 117 d), concludes his note as follows: "The result of all these cases seems to be that wherever the same plea may be pleaded and the same judgment given in all the counts of the declaration; or whenever the counts are of the same nature, and the same judgment is given be that at common law, when the same plea may be pleaded and the same judgment given on all the counts of the declaration, or whenever the counts are of the same nature, and the same judgment is to be given on them all, though the pleas be different, as in the case of debt upon bond and on simple contract, they may be joined, the best test, perhaps, being the nature of the causes of action.¹

(2) When and When Not Admissible in the Personal Actions.—

At common law, the plaintiff in any of the personal actions may join as many counts as he has causes of action of the same nature.² This has been expressly decided in all the personal actions ex contractu, viz., assumpsit; ³ on them all, though the pleas be different, as in the case of debt upon bond and on a mutuatus already mentioned, they may well be joined." Coryton v. Lithebye, 2 Saund. (5th ed.), p. 117 h.

Mr. Chitty, having used the language in the text and quoted the above authority, then says: "Perhaps the latter, that is, the nature, of the causes of action is the best test or criterion by which to decide as to the joinders of counts." Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) * 222.

Mr. Tidd concludes his review of the question by saying, "The nature of the causes of action, therefore, should be attended to in order to determine whether different counts may or may not be joined in the same declaration; and, with the exceptions which have been noticed, it may safely be laid down as a general rule that wherever the causes of action are of the same nature, and may properly be the subject of counts in the same species of action, they may be joined, otherwise they cannot. Tidd's Practice (9th ed.) * 12.

1. Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) * 222; Tidd's Practice (9th ed.) 12. See also Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), p. 512. An article on Gould's Pleadings in 8 Am. Jurist (No. 15), p. 74, 92-97.

For statement and applications of the general rule as to joinder, see Pettigrew v. Pettigrew, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 580; Berry v. Linton, 1 Ark. 252; Mahaffey v. Petty, 1 Kelly (Ga.) 261; Hays v. Borders, 1 Gilm. (Ill.) 46; Brady v. Spurck, 27 Ill. 478; Williams v. Bramble, 2 Md. 313, 318; Fairfield v. Burt, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 244; Tregent v. Maybee, 54 Mich. 226; Morrison v. Bedell, 22 N. H. 234, 243; Lovett v. Pell, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 369; Brumbaugh v. Keith, 31 Pa. St. 327; Angus v. Dickerson, Meigs (Tenn.) 459. See also Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, title ACTIONS, vol. 1, p. 184 b; subtitle 10, Joinder, and also title DECLARATION, vol. 5, p. 359; subtitle 5 (1), Joinder of Counts.

2. See Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) * 222; Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.) 512; Tidd's Practice (3rd Am. ed.) * 11, 12.

3. Assumpsit.—The common counts in assumpsit may be joined with a special count. Sheldon v. Cox, 5 Dowl. & Ryl. 277; Struthers v. Drexel, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1293; Boylston v. Sherran, 31 Ala. 538; Intendant and Town Council of Livingston v. Pippin, 31 Ala. 542; Tuskaloosa County v. Logan, 57 Ala. 296; Cobb v. Charter, 32 Conn. 358; Hitt v. Lippitt, Geo. Dec., part 2, 89; Powell v. Kinney, 6 Blf. (Ind.) 359; Consolidation Coal Co. v. Shannon, 34 Md. 144; Appleman v. Michael, 43 Md. 269, 282; Hart v. Summers, 38 Mich. 399; Tregent v. Maybee, 54 Mich. 226; Perrine v. Hankinson, 6 Halst. (N. J. L.) 181; Ruckman v. Bergholz, 8 Vr. (37 N. J. L.) 437; Bruen v. Ogden, 3 Haw. (18 N. J. L.) 124; Rogers v. Phinney, 1 Gr. (N. J. L.) 1; Jack v. McKee, 9 Pa. St. 225; Bash v. Dash, 9 Pa. St. 260; McDowell v. Oyer, 21 Pa. St. 417; Walter v. Walter, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 292; Kennaird v. Jones, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 183.

This practice was common to all good pleaders, because a plaintiff may, in many cases, recover in a common count, though there were a special contract, and a common count may therefore sometimes save a verdict. Stephens on Pleading (9th Am. ed.), Second App., note (4), p. cxix.

A plaintiff may join counts on different promissory notes, when the maker is the same and all payable to plaintiff. Berry v. Ferguson, 58 Ala. 314; Hanger v. Dodge, 24 Ark. 205; Little v. Blunt, 13

case; ¹ covenant; ² debt; ³

Pick. (Mass.) 473; Wilson v. Tucker, 9 R. I. 137.

Since the judgment given on a note containing a waiver of exemption is different from the judgment on a claim without such waiver, counts on such different claims cannot be joined. McCrummen v. Campbell, 2 South Rep. (Ala.) 482; s. c., 82 Ala. 566.

The common counts may be joined with a special count on a promissory note. Bogardus v. Trial, 1 Scam. (Ill.) 63; Felton v. Dickinson, 10 Mass. 287; Melledge v. Boston Iron Co., 5 Cush. (Mass.) 158; Beardsley v. Southmayd, 2 Greene (14 N. J. L.) 534; Halleran v. Field, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 38; Kennel v. Muncey, Peck (Tenn.) 273. Money loaned at different times to same person may all be recovered in one action by joining different counts to cover each loan. Hinsdale v. Eells, 3 Conn. 377.

In Texas, suit may be brought upon a judgment obtained in a justice's court which remains unsatisfied. Several of such judgments may be joined and sued upon in the district court. Lander v. Rounsaville, 12 Tex. 195. But when the defendant appeals, he cannot join the several judgments in one certiorari, at least not in a case where some of the judgments sought to be joined are not within the jurisdiction of the county courts. G. H. & S. A. R. R. Co. v. Ware, 2 Ct. of App. C. C. (Tex.) § 357.

A count charging a sale of stock to defendant at a fixed price which defendant promised to pay, may be joined with a count that defendant as agent undertook and promised to sell the same. Martin v. Stille; 3 Whart. (Pa.) 336.

Counts in book debt and assumpsit cannot be joined in Connecticut. Phelps v. Hurd, 31 Conn. 445.

Upon the question when the action, of assumpsit lies, see Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 1, p. 882, et seq., title ASSUMPSIT.

1. Case.—Different counts in case may be joined. Hensworth v. Fowkes, 1 Nev. & Man. 321; Gillet v. Stone, 1 Scam. (Ill.) 539; Cole v. Sprowl, 35 Me. 161; Pierce v. Thompson, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 193; Lansing v. Wiswall, 5 Denio (N. Y.) 213; Miles v. Oldfield, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 423; Lane v. Hogan, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 290.

Counts for breaches of a contract and counts for rescinding the contract itself cannot be joined, since the one affirms the contract and the other denies it. Toledo, Wabash & Western R. Co. v. Jacksonville Depot Building Co., 63 Ill. 308; Heastings v. McGee, 66 Pa. St. 384. But a count for a rescission provided for by contract and for a rescission because of the fraud would not be repugnant. Pearsoll v. Chapin, 44 Pa. St. 9. Upon the question when this action lies, see Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, title TRESPASS ON THE CASE.

2. Covenant.—Breaches of the various covenants contained in a deed may all be joined in the same action. Brady v. Spurck, 27 Ill. 478; Angell v. Kelsey, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 16; Bendernagle v. Cocks, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 207.

In actions on contract in a penal sum for performance of covenants or agreements, and in actions of covenant, several breaches may be assigned, and in defence, performance generally, both in affirmative and negative covenants, may be alleged. Rev. Stat. Maine 1883, p. 697, § 20. Upon the question when this action lies, see Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 4, p. 463, et seq., title COVENANT, ACTION OF.

3. Debt.—The plaintiff may declare upon several bonds in the same declaration. Cabell v. Vaughan, 1 Saund. 288 §; Jarrett v. Nickell, 4 W. Va. 276; Jones v. Cox, 7 Mo. 173. In an action of debt claims on a specialty and on a simple contract may be joined. Parker v. Taylor, Cro. Car. 316; Barclay v. Moore, 17 Ala. 634; Tillotson v. Stipp, 1 Blf. (Ind.) 77; Flood v. Yandes, 1 Blf. (Ind.) 102; Farnham v. Hay, 3 Blf. (Ind.) 167; Brown v. Warnock, 5 Dana (Ky.) 492, 494; Patterson v. Chalmers, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 595; Mardis v. Terrell, 1 Walk. (Miss.) 327; Wagle v. Bartley, 11 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 223; Eib v. Pindall, 5 Rand. (Va.) 109.

In Pennsylvania, count expressly laid in debt cannot be joined with counts expressly laid in covenant, because the judgments are different. Brumbaugh v. Keith, 31 Pa. St. 327. But in an action of debt, claims on a specialty and in a simple contract may be joined. Wagle v. Bartley, 11 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 223.

Counts for debt upon a contract implied in law may be joined with a count on an express contract. Duke of Bedford v. Alcock, 1 Wils. 248, 252; Mahan v. Sherman, 8 Blf. (Ind.) 63; Norris v. School District, 12 Me. 293; Smith v. First Cong. Meeting House in Lowell, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 178; Van Deusen v.

replevin;¹ scire facias;² trespass;³ and trover.⁴ But a count in one form of action may not be joined with a count in another form of action,⁵ except that trover, being in its nature an action

Blum, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 229, 231; Gray v. Johnson, 14 N. H. 414.

A count on a judgment may be joined with a count on a simple contract. Stewart & Co. v. Sonneborn, 49 Ala. 178; Nat. Exchange Bank v. Abell, 63 Me. 346; De Proux v. Sargent, 70 Me. 266; Hogsett v. Ellis, 17 Mich. 351; Downer v. Shaw, 23 N. H. 125; Morrison v. Bedell, 22 N. H. 234, 243; Union Cotton Mfy. v. Lobdell, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 462. Upon the question when this action lies, see Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 5, p. 165, title DEBT, ACTION OF.

1. Replevin.—"A man may count of several takings, part at one day and place and part at another." Buller's Nisi Prius 54. Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium (7th ed.), 156 [*68], note (a).

See an early case (1807) to the contrary. Hart v. Fitzgerald, 2 Mass. 509.

Where part of the property claimed by a writ of replevin cannot be found, and there is personal service, the plaintiff may add a count in trover. Dart v. Horn, 20 Ill. 212.

2. Scire Facias.—See Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.), *222.

A number of judgments against the same person may be consolidated and revived in one amicable action of scire facias. Reed's Appeal, 7 Pa. St. 65; Yeager's Appeal, 18 Atl. Rep. (August 28th. 1889), 137. But when several writs have issued, the court refused to consolidate them in Mickle v. Brewer, 3 Hal. (8 N. J. L.) 85. See also Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, titles JUDGMENTS; SCIRE FACIAS.

3. Trespass.—"And in personal actions the plaintiff may comprehend several wrongs, and several causes of actions, as one action of trespass for several trespasses committed at several days and in several places." Buckmere's Case, 8 Coke *87 b; Oglesby v. Stodghill, 23 Ga. 590; Wilson v. Johnson, 1 G. Greene (Iowa) 147; Shepherd v. Slaten, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 79. They may be included in one count with a continuando. Butler v. Hedges, 1 Lev. 210; Monckton v. Pashley, 2 Ld. Raym. 974; Pierce v. Pickens, 16 Mass. 470; Folger v. Fields, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 93; Smith v. Brazelton, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 44. Thus counts for a trespass q. c. f. and for a rescue may be joined.

Alwayes v. Broome, 2 Lutw., fo. 1259; s. c., 1 Ld. Raym. 83; Baker v. Dumbolton, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 240.

Counts in trespass q. c. f. and for debauching plaintiff's daughter, beating his servant etc., may be joined. Woodward v. Walton, 2 New Rep. (Bos. & Full.) 476; Ditcham v. Bond, 2 M. & Sel. 436.

Counts for seizing and carrying away several slaves at different times. Kennedy v. McArthur, 5 Ala. 151.

The plaintiff, in actions of trespass, may join counts for trespass to land and for trespass to person, and to personal property, and in such case, each count being an independent cause of action, he may recover upon such counts as are sustained by poof, although he fail as to others. Reed v. Peoria and Oquawka R. Co., 18 Ill. 403, 404; Arnold v. Maudlin, 6 Blf. (Ind.) 187; Sawyer v. Goodwin, 34 Me. 419, 421; Barton Coal Co. v. Cox, 39 Md. 1, 17; Parker v. Parker, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 236; Bishop v. Baker, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 517; McClees v. Sikes, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 310; Ripley v. Miller, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 479.

Upon the question when this action lies, see Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, title TRESPASS.

4. Trover.—Several causes of action in trover may be joined. Munson v. Munson, 24 Conn. 115. See Wheeler v. Wallace, 53 Mich. 364.

Upon the question when this action lies, see Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, title TROVER.

5. Assumpsit and case cannot be joined. Corbett v. Packington, 6 B. & C. 268; Orton v. Butler, 2 Chitty 343. Not even under the Alabama code. Munter v. Rogers, 50 Ala. 283; Wilson v. Stewart, 69 Ala. 302; Chambers v. Seay, 73 Ala. 372. In Connecticut, allowed by act of 1875. See Sellick v. Hall, 47 Conn. 260; McWheeny v. Waterbury City, 46 Conn. 295; Noetting v. Wright, 72 Ill. 390; Bodley v. Roop, 6 Blf. (Ind.) 158; Carstarphen v. Graves, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 435; White v. Swell, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 425; Friend v. Dunks, 37 Mich. 25; Friend v. Dunks, 39 Mich. 733; Crooker v. Willard, 28 N. H. 134; Peabody v. Kinsley, 40 N. H. 416; Green v. Morris & Essex R. Co. 4 Zab. (24 N. J. L.) 486; Wilson v. Marsh, 1 on the case, may be joined with case,¹ and with the further sin-

Johns. (N. Y.) 503; Martin v. Mayor etc. of Brooklyn, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 545; Penna. R. v. Zug, 47 Pa. St. 480; Noble v. Laley, 50 Pa. St. 281; Tucker v. Gordon, 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 136; Holland v. Pack, Peck (Tenn.) 151; Creel v. Brown; 1 Rob. (Va.) 265.

Counts for damages for breach of contract not to sue and for malicious prosecution held improperly joined. Clinton v. Hopkins, 2 Root (Conn.) 225.

Assumpsit cannot be joined with covenant. Phillips & Colby Construction Co. v. Seymour, 91 U. S. 646; Fletcher v. Piatt, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 522; Lovett v. Pell, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 369, rev. 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 546; Maguire v. Rabenan, 16 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 479. See Smaltz v. Hancock, 118 Pa. St. 550.

Assumpsit and debt cannot be joined. Brill v. Neele, 3 Barn. & Ald. 208; Metcalf v. Robinson, 2 McLean (U. S. C. C.) 363; Cruikshank v. Brown, 5 Gilm. (10 Ill.) 75; McGinnity v. Laguerune, 5 Gilm. (10 Ill.) 101; Adams v. Hardin, 19 Ill. 273; Guinnip v. Carter, 68 Ill. 206; Flood v. Yandes, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 102; Canton Nat. Bld. Asso. v. Weber, 34 Md. 669; Smith v. State, 66 Md. 215; s. c., 7 Atl. Rep. 49; Ruten v. Hinchman, 5 Dutch. (29 N. J. L.) 112; American Line Thread Co. v. Sheldon, 2 Vr. (31 N. J. L.) 420.

Assumpsit and trespass cannot be joined. A demand for damages caused by a trespass on land cannot be joined with a demand for the use and occupation of such land. McLendon v. Atlanta and West Point R. Co., 54 Ga. 203. Compare Oglesby v. Stodghill, 23 Ga. 590.

Assumpsit and trover cannot be joined. Taylor v. Holmes, Sir Thomas Raymond, 233; Dalston v. Eyenston, 12 Mod. 73; s. c., 1 Salk. 10; Dalson v. Tyson, 3 Salk. 204; Copeland v. Flowers, 21 Ala. 472. Not even under the Alabama Code. Wilson v. Stewart, 69 Ala. 302; Mobile Life Ins. Co. v. Randall, 74 Ala. 170; Beebe v. Knapp, 28 Mich. 53; Howe v. Cook, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 29.

Contra in New Hampshire, when for a single cause of action. Rutherford v. Whitcher, 60 N. H. 110; Peaslee v. Dudley, 63 N. H. 220.

Covenant and case may be joined if for a single cause of action. Crawford v. Parsons, 63 N. H. 438.

Case and trespass cannot be joined. Courtney v. Collet, 1 Ld. Raym. 272; Sheppard v. Furniss, 19 Ala. 760; Bell's Admr. v. Troy, 35 Ala. 184. Not even under the Alabama statute. Guilford & Co. v. Kendall, 42 Ala. 651; Cadwell v. Farrell, 28 Ill. 438; Dalson v. Bradberry, 50 Ill. 82; Dale Mfg. Co. v. Grant, 5 Vr. (34 N. J. L.) 138; Sollenberger v. Schnader, 4 L. Barr (Pa.), Dec. 14th, 1872; s. c., 1 Kulp (Pa.) 6; Brant v. Lorenze, 17 Phila. (Pa.) 2.

Contra in Maryland, because the judgment in both actions is the same. Williams v. Bramble, 2 Md. 313; Gent v. Cole, 38 Md. 110, 113.

Actions for injuries to property and for personal injuries could not be joined. Boenun v. Taylor, 19 Conn. 122; Havens v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co., 26 Conn. 220.

Case and debt cannot be joined. Confrey v. Stark, 73 Ill. 187, 190. Contra, Whitaker v. Warren, 60 N. H. 20.

Trespass and trover may not be joined. Weeton v. Woodcock, 5 Mee. & Wel. 587; Belden v. Granniss, 27 Conn. 511, 514; Crenshaw v. Moore, 10 Ga. 384; Hines v. Kinnison, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 119; Cooper v. Bissell, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 146.

Contra in Maryland, because the judgment in both actions is the same. Williams v. Bramble, 2 Md. 313; Gent v. Cole, 38 Md. 110, 113. And in Texas, because the common law forms of pleading are not recognized, and the two actions, though distinct, are not inconsistent. Carter v. Wallace, 2 Tex. 206.

Trover and detinue may not be joined. Kettle v. Bromsall, Willes 118. Not even under the Common Law Procedure act of 1860, unless specially allowed. Mockford v. Taylor, 10 C. B., N. S. 209 (115 E. C. L. R.).

Forcible entry and unlawful detainer cannot be joined. Grice v. Ferguson, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 36; McGuire v. Cook, 13 Ark. (8 Eng.) 448; Liddon v. Hodnett, 22 Fla. 271.

In California, under the code, it has been held that forcible entry and detainer constitute separate causes of action which may be joined if separately stated. Shelby v. Houston, 38 Cal. 410; Valencia v. Crouch, 32 Cal. 339; Treat v. Forsyth, 40 Cal. 484. See Colton v. Jones, 7 Robt. (N. Y. Super. Ct.) 164.

1. Case and trover may be joined. Brown v. Dixon, 1 Term Rep. 274, 277; Mast v. Goodson, 3 Wils. 348; Smith v.

gular exception that detinue, though held to be an action ex delicto, may be joined with debt, an action ex contractu, but may not be joined with an action ex delicto.¹ In certain cases at common law, sounding in either tort or contract, the plaintiff was allowed to sue either in case or assumpsit, and could join other causes of action in the same form as that in which he elected to bring suit,²

Goodwin, 4 B. & Ad. 413; Samuel v. Judin, 6 East 333; Whyte v. Rysden, Cro. Car. 20; Dobbin v. Foyles, 2 Cr. (C. C. U. S.) 65; Dixon v. Barclay, 22 Ala. 370; Wilkinson v. Moseley, 30 Ala. 562; Rees v. Coats, 65 Ala. 256; Elmore v. Simon, 67 Ala. 526; Mobile Life Ins. Co. v. Randall, 74 Ala. 170; Ferrier v. Wood, 9 Ark. 85; Southern Express Co. v. Palmer & Co., 48 Ga. 85; Hayes v. Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., 125 Ill. 626; s. c., 18 N. E. Rep. 322; Googins v. Gilmore, 47 Me. 9; Moulton v. Witherell, 52 Me. 237; McConnell v. Leighton, 74 Me. 415; Ayer v. Bartlett, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 156, 161; Beebe v. Knapp, 28 Mich. 53; Bearss v. Preston, 66 Mich. 11; McCahan v. Hirst, 7 Watts (Pa.) 175; Winder v. Northampton Bank, 2 Pa. St. 446; Patterson v. Anderson, 40 Pa. St. 359; Horsely v. Branch, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 199.

1. Debt and Detinue.—"So, debt and detinue may be joined in the same writ, because there are writs in the register in which they are both comprised in the same writ." Bacon's Abridgment, tit. Actions in General, C., p. 69. "So debt and detinue may be joined in the same action, for they are of the same nature; though in 5 Mod. 89 [92], Dalton v. Janson, it was said by the court that it seems strange that debt and detinue should be joined, because those actions have different judgments." Coryton v. Lithebye, 2 Saund. 117 d. "In order to join debt and detinue it seems they must be both founded on contract." Tidd's Practice (9th ed.) *11, note b. Counts in debt and detinue were held to be properly joined in Calvert v. Marlow, 18 Ala. 67; Rucker v. Hamilton, 3 Dana (Ky.) 36, 44; Whitney v. Whitney, 5 Dana (Ky.) 327, 330. See Morrison v. Bedell, 22 N. H. 234, 243; Dame v. Dame, 43 N. H. 37, 43.

Detinue is usually considered an action ex delicto. See the article on DETINUE, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 5, p. 651, § 1.

Trover and detinue may not be joined. Kettle v. Bromsall, Willes 118; Hood v. Hanning, 4 Dana (Ky.) 21. Not even under the Common Law Procedure act of 1860, unless specially allowed. Mockford v. Taylor, 10 C. B., N. S. 209 (115 E. C. L.).

2. Causes of Action Joined with Either Counts in Assumpsit or Case.—In 1802, in an action against a common carrier for negligence, LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C. J., having examined the authorities and decided that the action could sound either in tort or contract, continues: "What inconvenience is there in suffering the party to allege his gravamen, if he please, as consisting in a breach of duty arising out of an employment for hire, and to consider that breach of duty as tortious negligence, instead of considering the same circumstances as forming a breach of promise implied from the same consideration of hire. By allowing it to be considered in either way, according as the neglect of duty or the breach of promise is relied upon as the injury, a multiplicity of actions is avoided; and the plaintiff, according as the convenience of his case requires, frames his principal count in such a manner as either to join a count in trover therewith, if he have another cause of action for the consideration of the court other than the action of assumpsit; or to join with the assumpsit the common counts, if he have another cause of action to which they are applicable." Govett v. Radnidge, 3 East 62, 70. Compare Hensworth v. Fowkes, 1 Nev. & Mann. 321; Cobb v. Charter, 32 Conn. 358; Stoyel v. Westcott, 2 Day (Conn.) 418; Bulkley v. Stover, 2 Day (Conn.) 531; Norden v. Jones, 33 Wis. 600; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 782; Southern Express Co. v. Palmer & Co., 48 Ga. 85; Tregent v. Maybee, 54 Mich. 226; Church v. Mumford, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 479; Pettit v. Sanger, 2 Pears. (Pa.) 84; Kennaird v. Jones, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 183.

So, it would seem that detinue may be either ex delicto or ex contractu. See Elger v. Lovell, 1 Woolw. (U. S. C. C.) 102; Shippen v. Tankersley, 13 Fed. Rep. 537. See the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 1, p. 882, et seq., title ASSUMPSIT; vol. 5, p. 651, et seq., title and a count will be construed, if possible, to be in the same form as those with which it is joined.¹

(b) JOINDER OF COUNTS IN MIXED AND REAL ACTIONS AT COMMON LAW.—In mixed actions at common law, joinder of actions occurs, but not frequently.² But in real actions there could be but one count.³

3. Joinder as Affected by Statutory Changes in Forms of Action.—

The joinder of different causes of action frequently depending upon the form in which the action had been brought and the several counts framed,⁴ many of the States have greatly modified⁵ the strict rules of common law pleading by abolishing the distinction between various common law actions. These States are Alabama, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Vermont, Virginia and West Virginia. The provisions upon this subject in the respective States are

DETINUE, and title TRESPASS ON THE CASE.

1. Construction of Counts.—Where a count distinctively in one form of action is joined with counts which are not distinctively in the same form of action, or in a form which may be joined therewith, and at the same time are not clearly in a different form, but allege a cause of action for which suit could be brought in the same form of action as that in which the first count is framed, or in a form which could be joined therewith, the latter counts will be construed to be in the same form of action as the first count, or in a form which could be joined therewith, and objection on the ground of a misjoinder will not be allowed after judgment. Hensworth v. Fowkes, 1 Nev. & Mann. 321; Pharr v. Bachelor, 3 Ala. 237; Cobb v. Charter, 32 Conn. 358; Talbot v. Brockman, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 555; Norris v. School District, 12 Me. 292, 298; Nat. Exchange Bank v. Abell, 63 Me. 346; Swem v. Sharretts, 48 Md. 408; Soper v. Jones, 56 Md. 503; Phila., Wilmington & Baltimore R. Co. v. Constable, 39 Md. 149; Beebe v. Knapp, 28 Mich. 53; Bruen v. Ogden, 3 Harr. (18 N. J. L.) 124; Church v. Mumford, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 479; Hinds v. Tweddle, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 278; Booth v. Farmers & Mech. Nat. Bank, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 457; Miles v. Oldfield, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 423; Smith v. Rutherford, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 358; Martin v. Stille, 3 Whart. (Pa.) 337; Angus v. Dickerson, Meigs (Tenn.) 459.

In the same manner, in an action on a false warranty, one may sue in assumption and join the common counts, or in case and join a count in deceit, etc. Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) *154; Lassiter v. Ward, 11 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 443; Chamberlain v. Robertson, 7 Jones L. (N. Car.) 12; Place v. Merrill, 14 R. I. 575. The same principle was applied to an action for a deceit in Jones v. Conoway, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 109. Though some of the counts in a warranty are in one form of action, and others in another form which cannot be joined to the first, the writ will not be quashed if there be any count which may be sustained, and a recovery in either form would be a bar to an action in the other. The warranty should be amended. McIntire v. Westmoreland Coal Co., 118 Pa. St. 108.

2. Bouvier's Law Dict., tit. JOINDER.

Several counts for waste may be joined in one action. Haycock v. Warnford, Poph. 24; s. c., Cro. Eliz. 290.

3. Bouvier's Law Dict., tit. JOINDER.

4. "The joinder in action often depends on the form of the action rather than on the subject matter or cause of action." Chitty's Pleadings (2nd ed.), vol. 1, § 222; Selby v. Hutchinson, 4 Gilm. (Ill.) 319.

5. History of Changes in Pleading.—SIR HENRY MAINE has demonstrated that law has progressed in a certain well defined manner, and this demonstration applies as well to pleading as to any other branch of the law.

A certain system of arbitrary rules having been established, new necessities are met.

1st. By the use of fictions or fictitious forms which evade the existing arbitrary rules, but appear to preserve them.

2nd. By the introduction of equitable different, but the decisions of the courts have been uniform that in so far as the distinctions between the common law actions have been abolished, the joinder of counts in different forms is admissible, but no further.¹ Many of the States that now practice under modes of procedure in which the arbitrary rules are openly and avowedly abandoned.

3rd. By the use of direct and positive legislation.

As to these three methods of modifying the arbitrary rules, SIR HENRY MAINE says: "Sometimes two of them will be seen operating together, and there are legal systems which have escaped the influence of one or other of them. But I know of no instance in which the order of their appearance has been changed or inverted." Ancient Law, ch. 2, p. 25. See Pomeroy's Remedies and Remedial Rights, introductory chapter, pp. 6-9.

1. Distinction Between Forms of Actions.—In so far as distinctions between actions have been abolished by code provisions, the common law rules as to joinder are modified.

Thus, in Alabama, the distinction between debt and assumpsit has been abolished. Knapp's Exr. v. Kingsbury, 51 Ala. 563. And "all actions on contracts, express or implied, for the payment of money, whether under seal or not, may be united in the same action." Code of Alabama, 1886, § 2672. This, however, does not permit the joinder of counts ex delicto with counts ex contractu. Munter v. Rogers, 50 Ala. 283; Whilden & Sons v. Merchants and Planters' Nat. Bank, 64 Ala. 1; Guilford & Co. v. Kendall, 42 Ala. 651; Wilson v. Stewart, 69 Ala. 302.

By the act of February 17th, 1885, page 125, in Alabama, counts in trespass and trespass on the case may be joined, when they relate to the same subject matter. Code of 1886, p. 594, § 2673.

Delaware.—The distinction between case and trespass has been abolished. Rev. Stat. 1874, p. 648, § 11.

Florida adopted a code in 1870 similar to the code of Dakota, except in (5) the words "or for waste committed thereon" were omitted. Code of Proc. of Florida, § 117. This code was repealed and the old practice revived by the act of February 24th, 1873, P. L. p. 15.

Georgia.—"All claims arising ex contractu between the same parties may be joined in the same action, and all claims arising ex delicto may in like manner be joined. Code, 1882, § 3261 (3196) (3185).

A count on an implied contract may be joined with one on a special contract. Gray v. Bass, 42 Ga. 270.

Counts for interfering with a right of common of pasturage and to recover damages for killing stock may be joined. Davis v. Gurley, 44 Ga. 582.

An action ex delicto cannot be joined with a count on an express contract, nor amended so as to be an action ex contractu. Croghan v. New York Underwriters' Agency, 53 Ga. 109.

In an action of libel a count in trespass for personal injuries in the same transaction cannot be joined. Ransone v. Christian, 56 Ga. 351.

Illinois.—The distinctions between the actions of trespass and trespass on the case are abolished. Anno. Stat. (Starr and Curtis), vol. 2, p. 1787, par. 22. Counts in case and trespass therefore may be joined. Krug v. Ward, 77 Ill. 603; Barker v. Koozier, 80 Ill. 205; but not counts in case and debt. Confrey v. Stark, 73 Ill. 187, 190.

Maine.—The distinction between the actions of trespass and trespass on the case is abolished. Rev. Stat. 1883, p. 696, § 15. Counts in case and trespass may therefore be joined. Moulton v. Smith, 32 Me. 406; but not counts in trespass q. c. f. and case. Sawyer v. Goodwin, 34 Me. 419.

Maryland.—In 1856 an act was passed providing that "causes of action of whatever kind, provided they be by and against the same parties, and in the same rights, may be joined in the same suit; but this shall not extend to replevin or ejectment." Acts of 1856, p. 147, § 33.

See Barr v. White, 22 Md. 259. This provision was, however, omitted from the codes adopted in 1860 and 1888, which, however, provided certain forms for pleading, and specially provided that those forms or the common law forms could be used at the election of the plaintiff. Pub. Gen. Laws, 1860, p. 523, § 107; Ibid, 1888, p. 1114, § 107. This provision of the code was construed to preserve the common law forms of action and not to permit of joinders forbidden at common law. Stirling v. Garritee, 18 Md. 468; Smith v. State, 66 Md. 215; s. c., 7 Atl. Rep. 49.

Massachusetts.—"There shall only be three divisions of personal actions:

"First. Actions of contract, which shall include those heretofore known as actions of assumpsit, covenant and debt, except for penalties. Second. Actions of tort, which shall include those heretofore known as actions of trespass, trespass on the case, trover, and all actions for penalties. Third. Actions of replevin.

"The form of declaring in personal actions shall be according to the following particulars:

"4. One count only need be inserted for each cause of action, but any number of breaches may be assigned in each count, and, when the nature of the case requires it, breaches may be assigned in the alternative. Two causes of action not arising on the same contract shall not be embraced in one count except in the count on an account annexed as hereinafter provided.

"5. Any number of counts for different causes of action belonging to the same division of actions may be inserted in the same declaration. Actions of contract and actions of tort shall not be joined; but when it is deemed doubtful to which of those classes a particular cause of action belongs, a count in contract may be joined with a count in tort, averring that both are for one and the same cause of action. Pub. Stat. 1882, pp. 964, 965, §§ 1, 2.

"6. The common counts shall not be used unitedly, but each one of those counts may be used in the form hereinafter prescribed, when the natural import of its terms correctly describes the cause of action. Pub. Stat. 1882, pp. 964-5, §§ 1-2."

The fifth provision above given was construed in Cunningham v. Hall, 7 Gray (Mass.) 559; Hulett v. Pixley, 97 Mass. 29; Morse v. Hutchinson, 102 Mass. 439; Atwater v. Clancy, 107 Mass. 369; Jenkins v. Bacon, 111 Mass. 373; May v. Western Union Tel. Co., 112 Mass. 90; Mason v. Field, 119 Mass. 585; Clapp v. Campbell, 124 Mass. 50; Mahon v. Blake, 125 Mass. 477; New Haven & Northampton Co. v. Campbell, 128 Mass. 104; Teague v. Irwin, 134 Mass. 303.

By the act of June 8th, 1887, to go into effect January 1st, 1888, "All civil actions, whether at law or in equity, except replevin, may be commenced by a bill or petition," and relief both at law and in equity may be asked. There is no express provision as to joinder, but it is provided that all provisions of law relating to pleadings shall apply to such proceedings so far as the same are applicable. Acts Massachusetts, 1887, p. 993, ch. 383.

Michigan.—The action of detinue is abolished. Injuries to person, personal property or rights, or to servant, child or wife, are recovered by an action of trespass on the case, whether the injury was wilful, accompanied by force or not, and whether it was direct or consequential. In all cases arising upon contracts under seal or upon judgments, when an action of covenant or of debt may be maintained, an action of assumpsit may be brought. Howell's Anno. Stat. 1882, § 7758, 7759, 7778, pp. 1942, 1945.

Notwithstanding the above provisions an action of debt may be brought upon a contract under seal or upon a judgment. Goodrich v. Leland, 18 Mich. 110. But a count on a judgment, and counts in assumpsit at common law may be joined. Hogsett v. Ellis, 17 Mich. 351.

Mississippi.—Adopted a code in 1850 similar to that of Dakota, omitting clauses 1 and 7, and the provisions as to foreclosure of mortgages. Acts of 1850, p. 57, 61, § 9.

This was omitted in the code of 1857, which contained a provision abolishing the distinction between case and trespass, p. 492, § 86. This provision does not seem to be included in the code of 1880.

New Hampshire.—There seems to be no statutory provisions, but it has been decided that counts in contract and tort may be joined in a declaration on a single cause of action. Whitaker v. Warren, 60 N. H. 20; Rutherford v. Whitaker, 60 N. H. 110; Crawford v. Parsons, 63 N. H. 438.

New Jersey.—Since the adoption of the new rules, the joinder of covenant with debt, assumpsit, or trespass on the case, for injuries arising from breaches of contract, is permissible. Smith v. Miller, 49 N. J. Law (20 Vr.) 521; s. c., 13 Atl. Rep. 39.

Pennsylvania.—"All demands heretofore recoverable in debt, assumpsit or covenant shall hereafter be recovered in one form of action, to be called an action of assumpsit. And all damages code provisions had previously passed laws abolishing the distinction between various actions, which laws had been construed in the same manner.¹ The rules of the common law seem still to prevail in New Mexico and Rhode Island, while the practice in Louisiana is peculiar, and is based on the Code Napoleon.²

heretofore recoverable in trespass, trover or trespass on the case shall hereafter be sued for and recovered in one form of action, to be called an action of trespass." Act of May 25th, 1887, P. L. 271; Bright. Purd. Dig., sup. 2369.

Tennessee.—"All contracts may be sued on in the same form of action. All wrongs and injuries to the property and person in which money only is demanded as damages, may be redressed by an action on the facts of the case. Penal actions may be brought in the same form. Whenever the facts of the case entitle the plaintiff to sue for breach of contract, or, at his election, for the wrong and injury, he may join statements of his cause of action in both forms or either." Code 1884, pp. 639, 640, §§ 3440-2.

Under the above provisions counts in assumpsit, tort, and upon the facts of the case, may be joined. L. & N. R. Co. v. Guthrie, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 432; and claims for damages by the same trespass to the freehold, to personal property, and to plaintiff himself, may be joined in the same declaration, and even in one count upon the facts of the case. Shoemaker v. Atkin, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.), 294; Burson v. Cox, 6 Bax. (Tenn.) 360. But see Waggoner v. White, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 741.

But a count in trespass for personal injuries and a count upon a contract made in settlement of plaintiff's claim for damages for such injuries, is bad for repugnancy. Henderson v. Boyd, 85 Tenn. 21.

Vermont.—"Counts in trespass may be joined with counts in trespass on the case, including trover, in one declaration, if for the same cause of action." Rev. Laws Vermont 1880, p. 228, § 912. It is not necessary that the declaration should contain any special allegation that they are for the same cause of action. Alger v. Curry, 38 Vt. 382; but it must satisfactorily appear from the declaration itself that the several counts are for the same cause of action. Black v. Howard, 50 Vt. 27; Templeton v. Clogston, 59 Vt. 628, s. c., 10 Atl. Rep. 594.

Trespass on the freehold and on the case may be joined. Hagar v. Brainerd, 44 Vt. 204.

Virginia.—"In any case in which an action of trespass will lie, there may be maintained an action of trespass on the case." Code of Virginia, 1887, p. 603, § 2901.

Under this section counts in trespass may be joined with counts in case. Parsons v. Harper, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 64; Wornack v. Circle, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 192.

West Virginia.—Same provision as in Virginia, supra. Code, p. 709, § 8. And construed in the same way. Beckwith v. Mollahan, 2 W. Va. 477; Lively v. Ballard, 2 W. Va. 496. There is but one form of action in justice courts. Code, p. 437, § 49.

1. States Now Practicing Under Codes
—Arkansas.—All forms of action were abolished, and therefore trespass and case could be joined. Chrisman v. Carney, 33 Ark. 316; Gibbs v. Dickson, 33 Ark. 107.

Connecticut.—By acts passed in 1836 and 1875 the joinder of case with trespass or assumpsit was allowed when the counts are for the same cause of action. These acts were construed not to allow the joinder of trespass and assumpsit. McWheeney v. City of Waterbury, 46 Conn. 295, and it was required that the counts should be for the same cause of action, and an averment that they were for the same cause was not sufficient, if the declaration was repugnant to such an averment. Boenun v. Taylor, 19 Conn. 122; Havens v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co., 26 Conn. 225; Belden v. Granniss, 27 Conn. 511; Griffin v. Gilbert, 28 Conn. 493; Winnie v. Pond, 34 Conn. 391.

Indiana.—A statute providing that if a writ is in trespass and the declaration in case, or vice versa, the variance is immaterial, was held not to authorize a joinder of counts in trespass and case. Hines v. Kinnison, 8 Blf. (Ind.) 119.

Ohio.—When claims, recoverable at common law in an action of trespass, are made recoverable in an action on the case, the two claims may be joined.

2. New Mexico.—"The pleadings and practice shall be according to the forms

4. Joinder Under Codes—(a) PROVISIONS OF THE CODES.—The joinder of causes of action is regulated by express provisions in the codes of Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Dakota, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.¹ Codes have also been adopted in the District of Columbia, Florida, Maryland and Mississippi, but they and rules of the common law." Comp. Laws 1884, § 1907. The practices in Louisiana is treated in a separate section, infra.

1. Code Provisions as to Joinder—
Arizona.—By the code of 1877 the provisions of the California code were adopted ipsissimis verbis, except the last clause as to an action for malicious arrest and prosecution. Compiled Laws Arizona, 1877, § 2500, p. 417. In the code adopted February 14th, 1887, that provision is omitted, and the following adopted: "Only such causes of action may be joined as are capable of the same character of relief. But actions ex contractu shall not be joined with actions ex delicto. In actions ex delicto there shall not be joined actions to recover for injuries to the person, to property or to character, but they shall be sued for separately. Rev. Stat. Arizona, 1877, § 670.

Arkansas.—Several causes of action may be united in the same complaint where each affects all the parties to the action, may be brought in the same county, be prosecuted by the same kind of proceedings, and all belong to one of the following classes:

1st. Claims arising out of contract, express or implied.

2nd. Claims for the recovery of specific real property and the rents, profits and damages for withholding the same.

3rd. Claims for the recovery of specific personal property and damages for the taking or withholding the same.

4th. Claims for partition of real or personal property, or both.

5th. Claims arising from injuries to character.

6th. Claims arising from injuries to person and property.

7th. Claims against a trustee by virtue of a contract or by operation of law." Dig. Stat. Ark., § 5014, p. 982.

California.—"The plaintiff may unite several causes of action in the same complaint where they all arise out of—"1st. Contracts, express or implied.

"2nd. Claims to recover specific real property, with or without damages, for the withholding thereof, or for waste committed thereon, and the rents and profits of the same.

"3rd. Claims to recover specific personal property, with or without damages, for the withholding thereof.

"4th. Claims against a trustee by virtue of a contract or by operation of law.

"5th. Injuries to character.

"6th. Injuries to person.

"7th. Injuries to property.

"The causes of action so united must all belong to one only of these classes, and must affect all the parties to the action, and not require different places of trial, and must be separately stated; but an action for malicious arrest and prosecution, or either of them, may be united with an action for either an injury to character or to the person."

Code of 1851, § 64; code of 1872, § 427.

Colorado.—"The code of civil procedure of Colorado differs from all the rest, and by class first actions may be united for the recovery of real property with damages, rents, profits, etc.; by class second, actions for the recovery of personal property, with damages, etc., and by class third, all actions for damages, whether upon contract or for injuries to property, person or character." Code, § 71 (1883, § 73); Bliss on Code Pleading (2nd ed.), § 112, p. 185.

Connecticut.—"In every civil action not brought before the justice of the peace the plaintiff may include in his complaint both legal and equitable rights and causes of action, and demand both legal and equitable remedies; but where several causes of action are united in the same complaint they must all be brought to recover, either (1) upon contract, express or implied, or (2) for injuries, with or without force to person and property, or either, including a conversion of property to the defendant's use; or (3) for injuries to character; or (4) upon claims to recover real property, with or without damages for the withholding thereof, and the rents and profits of the same; or (5) upon claims to recover personal property specifically, with or without damages for the withholding thereof; or (6) claims arising by virtue of a contract or by operation of law, in favor of or against a party in same representative or fiduciary capacity; or (7) upon claims, whether in contract or tort, or both, arising out of the same transaction or transactions connected with the same subject of action. The several causes of action so united must all belong to one of these classes, and, except in actions for foreclosure of mortgages or liens, must affect all the parties to the action, and not require different places of trial, and must be separately stated; and in all cases where several causes of action are joined in the same complaint, or as matter of counter claim or set-off in the answer, if it appear to the court that they cannot all be conveniently heard together, the court may order separate trials of any such causes of action, or may direct that any one or more of them may be expunged from the complaint or answer." Gen. Stat. of Conn. 1888, § 878, p. 211. Adopted in 1879.

Dakota.—The plaintiff may unite in the same complaint several causes of action whether they be such as have been heretofore denominated legal or equitable, or both, where they all arise out of—

1st. The same transaction or transactions connected with the same subject of action.

2nd. Contract, express or implied; or

3rd. Injuries, with or without force, to person or property, or either; or

4th. Injuries to character; or

5th. Claims to recover real property, with or without damages for the withholding thereof, and the rents and profits of the same, or for waste committed thereon; or

6th. Claims to recover personal property with or without damages for the withholding thereof; or

7th. Claims against a trustee by virtue of a contract or by operation of law.

But the causes of action, so united, must all belong to one of these classes, and, except in actions for the foreclosure of mortgages, must affect all the parties to the action, and not require different places of trial, and must be separately stated. Dakota Code (Levi-see, vol. 1), § 136, p. 41.

Idaho.—Same as California. Rev. Stat. 1887, § 4169.

Indiana.—"The plaintiff may unite several causes of action in the same complaint when they are included in either of the following classes:

1st. Money demands on contract.

2nd. Injuries to property.

3rd. Injuries to person or character.

4th. Claims to recover the possession of personal property, with or without damages for the withholding thereof, and for injuries to the property withheld.

5th. Claims to recover the possession of real property, with or without damages, rents and profits for the withholding thereof, and for waste or damages done to the land; to make partition of and to determine and quiet the title to real property.

6th. Claims to enforce the specific performance of contracts, and to avoid contracts for fraud or mistakes.

7th. Claims to foreclose mortgages, to enforce or discharge specific liens; to recover personal judgment upon the debt secured by such mortgage or lien; to subject to sale real property upon demands against decedent's estates, when such property has passed to heirs, devisees or their assigns; to marshal assets, and to substitute one person to the rights of another; and all other causes of action arising out of a contract or a duty, and not falling within either of the foregoing classes. But causes of action so joined must affect all the parties to the action, and not require different places of trial, and must be separately stated and numbered.

When the plaintiff desires to recover the possession of title papers or other instruments of writing, or correct any mistakes therein, a separate action may be brought therefor; or the possession of such title papers or other instruments of writing may be recovered, or mistakes corrected in any other action, when such recovery or correction would be essential to a complete remedy.

When the action arises out of contract, the plaintiff may join such other matters in his complaint as may be necessary for a complete remedy and a speedy satisfaction of his judgment, although such other matters fall within some other one or more of the foregoing classes. Where several causes of action are united, belonging to any of the foregoing classes, the court may order separate trials for the furtherance of justice." Rev. Stat. 1888 (Myers & Co.), §§ 278, 280 (106-108) (70-72).

Iowa.—Causes of action of whatever kind, where each may be prosecuted by the same kind of proceedings, provided that they be by the same party, and against the same party in the same rights, and if suit on all may be brought and tried in that county, may be joined in the same petition; but the court, to prevent confusion therein, may direct all or any portion of the issues joined therein to be tried separately, and may determine the order thereof. Rev. Codes of Iowa, 1888 (Miller), § 2630, p. 912.

In an action to recover specific personal property, damages for the detention may also be claimed, "but there shall be no joinder of any cause of action, not of the same kind, nor shall there be allowed any counter claim." Ibid, §§ 3225, 3226, pp. 1093, 1095.

In an action to recover real property, damages for the withholding may be recovered, as well as rents and profits, but there shall be no joinder and no counter claim therein, except of like proceedings, and as provided in this chapter. Ibid, §§ 3245, 3250, pp. 1099, 1100.

The action for partition shall be by equitable proceedings, and no joinder or counter claim of any other kind shall be allowed therein, except as provided by this chapter." Ibid, § 3277, p. 1104.

Kansas.—Same as Dakota, omitting the words in (5) "or for waste committed thereon," and concluding, "But the causes of action so united must all belong to one of these classes, and must affect all the parties to the action, except in actions to enforce mortgages or other liens. Comp. Laws, 1885 (Dassler), § (3882) 83, p. 616.

Kentucky.—Substantially the same as Arkansas, omitting the seventh clause. Kentucky Codes, 1888 (Carroll), § 83 (111), p. 57.

Minnesota.—Same as Dakota, omitting in (5) the words "or for waste committed thereon," and in the conclusion, the words "except in actions for the foreclosure of mortgages. Stat. 1878, § 118 (98), p. 723.

Missouri.—An early code allowed the plaintiff to join as many causes as he may have. See Childs v. Bank of Mo., 17 Mo. 213. The present code is substantially the same as Dakota, omitting the provisions as to waste in (5), and as to foreclosure of mortgages in the conclusion, and changing clause 7 so as to read "claims by or against a party in some representative or fiduciary capacity, by virtue of a contract, or by operation of law." Rev. Stat. 1879, vol. 1, § 3512, p. 601.

Montana.—Same as California, except that the words "and for an injunction to stay waste or injury thereto" are added to clause 2. Comp. Stat., 1887, § 86, p. 80.

Nebraska.—Substantially the same as Dakota, omitting the provision as to waste in (5) and as to foreclosure of mortgages in the conclusion. Comp. Laws, 1885, § 87, p. 640.

Nevada.—Same as California. Gen. Stat. 1885, § 3086, p. 767.

New York.—The original code adopted in 1848 was like the Dakota code, omitting the provision as to waste in (5) and as to the foreclosure of mortgages in the conclusion. Rev. Stat. 1852, vol. 2, p. 509, § 167. The present code adopted in 1877 is as follows:

The plaintiff may unite in the same complaint two or more causes of action whether they are such as were formerly denominated legal or equitable, or both, where they are brought to recover as follows:

1. Upon contract, express or implied.
2. For personal injuries, except libel, slander, criminal conversation, or seduction.
3. For libel or slander.
4. For injuries to real property.
5. Real property, in ejectment, with or without damages for the withholding thereof.
6. For injuries to personal property.
7. Chattels, with or without damages for the taking or detention thereof.
8. Upon claims against a trustee, by virtue of a contract, or by operation of law.
9. Upon claims arising out of the same transactions, or transactions connected with the same subject of action, and not included within one of the foregoing subdivisions of this section.

But it must appear, upon the face of the complaint, that all the causes of action so united, belong to one of the foregoing subdivisions of this section, that they are consistent with each other; and, except as otherwise prescribed by law, that they affect all the parties to the action; and it must appear upon the face of the complaint that they do not require different places of trial. Co. Proc., § 167; N. Y. Ann. Code, 1889, § 484.

North Carolina.—Same as Dakota, have been repealed.¹ While the provisions of these codes vary,² yet they are substantially the same, and provide for joinder of causes of action when they all arise out of (1) contract express or implied, (2) claims to recover real property with mesne profits and damages, (3) claims to recover personal property with damages, (4) injuries to person, (5) injuries to property, (6) injuries to charomitting the words "or for waste committed thereon" in clause 5. Code of 1883, § 267, p. 101.

Ohio.—Same as Dakota, omitting the words "or for waste committed thereon," and substituting the words "and the partition thereof," in clause 5, and concluding, "The causes of action so united must not require different places of trial, and, except as otherwise provided, must affect all the parties to the actions. Rev. Stat. 1890, §§ 5019, 5020, pp. 1262, 1263.

Oregon.—Substantially the same as California, omitting the provision as to waste, and rents and profits in clause 2, and the reference to actions for malicious arrest and prosecutions at the end. Gen. Laws, 1872, p. 124, § 91.

South Carolina.—Same as Dakota, with the omission of the provision as to waste in clause 5. Code, 1888, § 188, p. 128.

Texas.—In Texas the Common Law of England was adopted in 1840. See Sayle's Texas Civil Stat., vol. 2, p. 86, art. 3128. But the congress expressly enacted that "the adoption of the common law shall not be construed to adopt the common law system of pleading; but the proceeding in all civil suits shall as heretofore be conducted by petition and answer." Fowler v. Poor, Dallam (Tex.), 401, 403-4; Sayle's Texas Civil Stat., vol. 1, p. 399, art. 1185.

It was very early decided that as the common law forms of pleading were not recognized in Texas, all civil actions there are in a strict but not in a technical sense special actions on the case; actions in which the party asserts his right according to the particular facts and circumstances of his case without regard to technical forms. Carter v. Wallace, 2 Tex. 206.

"Our laws and the decisions of our courts favor the joinder of all causes of action arising between the same parties in the same right and growing out of the same transaction." Lyles v. Murphy, 38 Tex. 75, 79. See Blair v. Gay, 33 Tex. 157.

But the Texas system of pleading does not require nor sanction the blending of various and contradictory rights and causes of action in the same suit. Herrington v. Williams, 31 Tex. 448. And the general rule is that a cause of action ex contractu and a cause of action ex delicto cannot be joined. Stewart v. Gordon, 65 Tex. 344.

"In Texas, the system, as followed, comes so near that of the Code States, that I have been strongly tempted to embrace it among them." Bliss' Code, Pleading, Pref. to 2nd ed., p. xiv.

Utah.—Same as California laws, 1884, p. 204, § 287.

Washington.—Substantially same as California, omitting the provisions as to waste and rents and profits in clause (2), the phrase "must all belong to one only of these classes" and the provision as to malicious arrest and prosecution in the conclusion. Code, 1881, p. 51, § 102.

Wisconsin.—Same as Dakota, omitting the provision as to waste in clause (5), and the words "except in actions for the foreclosure of mortgages" in the conclusion. Ann. Stat. (S. & B. 1889), p. 1531, § 2647.

Wyoming.—Same as Ohio. Rev. Stat. 1887, p. 562, §§ 2408-9.

1. Repealed Codes—District of Columbia.—A code was adopted in 1857, similar to that of Dakota, omitting the words "except in actions for the foreclosure of mortgages. Rev. Code, 1857, ch. 82, §§ 40, 41, p. 348. The writer has been unable to gain access to vol. 18, part 2, of the Rev. Stat. U. S., which contains the Rev. Stat. of the District of Columbia, but he believes this code has been repealed.

Florida, Maryland and Mississippi also adopted code provisions which have been since repealed. See supra, note 26, "Distinctions between forms of actions."

2. It must not be forgotten, therefore, that the general principles stated in this article may be inapplicable under the special provisions of the code of a particular State. They are in the main applicable, and in the main the authorities adduced will apply equally acter, (7) claims against a trustee by virtue of a contract or by operation of law, (8) claims arising out of the same transaction, or transactions connected with the same subject of action, (9) claims to foreclose a lien on real property and recover a personal judgment for any deficiency in the proceeds of the sale, (10) the exercise of the right of eminent domain.¹ As to the first eight of these classes it is uniformly required that "the causes of action so united must all belong to one of these classes, must affect all the parties to the action, and not require different places of trial, and must be separately stated." A number of the States, in which the provisions as to joinder have not assumed the code form or been sufficiently numerous to justify including them within the code States, have authorized by statute joinder in one or more of the above classes. These statutory provisions will be set forth in the discussion of the respective classes.

(b) CAUSES OF ACTION IN SAME CLASS—(1) Contracts.—The causes of action to be joined must belong to only one of the above classes, under the express provisions of the various codes,² but all causes of action belonging to the same class may be joined, provided they comply with the code requirement as to affecting all the parties to the action, and are consistent.³ Thus all actions on contracts express or implied, and how-in all the code States. Care has been taken to note the exceptions, both judicial and statutory, but the provisions of the codes are frequently changed, and the practitioner in every State must not fail to take note of these changes.

1. The code and statutory provisions as to clauses 9 and 10, are stated under their respective sub-headings.

2. Joinder of Causes in Same Class.—See the code provisions ut supra. The causes of action must belong to only one of the classes. McCarty v. Fremont, 23 Cal. 196; Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183; Keller v. Boatman, 49 Ind. 104; Dragoo v. Levi, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 520; Townsend v. Coon, 7 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 56; N. C. Land Co. v. Beatty, 69 N. Car. 329; Williams v. Miller, 1 Wash. Ter. 88.

When, however, causes of action apparently belonging to different classes arise "out of the same transaction," they come, in some of the States only, under that special code provision. See Harris v. Avery, 5 Kan. 146; Holmes v. Sheridan, 1 Dill. (U. S. D. C.) 351; Polly v. Wilkisson, 5 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 135; Watts v. Hilton, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 606; Carter v. DeCamp, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 258. See also the opinion of WILLARD, C. J., in Suber v. Allen, 13 S. Car. 317, 324-5

The fact that a contract affects the same real estate for injuries to which plaintiff asks damages will not authorize him to join his cause of action for breach of said contract. Thomas v. Utica & B. R. R. Co., 97 N. Y. 245; Booth v. F. & M. Nat. Bank, 1 N. Y. S. C. (T. & C.) 45. Compuré Thompson v. White, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 520.

3. The Causes of Action Must be Consistent.—A cause based on the affirmation of a contract cannot be joined with one seeking to set aside and rescind it. Neal v. Reynolds, 38 Iowa 432; Owens v. Hickman, 2 Dis. (Ohio) 471.

A cause for share of rents and profits against a cotenant, and a cause averring the relation of landlord and tenant during same period and asking rent, are inconsistent and plaintiff would be compelled to elect. House v. House, 29 Minn. 252; Owens v. Hickman, 2 Dis. (Ohio) 471. So where plaintiff claims an absolute title to land, and asks damages for obstructing him in the use of it, and particularly in the enjoyment of a private right of way. Smith v. Hallock, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 73.

When a contract for sale of stocks provided that the seller might demand return of the stocks on repayment of the price, and that if the buyer should pay more than he paid this seller for the same kind of stocks, he would pay ever evidenced may be joined, all being included in class one.¹

(2) Recovery of Real Property; Mesne Profits; Damages; Partition; Taxes; Eminent Domain.—In an action to recover real property, a count for mesne profits may be joined, not only in all the code States, but by statutory provisions, such joinder is authorized in many of the other States.² The damages recoverable in addition to mesne profits is strictly limited to the damages for the seller the difference in price, this seller could not sue for a return of the stock, and the payment of such a difference, the two claims being inconsistent. Stewart v. Huntington, 2 N. Y. Sup. 205.

A proceeding by mandamus cannot be joined with other actions. Barada v. Inhabitants of Carondelet, 16 Mo. 323.

A plaintiff cannot unite a cause of action to annul her marriage with defendant on account of a previous marriage to one who is still alive with a cause of action to quiet her title to her separate property in which the defendant claims an interest. Uhl v. Uhl, 52 Cal. 250. Compare Dunbar v. Dunbar, 1 Cleve. L. Rep. 148.

An action for a divorce on the ground of adultery and for a limited divorce on the ground of cruel treatment cannot be joined. McIntosh v. McIntosh, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 289.

Though in Tennessee counts in tort and contract may in certain cases be joined in an action on the facts of the case, yet a count in trespass for personal injuries, and a count on a contract in settlement thereof are repugnant and cannot be joined. Henderson v. Boyd, 85 Tenn. 21.

When counts are inconsistent, the remedy is by motion to elect. Keens v. Gaslin, 24 Neb. 310; Young v. Edwards, 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 20.

1. Joinder of Causes in Same Class—Contracts.—When each cause of action rests upon a promise to pay, whether implied or not, they are similar in nature and may be joined. Brown v. Carbonate Bank, 34 Fed. Rep. 776; Keller v. Hicks, 22 Cal. 457; Buford v. Funk, 4 G. Gr. (Iowa) 493; Stewart v. Balderston, 10 Kan. 130, 143; Gridley v. Gridley, 24 N. Y. 130; Freer v. Denton, 61 N. Y. 492; DeWitt v. McDonald, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 411; Sutton v. McMillan, 72 N. Car. 102; Bowman v. Holladay, 3 Oreg. 182; Cureton v. Stokes, 20 S. Car. 582.

Breaches of the covenants in two deeds of different lands from defendant to plaintiff, may be united in the same action. Nichol v. Alexander, 28 Wis. 118.

A judgment for the payment of money only is a "contract" within the meaning of the codes, and an action thereon may be joined with an action on an express contract. Childs v. Harris Mfg. Co., 68 Wis. 231; s. c., 32 N. W. Rep. 43.

When a contract contains a covenant for stipulated damages, and constitutes the parties partners, judgment for the liquidated damages, and for an account and dissolution of the partnership may be sought in the same action. Stone v. Fouse, 3 Cal. 292.

But causes of action accruing after suit brought may not be joined with causes accruing before, even by amendment. Wurlitzer v. Suppe, 38 Kan. 31; s. c., 15 Pac. Rep. 863; Taylor v. Moran, 4 Met. (Ky.) 127. See Union R. R. & Trans. Co. v. Traube, 59 Mo. 355; Weinland v. Cochran, 9 Neb. 480.

2. Recovery of Real Property, Mesne Profits and Damages.—In addition to the provisions upon this subject in the codes set forth in note 28, supra, there are special provisions in a number of the States allowing a count for mesne profits to be joined in an action of ejectment. Code of Georgia, 1882, § 3356, (3280), (3269), (contra prior to the adoption of the code. Austell v. Swann, 74 Ga. 278, 284); Howell's Anno. Stat. Michigan 1882, § 7829, p. 1957; Rev. Code Mississippi 1880, § 2512, p. 681; Rev. Stat. Missouri, 1879, vol. 1, § 2252, p. 376; Comp. Laws New Mexico 1884, § 2265; New York Anno. Code 1889, § 1496-7, pp. 541-2. Lyles v. Murphy, 38 Tex. 75; Rev. Laws Vermont 1880, p. 285, § 1251; Code of Virginia, p. 662, § 2751; Code of West Virginia, p. 685, § 30; Anno. Stat. Wisconsin (S. & B. 1889), p. 1766, § 3082; Stat. 1 George IV, ch. 87, § 2; Rev. Stat. Maine 1883, p. 817, § 11.

In Maine, the mesne profits up to the date of the writ of entry must be claimed in that action. They cannot be sued for in any subsequent action of any form. But mesne profits accrued withholding the property, except in so far as a joinder of a claim for waste is allowed under the codes or statutes.¹ It would seem that a specific piece of real property, with mesne profits and damages, may be claimed in one count, as constituting one cause of action.² A claim for mesne profits may not be joined in an action unless authorized by statute, but such joinder is permissive simply and not compulsory.³ Real property may be recovered subsequent to that date may be recovered in a separate action of trespass therefor. Larrabee v. Lambert, 34 Me. 79; Larrabee v. Lambert, 36 Me. 440. Pub. Gen. Laws Maryland 1888, vol. 2, p. 1128, § 69, allows recovery of mesne profits up to the time of the determination of the case. Plaintiff may recover mesne profits from the time his title accrued, and damages for waste. Pub. Stat. Massachusetts 1882, p. 1019, § 12. See also the article EJECTMENT, subtitle 4, 30; DAMAGES and MESNE PROFITS, Am. and Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 6, p. 217.

In Illinois, mesne profits are recovered by filing a suggestion of claim after recovering judgment in ejectment. Anno Stat. (Starr & Curtis), vol. 1, p. 992, par. 43. This procedure abolishes the action of trespass for mesne profits. Harding v. Larkin, 41 Ill. 413, 424. But this suggestion is substantially a new suit, and not a continuation of the action of ejectment. New service, pleadings, trial and judgment are required. Ringhouse v. Keener, 63 Ill. 230.

In Pennsylvania, mesne profits may be recovered in ejectment by ancient practice. Boyd v. Cowan, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 138; Battin v. Bigelow, Peters (U. S. C. C. Pa.) 452; Damson v. McGill, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 230; Cook v. Nicholas, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 27; Bayard v. Inglis, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 465.

Distinct parcels of land, if covered by one title, may be included in one complaint, and claims for the rents and profits and damages may also be united. Beard v. Federy, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 478. See also the cases cited infra, under II, 4 C, note 6, RECOVERY OF REAL PROPERTY, JOINDER OF DEFENDANT.

1 Damages—Waste.—Recovery of the possession of land and damages for a forcible eviction therefrom cannot be joined. Mayo v. Madden, 4 Cal. 27.

A claim for the recovery of real estate sold under a decree in equity cannot be joined in the same action with a claim against the clerk and master for the purchase money. Brown v.

Coble, 76 N. Car. 391; Compare Heggie v. Hill, 95 N. Car. 303.

Recovery of possession of land cannot be united with a claim for rents and profits not connected with the withholding of such possession. Tompkins v. White, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 520. Nor a claim for consequential damages arising from a change of a road. Bowles v. Sacramento T. & P. R. Co., 5 Cal. 224.

Damages for waste are not recoverable in the same action unless by statute. Bottomf v. Wise, 53 Ind. 32; Woodruff v. Garner, 27 Ind. 4. See Simpson v. Greely, 8 Kan. 586; Hillman v. Baumback, 21 Tex. 203.

2 One Count Sufficient.—Ejectment, mesne profits and damages were recovered in one action, perhaps in one count. Beard v. Federy, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 478; Sullivan v. Davis, 4 Cal. 291; Spahr v. Nicklaus, 51 Ind. 221; Burrows v. Holderman, 31 Ind. 412; Black v. Drake, 281 Kan. 482; Armstrong v. Hinds, 8 Minn. 254; Merrill v. Dearing, 22 Minn. 376; Lord v. Dearing, 24 Minn. 110; Winona & St. Peter R. Co. v. St. Paul & Sioux City R. Co., 26 Minn. 179; Garner v. Jones, 34 Miss. 505. But see Larned v. Hudson, 57 N. Y. 151.

3 Mesne Profits.—Mesne profits cannot be recovered in a proceeding at law for assignment of dower unless authorized by statute. Austell v. Swann, 74 Ga. 278. Allowed in Michigan. Howell's Anno. Stat. Michigan 1882, § 7829, p. 1957; §§ 5756, 5757, p. 1496. And under the code provisions as to the recovery of real property. Van Name v. Van Name, 23 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 247.

Mesne profits may be recovered in a separate action. Nash v. Sullivan, 32 Mich. 189; s. c., 20 N. W. Rep. 144; Rev. Code Mississippi 1880, § 2512, p. 681. Winings v. Wood, 53 Ind. 187; Walker v. Mitchell, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 541; McGrew v. Woodrow, 1 Bush (Ky.) 602; Vandervoort v. Gould, 36 N. Y. 639. Livingstone v. Tanner, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 481. Not when determined in the ejectment proceeding. Rev. Stat.

and a partition made thereof in one action under several of the codes; a separate action is necessary where there is no such provision.¹ The right to join a claim for a personal judgment or lien in an action of partition is disputed, but mesne profits have been held recoverable, a specific performance obtained, and real and personal property partitioned in the same proceeding.² Different claims for taxes on land have been held to be properly joined,³ and by statute in a number of States, in proceedings by a corporation to condemn land under its charter right of eminent domain, all lands in the county may be joined.⁴

Ohio 1890, § 5792; Rev Stat. Wyoming 1887, § 2998, p. 660. And the common law action is held to be superseded in Massachusetts. Raymond v. Andrews, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 265; and in Maine see cases cited supra.

1. Partition may be sought in an action of ejectment, the two constituting only one enlarged cause of action. Scarborough v. Smith, 18 Kan. 399, relying on the doctrine laid down in Tabler v. Wiseman 2 Ohio St. 207, that "a right of entry will entitle a party to the proceeding in partition, without the actual seisin required in some other States. Such joinder is allowed by the code of Ohio.

Such a joinder was held improper in Gott v. Powell, 41 Mo. 416; Moreau v. Detchemendy, 41 Mo. 431; Lambert v. Blumenthal, 26 Mo. 471; Simpson v. Wallace, 83 N. C. 477.

2. Partition.—In a proceeding for a partition of real estate, the complaint may not also include the enforcement of a lien against the residue not awarded to the petitioner. Rennick v. Chandler, 59 Cal. 354. Contra, Bogardus v. Parker, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 305.

In a suit for division of a certain estate, which requires that all the heirs should be made parties, a plaintiff cannot join a claim against one of the heirs for services and another claim for the value of certain property converted by two of the other heirs. Such claims are inconsistent with the demand for partition of the community estate among the heirs. Oliver v. Robertson, 41 Tex. 422.

Partition and an accounting of rents and profit may be joined. Finch v. Baskerville, 85 N. Car. 205.

Partition of real estate in which a decedent had a life estate and an account and distribution of said decedent's estate may not be joined. Shanks v. Mills, 25 S. Car. 358. It seems this would have been allowed had decedent had a fee in said realty.

Partition may be asked though the title of one of the parties is but an inchoate right of dower. Diehl v. Lambert, 9 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 267.

Partition and a specific performance may be sought in the same action. Hall v. Hall, 38 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 97.

Real and personal property may be partitioned in the same action. Prentice v. Janssen, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 86.

3. Taxes.—If several tracts of land belonging to the same owner be separately assessed, but under one assessment, the taxes assessed on the several tracts may be recovered in one action. People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

Two taxes assessed on the same land at different times may be recovered in the same action. Land Dist. v. Feck, 60 Cal. 403. But two causes of action for enforcing liens for two street assessments on the same lot at different times and on different contracts, and for improving the same street, cannot be joined in the same suit. Dyer v. Barstow, 50 Cal. 652.

Under the provisions of the Iowa code, but one suit need be instituted against all the owners of lots against which a municipal assessment had been made. Des Moines v. Stephenson, 19 Iowa 507.

4. Eminent Domain.—In proceedings to condemn land under the right of eminent domain, when such right is exercised under corporate charters, there is a provision in some of the States to the effect that "All panels lying in the county and required for the same public use may be included in the same or separate proceedings, at the option of the plaintiff, but the court may consolidate or separate them, to suit the convenience of parties." Code & Stat. California, vol. 3 (Deering), § 1244, p. 482; Rev. Stat. Idaho 1887, § 5216, p. 577; compare Rev. Code Iowa, 1888 (Miller), § 1245, p. 432; Stat. Minnesota 1878, § 14, p. 371; Rev. Stat. Missouri

(3) Recovery of Personality; Damages; Injuries; Trusts.—In like manner claims included in classes (3), recovery of personal property and damages, (4) injuries to person, (5) injuries to property, (6) injuries to character, and (7) claims against a trustee, may severally be joined.¹

1879, vol. 1, § 892, p. 160; Comp. Stat. Montana, 1887, § 604, p. 216; Comp. Laws 1884, New Mexico, § 2713, Rev. Stat. Ohio 1890, § 6416, p. 1586; § 2236, p. 503; Code Utah (Laws 1884), § 1111, p. 350; Rev. Laws Vermont 1880, p. 644, § 3359, et seq.; Code of Virginia, 1887, § 1085, p. 310, Code of West Virginia 1887, p. 310, § 4, p. 486, § 7; Anno. Stat. Wisconsin (S. & B. 1889), § 1846, p. 1106; Rev. Stat. Wyoming 1887, § 548, p. 204.

Separate appeals taken from awards made by the commissioners appointed to appraise the value of the land so taken may be consolidated into one action. Washburn v. Milwaukee & L. W. R. R. Co., 59 Wis. 364. Contra, without the above statute, Ortman v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 32 Kan. 419. A right of way is a parcel of land within the meaning of the above statute, and therefore a right of way across a right of way previously acquired by another railroad, and over lands owned in fee may be united in one suit. California South. R. R. Co. v. South. Pac. R. R. Co., 67 Cal. 59.

Damages for other injuries may not be asked by a landowner in his suit against a corporation for damages for lands taken. See Allen v. Wilmington & Weldon R. R. Co., 102 N. Car. 381, Blesch v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 44 Wis. 593. See the article EMINENT DOMAIN, subtitle XIV (3), JOINDER OF CLAIMS, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 6, p. 611.

1. Recovery of personal property and damages for the conversion thereof allowed in one suit. Baals v. Stewart, 109 Ind. 371; Pharis v. Carver, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 236.

Injuries to Person.—All actions for personal injuries can be joined in the same complaint, as for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment. Carl v. Ayers, 53 N. Y. 14; Dusenbury v. Keiley, 85 N. Y. 383, 389; Bradner v. Faulkner, 93 N. Y. 515; Marks v. Townsend, 97 N. Y. 590; Barr v. Shaw, 10 Hun 580, Haight v. Webster, 18 N. Y. W. D. 108; Doyle v. Russell, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 300. These cases clearly overrule Nebenzahl v. Townsend, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 353.

Injuries to Property.—See Freeman v. Webb, 21 Neb. 160. Jensen v. Union Pac. R. Co. (Utah), 4 Law Rep. Anno. 724; s. c., 21 Pac. Rep. 994.

Fraudulently inducing one to sign a bond and mortgage is an injury to personal property and may be joined with an action for a fraudulent conversion of personality. Cleveland v. Barrows, 59 Barb. 374; DeSilver v. Holden, 6 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 121; s. c., 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. (18 J. & S.) 236.

When the gist of an action is negligence, both the direct and consequential damages thereby occasioned may be recovered in the same action. Fraler v. Sears Union Water Co., 12 Cal. 555.

Trespasses.—Different and distinct injuries to one and the same property, or to different properties, whether the same be personal or real, or both, may be joined in the same action. More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590; Strohburg v. Jones, 78 Cal. 381; Brickner v. Woolen Mills Co. v. Henry, 73 Wis. 229.

Some of the codes place injuries both to property and person in one class, in which case all such injuries could be joined, since they belong to the same class. In New York, however, injuries to real property, to personal property and to the person, now constitute separate classes, and therefore may not be joined. See Whatling v. Nash, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 579; Durkee v. Saratoga & Washington R. R. Co., 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 226.

Injuries to Character.—See White v. Cox, 46 Cal. 169.

An entire conversation or libellous publication constitutes but one cause of action. Cracraft v. Cochran, 16 Iowa 301. But separate conversations or publications constitute different causes of actions which may be joined, but should be separately stated. Swinney v. Nave, 22 Ind. 178; Fleischmann v. Bennett, 87 N. Y. 231; Alpin v. Mor-ton, 21 Ohio St. 536.

Slander and malicious prosecution for the offence charged in the slander were held properly joined, both being injuries to character. Martin v. Mat-tison, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 3; Hull v. Vreeland, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 543; s. c., 18

(4) Same Transaction, or Transactions Connected with the Same Subject of Action.—This provision of the code is difficult to discuss. The cases decided give but little aid in its interpretation. There are various general phrases used, but their application greatly varies.¹ It seems that the proceedings connected with a contract for the sale of land and other contracts all constitute one transaction.² So where there is but one subject of action, Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 182. Shore v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 173. Slander and libel may be joined. Martin v. Mattison, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 3. Noonan v. Orton, 32 Wis. 106.

Trusts.—A claim for a resulting trust for money wrongfully withheld may be joined with a similar claim for money wrongfully exacted. Kraemer v. Deustermann, 37 Minn. 469; s. c., 35 N. W. 276.

So for shares of stock held under a parol trust and fraudulently obtained. Williams v. Lowe, 4 Neb. 382.

Various breaches of the same trust may be joined. Price v. Brown, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 511.

An action relating to different separate trusts created by the same will cannot be joined, when the beneficiaries are different and have no common interest. Weeks v. Cornwall, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 643.

A claim to enforce an express or implied trust may be joined with a claim to enforce a vendor's lien. Burt v. Wilson, 28 Cal. 632.

1. Same Transaction or Subject of Action.—Mr. Pomeroy says that "little aid can be derived from judicial decisions" in construing the clause as to joinder of actions arising out of the same transaction or transactions connected with the same subject of action. Having referred to the judicial interpretation of these words in N. Y. & N. H. R. R. v. Schuyler, 17 N. Y. 592, 604; Sweet v. Ingerson, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 331; Anderson v. Hill, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 238; Ogdensburgh etc. R. R. v. Vermont etc. R. R., 63 N. Y. 176; Adams v. Bissell, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 382; Palen v. Bushnell, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 24; Jones v. Steamboat Co., 17 Cal. 487, 497, and other cases, he then proceeds to analyze the subject most thoroughly, showing that unity of time does not make two events one transaction, and that the term "subject of action" was employed "as synonymous with, or rather in the place of, subject matter of the action." See his elaborate and thorough discussion of the question in Remedies and Remedial Rights (2nd ed.), pp. 505, 521. See also Bliss on Code Pleading (2nd ed.), § 125, p. 207.

The language of this clause has been said to be "well chosen for the purpose intended, because it is so obscure and so general as to justify the interpretations which shall be found most convenient and best calculated to promote the ends of justice." COMSTOCK, J., in New York & N. H. R. R. Co. v. Schuyler, 17 N. Y. 592, 604. The word "transactions" probably means whatever may be done by one person which affects another's rights, and out of which a cause of action may arise. Scarborough v. Smith, 18 Kan. 399, 406.

When the causes of action constitute a series of transactions connected together and forming one course of dealing, all tending to one end, they are properly joined. King v. Farmer, 88 N. Car. 22; Board etc. of Douglas Co. v. Wallridge, 38 Wis. 179.

2. A vendor of land who had given a note secured by a mortgage on other land, to protect the vendee against an encumbrance on the land sold, may in the same suit recover balance of purchase money due him, the remainder of the note, and the discharge of the mortgage, the encumbrance having been removed, and all matters held to constitute one transaction. Montgomery v. McEwen, 7 Minn. 351. To same effect Connor v. Board of Education of St. Anthony, 10 Minn. 439.

When the subject is the recovery of certain land, or the amount of the purchase money therefor, under a contract to convey, several causes of action against parties with distinct and separate interests may be joined, because a general right is claimed arising out of a series of transactions tending to one end. Young v. Young, 81 N. Car. 91. Compare Heggie v. Hill, 95 N. Car. 303.

In a transaction for sale of land, a change subsequently made in the mode of payment and security required does not change the character of the trans-

the circumstances connected with it may all be joined.¹ But unity of time will not make two events one transaction, and the transactions must really be the same;² and even when they are the same a local cause of action cannot be blended with a transitory cause.³

(5) Foreclosure of Liens and Personal Judgment.—Several proceedings to foreclose a mortgage may be joined if on the same action, or divide it into several transactions. Montgomery v. McEwen, 7 Minn. 351.

It is not error to join in the same suit claims for property converted, and for damages proximately resulting from a breach of contract, when the matters relied on for a recovery are connected with and grew out of the same cause of action and subject matter in dispute. Milliken & Co. v. Callahan Co., 69 Tex. 205; Houston & Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Graves, 50 Tex. 181.

In a proceeding to cancel fraudulent certificates of stock having a common origin and ground of invalidity, all the holders thereof may be joined, however different their rights and their mode of acquiring said stock may be. New York & N. H. R. Co. v. Schuyler, 17 N. Y. 592.

1. When the subject of the action is the disherison of the plaintiff, a cause arising from duress over the ancestor in making the will, and a cause arising from false representations inducing plaintiff to waive objections to the probate of the will may be joined. Hay v. Hay, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 315.

When the subject is a breach of trust, various breaches may be joined. Price v. Brown, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 511.

When the subject was a breach of trust by A and B, executors of M, and by A alone, administrator of N, sole degatee of M, a joint action against A and B was allowed, it being impossible to determine A's liability as administrator without settling the accounts of A and B as executors. McLachlan v. Staples, 13 Wis. 448.

When a sheriff wrongfully detains property levied on, and injures it, the two causes of action arise out of the same transaction. Smith v. Orser, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 187.

Causes of action for (1) harboring and maintaining plaintiff's wife; (2) conversion of personal property belonging to plaintiff, jure mariti; (3) inducing wife, while harbored, to convey land to defendant; (4) conversion of certain personality included in a marriage settlement may be joined as being transactions connected with the same subject of action. Hamlin v. Tucker, 72 N. Car. 502.

When two sales are made for taxes, one by the treasurer and another by his deputy, they are "transactions connected with the same subject of action," and causes of action thereon may be joined. Freeman v. Webb, 21 Neb. 160.

Where plaintiff had done some work for A on certain logs, and at another time he had done some work for B on the same logs, he may join A and B in one suit, praying judgment for a lien upon the logs for the entire sum, and a personal judgment against A and B respectively for the sum for which they were personally liable. Collins v. Cowan, 52 Wis. 634.

2. Where a slander and an assault and battery occurred at the same period of time it by no means follows that each cause of action arose out of the same transaction. There are two transactions, physical force and the utterance of defamatory words. As injuries to person and character cannot be united, these two cannot be joined. Anderson v. Hill, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 238, overruling Brewer v. Temple, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 286, Dragoo v. Levi, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 520.

When A was induced by the fraudulent representations of Y to sell stock to X and accept X's notes, which were worthless, and when he received notes from X on a sale to X of Y's stock in the same corporation, A acting therein as Y's agent, and unqualifiedly endorsing these latter notes, the cause of action for damages for the fraudulent representations and the cause of action to be relieved from his endorsement of the second notes do not arise out of the same transaction, and are improperly joined. Leidersdorf v. Second Ward Savings Bank, 50 Wis. 406.

3. A local cause of action cannot be blended with a transitory cause, although arising out of the same transaction. Neal v. Reynolds, 38 Kan. 432. See also the cases cited, infra, under subdivision II, 4 (d) of this article, wherein "cause of action" is defined.

property, and the parties are the same.¹ A proceeding to establish a mechanics' lien may not be united with any other proceeding,² except that by statute, and in some States even without a statute, a personal judgment for the demand for which plaintiff claims a lien may be sought in the same proceeding wherein the establishment of the lien is sought.³ A mortgage cannot be foreclosed and a judgment for the deficit, if any, entered against the mortgagor, if such a joinder is not expressly authorized,⁴ unless such a joinder would be permissible as arising out of the same transaction or transactions connected with the same subject

1. Foreclosure of Mortgages.—Several mortgages on same property to whom the parties are the same may be foreclosed in one action. Morrissey v. Leddy, 11 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 438. See also Bartlett v. Boyd, 34 Vt. 256.

Several mortgages on different properties, when the parties liable on the debts secured are the same, were allowed to be foreclosed in one action in Dial v. Gary, 24 S. Car. 572.

2. Liens.—The action for mechanics' lien shall be prosecuted by equitable proceedings, and therewith shall no other cause of action be joined. Rev. Codes Iowa 1888 (Miller), § 2510, p. 862. Compare Allen v. Ham, 63 Me. 532, from which it seems that such counts can be joined, but on recovery of judgment for both the lien is forfeited. In Iowa, however, such other cause of action may be joined by consent, though several parties had united in the procedure to enforce the lien. Hines v. Whitebreast C. & M. Co., 48 Iowa 296. It cannot be joined without such consent. Sweetzer v. Harwick, 67 Iowa 488.

3. Liens on Realty and Personal Liability—Mechanics' Liens.—It is not a misjoinder of counts to unite both the contractor and owner in the complaint of a material man to enforce his lien. Trammell v. Hudmon, 78 Ala. 222; Trammell v. Hudmon, 86 Ala. 472. And the plaintiff may have a personal judgment, though he fails to establish his lien. Bedsole v. Peters, 79 Ala. 133; Brugman v. McGuire, 32 Ark. 734; Wilkerson v. Rust, 57 Ind. 172; Flynn v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63 Iowa 490; Collins v. Cowan, 52 Wis. 634.

The right to join these two counts was doubted in Cox v. West Pac. R. Co., 47 Cal. 87; Charbonneau v. Heuni, 24 Wis. 250; and it was expressly denied in Lewis v. Williams, 3 Minn. 151; Davis v. Schmidt, 22 S. Car. 128.

Under the New York code it has been held that the personal judgment can only be had in case the lien is established. Bouroughs v. Tostevan, 75 N. Y. 567.

In a number of States this joinder is now authorized by statute as follows: "In an action on a mortgage or lien the judgment may be rendered for the sale of the property and for the recovery of the debt against the defendant personally." Dig. of Stat. Arkansas, § 5170, p. 1002. To same effect are Comp. Laws Kansas 1885 (Dassler), § (4210), 399, p. 653; Kentucky Codes 1888 (Carroll), § 376 (406), p. 189; Howell's Anno. Stat. Michigan 1882, §§ 6702, 8386, pp. 1732, 2065; Rev. Stat. Missouri 1879, vol. 1, §§ 3185, 3306, pp. 536, 564; Comp. Laws New Mexico 1884, § 1531; New York Anno. Code 1889, §§ 1627, 1739, pp. 581, 619; Rev. Stat. Ohio 1890, § 5021, p. 1263; Sayles' Texas Civil Stat., vol. 1, art. 1340, p. 447. See Delespine v. Campbell, 52 Tex. 4; Rev. Stat. Wyoming 1887, p. 562, § 2410.

In Connecticut, in an action on a lien, judgment for any deficiency after the sale may be rendered "against any party liable to pay the same who is a party to the cause and has been duly served with process or appeared therein, and all such persons may be made parties." Gen. Stat. 1888, § 3028, p. 666. See Anno. Stat. Wisconsin (S. & D. 1889), § 3324, p. 1851; Huse v. Washburn, 59 Wis. 414; Edleman v. Kidd, 65 Wis. 18.

4. Mortgage Foreclosures. Personal Judgment.

A mortgage could not be foreclosed and personal liability determined in same action unless allowed by statute. McKee v. Pope, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 548; Doan v. Holly, 25 Mo 357; s. c., 26 Mo. 186.

Previously in proceedings in equity to foreclose a mortgage, the court could order an execution for the deficiency, if of action.¹ Such a judgment is, however, expressly authorized by the statutes and codes of most of the States against the mortgagor,² and in many States the person or persons, parties to the action and duly served with process, who are liable for the debt secured by the mortgage;³ such a judgment may also, in any, but could not enter a judgment therefor which would be a lien. Hamilton v. Jefferson, 13 Ohio 427; Myers v. Hewitt, 16 Ohio 449.

1. In Wisconsin, the practice of uniting the legal cause of action for the debt with the equitable remedy of foreclosure was introduced and prevailed in the territory before the adoption of the State constitution. Jaine, J., in Gamble v. Loop, 14 Wis. 461, 465; citing statutes of 1839, p. 292, § 82.

The Rev. Stat. of Wis. 1849, ch. 84, § 77, expressly provided for the entry of judgment for the deficiency against the mortgagor. This provision was omitted from the revision of 1858. Notwithstanding that omission, where the mortgagor is the sole defendant, a judgment for the deficiency could be entered against him, because the two causes of action arise out of the same transaction, and affect all the parties to the controversy. Sauer v. Steinbauer, 14 Wis. 70. But the two causes of action were not allowed to be joined unless they affected all the parties. Jesup v. City Bank of Racine, 14 Wis. 331; as where there were different parties to the original debt and all are made defendants. Cory v. Wheeler, 14 Wis. 281; Stilwell v. Kellogg, 14 Wis. 461; Farsi v. Goetz, 15 Wis. 231.

The omission in the revision of 1858 was supplied by the act of 1862, ch. 243, P. L. 143, allowing entry of judgment against the defendant or defendants who executed the note, bond, or other evidence of debt, accompanying the mortgage. See Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Cross, 18 Wis. 109.

2. Statutory Provisions.—The California code having provided for the action to foreclose a mortgage and for the sale of the mortgaged property, continues: "And if it appear from the sheriff's return that the proceeds are insufficient and a balance still remains due, judgment can then be docketed for such balance against the defendant or defendants personally liable for the debt." Code of Civil Proc., § 726; Deering's Anno. Code and Stat., vol. 3, p. 328; Similar provisions in Rev. Code Dist. of Columbia, 1857, ch. 101, § 3, p. 408; Rev. Stat. Idaho, 1887, § 4520, p. 503; Rev. Codes Iowa 1888 (Miller), §§ 3321, 3322, pp. 1111, 1112; Stat. Minnesota 1878, § 33 (30), p. 846 (in 1861 the law of Minnesota was the same as in Indiana, Nichols v. Randall, 5 Minn. 304); Comp. Stat. Montana 1887, § 358, p. 158; Comp. Stat. Nebraska 1885, § 847, p. 726; Gen. Stat. Nevada 1885, § 3270, p. 810; See Weil v. Howard, 4 Nev. 384; Rev. Stat. Ohio, 1890, § 5021, p. 1263; Laws Utah 1884, p. 268, § 606.

3. In several of the States it is expressly provided that judgment for the deficiency may be entered against the mortgagor and his surety or any person liable to pay the debt secured by the mortgage. Dakota Code (1 Levisce), §§ 136, 617, 619, pp. 41, 164-5; North Carolina Code 1883, § 267, p. 101; South Carolina Code 1888, p. 128, § 188; Indiana Rev. Stat. 1888 (Myers & Co.), § 1097 (714) (633); Michigan How. Anno. Stat. 1882, §§ 6702-4, pp. 1732-3; New Jersey Rev. 1877, p. 118, § 76; New York Anno. Code 1889, § 1627, p. 581; Wisconsin Anno. Stat. (S. & B. 1889), p. 179, § 3156; Anno Stat. Illinois (Starr & Curtis), vol. 2, p. 1642, par. 16.

The parties to a note or bond may be joined in a suit thereon, and a mortgage given by one to secure said note or bond may be foreclosed in the same suit. Eastman v. Turman, 24 Cal. 379; Thorne v. Newby, 59 How. Pr. (N.Y.) 120; King v. Safford, 19 Ohio St. 587; Potter v. Hussey, 1 Utah 249.

So the maker of a note, and a mortgage given by him and a third party. Ball v. Nash, 55 Ind. 9.

The guarantor of a note may not be joined unless the statute authorizes such joinder. Borden v. Gilbert, 13 Wis. 670.

If a mortgage is assigned as a pledge for the payment of the debt of the mortgagee, the assignee may unite in the same action his claim against the mortgagor and mortgagee, and persons having liens on the mortgaged premises. Farwell v. Jackson, 28 Cal. 105.

In an action for breach of contract, to secure the performance of which the some States, be entered against subsequent purchasers from the mortgagor who have assumed the payment of the mortgage debt.¹ Similar joinders have been allowed in proceedings on a vendor's lien, for a legacy charged on land, and for the foreclosure of a lien obligor had executed a mortgage, it is not a misjoinder to ask a foreclosure of the mortgage. Stapleton v. King, 40 Iowa 278.

In Michigan, Oregon and Washington, the mortgagor, surety etc., must have made an agreement to pay to support a personal judgment, and such agreement will not be implied. Howell's Anno. Stat. 1882, § 5656, p. 1458. Howe v. Lemon, 37 Mich. 164; Gen. Laws Oreg. 1872, p. 196, § 410, p. 516, § 7; Code of Washington, 1881, pp. 135-6, §§ 610, 611, 619.

The provisions as to a personal judgment against the mortgagee do not apply to cases where the mortgagors were not personally liable for the debt, as where mortgages were executed by others than the debtor, as collateral security, etc. Chittenden v. Gossage, 18 Iowa 157; Corry v. Gaynor, 21 Ohio St. 277; Fleming v. Kerkendall, 31 Ohio St. 568. Nor where the mortgagor was not served with process. Wood v. Stanberry, 21 Ohio St. 142. Nor to an action by the trustees for the foreclosure of railway mortgage bonds. Welsh v. First Div. St. P. & Pac. R. Co., 25 Minn. 314.

The defendant must have been personally served. Booth v. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co., 43 Mich. 299; Innes v. Stewart, 36 Mich. 285. See Embury v. Bergamini, 9 C. E. Gr. (24 N. J. Eq.) 227.

The defendant may be personally served in another county. Maholm v. Marshall, 29 Ohio St. 611.

Such personal decree will not be given, if an action at law for the debt would be barred by the statute of limitations. Michigan Ins. Co. v. Brown, 11 Mich. 265.

The proceedings against a guarantor are new and supplementary to, and not a continuation of, the foreclosure proceedings. The mortgaged premises and the mortgagor's other property must be exhausted before a personal judgment may be had against the guarantor. Johnson v. Shepard, 35 Mich. 115.

Sureties, not for the payment of a mortgage, but for the provision of a sinking fund, are not liable to the personal judgment. Joy v. Jackson, etc. Plank Road Co., 11 Mich. 155.

In foreclosing a mortgage against the heir of the mortgagor it is error to render a personal decree against him for the debt. Harbison v. Vaughan, 42 Ark. 539.

As to entering judgment for a deficiency against a deceased mortgagor's heirs, qua the assets of the estate in their hands. See Collins' Case, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 289; s. c., 6 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 227; United States Life Ins. Co. v. Jordan, 21 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 330; Trapier v. Waldo, 16 S. Car. 276;

1. The judgment may not be entered against subsequent purchasers from the mortgagor. Rourke v. Coulton, 4 Brad. (Ill. App.) 257; Carleton v. Byington, 24 Iowa 172; Stone v. Becker, 2 Clev. L. Rep. (Ohio) 346. It may in some of the States, if the purchaser has assumed the payment of the mortgage. Bowen v. Kurtz, 37 Iowa 239; Crawford v. Edwards, 33 Mich. 354; Miller v. Thompson, 34 Mich. 10; Taylor v. Whitmore, 35 Mich. 97; Carley v. Fox, 38 Mich. 387; Klapworth v. Dressler, 2 Beas. (13 N. J. Eq.) 62; Cashman v. Henry, 75 N. Y. 103; Comstock v. Drohan, 71 N. Y. 9; aff'g s. c., 8 Hun (N. Y.) 373; Thayer v. Marsh, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 501; Haile v. Nichols, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 37; Munson v. Dyett, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 333. But such liability cannot be enforced by a separate action. Hicks v. McGarry, 38 Mich. 667.

The grantee of the mortgagor is not liable if the mortgagor was not. Vrooman v. Turner, 69 N. Y. 280; rev. 8 Hun (N. Y.) 78; Fairchild v. Lynch, 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. (14 J. & S.) 1.

A personal decree for this deficiency may be entered against a mortgagee who assigns the mortgage and guarantees its payment. Jarman v. Wiswall, 9 C. E. G. (24 N. J. Eq.) 267; Bristol v. Morgan, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 142; Leonard v. Morris, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 90.

See this subject discussed more at length in the article on FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 8, p. 264, et seq. subtitle XII. Judgment for Deficiency.

on personal property.¹ The judgment is the same as a judgment at law.² These code provisions as to joinder are permissive, however, and not compulsory.³

(c) CAUSES OF ACTION BY AND AGAINST DIFFERENT PARTIES (see PARTIES).—Under the provisions of the codes several plaintiffs may not join their causes of action against the same defendant or defendants,⁴ though the same plaintiff

1. Where a vendor of land takes the vendee's notes in payment, and sues thereon, he should unite his equitable claim for a foreclosure of his vendor's lien. Walker v. Sedgwick, 8 Cal. 398; Stephens v. Magor, 25 Wis. 533. Compare Turner v. Pierce, 34 Wis. 658.

Proceedings to have a legacy declared a lien upon lands of testator in the hands of his devisee, and to enforce such lien by sale of the land may be joined. Powers v. Powers, 28 Wis. 659.

A plaintiff may join an action for judgment on a note with a prayer for the foreclosure of a lien on certain stocks pledged to secure the note. F. & M. Nat. Bank v. Rogers, 1 N. Y. Sup. 757.

2. The lien of such a judgment is the same as a judgment at law. Germania Turn-Verein, 74 Ill. 54.

3. These code provisions do not prohibit a separate action at law for this balance. Palmer v. Harris, 100 Ill. 276. See Hayden v. Snow, 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.) 511; Spruce v. Ins. Co., 40 Ohio St. 517. In Michigan, leave of court is, however, required. Innes v. Stewart, 36 Mich. 285.

4. Different Plaintiffs.—Joinder of Actions by.—Two or more parties having distinct causes of action against the same defendant cannot join in one suit to enforce their rights. Bertrand v. Byrd, 5 Ark. 651; Sutherland v. Underwriter's Agency, 53 Ga. 442; Germania Fire Ins. Co. v. Hawks, 55 Ga. 674; Gray v. Rothschild, 48 Hun (N. Y.) 596; Powell v. Dayton, 13 Oreg. 446; N. & W. R. Co. v. Smoot, 81 Va. 495; Hinkle v. Davenport, 38 Iowa 355; Grant v. McCarty, 38 Iowa 468; Schultz v. Winter, 7 Nev. 130.

An action by a legatee to follow a fund which the personal representative failed to collect on account of alleged fraud cannot be joined with an action brought by such personal representative to collect the assets of the estate. Paxton v. Wood, 77 N. Car. 11.

A joint action by several claiming separate and distinct portions of a league of land brought to recover their respective parts or to recover meane profits is a misjoinder. Allen v. Read, 66 Tex. 13; Wood v. McGuire's Children, 17 Ga. 303.

So also where they claim the whole land by separate and hostile titles. Hubbell v. Lerch, 58 N. Y. 237.

It is a misjoinder when the action is brought to recover damages to their respective lands, though against one defendant and caused by the same act. Barham v. Hostetter, 67 Cal. 272.

But a joint action by several owners of distinct portions of land for one injury to them all, and claiming damages in solido, was allowed in Hellams v. Switzer, 24 S. Car. 39.

Distributees or cestuis que trust cannot sue jointly and recover a joint judgment against the administrator or trustee for an alleged balance of their several shares of the amount found due to them by settlement, or as to matters relating to the different trusts. Pelly v. Bowyer, 7 Bush (Ky.) 513; Weeks v. Cornwall, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 643.

Where A is liable to B, and B to C, B and C can unite in an action against A. Carney v. Walden, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 388.

When two mortgages on the same property, one in favor of the husband and one in favor of his wife, were joined in the same petition for foreclosure, the objection of misjoinder not being taken by plea, answer or demurrer, must be considered as waived. Bartlett v. Boyd, 34 Vt. 256.

Where several persons have been injured by the same libel, each has a separate cause of action and must sue alone. Robinett v. McDonald, 65 Cal. 611.

So in the English practice, a vendor of goods and the endorers of a bill given in payment therefor may not join in one suit on the claims, on the bill and on the note. Smith v. Richardson, L. R., 4 C. P. Div. 112; s. c., 27 W. R. 230; 48 L. J., C. P. 140; 40 L. T. N. S. 256.

may declare upon a contract between himself and defendant, and upon a contract between defendant and a third person which has been assigned to him,¹ and a number of the States have specially provided for the joinder of plaintiff's claiming mechanics' liens upon the same premises.²

In like manner the same plaintiff may not join distinct causes of action against different defendants,³ except in proceedings to

1. Individual and Assigned Causes.—But since a plaintiff may unite several causes of action in the same complaint, where they all arise out of contracts, express or implied, a claim for work done by the plaintiff for the defendant might be united with a claim of third persons for work done by them for the defendant and by them assigned to the plaintiff. Frazer v. Oakdale Lumber & Water Co., 73 Cal. 187; s. c., 14 Pac. Rep. 829; Pierce v. Bicknell, 11 Kan. 262; Myers v. Miller, 2 West. L. Monthly (O.) 420. See Keller v. Roesler, 1 C. P. Rep. (Pa.) 124; s. c., 2 Luz., L. T., N. S. (Pa.) 7.

A count on a writing obligatory executed by defendant to plaintiff may be joined with a count on a promissory note made by defendant to a third party who endorsed it to the plaintiff, said plaintiff being entitled under the statute to sue on said note in his own name. Barclay v. Moore, 17 Ala. 634.

But the notes must have been endorsed or assigned to the plaintiff. Norris v. Pollard, 75 Ga. 359.

A claim for damages for a tort as well as a claim arising ex-contractu, if it may be assigned, may be joined by the assignee thereof with a claim due him in his individual capacity, provided the two claims are properly joined under the codes. More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590; Hall v. Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton R. R., 1 Dis. (O.) 58.

2. Mechanics' Liens.—"Any number of persons claiming liens may join in the same action, and when separate actions are commenced the court may consolidate them." Code of California, § 1195, approved March 18th, 1885. Deering's Ann. C. & S., vol. 3, p. 469; Dakota Code (1 Levissee), § 667, p. 175; Rev. Code Dist. of Columbia 1857, ch. 105, § 9, p. 418; Rev. Stat. Idaho 1887, § 5137, p. 571; Rev. Stat. Indiana, vol. 2 (Myers & Co.), § 5289; Comp. Laws Kansas 1885, (Dassler), §§ (4451, 4452), 634, 635; Rev. Code Mississippi 1880, § 1385, p. 395; Comp. Laws New Mexico 1884, § 1532; Gen. Laws Oregon 1872, p.

654, § 9. (This law was repealed by the act of October 28th, 1874, P. L. p. 104, which was in turn in part repealed by the act of February 11th, 1885, P. L. 13, neither of which two acts contain the provision of the old law upon this subject). Code of Tennessee 1884, p. 819, § 4287; Laws Utah 1884, p. 343, § 1069; Code Washington 1881, p. 335, § 1968; Ann. Stat. Wisconsin (S. & B. 1889), p. 1851, § 3324; Allis v. Meadow Spring Distilling Company, 67 Wis. 16.

Proceedings to foreclose mechanics' liens could not be consolidated prior to the statutes therefor. Harsh v. Morgan, 1 Kan. 293.

In Pennsylvania, it is provided that in proceedings by writ of scire facias on a mechanics' lien, "Upon the return of such writ it shall be lawful for any other person having filed a claim as aforesaid, to cause to be entered on the record of the same suit a suggestion setting forth the amount and nature of his demand, and thereupon he may have a rule upon the defendant to appear and plead thereto, as in other actions." Act of June 16, 1836, § 19. P. L. 699, Br. Purd. Dig., tit. Mechanics' Liens.

3. Same Plaintiff—Distinct Causes of Action—Different Defendants.—Distinct causes of action in favor of the same plaintiff or plaintiffs, but against different defendants, may not be joined. Ferguson v. Terry, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 96; Robinson v. Rice, 20 Mo. 229; Phillips v. Flynn, 71 Mo. 424; Burns v. Williams, 88 N. Car. 159. See Lowry v. Jackson, 27 S. Car. 318; s. c., 3 S. E. Rep. 473.

Not even if, by the same writing, where causes arising out of the same transaction cannot be joined. Harris v. Campbell, 4 Dana (Ky.) 586.

Plaintiff cannot recover damages occasioned by an attachment issued by A, and by a foreclosure by B in the same action, though by one contract B had agreed to release the mortgage, and A to give a credit on the claim under which he had issued the attachment. Buell v. Dodge, 79 Cal. 208.

recover the possession of real property,¹ and proceedings under special statutes against makers of an obligation, and the endorsers,

The rule is the same under the English practice. Burstall v. Beyfuss, 53 L. J., Ch. 565; s. c., 26 L. R., Ch. Div. 35; 32 W. R. 418; 50 L. T., N. S. 542.

Separate and distinct promises to pay made at different times will not support a joint action against the separate promisors, although they may impose a separate liability on each of the defendants. Jones v. Engelhardt, 78 Ala. 505; Jackson v. Bush, 82 Ala. 396; s. c., 1 So. Rep. 175; Burhaus v. Corey, 17 Mich. 282.

A cause of action against A for goods sold and delivered may not be joined with a cause of action against B on a promise to A to pay for said debts. Sanders v. Clason, 13 Minn. 379.

Where A has a claim to an account of income from certain property against B down to a certain date, and from that date against C, the grantee of B, he cannot join B and C as codefendants in the same suit. Patterson v. Kellogg, 53 Conn. 38.

A plaintiff may not obtain a transfer of certain shares of stock in a corporation which a defendant had acquired from him by fraud, and certain other shares in same corporation sold to B, defendant, under an assessment fraudulently levied by the corporation. Johnson v. Kirby, 65 Cal. 483.

A proceeding to invalidate a fraudulent mortgage to one person and to enforce a valid mortgage of other property to another may not be joined. Higgins v. Crichton, 63 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 354.

A joint action cannot be brought against several defendants for slander. Anderson v. Pack, 2 Clev. L. Rep. (Ohio) 260.

Where A has a claim against B, and C, by fraudulent representations induces A to assign to him the claim at a discount, A cannot in one action set aside the assignment to C and recover judgment against B. Nichols v. Drew, 94 N. Y. 22; aff. s. c., 19 Hun 490. Compare Powell v. Dayton, S. & G. R. R. Co., 13 Oreg. 446.

A plaintiff cannot join in the same complaint a cause of action in contract against A and a cause of action in tort against A and B. N. C. Land Co. v. Beatty, 69 N. Car. 329.

Where dogs belonging to different owners unite in depredations upon a flock of sheep, the owner of the sheep cannot maintain a joint action against the owners of the dogs for the damage done, but must sue each separately for the damage done by his own dog. Dyer v. Hutchins, 87 Tenn. 198.

A joint action for trespass and damage by stock cannot be maintained against the several owners of the stock. Cogswell v. Murphy, 46 Iowa 44.

Where A commits a trespass and erects a brick stack on B's land, B cannot sue A for the trespass and C, the successor of A, for the removal of the stack, in the same action. Equitable Life Ass. Soc. v. Schermerhorn, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 477. Or maintain a joint action against A and C for damages. Hines v. Jarrett, 26 S. Car. 480. Compare Lochmiller v. Indian Ford W. P. Co., 51 Wis. 683.

A claim for injuries caused by accumulations of ice and snow, and in consequence of a cellar being open, cannot constitute a joint action against the property owner and the city. Kelly v. Newman, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 156.

Where plaintiff, injured by an excavation in a lot, has an action against owner and municipality, he cannot join the two actions. Trowbridge v. Forepaugh, 14 Minn. 133.

A claim for equitable relief against a corporation cannot be joined with a claim for damages against individual defendants. House v. Cooper, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 292.

A joint action against several persons licenced to sell liquor, and their several sureties on their several bonds, cannot be maintained. Baker v. McCoy, 58 Ind. 215.

An action against an administrator and his sureties for a devastavit cannot be united with an action against a probate judge for taking insufficient sureties. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 96 N. Car. 14; s. c., 1 S. E. Rep. 648.

A joint action against several successive county treasurers for mismanagement of funds in their hands will not lie. Firth v. Roe, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 432.

1. Recovery of Real Property—Joinder of Defendant.—One plaintiff may sue one or more defendants claiming different portions of the premises sued for. Beard v. Federy, 3 Wallace (U. S.) 478; Central Pac. R. Co. v. Dyer, 1 Sawy. (U. S. C. C.) 641; Winans v.

guarantors or sureties.¹

Christy, 4 Cal. 70; Boles v. Cohen, 15 Cal. 150; Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420; Byington v. Woods, 13 Iowa 17; Bowers v. Keesecher, 9 Iowa 422; Woolfolk v. Ashby, 2 Met. (Ky.) 288; Sale v. Crutchfield, 8 Bush (Ky.) 636; Winona & St. Peter R. Co. v. St. Paul & Sioux City R. Co., 26 Minn. 179; Rank v. Levinns, 5 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 368; s. c., 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. (18 J. & S.) 159.

A party may institute a petitory action for one tract of land, and in the same petition may sue the defendant for slander of title of another and distinct tract. Williams v. Close, 12 La. An. 873. Compare Dodge v. Colby, 108 N. Y. 445.

Recovery of possession of one lot and damages for withholding it and damages for withholding another lot, may not be joined in one action, at least when plaintiff's title to the two lots accrued at different dates. Holmes v. Williams, 16 Minn. 164. Furlong v. Cooney, 72 Cal. 322.

The holder of three tax deeds to different tracks of land may not join proceedings to quiet title to all the tracts when their former owners were different. Turner v. Duchman, 23 Wis. 500.

The plaintiff may not join counts alleging two distinct seisms, as they are distinct causes of actions. Overseers of the Poor of Boston v. Otis, 20 Pick. (37 Mass.) 38.

But see Howell's An. Stat. 1882, Michigan, § 7798, p. 1950; DeMill v. Moffat, 49 Mich. 125; Crittenden v. Crittenden, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 359.

1. Makers, Endorsers, Guarantors and Sureties — Joinder of. — By § 2, ch. 1, of the rules under the Practice act in Connecticut it is provided that "persons severally and immediately liable on the same obligation or instrument, including parties to bills of exchange and promissory notes, and endorsers, guarantors and sureties, whether on the same or by a separate instrument, may all or any of them be joined as defendants, and a joint judgment may be rendered against them so joined."

To the same effect are the laws of California Code (Deering) 1885, § 383; Michigan Howell's Anno. Stat. 1882, p. 1857, § 7345; Kansas Comp. Laws (Dassler) 1885, p. 609, § (3832), 39; Nevada Gen. Stat. 1885, § 3037; North Carolina Code 1883, vol. 1, p. 70, § 186.

It seems that this rule would not authorize the joining as defendants of the maker of a note which had been merged in a judgment and a guarantor of the note. Lemmon v. Strong, 55 Conn. 443; Lindle v. Crowley, 26 Kan. 47; Wooten v. Maultsby, 69 N. Car. 462.

In Massachusetts, it is provided that persons severally liable upon contracts in writing, including all parties to bills of exchange and promissory notes, may all or any of them be joined in the same action. Pub. Stat. 1882, p. 965, § 4.

To the same effect are the codes of Colorado, § 14; Indiana, Rev. Stat. 1888 (Myers & Co.), § 270; Mix v. State Bank, 13 Ind. 521; Kentucky, Carroll's Code, 1888, § 26; Arkansas Dig. 1884, § 4943; Iowa Rev. Code (Miller's) 1888, p. 882, § 2550; Minnesota Stat. 1878, p. 711, § 36 (35); Missouri Rev. Stat. 1879, § 3467; Nebraska Comp. Stat. 1885, p. 633, § 44; New York Anno. Code 1889, § 454 (Civ. Proc., § 120); Ohio Rev. Stat. 1890, § 5009; Oregon Code Civ. Proc., § 14; Gen. Laws 1872, p. 111, § 36; South Carolina Code 1888, p. 97, § 141.

Only guarantors on the same instrument may be joined. Hammel v. Beardsley, 31 Minn. 314; s. c., 17 N. W. Rep. 858; Lucy v. Wilkins, 33 Minn. 21; s. c., 21 N. W. Rep. 849; Harris v. Eldridge, 5 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 278.

Where one has entered into a covenant for the performance of certain duties, and another, by a separate writing, has become his surety to the performance of said covenants; they cannot be joined in the same action to recover for a breach. Childress v. McCullough, 5 Port. (Ala.) 54; Preston v. Davis, 8 Ark. 167; Hurlburt et al. v. W. & W. Mfg. Co., 38 Ark. 594; Marshall v. Peck, 1 Dana (Ky.) 609; Krauss v. McGlone, 3 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 272.

A entered into a written contract; A, B and C entered into an undertaking conditioned on the performance of A. A defaulted in the contract. Plaintiff was entitled to join a count on the contract, with a count on the undertaking. Houston v. Delahay, 14 Kan. 125.

Where one maker of a promissory note separately agrees to pay a larger rate of interest than the note calls for, the holder may sue all the makers on the note, and join in the same action his claim against the one on his sepa-

All joinders by or against different persons are prohibited in Georgia.¹

(d) ACTIONS EX CONTRACTU AND EX DELICTO.—The weight of authority is to the effect that the code provisions have not abolished the distinction between causes of action ex contractu and ex delicto, even when they arise out of the same transaction,² though there are decisions to the contrary;³ and in Iowa the decisions are uniform that the distinction is abolished, and such causes of action may be joined if they are between the same parties in the same right and with the same venue.⁴

rate contract. Knapp v. Mills, 20 Tex. 123.

An action upon a promissory note against the maker and endorser cannot be joined with an action on account against the endorser only. Thorpe v. Dickey, 51 Iowa 676.

A surety sued his cosurety for contribution and asked judgment against his principal in one action, there being no demurrer. Rankin v. Collins, 50 Ind. 158.

At common law a joint action cannot be maintained against the maker and endorser of a promissory note. Fawcett v. Fell, 77 Pa. St. 308.

1. Georgia.—“Distinct and separate claims of or against different persons cannot be united in the same action.” Code of Georgia 1882, p. 819, § 3256, (3191), (3180). See also the article on PARTIES, in the Am. and Eng. Encyc. of Law; Pomeroy on Remedies and Remedial Rights (2nd ed.), §§ 479-501, pp. 521-539; Bliss on Code Pleading (2nd ed.), §§ 94-5, pp. 147-150.

2. Tort and Contract.—Under the original code of New York a plaintiff was not allowed to state his cause of action in two counts, one sounding in tort and the other in contract. Cahoon v. Bank of Utica, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 422; Maxwell v. Farnam, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 236; Furniss v. Brown, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 59; Colwell v. N. Y. & Erie R. Co., 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 311; Waller v. Raskan, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 28; Sweet v. Ingerson, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 331; Hunter v. Powell, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 221; Booth v. F. & M. Nat. Bank, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 457; Keep v. Kaufman, 56 N. Y. 332. (These cases would seem clearly to overrule Robinson v. Flint, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 24, and Adams v. Bissell, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 382, where joinder was held proper if the causes of action arose out of the same transaction.) The provisions of the code adopted in 1877 are construed in the same way. McDonald v. Kountze, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 152; Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 163; Teall v. Syracuse, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 332; Compton v. Hughes, 38 Hun (N. Y.) 380; Dodge v. Glendenning, 10 N. Y. St. Rep. 8; Nichols v. Drew, 94 N. Y. 22; Seymour v. Lorillard, 8 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 90; Week v. Keteltas, 10 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 43.

The same conclusion has been reached in the following cases decided in the other code States. Lawrence v. Montgomery, 37 Cal. 183; Clark v. Lineberger, 44 Ind. 223; Jones v. Johnson, 86 Ky. 530; Jameson v. Copher, 35 Mo. 483; Ederlin v. Judge, 36 Mo. 359; Phillips v. Flynn, 71 Mo. 424; Logan v. Wallis, 76 N. Car. 416; Doughty v. Atlantic & N. Car. R. Co., 78 N. Car. 22; Lane v. Cameron, 38 Wis. 603.

3. A cause of action in tort may be united with a cause of action on contract, if the two causes of action arise out of the same transaction. Berry v. Carter, 19 Kan. 135; Gertler v. Linscott, 1 N. W. Rep. 579; s. c., 26 Minn. 82; Humphrey v. Merriam, 37 Minn. 502; s. c., 35 N. W. 365 (see an early case contra, Reynolds v. La Crosse & Minn. P. Co., 10 Minn. 178); Patterson v. Kirkland, 34 Miss. 423.

4. Iowa.—Causes of action ex contractu and ex delicto may be joined, if between the same parties, in the same right, and with the same venue. Turner v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Iowa 562; Jack v. D. M. & Ft. D. R. Co., 49 Iowa 627; Foster v. Hinson, 76 Iowa 714.

In an early case in California the court inclined to the view that the two causes of action could be joined when they arose out of the same transaction. Jones v. Cortes, 17 Cal. 487. See also Ghiraldelli v. Bourland, 32 Cal. 585. These cases would seem, however,

(e) ACTIONS AT LAW AND IN EQUITY.—Under the provisions of the codes, the principles both of law and equity are preserved, but prayers for both species of relief may in many cases be joined in one action.¹ Thus an instrument in writing may be reformed and enforced in the same proceedings.² And in like manner instruments in writing may be annulled or cancelled and a recovery of money or possession of land had in the same action.³ So in many States a fraudulent clearly to be overruled by Lawrence v. Montgomery, 37 Cal. 183, and Loup v. California Southern R. Co., 63 Cal. 97, 99.

1. Law and Equity.—Principles Preserved.—The courts under the code system give relief not merely to the extent and in the cases where it was heretofore given by the courts of law, but also to the extent and in the cases where it was heretofore given by courts of equity; thus preserving the principles of both systems, the only change being that the principles are applied and acted on in one court and by one mode of procedure. Lee v. Pearce, 68 N. Car. 76; Zeile v. Moritz, 1 Utah 283; Thompson v. Caton, 3 Wash. 31.

2. Instruments Reformed and Enforced.—"Actions brought to reform instruments in writing, such as policies of insurance and other contracts, mortgages, deeds of conveyance and the like, and to enforce the same as reformed by judgments for the recovery of the money due on the contracts, or for the foreclosure of the mortgages, or for the recovery of possession of the land conveyed by the deed, fall within the same general principle. One cause of action only is stated in such cases, however various may be the reliefs demanded and granted." Pomeroy on Remedies, § 459; Hutchinson v. Ainsworth, 63 Cal. 286; Hutchinson v. Ainsworth, 73 Cal. 452; Hunter v. McCoy, 14 Ind. 528; Rigsbee v. Trees, 21 Ind. 227; Sanders v. Farrell, 83 Ind. 28; Smith v. Kyler, 74 Ind. 575; Walkup v. Zehring, 13 Iowa 306; Guerney v. American Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 104; McClurg v. Phillips, 49 Mo. 315; Burnside v. Wayman, 49 Mo. 356; Henderson v. Dickey, 50 Mo. 161; Stewart v. Carter, 4 Neb. 564; Ruhling v. Hackett, 1 Nev. 360; Gooding v. McAlister, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 123; New York Ice Co. v. North Western Ins. Co., 23 N. Y. 357; Bidwell v. Astor Mut. Ins. Co., 16 N. Y. 263; Meyer v. Van Collem, 7 Abb. Prac. 222; McConn v. Sims, 69 N. Car.

159; Globe Ins. Co. v. Boyle, 21 Ohio St. 119; Yates v. Yates, 21 Wis. 473; Harrison v. Juneau Bank, 17 Wis. 340; Moon v. McKnight, 54 Wis. 551.

But after a foreclosure and sale the mortgage cannot be reformed and the whole proceeding amended so as to pass the title to the vendee. Rogers v. Abbott, 37 Ind. 138; Laub v. Buckmiller, 17 N. Y. 620; Miller v. Kolb, 47 Ind. 220; Angle v. Speer, 66 Ind. 488.

But a decree of foreclosure and sale is no bar to a correction of the mortgage and a reforeclosure. Conyers v. Mericles, 75 Ind. 443; Jones v. Sweet, 77 Ind. 187; McCasland v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 108 Ind. 130; Burkam v. Burk, 96 Ind. 270.

In a proceeding for partition, a mortgagee defendant may by counterclaim procure the reformation of his mortgage and a foreclosure. Conyers v. Mericles, 75 Ind. 443.

In Pennsylvania in an action at law parol evidence is admissible, to reform writings in case of fraud, accident and mistake, and under this rule, an instrument in writing may be reformed and executed in the same action. Moliere v. Penna. Fire Ins. Co., 5 Rawle (Pa.) 342; Spring Garden Ins. Co. v. Scott, 27 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 76; Noel v. Pymatuning Ins. Co., 25 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 233. Compare Cooper v. Ins. Co., 50 Pa. St. 299; Rowand v. Finney, 96 Pa. St. 192; Ahlborn v. Wolff, 118 Pa. St. 242.

3. Instruments Cancelled.—A complaint was held good which asked (1) to impeach and set aside a decree; (2) to annul deeds executed in pursuance thereof; (3) to recover the land with mesne profits and an injunction against waste. England v. Garner, 86 N. Car. 366.

Causes of action to cancel a bond on which A was surety, and to recover the sum paid A for acting as surety, may be joined. Zimmerman v. Kinkle, 108 N. Y. 282.

In like manner an action to cancel a conveyance may be set aside by a simple contract creditor, his debt reduced to judgment and made a lien on the property fraudulently conveyed, in one action.¹ Deeds may be release of damages for fraud, etc., and an action to recover the damages so released, may be joined. Blair v. Chicago & Alton R. Co., 89 Mo. 383.

In a proceeding to quiet title the plaintiff may ask the cancellation of a deed or the vacation of another's title and the possession of the premises. Keens v. Gaslin, 24 Neb. 310; Phillips v. Gorham, 17 N. Y. 270; Lattin v. McCarty, 41 N. Y. 107; rev. s. c., 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 239; Palmer v. Searing, 12 N. Y. St. Rep. 559.

Also a claim for mesne profits and damages. Bruce v. Kelly, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 229.

Such a joinder was held improper in Lee v. Simpson, 29 Wis. 333; and also in Curd v. Lackland, 43 Mo. 139; Gray v. Paine, 43 Mo. 203; Wynn v. Cory, 43 Mo. 301. These decisions in Missouri seem, however, to have held the joinder in one count improper, and the subsequent Missouri cases cited in the preceding note would seem to have overruled them.

1. Reconveyance Enforced and Debt Proved.—A plaintiff may in the same action join a cause of action for which he seeks a personal judgment against the defendant with a cause of action to set aside fraudulent conveyances of defendant's property, although made at different times and to different persons, and subject the same to his lien. Pomeroy on Remedies and Remedial Rights (2nd ed.), § 459, p. 501; Macondray v. Simmons, 1 Cal. 393; Frank v. Kessler, 30 Ind. 8; Hamilton v. Barricklow, 96 Ind. 398; Chamberlin v. Jones, 13 West. Rep. (Ind.) 786; Anderson v. Anderson, 80 Ky. 638; North v. Bradway, 9 Minn. 183; Dawson Bank v. Harris, 84 N. Car. 206; Mebane v. Layton, 86 N. Car. 571.

In like manner trust property which has been conveyed in fraud of heirs or cestuis que trusts, may be ordered to be reconveyed and the liability of the trustee determined in the same suit. Howse v. Moody, 14 Fla. 59; Reed v. Howe, 28 Iowa 250; Gafford v. Dickinson, 37 Kan. 287; s. c., 15 Pac. Rep. 175; Silsbree v. Smith, 41 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 418; Stronach v. Stronach, 20 Wis. 129. Compare Bowers v. Keesecher, 9 Iowa 422; Richtinyer v. Richtinyer, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 55; Bassett v. Warner, 23 Wis. 673.

Fraudulent conveyances of an execution debtor may be set aside by an execution vendee and the possession of the property recovered in the same action. Pfister v. Dascey, 65 Cal. 403; Burch v. Brantley, 20 S. Car. 503.

In like manner title papers and notes may be recovered, conveyances set aside and judgment entered for the notes in one action, when said title papers and notes had been procured by a conspiracy. Sheppard v. Stephens, 2 Southwest. Rep. (Ky.) 548.

A conveyance in fraud of the rights of a mortgagor may be set aside and the mortgage foreclosed in the same action. Greither v. Alexander, 15 Iowa 470; Moon v. McKnight, 54 Wis. 551.

But a trust deed under which the mortgagor claims cannot be set aside and the mortgage foreclosed in the same action. Helck v. Reinheimer, 23 N. Y. W. D. 473.

A suit to set aside a conveyance by a debtor of land not included in an assignment by him for the benefit of creditors may not be joined with a suit for an accounting under the assignment. Hatcher v. Winters, 71 Mo. 30.

But in a proceeding to marshal a decedent's assets, disputed titles to land in another county, as well as to lands in the county of the suit, were held to be no misjoinder, and both titles were adjudicated upon. Barrett v. Watts, 13 S. Car. 441.

In a suit by heirs it is a misjoinder to sue (1) for damages against an administrator illegally granted administration; (2) to try title to lands situate in other counties and sold by him to residents of other counties; (3) for a partition of the estate, and (4) to recover the property in the hands of said administrator. Frost v. Frost, 45 Tex. 324.

A judgment creditor may not sue the executors of his debtor for an account and also ask an adjudication against a claim of title to certain real estate belonging to said estate, which title is claimed by a third party, and not through said executors. Suber v. Allen, 13 S. Car. 317.

In some of the States, however, a simple contract creditor cannot maintain an action against the debtor and his fraudulent assignee, asking judgment against his debtor, and also to have the assignment declared void and ordered to be re-executed, and premises recovered in one action,¹ claims for a specific performance and damages may be joined;² and perhaps a claim for the surrender of deeds, etc., with a money demand.³ Ejectment and a foreclosure of a mortgage or assignment of dower, may be joined.⁴ An injunction to restrain future trespasses or wrongs, with damages for those in the past, and a recovery of property, both real and personal, may be joined in one action.⁵ Joinder of claims at law and in equity are not compul-

the debt paid out of the proceeds of the assigned property. Stevens v. Chance, 47 Iowa 602; Young v. Wells, 33 Mo. 106; Schwitzer v. Cohen, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 665. Compare Alger v. Scoville, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 131; Marion Deposit Bank v. McWilliams, 1 West. L. Monthly (Ohio) 571; Thompson v. Caton, 3 Wash. Ter. 31; Blake v. Van Tilborg, 21 Wis. 672; Charboneau v. Heuni, 24 Wis. 250.

In these States, however, judgment creditors can still file a creditor's bill. Ogden v. Wood, 51 How. Pr. 375. Compare Mahler v. Schmidt, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 512; Fellows v. Fellows, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 682; Bank of British N. A. v. Suydam, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 379; Royer Wheel Co. v. Fielding, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 274; Oakley v. Lugwell, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 357; Bradner v. Holland, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 288; Gates v. Boomer, 17 Wis. 455.

A lien creditor can do so. Kalm v. Salmon, 10 Sawy. (U. S. C. C.) 183.

So can simple contract creditors. Mebane v. Layton, 86 N. Car. 571.

1. Re-execution of Deeds.—The re-execution of a deed by the sheriff to replace one, that is lost, and the recovery of the premises included in the deed may be joined in one action. McMillan v. Edwards, 75 N. Car. 81. So as to a deed executed by the defendant himself and lost. Jennings v. Reeves, 101 N. Car. 447.

2. Specific Performance—A specific performance and a claim for rents and profits may be united. Duvall v. Tinsley, 54 Mo. 93; Spier v. Robinson, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 325.

A specific performance and an action to recover money upon an alleged agreement may not be joined. Ferguson v. Burt, 2 Utah 388.

Contra, when both arise out of the same transaction and are founded upon the same written instrument. Gray v. Dougherty, 25 Cal. 266.

A specific performance of a contract and damages for its breach may be joined. Steinberger v. McGovern, 56 N. Y. 12. Compare Beck v. Allison, 56 N. Y. 366; Barlow v. Scott, 24 N. Y. 40.

A specific performance and a partition may be sought in the same action. Hall v. Hall, 38 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 97.

It is improper to unite an action for specific performance against one party and an action of ejectment against another in the same suit. Fagan v. Barnes, 14 Fla. 53.

3. Surrender of Deeds.—An equitable suit to compel the surrender of various deeds executed by an agent in violation of his authority may not be joined. Lexington & B. S. R. R. Co. v. Goodman, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 85. Nor can a suit to compel such a surrender and a suit for damages against the agent be joined. Gardner v. Ogden, 22 N. Y. 327.

A plaintiff may join a cause of action for the surplus on a foreclosure of a mortgage with a demand for the surrender of the notes secured by the mortgage. Cahoon v. Bank of Utica, 7 N. Y. 486; s. c., 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 401; rev. s. c., 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 134.

The recovery of the land itself on the ground that the mortgage had been paid before the sale, or else the surplus arising from the sale. Heggie v. Hill, 95 N. Car. 303.

4. Ejectment.—Ejectment and a foreclosure of a mortgage on the same land were allowed to be joined in Herron v. Herron, 91 Cal. 278; Martin v. McNeely, 101 N. Car. 634. Contra, as to different lands. Edgerton v. Powell, 72 N. Car. 64.

An action for the admeasurement of dower may be joined with an action of ejectment for the recovery of dower. Brown v. Brown, 4 Robt. (N. Y.) 688; s. c., 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 481.

5. Injunctions.—A plaintiff may ask to have his right to a certain water course determined, damages given him for diversion of the water, etc., by defendant, and an injunction against future

sory,¹ but where joined these claims must usually be separately stated.² Joinder of actions at law and in equity are not allowed in the United States courts, even when sitting in code States.³

diversions, etc., in the same action. Marius v. Bicknell, 10 Cal. 217; Weaver v. Conger, 10 Cal. 233; Jungerman v. Bover, 19 Cal. 354. So as to obstructions on a road and damages. Converse v. Hawkins, 31 Ohio St. 209.

Damages for overflow caused by dam and injunction to restrain its maintenance. Akin v. Davis, 11 Kan. 580. To same effect Getty v. Hudson River R. Co., 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 269.

A husband and wife may in the same proceeding seek an injunction to restrain the levy and sale of certain property on execution against the husband, and a decree that the property is that of the wife. Clegg v. Varnell, 18 Tex. 294.

Ejectment, damages for a trespass, and injunction against further trespasses, may be joined, if the relief, both equitable and legal, relate to all the matters at issue. Gates v. Kieff, 7 Cal. 124; Bigelow v. Gove, 7 Cal. 133, as explained in Weaver v. Conger, 10 Cal. 233; Natoma Water & M. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 545; More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590; Little v. Willford, 31 Minn. 173; Ware v. Johnson, 55 Mo. 500. See England v. Garner, 86 N. Car. 366; Hathaway v. Springfield, Mt. V. & P. R. R., 2 West. L. Monthly (Ohio) 481; Gillett v. Treganza, 13 Wis. 472; Riemer v. Johnke, 37 Wis. 258. So an injunction to restrain collection of taxes and an action to recover back those paid. Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54.

An injunction to restrain the infringement of a trade mark may be joined with a claim for an accounting of the profits and damages. Leidersdorff v. Flint, 50 Wis. 401.

An injunction should not be granted to restrain the doing of acts in relation to property in respect to which property no final judgment is prayed, as an injunction to restrain proceedings at law, when the final judgment prayed is damages for a trespass in levying and continuing an execution. Kahn v. Kahn, 15 Fla. 400.

The abatement of a nuisance and the recovery of damages therefor are not distinct causes of action which cannot be united in the same complaint, but merely different kinds of relief to which the plaintiff may be entitled where a nuisance is the cause of action. Yolo

Co. v. Sacramento, 36 Cal. 193; Grandona v. Lovdal, 70 Cal. 161; Bailey v. Dale, 71 Cal. 34; Emory v. Hazard Powder Co., 22 S. Car. 476; Lochmiller v. Indian Ford Water Power Co., 51 Wis. 683; Brickner Woolen Mills Co. v. Henry, 73 Wis. 229.

1. When a person may join his legal and equitable cause of action, he is not compelled to do so. He may proceed separately. Bruce v. Kelly, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 229.

2. The causes of action at law and in equity must be separately stated. Peyton v. Rose, 41 Mo. 257; Jones v. Moore, 42 Mo. 213; Curd v. Lackland, 43 Mo. 139; Keens v. Gaslin, 24 Neb. 310; Hathaway v. Springfield, Mt. V. & P. R. R. Co., 2 West L. Monthly (Ohio) 481; Harrison v. Juneau Bank, 17 Wis. 341.

The grounds of equity jurisdiction should be stated subsequently to and distinct from those upon which the judgment at law is sought. Natoma W. & M. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544.

Where the complaint asks legal and equitable relief, if the law and equity are inseparably mixed together, it would be demurrable; but it is not necessary that there should be express words showing where the declaration at law leaves off and the bill in equity begins. Gates v. Kieff, 7 Cal. 124.

An injunction to restrain future acts and damages for past, state but one cause of action. Shepard v. Manhattan R. Co., 5 N. Y. Sup. 189; Leidersdorff v. Flint, 50 Wis. 401.

The reformation of a contract and its enforcement, when reformed constitute but one cause of action. Gooding v. McAlister, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 123.

A nuisance is the cause of the action, and therefore the abatement thereof and damages therefor do not constitute separate causes of action, but merely different kinds of relief. They therefore need not be separately stated. Yolo Co. v. Sacramento, 36 Cal. 193; Davis v. Lambertson, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 480.

3. United States Courts.—In the United States courts the union of legal and equitable causes of action in one suit is forbidden by § 2 of the Process act of May 8th, 1792, substantially re-enacted in Rev. Stat., § 913;

(f) SEPARATE STATEMENT; CAUSE OF ACTION DEFINED.—At common law distinct causes of action should not be joined in the same count,¹ and the codes expressly require that causes of action when united “must be separately stated.”² But different items in an account, notes and breaches of contract may, as a rule, be united in one count.³ The relief asked must not be confounded with the cause of action, and there-and therefore when an action is brought in a State court where such a union is permitted, and the suit is removed to the United States courts, the plaintiff will be required to amend his petition so as to set forth only legal or equitable causes of action. Bennett v. Butterworth, 11 How. (U. S.) 669; Thompson v. Railroad Cos., 6 Wall. (U. S.) 134; Hurt v. Hollingsworth, 100 U. S. 100; Montejo v. Owen, 14 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 324. The plaintiff should divide his suit into two actions. Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., 8 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 299; La Mothe Mfg. Co. v. National Tube Works, 15 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 432; s. c., 7 Rep. 138.

1. Distinct Counts.—Common Law.—Distinct causes of action should not be joined in the same count. Portage Lake M. & M. Ben. Soc. v. Phillips, 36 Mich. 22; Potts v. Clarke, Spenc. (20 N. J. L.) 536; Handy v. Chatfield, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 35; Waggoner v. White, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 741.

The common counts could be joined in one count in assumpsit. Webber v. Tirill, 2 Saund. (6th ed.) 122a, note 2; Bailey v. Freeman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 280; Nelson v. Swan, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 483.

The common counts cannot all be united in one count as one cause of action, without any specification of the causes due upon each several cause. Buckingham v. Waters, 14 Cal. 146.

2. Causes Must be Stated Separately Under the Codes.—See the various code provisions and Pike v. Van Wormer, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 171; McCarty v. Fremont, 23 Cal. 196; Watson v. San Francisco & H. B. R. R. Co., 41 Cal. 17; White v. Cox, 46 Cal. 169; Sands v. Wood, 1 Iowa 263; Childs v. Bank of Mo., 17 Mo. 13; Mooney v. Kennett, 19 Mo. 551; Supervisors of Kewaunee Co. v. Decker, 30 Wis. 624.

As to the separate statement of actions at law and in equity, see supra, II, 4, e, note 3.

3. Different items of an account having no connection with each other may be joined in one paragraph, and a balance due thereon constitutes but one cause of action. Gaff v. Hutchinson, 38 Ind. 341; Tootle v. Wells, 39 Iowa 452; s. c., 18 Pac. Rep. 692; Kansas City Hotel Co. v. Sigmement, 53 Mo. 176; Wright v. Baldwin, 51 Mo. 269; Roehring v. Huebschmann, 34 Wis. 185.

When property is sold to be paid for in instalments and notes are given for each instalment, when they are all due, the plaintiff may claim the entire sum in one count. Morse v. Frost, 54 Conn. 84.

Several promissory notes may be joined in one paragraph. Firestone v. Klick, 67 Ind. 309; Stadler v. Parmlee, 10 Iowa 23; Merritt v. Nihart, 11 Iowa 57; Holland v. Kemp, 27 S. Car. 623; s. c., 3 S. E. Rep. 83.

But the actions against the maker and guarantor of a note are distinct and must be separately stated. Tucker v. Shiner, 24 Iowa 334.

Various breaches of a contract or bond constitute but one cause of action. De Haven v. Davis, 35 Mo. 406; Haynes v. Webster, 53 Mo. 135; Fisk v. Tank, 12 Wis. 276; Nichol v. Alexander, 28 Wis. 118.

Unless their investigation involves separate and independent enquiries and findings. Boyce v. Christy, 47 Mo. 70.

A complaint averring a contract and breach and claiming to recover the money paid thereon, and damages for the breach, alleges but one cause of action. Reedy v. Smith, 42 Cal. 245.

A breach of a number of distinct promises made in connection with a contract of marriage, may be alleged in one paragraph, as the breach of the marriage contract constitutes the sole cause of action. Dalton v. Barchand, 2 Clev. L. Rep. (Ohio) 57.

A balance of an account and a note therefor constitute but one cause of action. Claire v. Claire, 18 Neb. 54.

“Balance per settlement” and an open account constitute two causes of action. Eisenhower v. Stein, 37 Kan. 281; s. c., 15 Pac. Rep. 167.

A claim belonging to plaintiff and one assigned to him constitute two fore one general right may entitle a plaintiff to several reliefs.¹ So various injuries, all resulting from one act, which is the grava-causes of action. Pierce v. Bicknell, 11 Kan. 262.

1. Different Reliefs, but One General Right.—Mr. Pomeroy, in his discussion of the meaning of the phrase "cause of action," says: "The cause of action is very often confounded with the remedy. . . . It was shown in the opening paragraphs of the introductory chapter that every remedial right arises out of an antecedent primary right and corresponding duty, and a delict or breach of such primary right and duty by the person on whom the duty rests. Every judicial action must therefore involve the following elements: a primary right possessed by the plaintiff, and a corresponding primary duty devolving upon the defendant, a delict or wrong done by the defendant which consisted in a breach of such primary right and duty; a remedial right in favor of the plaintiff, and a remedial duty resting on the defendant springing from this delict, and finally the remedy or relief itself. . . . The cause of action will therefore always be the facts from which the plaintiff's primary right and the defendant's corresponding primary duty have arisen, together with the facts which constitute the defendant's delict or act of wrong." See Mr. Pomeroy's admirable work on Remedies and Remedial Rights (2nd ed.), §§ 452-462, pp. 494-504.

The reformation and enforcement of an instrument may be demanded in one count. See cases cited supra, II, 4, e, note 3.

The cause of action of a stockholder is that he entrusted money to the corporation and its officers, and therefore a dissolution, receiver, accounting, etc., may all be asked in one complaint. Mitchell v. Bank of St. Paul, 7 Minn. 252.

So causes based on the director's misfeasance and negligence. Smith v. Rathbun, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 150.

A proceeding to settle affairs of a partnership is but one cause of action, and plaintiff may ask in one paragraph an accounting, a receiver, an injunction against the sale of partnership property, the annulling of such a sale, and a specific lien in complainant on said property. Palmer v. Tyler, 15 Minn. 106. Compare Skidmore v. Collier, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 50.

An action to foreclose a mortgage given by A to secure a note and for judgment against A and other parties to the note, are separate actions. Sands v. Wood, 1 Iowa 263; Roberts v. Glenn, 1 Clev. L. Rep. (Ohio) 46; Giddings v. Barney, 31 Ohio St. 80. But contra when the personal judgment, and a sale of the land under the vendors or a mechanics' lien is asked. Davenport v. Murray, 68 Mo. 198; Hardy v. Miller, 11 Neb. 395.

An injunction to restrain the satisfaction, etc., of a judgment, and the substitution of any but plaintiff's attorney in that action, is but one cause of action. Standart v. Burtis, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 82.

When two separate patents on one article owned by plaintiff are each infringed by defendant in manufacturing that article, a bill to restrain such infringements may include the infringement of both patents. Gillespie v. Cummings, 3 Sawy. (U. S. C. C.) 259.

In a petition to vacate judgments, each judgment constitutes a separate cause of action. Elizabeth v. Morrison, 1 Clev. L. Rep. (Ohio) 195.

An application for alimony is an incident to a proceeding in divorce and not a separate cause of action. Damon v. Damon, 28 Wis. 510.

A complaint which states that plaintiff is entitled to recover on two different legal grounds, viz.: a contract of guaranty and a mistake, states but one cause of action arising from the facts of the case. Mills v. Barney, 22 Cal. 240; Bonney v. Reardin, 6 Bush (Ky.) 34.

Fraudulent disposition of his property by a judgment debtor, though by separate conveyances to different parties, constitutes but one cause of action, and a complaint to set them all aside need contain only one count. Strong v. Taylor School Twp., 79 Ind. 208; Donovan v. Dunning, 69 Mo. 436; Marx v. Tailer, 12 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 226; Tisdale v. Moore, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 19.

So all the facts connected with an illegal alienation of corporate property. Beecher v. Schieffelin, 4 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 230; or the fraudulent acts inducing plaintiff to convey his property. Palmer v. Searing, 12 N. Y. St. Rep. 559.

men of plaintiff's action, may be joined in one count.¹ Each count must contain all the facts necessary to constitute a cause of action.²

1. One Gravamen of the Action.—When a complaint in one count states a malicious prosecution and an undertaking filed therein, it was held that the gravamen of the complaint was the malicious prosecution, and the action therefor was barred by the statute of limitations, and that the allegations with regard to the undertaking could not be construed as constituting a separate cause of action which was not barred by the statute. Sharp v. Miller, 54 Cal. 329. Compare Schenck v. Butsch, 32 Ind. 338.

It was doubted whether a slander and a malicious prosecution arising from the same transaction constituted more than one cause of action in Harris v. Avery, 5 Kan. 146.

An entire conversation, though containing several distinct charges, either of which is actionable, constitutes but one cause of action, and can properly be made the basis of but one count in a petition. Cracraft v. Cochran, 16 Iowa 301.

In an action to recover for injuries to plaintiff's wife, house and furniture, caused by a single explosion of gunpowder, it is not proper pleading to set forth the injury to each as a separate cause of action, in a distinct or separate count. "The complaint is of injury resulting from an explosion of powder. The fact that a part of those injuries consisted in the wounding of the wife, a part in the destruction of furniture, and a part in injury to a house, cannot be regarded as a proper reason for setting forth each specific injury in a separate count or paragraph as an independent cause of action." Hazard Powder Co. v. Volger, 18 Pac. Rep. (Wyo.) 636; Howe v. Peckham, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 229; s. c., 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 656.

When the gravamen of an action is a certain act, the fact that it may be accomplished by different means is not enough to require separate counts. Whether negligence arose from want of care in construction or operation of a dam is not sufficiently material to require separate counts. Hoffman v. Tuolumne Co. Water Co., 10 Cal. 413; Gale v. Tuolumne Water Co., 14 Cal. 25.

Tenders by different persons, acting as agents of plaintiffs at different times and places, of separate lots of grain for transportation, all making the quantity refused to be transported constitute but one cause of action for the refusal to transport the whole quantity. Cobb v. I. C. R. Co., 38 Iowa 601.

The recovery of real property, mesne profits and damages may all be asked in one count. Sullivan v. Davis, 4 Cal. 291. See the cases cited supra, II, 4, b. (2). Contra, Harrall v. Gray, 12 Neb. 543.

Recovery of personalty and damages for withholding may be claimed in one count. Pharis v. Carver, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 236.

The value of personal property destroyed and damages for its destruction may be demanded in one count. Tendesen v. Marshall, 3 Cal. 440. See Angell v. Hopkins, 79 Cal. 181.

Where trespass is charged, the allegation of injuries to personal property are not statements of separate causes of action, but mere averments in aggravation of the wrongful entry, and all may be included, therefore, in one count. Gilbert v. Pritchard, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 46; Whatling v. Nash, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 579.

But when damages are claimed for a trespass upon a dam, canal, etc., and for the diversion of the water therein, there are two distinct causes of action which must be separately stated. Nevada Co. & S. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 37 Cal. 282; Nevada Co. & S. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 43 Cal. 180.

In an action to recover moneys fraudulently obtained, though by divers frauds at different times, constitutes but one cause of action. People v. Tweed, 63 N. Y. 194; s. c., 50 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 38, affg 5 Hun (N. Y.) 353.

Damages for fraudulent representations that sheep sold were sound, and for injuries caused to other sheep from contact with these, constitute but one cause of action. Wilcox v. McCoy, 21 Ohio St. 655.

Damages for nondelivery of cattle and putting them in a stock yard infected with disease constitute but one cause of action. Baldwin v. L. S. & Mich. South. R. Co., 1 Clev. (Ohio) 178.

2. Sufficiency of Counts.—Each count must contain all the facts necessary to constitute a cause of action,

5. Joinder in Actions on Bonds and Recognizances.—In an action on a bond or recognizance only causes of action under the bond can be joined,¹ but different breaches of one and the same bond may be joined.² Actions on several bonds or recognizances may and its defects cannot be supplied from statements in other counts unless expressly referred to; and not then, if the matters referred to constitute the gravamen of the action. Haskell v. Haskell, 54 Cal. 262; Loup v. California South. R. Co., 63 Cal. 97, 100; Murphy v. Estes, 6 Bush (Ky.) 532; Nat. Bank of Michigan v. Green, 33 Iowa 140 (Rev. Code of Iowa, Miller, 1888, § 2646, par. 5, p. 916; each must be sufficient in itself); Stewart v. Balderston, 10 Kan. 131; Gerther v. Linscott, 26 Minn. 82; s. c., 1 N. W. Rep. 579.

An objection on this ground must be made in the trial court. Conver v. Chicago M. & St. P. R. Co., 62 Iowa 460.

When, however, several causes of action arise out of the same transaction, if the plaintiff upon the facts stated is entitled to any portion of the relief prayed for, an objection that neither cause of action, taken separately, is sufficiently stated to entitle a recovery, is not a fatal defect, provided the complaint contains such facts as, taken together, showed the plaintiff entitled to both kinds of relief sought. Montgomery v. McEwen, 7 Minn. 351; First Div. St. Paul & Pac. R. Co. v. Rice, 25 Minn. 278.

If all the facts constitute one cause of action, they may be stated in one paragraph and different reliefs prayed. The fact that the plaintiff does not ask for the proper relief, or asks for inconsistent relief, is not ground of demurrer. Connor v. Board of Education of St. Anthony, 10 Minn. 439; First Div. St. Paul & Pac. R. Co. v. Rice, 25 Minn. 278; McGlothlin v. Hewer, 44 Mo. 550.

1. Bonds and Recognizances.—A cause of action against the sureties upon the bond of an administrator, arising from a breach of the condition of the bond, cannot be united in the same complaint with a cause of action against the administrator, arising from acts of the deceased intestate in fraudulently disposing of his property. House v. Moody, 14 Fla. 59.

In an action on a recognizance, the plaintiff may not join a count asking that securities given by the principal to indemnify the sureties in said bond should be applied to the payment of his claim when recovered. People v. Skidmore, 17 Cal. 260.

In an action against a sheriff for an alleged trespass in making an unlawful levy, a count against the sureties on his official bond which does not allege that they participated in the trespass, or that the sheriff signed the bond, is a misjoinder. Ghiradelli v. Bourland, 32 Cal. 585; Hoye v. Raymond, 25 Kan. 665.

In an action against a sheriff for wrongful seizure of goods, a count cannot be joined upon the liability of the makers of an indemnity bond executed to the sheriff prior to the levy. Longcope v. Bruce, 44 Tex. 434.

A cause of action against a probate judge for taking insufficient sureties on an administration bond cannot be united with a cause of action against the administrator and said sureties for a devastavit. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 96 N. Car. 14; s. c., 1 S. E. Rep. 648.

2. Different Breaches.—Where one is guardian of several wards and gave but one bond, all the wards may unite in a proceeding for an accounting. Slatings v. Barrett, 26 S. Car. 474.

Several wards may join in a suit on their guardian's bond to recover for the conversion of their joint property. Bond v. Dillard, 50 Tex. 302.

Separate actions by each legatee, distributee, etc., should be brought against an executor and his surety on the executor's bond. Durfee v. Abbott, 50 Mich. 479; Case v. Funk, 10 West. L. Jour. (Ohio) 163.

Where, on obtaining an injunction to stay proceedings on three judgments in favor of three different parties, the defendant therein filed but one injunction bond, the said three judgment creditors were allowed to unite in one action, and recover a joint judgment for the total amount of their demand, although their claims were of different amounts and bore interest from different dates. Peerce v. Athey, 4 W. Va. 22.

Different breaches of one and the same official bond may be joined. People v. Slocum, 1 Idaho 62.

There is no improper joinder of actions and of parties in a suit for actual and punitive damages, against the not be joined.¹ There is, however, a tendency to allow a joinder of action on several bonds given by one administrator, and on the successive bonds given by a public officer² as well as on several appeal or attachment bonds.³

6. Joinder of Statutory and Common Law Actions.—A proceeding distinctively statutory may not be joined with an action at common law,³ but when penalties are prescribed by a statute, several principal and the surety on an injunction bond. Cowery v. Coons, 33 La. An. 372; Riggs v. Bell, 39 La. An. 1030.

1. Several Bonds.—Actions on several recognizances may not be joined. Webb v. Bowman, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 70.

A cause of action on the bond of a court clerk and upon the bond of an administrator may not be joined, though a joint fraud between the clerk and the administrator is charged. Street v. Tuck, 84 N. Car. 605.

2. When an administrator, having given a bond with sureties, gives a new bond with other sureties, under a statute which provided that when such new bond was given and approved, the former sureties shall be discharged from all liability for the future acts of the administrator, in an action by heirs against said administrator, plaintiffs were allowed to join in one suit an action on each bond, with a prayer that the liabilities of each set of sureties should be ascertained therein as well as a judgment given against the second set of sureties for certain specific railroad bonds alleged to have been wrongfully transferred to said second set of sureties by the administrator. Love v. Keowne, 58 Tex. 191. Compare Lane v. State, 27 Ind. 108; McLachlan v. Staples, 13 Wis. 448.

But different suits would not be consolidated when the plaintiff is able to state and prove clearly when the misfeasance occurred. Screwmen's Ben. Ass. v. Smith, 73 W. Rep. (Tex.) 793.

When two official bonds were given for the same term a joint action thereon was allowed. Holeran v. School Dist., 10 Neb. 406.

When, however, the bonds had been given by the same official for different terms the plaintiff was not allowed to join counts upon the several bonds and recover judgment in debt for the gross amount of the penalties against one who was a surety on all the bonds. Cassady v. Board of Trustees, 393 Ill. 394.

Such a joinder was allowed in Syme v. Bunting, 86 N. Car. 175. And see Woods v. Hayward, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 269; Trustees of McMinn Academy v. Reneau, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 94; Screwmen's Ben. Ass. v. Smith, 7 S. W. Rep. (Tex.) 793; Finch v. State, 9 S. W. Rep. (Tex.) 85.

In Indiana, there is now a statutory provision on this subject: "Whenever any public officer or other person is required by the laws of this State to give bond for the performance of his duties, and more than one bond is given by the same officer or person for the performance of such duties, either during the same period of time or for successive periods of time, any person entitled to sue upon either of said bonds may bring a joint suit upon all or any number of said bonds, and in such action the liability of all the respective sureties therein shall be determined by the court or jury." Act approved March 9th, 1889; Indiana Stat., Elliott's Supplement, 1889, § 15, p. 21.

3. A consolidation of several appeals for money demands between the same parties will authorize the court to render a judgment for the entire amount against the sureties in the several appeal bonds, if the same persons are sureties in all the bonds. Wetumpka etc. R. Co. v. Bingham, 5 Ala. 657.

A plaintiff may proceed in one action for damages for breaches of two or more attachment bonds executed by the same obligors in his favor. Gabel v. Hammerwell, 44 Ala. 336; Clendenin v. Schneider, 35 Mo. 533.

In an action of debt on an appeal bond, plaintiff cannot join damages to himself and others, to himself alone individually and to himself alone in an official capacity. Bardill v. Trustees of Schools, 4 Bradw. (Ill. App.) 94.

4. Statutory and Common Law Actions.—A summary proceeding under the forcible entry and detainer act may not be joined with other causes of action, although arising out of the same transaction. Ow v. Wickham, 38 Kan. 225.

penalties may be recovered in one action,¹ and if a penalty or damages is made recoverable in a specific form of action, the weight of authority seems to be that counts therefor may be joined with counts for other causes of action in the same form, but not in a different form.²

III. JOINDER OF ACTIONS IN DIFFERENT RIGHTS.—1. Actions by Executors or Administrators.—In actions by executors or administrators, counts may be joined whenever the sum recovered would be assets.³ This rule was only established after a long controversy

A common law action for negligence cannot be joined with one for statutory negligence. Kendrick v. Chicago & Alton R. Co., 81 Mo. 521.

When a statute provides that a trespasser in certain case should pay treble damages to the party injured, and be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to fine, a civil action for the damages cannot be joined with a criminal action for the fine. Felter v. Manville, 23 Kan. 191.

An action for a penalty cognizable in a justice's court and required by the statute to be sued for there, may not be joined with an action in a court of common pleas. Denoon v. Burns, 2 Clark (Pa.) 397.

1. Qui Tam Actions to Recover Statutory Penalties.—Several penalties for offences of a similar nature may be recovered in one action. Holland v. Bothmar, 4 Tenn. Rep. 228; Kempton v. Sullivan Savings Institution, 53 N. H. 581; Purinton v. Ladd, 58 N. H. 596; Gibson v. Gault, 33 Pa. St. 44; Lancaster v. R. R. Co., 12 Lan. Bar (Pa.) 99; Finley v. Hayes, 81 N. Car. 368; Cincinnati S. & C. R. Co. v. Cook, 37 O. S. 265. Contra, Brown v. Rice, 51 Cal. 489.

The joining of several matters of fact together which show as many failures to perform a duty enjoined by law, and claiming to recover a penalty for each when the law itself only allows the recovery of one penalty for one and all of such violations, is not a joining of several distinct causes of action. Loveland v. Garner, 71 Cal. 541; s. c., 12 Pac. Rep. 616.

2. Counts for trespass, case, etc., at common law can be joined with a count in the same form under a statute giving punitive damages. Prescott v. Tufts, 4 Mass. 146; Fairfield v. Burt, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 244; Heridia v. Ayres, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 334; Worster v. Proprietors of Canal Bridge, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 541; Hogsett v. Ellis, 17 Mich. 351; Swift v.

Applebone, 23 Mich. 252; Withington v. Young, 4 Mo. 564; U. S. v. Williams, 6 Mont. 379.

Contra, Whipple v. Fuller, 11 Conn. 582; Morrison v. Bedell, 22 N. H. 234; Keyes v. Prescott, 32 Vt. 86.

When a statute provides for damages recoverable in case, and also for a penalty recoverable in the same action, a count in case for the damages may be joined with a count in debt for the penalty. Smith v. Merwin, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 184. Compare Pearkes v. Freer, 9 Cal. 642.

Counts in debt for statute penalties may be joined with one for money had and received, where the entire recovery goes to the party aggrieved. Spencer v. Thompson, 11 Ala. 746; Gruber v. First National Bank of Clarion, 87 Pa. St. 465.

Contra, People ex rel. Drew v. Circuit Court Judges, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 434; Scott v. Robards, 67 Mo. 289; Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 173, rev'g 3 Hun 604; s. c., 6 N. Y. Supr. Ct. (T. & C.) 292; Sullivan v. N. Y., N. H. & H. R., 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 490.

Trover cannot be joined with an action on an act of assembly to recover double damages for an illegal distress and sale. Smith v. Meanor, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 375.

Statutory liability of a corporation and its common law liability may be enforced in the same action. Bottomley v. Port Huron & N. W. R. Co. 44 Mich. 542; Lamphier v. Worcester & Nashua R. Co., 33 N. H. 495; Penn. R. v. Bock, 93 Pa. St. 427. Compare Kendrick v. Chicago & Alton R. R. Co., 81 Mo. 521.

3. Actions by Executors or Administrators.—"It is now a well settled rule in actions by a plaintiff who is an executor or administrator, that when the money, when recovered, would be assets, the executor may declare for it in his representative character, and that the best line to adopt in determinover the liability of executors and administrators for costs under the statute of 4 Jac. 1, c. 3.¹ A plaintiff may declare on prom-ing whether counts may be joined is to consider whether the sum, when recovered, would be assets." Chitty on Pleadings, 16th Am. ed. 296, 7th Eng. ed. *225.

"The best rule of determining what demands may be joined is to consider whether the sum, when recovered, would be assets; if it would be so, it may be joined." Saunders on Pleading and Evidence (5th Am. ed.) *1119.

See an article on The Joinder of Actions in Different Rights, 10 Am. Jur. 310.

1. History of Rule.—The above well settled rule, that when the money recovered would be assets, executors or administrators may declare therefor in their representative capacities, was only settled after a long controversy. The early cases arose under the statute of 4 Jac. 1, ch. 3, which provided that "in every action where the verdict passeth for the defendant the plaintiff should pay costs." Under this statute it was decided in 7 Jac. 1, that when the executor sued on a bond given the testator, and failed to recover, he was not liable for costs under the statute because he sued in another's right. Haywarth v. David, Cro. Jac. 229. A few years later, in an action for ravishment de gard, brought by an executrix, the issue being upon the tenure, and found for defendant, the defendant claimed costs, because the plaintiff counts that she brings her action upon her own possession. Three judges held that the defendant should not have costs, and one judge contra. Peacock v. Steese, Cro. Car. 29 (1 Car. I.). In Atkey v. Heard, Cro. Car. 219 (7 Car. I.), it was decided that in trover by an administrator, if the conversion be in his own time, he shall pay costs under the statute. The leading case of Bull v. Palmer was decided in 27, 28 Car. II. It was an action of assumpsit, and the plaintiff declared that the defendant covenanted with him, being executor to J S, as executor, upon which account so much was due, and he promised to pay it. Plaintiff was nonsuited. Defendant asked for costs. Costs were refused by a majority of the judges, three against one, because "the action is in the right of his executorship, and the money recovered will be the assets." Bull v. Palmer, 2 Levinz 165; 1 Freem. 424.

This principle then laid down was not generally accepted. Upon the single question of actions of trover, when the conversion was done in the time of the executor or administrator, the above case of Atkey v. Heard, Cro. Car. 219 (7 Car. I.) was followed in Hole v. King, 1 Comyns 162 (8 Anne), and Ballard v. Spencer, 7 Tenn. 358 (37 Geo. III), while the court refused to follow that decision in Mason v. Jackson, 3 Levinz 60 (34 Car. II.); Downes v. Shaft, 1 Barnes 129 (13, 14 Geo. II), and Cockerill v. Kynaston, 4 Term 277 (31 Geo. III).

In a note to Hole v. King it is stated that "the rule in these cases is, that where it is necessary for a plaintiff, who is an executor, to name himself executor, and bring the action in the right of his testator, he is not liable to costs; but that where the cause of action arises in the time of the executor he is liable to costs, although he name himself executor, because he might have brought the action in his own right." See Hole v. King, 1 Comyns 162, note (2). To the same effect is the note (a) to the case of Jenkins v. Plume, 1 Salk. 207.

In a note to the case of Coryton v. Lithebye, 2 Saund. 117 f, the annotator goes so far as to say that "the old notion that the money recovered will be assets, and therefore the executor is not subject to costs, seems to be now exploded." The convenience of the rule was so very apparent, however, that LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C. J., in the case of Cowell v. Watts, decided in 1805 (45 Geo. III), referred to it as follows: "I wish that the rule which was long ago laid down in Bull v. Palmer, had been abided by, that where the money when recovered would be assets the executor may declare for it in his representative character." Then having decided the question of joinder raised in the case under that rule, he nevertheless concluded as follows: "Whether the plaintiffs might have sued in their own characters is another question, affecting the right to costs, which may arise hereafter, and upon which it is unnecessary to say anything at present." Cowell v. Watts, 6 East 405, 409, 411.

This much disputed question as to the liability for costs was finally put at rest by the statute of 3 and 4 W. IV, ch. 42, § 31, which put executors and adminis-

ises made to himself in his representative capacity, and on promises made to his decedent,¹ but causes of action accruing to the plaintiff in his representative capacity cannot be joined with causes of action that have accrued to him in his individual capacity.²

trators on the same footing as other plaintiffs as to their liability for costs, unless where the court sees that they have been misled by some misconduct on the part of the defendant, or unless some other very peculiar ground be laid for the interference of the court. See Wilbraham v. Snow, 2 Saund. 47 u. note (s).

Meanwhile the rule which had thus grown out of a much disputed controversy on the matter of costs, had become a well settled rule as determining the question of joinder of counts in actions by executors or administrators, and is so stated by all the text writers upon the subject, and is cited and relied upon in nearly all of the cases herein-after referred to under this heading. See the remainder of the above note to Coryton v. Lithebye, 2 Saund. 117 f.

1. Promises to Executor or Administrator and Decedent.—A count for money had and received by defendant to the use of the executor, as such, may be joined to a count for money had and received to the use of the testator. Gallant v. Bouteflower, 3 Doug. 34. This is stated to be "the constant practice" in 1790. Petrie v. Hanway, 3 Term 659; Webster v. Spencer, 3 B. & Ald. 366; Clark v. Hougham, 2 B. & C. 149; Clarke v. Lamb, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 512; Brown v. Lewis, 9 R. I. 497; Sebring v. Keith, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 192; Flowers v. Kent, Brayt. (Vt.) 134. So also counts for goods sold, work done or money paid by the executor or administrator as such may be joined with counts on promises to the testator or intestate. Ord v. Fenwick, 3 East 104; Cowell v. Watts, 6 East 405; Edwards v. Grace, 2 M. & W. 190; Werner v. Humphreys, 3 Scott, N. R. 226; Marshall v. Broadhurst, 1 Cr. & J. 403; Lowe v. Bowman, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 411; Wilson v. Hunt, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 379, 383; Fry v. Evans, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 530; Stevens v. Gregg, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 234; Bank of Pennsylvania v. Halde-man, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 161; Peries v. Aycinena, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 64.

Counts for goods sold or money paid by the testator may be joined with an account stated between the executor and the defendant. Thompson v. Slent, 1 Taunt. 322; Powley v. Newton, 2

Marsh. 147; s. c. 6 Taunt. 453; Lancefield v. Allen, 1 Bligh, N. S. 592. See Werner v. Humphreys, 2 Mann. & Gr. 833.

An executor may in the same declaration declare for rent due in his own time and for that which accrued in the testator's lifetime. Taylor v. Holmes, 1 Freem. 367. Compare Armstrong v. Hall, 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 76.

Counts on promises made to an intestate may be joined with counts on promissory notes given to the administrator as administrator, since the intestate's death. Chitty's Pleadings, (16 Am. ed.) *226; Partridge v. Court, 5 Price 412; aff'd in Court v. Partridge, 7 Price 591, overruling Betts v. Mitchell, 10 Mod. 315. Compare Catherwood v. Chaband, 1 B. & C. 150.

An executor may declare on a trover and conversion in the testator's lifetime and also on a trover and conversion after his death. Cockerill v. Kynaston, 4 Term. 277; French v. Merrill, 6 N. H. 465.

An executor may join in the same complaint a count for trespass quare clausum fregit during the testator's lifetime, with another for a like trespass after his death, to lands devised to the executor in trust for specific purposes. Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago R. v. Swinney, 97 Ind. 586. Compare Robbins v. Gillett, 2 Pinney (Wis.) 439; s. c., 2 Chand. (Wis.) 96.

In assumpsit by an administrator de bonis non, a count alleging a promise to have been made to the first administrator may be joined with counts alleging promises to the intestate and to the administrator de bonis non. Sullivan v. Holker, 15 Mass. 374. Compare Catherwood v. Chaband, 1 B. & C. 150. See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, XVI, Remedies, 1 Actions at Law, (a) By executors and Administrators, 13; Joinder of Counts, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 7, p. 367.

2. Causes Accruing in Individual and Representative Capacity.—"An executor cannot include counts on causes of action accruing to him in his private right and individual character, with counts on causes of action which are laid to have been vested in him in his representative character." Chitty's

2. Actions Against Executors or Administrators.—In actions against executors or administrators, only such counts may be joined as seek a judgment de bonis decedentis,¹ and therefore a count cannot Pleadings (16th ed.), vol. 1, *227; Rogers v. Cook, 1 Salk. 10; s. c., Carth. 235, and Show. 366; note to Coryton v. Lithebye, 2 Saund. 117 e; note to Foxwist v. Tremaine, 2 Saund. 210 a; Hooker v. Quilter, 1 Wils. 171; s. c., 2 Strange 1271; King v. Thom. 1 Tenn. 487; Cassels v. Vernon, 5 Mason (U. S. C. C.) 332, 333; Dias v. Phillips, 59 Cal. 293; Lyon v. Evans, 1 Ark. 349; Bulkley v. Andrews, 39 Conn. 523; Frink v. Taylor, 4 G. Gr. (Iowa) 196; Brown v. Webber, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 560; Yates v. Kimmel, 5 Mo. 87; Mertens v. Loewenberg, 69 Mo. 208; Hall v. Fisher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 441; Mason v. Norcross, Coxe (N. J.) 242; Thompson v. Bohannon, 38 Tex. 241; Robbins v. Gillett, 2 Pinney (Wis.) 439; Kline v. Guthart, 2 P. & W. (Pa.) 494.

A husband cannot join a count for a cause of action in right of his wife with a cause of action vested in him as administrator of a third party. Mertens v. Loewenberg, 69 Mo. 208.

Where slaves were taken from the possession of an administrator, he may, in an action of trover, declare against the defendant for the conversion of them, first, as property belonging to him in his own right, and, second, as property belonging to him as administrator. This was held to be no misjoinder, because "the wrong done is to the possession and not to the title; and the action brought is not upon two distinct separate demands, the one in plaintiff's own right and the other in auter droit; for though, in the second count, he claims the property as bailee, yet it is not an action in right of the bailor, but in right of the bailee." Lashlee v. Wily, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 659. Compare a similar decision in an action of detinue. Boyle v. Townes, 9 Leigh (Va.) 158.

And it has in one case been held under the New York code that a plaintiff could join her action as devisee for rent of a farm leased to the defendant by a testator which accrued after testator's death, with her action as executrix for breaches of covenants contained in that lease, because "both rights accrued under a contract made by the testator with the defendant, and growing out of the same matter." Armstrong v. Hall, 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 76.

A count on a bond given to the plaintiff as executor, and payable to the plaintiff, his "attorney, executors, administrators or assigns," may not be joined with a count on a bond given to the testator, because the executor by taking the bond extinguished the original debt, and a recovery on that bond would not be assets of his testator's estate. Hosier v. Arundell, 3 B. & P. 7.

An executrix cannot join in one action a count for damages for injuries occasioned the decedent by defendant's negligence, and a count for the damages occasioned to her, as his widow, due to the fact that decedent's death was caused by those injuries. Frink v. Taylor, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 196.

In an action by A as executor of B, who had been executor of C, a count upon an account stated between A as executor and the defendant cannot be joined with counts on promises to C, because the account stated is not declared to have been made with A as executor of B in his right as executor of C. Henshall v. Roberts, 5 East 150.

A personal representative cannot sue in his right as an heir and in his representative capacity in one action. Paxton v. Wood, 77 N. Car. 11.

When one is administrator of two different persons who were killed by the same negligence, he cannot unite in one suit his two actions for damages on account of the death of his respective intestates. Danaher v. City of Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. Civ. Proc. R. 286.

1. Actions Against Executors and Administrators — Joinder Allowed.—"An account stated by the defendant as executor of moneys due from the testator may be supported, and may be joined with counts upon promises by the testator. . . . And a count upon an account stated by an executor as such, of moneys due and owing from him in that character, may be joined with counts on promises by the testator, as such account stated does not make the executor personally liable." Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) *227; Powell v. Graham, 7 Tamst. 580; s. c., 1 Moore 305; Ellis v. Bowen, Forrest 98; Segar v. Atkinson, 1 H. Bl. 102 (compare Rose v. Bowler, 1 H. Bl. 109); McKinley v. Call, 1 Mon. (Ky.) 54; Carter v. Phelps, 8 be joined which would charge him personally.¹ Therefore a count on promises by the testator may not be joined with a count on promises by his executor or administrator, because the estate is liable to complete the testator's contracts, but is not bound by the contracts of the executor or administrator.² A count for funeral expenses cannot be joined with counts on promises by the Johns. (N. Y.) 440; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 244; Gillet v. Hutchinson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 184; Wilkings v. Murphey, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 282; Malin v. Bull, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 441; Epes v. Dudley, 5 Rand. (Va.) 437; Dobbs v. Green, 2 Wis. 228; Dobbs v. Enearl, 4 Wis. 451.

A count for taxes due from the testator may be joined with a count for taxes due from the executor on the same property, while in his hands as executor pending the settlement of the estate. Bonaparte v. State, 63 Md. 465.

To a count in covenant charging a breach by the testator in his lifetime of a covenant binding himself, his executors and assigns may be joined a count charging a breach since said testator's decease. Wilson v. Wigg, 10 East 313.

But a count against executors on their own covenant in a deed executed by virtue of a power in a will, and in execution of an agreement made by the testator cannot be joined with one against them on the covenants of the testator. Strohecker v. Grant, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 737.

It has been held in New York that a count on a promise by the testator to pay rent can be joined with counts upon promises by the executor to pay for use and occupation after testator's death. Pugsley v. Aikin, 1 Kern. (N. Y.) 494, rev'g Pugsley v. Aikin, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 114. To the contrary is Wigley v. Ashton, 3 B. & Ald. 101.

A count for money paid by plaintiff since testator's death on a bond on which plaintiff was testator's surety may be joined with counts on promises made by testator in his lifetime. Reeve v. Cawley's Exr., 2 Harr. (N. J.) 415.

A count upon an indebtedness and promise by the administrator or executor as such may be joined with one upon an indebtedness and promise of the decedent, provided the consideration of the demand spring from or was connected with the estate. Howard's Admrs. v. Powers, 6 Ohio 92.

Where one was administrator of a decedent, and guardian of his children, an action in behalf of the children against him and the sureties on his guardian bond to recover their distributive shares was allowed in Redfearn v. Austin, 88 N. Car. 413.

When one was a guardian, and after his ward's decease became also his administrator, and then died, the heirs of said ward may sue the executor of said decedent as guardian and as administrator, to recover the amount of said ward's estate. Alexander et ux. v. Wolfe et al., 83 N. Car. 272.

1. Actions Against Executors.—Joinder Inadmissible.—"So, in an action against an executor, a count cannot be introduced which would charge him personally, for the judgment in the one case would be de bonis testatoris, and in the other de bonis propriis." Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) *227.

A count on a cause of action against an executor as such cannot be joined with a count on a cause of action against him in his own personal capacity. Herrenden v. Palmer, Hobart 88a; Godbold v. Roberts, 20 Ala. 354; McMahon v. Allen, 3 Abbott Prac. (N. Y.) 89; Lord v. Vreeland et al., 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 316. Compare Parker v. Baylis, 2 Bos. & Pull. 73; Hencken v. Ludewig, 12 Rob. (La.) 188; Denegre v. Denegre, 33 La. An. 689; Epes v. Dudley, 5 Rand. (Va.) 437.

2. Thus a count on a promise by the testator to pay rent cannot be joined with counts upon promises by the executor to pay for use and occupation after testator's death. Wigley v. Ashton, 3 B. & Ald. 101. A contrary conclusion, however, was reached in Pugsley v. Aikin, 1 Kern. (N. Y.) 494, rev'g Pugsley v. Aikin, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 114.

The principle is frequently stated to be that an executor may not bind the estate by an executory contract; that the estate is liable to complete the testator's contracts; but the executor's contracts do not bind the estate. Upon this ground the case of Pugsley v. Aikin, 1 Kern. (N. Y.) 494, was distinguished in Austin v. Munro, 47 N. Y. 360, 366. See also Hayward v. McDonald, 1 How. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 229.

decendent.¹ While a plaintiff may join a count on a several promise by the testator with a count on a joint promise, he may not sue the personal representative of the decedent in that capacity,

A count on a promise made by the defendant as administrator to pay money received by him in that capacity to the plaintiff's use cannot be joined with other counts on promises made by the intestate. Both the pleas and the judgment are different. Rose v. Bowler, 1 H. Bl. 109; Jennings v. Newman, 4 Term. 347; Brigden v. Parkes, 2 Bos. & Pull., 424; Ashly v. Ashly, 7 B. & C. 444 (compare Churchill v. Bertrand, 3 Ad. & Ell. N. S. 568); Farmers' Bank v. Cullen, 4 Harr. (Del.) 289; Moody v. Ewing, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 521, 522; Gillet v. Hutchinson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 184; Seip v. Drach, 14 Pa. St. 352.

Counts for goods sold, work done, money paid, etc., for the defendant, as executor, cannot be joined with a count on promises made by the testator or for money found to be due on an account stated with the defendant as executor. Corner v. Shew, 3 M. & W. 350; Kennedy v. Stallworth, 18 Ala. 263; McDaniel v. Parks, 19 Ark. 671; Vaughn's Exr. v. Gardner, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 326, 327; Grahame et al. v. Harris et al., 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 489; Benjamin v. Taylor, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 328; Bogle's Exr. v. Kreitzer, 46 Pa. St. 465. Compare Eaton v. Whitaker, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 465; Smith v. Proctor, 1 Sandf. (N. Y. Supr. Ct.) 72; Ross v. Harden, 44 N. Y. Supr. Ct., (12 J. & S.) 26; Austin v. Munro, 47 N. Y. 360, aff'g Austin v. Monroe, 4 Lans. (N. Y. Supr. Ct.) 67; Reeve v. Cawley's Exr., 2 Harr. (N. J.) 415. See, however, Tradesmen's National Bank v. McFeely, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 522. Or with a count on promissory notes given by testator in his lifetime to plaintiff. Jeffords v. Ringgold, 6 A. 2. 544.

A count against a defendant, as an administrator, based upon a rejected claim against the estate, cannot be joined with a count against such defendant personally with others to compel him and them to transfer to the estate property to which they had procured the legal title through fraud. Mesmer v. Jenkins, 61 Cal. 151.

1. Funeral Expenses.—A count stating defendant to be indebted as administrator on account of the funeral expenses of the intestate cannot be joined with counts on promises by the intestate.

Hayter v. Moat, 5 Dowl. 298; s. c., 2 M. & W. 56; Myer v. Cole, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 349; Demott v. Field, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 58; Ferrin v. Myrick, 41 N. Y. 315. To the contrary effect are Hapgood v. Houghton, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 155; Gregory v. Hooker, 1 Hawks. (N. Car.) 394; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 646. Though it was held in the first of those cases that a count on a promissory note of the executor given in payment of the funeral expenses could not be joined. Hapgood v. Houghton, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 155. Compare Laird v. Arnold, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 4. See Blood v. Kane, 6 N. Y. Sup. 353.

And see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, § 15, 2, c, Funeral Expenses, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 7, p. 340.

In Ferrin v. Myrick, HUNT, C. J., after a careful review of the authorities in New York, concludes as follows:

"The following principles are settled by these authorities:

"1. That for all causes of action arising upon a contract made by the testator in his lifetime, an action can be sustained against the executors as such, and the judgment would be de bonis intestatoris.

"2. That in all causes of action, where the same arises upon a contract made after the death of the testator, the claim is against the executor personally, not against the estate, and the judgment must be de bonis propriis.

"3. That these different causes of action cannot be united in the same complaint." Ferrin v. Myrick, 41 N. Y. 315, 322.

In trover it is a misjoinder to add a count for a conversion by the testator with a count for a conversion by his executors. The judgments are different. Terhune v. Bray's Exrs., 1 Harr. (16 N. J. L.) 53.

A proceeding against an heir not qua heir, but as an executor de son tort cannot be regarded as an action against the heir. Warren v. Raymond, 17 S. Car. 163.

Under the Minnesota code allowing the joinder of several causes of action when they relate to the same transaction or transactions connected with the same subject of action, it has been held and also in his individual capacity as the surviving obligor.¹ Unconnected demands against different estates cannot be joined, though the defendant is executor of both.²

3. Action, By and Against Husband and Wife.—A cause of action accruing to the husband alone, or in any representative capacity, cannot be joined with a cause of action to which the husband is entitled in right of the wife,³ and therefore a claim for damages for personal injuries to a wife or child may not be joined with a claim for damages for loss of service, etc.,⁴ except when such join-that a plaintiff can sue a defendant trustee in his capacity as a trustee, and also as an individual under the peculiar circumstances of the case of Fish v. Berkey, 10 Minn. 199.

1. However, in an action against an executor or administrator a count upon a promise by the testator may be joined with a count upon a promise by the testator and another, though the surviving promisor be living. Hamlet v. Bates Exrs., 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 437.

A count averring a contract with plaintiff alone may be joined with a count averring the same contract to be with plaintiff, and another since deceased. Reitzel v. Franklin, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 33.

A surviving obligor, who is also the executor or administrator of his deceased co-obligor may not be sued on said obligation in his individual and also in his representative capacity. Landan v. Levy, 1 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 376; Watson v. Dickey et al. Tappan (Ohio), 203. A contrary conclusion was, however, reached in the very recent case of Little Grocer Co. v. Johnson, 50 Ark. 62.

2. Unconnected demands against different estates cannot be joined, though the defendant is executor of both. Daniel v. Morrison, 6 Dana (Ky.) 182, 186.

Where M bequeathed his property to N, and appointed A and B his executors, and N died, and A was appointed administrator, the heirs of N were allowed to sue A and B jointly, alleging breaches of both trusts, it being impossible to determine with what amount A should be charged as such administrator, without a settlement of the accounts of A and B as executors. McLachlan v. Staples, 13 Wis. 448.

The representatives of two deceased co-obligors cannot be joined in the same action, although the undertaking of the testators might have been joint and several. Grymes v. Pendleton, 4

Call. (Va.) 130; Watkins Exr. v. Tate, 3 Call. (Va.) 521.

The Revised Statutes of the District of Columbia, § 827, authorizes the joinder in one action of the legal representatives of the maker and the legal representatives of the endorser of a promissory note. Keyser v. Fendall, 5 Mackey (S. C. D. C.) 47.

See also EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, § 16, 1 b (8), Joinder of Counts, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 1, p. 379.

3. Actions by Husband and Wife.—“When the wife is complainant in an action ex contractu, no cause of action can be included, unless it be founded on a contract with a feme before marriage, or she be the meritorious cause of action. . . . And in an action in form ex delicto for a personal injury, if the wife be joined, the declaration must proceed only for torts to her individually, and not for such wrongs as only affect the husband.” Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) *225.

A count on a cause of action accruing to the husband alone may not be joined with a count on a cause of action to which the husband is entitled in right of the wife. Rose v. Bowler, 1 H. Bl. 109. Compare Smith v. Johnson, 5 Harr. (Del.) 40; Bartlett v. Boyd, 34 Vt. 256; Anderson v. Pack, 2 Clev. L. Rep. (Ohio) 260.

Nor may a count on a cause of action vested in him as administrator of a third party be joined with a count in right of his wife. Mertens v. Loewenberg, 69 Mo. 208.

4. Thus, in an action to recover damages for personal injuries to a wife or child, a count to recover damages for the injuries themselves may not be joined with a count to recover the husband's or father's consequential injuries, loss of service, expenses, etc., thereby occasioned. Separate actions must be brought to recover these different dam-der is authorized by statute.¹ In an action against husband and wife, a cause of action against the husband alone cannot be ages. Sheldon v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 18 Cal. 526; Tell v. Gibson, 66 Cal. 247; Fuller et ux. v. Naugatuck R. Co., 21 Conn. 557; Rogers v. Smith, 17 Ind. 323; Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton R. Co. v. Chester, 57 Ind. 207; Laughlin v. Eaton, 54 Me. 156, 158; Gardner v. Kellogg, 23 Minn. 463; Lucas v. New York Central R. Co., 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 245; Kavanaugh v. City of Janesville, 24 Wis. 618. Contra, Hopkins v. Atlantic & St. L. R. Co., 36 N. H. 9; Whitaker v. Warren, 60 N. H. 20. Compare Smith v. Warden, 86 Mo. 282; Penna. R. Co. v. Bock, 93 Pa. St. 427. So in case for slanderous words. Dengate v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 5; Ebersoll v. Krug, 3 Binney (Pa.) 555.

In New York, it has been held that though such a joinder would be bad on demurrer, it was good after verdict. Lewis v. Babcock, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 443; citing Russell v. Come, 1 Salk. 119; Todd v. Bedford, 11 Mod. 264.

In like manner when a husband has brought suit for personal injuries and dies, and his wife is substituted as administratrix, she cannot add a count to recover damages for the injuries sustained by her on account of her husband's death. Frink & Co. v. Taylor, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 196, c.

And a father cannot join the statutory action to recover damages for the death of his minor child, with an action to recover for personal injuries received by himself, though caused by the same negligence. Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton R. Co. v. Chester, 57 Ind. 207.

1. Statutory Modifications.— Since the enactment of ch. 99, L. 1881, giving a married woman the right to maintain an action, as if sole, for any injury to her person or character, such a cause of action cannot be joined with one in favor of the husband for the loss of her services and the expenses caused by such injury in an action by husband and wife. Shanahan v. Madison, 57 Wis. 276.

By the Revised Statutes of Iowa, section 2771, it is provided that "in an action brought by a man and his wife for an injury done to the wife, in respect of which she is necessarily joined as co-plaintiff, it shall be lawful for the husband to join thereto claims in his own right." This provision has been held to change the common law rule, and allow the joinder of a count to recover for the husband's loss of his wife's services. McDonald v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 26 Iowa 129; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 115.

A similar provision was adopted in Maryland in 1856 (Laws 1856, p. 146, § 29), but it was omitted from the code adopted in 1860.

In Louisiana, the code provides that husbands "can proceed judicially and in their own name in whatever relates to the preservation of their dotal property, . . . as well as to the recovering of the debts due them." Rev. Codes, 1875 (Voorhies), art. 107, p. 56.

Under this article it has been held that the husband should sue in his own name to enforce any right of his wife, except where she exclusively administers her property, or a question of ownership of dotal property or a real right of hers is involved. Cooper v. Cappel, 29 La. An. 213.

And therefore a husband may join a claim for damages for his wife's personal injuries with a claim for money expended in consequence thereof. Holzar v. New Orleans & Carrollton R. Co., 38 La. An. 185.

The 40th section of the English Common Law Procedure act, 1852, provides that, "in any action brought by a man and his wife for injury done to the wife, in respect of which she is necessarily joined as a plaintiff, it shall be lawful for the husband to add thereto claims in his own right." This section has been construed to be permissive only, not imperative. Brockbank v. Whitehaven Junction R. Co., 7 Hurlst. & Nor. 834.

The wife not being liable on a mere personal contract made by husband and wife, a count against husband and wife on such a contract or on a contract by the husband alone cannot be joined with a count on a promise of the wife dum sola. Edwards v. Davis, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 231. Compare Scheier v. Tyrrell, 23 Week. Dig. (N. Y.) 476; Nutz v. Reutter, 1 Watts (Pa.) 229. Compare Morris v. Norfolk, 1 Taunt. 212. Compare Bonney v. Reardin, 6 Bush (Ky.) 34.

An action against husband for words spoken by him and another against husband and wife for words spoken by joined,¹ except in so far as such joinders are rendered proper by code provisions.²

4. Actions By and Against Partners, Guardians, Assignees, etc.—A surviving partner or co-obligee may join his claim on the joint debt with a claim due him individually,³ and it has been decided in Texas, that when the partners of two firms are the same, they may join causes of action in favor of one firm, with wife cannot be consolidated. Swithin v. Vincent, 2 Wils. 227; Anderson v. Pack, 2 Clev. L. Rep. (Ohio) 260.

1. Actions Against Husband and Wife.

—In an action against husband and wife to charge the wife's statutory separate estate for necessities furnished the family, a count can be added alleging a cause of action against the husband alone. Jordan & Son v. Smith, 83 Ala. 299; Esckridge v. Ditmars, 51 Ala. 245; overruling May v. Smith, 48 Ala. 483; Lippincott v. Hopkins, 57 Pa. St. 328.

2. Under the Indiana code, an action may be brought to recover a judgment against a husband for the amount of the demand, and to charge certain land held by the wife under an implied trust for her husband with a mechanic's lien for the same demand. Lindley v. Cross, 31 Ind. 106.

So an action was allowed on a note signed by husband and wife, valid as to wife, in Missouri, and to charge the wife's separate real estate. Lincoln v. Rowe, 51 Mo. 571. See cases in preceding note.

A claim to set aside a conveyance of real estate from husband to wife for fraud against creditors, may be joined with a claim against the husband arising out of contract so as to charge the land with the lien of the judgment when recovered. Frank v. Kessler, 30 Ind. 8; Hamilton v. Barricklow, 96 Ind. 398.

In an action to foreclose a mortgage executed by husband and wife to secure a note made by the husband alone, the complaint may ask judgment against the husband for the amount of the note and interest, and a decree against husband and wife for the sale of the mortgaged premises. Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 299 (compare Moffitt v. Roche, 77 Ind. 48). Not allowed in Wisconsin under the Rev. Stat. 1858. Cary v. Wheeler, 14 Wis. 281. But that would certainly be allowed under the act of 1862. Connecticut Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Cross, 18 Wis. 109. But not a personal judgment against the wife therefor. Moffitt v. Roche, 77 Ind. 48; McGlaughlin v. O'Rourke, 12 Iowa 459;

Howe v. Lemon, 37 Mich. 164; Kitchell v. Mudgett, 37 Mich. 81; Carley v. Fox, 38 Mich. 387; Manhattan Life Ins. Co. v. Glover, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 153. Unless the mortgage or the bond accompanying it expressly charges the wife's separate estate. McKeon v. Hagan, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 65; Williamson v. Duffy, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 312; Jones v. Merritt, 23 Hun (N. Y.) 184.

Nor against a minor on foreclosure of mortgage given by guardian. Wood v. Truax, 39 Mich. 628.

The right of joinder depends upon the general question whether the causes of action should be sued upon separately or jointly, upon which, see HUSBAND AND WIFE, II, §§ 14-23 in the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of L., vol. 9., pp. 828-836; Lawson, Rights, Remedies and Practice, vol. 2, § 730, and Pomeroy, Remedies and Remedial Rights (2nd ed.), §§ 234-236, pp. 283-297.

3. Partners.—A surviving partner or co-obligee may sue in his own name and in his representative capacity for the amount due the firm, or on the obligation and is at liberty to unite with the joint debt a debt due to himself individually. Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) *225; Smith v. Salomon, 1 Col. 176; Vandenhoevel v. Stores, 3 Conn. 203, 207; Quillen v. Arnold, 12 Nev. 234; Adams v. Hackett, 27 N. H. 289; Boyd v. Webster, 58 N. H. 336; Davis v. Church, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 240, 242; McCartney v. Hubbell, 52 Wis. 360.

A demand due to the plaintiff as surviving partner of one firm may be joined in the same action with a demand due to him as the surviving partner of another firm. Stafford v. Gold, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 533.

A plaintiff may include with an individual demand the claims of two separate firms of which he was a member, all of which demands had been assigned to him. Keller v. Roesler, 1 C. P. Rep. (Pa.) 124; s. c., 1 Luz. L. T., N. S. (Pa.) 6.

But in a joint action by several plaintiffs an independent cause of action causes of action in favor of the other firm.¹ In like manner, a cause of action against one on a joint contract may be joined with a cause of action against him individually.² The same principles generally apply to actions brought by and against guardians,³ assignees,⁴ to each may not be joined. Grant v. McCarty, 38 Iowa 468.

1. Where the partners in two firms are the same they may join causes of action in favor of the one firm with causes of action in favor of the other firm in one action. Messner v. Lewis, 20 Texas 221. Compare Ruth v. Lowrey, 10 Neb. 260.

2. A cause of action against one on a joint contract may be joined with a cause of action against him individually. Garr v. Redman, 6 Cal. 574; Logan v. Wallis, 76 N. Car. 416; Butler v. Kirby, 53 Wis. 188; Richards v. Heather, 1 B. & Ald. 29; Golding v. Vaughan, 2 Chitty's Rep. 436; Bertrand v. Byrd, 4 Ark. 187; Little v. Edwards, 69 Md. 499; Holmes v. Marden, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 169; Wheeler v. Thorn, 2 N. H. 397; Genesee Co. Bank v. Bank of Batavia, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 295.

But not when all parties to the joint contract are made defendants. Brown v. Lee, 19 Fed. Rep. 630; Miller v. Northern Bank of Miss., 34 Miss. 412; Doan v. Holly, 25 Mo. 357; 26 Mo. 186; Moore v. Platte Co., 8 Mo. 467.

Counts upon a promise by the defendant and another, since become a bankrupt and certificated, may be joined in an action against the solvent partner alone, with counts on promises by the defendant solely since the other became a bankrupt. Hawkins v. Ramsbottom, 6 Taunt. 179.

3. Guardians.—While a plaintiff may not sue individually and as guardian (natural tutrix), yet advantage of the defect should be taken by exception. It is too late after judgment. Ashbey v. Ashbey, 38 La. An. 902.

While a father may sue in his own name for injuries to child, he cannot join therewith his claim for loss of service, etc. Gardner v. Kellogg, 23 Minn. 463. See the cases cited supra, note 8.

If a count against a party as guardian of a lunatic be joined with one against him in his own right, it is a misjoinder. Rodgers v. Ellison, Meigs (Tenn.) 88.

When one is guardian of two minors, a plaintiff may recover for board and goods furnished each minor at tenant's request in one action, because the suit is properly brought against the guardian individually. Young v. Smith, 22 Tex. 345. Contra, St. Joseph's Orphan Soc. v. Wolpert, 80 Ky. 86.

A guardian of three minors for whom he had been appointed by one order under one bond brought one suit against a surety on the bond of the former guardian of said minors, who had been removed, and in whose hands the probate court had found a balance separately due each of the minors, and recovered judgment for the sum due each minor, and in error the court refused to decide there had been a misjoinder under the Arkansas Code. Turner v. Alexander, 41 Ark. 254.

As to actions against one who is both a guardian and an administrator, see Redfearn v. Austin, 88 N. Car. 413; Alexander v. Wolfe, 83 N. Car. 272.

4. Assignees.—The same parties being assignees of A, a bankrupt, and also of B, a bankrupt, under separate commissions, cannot recover in the same action a joint debt due from the defendant to both the bankrupts, and also separate debts due to each. Hancock v. Haywood, 3 Term Rep. 433.

They can, however, recover the joint demand due to all the bankrupts. Streatfield et al. v. Halliday, 3 Term Rep. 779. And assignees under a joint commission against two partners may recover in the same action debts due to the partners jointly and debts due to them separately. Graham v. Mulcaster, 4 Bing. 115.

Different assignees under separate commissions cannot sue jointly. Ray v. Davies, 8 Taunt. 134; s. c., 2 Moore 3.

Different assignees of different bankrupts, who had been partners, cannot unite in an action to recover the separate interest of one of said bankrupts. Smith v. Goddard, 3 Bos. & Pull. 465; Hogg v. Bridges, 8 Taunt. 200; s. c., 2 Moore 122.

Counts for money lent and for money paid by plaintiff as assignee of a bankrupt may be joined with counts for money had and received to plaintiff's use as assignee, and upon an account stated with him as assignee. Richardson v. Griffin, 5 Maule & Sel. 294; s. c., Chitty's Rep. 325. Compare Will-

public officers,¹ corporations, corporate officers and stockholders,² and all cases in which the same party claims or defends in several different rights.³

Iams v. Vines, 1 Dow. & Low. 710; s. c., 8 Jur. 270; 13 L. J., Q. B. 49.

An action against an assignee (syndic) as such cannot be joined with an action to hold him personally liable for misfeasance. Blake v. His Creditors, 6 Rob. (La.) 520. Compare Berford v. Barnes, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 253. Rush v. Good, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 226.

A cause of action against the trustee of an insolvent bank for misfeasance cannot be joined with a cause of action on a bond given by him individually to assist in making up a deficiency in the bank's assets. French v. Salter, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 546.

As to joining actions on original and assigned claims, see supra, II, 4 c. and notes.

1. Public Officers.—A plaintiff cannot join a count upon an obligation taken by him in his individual capacity only, with a count on an obligation taken by him in an official capacity. Patrick v. Rucker, 19 Ill. 428; Albin v. Talbott, 46 Ill. 424; Foltz v. Stevens, 54 Ill. 180.

Nor can a count for damages sustained in an individual capacity be joined with a count for damages sustained in an official capacity. Bardill v. Trustees of Schools, 4 Brad. (Ill. App.) 54.

An action against a municipal corporation to recover damages for an injury to private property, resulting from the prosecution of a public improvement, cannot be joined with a cause of action under the municipal charter, against the municipal officers of the city in their individual capacity, for the same injury occasioned by their gross negligence and abuse of power. Hancock v. Johnson, 1 Met. (Ky.) 242.

In like manner claims in an individual or official capacity cannot be set off against each other. McCracken v. Elder, 34 Pa. St. 239; Russell v. First Presby. Church, 65 Pa. St. 9; Tagg v. Bowman, 99 Pa. St. 376.

2. Corporations, Corporate Officers and Stockholders.—It is an improper joinder of causes of action to join a claim for equitable relief against a corporation, with a claim for damages against individual defendants. House v. Cooper, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 292.

In actions for labor debts against stockholders or directors and corporation, both liabilities may be enforced in one action. Milroy v. Spurr Mt. Iron Mining Co., 43 Mich. 231; Sullivan v. Sullivan Mfg. Co., 14 S. Car. 494.

A proceeding to enforce an agreement as to the purchase of a railroad company at a foreclosure and a reorganization thereof and damages for a breach thereof, cannot be joined with a claim for the removal of the officers of the reorganized company. Stanton v. Mo. Pac. R. Co., 2 N. Y. Sup. 298.

The statutory liability of stockholders and their liability for unpaid subscriptions may be enforced in the same suit. Morris v. Collamer & St. Clair St. R. Co., 2 Clev. L. Rep. (Ohio) 347; Warner v. Callender, 20 Ohio St. 190.

As to whether the liability of any number of stockholders may be joined in one action, see Faymonville v. McCullough, 59 Cal. 285; also the article on PARTIES.

In an action upon a debt due from an insolvent corporation, the complaint alleged that defendant was liable as a stockholder to the extent of his stock, by reason of the nonfiling of a certificate as to payment of capital stock required by statute; and also liable as a trustee by reason of failure to publish report as also required by statute. Held, the causes of action were not properly joined. Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 173; rev. 3 Hun (N. Y.) 604; s. c., 6 N. Y. S. C. (Thompson & Cook) 292. Compare Durant v. Gardner, 19 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 94; s. c., 10 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 445; Jones v. Johnson, 86 Ky. 530; rev. Jones v. Johnson, 10 Bush 649.

In an action by a member of an unincorporated association against the association officers in their official capacity for an accounting, etc., a cause of action against the defendants on a contract made by them in their individual capacity cannot be joined. Warth v. Radde, 18 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 396; s. c., 28 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 230; Poulsen v. Van Steenbergh, 65 How. Pr. 342. Or against the officers for misfeasance. Jones v. Johnson, 86 Ky. 530.

A stockholder may ask for a dissolution, removal of one assignee and appointment of another, and an accounting and injunction against the officers. Mitchell v. Bank of St. Paul, 7 Minn. 252.

3. Several Different Rights.—The rights

5. Effect of Code Provisions.—While except in Iowa there seems to be no express code provision that the causes of actions joined should be by or against the same parties in the same right, yet the decisions have been almost uniform in holding that the codes have made no change of the common law in this respect,¹ except in those cases where an express enactment has authorized such joinders.²

of parties as heirs at law to assert their title to real estate descended, and as distributees to have an accounting of the administration of the personal estate, are distinct and present separate causes of action. Rush v. Warren, 26 S. Car. 72.

A plaintiff cannot unite a right of action for breach of trust against a surviving trustee, and the representative of his deceased cotrustee, with a claim for interest of trust funds, recoverable against the surviving trustee as surviving executor of the estate from which the trust funds have been set apart. Sortore v. Scott, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 271.

Where a plaintiff in an action of detinue claimed in one count on a right of property in himself, and in a second count on a right of possession in himself as a bailee, there was held to be no misjoinder, as the claim in each case was in plaintiff's right and neither count set forth a claim in autre droit. Boyle v. Townes, 9 Leigh (Va.) 158. Compare a similar decision in an action of trover. Lashlee v. Wily, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 659.

In an action to enjoin a city from selling certain lots held by the city in trust for the benefit of the common schools, on the ground that the lots had been previously offered at public auction, and purchased by the plaintiffs, it is error to join a count alleging that the plaintiffs are citizens and tax payers of the school district to be benefited by the sale of the lots, and that the sale, as newly advertised, is without authority of law, and will be to the great injury of the school district, because the first count is to redress a private, the second to redress a public grievance. Fort Smith v. Brogan, 49 Ark. 306. See generally the cases cited in the preceding notes to this division of this article, JOINDER OF ACTIONS IN DIFFERENT RIGHTS.

1. Effect of Code Provisions.—Pomeroy on Remedies and Remedial Rights (2nd ed.), § 502, p. 539; Bliss on Code Pleading (2nd ed.), § 117, p. 193.

Mr. Pomeroy, while admitting the rule, criticises it as follows: "Another particular rule, which is but an application of the same doctrine, requires that the several causes of action against or for a given person should all affect him in the same capacity. In other words, a demand for or against a party in his personal character cannot be united with another demand for or against him in a representative character as trustee, executor, administrator, receiver, and the like. The reason usually given for this rule when applied to the defendant is that the judgment upon one cause of action would be against the defendant personally, to be made de bonis propriis, while the judgment upon the other cause of action would be against him in his representative or official capacity, and not perhaps to be made out of his own property; as, for example, it might be made de bonis testatoris. This reasoning, borrowed from the old law, is a mere formula of words, for there is nothing in the nature of things which prevents such a double judgment. It is just as easy for such a judgment to be rendered in one action as it is for two distinct judgments to be granted in separate suits. The argument, however, like so much of so-called legal reasoning, still has convincing force with most of the courts, even while administering the reformed system." Pomeroy on Remedies and Remedial Rights (2nd ed.), § 502, p. 539.

2. By section 1815 of the Code of Civil Procedure of New York, adopted in 1880, it is provided as follows:

"An action may be brought against an executor or administrator personally, and also in his representative capacity in either of the following cases:

"1st. Where the complaint sets forth a cause of action against him in both capacities, or states facts which render it uncertain, in which capacity the cause of action exists against him.

"2nd. Where the complaint sets forth two or more causes of action against the defendant in different capacities, all of which grow out of the same trans-

IV. JOINDER, WHEN PERMITTED; WHEN COMPULSORY; CONSOLIDATION OF ACTIONS.—A cause of action which could have been joined when suit was brought may be joined by amendment.¹ Such an amendment, however, will not be allowed on an appeal from an award of arbitrators or the judgment of a justice of the peace.² Joinders that are permitted under the code are not compulsory.³ The action, or transactions connected with the same subject of action, do not require different places or modes of trial, and are not inconsistent with each other. In a case specified in this section a judgment for the plaintiff for a sum of money must distinctly show whether it is awarded against the defendant personally, or in his representative capacity."

The writer has not found any construction of this section of the code; but in Mr. Throop's Annotated Code there is the following note: "The first subdivision is chiefly designed to provide for some cases in which the last section may bear hardly upon a plaintiff. It sometimes happens that the plaintiff may be able to charge the defendant in both capacities, especially in equity, for instance, if a surviving partner of the decedent is one of his executors, a creditor may require him to account, if necessary, in both capacities. Again, it may be uncertain in which capacity a defendant is liable, as where the plaintiff's agent dies without having accounted, and his executor takes possession of all the effects found in his possession, some of which are the plaintiff's, but the plaintiff is unable to distinguish his own from the decedent's. The second subdivision is designed to extend the same principle to cases where the causes of action are distinct, in accordance with § 484, ante, subd. 9 and the concluding sentence. See Ross v. Harden, 44 Supr. Ct. (J. & S.) 26."

By the English Rules of Court, Order XVII, Rule 5, it is provided that "claims by an executor as such may be joined with claims by him personally, but the claims are to be with reference to the same estate." This has, however, been construed to refer to cases where the executor sues in his individual capacity upon a claim which he has against the assets, quo assets, and not to allow an executrix, who was also a life tenant of realty, to join actions for waste committed in decedent's lifetime and after his death. Johnson v. Burges, 47 L. J., Ch. Div. 552.

The cases in the code States and the special provisions, except those above stated, are given under the respective subdivisions of this division of the article.

1. Joinder by Amendment.—A cause of action which accrues after suit is brought may not be joined by amendment. See cases cited in note to division II, 4, (b), (1), CONTRACTS. All causes of action that may properly be joined may be joined by an amendment. Freeman v. Webb, 21 Neb. 160; Getty v. Hudson River R. Co., 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 269. See Sullivan v. Sullivan, 24 S. Car. 474.

A complaint on a contract may be amended to a suit on a tort. Hord v. Chandler, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 403.

2. A joinder that might have been proper originally may be improper on an appeal from an award of arbitrators. Reitzel v. Franklin, 5 W. & S. 33; Tryon v. Miller, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 11; Winder v. Northampton Bank, 2 Pa. St. 446. Or the judgment of a justice of the peace. Miller v. Lockwood, 17 Pa. St. 248; Hendricks v. Cameron, 3 Ct. of Ap. C. C. (Tex.), § 261; Laing v. St. Louis Type Foundry Co., 3 Ct. of Ap. C. C. (Tex.), § 463; City of North Lawrence v. Hoysradt, 6 Kan. 170. Compare Boyle v. Grant, 18 Pa. St. 162.

3. Joinder Not Compulsory.—Mesne profits may be recovered in a separate action, though a claim therefor could have been joined in the action to recover the land. Nash v. Sullivan, 32 Mich. 189; s. c., 20 N. W. Rep. 144; Rev. Code Mississippi 1880, § 2512, p. 681. Winings v. Wood, 53 Ind. 187; Walker v. Mitchell, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 541; McGrew v. Woodrow, 1 Bush (Ky.) 602; Vandervoort v. Gould, 36 N. Y. 630. Not when they were determined in the proceeding for recovery of the land. Rev. Stat. Ohio, 1890, § 5792; Rev. Stat. Wyoming 1887, § 2997, p. 660. See also the cases cited in notes to II, 4, (b), (3) of this article.

The code provisions authorizing a personal judgment for an deficit in court determines the manner of trial of cases properly joined.¹ At common law, an entire demand could not be divided, but a separate suit could be brought on each distinct demand.² Such separate suits, if they could have been joined, might, even at common law, been consolidated by the order of the court,³ and such consolidation is now expressly authorized by statute in most of the the foreclosure of a mortgage does not prohibit a separate action at law therefor. Palmer v. Harris, 100 Ill. 276. See Hayden v. Snow, 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.) 511, Spencer Ins. Co., 40 Ohio St. 517.

In Michigan, leave of court is however, required. Innes v. Stewart, 36 Mich. 285.

The codes do not compel the joinder of legal and equitable causes of action. Bruce v. Kelly, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 229.

In Illinois, in suits before a justice of the peace, the plaintiff is required to consolidate all his demands, existing at the time suit is commenced, which are of such a nature as to be consolidated and which united would not exceed the justice's jurisdiction. Anno. Stat. (Starr & Curtis), vol. 2, p. 1448, par. 49. This statute has been construed in Lucas v. LeCompte, 42 Ill. 303; Meeks v. Sims, 84 Ill. 422. This statute has no application or bearing on suits brought in courts of record. McDole v. McDole, 106 Ill. 452.

1. Trial.—Where in one suit there are several distinct causes of action properly joined, it is proper to direct the jury to find the issues separately and to assess the damages for each matter separately. Ward v. Ward, 2 Zab. (22 N. J. L.) 699.

When both legal and equitable relief is asked, the correct practice is to try the equitable cause first and afterwards the legal. Harrison v. Juneau Bank, 17 Wis. 340.

Whether the issues presented by a complaint shall be tried by a jury, when the demand for it is made before the trial commences, is to be determined upon the complaint itself, and the character of the case subsequently made by the evidence cannot affect the decision upon the demand. Greenleaf v. Egan, 30 Minn. 316.

2. Separate Suits.—At common law, while a plaintiff could not divide an entire demand or cause of action and maintain several suits thereon, there was no rule which required him to consolidate several distinct demands in one suit. Nickerson v. Rockwell, 90 Ill.

460; McDole v. McDole, 106 Ill. 452.

As to the division of entire demands, see Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, title ACTIONS, div. 11, Splitting of Actions, vol. 1, p. 184 c.

3. Consolidation at Common Law.—

"Where the plaintiff has two causes of action which may be joined in one action, he ought to bring one action only; and if he commence two actions, he may be compelled to consolidate them, and to pay the costs of the application." Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.), § 221; Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), § 103, p. 207; Hollingsworth v. Collinson, 4 Ad. & Ell. 646 (31 E. C. L.), Lewis v. Barks, 4 C. B. N. S. 330 (93 E. C. L.), Beck v. Duveraux, 9 Neb. 109; Clason v. Church, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 29; Powell v. Weiler, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 186. Merrihen v. Taylor, 1 Bro. App. (Pa.) lxvii; Rumsey v. Wynkoop, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 5; Prior v. Kelly, 4 Yeates 128, Boyle v. Grant, 18 Pa. St. 162; City v. Tyson, 9 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 367; Lancaster v. R. R. Co., 12 Lan. Bar (Pa.) 99; Kemp v. Kemp, 1 Woodward (Pa.) 189.

"Several suits, laid in different counties, for the publication in one number of a newspaper circulated in all those counties, of the same libel, have, in the New York supreme court, been consolidated into one by GOULD, J., and the practice was generally approved. Sixty suits (one in each county of the State) were plainly vexatious and oppressive." Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), p. 508, note 22.

Consolidation by Referees.—Where distinct actions are depending, and it is intended to refer them all, there must be separate rules and separate reports, or the actions must be first united and then referred, or in one of them a rule must be entered, submitting all matters in dispute between the parties. A consolidation effected by the arbitrators of their own sole action will invalidate their finding. Morse on Arbitration and Award, p. 72; Craig v. Craig, 4 Halst. (9 N. J. L.) 198. Hart v. James, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 380; Groff v. Musser, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 262. These cases

United States.¹ Causes of action which could have been joined will generally be consolidated,² but distinct causes of action will overrule the contrary case of Brown v. Scott, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 156.

Under the New York Code a referee has power to amend pleadings, but this power seems to be restricted to the curing of immaterial variances. Edwards on Referees, p. 33. At any rate a referee cannot allow a new cause of action to be inserted in the complaint by way of amendment. Union Bank v. Mott, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 372.

It seems that cases that could not be joined may, by consent, be consolidated and referred to the same referee. See Bemus v. Quiggle, 7 Watts. (Pa.) 362; Paist v. Caldwell, 75 Pa. St. 161.

See the cases cited under title ACTIONS, subtitle 9, Consolidation, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 1, p. 184a.

1. Consolidation Under Statutes.—Separate actions brought on counts that might be joined may be consolidated by order of court. Cooper v. Maddan, 6 Ala. 431; Berry v. Ferguson, 58 Ala. 314; Code of Alabama 1886, § 2742; Rev. Statutes of Arizona 1887, § 918; Dig. Stat. Arkansas, § 5018, p. 983; Code of California, §§ 1048, 1195; Deering's Anno. C. & S., vol. 3, pp. 424, 469; Hinsdale v. Eels, 3 Conn. 377; Dakota Codes (1 Levissee), §§ 528, 667, pp. 145, 175; Hatcher v. Nat. Bank of Chambersburg, 79 Ga. 542; s. c., 5 S. Co. 109; Logan v. Mechanics' Bank, 13 Ga. 201; Rev. Stat. Idaho 1887, §§ 4926, 5137, 5216, pp. 551, 571, 577; Rev. Code Iowa 1888 (Miller), § 2734, p. 945; Comp. Laws Kansas 1885 (Dassler), §§ (3944) 145, (4452) 635, pp. 622, 686; Rev. Code Louisiana (Voorhies) 1875, §§ 422, 423, p. 123; Howell's Anno. Stat. Michigan 1882, § 7375 (4186, 5806), p. 1865; Stat. Minnesota 1878, § 128, (109), p. 725; Comp. Stat. Nebraska 1885, § 150, p. 647; Gen. Stat. Nevada 1885, § 3524, p. 853; Revision New Jersey 1887, p. 867, § 121; New York Anno. Code 1889, §§ 817-19, p. 287; § 1989, p. 705; Rev. Stat. Ohio 1890, § 5120, p. 1288; Gen. Laws Oregon 1872, § 505, p. 213; Philips v. Delane, 2 B. Rev. (S. Car.) 429; Code of Tennessee 1884, p. 819, § 4289; Sayle's Texas Civil Stat. vol. 1, art. 1450, p. 471; Laws Utah 1884, p. 320, § 929; Anno. Stat. Wisconsin (S. & B. 1889), p. 1612, § 2792; Rev. Stat. Wyoming 1887, p. 577, § 2507.

In Missouri consolidation will only be ordered when the suits are "founded alone upon liquidated demands." Rev. Stat. 1879, vol. 1, § 3656, p. 623. See Genestelle v. Waugh, 11 Mo. 367.

2. Separate appeals taken from awards made by commissions in proceedings to condemn land under the right of eminent domain may be joined. Washburn v. Milwaukee & Lake Winnebago R. R. Co., 59 Wis. 364.

The court will order a consolidation of several actions of ejectment where there is the same question and defense in all the cases. Smith v. Kimble, 4 Halst. (9 N. J. L.) 335; Hendrickson v. Hendrickson, 3 Gr. (N. J. L.) 102.

An action by plaintiff as surviving partner, and another in his individual name, when against the same defendant, may be consolidated. McCartney v. Hubbell, 52 Wis. 360.

Where a policy of insurance was executed by four companies, stipulating that each acted for itself, and would only be liable for one fourth of the whole amount insured in case of loss, a loss occurred, and the insured brought four separate actions against each company. On motion by plaintiff these actions were consolidated, and that action sustained, on appeal, by a divided court. Viele v. Germania Ins. Co., 26 Iowa 9.

Pending an action for partition, one of the parties brought an action against the other parties to enforce a declaration of trust as to the same land. Held, as both causes of action related to the partition and were not distinct, the actions were properly consolidated. Bixby v. Bent, 59 Cal. 522.

It seems that proceedings for the foreclosure of different mortgages given by a railroad company may be joined. In a very recent case, decided December 23rd, 1889, JUDGE BREWER (now of the Supreme Court of the United States) said:

"Another matter is this:—There is a motion to consolidate the three cases pending in this court for foreclosures of different mortgages given by the railway company. Nothing can be gained by consolidation for the purposes of hearing. Whether consolidation could be had for purposes of decree and sale is a matter not necessary now for deter-not be consolidated,¹ nor causes which accrued subsequent to the bringing of the earlier suits,² nor when such consolidation would oust the jurisdiction of the court.³ Causes of action which cannot be joined may not be ordered to be tried by the same jury at the same time, if the parties thereto object.⁴

V. REMEDY FOR MISJOINDER.—1. At Common Law.—In the case of a misjoinder, the declaration will be bad on a general demurrer or in arrest of judgment, or upon error.⁵ A demurrer, however, mination. That the court has power to consolidate cases situated as these are, I have no doubt, and if all were now ripe for decree, my impression is that equity would require a consolidation; but the cases are not ripe for decree, and there is no certainty as to when either one will be. If one be delayed, while another is speeded, it may be that consolidation will never be proper. For the mortgagee who is prompt ought not to suffer for the delay of one who is a laggard. The motion to consolidate will therefore be denied, with leave to renew the same when either case is ripe for decree." Mercantile Trust Co. v. Miss., Kan. & Texas Ry. Co. (U. S. C. C.) Kansas, 7 Ry. and Corp. Law Journal, No. 2, January 11th, 1890, p. 30.

1. Distinct causes of action will not be consolidated. Wallace v. Eldredge, 27 Cal. 408; Stanley v. Garrigues, 1 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 28; Uhler v. Selfridge, 1 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 61; Blesch v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 44 Wis. 593. Nor where the two causes of action were regarded by the parties as separate and distinct accounts, although they might have been joined. Johnson v. Pirtle, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 262.

An action against husband for words spoken by him and another against husband and wife for words spoken by wife cannot be consolidated. Swithin v. Vincent, 2 Wils. 227; Anderson v. Pack, 2 Clev. L. Rep. (Ohio) 260.

Actions on successive official bonds, with different sureties, will not be consolidated. Screwmen's Ben. Assoc. v. Smith, 7 S. W. Rep. (Tex.) 793.

Two several writs of scire facias to revive two several executions by the same plaintiff against the same defendant cannot be consolidated. Mickle v. Brewer, 3 Halst. (8 N. J. L.) 85. Except by agreement. See Reed's Appeal, 7 Pa. St. 65; Yeager's Appeal, 18 Atl. Rep. (Aug. 28th, 1889) 137. Compare Bank v. Hunsicker, 2 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 381.

Actions to foreclose mortgages of even date by same mortgagee to same mortgagor, but on different adjoining properties cannot be consolidated. Bech v. Ruggles, 6 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 69; Kipp v. Delamater, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 183; Lockwood v. Fox, 8 Daly (N. Y.) 127. They may be consolidated if on the same property, though to different mortgagees. Eleventh Ward Savings Bank v. Hay, 55 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 438; Morrissey v. Leddy, 11 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 438.

2. A consolidation will not be ordered when the rights of action accrued at different dates, and the separate suits were brought at the respective accretion of the rights of action. Gaulden v. Shehee, 24 Ga. 438; Worley v. Glentworth, 5 Halst. (10 N. J. L.) 241. Compare Ft. Wayne, M. & Cin. R. R. Co. v. Clark, 59 Ind. 191.

3. Nor when such consolidation would oust the jurisdiction of the court. Manufacturer's Bank of Macon v. Goolsby, 35 Ga. 82; Buckner v. Thompson, 11 Ill. 563; Mallock v. Krome, 78 Ill. 110; Nickerson v. Rockwell, 90 Ill. 460; Powell v. Weiler, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 186; Mohrhardt v. S. P. & T. N. Ry. Co., 2 Ct. of App. C. C. (Tex.), § 322. See Cariaga v. Dryden, 29 Cal. 307; Powell v. Weiler, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 186.

4. Where cases cannot be consolidated, the court has no authority, as a matter of convenience and economy, to require several cases upon the same general subject to be considered and determined by the same jury at the same time, if the parties thereto object. Ortman v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 32 Kan. 419.

That may be done, if the causes of action could have been joined. Holmes v. Sheridan, 1 Dill. (U. S. D. C.) 351.

An erroneous order consolidating certain actions is not ground for reversal, if not excepted to, at least when it appears that upon the findings appellant was not entitled to any judgment in his favor. Bangs v. Dunn, 66 Cal. 72; s. c., 4 West. Coast Rep. 352.

5. Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) *228.

must be general, and not to one count.¹ Before the entry of a demurrer, the plaintiff may cure the misjoinder by a nolle prosequi, but after demurrer he can only do so by amendment.² While a misjoinder was at common law fatal in error or arrest of judgment,³ yet if the misjoined count was not relied on in any way, or a verdict thereon found for defendant, the verdict for plaintiff on the other counts will be allowed to stand,⁴ and in many of

1. Demurrer.—A misjoinder of counts may be taken advantage of by a general demurrer. Bridgen v. Parkes, 2 Pros. & Pul. 424; Jefford's Admr. v. Ringgold & Co., 6 Ala. 544; Godbold v. Roberts, 20 Ala. 354; Copeland v. Flowlers, 21 Ala. 472; Whilden v. Merchants' etc. Nat. Bank, 64 Ala. 1; Code of Georgia 1882, § 4192 (4133) (4102); Pub. Stat. Massachusetts 1882, p. 966, § 12; Barlow v. Leavitt, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 483; Green v. Morris & Essex R. R. Co., 4 Zab. (24 N. J. L.) 486. But not by a demurrer to one count only. Ragsdale v. Bowles, 16 Ala. 62; Fletcher v. Piatt, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 522; Fernald v. Garvin, 55 Me. 414; Toff v. West Shore & Ontario Tr. Co., 17 Vr. (46 N. J. L.) 34; Smith v. Merwin, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 184; Henderson v. Boyd, 85 Tenn. 21; Templeton v. Clogston, 59 Vt. 628; s. c., 10 Atl. Rep. 594; Creel v. Brown, 1 Rob. (Va.) 265; Louisville & Portland Canal Co. v. Rowan, 4 Dana (Ky.) 606.

If the only counts that are good may be properly joined, the misjoinder of a defective count is fatal on demurrer. Kent v. Long, 8 Ala. 44.

A misjoinder of counts in an original and amended complaint cannot be reached by a demurrer to the amended complaint. Shotwell & Co. v. Gilkey's Adms., 31 Ala. 724.

The improper joinder of two causes of action in a complaint under the forcible entry and detainer act is not a ground of demurrer, but should be reached by a motion requiring plaintiff to amend. Liddon v. Hodnett, 22 Fla. 271.

A misjoinder in the declaration is no ground for nonsuiting the plaintiff at the trial. Lamb v. Newbiggin, 1 Car. & Kir. (47 E. C. L.) 549.

2. Before demurrer has been entered, plaintiff may enter a nolle prosequi as to any misjoined count. This cannot be done after demurrer. Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.) *228; Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), § 101, p. 206; Drummond v. Dorant, 4 Term Rep. 360.

After general demurrer for mis-joinder, an amendment correcting the misjoinder may be allowed. Wilkinson v. Moseley, 30 Ala. 562; Masterson v. Matthews, 60 Ala. 260; Jennings v. Newman, 4 Term Rep. 347; Drummond v. Dorant, 4 Term Rep. 360.

3. Error.—A misjoinder of actions is available in error or arrest of judgment. Denison v. Ralphson, 1 Siderf. 244; 1 Keble 852, 870; Dalston v. Janson, 5 Mod. 91; 1 Salk. 10; Corbitt v. Packington, 3 Barn. & Cress. 268; Comee v. Shaw 1 Horn. & Hurl. 65; 3 Mees. & Welsby 350; Hooker v. Quilter, 1 Wils. 171; Lyon v. Evans, 1 Ark. 349; Phelps v. Hurd, 31 Conn. 444; Moore v. Hicks, 12 Ga. 189; Carstarphen v. Graves, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 435; Selby v. Hutchinson, 4 Gilm. (Ill.) 319; Cruikshank v. Brown, 5 Gilm. (Ill.) 75; McGinnity v. Laguerenne, 5 Gilm. (10 Ill.) 101; Dalston v. Bradberry, 50 Ill. 82; Bodley v. Roop, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 158; Canton Nat. Bld. Assoc. v. Weber, 34 Md. 669; Swem v. Sharrett, 48 Md. 408; Fairfield v. Burt, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 244; Hopkins v. Atlantic & St. L. R. R., 36 N. H. 9, 12; Peabody v. Kinsley, 40 N. H. 416; Nimocks v. Inks, 17 Ohio 566; Brumbaugh v. Keith, 31 Pa. St. 327; Gruber v. First Nat. Bank of Clarion, 8 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 113; Holland v. Pack, Peck (Tenn.) 151.

A misjoined count will be stricken off, on a rule to show cause. Maguire v. Rabenan, 16 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 479.

4. Although a misjoinder of actions may be fatal in arrest of judgment or in error, if the misjoined count or counts were not good or were withdrawn, or not relied upon in any way, or a verdict thereon was given for the defendant, the verdict may stand, although such count or counts were not formally withdrawn or stricken from the declaration. Knightly v. Birch, 2 Maule & Sel. 333; overruling Bage v. Brownel, 3 Lev. 99; Sellick v. Hall, 47 Conn. 260; Lyon v. Alvord, 18 Conn. 66; Johnston v. Riley, 13 Ga. 97; Fernald v. Garvin, 55 Me. 414; Penniman v. Winner, 54 Md. 127; Prescott v.

the States, a misjoinder must be objected to in the trial court and before judgment, or the error is waived.¹

2. Under the Codes.—When the same cause of action is set forth in two or more counts, the defendant's remedy is by motion to elect.² When two or more causes of action which are inconsistent with each other are joined, the remedy is also by motion to elect.³ When two causes of action are joined in one paragraph, the remedy varies. In California and Missouri the remedy is by demurrer,⁴ but in a majority of the States the remedy is by motion.⁵ In either case, the objection is waived if not taken be-

Tufts, 4 Mass. 146; Hallock v. Powell, 2 Caines (N. Y.) 216; Halleran v. Field, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 38, 40; Miller v. Lockwood, 17 Pa. St. 248; Erie City Iron Works v. Barber, 118 Pa. St. 6; Schmidt v. Owens, 10 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 5; Finch v. State, 9 S. W. Rep. (Tex.) 85; Louisville & Portland Canal Co. v. Rowan, 4 Dana (Ky.) 606. Compare Bartlett v. Boyd, 34 Vt. 256.

1. Where a complaint shows a substantial cause of action, and no objection was interposed to it in the primary court, a misjoinder of causes of action is not available on error. Walker v. Mobile Marine Dock & Mutual Ins. Co., 31 Ala. 529. See Bell's Admr. v. Troy, 35 Ala. 184.

In Maine, "when the declaration contains a wrong joinder of counts and no written objection is made until after the cause is committed to the jury, and a general verdict has been recorded, the judgment cannot for such cause be reversed on writ of error," and "no motion in arrest of judgment in a civil action can be entertained." Rev. Stat. 1883, p. 699, §§ 30, 31. See Fernald v. Garvin, 55 Me. 414.

In Maryland, "no judgment shall be arrested or set aside because of any misjoinder of forms of actions or of counts." Public Gen. Laws, 1888, vol. 2, p. 1094, § 9.

Similar provision in Massachusetts. Pub. Stat. 1882, p. 974, § 82. In Missouri, prior to adoption of code provisions. See Yates v. Kimmel, 5 Mo. 87.

Possibly also in Michigan, where the statutes provide that no judgment shall be arrested for "mispleading." Howell's Anno. Stat. 1882, § 7635, p. 1918. Schafer v. Boyce, 41 Mich. 256. In New York, under a similar statute adopted prior to the adoption of the code in 1848, it was held that an objection on the ground of a misjoinder was not good in error. Lovett v. Pell, 22 Wend. 369; rev. 19 Wend. 546; though the decision was criticized, and held to be a reversal of the common law rule, and not properly based on the statute in Butler v. Van Wyck, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 438.

2. Misjoinder Under the Codes.—See Division 2, 1 b, of this article.

3. When counts are inconsistent, the remedy is by motion to elect. Keens v. Gaslin, 24 Neb. 310; Young v. Edwards, 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 20.

4. Two Causes in One Paragraph—Demurrer.—If several causes of action are not separately stated, the defects cannot be taken advantage of by a motion to dismiss the action, or by a motion for judgment on the pleadings. Watson v. San Francisco & H. B. R. Co., 50 Cal. 523.

The remedy is by demurrer and that specific cause must be assigned. Fraser v. Oakdale Lumber & W. Co., 73 Cal. 187; Bernero v. South Brit. Ins. Co., 65 Cal. 386; s. c., 3 West. Coast Rep. 292; Mulholland v. Rapp, 50 Mo. 42; Scott v. Kobardo, 67 Mo. 289.

The remedy in Missouri formerly was by motion to elect. Mooney v. Kennett, 19 Mo. 551.

When legal and equitable causes of action are not separately stated, the equitable claim can be considered, and the rest treated as surplusage. Young v. Coleman, 43 Mo. 179.

5. Two Causes in One Paragraph—Motion.—If causes of action are not separately stated, the remedy is only by a motion to make the complaint definite and certain. Colton v. Jones, 7 Robt. (N. Y. Super. Ct.) 164; Anderson v. Hill, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 238; Wood v. Anthony, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 78; Freer v. Denton, 61 N. Y. 492; Gooding v. McAlister, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 123; McKinney v. McKinney, 8 Ohio 423; Baxter v. State, 9 Wis. 38; Nichol v. Alexander, 28 Wis. 118; Riemer v. Johnke, 37 Wis. 258; Sentinel Co. v. Thomson, 38 Wis. 489.

fore verdict.¹ When different causes of action are erroneously joined in a complaint, the remedy is by demurrer, if the error is apparent, and by answer if it is not, and the objection if not so taken is waived.² This is the express provision of all the codes except in

An order refusing such motion is not reviewable in error. Goldberg v. Utley, 60 N. Y. 427; People v. Tweed, 63 N. Y. 194.

A demurrer will not lie. Bass v. Comstock, 38 N. Y. 21; s. c., 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 382; expressly overruling a number of earlier cases to the contrary.

But a demurrer is proper if two causes that cannot be joined even when stated separately are included in one paragraph. Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 173; Townsend v. Coon, 7 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 56; Goldberg v. Utley, 60 N. Y. 427.

In a few States, the remedy is by a motion to separate the causes of action into paragraphs and number them, and not by demurrer. Hendry v. Hendry, 32 Ind. 349; Craig v. Cook, 28 Minn. 232; Hardy v. Miller, 11 Neb. 395.

The erroneous overruling of such a motion is ground for reversal. Pierce v. Bicknell, 11 Kan. 262.

When such a motion is allowed, and plaintiff refuses to separate the causes of action, the court may dismiss the action without prejudice to a future one. Eisenhower v. Stein, 37 Kan. 281; s. c., 15 Pac. Rep. 167.

1. Misjoinder in One Paragraph Waived.

—An objection to a petition for a union of several causes in one count is waived, if not made before verdict, and cannot be raised by motion in arrest of judgment. Shelby v. Houston, 38 Cal. 410; Fuhn v. Weber, 38 Cal. 636; Valencia v. Couch, 32 Cal. 339; Treat v. Forsyth, 40 Cal. 484; Joy v. Bitzer (Iowa), 3 Law Rep. Anno. 184; Pickering v. Miss. Valley Nat. Tel. Co., 47 Mo. 457; House v. Lowell, 45 Mo. 381, overruling McCoy v. Yager, 34 Mo. 134; Clark's Admx. v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 36 Mo. 202; Hoagland v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 39 Mo. 451; McKinney v. McKinney, 8 Ohio St. 423.

2. Misjoinder of Causes of Action—

Remedy.—Most of the codes contain provisions that "the defendant may demur to the complaint (petition) when it shall appear on the face thereof (inter alia) that several causes of action have been improperly united," and that when such error does "not appear upon the face of the complaint (petition) the objection may be taken by answer," and that "if no such objection be taken, either by demurrer or answer, the defendant shall be deemed to have waived the same." Pomeroy's Remedies and Remedial Rights (2nd edition), §§ 433, 443, pp. 477-479, 488, 489; Bliss on Code Pleading (2nd ed.), § 412, p. 629; Code of Civil Proc. California, §§ 430, 434; Code of Civil Proc. Dakota, § 113, 117; Levissee's Code, pp. 33, 35; Rev. Code Dist. of Columbia, 1857, ch. 82, §§ 4, 9, 10, pp. 343, 344; Rev. Stat. Idaho, 1887, §§ 4174, 4177, 4178, p. 452; Comp. Laws Kansas 1885 (Dassler), §§ (3888, 3890) 89, 91, p. 617; Stat. Minnesota 1878, §§ 92-95 (74-78), p. 720; Rev. Stat. Missouri, 1879, §§ 3515, 3519, pp. 602, 603 (see Mulholland v. Rapp, 50 Mo. 42); Comp. Stat. Montana 1887, §§ 87, 88, p. 81; Comp. Stat. Nebraska 1885, §§ 94, 96, p. 641; Gen. Stat. Nevada 1885, §§ 3062-7, p. 764; New York Anno. Code 1889, §§ 488, 498; pp. 158, 162; Code of North Carolina, vol. 1, §§ 239, 241-2, pp. 90-91; Rev. Stat. Ohio, 1890, §§ 5062, 5064, pp. 1274-5; Gen. Laws Oregon 1872, p. 119, §§ 63-70; Code of South Carolina, pp. 117-119, §§ 164-169; Allen v. Read, 66 Tex. 13; Laws of Utah 1884, pp. 205-6, §§ 292, 295-6; Code of Washington 1881, pp. 47-48, §§ 77-81; Anno. Stat. Wisconsin (S. & B. 1889), pp. 1533-7, §§ 2649-54; Rev. Stat. Wyoming 1887, pp. 569-570, §§ 2449-52.

In Indiana, the remedy is by demurrer, and it is expressly provided that a judgment shall not be reversed for error in sustaining or overruling such a demurrer. Rev. Stat. 1888 (Myers & Co.), §§ 339, 341, (85, 87) (50, 52).

These provisions have been justly criticised, in so far as they relate to joinder, as follows: "These rules are identical with those which regulate the method of objecting to a defect of parties. . . . If the objection appears on the face of the pleading, it must be raised by demurrer, and not by answer; and this is substantially the same as saying that it must always be raised by demurrer, because the misjoinder will always appear on the face of the pleading." Pomeroy's Remedies and Remedial Rights (2nd ed.). § 443, p. 489, note 1, and § 448, p. 492.

Arkansas, Iowa and Kentucky, where the remedy is by motion,¹ in Connecticut, where there is no express direction as to the manner of taking the objection,² and in Texas, where the remedy seems to be a plea in abatement.³ A demurrer for a misjoinder must allege that specific ground and be general.⁴ It will not be allowed if the misjoined causes are not sufficiently stated,⁵ or the court

The misjoinder was held to be waived in Macondray v. Simmons, 1 Cal. 393; Marius v. Bicknell, 10 Cal. 217; Lawrence v. Montgomery, 37 Cal. 183; Shelby v. Houston, 38 Cal. 410; Faymonville v. McCollough, 59 Cal. 285; Roberts v. Eldred, 73 Cal. 394; Eversdon v. Mayhew (Cal.), 21 Pac. Rep. 431; Rankin v. Collins, 50 Ind. 158; Simpson v. Greeley, 8 Kan. 586; Wilson v. Thompson, 1 Met. (Ky.) 123; Gardner v. Kellogg, 23 Minn. 463; James v. Wilder, 25 Minn. 305; Jamison v. Copher, 35 Mo. 483; Sumner v. Tuck, 10 Mo. App. 269; Blossom v. Barrett, 37 N. Y. 434; Smith v. Orser, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 187; Hubbell v. Meigs, 50 N. Y. 480, 487; Finley v. Hayes, 81 N. Car. 368; McCarthy v. Garraghty, 10 Ohio St. 438; Field v. Hurst, 9 S. Car. 277; Cary v. Wheeler, 14 Wis. 281.

Even by a judgment on a default. Bratton v. Smith, 2 West. L. Monthly (Ohio) 497; Mead v. Bagnall, 15 Wis. 156.

1. By the codes of Arkansas, Iowa and Kentucky the remedy for a misjoinder is by a motion to strike out, and the objection will be considered to have been waived unless such motion is made. A misjoinder is not a ground of demurrer. Dig. of Stat. of Arkansas, 1884, p. 983, §§ 5016, 5017; Terry v. Rosell, 32 Ark. 478; Clements v. Lampkin, 34 Ark. 598; Riley v. Norman, 39 Ark. 158; Turner v. Alexander, 41 Ark. 254; Organ v. Memphis & L. R. Co., 51 Ark. 235; Adams v. Edgerton, 48 Ark. 419; s. c., 3 S. E. Rep. 628; Rev. Codes Iowa 1888 (Miller), §§ 2632, 2633, p. 913; Grant v. McCarty, 38 Iowa 468; Knott v. Tincher, 39 Iowa 628, 630; Flynn v. Des Moines & St. Louis R. Co., 63 Iowa 490; Kentucky Code 1888 (Carroll), §§ 85, 86 (113, 114), pp. 58, 59; Hancock v. Johnson, 1 Met. (Ky.) 242; McKee v. Pope, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 548; Caldwell v. Caldwell, 2 Bush (Ky.) 446; Sale v. Crutchfield, 8 Bush (Ky.) 636. Such waiver will not operate to give a court jurisdiction. Randall v. Shropshire, 4 Met. (Ky.) 327.

If the plaintiff refuse to proceed after such motion has been granted, the action will be dismissed. Dragoo v. Levi, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 520. By a later code the court is required to strike out a misjoined cause. Sheppard v. Stephens, 2 S. W. Rep. (Ky.) 548.

In Iowa, however, it has been decided that if there be both a misjoinder of parties as well as of causes of action, failure to make the motion will not operate as a waiver, but the defect may be taken advantage of by answer and by motion in arrest of judgment. Cogswell v. Murphy, 46 Iowa 44.

2. The Connecticut code provides simply that if it appear to the court that all the causes of action joined cannot all be conveniently heard together, the court may order separate trials, or expunge any one or more of them. Gen. Stat. 1888, § 878, p. 211. This would be done presumably by demurrer, as demurrers are still allowed. Gen. Stat. 1888, § 872, p. 210.

3. It seems that in Texas the remedy for a misjoinder is a plea in abatement. Young v. Smith, 22 Tex. 345.

But the objection cannot be made for the first time in the supreme court. It will be considered to have been waived. Allen v. Read, 66 Tex. 13.

4. Demurrer—Form of.—A demurrer for a misjoinder must allege that specific ground. Cox v. West. Pac. R. Co., 47 Cal. 87; Haverstick v. Trudel, 51 Cal. 431; Smith v. Jordan, 13 Minn. 264; Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54; Ruhling v. Hackett, 1 Nev. 360; Carter v. De Camp, 40 Hun (N.Y.) 258; Dodge v. Colby, 108 N. Y. 445; Stillwell v. Kellogg, 14 Wis. 461. An allegation of multifariousness was held sufficient in Cohen v. Ottenheimer, 13 Oreg. 220. Compare Dyer v. Jacoway, 42 Ark. 186. The demurrer must be to the whole complaint, and not to each paragraph supposed to be misjoined. Bougher v. Scobey, 16 Ind. 151.

5. Demurrer—When Not Allowed.—A demurrer for a misjoinder will not be allowed if one of the causes is insufficiently stated. New Home Sewing Machine Co. v. Wray, 28 S. Car. 86; s. c., 5 S. E. Rep. 603; Bassett v.

has no jurisdiction over them.¹ The objection is waived if the demurrer is not prosecuted.² The erroneous overruling of such a demurrer, if the defendant is injured thereby, is available in error except in Indiana.³ But a number of the codes expressly authorize, and in some cases require, the court to divide the action if the demurrer is sustained.⁴ When the misjoinder is occasioned by the fact that all the parties are not affected by the action, the remedy is by demurrer, except also in Indiana.⁵

Warner, 23 Wis. 673; Truesdell v. Rhodes, 26 Wis. 215; Willard v. Reas, 26 Wis. 540; Welsh v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 34 Wis. 494; Lee v. Simpson, 39 Wis. 333; Lochmiller v. Indian Ford Water Power Co., 51 Wis. 683.

When, however a demurrer was sustained for a misjoinder, and it appeared that if any cause of action was stated, the complaint stated two, which could not be joined, the order sustaining the demurrer was affirmed without enquiring whether the complaint sufficiently states any cause of action. Leidersdorf v. Second Ward Savings Bank, 50 Wis. 406.

1. A cause of action over which the court has not jurisdiction will be rejected as surplusage, an objection being taken of misjoinder of actions. Allen v. Wilmington & Weldon R. R., 102 N. Car. 381.

2. Demurrer Waived.—If a demurrer is filed, but not prosecuted, it will be presumed to have been abandoned and the misjoinder waived. Gray v. Dougherty, 25 Cal. 266, 277; Hibernia S. & L. Soc. v. Ordway, 38 Cal. 679.

Defendant, by answering upon the merits after demurrer overruled, abandons the demurrer. Pickering v. Miss. Valley Nat. Tel. Co., 47 Mo. 457.

3. Error in Overruling Demurrer.—If a demurrer is erroneously sustained on ground of misjoinder of causes of action, and the plaintiff files an amended complaint uniting all his causes of action in one count the erroneous decision on the demurrer is waived. Loveland v. Garner, 71 Cal. 541; s. c., 12 Pac. Rep. 616. And it seems the court will not reverse where the substantial rights of the parties are not affected, under the code provisions that error without prejudice is not a ground of reversal. Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183; Angeli v. Hopkins, 79 Cal. 181.

The code of Indiana provides that "no judgment shall be reversed for any error committed in sustaining or overruling a demurrer for misjoinder of causes of action." See Srong v. Taylor School Tp., 79 Ind. 208; Hart v. Walker, 77 Ind. 331; Coan v. Grimes, 63 Ind. 21.

4. Division of Action.—A number of the codes provide that if the demurrer is sustained, the court may, in its discretion, and on such terms as may be just, order the action to be divided into as many actions as may be necessary to the proper determination of the causes of action therein mentioned. Gen. Stat. Connecticut 1888, § 873, p. 211; Dakota Code (1 Levissee), § 141, p. 42; Rev. Code District of Columbia, ch. 82, § 50, p. 351; Code of South Carolina 1883, § 193, p. 131; Anno. Stat. Wisconsin (S. & B. 1889), p. 1562, § 2686.

A number of the codes require that this shall be done. Rev. Stat. Indiana 1888 (Myers & Co.), § 340, (86), (51); Rev. Codes Iowa 1888 (Miller), § 2634, p. 913; Comp. Laws Kansas 1885 (Dassler), § (3891) 92, p. 618; Comp. Stat. Nebraska 1885, § 97, p. 641; Code North Carolina 1883, § 272, p. 104; Rev. Stat. Ohio 1890, § 5065, p. 1276; Rev. Stat. Wyoming 1887, p. 570, § 2452.

5. Misjoinder Actions Against Different Parties.—When all the defendants are not affected by all the causes of action the objection to be taken is not to the misjoinder of parties, but of causes of action, and the remedy is by demurrers. Nichols v. Drew, 94 N. Y. 22; Farmers' Bank of Mo. v. Bayliss, 41 Mo. 274, overruled. See Mead v. Brown, 65 Mo. 552; Kellogg v. Malin, 62 Mo. 429. See also Neil v. Board of Trustees, 31 Ohio Stat. 15.

In Indiana, where the causes of action are improperly joined, because they are not joint actions against all the defendants, but separate causes of action against each, the remedy is not by demurrer, but by motion to strike out. Rogers v. Smith, 17 Ind. 323; Lane v. State, 27 Ind. 108.

VI. JOINDER OF CAUSES OF ACTION IN LOUISIANA.—By the Code of Louisiana, several demands may be generally consolidated when they are consistent.¹ Actions by and against different parties may be joined when the actions have a cognate origin, or there is a common interest to be adjudicated upon in one judgment.² Different reliefs may be demanded in the same action.³ Actions

1. Louisiana.—"Separate actions may be cumulated in the same demand, except in the cases hereafter expressed; this is termed cumulation of actions.

The plaintiff is not allowed to cumulate several demands in the same action, when one of them is contrary to or precludes another. As when one has bought a thing in the name of another, and with his funds, without his authorization, the person for whom the purchase has been made, cannot demand, by the same action, both the thing bought in his name and the money employed for paying the price. Nor can a vendor demand, at the same time, the rescission of the sale he had made and the price for which it was made; he must decide for one or the other of the two causes of action, as the one precludes the other.

If the plaintiff has several causes of action tending to the same conclusion, not contrary to nor exclusive of each other, though they arise from different contracts, he may cumulate and bring them in the same suit; as, for example, if one claim from another one hundred dollars in virtue of a sale and one thousand dollars in virtue of a loan, or if he claim a movable from another both by inheritance and by purchase." Rev. Code 1875 (Voorhies), art. 148, 149, 151, p. 66.

A defendant cannot be sued on his endorsement, and as the illegal possessor of the property for which his endorsed note was given. Petitpain v. Frey, 15 La. 195.

A demand for certain specific property and a note given for the price thereof cannot be joined. De l'Homme v. De Kerlegand, 4 La. 353.

The validity of a sale may not be attacked and a share of the proceeds claimed in the same action, nor can an action to rescind a sale be joined with a claim to account for nonpayment of the price. Copley v. Flint, 16 La. 380; cf. Bank of Louisiana v. Delery, 2 La. An. 648; Ouliber v. His Creditors, 16 La. An. 287; Theuver v. Knorr, 24 La. An. 597.

Actions to have A declared a bankrupt and to rescind a sale of property made by him to B on the ground that he was insane at the time he made the conveyance may not be joined. Kennedy v. Dow, 10 Martin (La.) 577, 601.

Plaintiff may institute a petitory action for one tract of land and in the same petition sue for slander of title of another and distinct tract. Williams v. Close, 12 La. An. 873.

Actions against A on a warranty of B's good conduct and for fraudulent representations in regard to him may be joined. Cross v. Richardson, 2 Martin (N. S.) 323; cf. Montross v. Hillman, 11 Rob. (La.) 87.

Actions for slander and for false imprisonment may be joined. Buquet v. Watkins, 1 La. 131.

2. Different Parties.—Several creditors standing in the same predicament, and seeking the same relief (arrest of creditor for fraud, etc.), may join in one application. Pecquet v. Golis, 1 Martin N. S. (La.) 438.

But distinct creditors may not join in the same action their separate and distinct demands. Dyas & Co. v. Dinkgrave, 15 La. An. 502.

Joinder of demands against distinct defendants is not forbidden by the code as against A, as endorser of a note, and B, who had sold same to plaintiffs without endorsing it, for fraudulent representations. Lafonta v. Poulitz, 6 Martin (N. S.) 391.

An action against A for breach of contract may be joined with an action against B for a tort where the actions have a cognate origin, or there is a common interest to be adjudicated upon in one judgment. The defendants may sever in their defence, and if desired separate trials may be had. Arrow-smith v. Mayor, 17 La. 419; New Orleans Ins. Asso. v. Harper, 32 La. An. 1165; Holzab v. New Orleans & Carrollton R. R. Co., 38 La. An. 185; Riggs v. Bell, 39 La. An. 1030.

Partition of different properties where there is no privity of estate between the parties cannot be had in the same suit. Mavor v. Armant, 14 La. An. 181.

3. Different Reliefs.—A wife may, in must be by and against parties in the same right, except when this rule has been modified by statute.¹ The remedy for a misjoinder is by election and the misjoinder is waived by a joinder in issue on the merits, unless the actions preclude each other.²

VII. JOINDER OF PLEAS—(See PLEADING).—At common law a defendant could not plead several distinct pleas to the same declaration, though he could plead to a part of the declaration one ground of defence, and to another part a different ground.³ Such joinder was, however, authorized by the statute of 4 and 5 the same action, pray a separation of her property from her husband's and an injunction staying an execution on a judgment against him, and alleged to have been levied on her property. Wrinckle v. Wrinckle, 8 Martin N. S. (La.) 333; Atkinson v. Atkinson, 15 La. An. 491. She may in one proceeding enjoin execution on several distinct judgments. Medart v. Fasnatch, 15 La. An. 621.

Specific property may be demanded, or, if not able to recover it, its value, in the same suit. Nouvet v. Bollinger, 15 La. An. 293.

An injunction to extinguish a judgment in favor of an administrator, the execution and delivery of a deed for lands sold by said administrator, and a proceeding to remove him for malfeasance may all be joined. Terron v. Durand, 29 La. An. 506.

A partnership existence may be proved and its affairs liquidated in the same action. Mills v. Fellows, 30 La. An. 824; McNair v. Gourrier, 40 La. An. 353.

A partner may demand a liquidation and settlement of the partnership and a payment of the balance due him in the same action. Millandon v. Sylvestre, 8 La. 262.

A party may demand a recognition as heir, an account of the administration, and the property in the hands of the curator, in the same suit. Miller v. Rongieux, 20 La. An. 577.

1. See the cases cited under div. III of this article.

2. Remedy for Misjoinder.—When two causes of action contrary to and exclusive of each other have been cumulated in the same demand, the defendant may refuse to plead to the merits until the plaintiff has made his choice as to which of the two he means to proceed with, and if the exception be sustained by the court, the plaintiff shall be bound to amend his petition so as to preserve only one cause of action, otherwise his suit shall be dismissed. Rev. Code 1875 (Voorhies), art. 152, p. 67.

It is a general rule that objections to form are waived by a joinder in issue on the merits; but where two actions are cumulated and one precludes the other, the defect is one of substance and is not cured by joining issue. De l'Homme v. DeKerlegand, 4 La. 353. See Kenney v. Dow, 10 Martin (La.) 577; Mackoy v. Holton, 8 La. An. 48.

3. Joinder of Pleas.—On the general subject of duplicity in pleading, see Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), ch. 8; Stephen on Pleading (9th Am. ed.), rul. 1, *251; Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.), vol. 1, *558, 586.

At common law a defendant could not plead several distinct defences to the same part of a declaration. The right to plead several matters in defence, in any case, is derived entirely from the statute. HAINES, J., in State v. Roe, 2 Dutch. (26 N. J. L.) 215.

Several dependent facts which make but one point of defence may be pleaded together. Patcher v. Sprague, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 462.

Two rejoinders to a single replication are inadmissible. Judge of Probate v. Lane, 50 N. H. 556.

A plea in abatement may not be joined with a plea in bar. Kerr v. Willetts, 48 N. J. L. (19 Vr.) 78.

This objection of duplicity prohibited the joinder of a plea and a demurrer to the same count, though a defendant may plead to one count and demur to another. Stephen on Pleading (9th Am. ed.), rul. 2, *278; Rickert v. Snyder, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 104; Davis v. Hines, 6 Ohio St. 473. Contra. by statute. Syme v. Griffin, 4 Hen. & Mun. (Va.) 277.

To an assignment of errors a plea of in nullo est erratum cannot be joined with a plea of the statute of limitation. Acker v. Ledyard, 1 Denio (N. Y.) 677.

Anne, ch. 16, §§ 4 and 5.¹ This statute does not apply to the subsequent pleadings,² nor did it authorize the joinder of a plea and a demurrer to the same count,³ but under it inconsistent pleas were frequently allowed.⁴ In the various States there are now special statutory provisions allowing the joinder of pleas or answers.⁵ Several of the codes expressly require that the defences joined should not be inconsistent, and even where there is no express provision, the tendency of the decisions is to forbid such

1. Statutes 4 & 5 Anne, ch. 16, § 4, 5.—This statute provided that "it shall be lawful for any defendant or tenant, in any action or suit, or for any plaintiff in replevin, in any court of record with the leave of the court, to plead as many several matters thereto as he shall think necessary for his defence." Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.), vol. 1, *586; Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), § 18, p. 399.

"The asking leave of court was formerly actually practiced in England; Tidd's Practice, 657; but it soon became a matter of course there, and so here in this State. But the power still remains in the court, to be exercised on a proper occasion. The court have power in a proper case to prevent frivolous or dilatory or catching pleas." POTTER, J., in Slocomb v. Powers, 10 R. I. 255, 256.

"The discretion vested in the court by the statute of Anne to refuse leave to put in more than one plea is clearly a legal discretion, to be exercised only when good reason exists." Peters v. Ulmer, 74 Pa. St. 402.

Double pleading is at the discretion of the court, and will be allowed only when there is reasonable ground for believing it will be for the furtherance of justice. Wilton Mfg. Co. v. Woodman, 32 Me. 185.

To an information in the nature of a quo warranto the defendant could plead but one plea, even under this statute. Rex v. Newland, Sayre's Rep. 66; Rex v. Leigh, 4 Bur. 2143; Rex v. Blatchford, 4 Bur. 2147; State v. Roe, 2 Dutch. (26 N. J. L.) 215; People v. Richardson, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 113. Amended by act 32 Geo. III, ch. 58 (1792). Rex v. Antridge, 8 Term Rep. 467.

2. Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), § 21, p. 400. See Judge of Probate v. Lane, 50 N. H. 556.

3. Stephen on Pleading (9th Am. ed.), rule 2, *279. Gould's Pleadings, (5th ed.), § 28, p. 405.

A plea and demurrer at the same time to the whole declaration are admissible under the Virginia code. Syme v. Griffin, 4 Hen. & Munf. (Va.) 277.

4. Gould's Pleadings (5th ed.), § 26, p. 406; Chitty's Pleadings (16th ed.), *587; Granite State Bank v. Otis, 53 Me. 133.

5. Code and Statutory Provisions.—In the code States the provisions as to the answer usually provide that "The defendant may set forth by answer as many defences and counter claims as he may have, whether they be such as have been heretofore denominated legal or equitable or both. They must each be separate and refer to the causes of action which they are intended to answer, in such manner that they may be intelligibly distinguished;" or else that "the defendant may set forth by answer, as many grounds of defence, counter claim or set off as he may have, whether legal or equitable or both." See Pomeroy's Remedies and Remedial Rights (2nd ed.), § 582, p. 647. The statutes in the States not practicing under the codes are usually to the effect that "each party may plead as many matters as he may think proper, provided that they are pertinent to the cause." For these provisions see

Code of Alabama 1886, p. 594, § 2675; Hopkinson v. Shelton, 37 Ala. 306; Rev. Stat. of Arizona 1887, p. 175, § 734; Dig. of Stat. Arkansas 1884, p. 985, § 5033; Lincoln v. Wilamowicz, 7 Ark. (2 Eng.) 378, overruling Pope v. Latham, 1 Ark. 60; Code of California 1851, § 49, of 1872, § 441; Deering's Anno., C. & S., vol. 2, p. 190; Gen. Stat. of Connecticut 1888, § 874, p. 210; Dakota Code (1 Levisce), § 119, p. 37; Rev. Stat. Idaho 1887, § 4187, p. 453; Rev. Stat. Indiana 1888, vol. 1 (Myers & Co.) § 347 (56); Rev. Code Iowa 1888 (Miller), § 2655, p. 922; Comp. Laws Kansas 1885 (Dassler), § (3803) 94, p. 618; Kentucky Codes 1888 (Carroll), § 113 (119), p. 82; Pub. Stat. Massachusetts, 1882, p. 967, §§ 13 etc.; Stat. Min- nesota 1878, § 98 (81), p. 721; Rev. Code Mississippi 1880, § 1546-7-8, p. 435-6; Rev. Stat. Missouri, 1879, vol. 1, § 3522, p. 604; Comp. Stat. Montana 1887, § 91, p. 82; Comp. Stat. Nebraska 1885, § 100, p. 642; Gen. Stat. Nevada, § 3071, p. 765; Revision New Jersey 1877, p. 867, § 118; Parks v. McClellan, 15 Vr. (44 N. J. L.) 552; Comp. Laws New Mexico 1884, § 1916; New York Anno. Code 1889, § 507, p. 171; Code of North Carolina, § 245, p. 93; Rev. Stat. Ohio 1890, § 5071, p. 1277; Gen. Laws Oregon 1872, p. 120, § 72; Pub. Stat. Rhode Island 1882, p. 579, § 7; Code of South Carolina 1888, § 171, p. 121; Sayles' Texas Civil Stat., vol. 1, art. 1262, p. 424; Laws Utah 1884, p. 207, §§ 304-5; Code of Virginia 1887, p. 778, § 3264; Code of Washington 1881, p. 48, § 83; Code of West Virginia 1887, p. 783, § 20; Anno. Stat. Wisconsin (S. & B. 1889), § 2657, p. 1545; Rev. Stat. Wyoming 1887, p. 571, § 2458.

joinders, except when the facts of the case require it.¹ If the de-

Georgia.—"The defendant may also set up, as a defence, all claims against the plaintiff of a similar nature with the plaintiff's demand. Georgia Code 1882, § 3261 (3196) (3185); Ransone v. Christian, 49 Ga. 491. The meaning of which is that torts may be set against torts and contracts against contracts. Ransone v. Christian, 49 Ga. 491; Ingram v. Jordan, 55 Ga. 356; Smith v. Printup, 59 Ga. 610; Green v. Combs, 81 Ga. 210.

Texas.—There was a similar provision in Texas under the act of 1840. See Walcott v. Hendrick, 6 Tex. 406, 412. This has, however, been supplanted by the following rule:

"The original answer may consist of pleas to the jurisdiction, in abatement of privilege, or any other dilatory pleas; of exceptions, general and special; of general denial, and any other facts in defence, by way of avoidance or estoppel, the same being pleaded in the due order of pleading, as required by statute, and it may present a cross action, which to that extent will place defendant in the attitude of a plaintiff. Facts in avoidance and estoppel may be stated together, or in several special pleas, each presenting a distinct defence and numbered so as to admit of separate issues to be formed on them." Rules for the courts of Texas, adopted in 1877, 47 Tex. 617.

A defendant is allowed to plead as many inconsistent matters of defence as he pleases to reduce to writing. Welden v. Texas Continental Meat Co., 65 Tex. 487.

Pennsylvania.—The act of May 25th, 1887 (P. L. 271), which provided that all demands recoverable in debt, assumpsit or covenant, should be recovered in one form of action, called an "action of assumpsit," and that damages recoverable in trespass, trover or trespass on the case should be recovered in one form of action, called an "action of trespass," further provides that "special pleading is hereby abolished. In the action of assumpsit, the plea of the general issue shall be 'nonassumpsit.' The defendant in the action of assumpsit shall be at liberty, in addition to the plea of 'nonassumpsit,' to plead payment set off, and also the bar of the statute of limitations, and no other pleas. The only plea in the action of trespass shall be 'not guilty.'" Purd. Dig. Sup., p. 2370.

1. Consistent Defences.—Bliss on Code Pleading (2nd ed.), § 343-4, pp. 498, 501.

A defendant is permitted to plead as many defences as he may have, if they be not contradictory. Burnham v. Call, 2 Utah 433; Woollen v. Whitacre, 73 Ind. 108; Caritt v. Tharp, 30 Mo. App. 131; Rooney v. Tierney, 82 Ky. 253 (under the prior code of Kentucky inconsistent pleas were allowed); Harper v. Harper, 10 Bush (Ky.) 447; Derby v. Gallup, 5 Minn. 119; Cook v. Finch, 19 Minn. 407; Smith v. Culligan, 74 Mo. 388.

They may, under proper circumstances, be inconsistent. Bell v. Brown, 22 Cal. 671; Buhne v. Corbett, 43 Cal. 264; Billings v. Drew, 52 Cal. 565.

A defendant may set up as many defences as he may have, notwithstanding it appear that if one of them be true the others are immaterial and unnecessary. Mott v. Burnett, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 50. Inconsistent pleas are, however, allowed in New York. Bruce v. Burr, 67 N. Y. 237.

In slander and assault and battery the defendant may deny the allegations of the complaint, and in another paragraph plead in confession and avoidance. Weston v. Lumley, 33 Ind. 486; Butler v. Wentworth, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 282; Lansingh v. Parker, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 288; Hollenbeck v. Clow, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 289, overruling Roe v. Rodgers, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 356; s. c., 4 Sand. 664, 680.

fences are inconsistent, the remedy is by motion.¹ Defences reflecting on the plaintiff's character, if alleged without reasonable hope of proving them, may be considered in aggravation of damages.² Each defence must be separately stated, and the remedy, if not so stated, is by motion.³ Each paragraph must be complete in itself.⁴

VIII. JOINDER IN DEMURRER AND IN ISSUE.⁵

IX. JOINDER OF COUNTIES.⁶

The execution of a note may be denied, and it may also be answered that the execution was obtained by a trick. Citizens' Bank v. Closson, 29 Ohio St. 78.

1. Remedy.—If inconsistent defences are not allowed, objection on that ground cannot be made by demurrer, but must be by motion to strike out or to elect. Caldwell v. Ruddy (Idaho), 1 West Coast Rep. 295. See the cases cited in the preceding note.

2. If a defendant sets forth in his answer as a defence facts with intent to injure plaintiff, and without reasonable belief that he will be able to prove them, that may be considered in aggravation of damages. Haymond v. Saucer, 84 Ind. 3.

3. Separate Statement.—Separate defences must be separately stated. If they are not, the remedy is not by a demurrer, but by a motion to strike out, or by some other appropriate proceeding. Hogely v. Hogely, 68 Cal. 348; Freeman v. Fleming, 5 Iowa 460; Benedict v. Seymour, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 298. Remedy is by demurrer. Wright v. Connor, 34 Iowa 240. But if a demurrer is filed and sustained, the error is waived if the defendant files an amended answer setting up the same defences. Hogely v. Hogely, 68 Cal. 348.

4. Each paragraph of an answer must be complete in itself. Knarr v. Conaway, 42 Ind. 260; Penna. Co. v. Holderman, 69 Ind. 18.

Each answer must be complete, unless in terms it adopts or refers to the matter contained in some other answer; it must be tested by the matter itself contains. If not complete, it cannot be sustained by reference to other defences contained in the answer. Hammond v. Earle, 58 How. Pr. 426.

5. Joinder in Demurrer—In Pleading.—A pleading or formula, by which one of the parties to a suit joins in or accepts an issue in law tendered by the opposite party. It follows immediately after a demurrer, and with it constitutes the issue.

Joinder in Issue—In Pleading.—A formula by which one of the parties to a suit joins in or accepts an issue in fact tendered by the opposite party; more commonly called a similiter. Burrill's Law Dict. Abbott's Law Dict., Anderson's Law Dict., Bouvier's Law Dict. subtit.; Stephen on Pleading (9th Am. ed.), *56-60.

It is one of the rules of pleading that "issue when well tendered must be accepted." This applies to issues in law as well as in fact. Stephen on Pleading (9th Am. ed.), *237-240.

A joinder in demurrer is merely a matter of form, but it must be made within a reasonable time. Thompson v. Gondelock, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 49.

A plaintiff cannot introduce into his joinder in demurrer new facts. He should amend his declaration. Gibson v. Todd, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 452. A trial without a plea is a waiver of all matter of form, and a tacit agreement to put the cause on its merits. Good Intent Co. v. Hartzell, 22 Pa. St. 277.

The word "issue" is often used as a nomen collectivum, and the phrase "issue joined" may embrace various distinct grounds of defence. Therefore when issue was joined on each of several distinct pleas, and a jury was sworn to try the issue joined, etc., and they found the issue in favor of the plaintiff, and a judgment was rendered accordingly, it was held there was no error. Pointer v. Rust, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 532.

6. Joinder of Counties.—"There can be no joinder of counties for the finding of an indictment; though, in appeal of death, where a wound was given in one county and the party died in another, the jury were to be returned jointly from each county before the Stat. 2 & 3 Edw. VI. ch. 24; but by that statute the law is altered, for now the whole may be tried either on indictment or appeal, in the county wherein the death is." Abbott's Law Dict. subtit.

JOINT EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS—(See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS; PROBATE AND LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION).

- | | |
|---|---|
| I. Definition, 1016. | V. Actions By and Against Co-executors, 1033. |
| II. Constitute but One Person, 1016. | VI. Survivorship Among Co-executors, 1035. |
| III. The Act of One Is the Act of All, 1016. | VII. Division of the Commissions, 1035. |
| IV. Co-executors Not Liable for Each Other, 1022. | |

I. Definition.—Joint executors are those who are joined in the execution of a will.¹

II. Constitute but One Person.—Joint executors, however numerous, constitute but one person in the eye of the law.² Upon this fact depend many of the powers, duties and obligations incident to the office of joint executorship.

III. The Act of One Is the Act of All.—Joint executors can act independently of each other. The act of one, within the scope of his authority, is the act of all, and binds the estate.³

1. Bouv. Law Dict., tit. Joint Executors.

No Distinction Between Joint Executors and Joint Administrators.—At one time there seems to have been a difference between co-executors and co-administrators. Hudson v. Hudson, 1 Atk. 460. But no difference between them is now recognized. Jacomb v. Harwood, 2 Ves. Sr. 265; Jeroms v. Jeroms, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 24; Murray v. Blatchford, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 583; Herald v. Harper, 8 Black. (Ind.) 170; Dean v. Duffield, 8 Tex. 235; O'Neill v. Herbert, 1 McMull. Eq. (S. Car.) 495; Williams on Executors, 6 Am. ed. *950.

In respect of rights, duties and liabilities, co-administrators stand upon the same footing as co-executors, with, of course, the difference that their functions, being defined by general and positive law, are scarcely capable of special variation." Schouler, Exrs. & Admsrs. (2nd ed.), § 404.

An administrator has to give a bond in many cases where an executor is not obliged to, and the bond when joint makes the liability of co-administrators for each other greater than the liability of co-executors, who have not given a bond for each other. But the liability of a co-executor who has given a joint bond is precisely the same as the liability of a co-administrator under the same circumstances.

In this article whatever is said of co-executors is true also of co-administrators unless a distinction is drawn between them.

Joint letters of administration ought not to be granted if one of the parties thereto objects. Brubaker's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 21.

2. Viner's Abridg., tit. Exrs. & Admsrs., p. 369, § 11; Bacon's Abridg., tit. Exrs. & Admsrs., p. 37, d; Williams on Executors *245, *946 (6th Am. ed.); Schouler on Exrs. & Admsrs. (2nd ed.), § 400; Ames v. Armstrong, 106 Mass. 15; Barry v. Lambert, 98 N. Y. 300; Hall v. Boyd, 6 Pa. St. 267.

"A testator may appoint different executors, in different countries, in which his effects may lie; or different executors, as to different parts of his estate in the same country." Opinion of the court in Hunter v. Bryson, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 483, 488.

One executor may qualify for general purposes, and another for a special purpose, if this is the testator's plain intention. Schouler, Exrs. & Admsrs. (2nd ed.), § 40; Williams on Executors (6th Am. ed.) *245; Lynch v. Bellevue, 3 Phill. 424.

Where an executor renounces, letters of administration will be granted to his co-executor. Schouler, Exrs. & Admsrs. (2nd ed.), § 51; Miller v. Meetch, 8 Pa. St. 417.

3. "If a man appoint several executors, they are esteemed in law but as one person, representing the testator, and therefore the acts done by any one of them, which relate either to the delivery, gift, sale, payment, possession or release of the testator's goods are deemed the acts of all, for they have a joint and entire authority over the whole." Bacon's Abridg., tit. Exrs. & Admr., p. 37, d; Story's Eq. Jurispr. (13th ed.), vol. 2, § 1280, a. See also Viner's Abridg., p. 367, § 16; Williams on Executors (6th Am. ed.), *946; Schouler, Exrs. & Admr. (2nd ed.), § 400; Edmonds v. Crenshaw, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 166; Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 472, 475; First National Bank of Alleghany v. Farmers' Deposit National Bank of Pittsburgh (Pa.), 5 Cent. Rep. 505; Wood's App., 92 Pa. 379; 2 Kent's Com. (13th ed.), *416, note c, and cases cited; Ames v. Armstrong, 106 Mass. 15.

Lightcap's Appeal, 95 Pa. St. 455; Jackson v. Shaffer, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 513; Wheeler v. Wheeler, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 34; Lank v. Kinder, 4 Harr. (Del.) 457; Kerr v. Waters, 19 Ga. 136; Stewart v. Conner, 9 Ala. 803.

Probate of One Is Sufficient for All.—

Where one co-executor takes probate that enures to the benefit of all and it is not necessary for the remaining executors to do so. Williams on Executors (6th Am. ed.) *382; Webster v. Spencer, 3 B. & Ald. 363; Brookes v. Stroud, 1 Salk. 3; Walters v. Pfeil, 1 Mood. & Walk. 362; Watkins v. Brent, 7 Sim. 512; Scott v. Briant, 6 Nev. & M. 381; KENNEDY, J., in Heron v. Hoffner, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 393, 395.

One executor cannot prevent a co-executor from taking possession of the assets, or take them from him after he has obtained possession of them. Williams on Executors, *946, n. b. (6th Am. ed.); Hall v. Carter, 8 Ga. 388; Chew's Estate, 2 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 153; Wood v. Brown, 34 N. Y. 337.

A release of a debt by one of several co-executors binds the rest. Jacomb v. Harwood, 2 Ves. Sr. 267; Shaw v. Berry, 35 Me. 279; Gilman v. Healy, 55 Me. 120; Stuyvesant v. Hall, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 151; Devling v. Little, 26 Pa. St. 502; Shreve v. Joyce, 7 Vroom (N. J.) 44, 48; Hoke v. Fleming, 10 Ired. Law (N. Car.) 263.

A co-executor may borrow money for the purpose of administering the estate, and the estate will be liable for it. Child & Co. v. Thorley, L. R., 16 Ch. Div. 151.

A payment to one executor or a release from him extinguishes the debt, although he misapplies the money and no part of it comes to the estate. Herbert v. Pigott, 2 Crompt. & Mees. 384; Devling v. Little, 26 Pa. St. 502.

So also, one may, where the circumstances require it, take part and release the residue, or accept goods or securities in satisfaction. Smith v. Everett, 27 Beav. 446; Gilman v. Healy, 55 Me. 120; Gulledd v. Berry, 31 Miss. 346.

And it makes no difference if the case is free from fraud, that the compromise is without the knowledge of the co-executor, or that it is against his wishes. Herbert v. Pigott, 2 Crompt. & Mees. 384; Murray v. Blatchford, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 583; Grace v. Sutton, 5 Watts (Pa.) 540; Weir v. Mosher, 19 Wis. 311; Wheeler v. Wheeler, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 34; Son v. Miner, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 466.

Two executors sent cotton belonging to the estate of their testator to Liverpool to be sold. Held, either one by himself could draw for the proceeds of the sale. Tompkins v. Tompkins, 18 S. C. 1.

One of two executors can transfer notes held by the decedent. Dwight v. Newell, 15 Ill. 333; Wheeler v. Wheeler, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 34. Even where executors, in collecting assets, take a note payable to themselves as executors, either one of them can endorse and transfer it. Mackay v. St. Mary's Church (R. I.), 1 New Eng. Rep. 141. But see contra, Smith v. Whiting, 9 Mass. 334.

One executor can release or assign a mortgage held by the testator. Weir v. Mosher, 19 Wis. 311; Son v. Miner, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 466; George v. Baker, 3 Allen (Mass.) 326; Cronin v. Hazeltine, 3 Allen (Mass.) 324.

So also where co-executors invest the assets of their testator in a mortgage, either one of them can satisfy, sell or assign it. D'Inwilliers v. Abbott, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 462; Bogert v. Hertell, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 492; Stuyvesant v. Hall, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 151; Douglass v. Saterlee, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 16; Murray v. Blatchford, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 583; People v. Kyser, 28 N. Y. 226; People v. Miner, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 466. But see contra, Beltzhoover v. Darragh, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 329.

One co-executor can enter an amicable action or submit to an arbitration. Schouler Exrs. & Admr. (2nd ed.), § 400; Lank v. Kinder, 4 Harr. (Del.) 457. But see McIntire v. Morris, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 90, where the appearance of one co-executor before an arbitrator, and his implied assent to the award, were held prima facie evidence against both.

As to how far one executor can bind

But in Certain Cases All the Executors Must Join—All Must Join in the Sale of Real Estate Under a Power in the Will.—Where executors are vested by the will with power to sell real estate, all who have accepted the administration and are still executors at the time of a conveyance, must join in it. In this case they become trustees¹ as well as executors, and as is the case with other trustees, all must join in the conveyance.²

his co-executor, RUGER, C. J., says (Barry v. Lambert, 98 N. Y. 300, 309): "It would seem to follow as the result of the authorities, that the powers of executors, in the administration of estates confided to them, are commensurate with those expressly granted or necessarily implied from the nature of the duties imposed upon them, and their power to bind their associates by their acts, is limited only by the nature of the transactions they are called upon to perform." See also Bodley v. McKinney, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 339.

One of several joint executors can make an agreement to determine and give up a lease reserving rent, entered into by his testator, for the payment of which rent the testator has given his bond. Reber v. Gilson, 1 Pa. St. 54; Simpson v. Gutteridge, 1 Madd. 616.

Co-Executors Can Plead Different Pleas.

—See article on Executors and Administrators, p. 380, n. 1.

Where a co-executor is also a legatee, his single assent to his legacy will vest the title to the legacy in him. 1 Rol. Abr. 618; Williams on Executors, 6 Amer. ed. *948; Cole v. Miles, 10 Hare 179.

As all the co-executors constitute but one person, each one has a joint and entire title to the assets of the estate at common law; and if he grants or releases his interest to his co-executor, nothing passes, for each was possessed of the whole before. Godolph. pt. 2, ch. 16, § 1; Williams on Executors, 6 Amer. ed. *911; Schouler Exrs. & Admsrs. 2nd ed., § 400.

One co-executor can sell or dispose of the assets in behalf of all. Kelsock v. Nicholson, Cro. Eliz. 478; Murrell v. Cox, 2 Vern. 570; Schouler on Exrs. & Admsrs. (2nd ed.), § 400.

But where an executor entered into a contract under the impression that his co-executor would ratify it, but his co-executor refused to do so, a court of equity would not decree specific performance of the contract. Sneesby v. Thorne, 7 De G. M. & G. 399.

A court of equity will not enforce an unjust contract, nor will a court of equity enforce an unjust contract entered into by one co-executor, although it was, perhaps, one he had a legal right to make. Schouler on Exrs. & Admsrs. (2nd ed.), § 400; Lepard v. Vernon, 2 Ves. & B. 51; Sneesby v. Thorne, 7 De G. M. & G. 39.

Where a plaintiff purchased stock of the testator's estate from an executor, the co-executor taking no part in the sale, the plaintiff having reason to believe that the purchase money was to be used for the executor's benefit, and not for the benefit of the estate, the court refused to compel a transfer of the stock. Le Baron v. Long Island Bank, 53 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 286.

On the other hand, a court of equity will sometimes help out a contract made by one co-executor, when there are no grounds for setting it aside. Giddings v. Butler, 47 Tex. 535; Taylor v. Adams, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 534; Nelson v. Carrington, 4 Munf. (Va.) 332; Thorpe v. McCullum, 6 Ill. 614.

1. Alexander v. M'Murry, 8 Watts (Pa.) 504.

2. Denne v. Judge, 11 East 288; FINCH, J., in Croft v. Williams, 88 N. Y. 384, 390; Wilder v. Ranney, 95 N. Y. 7; Fleming v. Burnham, 100 N. Y. 1; Kling v. Hummer, 2 Pa. Rep. 349; Wasson v. King, 2 Dev. & Bat. (Law) (N. Car.) 262; Johnston v. Thompson, 5 Call (Va.) 248; McRae v. Farrow, 4 Hen. & Mun. (Ind.) 444; Hart v. Rust, 46 Tex. 556.

In Wisconsin it is provided by statute (Rev. Stat. Wis., §§ 2102, 2137), that all the executors must join in a sale of land under a power in a will. Crowley v. Hicks (Wis.), 40 N. W. Rep. 151.

A court of equity will not compel an executor to join his co-executor in a contract for the sale of real estate under a power in a will. Unless all the executors voluntarily agree, the sale cannot be made. Crowley v. Hicks (Wis.), 40 N. W. Rep. 151.

Where a power is given co-executors to sell real estate for the purpose of converting it into money, this is not such a conversion as will enable one executor to sell, as he could do in the case of personality. Crowley v. Hicks (Wis.) 40 N. W. Rep. 151; Wilder v. Ranney, 95 N. Y. 7.

At common law, where a power to sell land was given to executors by will, and one of them refused the trust, the remaining executors could not sell. Williams on Executors, 6 Amer. ed. *951; Co. Lit. 113 a; WILDE, J., in Tainter v. Clark, 13 Met. (Mass.) 220; Boston Franklinite Co. v. Condit, 4 Green Ch. (N. J.) 395; HUBBARD, J., in Shelton v. Homer, 5 Met. (Mass.) 462; AMES, J., in Chandler v. Rider, 102 Mass. 268.

Some cases hold that all the executors who accept the administration, or all who are appointed executors by the testator, must join in a conveyance for it to be valid, even though one of them had resigned or been discharged before that time or has never qualified. In Shelton v. Homer, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 462, two executors had a naked power to convey real estate, both qualified and one was discharged. Held, the remaining executor could not convey the real estate; not, at any rate, during the life time of the discharged executor.

See also Williams v. Murray, 3 Vt. 189, where the court, per HUTCHINSON, C., says, p. 197: "While the three are alive, all must join in a conveyance, to render it valid. The will makes no provision for the event that a part refuse to accept the trust. The testator has committed the trust to the united skill, judgment and fidelity of the three. Neither of them can make a title alone, unless he has become the only survivor of the three."

See also Wooldridge v. Watkins, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 349; Halbert v. Grant, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 580; Smith v. Moore, 6 Dana (Ky.) 417; Floyd v. Johnson, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 109; Bank of Port Gibson v. Baugh, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 290.

The weight of authority at the present time, however, seems to be that under 21 Hen. VIII, ch. 4, only such executors as qualify need join in a conveyance, and when one or more of those who qualify either die, resign or are discharged, a conveyance by the remaining executors will be sufficient.

Houel v. Barnes, Cro. Cas. 382; Eaton v. Smith, 2 Beav. 236; Forbes v. Peacock, 11 M. & W. 630; Leggett v. Hunter, 19 N. Y. 445; In the matter of Bull, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 334; Hutchings v. Baldwin, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 236;

Zebach v. Smith, 3 Bin. (Pa.) 69; White v. Taylor, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 422; Warden v. Richards, 11 Gray (Mass.) 277; Chandler v. Rider, 102 Mass. 268; Gould v. Mather, 104 Mass. 283 (overruling Shelton v. Homer, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 462, supra); Leavens v. Butler, 8 Porter (Ala.) 380; Johnson v. Bowden, 37 Tex. 621; Britton v. Lewis, 8 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 271; Taylor v. Gallo way, 1 Ham. (Ohio) 232; Corlies v. Little, 14 N. J. (Law) 373; Putnam Free School v. Fisher, 30 Me. 523; Miller v. White, 1 Taylor (N. Car.) 309.

But where a citizen of New York authorized his executors to sell his lands in Pennsylvania for purposes entirely unconnected with the office of executor, it was held that an administrator d. b. n. could not execute the trust, although the executors had renounced as to the estate in Pennsylvania. Ross v. Barclay, 18 Pa. St. 179.

Where an executor sells land under a power in the will, with the consent or approbation of his co-executors, or when the co-executors subsequently ratify the sale, this is a sufficient execution of the power. Giddings v. Butler, 47 Tex. 535; Taylor v. Adams, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 534; Nelson v. Carrington, 4 Munf. (Va.) 332; Thorp v. McCullum, 1 Gill. (Ill.) 614.

Where two executors were authorized to sell the testator's land, it was held that one could not enable his co-executor to sell by giving him a power of attorney. Berger v. Duff, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 368.

Sale of Land by Executors Under a Statute.—Where a State statute provides that an executor shall apply to the court for permission to sell the testator's real estate to pay his debts, if there are co-executors it is proper that all should join. Hannum v. Day, 105 Mass. 33.

The statute of Massachusetts (Gen. St., ch. 102) provides that when the personal estate of a deceased person is insufficient to pay his debts with charges of administration, his executor or administrator may sell his real estate for that purpose upon obtaining a license therefor. Held, in the above case, that if there are joint executors all must join. See also Personette v. Johnson, 40 N. J. Eq. 173; Sanford v. Granger, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 392; Gregory v. McPherson, 13 Cal. 562.

Where all have joined in the petition, the subsequent refusal of one to proceed

Where executors are given powers to do other things than sell land, out of the usual course of their duty, all must join as in the sale of land.¹

One of several co-executors cannot confess a judgment against the estate of the decedent.²

Effect of Admissions.—Just when and how far an admission by one of several joint executors of an indebtedness against the testator's estate, binds his co-executors, is a nice question.

"The admission of one of several executors or administrators, will not bind the others; at all events, unless it is made in the character of executor."³ will not invalidate the actions of the others. Osman v. Traphagen, 23 Mich. 79.

But where two executors empowered to sell land did so, and took in partial payment a bond and mortgage in their joint names as executors, it was held that either of the executors could sell or assign the mortgage and bond as it was personally. Bogert v. Hertell, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 492.

1. Schouler Exrs. and Admrs. (2nd ed.), § 402. Thus in Bank of Port Gibson v. Baugh, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 290, it was held that all the executors must join in giving a mortgage to raise money under a power in the will.

2. At one time it was held that one co-executor could confess a judgment against the estate. LORD CHIEF JUSTICE TRELY, in Dyer 23, marginal notes. But the law is now the other way and the co-executors must join in confessing a judgment. Toller, Office and Duty of Exrs. and Admrs. (3rd Am. ed.) 360; Williams on Executors (6th Am. ed.), *958, note S 1; Hall v. Boyd, 6 Pa. St. 267; Heisler v. Knipe, 1 Browne (Pa.) 319; Karl v. Black, 2 Pittsb. (Pa.) 19; Hammon v. Huntley, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 493; Forsyth v. Ganson, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 558.

3. Williams on Executors (6th Am. ed.), *1894.

A testator sold land to plaintiff and gave a covenant for quiet enjoyment against all claiming under him. The defendants, who were testator's executors, entered the land sold and evicted the plaintiff. Plaintiff brought suit against the defendants, and in order to win was obliged to prove that the defendants entered under lawful title. One defendant admitted, after entry, that the two had a lawful title through the testator under a deed prior to the one sued on. Held, The executors did not enter as executors, and the admission of one would not bind the estate. Fox v. Waters, 12 A. & E. 43.

In Atkins v. Tredgold, 2 Barn. & Cr. 23, the court thought that an express promise by one co-executor, in his representative character, would bind the remaining executors in their representative characters. See also McCulloch v. Dawes, 9 Dow. & Ry. 40.

Effect of a Promise by a Co-executor Upon the Statute of Limitations.—But in Tullock v. Dunn, Ryan & Moody 416, it was held that an express promise by one of several co-executors does not take the case out of the statute of limitations; and PARKE, B., in Scholey v. Walton, 12 M. & W. 509, approves of the principle of Tullock v. Dunn.

Tullock v. Dunn has been followed in some of the United States where it is held that one executor cannot revive a debt barred by the statute of limitations. Pitts v. Wooten's Executors, 24 Ala. 474; Caruthers v. Mardis, 3 Ala. 599; Fritz v. Thomas, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 66; Reynolds v. Hamilton, 7 Watts (Pa.) 420; Hall v. Boyd, 6 Pa. St. 267; McWilliams' Estate, 3 Clark (Pa.) 321; Peck v. Botsford, 7 Conn. 172.

But see contra, Hammon v. Huntley, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 493, where WOODWORTH, J., says, p. 494, that an admission by one co-executor "would undoubtedly be sufficient to take the case out of the statute of limitations." This is, however, but a dictum, and is questioned in Cayuga County Bank v. Bennett, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 236.

See, however, the following cases, where it was held that a promise by one co-executor would bar the statute of limitations. Shreeve v. Joyce, 36 N. J. L. 44; Emerson v. Thompson, 16 Mass. 431.

To pay a debt barred by the statute of limitations, the promise by one executor does not make his co-executors

Some cases make a third exception, and hold that where co-executors join in an act in regard to assets of the estate, they must join in any further acts in regard to the same assets.¹

personally liable even where it bars the statute. The judgment of the court is de bonis testatoris, unless the executors have been guilty of waste. Shreeve v. Joyce, 36 N. J. L. 44, 47.

As to the broad question of the effect of an admission by one co-executor, see Hammon v. Huntley, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 493. This was an action of assumpsit by the vendor of land against the three executors of the vendee, for part of the purchase money. The plaintiff offered a letter written by two of the defendants to the plaintiff since the commencement of the suit acknowledging a balance of $240 to be due from the decedent's estate to the plaintiff. Held, not admissible. See also Forsyth v. Ganson, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 558; and Cayuga County Bank v. Bennett, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 36.

But in James v. Hackley, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 273, an admission by one co-executor of a debt due from the decedent was held to be prima facie evidence of the debt, but this presumption might be rebutted.

In McIntyre v. Morris, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 90, 98, the court says, "Where the original indebtedness is proved, a statement or admission of the balance, by one of several executors or administrators, is competent evidence against all; but the others are at liberty to repel it by showing that there was in fact nothing, or not so much due, or that it had been paid or extinguished. According to this principle, the appearance of one of the administrators before the arbitrators, and his implied assent to the award, were probably competent prima facie evidence against both." See also Walkup v. Pratt, 5 Harr. & J. (Md.) 51.

Cannot Create a New Liability.—Nor can one co-executor create a fresh liability against the estate.

In Scruggs v. Driver, 31 Ala. 274, it was held that one executor could not create a pecuniary liability against his testator's estate, without the consent of his co-executor by a contract for the purchase of property, nor could the admissions of one executor establish such a contract. The court say in this case, page 287: "One executor could not subject the estate to a judgment, upon his promise to pay for property purchased by him, without the participation of his co-executor; for, if he could, he might fasten a personal liability upon his co-executor without the consent or knowledge of the latter. Upon this principle the authorities fully recognize, as a general rule, the doctrine that one executor or administrator cannot create a debt against an estate where none existed before." See also Nation v. Toyzer, 1 Cr. M. & R. 172.

See also McLane v. Belvin, 47 Tex. 493. In this case a testator paid a promissory note in confederate treasury notes, and then died. After a time the payee repudiated the confederate note transaction, and two co-executors promised to pay him again, against the will of the third co-executor. Held, the promise of the two did not bind the estate. See also Bailey v. Spofford, 14 Hun. (N. Y.) 86.

1. Two administrators sold some of the decedent's real estate and took a mortgage on it in partial payment of the purchase money. One administrator entered satisfaction of this mortgage on the record, trusting to other security for the money covered by the mortgage. Held, one could not thus bind the estate. Beltzhoover v. Darragh, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 329 (But see contra D'Inwilliers v. Abbott, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 462). See also Hertell v. Bogert, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 52 (Overruled in Bogert v. Hertell, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 492. See also De Haven v. Williams, 80 Pa. St. 480, where two executors deposited money of their testator in a bank to their joint account as executors. Held, both must join in a receipt in order to free the bank from responsibility.

In New York a statute authorizes the surrogate to require money to be deposited to joint credit. Chambers v. Cruikshank, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 414.

In Smith v. Whiting, 9 Mass. 334, two executors took a promissory note as executors. Held, they both must endorse it. See contra, Mackay v. St. Mary's Church (R. I.), 1 New Eng. Rep. 141. See also Sanders v. Blain Administrators, 6 J. J. Marshall (Ky.) 446, in which it was held that one administrator could not assign a note made payable to himself, as executor,

Cases are not wanting, however, which take the opposite view.¹

IV. Co-executors Are Not Liable for Each Other.—As co-executors can act independently of each other, and each one is entitled to exercise control over the assets of the estate, it follows that one executor is not liable for assets received by his co-executor, or for the actions of his co-executor, so long as they act independently of each other.²

and his co-administratrix. See also Pearce v. Savage et al., 51 Me. 410.

In Turner v. Hardey, 9 M. & W. 770, two co-executors, the plaintiffs, leased certain premises, belonging to decedent's estate, to the defendant, and brought an action for use and occupation. The defendant pleaded an agreement between himself and the plaintiffs whereby one W became tenant in the place of the defendant. It appeared that this agreement was entered into by one of the executors only, and it was held that he could not bind the estate in this manner.

1. Hirtell v. Bogert, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 52, is expressly overruled in Bogert v. Hirtell, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 492, which holds that an executor can assign or sell a mortgage executed by himself and co-executor as executors.

See also D'Inwilliers v. Abbott, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 462; and Hyatt v. McBurney, 18 S. Car. 199, where it was held that one executor could satisfy a mortgage executed by himself and his co-executor.

In Mackay v. St. Mary's Church (R. I.), 1 New Eng. Rep. 141, it was held that where executors in collecting the assets take a note payable to themselves as executors, either one of them can endorse and transfer it. See also Tompkins v. Tompkins, 18 S. Car. 1.

2. Bacon's Abridg., tit. Exrs. & Admsrs., p. 39, d. 2; Wentworth on Off. Exrs. (14th ed.), p. 306; Williams on Exrs. (6th Am. ed.) * (1820); Schouler Exrs. & Admsrs. (2nd ed.) § 402.

"They [co-executors] are liable, personally and individually, no further than assets have come into their hands, or where they have done some act which the law considers as an equivalent to an admission that the assets were in their hands and culpably and negligently parted with." Opinion of the court in Hall v. Boyd, 6 Pa. St. 267, 270.

"When there are two or more executors, questions often arise as to the liability of one for another's misappropriation of assets. There are three questions in such cases:

"First. Has the executor whom it is sought to charge for the other's default ever had possession of the assets in question?

"Second. If he has had possession, and has delivered them over to another executor, what reason had he for so doing?

"Third. If he has not had possession, did he know of the misappropriation by the other executor?" S. G. Croswell in 24 Cent. L. J. 147.

Littlehales v. Gascoyne, 3 Bro. C. C. 74; Hargthorpe v. Milforth, Cro. Eliz. 318; Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 472; Dix v. Burford, 19 Beav. 412; State v. Belin, 5 Har. (Del.) 400; Ray v. Dougherty, 4 Black. (Ind.) 115; Davis v. Walford, 2 Ind. 88; Call v. Ewing, 1 Black. (Ind.) 301; Hall v. Carter, 8 Ga. 388; Clarke v. Jenkins, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 318; Anderson v. Earle, 9 S. Car. 460; Douglass v. Saterlee, 11 John. (N. Y.) 16; Williams v. Holden, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 223; Mesick v. Mesick, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 120; White v. Bullock, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 91; Wood v. Brown, 34 N. Y. 337; Gaultney v. Nolan, 33 Miss. 569; Fonte v. Horton, 36 Miss. 350; Noland v. Calvit, 20 Miss. 273; Peter v. Beverley, 10 Peters (U.S.), 532; Roach v. Hubbard, 6 Litt. (Ky.) 235; Moore v. Tandy, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 97; Brazier v. Clark, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 104; Newcomb v. Williams, 9 Met. (Mass.) 525; AMES, J., in AMES v. Armstrong, 106 Mass. 18; Royall v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363; Latrobe v. Tiernan, 2 Md. Ch. 474; Kerr v. Kirkpatrick, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 137; Clarke v. Cotton, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 51; Worth v. McAden, 1 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. Car.) 199; Fennimore v. Fennimore, 2 Green Ch. (N. J.) 292; Fisher v. Skillman, 18 N. J. Eq. 229; Sparhawk v. Buell, 9 Vt. 41; Nettman v. Schramm, 23 Iowa 521; Stell's Appeal, 10 Pa. St. 149.

An executor is not personally liable for a misrepresentation made by his co-executor in selling the estate. 8 Cent. L. J., p. 86. article by O. F. Bump, Esq.; Heath v. Allin, 1 A. K. Marsh.

Negligence or Bad Faith Makes a Co-executor Liable.—Where an executor is guilty of negligence or an act of bad faith, he becomes liable for the waste of his co-executor.¹

Just what is and what is not negligence on the part of one of several co-executors is not always easy to determine. In the cases given below one executor was held to be negligent, and therefore liable for the devastavit of his co-executor.²

(Ky.), 442. In this case an executor who made a fraudulent representation as to a slave which he sold, was held liable, but his co-executor, who was not a party to the fraud, was not answerable.

Nor does the fact that the executors are trustees, as well as executors, make any difference as to their liability for each other. Banks v. Wilkes, 3 Sanf. Ch. (N. Y.) 99; Kip v. Deniston, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 23; Kirby v. Turner, Hop. Ch. (N. Y.) 309; DeForest v. Insurance Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.), 130; Ormiston v. Olcott, 84 N. Y. 339 (overruling Bates v. Underhill, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 365).

"But wherever either a trustee or an executor, by his own negligence or laches, suffers his co-trustee or co-executor to receive or waste the trust funds or assets of the testator when he has the means of preventing such receipt and waste by the exercise of reasonable care and diligence, then, and in such case, such trustee or executor will be held personally responsible for the loss occasioned by such receipt and waste of his co-trustee or co-executor." Story's Equity Jurisprudence (13th ed.), vol. 2, § 1283.

1. Williams on Exrs. (6th Am. ed.) *1820, note y; Schouler Exrs. & Admrs. (2nd ed.), § 402; McDowall v. McDowall, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 324; Holcombe v. Holcombe, 13 N. J. Eq. 413; Irwin's Appeal, 35 Pa. St. 294; Weigand's Appeal, 28 Pa. St. 471; Hengst's Appeal, 24 Pa. St. 413; Blake v. Pegram, 109 Mass. 541, 552.

"And, inasmuch as each executor has an independent right to control and transfer the assets, one is bound not to be heedless as to his co-executor's conduct, but rather, as in requiring a joint deposit or transfer, or joint investment of funds, to impose a check upon the other's authority. For, if an executor, by any act or default on his part, places the estate and its management in the exclusive power of his co-executor, he takes the perils of the latter's maladministration upon himself, unless he exercised what American courts would call ordinary prudence." Schouler Exrs. & Admrs. (2nd ed.), § 402.

"The question reverts, in short, to the customary issue of good faith and prudence, considering all the circumstances, as in the case of a sole executor or administrator." Schouler Exrs. & Admrs. (2nd ed.), § 402, n. 5.

2. An executor who has reason to suspect his co-executor of improper management of the estate, becomes liable for his co-executor's mismanagement, unless he tries to prevent it. Smith v. Pettigrew, 34 N. J. Eq. 216; Head v. Bridges, 67 Ga. 227.

An Executor Who Doubts the Solvency of His Co-executor Is Liable for His Waste unless He Endeavors to Prevent It.—In Styles v. Guy, 1 Mac. & G. 422, it was held that where executors had reason to suspect the solvency of one of their number, but did not attempt to get possession of the assets, they would be held liable for his devastavit, unless they could prove that an effort to get the money would have been useless. An executor must not allow a part of the estate to remain outstanding in an improper state of investment, whether it is in the hands of a co-executor or a stranger. See also Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 475; Horton v. Brocklehurst, 29 Beav. 510; Kincade v. Conley, 64 N. Car. 387; Carter v. Cutting, 5 Munf. (Va.) 223. (But see contra, Croft v. Williams, 88 N. Y. 384, and Worth v. M'Aden, 1 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. Car.) 199).

So an executor, who allowed his co-executor to retain funds of the estate for a long time without seeing to their proper investment, is responsible for the loss. Hays v. Hays, 3 Tenn. Ch. 88.

An executor who is privy to the misapplication of the funds of the estate by his co-executor, the latter appropriating them as commissions before his account has been settled, and who does not remonstrate, is liable for the sum appropriated and interest. Whitney v. Phoenix, 4 Redf. (N. Y.) 180. See also Booth v. Booth, 1 Beav. 125; Wood v. Brown, 34 N. Y. 337; Heath v. Allin, 1 A. K.

In the following cases it was held that the executor was not guilty of negligence so as to be responsible for the waste of his co-executor.¹

Marsh. (Ky.) 442; Weigand's Appeal, 28 Pa. 471; Wayman v. Jones, 4 Md. Ch. 500.

One executor allowed his co-executor to act as receiver without supervising him with due care. Held he was responsible for his co-executor's administration. Cressman's Estate, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 76; Hess's Estate, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 243.

Where one executor sold land to his co-executor without taking security for it, he was held guilty of such negligence as to make him liable to the heirs. Sobringer v. Mechling, 2 Am. L. J. (Pa.) 256. See also Gilbert's Appeal, 78 Pa. St. 266.

Nor can one executor permit his co-executor to use the funds of the estate in his private business. Brown's Estate, 17 Phila. (Pa.) 127; Power's Estate, 39 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 129.

Must Exercise Personal Supervision.

In certain cases a co-executor must inform himself by personal observation that his co-executor is not wasting the estate and must not trust to the word of someone else. In Mendes v. Guedella, 2 John. & Hem. 259, two executors with powers of trustees committed a box containing securities payable to bearer to a third executor for conversion. The two executors took the word of the solicitor of the trust that he had seen the box returned to the bankers. Held, they were responsible for securities appropriated by the third executor because they did not examine the box for themselves on its return. See also Underwood v. Stevens, 1 Mer. 712; Hewett v. Foster, 6 Beav. 259; Broadhurst v. Balguy, 1 Y. & Coll. 16. See also Shipbrook v. Hinchinbrook, 11 Ves. 252; Clark v. Clark, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 152.

Two executors sold testator's land, under a power in his will, took in part payment of the purchase money a covenant from the purchaser. It was stipulated in the covenant that debts due to the purchaser by either of the executors should be set off against the purchase money. One of the executors became indebted to the purchaser to the extent of the money covered by the covenant, and surrendered the covenant to the purchaser in the presence of the co-executor. At the trial the first executor was supposed to be insolvent. Held, the co-executor was liable. Hauser v. Lehman, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. C.) 594.

In McCormick v. Wright, 79 Va. 524, there were two executors, A & B. A allowed his co-executor to apply the assets of the estate in full payment of his own (B's) debts, instead of pro rata with the other creditors. Held, A was liable as principal debtor.

Where executors keep their accounts so loosely that it is impossible to decide in whose hands the assets actually are, this is such negligence that both will be responsible for the whole sum. Botten v. Bateman, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 115.

In Gilbert's Appeal, 78 Pa. 266, A and B were partners. A died and B, C, & D became his administrators. C & D sold A's interest in the firm to B at less than it was worth. Held, the sale was voidable at the election of any party in interest, and all the administrators were chargeable with the actual value.

Where co-executors unite in the misapplication of the assets, each is liable for the whole. Hargthorpe v. Milforth, Cro. Eliz. 318; Sutherland v. Brush, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 17; Worth v. M'Aden, 1 Dev. & Bat. (N. C.) 199.

In Williams v. Mower (S. Car.), 7 S. E. Rep. 505, executors, through improper motives, omitted to include in their inventory certain money belonging to the estate of their testator. Held, that one would not be allowed to prove that his co-executor received and retained the money for the purpose of charging his administrator with it.

Where, however, one executor takes the assets of the estate and gives a note to his co-executor for the assets he has received, the courts hold the contract valid and will allow the co-executor to bring a suit on the note. Berry v. Tart, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 4. See also Faulkner v. Faulkner, 73 Mo. 327.

1. An Executrix and Two Executors.—

The executors managed the estate without consulting the executrix, and she never had possession of any of the assets. Held, she was not responsible for losses to the estate caused by acts of the executors done without her acquiescence or consent, express or implied; but that she was liable for the result of any improper action of her co-executors to which she consented, or which she could have prevented. Lacey v. Davis, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 301.

A testator by his will directed that his widow "shall remain in the full possession and enjoyment of all his estate, real and personal." His widow was an executrix. Held, her co-executors were not responsible for her unjust or improvident conduct. Vanpelt v. Veghte, 14 N. J. L. 207.

In Croft v. Williams, 88 N. Y. 384, C & W, executors, sold real estate under a power in the will. W received the purchase money, C being present, and wasted it. C had reason to believe that W was insolvent. Held, that in the absence of any acts of negligence on C's part contributing to the loss, he was not responsible for W's devastavit. The court through FINCH, J., said: "One (executor) therefore, may sit passive and see the other receive funds of the estate and making no objection be deemed to assent, but that does not make him responsible for what has been received. He must in some manner know and assent to the misapplication, he must be a consenting party to the waste, or neglect some duty consequent upon his knowledge of a misapplication intended or in progress. Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 472. A wrong done or a duty omitted must lie at the foundation of this liability." See also Langford v. Gascoyne, 11 Ves. 333, and Ray v. Doughty, 4 Black. (Ind.) 115. But see contra, Styles v. Guy, Mac. & Gor. 422.

In Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 472, two executors were directed by the will to invest and accumulate the income of the estate. One executor received the dividends on the stock for several years and misapplied them. It did not appear that his co-executor had any knowledge of the misapplication. Held, he was not liable for it.

An executor did not examine the bank account of his co-executor in good financial standing for two years. Held, he was not negligent. Irwin's Appeal, 35 Pa. St. 294. See also Evangelical Association's Appeal, 35 Pa. St. 316.

A sale of property was made under order of court, and one co-executor bought it, but did not pay for it. Held, the other executor was not responsible for the price. Senior v. Winn, 4 Desaus. (S. Car.) 65.

Two executors sent cotton belonging to the estate of their testator to Liverpool to be sold. One executor drew for the proceeds and misappropriated them. Held, the other one was not responsible. Tompkins v. Tompkins, 18 S. Car. 1.

In Nation v. Tozer et al., 1 Cr. M. & R. 172, one of two executors of a deceased tenant for a term of years entered upon the leasehold. Held, the co-executor was not liable for the rent.

In English v. Newell, 42 N. J. Eq. 76 (affirmed in English v. Hendrickson (N. J.), 14 Atl. Rep. 811, a co-executor qualified, but gave the beneficiaries to understand that he would not act as such. All parties trusted the solvency and probity of another co-executor, who received the assets and took charge of the estate. Held, the first co-executor was not personally liable.

An executor is not liable for a loan made to his co-executor without his own assent or request, although the money was for the benefit of the estate. Bryan v. Stewart, 83 N. Y. 270.

Responsibility for the Proceeds of a Joint Sale.—The question often arises whether, when the executors join in a sale of the assets, and one receives the proceeds and wastes them, his co-executor will be liable for the waste. The cases are not unanimous on this point.

In Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 472, the executors joined in the sale of certain stock or bonds, for the purpose, as was claimed, of raising money to be used in administering the estate. One executor received the proceeds and became bankrupt. Held, his co-executor was liable for the proceeds of the sale.

In Matthews v. Matthews, 1 McM. L. Eq. (S. Car.) 410, W and M were executor and executrix. W alone proved the will and acted in execution of it. A bill was filed in equity signed by M for the sale of testator's real estate, but W took all the money. It was not necessary to sell this real estate in order to pay the debts of the testator. Held, M was liable, though she thought she was acting merely pro forma, for she did not follow the decree of the court directing that the proceeds of the sale should be reinvested by the executor and executrix and the investment reported to the court. This case seems to be an example of the exception rather than of the rule in South Carolina. See Atcheson v. Robertson, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 132.

See also Ochiltree v. Wright, 1 Dev. & Bat. (N. Car.) 336; Hauser v. Lehman, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 594; Dead-

Must Follow the Directions in the Will.—Where executors are given directions for the management of the testator's assets by his will, a higher degree of care is required of them than is otherwise the case. Each one must see that the directions in the will are carried out, and will be responsible if they are not.¹

An Executor Must Not Enable His Co-executor to Obtain Possession of the Assets.—Where an executor does any act which enables his co-executor to obtain possession of any part of the decedent's estate, he becomes liable for the waste of the latter. He is guilty of negligence, just as he would be if he enabled a stranger to get possession of the estate.²

rick v. Cantrell, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 263; Johnson v. Johnson, 2 Hill Ch. (S. Car.) 277, where it is held that where executors join in a sale under a power in a will, all will be responsible for the proceeds, and not alone he who received it. See also to the same effect Roberts v. Thomas, 32 Ga. 31.

But in Croft v. Williams, 88 N. Y. 384, the executors joined in the sale of land and one received the proceeds and wasted them. His co-executor was not held liable for them. In this last case the land was sold under a power in the will which made it necessary for the executors to join in the sale, and this probably distinguishes the case from Williams v. Nixon, supra, where apparently the executors need not have joined. See opinion of the court by FINCH, J., pp. 390, 391.

See also Kip v. Deniston, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 25; Morrell v. Morrell, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 283; Paulding v. Sharkey, 88 N. Y. 432; Atcheson v. Robertson, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 132; Terrell v. Matthews, 1 Mac. & G. 433, note. See, however, Wms. Exrs. (6th Am. ed.), *1833, n. u.; and the cases cited after Williams v. Nixon, supra, which make no such distinction.

1. "We regret the loss that falls upon the surviving executor, as we are satisfied that there was no intentional neglect of duty on his part. There is but one safe course for executors to pursue, and that is to implicitly follow the directions contained in the will under which they are appointed." Opinion of the court in Weigand's Appeal, 28 Pa. St. 471, 474. See also Cressman's Estate, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 76; and Weldy's Appeal, 162 Pa. St. 454.

In Deadrick v. Cantrell, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 263, the court held that where the trust is directory, and the fund is not vested or is vested in a different manner from that pointed out, it is an abuse of the trust for which all will be liable, though but one received the money, "because: both are bound to attend to the directions of the trust, and must be careful to execute it faithfully, according to its terms and the intention of the person by whom it was created."

See also Booth v. Booth, 1 Beav. 125, and Wilmerding v. McKesson, 103 N. Y. 329. In this case, a testator, W, created a trust for the benefit of the plaintiff, the fund for which he directed to be separately invested. W's executor's were G, a member of W's firm, and the defendant McK. G put the money of the estate into the firm and no part of the estate was set apart for the plaintiff's share. McK knew how G used the money. G's firm failed and McK was held responsible for the funds lost. Even if he did not know that the funds were in the firm's hands, he could have found out about it by enquiry, and he was bound to enquire. But G hypothecated securities belonging to the estate without McK's knowledge. Held, McK was not liable for this loss; as his failure to make a separation of the securities as contemplated by the will had nothing to do with the loss.

See also Wise v. Murphy, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 365; Cocks v. Barlow, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 406; Egbert v. Butter, 21 Beav. 560; Lincoln v. Wright, 4 Beav. 427; Burrows v. Walls, 5 De G. M. & G. 233.

Where from the circumstances of the case a co-executor cannot follow the directions of the will, he must apply to the proper court for instructions, in order to free himself from liability on account of not having followed the will. Holcombe v. Holcombe, 13 N. J. Eq. 313.

But see Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 472, which seems to be scarcely in keeping with these cases.

2. Williams on Executors (6th Am.

An executor who receives assets of the estate and hands them to his co-executor instead of applying them to the settlement of the estate, is guilty of such negligence as to make him liable if his co-executor wastes the assets.¹

ed.) *1821; Story, Equity Jurispru. (13th ed.), vol. 2, § 1284; Toller, Law of Executors (3rd Am. ed.), p. 484.

"If one executor does any act which enables his co-executor to obtain possession of the money belonging to the testator's estate, which, but for that act, he could not have obtained possession of, and this money is afterwards misapplied, the executor who thus enables his coexecutor to obtain possession of the money is liable to make good the loss. Opinion of ROMILLY, M. R., in Candler v. Tillett, 22 Beav. 257.

See also opinion of the court by CHANCELLOR KENT in Monell v. Monell, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 283, 296, and HUSTON, J.'s, opinion in Sterrett's Appeal, 2 Pa. Rep. 419, 422; opinion of the court by O'NEAL, J., in Johnson v. Johnson, 2 Hill Ch. (S. Car.) 277, 293; Mr. Cox's note to Churchill v. Hobson, 1 P. Wms. 241; Sadler v. Hobbs, 2 Bro. C. C. 114; Toplis v. Hurrell, 19 Beav. 423; Candler v. Tillett, 22 Beav. 263; Cowell v. Gatcombe, 27 Beav. 568; Ingle v. Partridge, 32 Beav. 661; Hewett v. Foster, 6 Beav. 259; Bone v. Cooke, 1 McClell. 168; Stewart v. Conner, 9 Ala. 803; Wayman v. Jones, 4 Md. Ch. 500; Schenck v. Schenck, 1 C. E. Green (N. J.) 174.

In Lees v. Sanderson, 4 Sim. 28, there were several executors, and they appointed one of their number acting administrator, who became insolvent. Held, the others were liable for what the acting executor had received. See also Hanbury v. Kirkland, 3 Sim. 265; Broadhurst v. Balguy, 1 Y. & Coll. 16; Trutch v. Lamprell, 20 Beav. 116; Harrison v. Graham, 1 P. Wms. 241; note y to 6th ed.; James v. Frearson, 1 Y. & Coll. 370. See also Johnson v. Johnson, 2 Hill's Ch. (S. Car.) 277; Knox v. Pickett, 4 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 199; Clarke v. Jenkins, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 318; Head v. Bridges, 67 Ga. 227; Cameron v. Justices, 1 Ga. 36; Hall v. Carter, 8 Ga. 388; Kerr v. Waters, 19 Ga. 136; Sutherland v. Brush, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 17; Banks v. Wilkes, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 99; Douglass v. Saterlee, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 16; Clark v. Clark, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 152.

But this rule is not always strictly enforced.

In Paulding v. Sharkey, 88 N. Y. 432; G, M and S, three executors, took a check payable to M in payment for some real estate. M endorsed it to G, and gave it to him in good faith. G obtained the money and died. Held, S and M were not responsible for it. See also Kip v. Deniston, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 23; Monell v. Monell, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 283; Croft v. Williams, 88 N. Y. 384; Tichenor v. Tichenor, 43 N. J. Eq. 163.

In Candler v. Tillett, 22 Beav. 257, one executor kept a box containing securities of the estate, and the other one kept the key of the box. The one who had the key took out a certain security and gave it to the other one, who received money for it which he misapplied. Held, the one who had the key was not responsible for this misapplication, for it appeared that the one who had the box had another key, and could and probably did open the box. See also Atcheson v. Robertson, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 132; Hovey v. Blakeman, 4 Ves. 596. In this last case it is said that where a testator during his life time sends a bill of exchange to two persons with directions for its investment, and subsequently appoints the same two persons his executors, and one executor endorsed the bill merely to enable the other one to obtain the money on it, the executor who endorses the bill but does not obtain the money on it will not be responsible for his co-executor's waste.

1. "One executor having received funds cannot exonerate himself, and shift the trust to his co-executor, by paying over to him the funds received." McLEAN, J., in Edmonds v. Crenshaw, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 166, 169.

Langford v. Gascoyne, 11 Ves. 333. In this case there were three executors, A, B and C, and the widow of the testator gave the assets, a bag of gold, to A, who counted it and gave it to B, C being present all the time. B wasted the assets and A was held liable for the devastavit, but not C. See also Townsend v. Barber, Dick, 356; McPherson v. McPherson, 1 Macq. H. of L. 243; Edmonds v. Crenshaw, 14 Pet.

Cases in Which an Executor Can Give Assets to a Co-executor.— Sometimes, however, the facts of a particular case justify an executor in giving assets of the estate to his co-executor. If an executor acts with proper diligence and in good faith, he is not liable for the insolvency or misconduct of such agents as it was necessary for him to employ in the administration of the estate.¹ So where an executor would be justified in handing the assets to a stranger as his agent, for the payment of debts of the estate, investment, etc., it seems he will be justified in handing them over to his co-executor for the same purposes.²

(U. S.) 166; Fairfax's Executors v. Fairfax, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 19; Croft v. Williams, 88 N. Y. 384; Adair v. Brummer, 74 N. Y. 539, 566; Clark v. Clark, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 152; Knight v. Haynie, 74 Ala. 542; Sparhawk v. Buell, 9 Vt. 41; Worth v. Maden, 1 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. C.) 199.

Where an executor turns over part of the assets to his co-executor, he is not entitled to credit for the amount so delivered on accounting, unless he can show that in some way it has been charged against himself. Matter of Estate of Deyo (N. Y.) 3 Cent. Rep. 657.

In the case of Wyckoff v. Van Siclen, 3 Demarest (N. Y.) 75, the court held that even where one executor handed over assets of the estate to his co-executor to pay the debts of the testator, he was liable for his co-executor's waste. But good faith would relieve him from the payment of interest. See also Dixon v. Storm, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 419; Underwood v. Stevens, 1 Mer. 712; Chambers v. Minclin, 7 Ves. 193; Shipbrook v. Hinchinbrook, 11 Ves. 252; Brice v. Stokes, 11 Ves. 319.

But an executor will not be responsible for assets handed over to his co-executor so far as they have been applied properly. Shipbrook v. Hinchinbrook, 11 Ves. 252; Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 472; Underwood v. Stevens, 1 Mer. 712.

Where executors unite in selecting an agent they become jointly liable for his misconduct. Brown's accounting, 16 Abb. Pr. (U. S.) (N. Y.) 457; Earle v. Earle, 93 N. Y. 104; Cowell v. Gatecombe, 27 Beav. 568. But in Champneys v. Broune, 1 Barnes' Notes Cases 440, an agent appointed to collect money, paid part of it to one executor and part of it to another. Held, each one was responsible only for what he received.

So where executors appoint one of their number acting executor, they become liable for him. Lees v. Sanderson, 4 Sim. 28.

But, where two were appointed executors, and one proved and the other did not, and the one who did not prove assisted the other in collecting the debts of the estate, it was held that the one who had not proved did not act as executor, and that he could not be decreed to account as such. Orr v. Newton, 2 Cox Ch. 274.

So where one appointed executor disclaims and renounces and then acts as agent for a co-executor, he cannot be forced to account. See also Stacy v. Elph, 1 My. & K. 195. So an executor who proved but never acted cannot be charged for his co-executor's insolvency.

Nor can co-executors, when they are given power by the will to loan money, loan it to one of their number. Williams on Executors (6th Am. ed.), *1810; Gleadow v. Atkin, 2 Cr. & Jew. 548; Stickney v. Sewell, 1 My. & Cr. 8.

1. Williams on Executors (6th Am. ed.), *1820, note u¹.

2. Thus in Churchill v. Hobson, 1 P. Wms. 241, an executor, A, gave assets to his co-executor, B, a banker with whom the testator, during his lifetime, had kept his money. Held, A was not liable for the assets handed to B on B's insolvency. See also Chambers v. Minchin, 7 Ves. 198; Home v. Pringle, 8 Cl. & Fin. 264; Daly's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 95.

In Bacon v. Bacon, 5 Ves. 331, there were two executors; one near the testator's residence, in Suffolk, and the other in London. The latter had the assets and paid part of them over to the executor in Suffolk to pay the local debts, for the purpose of saving money for the estate. The executor in Suffolk wasted the assets. Held, that the executor in London was not liable for his

Cannot Arrange to Divide the Administration.—Co-executors cannot make an arrangement between themselves to divide the administration of the estate, each one being responsible only for what he receives.¹ A court of equity will not enforce specific performance of such a contract.² And if the executors administer the estate in pursuance of such an agreement, both will be responsible for all the assets.³

Effect of Joint Receipts and Accounts.—Where executors join in signing a receipt, or filing a joint account, it is prima facie evidence that the assets were under the control of both, and therefore, when one wastes them the other will be liable for the waste. Co-executors need not join in signing a receipt, and therefore if they do join, the presumption is that both actually received the money, but this presumption may be rebutted.⁴

co-executor's waste any more than he would have been for the waste of an agent employed for the same purpose. See also Joy v. Campbell, 1 Sch. & Lef. 341; Castle v. Warland, 32 Beav. 660. But in Moses v. Levi, 3 Y. & Col. 359, where the facts were in many respects very similar to those in Bacon v. Bacon. The court held both executors liable.

In Davis v. Spurling, 1 Rus. & M. 64, one of two executors, A, had power under the will to sell the estate, and employed his co-executor, B, to do so for him. B sold the estate and gave the proceeds to A, who wasted them. Held, B was not responsible for A's waste, for he acted merely as an agent. Had he, however, himself had the power to sell, and then handed over the money to his co-executor, he would have been responsible for his co-executor's waste.

1. Viner's Abridg., tit. Exrs., p. 362,

25; Gill v. Attorney General, Hardres

314.

2. Wilson v. Lineberger, 94 N. Car. 641.

3. Viner's Abridg., tit. Exrs., p. 362, § 25; Wms. Exrs. (6th Am. ed.) *1822; Gill v. Attorney General, Hardres 314; Weldy's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 454.

In Bankes v. Wilkes, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 99, a testator was a trustee and at his death his executors became trustees in his place. The four executors agreed to let H, one of their number, take charge of the estate. The cestui que trust acquiesced in letting H control the estate, and thereby lost her right to hold the other executors responsible for the waste of H.

See, however, Burrows v. Walls, 5 De G. M. & G. 233, where it was held that the fact that the cestui qui trust knew of the arrangement between the co-executors did not free the co-executors from joint liability, because the cestui que trusts did not know that the co-executors would otherwise have been responsible to them.

4. Williams Executors (6th Am. ed.) 1833; Schouler Executors and Administrators (2nd ed.), § 402. "The weight of modern authority, both English and American, is that a joint receipt is only presumptive evidence that the money came into the possession or under the control of both." Per COLT, J., in McKim v. Aulbach, 130 Mass. 481, 484. See also Monell v. Monell, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 283; Ochiltree v. Wright, 1 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. Car.) 336; Graham v. Davidson, 2 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. Car.) 155; Williams v. Maitland, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 92; Hall v. Carter, 8 Ga. 388; Gaultney v. Nolan, 33 Miss. 569; Stearn v. Mills, 4 Barn. & Adol. 657. In McNair's Appeal, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 148, the court says: ". . . there is no good reason for making executors or administrators liable more than trustees for moneys which they have never received, merely because they have joined in a receipt with a co-executor or co-administrator who did receive it."

The old rule in England was that joining in a receipt in itself made co-executors jointly liable. Cotrustees must join in signing a receipt; co-executors need not do so; but if they did join, both are held to have received the money, and both were liable for its misapplication. Murrell v. Cox, 2 Vern. 570; Aplyn v. Brewer, Prec. Chan. 173; Moses v. Levi, 3 Yo. & Coll. 359, 367; Leigh v. Barry, 3 Atkyns 584.

But the old rule is no longer followed. In Westley v. Clarke, 1 Eden 357, one executor, in good credit at the time, called in a mortgage and received the money. His co-executors joined in the receipt. Held, as only one had received the money the others were not responsible for the devastavit of the one who did receive it.

In the same way filing a joint account is prima facie evidence that the assets actually were in the hands of both executors, so as to make one liable for the devastavit of the other.¹

See also Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swan. Ch. 2, where LORD ELDON says, p. 64: "It may be laid down now, as in Brice v. Stokes, that, though one executor has joined in a receipt, yet whether he is liable shall depend on his acting. Brice v. Stokes, 1 Ves. 323; Hovey v. Blakeman, 4 Ves. 596; Scurfield v. Howes, 3 Bro. Ch. Rep. 94; Doyle v. Blake, 2 Sch. & Lef. 229. The true principle is laid down by LORD CHANCELLOR REDESDALE in Joy v. Campbell, 1 Sch. & Lef. 328, 341.

"The distinction seems to be this with respect to a mere signing: that if a receipt be given for the mere purposes of form, then the signing will not charge the person not receiving, but if it be given under circumstances purporting that the money, though not actually received by both executors, was under the control of both, such receipt shall charge, and the true question in all those cases seems to have been, whether the money was under the control of both executors; if it was so considered by the person paying the money, then the joining in the receipt by the executor who did not actually receive it, amounted to a direction to pay his co-executor; for it could have no other meaning; he becomes responsible for the application of the money just as if he had received it. But this does not apply to what is done in the discharge of a necessary duty of the executor."

1. In some States coexecutors can file separate accounts. As each one is entitled to receive and keep the assets, he is entitled to file a separate account and will be responsible only for what this charges against him. Barclay v. Morrison, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 129; Davis' Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 206; Heyer's Appeal, 34 Pa. St. 183; Patterson's Estate, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 291; Steinman v. Saunderson, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 357; Bellerjeau v. Kott, 4 New Jersey Law 359.

Where, however, a joint account is filed both executors will be liable unless the presumption raised by the account is rebutted.

"In this State the doctrine is firmly established that where two or more executors receive the estate of their testator jointly and afterwards file a joint account, they stand jointly liable to the persons entitled to the estate, for all the account shows to be in their hands, no matter what may have been the fact as to the actual custody of the estate when they accounted, or what arrangements they may have subsequently made among themselves as to its custody." Opinion of the court by VAN FLEET, V. C., in Suydam v. Bastedo, 40 New Jersey Eq. 433, 434. See also Bunting's Appeal, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 469.

In Murrell v. Cox, 2 Ves. 570, two executors filed a joint account making themselves jointly liable for the balance. They then sold certain stock and divided the balance. Held, both were liable for all.

See also Conner v. McIlvaine, 4 Del. Ch. 30; Wilson v. Fisher, 5 New Jersey Eq. 493.

In Glacius v. Fogel, 88 N. Y. 434, the executors qualified acted as such and filed a joint account, which spoke of the property "which has come into our hands," etc. One testified he had never had any part of the assets in his possession. Held, both liable.

Some cases seem to hold that filing a joint account is more than mere prima facie evidence of joint liability; that doing so in itself makes co-executors jointly liable. Haage's Appeal, 17 Pa. St. 181; Ducommon's Appeal, 17 Pa. St. 268; Hengst's Appeal, 24 Pa. St. 413; Laroe v. Douglass, 13 New Jersey Eq. 308; Schenck v. Schenck, 16 New Jersey Eq. 174; Suydam v. Bastedo, 40 New Jersey Eq. 433. But perhaps all that these cases really decide is that the presumption raised by the joint account has not been rebutted; and that, therefore, the co-executors are all liable. Doebler v. Snavelly, 5 Watts. (Pa.) 225; Young's Appeal, 99 Pa. 74.

In Metz's Appeal, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 204, it was held that where two executors had filed a joint account the court would not, after an interval of four

No Distinction Between a Co-executor's Liability to Creditors and that to Legatees.—At one time it was held in England that the liability of an executor who had received assets and turned them over to his co-executor towards creditors of the decedent, was different from his liability towards legatees. While in the former case he would be responsible for the devastavit of his co-executor, in the latter case he would not be so.¹

But the later English cases do not recognize this distinction.²

Joint Bonds.—For the effect of joint bonds on the mutual liability of co-executors, see article on EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, p. 216.

Terms of the Will Do Not Affect Co-executor's Liability.—The liability of co-executors for each other is not effected by the fact years, discharge one of them from a responsibility thus incurred. See also McCoy's Appeal, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 57, where it was held that coexecutors could not file separate accounts six years after filing a joint account.

Accounts joint in form may prove to have been filed only by one executor, in which case the co-executor will not be responsible. English v. Newell, 42 New Jersey Eq. 76; affirmed in English v. Hendrickson (N. J.) 14 Atl. Rep. 811.

A joint account does not make co-executors jointly liable for assets not yet collected, although they credit themselves with them in the account. In Lightcap's Appeal, 95 Pa. 456, three executors filed a joint account and credited themselves in it with the amount of certain mortgages not yet collected. One executor only received the money on the mortgages and entered satisfaction on the record in his own name. Then he went off with the money. Held, his co-executors were not liable. See also Beatty v. Cory Universalist Society (N. J.), 4 Cent. Rep. 831; Beckley's Appeal, 3 Pa. St. (Pa.) 425.

In Taylor v. Shnit, 4 Demarest (N. Y.) 528, an inventory and account were filed by co-executors. One executor was a lawyer and one a farmer. The former managed the estate, but the farmer did nothing to give the lawyer greater power than one of two executors ordinarily possesses. Held, the farmer was not responsible for the lawyer's deficit.

In an Iowa case, where two executors gave a joint receipt for money in bank, directed the bank to place one half the sum to the credit of one executor and the other half to the credit of the other, and then filed a joint account charging each one with all the money in the bank, it was held, under a statute of the State, that each executor was responsible only for himself. Nettman v. Schramm, 23 Iowa 521.

1. Viner's Abridg., tit. Exrs. & Admrs., p. 362, § 25; Doyle v. Blake, 2 Sch. & Lef. 229; Gibbs v. Herring, Prec. Ch. 49; Churchill v. Lady Hobson, 1 P. Wms. 241.

2. Sadler v. Hobbs, 2 Bro. Chan. Rep. 95; Langford v. Gascoyne, 11 Ves. 333.

In the United States, for the most part, the later English cases have been followed, and an executor who turns over assets of the estate to his co-executor is liable to legatees of the decedent no less than to his creditors. Monell v. Monell, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 283; Sutherland v. Bush, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 17; Johnson v. Johnson, 2 Hill's Ch. Rep. (S. Car.) 277. In the last case, the court says: "It is, I think, therefore, clear beyond all doubt, from this array of authorities, that in a suit by a legatee as well as a creditor, both in law and in equity, that where by an act done by one executor, any part of the estate comes to the hands of his co-executor, the former will be answerable for the latter, in the same manner as he would have been for a stranger whom he had enabled to receive it."

In Pennsylvania, the old rule was at first followed. Brown's Appeal, 1 Dallas (Pa.) 311; McNair's Appeal, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 148; Verner's Estate, 6 Watts (Pa.) 250. But the court does not recognize the distinction in Sterrett's Appeal, 2 Pa. Rep. 419; and in Weldy's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 454, the court, per GORDON, J., says, after giving the reason for the distinction: "This that the testator's will declares that they shall not be answerable for each other, but each one only for his own acts, deeds and defaults.¹

Concurrence on the Part of an Injured Party Frees a Co-executor from Liability.—Concurrence or acquiescence in an act of waste by co-executors on the part of the parties injured, will free co-executors from the liability for the devastavit.²

Liability of a Co-executor's Estate.—Where a co-executor dies his estate becomes liable for everything that he was liable for at time of his death.³

may be a very good reason for the rule, though we confess our inability to see it."

Should the question ever come fairly before the court again, it is very possible that the later English cases would be followed.

1. Williams Executors (6th Amer. ed.) *1828. Moses v. Levi, 3 Yo. & Coll. 359; Mucklow v. Fuller, Jacob. 198; Underwood v. Stevens, 1 Meriv. 712; Hanbury v. Kirkland, 3 Sim. 265; Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 472; Dix v. Burford, 19 Beav. 409; Brumridge v. Brumridge, 27 Beav. 5. But see Wilkins v. Hogg, 3 Giff. 116, where trustees under a will were relieved from responsibility for each other by the terms of the will.

Difference Between a Co-executor's Liability at Law and in Equity.—In general, there is a difference as to co-executors' liability for each other in law and in equity. "So as between co-executors, they may be jointly liable at law, but they are never so here (in equity). In this court, each is liable for what is in his own hands. It is true, he may also be liable for what is in the hands of others; but not jointly. He is not liable for the estate as if in his own hands. He is only responsible for the other and after him. They stand as reciprocal sureties for each other." Opinion of the court in Brotten v. Bateman, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 115. See also Massey v. Cureton, 1 Cheves Eq. Rep. (S. Car.) 181; Gayden v. Gayden, 1 McM. Eq. (S. Car.) 435; Lenoir v. Winn, 4 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 65; Johnson v. Corbett, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 265.

2. Griffiths v. Porter, 25 Beav. 236; Banks v. Wilkes, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 99.

But in Barrows v. Walls, 5 De G. M. & G. 233, the cestui que trusts had knowledge of certain acts on the part of the co-executors that would make them (the co-executors) liable for each other, and acquiesced in these acts; yet the executors were held responsible for each other, because the cestui que trusts did not know that they could have held the co-executors jointly liable for each other if they had not acquiesced in their actions. See also Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 1; Davies v. Hodgson, 25 Beav. 177.

3. Spreenke's Estate, 12 L. Bar. (Pa.) 170; Shelby v. Dailey, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 548. So where an executor renounces and pays the assets he has received to a co-executor he will still be responsible for them. Read v. Truelove, Ambler 417.

But the estate of an executor is not liable for a waste committed after his decease by his co-executor. Young's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 74; Stephens' Appeal, 56 Pa. St. 409; Conner v. McIlvaine, 4 Del. Ch. (Pa.) 30; Marsh v. The People, 15 Ill. 284; Brazier v. Clark, 22 Mass. 96; Towne v. Ammidown, 37 Mass. 535. But see contra Dobyns v. McGovern, 15 Mo. 662; Prichard v. State, 34 Ind. 137.

Where a co-executor is discharged by the court and ordered to pay over the funds in his hands to his co-executors, his responsibility ceases. McNeal v. Holbrook, 25 Pa. St. 189.

Co-executors who have undertaken the administration can be discharged from liability only by administering the assets themselves, or giving them to a court of equity. Williams on Executors (6th Am. ed.) *1829; Doyle v. Blake, 2 Sch. & Lef. 231; Riky v. Kemmis, 1 Lloyd & Goold 101; Horton v. Brocklehurst, 29 Beav. 504.

In Graham v. Keble, 2 Dow. 17, an executor in India proved the testator's will and then a power of attorney was sent to him by co-executors in Europe to act for them. Held, his responsibilities towards the executors in Europe were those of a co-executor and not those of an attorney.

Notice to One Is Not Notice to All.—As co-executors are not responsible for each other, so notice to one is not notice to all, so as to make the one without notice guilty of waste, in cases where the one with notice would have been.¹

V. Actions by and Against Co-executors.—Actions Between Co-executors and Outsiders.—1. Actions by Co-executors.—See article on EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, p. 360.

At common law all the executors named in a will must join in bringing an action, though one be an infant, or has not proved the will, or administered the estate, or has renounced.²

But in equity it is sufficient if such of the co-executors as prove the will and have not renounced, join in the suit.³

2. Actions Against Co-executors.—See article on EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, p. 377.

In actions against co-executors, such of them as have administered must be joined as defendants.⁴

1. In Hawkins v. Day, Ambler 160, the testator owed a specialty debt and a simple contract debt. An executor without knowledge of the specialty, paid the simple contract debt first. Held, he was not guilty of waste though his co-executor knew of the specialty debt. See also Tinsom v. Ramsbottom, 2 Keen 35; Smith v. Smith, 2 Cr. & M. 231; Meux v. Bell, 1 Hare 73.

2. Williams Executors (6th Am. ed.) *956 and n. k.; Schouler Executors and Administrators (2nd ed.), §403, n. 5; Hensloe's Case, 9 Coke 37; Brookes v. Stroud, 1 Salk. 3; Bodle v. Hulse, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 313; Scranton v. Farmers and Mechanics' Bank, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 527; Ryerson v. Ryerson, 1 South. (N. J.) 363; Cole v. Wooden, 3 Harr. (N. J.) 15; Cole v. Smalley, 5 N. J. Law 374; Call v. Ewing, 1 Black. (Ind.) 301; Duncan v. Watson, 28 Miss. 187; Smith v. Smith, 11 N. H. 459.

But in England it is provided by statute (20 & 21 Vict., ch. 77, § 79) that an executor who has renounced need not join in a suit.

In New York a statute of 1838, ch. 149, p. 103, provides that in actions brought by or against co-executors, it shall not be necessary to join those as parties to whom letters testamentary shall not have been issued and who have not qualified. Moore v. Willett, 2 Hilton (N. Y.) 522.

In North Carolina only such executors as qualify need join in a suit. Alston v. Alston, 3 Ired. Law (N. Car.) 447.

In Heron v. Hoffner, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 393, it was held that where two out of three co-executors, authorized by will to sell land, entered into a contract for that purpose, the third having renounced, only those by whom the contract was made should bring an action for its breach. But where one of several co-executors sells the goods of the testator, he alone may bring an action for the price, but not in his capacity as executor. Brassington v. Ault, 2 Bing. 177; Aiken v. Bridgman, 37 Vt. 249; Laycock v. Oleson, 60 Ill. 30.

So one of several co-executors may bring an action to recover goods taken from his possession. Williams Executors (6th Am. ed.) *1868.

Where one executor contracts on his own account, he must sue alone on the contract, although the money recovered will be assets. Williams Executors (6th Am. ed.) *1868; Heath v. Chilton, 12 M. & W. 632.

3. Williams Executors (6th Am. ed.) *956, n. k.; Schouler Executors and Administrators (2nd ed.), §403, n. 5; Davies v. Williams, 1 Sim. 5; Thompson v. Graham, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 384. In this case one executor renounced and it was held that his co-executor could bring suit. This case also held that if it is necessary to bring the executor who renounces before the court, he should be made a defendant. See also Rinehart v. Rinehart, 15 N. J. Eq. 44.

4. Williams Exrs. (6th Am. ed.) *1935.

In an action of ejectment, service on one of two executors is sufficient. Strickland v. Roe, 4 Dow. & L. 431.

But where an action is brought against

Actions Between Each Other—Cannot Sue Each Other in Law.
—As co-executors in the eye of the law constitute but one person, they cannot sue or be sued by one another at law, as one man would thus be both plaintiff and defendant in the same suit.¹

co-executors in their representative capacity, service must be made on them all to support a judgment against any. Barnes v. Jarnagin, 12 S. & M. (Miss.) 108; Owen v. Brown, 2 Ala. 126; Jones v. Wilkinson, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 44.

Where only one of two executors is served, there can be no proceedings in the case after his death. Greiner v. Hummel, 2 Watts (Pa.) 345.

In an action against several, in a representative character, the plaintiff may have a verdict against such of them as he proves to be chargeable, though he fail to show the liability of all. Judson v. Gibbons, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 224.

1. Williams Exrs. (6th Am. ed.), *957; Schouler Exrs. & Admrs. (2nd ed.), § 403; Whitney v. Coapman, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 482; Saunders v. Saunders, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 314; Martin v. Martin, 13 Mo. 36; Coles v. Wooden, 3 Harr. (N. J.) 15; McDivitt v. McDivitt, 4 Watts (Pa.) 384.

Simon v. Albright, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 429. In this case the court says: "The two administrators jointly represent the intestate, and one has no more right to recover a debt than the other."

Nor can surviving executors sue the executor of a deceased co-executor for a debt due to their testator by the deceased executor. Williams Exrs. (6th Am. ed.) *957.

But a surviving executor can sue the representatives of a deceased co-executor on their bond for the due administration of their decedent's estate, to recover the amount of the estate received by the deceased executor, and not accounted for by him. Shelby v. Dailey, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 548. But see contra, McWilliams' Estate, 3 Clark (Pa.) 321; Bowen v. Miller, 3 Clark (Pa.) 326. So also unconverted assets can be recovered. Bowen v. Miller, 3 Clark (Pa.) 326.

And where an executor has been removed, his co-executors can sue him at law, as they could anyone else. And this although the money, to recover which suit is brought, became due before the executor was removed. Hendricks v. Thornton, 45 Ala. 299.

And the fact that the executors filed a joint and several bond, makes no difference. Sperb v. McCoun (N. Y.), 18 N. E. Rep. 441.

So also an executor who renounces, if he is also a creditor of the estate, can proceed against it, as any other creditor could. Rawlinson v. Shaw, 3 Durn. & East 557.

Where one of two co-executors executed a note in favor of himself and his co-executor, it seems that the payee of the note can bring a suit on it against an endorser. Faulkner v. Faulkner, 73 Mo. 327.

In Berry v. Tart, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 4, one executor gave a promissory note to his co-executor for funds in his hands belonging to the estate. Held, the contract between them might have had a legal and proper consideration, and that the co-executor could bring suit on the note.

In Cowper v. Fletcher, 34 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 187, co-executors agreed that one of them should hold the land devised to them in trust at a certain rent, and when the rent fell into arrear, it was held the one owing it could be distrained for it.

And if a creditor of the testator is appointed executor, but does not act as such, he can sue such of the executors as do act. Williams on Exrs. (6th Am. ed.) *955; Schouler Exrs. & Admrs. 2nd ed., § 403; Dorchester v. Webb, W. Jones, 345; Hunter v. Hunter, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 631; Marsh v. Oliver, 14 N. J. Eq. 259.

Under the New York Code of Civil Procedure, where one co-executor presents his account for settlement without the other's signature, his associates may contest it. Mead v. Willoughby, 4 Demarest (N. Y.) 364.

Where an executor is a residuary legatee, he can sue his co-executor to recover his legacy. Bacon's Abridg. tit. Exrs. & Admrs. (D) 2, p. 41; Godolph. 135.

See also Hunter v. Hunter, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 631. In this case a donee of the testator was named executor, but did not act as such. Held, he could bring an action against the acting executor to enforce the gift.

In Alabama, an executor can sue

But in equity one executor may maintain proceedings against his co-executor to compel him to file an account, cease from maladministration, or do otherwise as justice may require, if there is no adequate remedy at law.¹

VI. Survivorship Among Co-executors.—See article on EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, p. 200.

VII. Division of Commissions.—See article on EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, p. 441.

his co-executor on the latter's express promise. Phillips v. Phillips, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 71. (Approved in Faulkner v. Faulkner, 73 Mo. 327.)

An action will lie by executors against their co-executor, for the purpose of recovering a debt owing by him to the estate, in order to reimburse themselves for an amount decreed in their favor, where the defendant has not accounted for the same before the surrogate. Wurts v. Jenkins, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 546.

Where an executor, before acting, gives to his co-executors a bond for a debt due by himself to the testator, and afterwards qualify as executor, his co-executors may maintain an action against him on the bond. Gardner v. Miller, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 188; Hunter v. Hunter, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 631.

1. Williams Exrs. (6th Am. ed.) *1911; Schouler Exrs. & Admrs. (2nd ed.), § 403; Peake v. Ledger, 8 Hare 313; Case's Appeal, 35 Conn. 115; Storms v. Quackenbush, 34 N. J. Eq. 201; McGregor v. McGregor, 35 N. Y. 218; Wood v. Brown, 34 N. Y. 337; Strever v. Feltman, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 277; Elmendorf v. Lansing, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 562; Turner v. Wilkins, 56 Ala. 173; Chew's Appeal, 3 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 294; Nason v. Smalley, 8 Vt. 118; Sheehan v. Kennelly, 32 Ga. 145.

Equity Only Interferes When Justice Requires.—"But a court of equity will not interfere between co-executors, unless it appears to be imperatively required for the purposes of justice." Williams Exrs. (6th Am. ed.) *1911, note c; Rogers v. Moore, 1 Root (Conn.) 472; Beach v. Norton, 9 Conn. 181; Stiver v. Stiver, 8 Ohio 217; Wurts v. Jenkins, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 546.

In Bowen v. Richardson, 133 Mass. 293, co-executors united in misusing the funds in their hands for their own benefit, and one of them kept the profits. It did not appear that the persons interested in the estate were debarred from their right to avail themselves of the profits. Held, that under these circumstances, the executor who did not receive the profits could not maintain a bill in equity against the one who did, for an account and a payment to him of a proportionate share of the profits.

But in Maryland, one executor cannot maintain a bill in equity against his co-executor to force him to account for and pay over to him money alleged to be due to the estate of the decedent by the defendant executor. Beall v. Hilliary, 1 Md. 186; Whiting v. Whiting, 64 Md. 157.

In Maryland, proceedings against delinquent are brought in the orphans court, under the Code, art. 93, § 241. Whiting v. Whiting, 64 Md. 157.

Where a decedent executed a mortgage and made the mortgagor one of his executors, it was held that the bill by the co-executors should be for a sale and not for a foreclosure. Williams Executors (6th Am. ed.) *1911; Lucas v. Seale, 2 Atk. 56.

In Fay v. Fay, 4 Cent. Rep. 241 (N. J.), one of several co-executors continued to carry on the business of his decedent with the consent of his co-executors. Held, his co-executors could not maintain a bill to compel him to account for the good will of the business, for they were equally in the wrong for not turning such good will into assets of the estate.

In King v. Shackelford, 13 Ala. 435, it was held that an executor, who was also a creditor of the testator, could file a petition in the orphans court to compel a settlement and distribution of the estate, the co-executor having assets for which he had not accounted.

Where a co-executor behaves improperly or becomes unsuitable for the trust, a desirable course to pursue is to procure his removal or resignation. Schouler Executors and Administrators (2nd ed.), § 403, n. 3; Hesson v. Hesson, 14 Md. 8.

The refusal of an executor to permit his co-executors to inspect the papers

JOINT STOCK COMPANIES—(See CORPORATIONS; LIMITED PARTNERSHIP; PARTNERSHIP; SOCIETIES AND CLUBS; STOCK-HOLDERS).

- I. Definition, 1036.
 1. Distinguished from Ordinary Partnership, 1038.
 2. Distinguished from Corporations, 1039.
 3. Recognized at Common Law, 1041.
- II. Statutory Enactments, 1042.
 1. In England, 1042.
 2. In the United States, 1043.
- III. Powers, Rights and Liabilities of Members, 1048.
 1. As to the Public, 1048.
 2. As Between Themselves, 1049.
- IV. The Officers, 1050.
 1. Responsibility of the Company for Their Acts, 1050.
 2. Responsibility of Its Officers to the Company, 1051.
- V. Suits By or Against Joint Stock Companies, 1051.
 1. In Local Jurisdiction, 1051.
 2. In Foreign Jurisdiction, 1054.
- VI. Transfer of Shares, 1055.
- VII. Dissolution, 1055.
 1. By Mutual Consent, 1055.
 2. By Equitable Proceedings, 1055.
 3. Acts Amounting to Dissolution, 1056.

I. DEFINITION.—A joint stock company is an association of individuals for the purposes of profit, possessing a common capital, being divided into shares, of which each member possesses one or more, and which are transferable by the owner.¹

belonging to the estate in his possession is a sufficient ground for his removal on his refusal to surrender the same. Chew's Estate, 2 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 153.

For the other causes for which he can be removed, see article on PROBATE AND LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION.

Authorities.—For joint executors see Williams on Executors (6th Am. ed.), with notes by J. C. Perkins, Esq., title in index Co-executors; Schouler on Executors and Administrators (2nd ed.), title in index Joint Administration; Article by O. F. Bump, Esq., 8th Cent. L. J. 63, 82; Article by S. G. Crosswell, Esq., 24th Cent. L. J. 147.

1. Shelford's Law of Joint Stock Companies (London 1870), p. 1.

They have also been defined as "partnerships with a capital or joint stock divisible into transferable shares." Wentworth's ed. of Lindley on Partnerships (1888) 845; "partnerships with transferable shares," Phillips v. Blatchford, 137 Mass. 510; Attorney General v. Mercantile Marine Ins. Co., 121 Mass. 524; "quasi corporations," Oak Ridge Coal Co. v. Rogers, 108 Pa. St. 147. The words "joint stock company," as used in Massachusetts statutes, refer to companies organized under general laws as corporations. Attorney General v. Mercantile Marine Ins. Co., 121 Mass. 524.

In the act of June 2nd, 1874, known as the Joint Stock Companies act in Pennsylvania, the association is treated as a partnership. Eliot v. Himrod, 108 Pa. St. 569; In re Henry Diston & Sons File Co., 8 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.) 58. See Logan v. McNaughton, 88 Pa. St. 103; Tide Water Pipe Co. v. Kitchenman, 108 Pa. St. 630. Their real organization and character must in each case be determined by reference to the laws and articles of agreement under which they are formed; whether they are to be called copartnerships, or joint stock companies or corporations is solely a question of definition. Morawetz on Private Corporations, § 6; School District v. St. Joseph's Ins. Co., 103 U. S. 707.

A partnership or a joint stock company is not necessarily the result of an abortive attempt to organize a corporation. Blanchard v. Kaull, 44 Cal. 440.

"Joint stock company" denotes a union of persons owning together a capital stock which they have devoted to a common purpose, under an organization analogous to that of a corporation, or a body upon which some of the privileges or powers of corporations have been conferred by statute, but which is not in a full sense a corporation. Addison on Contracts, *805, note.

A joint stock company is a partnership whereof the capital is divided or agreed to be divided into shares, and so as to be transferable without the express consent of all the copartners. Hedge's Appeal, 63 Pa. St. 273; 8 & 9 Vict., ch. 110.

"Speaking with reference to general usage, and disregarding local peculiarities, it may be said that 'joint stock company' denotes a union of persons owning together a capital stock which they have devoted to a common purpose under an organization analogous to that of a corporation, or a body upon which some of the privileges or powers of corporations have been conferred by statute, but which is not in a full sense a corporation. As sometimes used, however, the idea of incorporation is not excluded; thus insurance companies are called mutual or joint stock companies, without intending to imply that they are not incorporated." Abbott's Note, on page 805, vol. 2, Addison on Contracts, 8th Eng. ed.

Stock Exchanges.—The law of the "stock exchange," while in some respects allied to that of joint stock companies, yet is so essentially different from it in many particulars, that a discussion of it under the law of stock companies would seem out of place. Dos Passos, in his work on Stock Brokers and Stock Exchanges, 11-17, says: "The board of brokers is a voluntary association of persons who, for convenience in the transaction of business with each other, have associated themselves to provide a common place for the transaction of their individual business, agreeing among themselves to pay the expenses incident to the support of the objects of the association, in which each for himself, at stated hours of the day, and for his individual profit, may prosecute his own business, and enter into separate engagements with his fellow members. The association does not share in the losses of the individual associates; each member takes his own gains, and individually sustains the losses incident to his engagements." "The obligations and rights of its members are not determined by any statutory provision. There is no contribution of capital by its members for the prosecution of any kind of business by the association. It issues no stock, nor can the individual members claim any rights of property in it as stockholders."

Unlike an incorporated commercial joint stock company, the privilege of membership in such a voluntary association may be conferred or withheld, at its pleasure, and the law cannot compel the admission of an individual into the society against its wish.

The above are some of the general elements which distinguish stock exchanges from corporations, incorporated joint stock associations or partnerships.

The exchange is in no wise interested in the pecuniary gains or profits of its members, and the sole source of its revenue is derivable from such dues, fines, assessments, or contributions as it may, from time to time, collect or receive from its members, together with any increase of its present accumulations. At common law, the legal title of the personal property of the exchange, it being unincorporated, is vested in all of its members, in like manner as the title to partnership property is vested in all the partners. But, unlike the relation of partners, a member of the exchange or his legal representatives, has no right to call for an account of the property and a division of the same. A member has no several proprietary interest in it, or a right to any proportionable part of it, upon withdrawing. He has merely the enjoyment and use of it while he is a member; but the property remains with, and belongs to, the body while it continues to exist, like a pew, the ultimate and dominant property in which is in the congregation, and not in the pewholder; and when the body ceases to exist, those who may then be members become entitled to their proportionate share of its assets."

Produce Exchanges.—The law of the produce exchange is also peculiar to itself. "As a general rule, the members of unincorporated associations are regarded as partners, and are subject to the whole law of partnership. The application of this principle, however, to the unincorporated exchange, should be restricted. For the acts of its officers or servants, directly authorized by the constitution, laws or regulations of the unincorporated exchange, its members would be individually liable, under the general principle above cited. But in the main, this question is now purely speculative as regards the exchange. For the proposition, as presented in the reports, has been raised in cases where the officers or servants of unincorporated social or literary societies have incurred obligations without any express authorization from the organization." Bisbee and Simonds, Law of the Produce Exchange, § 64.

1. Distinguished from Ordinary Partnerships.—In an ordinary partnership the death or withdrawal of a member works a dissolution of the firm. In joint stock companies, however, the death of a member or the withdrawal or transfer of his interest, does not involve a dissolution of the company. In such companies there is no delectus personæ. In the absence of legislation to the contrary, the members of a joint stock company, like the members of a partnership, are liable for all the debts of the association; and in other essential respects such companies are similar to ordinary partnerships.¹

1. Joint stock companies are nothing more than ordinary partnerships, unless they are expressly sanctioned by some special or general act of the legislature. Butterfield v. Beardsley, 28 Mich. 412; Wells v. Gates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 554; Moore v. Brink, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 402; Lafond v. Deems, 52 How. (N. Y.) 41; Wells v. Gates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 554; Dennis v. Kennedy, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 517.

An unincorporated building association is only a partnership. 9 Weekly Notes Cas. (Pa.) 79.

The constitution of an association provided for a choice of officers, and that the president and directors should "have the exclusive direction and arrangement of all the concerns of the company and treasury department." Thus constituted it became rather a joint stock company than a proper copartnership. If they had been copartners, each individual could have disposed of the whole property, incurred liabilities and made purchases. In this association no one, nor even all the members, not being directors, could have done this. And the law applicable to partnerships proper does not decide the rights of the members. Cox v. Bodfish, 35 Me. 302; Livingston v. Lynch, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 573; Irvine v. Forbes, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 587.

A provision that each member may sell and transfer his interest and thus introduce a new partner, though unusual, is not inconsistent with the contract of copartnership. Hoadley v. County Commissioners, 105 Mass. 519.

When the association is for private and individual profit or pleasure, with no public object, it is treated as a copartnership. So where the association is for private emolument or for benevolence, confined exclusively to the associates, and in which none others participate, as between themselves, they are partners. Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Parsons Sel. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 98.

Clubs.—A social club without formal constitution and without objects of profit or pecuniary advantage may be held liable under the New York statute as a joint stock company or association of seven or more persons having a common interest. Effinghausen v. Worth Club, 4 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.) 300. See contra, Park v. Simmons, 10 Hun (N. Y.), 128. In In re St. James Club, 2 De Gex, McN. & G. 383, it was held that a club is neither a partnership nor a joint stock company.

A joint stock company to trade in land is an ordinary partnership. Kramer v. Athens, 7 Pa. St. 165; In re Account of Fry, Treasurer of North Branch Coal Co., 4 Phila. (Pa.) 129; Clagett v. Kilbourne, 1 Black. (U. S.) 346.

In mining partnerships there is usually no delectus personæ, and as a consequence such a partnership is not dissolved by the death of a partner or a sale of an interest by a partner to a stranger. Taylor v. Castle, 42 Cal. 367; Skillman v. Lachman, 23 Cal. 199; Duryea v. Burt, 28 Cal. 569; Jones v. Clark, 42 Cal. 180; Dougherty v. Creary, 30 Cal. 290. See also Troy Nail Factory v. Corning, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 231; Bradley v. Harkness, 26 Cal. 69; Abel v. Love, 17 Cal. 233; Settembre v. Putnam, 30 Cal. 490; Rich v. Davis, 6 Cal. 163.

Liability to Taxation.—In several cases it has been held that joint stock companies, being corporations within the meaning of the constitution, are liable to taxation on their capital. Sandford v. Board of Supervisors, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 172. See also Oliver v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 100 Mass. 531.

But in the recent case of People v. Commissioners of Taxes in the supreme court of New York, not yet reported, JUDGE BARRETT held that the National Express Company, a joint stock company, was not taxable upon its capital stock as a corporation, that while the legislature had conferred many corporate incidents upon such companies, yet they were not corporations and the acts allowing such companies to be formed declared the opposite intent. He says: "It is true this is not always the test of corporate existence, but it is at least conclusive of the absence of any legislative attempt to confer corporate franchises. A corporation cannot be formed by a private agreement between individuals. The franchise must proceed from the State, and even the State cannot compel people to accept its bounty. Joint stock companies may be formed without regard to these statutes, and the promoters may choose to proceed solely upon their common law rights and responsibilities. There is, in fact, no statute of the State providing for the formation of joint stock companies or limiting their organization. . . . The true test is whether the being is natural or artificial. It is artificial if created by statute or called into being by compliance with statutory provisions. It is natural when solely the creature of private contract. The nature of the being is not affected by the character of the contract. "The company under consideration was not formed under any general or special statute. It became what it is—a joint stock company—solely by force of the contract between its members, embodied in their articles of association. They were required by no law to file or, as in England, register these articles and merely become an artificial being, a legal entity with a defined status, subject to legislative control. They were not even required to reduce the provisions of these articles to writing. It would seem to be reasonably clear, therefore, that general legislation, merely conferring certain of the privileges incident to corporations upon these subjects of private agreement, fails to change a natural into an artificial being, and no more creates a corporation than would general legislation conferring similar privileges upon ordinary partnerships." See also Hoadley v. County Commissioners, 105 Mass. 519; Gleason v. McKay, 134 Mass. 419.

2. Distinguished from Corporations.—The shareholders of a corporation are liable for the debts of the company only to the extent of the share of the capital stock actually contributed by them. Joint stock companies are distinguished from corporations in the fact that, apart from legislation, their members are liable to contribute to the debts of the company. In other respects they are similar. They both have a continued existence unaffected by the death or withdrawal of members; the operations of both are carried on through officers or agents, and they both assume and hold themselves out to the world under a corporate name.¹

A joint stock company, as a general thing, is an ordinary copartnership, and subject to all the rules relating to partnerships. Hedge's App., 63 Pa. St. 274; Babb v. Reed, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 151; In re Account of Fry, Treasurer, etc., 4 Phila. (Pa.) 129; Kramer v. Arthurs, 7 Pa. St. 165; Manning v. Gasharil, 27 Ind. 399; Robbins v. Butler, 24 Ill. 387; Dennis v. Kennedy, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 517; Townsend v. Goewey, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 424; Cross v. Jackson, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 478; Williams v. Bank of Michigan, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 539; Tappan v. Bailey, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 529; Vigers v. Sainet, 13 La. 300; Tenney v. N. E. Protective Union, 37 Vt. 64; Bullard v. Kinney, 10 Cal. 60; Skinner v. Dayton, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 513; Hess v. Werts, 4 Serg. & Rawle (Pa.) 356; Henry v. Jackson, 37 Vt. 431; Pennsylvania Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 5 Minn. 36; Bailey v. Baucker, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 188; English v. Wall, 12 Rob. (La.) 132; National Bank of Schuylersville v. Lasher, 1 Thomp. & C. (1 N. Y. Sup. Ct.) 313; Pettis v. Atkins, 60 Ill. 454; Ex parte Grisenwood, 4 De G. & J. 544; Whitman v. Porter, 107 Mass. 522; McGreary v. Chandler, 58 Me. 537.

1. Liability of Members.—If the terms of the association do not, by fair and necessary construction, negative the intention of personal liability, in judgment of law and equity, the members of the company are individually responsible for all debts contracted, for the objects, and within the scope, of the association. If they did not mean to be personally liable for deficiencies, good faith required that they should speak unequivocally, and give notice that such were the terms on which they contracted. If they had accepted the franchise of an incorporation offered to them by the legislature, their rights and duties would have been distinctly marked and understood, and no person would have confided in their personal responsibility. Skinner v. Dayton, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 513.

The words "joint stock company" have never been used as descriptive of a corporation created by special act of the legislature, and authorized to issue certificates of stock to its shareholders. They describe a partnership made up of many persons acting under articles of association, for the purpose of carrying on a particular business, and having a capital stock divided into shares transferable at the pleasure of the holder. Attorney General v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 121 Mass. 524.

"If we look into the books for elementary definitions, we shall find that corporations have no other attributes except the technical one of a common seal to distinguish them from common law partnerships. On the other hand, simple partnerships have none of the attributes or qualities here mentioned. Mere names are of but little importance. Looking at the substance and nature of things, it is plain that in respect to the absence of a common seal merely these joint stock associations are like partnerships. In the other and vastly more material respects mentioned, they are like corporations, although they are not declared to be such by the legislative acts referred to. Waterbury v. Merchants' Union Express Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 157.

"It has been impossible for me to see the force of the argument that, because the legislature have constantly avoided to call these associations, or any of their machinery, a corporation, therefore we cannot adjudge them to be so. If they have the attributes of corporations, if they are so in the nature of things, we can no more refuse to regard them as such than we could refuse to acknowledge John or George to be natural persons, because the legislature may, in making provisions for their benefit, have been pleased to designate them as belonging to some other species. Should the legislature expressly declare each of them to be corporations, without giving them corporate succession, or other artificial attributes, the declaration would not make them so. On the other hand, even an express legislative declaration that certain associations are not included in the definition of corporations, would not change their character, provided they should in fact be clothed with all the essential powers of corporations." Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 9 (COWEN, J.); Liverpool and London Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 566; Sandford v. Board of Supervisors, 15 How. (N. Y.) 172; Waterbury v. Merchants' Union Express Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 157, 3 Abb. Pa. (N. Y.) 163; Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 542; Oliver v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 100 Mass. 531; Maltz v. American Express Co., 1 Flippin (U. S.) 611; Fargo v. Louisville etc. Ry. Co., 6 Fed. Rep. 787.

Land Company.—Five persons being tenants in common of a tract of land formed themselves into a company called the Hastings Town Company, for the purpose of selling lots in the town site of Hastings for the mutual benefit of the members. The articles of association provided that the capital should be $4000, divided into shares of $100 each; that there should be five directors who should elect from their number a president, a secretary and a treasurer; that the president should have power to convey the property of the corporation, such conveyances to be countersigned by the secretary. The president in due form having conveyed or dedicated part of the land to county purposes, one of the members of the association conveyed his interest in the land so dedicated and his assignee bringing ejectment, it was held that the organization, though designated a corporation, was in fact a joint stock company or quasi partnership for the purpose of disposing of the lots in question. The lots became in fact partnership property from the sale of which each shareholder received his proportion of the amount received. That as the express authority of each partner had been given to the president and secretary to execute deeds in the name of the co-partnership, they were the proper parties to make the deeds, and that the purchaser from one of the partners took the property subject to the contract made by the president and secretary with the county. Batty v. Adams County, 16 Neb. 44. See also Livingston v. Lynch, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 573; Irvine v. Forbes, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 587.

3. Recognized at Common Law.—Joint stock companies, the shares in which are represented to be transferable at the will of

If the organization of a proposed corporation be so defective as to fail in effecting its purpose, the members become in legal effect partners. Whipple v. Parker, 29 Mich. 369; Blanchard v. Kaull, 44 Cal. 440.

Mining Companies.—The powers of members and managers of mining partnerships are limited to acts necessary to the transaction of the business of mining. All persons dealing with them are bound to take notice of the peculiarities of such associations. A stranger by his purchase of shares presumptively becomes a partner. There is, however, no relation of trust or confidence between associates in a mining operation which is violated by the sale or assignment by a partner of his share or interest. Charles v. Eshleman, 5 Colo. 107; Manville v. Parks, 7 Colo. 128; Higgins v. Armstrong, 9 Colo. 38; Lamar v. Hale, 79 Va. 147; Santa Clara Mining Assoc. v. Quicksilver Mining Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 657; Jones v. Clark, 42 Cal. 180; Taylor v. Castle, 42 Cal. 367; Kahn v. Smelting Co., 102 U. S. 641; Bissell v. Foss, 114 U. S. 252; Bybee v. Hawckett, 8 Sawyer (U. S.) 176; Snyder v. Burnham, 77 Mo. 52.

In an action against an unincorporated ditch company upon a note given by its agent, it was held "that the defendants constituted one of the ordinary unincorporated ditch companies so common in the mining regions, owning a ditch which conveyed water from a certain stream to a distant mine, for sale to the miners for mining purposes. The interests were held by the owners in different proportions, in shares, represented by certificates of stock, which were bought and sold at the pleasure of the owners, without consulting the co-owners. The ordinary relations of the stockholders in these associations, like those in the usual mining companies, organized and conducted upon similar principles, and sometimes called mining partnerships, are not those of strict commercial partnerships, but are more in the nature of tenancies in common. Some of the incidents of a partnership pertain to them, and some of mere tenancies in common, but the powers of the several members by virtue of being members are different from those of commercial partnerships. A member of one of these associations has no general authority, by virtue of such membership, to bind the company by his contracts. Nor has the managing agent any authority other than that conferred upon him, either expressly or by necessary implication from his acts recognized by the company, with full knowledge of the acts at the time of the recognition." McConnell v. Denver, 35 Cal. 365; Skillman v. Lachman, 23 Cal. 198; Bradley v. Harkness, 26 Cal. 69; Abel v. Love, 17 Cal. 233.

Voluntary Associations in Massachusetts—Car Trusts.—A number of persons formed an association by an instrument in writing containing numerous articles, for the purpose of buying, selling and leasing railroad rolling stock, to be sold or leased to the New York & New England R. R. Co. with provisions for admitting other persons to membership. The members of the car trust were to furnish money for the purchase of the rolling stock, and were to have certificates for the amounts so furnished, providing that the principal sum contributed by each member should be repaid in ten annual instalments, with interest; both principal and interest being payable only out of the rentals received for the rolling stock. Every owner of one or more shares was to be entitled to a proportionate share of the rentals received. The contemplated profits were limited to six per cent. interest on the money advanced; the losses, if any, to be borne proportionally. There were also provisions looking to the purchase of rolling stock from time to time, and to the issue of new certificates to those who should advance the money on the occasion of each purchase, and to the making of a new and separate lease of each lot or series of rolling stock. Held, that the car trust association was not a corporation. It was a mere voluntary association. There is no intermediate form of organization between a corporation and a partnership, like the joint stock companies of England and of some of the United States, known to this commonwealth. Since this association is not a corporation, its members must be partners, unless, indeed, as the defendant contends, they are simply co-owners. But we cannot look upon them simply as co-owners.

the holder, are not illegal at common law. This has been expressly decided both in England and in the United States.¹

II. STATUTORY ENACTMENTS.—1. In England.—The Companies act of 1862 and its supplements provide that any seven or more persons associated for any lawful purpose may, by subscribing their names to a memorandum of association, and otherwise complying with the requisitions of the act in respect to registration, form an incorporated company, with or without limited liability. It is also provided that the subscribers of the memorandum of association, together with such other persons as may from time to time become members of a company, shall be a body corporate by the name contained in the memorandum of association, capable of exercising all the functions of an incorporated company, having perpetual succession and a common seal, with power to hold lands. Under these acts, joint stock companies have been formed in large numbers and have absorbed to themselves a large share of the business of Great Britain.²

Ricker v. American Loan & Trust Co., 104 Mass. 346; Whitman v. Parke, 107 Mass. 522; Hoadley v. County Commissioners, 105 Mass. 519; Gleason v. McKay, 134 Mass. 419.

1. English Bubble Act.—The act of 6 Geo. I, ch. 18, commonly known as the Bubble act, was aimed to suppress joint stock companies altogether. It declared them common nuisances; enacted penalties for membership in them, and made it an offence for brokers to deal in their shares. This act was repealed by the act of 6 Geo. IV. ch. 91. The illegality of joint stock companies seems to have rested entirely upon the Bubble act. Before its passage and after its repeal such companies were not illegal at common law. In Harrison v. Heathorn, 6 Man. & G. 79, the court in speaking of the Bubble act, said "that statute having been repealed, the question is now altered, and we have to determine whether such a company as the present has been shown to be a nuisance and grievance at common law. The raising of transferable shares of the stock of a company can hardly be said to be of itself an offence at common law; no instance of an indictment at common law for such an offence can be shown, the raising of stocks with transferable shares being indeed a modern proceeding; and the very great particularity with which it is described in the statute seems to show that it was an offence created by the statute only." In Mexican & South American Company, Ex parte Aston, 5 Jur. N. S. 615; 6 M. & G. 81;

27 Beav. 480, the master of the rolls said: "I have listened in vain for any case, or indeed for the statement of any principle, whereby, at common law, and independent of any statute, a partnership between persons who agree among themselves that their shares shall be legally assignable in perpetuum, or indefinitely assignable, is absolutely void and illegal. I find no case which determines it, and no principle on which it can rest; nor am I able to conjecture why such an association should be void at common law. It does not appear to me to offend against society, or to injure any class of individuals, and, therefore, unless bound by distinct authority, I should not be the first judge to hold that such an association was void at common law." See also Welburn v. Ingilby, 1 Myl. & K. 61; Garrard v. Hardey, 5 Man. & G. 471.

Bubble Act in Massachusetts.—In Massachusetts joint stock companies have been held legal at common law. In Phillips v. Blatchford, 137 Mass. 510, HOLMES, J., said: "It is too late to contend that partnerships with transferable shares are illegal in this commonwealth. They have been recognized as lawful by the court from Alvord v. Smith, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 232, to Gleason v. McKay, 134 Mass. 419. Even if the question were a new one we should come to the same result." In the same case it was decided that the Bubble act had never been in force in Massachusetts.

2. 25 and 26 Vict., ch. 47 (1862). Benjamin Vaughn Abbott, in a

2. In the United States.—In some of the United States, statutes have been passed regulating the organization, government and management of joint stock companies. Such statutes usually fix the minimum number of members, authorize the companies to sue or be sued in their own name, provide for the management of the business, and establish the extent of the liability of the members. These statutes also usually require that the organizers of the company shall record articles of association containing the names of the members, the amount of capital, the name of the company, and the character and location of the business.¹

note to Addison on Contracts (8th Eng. ed.), p. 805, says: "The English use of the term [joint stock company] is more definite and extensive than the American. In both countries there has been a great extension of the principle of allowing men to combine for a large enterprise without assuming the full liability of partners, and in both countries a danger has been seen in giving to members of such combinations the entire immunity from liability possessed by members of corporations, formed under the old common law forms of incorporation. In England, the policy has been to confine incorporation to its original meaning, and grant it only in rare cases; while laws have been passed which allow partnerships under such names as joint stock companies, public companies, etc., to assimilate themselves to corporations, and enjoy, to a considerable extent, corporate powers, and exemption from personal liability, but which do not affect to recognize such bodies as "corporations" in the fullest sense of that term. In this country, upon the other hand, it has been thought convenient to create corporations under that name for almost any purpose for which simple partnership forms were inadequate, and to secure creditors by imposing an individual liability upon members or officers of the corporation. Hence much of the law of English joint stock companies applies directly to what in this country are termed "corporations," especially the corporations allowed by the laws of the various States to be formed by filing articles of association under what are known as 'general laws' of incorporation."

1. In Pennsylvania, the act of June 2nd, 1874, P. L. 271, is known as the "Joint Stock Companies act." The first section of this act is as follows: "When any three or more persons may desire to form a partnership association, for the purpose of conducting any lawful business or occupation, within the United States or elsewhere, whose principal office or place of business shall be established and maintained within this State, by subscribing and contributing capital thereto, which capital alone shall be liable for the debts of such association, it shall and may be lawful for such persons to sign and acknowledge before some officer competent to take the acknowledgment of deeds, a statement in writing, in which shall be set forth the full names of such persons and the amount of capital of said association subscribed for by each; the total amount of capital, and when and how to be paid; the character of the business to be conducted, and the location of the same; the name of the association with the word 'limited' added thereto as part of the same; the contemplated duration of said association, which shall not in any case exceed twenty years, and the names of the officers of said association selected in conformity with the provisions of this act. And any amendment of said statement shall be made only in like manner; which said statement and amendments shall be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the proper county."

Under the other sections of this act and its supplements, it is provided: (1) That the members of such partnership association shall not be liable for the debts of such association beyond the amount of their unpaid subscription to the capital, and no execution shall issue therefor without an order of court. (2) That the word "limited" shall be the last word of the name of such association, and shall plainly appear upon all signs, bills and papers of whatever kind used by the association, and the omission of this word shall make the members severally liable as general partners. (3) Interests in such associations shall be personal estate and may be transferred subject to such regulations as the association may prescribe, but no transferee thereof shall be entitled to an interest in the management of the business without a vote of a majority of the members. If the transferee be not elected to membership in the association, the price of his interest shall be mutually agreed, and in default thereof appraisers shall be appointed by the court. (4) There shall be at least one meeting a year, at one of which there shall be elected not less than three nor more than seven managers, one of whom shall be elected chairman; the other officers shall be a secretary, a treasurer (both of which offices may be held by one person), and such other officers as may be deemed necessary; and no liability for more than $500, except against the person incurring it, shall bind the association unless reduced to writing and signed by at least two managers. (5) Profits shall be divided as a majority of the members may determine, but such profits shall not diminish the capital. (6) Credit, name or capital shall not be loaned to any member of the association, nor to anyone else without the written consent of a majority in number and value of interest. (7) Association may be dissolved by expiration of time limited in statement, or by vote of majority in number and value of interest. Upon dissolution members shall elect three liquidating trustees, who shall wind up the affairs and distribute funds as follows: (a) To payment of wages. (b) Other liabilities. (c) To and among members in proportion to their interests. (8) Deeds, bonds and mortgages shall be executed under the common seal of the association, and be acknowledged by the chairman and secretary. (9) The association shall be sued in its association name and service shall be made upon the chairman, secretary or treasurer, but service may be made upon the association in any county in this State, where it may have an office, by serving the process upon any agent, clerk, director or manager.

By the supplementary act of May 1st, 1876 (P. L. 89), it is provided that a contribution to the capital of the association may be made in real or personal estate; a schedule containing a description and valuation of the property so contributed must be inserted in the statement.

Under this act, prior to May 1st, 1876, the capital was to be paid in cash. Bement v. Brick Machine Co., 12 Phila. (Pa.) 494; Keystone Boot & Shoe Co. v. Schoelkopf, 11 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.) 132; Eliot v. Himrod, 108 Pa. St. 569.

If parties seek to have all the advantages of a partnership and yet limit their liabilities as to creditors, they must comply strictly with the act. Maloney v. Bruce, 94 Pa. St. 249; Keystone Boot & Shoe Co. v. Schoelkopf, 11 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.) 132; Eliot v. Himrod, 108 Pa. St. 569; Pears v. Barnes (Pa.), 1 Cent. Rep. 569; Hill v. Stetler (Pa.), 12 Cent. Rep. 138.

The rule applicable to corporations, that in a suit brought upon an evidence of debt either by or against a corporation de facto, the corporate existence and liability cannot be questioned, cannot be applied to associations formed under this act. Eliot v. Himrod, 108 Pa. St. 569.

Before members of the association can be subjected to execution process, they have a right to notice and must be given an opportunity to be heard before they can be adjudged debtors and therefore liable to execution. Lauder v. Tillia, 117 Pa. St. 304.

The schedule of property contributed must not be a lumping valuation, but such a description as to enable one to form a correct estimate of the extent of the property. Maloney v. Bruce, 94 Pa. St. 249; Hite Natural Gas Co.'s Appeal, 118 Pa. St. 436.

A person who buys stock from the treasurer of the association is affected with notice that the stock has never been paid for. He is thereby put upon enquiry into the manner of the organization, and is chargeable with notice of all that such an enquiry would have disclosed. Hill v. Stetler (Pa.), 12 Cent. Rep. 138. The transferee of an interest or an executor of a deceased member is entitled to an allowance for good will in making up the value of the interest. Appraisement of interest considered. In re Henry Disston & Sons File Co., 8 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.) 58.

The powers of the members of a partnership association are subject to the restraints and limitations imposed by law, and these are operative as well against strangers dealing with the partnership as against the members themselves. Pittsburgh Melting Co. v. Reese, 118 Pa. St. 355.

It is not necessary to a valid organization that the entire subscribed capital should be paid into the treasury before an association can begin business, but an association has no right to enter upon business until some part of the subscribed capital has been paid. The statement should show how much has been paid, and the "subscription list book" should show thereafter the payment or the failure to pay the instalments falling due. Hill v. Stetler (Pa.), 12 Cent. Rep. 138.

The association is not liable upon a promissory note given and delivered by the chairman not in the ordinary course of business, and for the purpose of loaning the credit of the association to the payee, without the consent and knowledge of the other members of the association. Lerch Hardware Co. v. First National Bank, 109 Pa. St. 240.

Associations formed under this act of 1874 are mere limited partnerships, and a judgment confessed by one member for a firm debt binds the firm property. Leming v. Penn Morocco Co., 16 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.) 114. See also Crowther v. Upland Assoc., 1 Del. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 264.

Joint Stock Companies in New York.—In New York, by chapter 258 of the Laws of 1849, as amended by the laws of 1853, chapter 153, any joint stock company or association, consisting of seven or more shareholders or associates, may sue and be sued in the name of the president or treasurer, for the time being, of such joint stock company or association, and the suit shall have the same force and effect as regards the joint rights, property and effects of such joint stock company, etc., "as if such suits and proceedings were prosecuted in the names of all the shareholders or associates, in the manner now provided by law." The second and third sections provide that the suit shall not abate by reason of the death, removal or resignation of the president or treasurer, or the death or legal incapacity of any shareholder or associate; but it may be continued against his successor. Other clauses provide that the president, etc., shall not be liable in his own person or property by reason of any such suit brought against him as nominal plaintiff or defendant.

The fourth section provides that suits against any such joint stock company or association in the first instance shall be prosecuted in the manner provided in the first section of the act, but after judgment shall be obtained against the company, and execution shall be returned unsatisfied, suits may be brought against all or any of the shareholders, individually etc.

The fifth section provides as follows: "Nothing herein contained shall be construed to confer on the joint stock companies or associations mentioned in the first section of this act, any of the rights or privileges of corporations, except as herein specially provided."

Prior to the act of 1849, all the members of an incorporated joint stock company or association were necessary parties to an action by or against such company or association, whatever the number of its members might be. Van Aernam v. Bleistein, 102 N. Y. 355; Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112; Witherhead v. Allen, 4 Ch. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 628. See also Nat. Bank v. Van Derwerker, 74 N. Y. 234. See also Kingsland v. Braisted, 2 Lansing (N. Y.) 17; New York Marbled Iron Works v. Smith, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 362. See also West Point Assoc. v. Brown, 3 Ed. Ch. (N. Y.) 284. The remedy against the joint property must be exhausted before an action can be brought against the individual associates. Robbins v. Wells, 1 Robertson (N. Y.) 666; Waterbury v. Merchants' Express Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 157; Flagg v. Swift, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 624; Witherhead v. Allen, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 562.

The claim against the individual partners has no force as a judgment beyond the effect given it by the statute, and is not a substantive cause of action against them. Bailey v. Bancker, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 188. See also Allen v. Clark, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 563; Witherhead v. Allen, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 562.

By the laws of 1854, ch. 245, it is provided (1) Whenever, in pursuance of its articles of association, the property of any joint stock association is represented by shares of stock, it shall be lawful for said association to provide by their articles of association that the death of any stockholder, or the assignment of his stock, shall not work a dissolution of the association, but it shall continue as before; nor shall such company be dissolved, except by judgment of a court for fraud in its management, or other good cause to such court shown, or in pursuance of its articles of association. (2) Said association may also, by its articles of association, provide that the shareholders may devolve upon any three or more of the partners the sole management of their business. (3) This act shall in no court be construed to give said associations rights and privileges as corporations." By the laws of 1867, ch. 289, such stock companies may hold real estate necessary for the accommodation of their business, or such as may be mortgaged to it, or bought under judicial proceedings, but "the said joint stock company shall not purchase, hold or convey real estate for any other purpose; and all conveyances of such real estate shall be made to the president of such joint stock company, as such president, and who, and his successors, from time to time, may sell, assign and convey the same, free from any claim thereon against any of the shareholders, or any person claiming under them."

If one of the members of such association die, the creditor must first pursue his remedy against the survivors. Moore v. Brink, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 402. See also Robbins v. Wells, 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 191.

Under the statute allowing an action against an unincorporated association, to be brought against the president or treasurer, an action against the president, secretary and treasurer is improperly brought. Schmidt v. Gunther, 5 Daly (N. Y.) 452.

The acts of 1849 and of 1851 do not include the fire companies of the city of New York. Masterson v. Botts, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 130.

The statutes of 1849 and of 1851 conferred upon the plaintiff no right to sue, except in cases where the shareholders or associates could before have prosecuted. Their intent was to obviate the inconvenience of joining all the shareholders or associates as parties; to facilitate an existing right of action, and not to create a new one. Corning v. Greene, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 33.

These acts were intended to apply to suits having in view a remedy against the "joint property and effects" of such companies and associations; an action which seeks to restrain the association from carrying into effect a resolution of suspension against one of its members, is not within the meaning of said acts. Rorke v. Russell, 2 Lansing (N. Y.) 242.

Joint Stock Companies in Virginia.—By the joint stock companies acts of Virginia, commissioners are appointed to receive subscriptions to the capital stock after giving thirty days' notice. The subscription books shall remain open ten days, or longer, as the commissioners may determine. The subscriptions shall be in shares of $100 each, upon which two dollars must be paid at the time of subscribing, and the balance at such times as the president and directors may designate. The board of directors shall be elected by the stockholders, and shall consist of five members, unless a different number be prescribed. The shares of stock shall be considered personal estate, and shall pass to the personal representative or assignee of the shareholder, and certificates shall be issued for such shares of stock. Annual reports shall be made by the board of directors, accompanied by statements of their receipts and disbursements.

Prior to 1883-4, joint stock companies were created or "incorporated" by act of the legislature. By acts of that session, ch. 97, it is provided that "any five or more persons who shall desire to form a joint stock company for the conduct of any enterprise or business, which may lawfully be conducted by an individual, or by a body politic or corporate, except to construct a turnpike to be constructed beyond the limits of the county, or a railroad or canal, or to establish a bank of circulation, may make, sign and acknowledge before any justice or notary, or county or corporation judge, or clerk of a county, corporation, or circuit court, a certificate in writing, setting forth the name of the company, the purposes for which it is formed, the capital stock and its division into shares, the amount of real estate proposed to be held by it, the place at which its principal office is to be kept, the chief business to be transacted, and the names and residences of the officers who for the first year are to manage the affairs of the company. This certificate may be presented to the circuit court of the county, or the circuit or corporation court of the county wherein the principal office of the company is to be located, or to the judge thereof in vacation. The said court or judge in vacation shall have a discretion to grant or refuse to said persons a charter of incorporation upon the terms set forth in the said certificate, or grant it upon such other terms as may be adjudged reasonable. If the charter be granted, it shall be recorded by the clerk of the said court, in a book to be provided and kept for the purpose, and shall be certified by him to the secretary of the commonwealth, to be in like manner recorded in his office.

Mining Partnerships in California.—

In California, associations for mining purposes, called in the statutes "mining partnerships," are analogous to joint stock companies, in that there is no delectus personarum, and there is no dissolution at the will of one of the parties. The following provisions with respect to such associations appear in Deering's Civil Code of California, § 2511, et seq.: "A mining partnership exists when two or more persons who own or acquire a mining claim for the purpose of working it and extracting the mineral therefrom, actually engage in working the same. An express agreement to become partners or to share the profits and losses of mining, is not necessary to the formation or existence of a mining partnership. The relation arises from the ownership of shares or interest in the mine, and working the same for the purpose of extracting the minerals therefrom. A member of a mining partnership shares in the profits and losses thereof in the proportion which the interest or share he owns in the mine bears to the whole partnership capital or whole number of shares. Each member of a mining partnership has a lien on the partnership property for the debts due the creditors thereof, and by money advanced by him for its use. This lien exists, notwithstanding there is an agreement among the partners that it must not. The mining ground owned and worked by partners in mining, whether purchased with partnership funds or not, is partnership property. One of the partners in a mining partnership may convey his interest in the mine and business without dissolving the partnership. The purchaser, from the date of his purchase, becomes a member of the partnership. A purchaser of an interest in the mining ground of a mining partnership takes it subject to the liens existing in favor of the partners for debts due all creditors thereof, or advances made for the benefit of the partnership, unless he purchased in good faith, for a valuable consideration, without notice of such lien. A purchaser of the interest of a partner in a mine when the partnership is engaged in working it, takes notice of all liens relating from the relation of the partners to each other and to the creditors of the partnership. No member of a mining partnership or other agent or manager thereof can, by a contract in writing, bind the partnership, except by express authority derived from the members thereof. The decision of the members owning a majority of the shares or interests in a mining partnership binds it in the conduct of its business."

Joint Stock Companies in Wisconsin.—The Joint Stock Companies act of Wisconsin, Revised Statutes of 1878, §§ 3210, et seq., provides inter alia, as follows: "Any joint stock company heretofore formed under the laws of this State, consisting of seven or more shareholders or associates, may sue, and shall be sued, in the name of the president thereof for the time being, and all actions or proceedings so prosecuted by or against any such company, and the service of all process in such actions and proceedings on such president shall have the same force and effect as regards the joint rights, property and effects of such company, as if such actions and proceedings were prosecuted in the names of all the shareholders or associates. If such president cannot be found within the State, then all process in such actions or proceedings may be served personally on any authorized agent of such company within this State with like effect as if served upon such president. No action or proceeding so commenced shall abate by reason of the death, removal or resignation of such president, or the death or legal incapacity of any shareholder or associate during the pendency thereof; but the same may be continued by the successor of such president, or against such successor, if there be one, and if not, in the name of the president against whom the action or proceeding was commenced. If judgment shall be recovered in any such action or proceeding against any such company, the execution issued thereon shall be satisfied out of the property of such company or that which is owned jointly or in common by all the shareholders or associates; and if such execution be returned unsatisfied in whole or in part, actions may be brought against any or all the shareholders or associates individually, but no more than one action shall be brought against such stockholders or associates, at any one time, nor until the same shall have been determined, and execution issued thereon returned unsatisfied in whole or in part. The death, removal, resignation of officers, or shareholders, or sale or transfer of stock, shall not work a dissolution of any such joint stock company or association as against the parties suing or being sued as herein provided, or as

III. POWERS, RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF MEMBERS—1. As to the Public.—Unless the liability of members is limited by statute, every member is liable individually for all the debts of the company, and his liability begins as soon as he has signed the articles of association.¹

against any creditor or person having any demand against such joint stock company or association at the time of such death, removal, resignation, sale or transfer." See First National Bank v. Goff, 31 Wis. 77.

1. Every member of an unincorporated joint stock company is personally liable for all of its debts. Frost v. Walker, 60 Me 468; Pipe v. Bateman, 1 Iowa 369; Tappan v. Bailey, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 529; Lewis v. Tilton, 64 Iowa 220.

If a person contracts with a company doing business under articles of association which provide among other things for the incorporation of the company, and which incorporation is afterwards affected, but the style and general organization of the company continues the same, the responsibility of the company as partners is not changed by the act of incorporation, unless the express consent of the party who contracted with it be given, even though the act of incorporation declares that all contracts made with the association shall be as obligatory on the same, and on the parties thereto, as if they had been made subsequently to the act of incorporation, and that it shall be lawful for the corporation and the parties to maintain actions to enforce the performance thereof as fully and effectually as if the same had been made by or with the corporation. Wilmer v. Schlatter, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 359.

An application for shares and payment of the first deposit does not constitute one a partner, or member, where he had not interfered in the concern. He must act as a member or director, attend meetings, etc., or otherwise give himself out as member to make himself liable legally as a member. Hedge's Appeal, 63 Pa. 273.

A party who has subscribed the amount required by the articles of association will be liable though he has not signed such articles. Tyrrell v. Washburn, 6 Allen (Mass.) 466; Frost v. Walker, 60 Me. 468. See also Butterfield v. Beardsley, 28 Mich. 412.

Seventy-five persons agreed in writing to form an association or company for the purpose of establishing a scientific journal. They appointed three of their number as managers for the first year, authorizing them to establish and conduct the paper for the benefit of the stockholders, as they called themselves, when sufficient capital should be paid in or secured. They also, at the same time, directed that a meeting of the stockholders should be called, when the first number should issue, to make such regulations and by-laws as should be necessary for the government of the association. They were not incorporated under any general or special act of the legislature. Two of the members, when they thought a sufficient amount was subscribed to justify them in commencing the publication of the journal, sent a person to New York to purchase a printing press and other necessary materials. Suit being brought to recover the price of the articles so purchased, it was held that the persons signing the agreement or articles of association were liable, as partners, for the amount of the debt thus incurred; that the associates were bound by the acts of the two managers who contracted the debt, although it did not appear that the third manager conferred and acted with them. Wells v. Gates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 554.

If a member of a mining company sells his interest in the mine, the purchaser takes it subject to any lien existing in favor of a copartner for debts due the creditors, or advances made for the uses of the concern, unless he becomes a purchaser in good faith for a valuable consideration, without notice of such lien. Duryea v. Burt, 28 Cal. 569.

In unincorporated companies, it is only necessary that a person should subscribe the articles of association, to entitle him to the rights, or make him subject to the liabilities of a proprietor. Dennis v. Kennedy, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 517.

The members of a voluntary association, organized for educational purposes, employing a teacher are personally liable for her wages, in the absence of any agreement in the contract to the contrary. Heath v. Goslin, 80 Mo. 310; Lewis v. Tilton, 64 Iowa 220.

2. As Between Themselves.—As between members of joint stock companies, apart from special agreement, the general law of partnership prevails. Thus one member cannot maintain an action against his fellow members for a debt due to him by the company; nor can a member claim compensation for special services rendered by him to the company where there was no express agreement that he should be paid for them.¹

Persons associated for the purpose of carrying on a co-operative union store are liable as partners. Manning v. Gasharie, 27 Ind. 399; Henry v. Jackson, 37 Vt. 431. See also Davison v. Holden, 10 Atl. Rep. 515; Farnum v. Patch, 60 N. H. 294.

The liability of individual members of an unincorporated joint stock company formed in Canada, must be judged by the laws of Canada, where the association was formed and the business conducted, but a bill of exchange drawn by it may be governed by the laws of the place where the bill is made payable. Cutler v. Thomas, 25 Vt. 73.

A complaint alleging that defendants, as members of a voluntary unincorporated religious society, through their trustees and priests, who governed the members in secular affairs, and had power to incur debts for the association, which became the joint and several indebtedness of its members, stated an account with plaintiff's assignor, and agreed to pay him the balance found to be due him for his salary as priest and for money advanced for building the church and paying old debts, does not seek to hold defendants as a partnership, but states a valid cause of action against them individually upon an indebtedness incurred by them through their authorized agents. Sheehy v. Blake, 72 Wis. 411.

1. Where there is nothing in the constitution of a joint stock company which regulates the remedies of the shareholders, as between themselves, the general law of partnership must govern them. Bullard v. Kinney, 10 Cal. 60; Robbins v. Butler, 24 Ill. 387; Moore v. Brink, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 402. See also Wilson v. Curzon, 15 Mees. & W. 532; Perring v. Hone, 4 Bing. 28; Holmes v. Higgins, 1 B. & C. 74; Crater v. Benninger, 45 N. Y. 545.

A mechanics' lien filed by a member of an unincorporated association for mutual benevolence among its members is not available as against the liens of others not members. Babb v. Reed, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 151.

One member of an unincorporated association cannot maintain an action against the others for a debt due from the whole. Bailey v. Bancker, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 188.

Where the articles of association provide for the admission of new members, persons subsequently admitted will not be liable for debts incurred before they became members. Lake v. Munford, 12 Miss. 312.

A joint stock company formed for the purpose of trading in land is an ordinary partnership, and where one of the members of such association takes upon himself to perform special labor for the company without stipulating for compensation, he comes within the principle that in the absence of an agreement between partners, neither is entitled to compensation for services performed in furtherance of the partnership interests. In re Account of Fry, treasurer of North Branch etc. Coal Co., 4 Phila. (Pa.) 129. A member, however, may recover for services rendered before he became a member. Lucas v. Beech, 1 Man. & G. 417.

Where the articles of association of a private joint stock company provide that upon a stockholder's default in payment of assessments, all his shares, rights and interest in the company and its property shall be forfeited, the trustees are not authorized by a naked declaration to make a forfeiture against which a court of equity will not grant relief. Where the articles of agreement do not provide an express mode in which stock is to be forfeited, it seems a valid foreclosure cannot be made without the decree of a court of equity. Walker v. Ogden, 1 Bissell (U. S.) 287.

The rights and privileges of a stockholder and of assignees of interests, depend upon the articles of agreement and the by-laws. Stimson v. Lewis, 36 Vt. 91; Alvord v. Smith, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 232; Fox v. Clifton, 9 Bing. 115; Henry v. Jackson, 37 Vt. 431; Ness v. Angas, 3 Ex. Ch. 805; Kingman v. Spurr, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 235;

IV. THE OFFICERS—1. Responsibility of the Company for Their Acts.—The officers of a joint stock company have the same power, when acting within the scope of their authority, to bind the company and all the associates which an ordinary partner has to bind the partnership.¹

Cochran v. Perry, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 262. See also Ex parte Wood, 17 E. L. & Eq. 236.

In an unincorporated joint stock company each individual shareholder has a direct proprietary interest in each and every individual part of the company's assets. Kellogg Bridge Co. v. U. S., 15 Court of Cl. Rep. 111.

Where the members of a voluntary association contribute a fund for furnishing a lodge room, a minority cannot maintain a suit in equity to compel a majority to purchase their interests or submit to a removal or sale of the furniture. Robbins v. Waldo Lodge, 78 Me. 565.

Members who at any time without fraud withdraw from a trading association are thereafter, as among themselves, relieved from liability for debts. Tyrrell v. Washburn, 6 Allen (Mass.) 466.

Where it was agreed by the articles of association of a joint stock company that the property should be vested in trustees thereafter to be elected, and that the subscribers should pay their respective subscription to such trustees, an action to recover the amount subscribed may be brought in the name of the trustees. Cross v. Jackson, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 478. See Ewing v. Medlock, 5 Porter (Ala.) 82.

Where upon settlement between the members of an association, a member was allowed credit for a certain demand against the association assumed by him, he will be liable for payment of this claim, and an action may be brought directly against him by the claimant. Secor v. Lord, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 525. See also Wright v. Putnam, 2 Thomp. & Cook. (N. Y.) 455.

The sum advanced by one of the original members of an association to pay dividends cannot be recovered by his representatives so long as the funds of the company were insufficient to pay the annual dividends guaranteed by him and his associates. Moss' Appeal, 43 Pa. St. 23.

In a statement of account between a stock company consisting of nine members, it appearing that some of the associates had contributed more than their share, it was ordered that each of the associates recover from each other the one-ninth part of the amount paid by him, less the one-ninth part of the amount paid by the associate against whom such judgment was recovered. Morrissey v. Weed, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 491.

Where the laws governing a voluntary unincorporated association provide a remedy within the association for any offence committed by its officers, no misfeasance on the part of the officers will authorize a part of the members of the association to secede for the purpose of expelling its regularly elected officers. McCallion v. Hibernia Society, 70 Cal. 163.

Title to Real Estate.—A deed of land to a voluntary unincorporated association, which is well known and the members may be ascertained, but which is not authorized to hold real estate under the statute, may be construed as a grant to those who are properly described by the title used in the deed, who will hold as tenants in common. Byam v. Bickford, 140 Mass. 31; see also Bartlet v. King, 12 Mass. 537; Hamblett v. Bennett, 6 Allen (Mass.) 140.

Where land is conveyed to persons forming a mining company without naming all of them, the court may enquire and determine what persons composed the association at the date of the deed, and the interest to which each would be entitled in the land. Pratt v. California Mining Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 860.

The New York act of 1867, ch. 289, as to joint stock companies, may be construed as a restraint upon the right of a joint stock association to purchase and hold the real estate not needed for their immediate use. If this statute be violated, it is the province of the state to see to its enforcement. Howell v. Earp, 21 Hun. (N. Y.) 393; Rainey v. Laing, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 453.

1. Van Aernam v. Bleistein, 102 N. Y. 355; Bodwell v. Eastman, 106 Mass. 525.

Where the trustees for the stockholders of a company permitted stock to be transferred on the books of the associa-

2. Responsibility of the Officers to the Company.—The directors and officers of an unincorporated joint stock association are not liable to the company for mere errors of judgment.¹ They stand in the relation of trustees to the stockholders, and cannot take advantage of their official position to make any profit for themselves.²

V. SUITS BY OR AGAINST JOINT STOCK COMPANIES—1. In Local Jurisdiction.—Joint stock companies, which are not organized under a local statute, are mere partnerships, and suits by or against them must be brought in the names of the individual members.³

tion to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice, by a person not having authority to make the transfer, the loss in case of a contest must be borne by the stockholders and not by the innocent purchaser. Cohn v. Gwynn, 4 Md. Ch. 357.

The articles of an association provided that contracts involving liabilities for the payment of money should be signed by three managers. Held, that an order by a creditor for the payment to another of money to come due to the creditor, accepted by the secretary, would bind the company. French Spiral Spring Co. v. New Eng. Car Trust, 32 Fed. Rep. 44.

1. Addam's Appeal, 15 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.) 230; Henry v. Jackson, 37 Vt. 431.

But they are not entitled to credit in their accounts for expenditures not authorized by the powers under which they acted. McKinley v. Irvine, 13 Ala. 681; Crum's Appeal, 66 Pa. St. 474.

Neither opposition to the authority under which officers of an association act in the performance of their functions, nor irregularity in such performance will authorize members of the association to secede for the purpose of expelling such officers who were regularly elected, and declaring the offices vacant, constituting themselves as their successors in office. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. etc. Soc., 70 Cal. 163.

2. In re Fry, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 129.

3. Unincorporated voluntary associations, except for charitable purposes, whatever may be the number of their members, and of whatever nature or extent the object undertaken, are nothing more than partnerships; and when suit is brought in their behalf, it must be brought in the name of all the partners, or in the name of one or more for the use of all. Pipe v. Bateman, 1 Iowa 369. See also Neven v. Specker- man, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 401; Birmingham v. Gallagher, 112 Mass. 190; Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 531.

If the directors of an unincorporated association have bound the association by a contract, all the members are bound by and liable for it. The suit in such a case should be against all the members, but if it is against only a portion of them, it is maintainable, unless they plead in abatement the non-joinder of their associates. McGreary v. Chandler, 58 Me. 537; Chick v. Trevett, 20 Me. 462; Kingsland v. Braisted, 2 Lansing (N. Y.) 17.

In an action upon a promissory note by one member "for the benefit of the National Fund Life Assurance Society" the complaint set forth that he was specially authorized to bring the suit for and on behalf of the society. Upon demurrer the court held, "The promissory note upon which the suit is founded is stated to have been given for account of the National Fund Life Assurance Society, and the complaint avers that this society is not incorporated; but it by no means follows that its individual members have therefore a right to maintain an action in their own names, and for their own benefit, upon every security given to the society, or to third persons for account of the society. Their right to do so must depend upon the nature of the association, the terms and conditions of the agreement by which its members are united. Although the society is not incorporated, its members are not necessarily either partners or joint owners. They may have only an equitable, and that only an eventual and contingent, interest in the property and funds of the society, and to permit them to appropriate these to their own immediate use, by a recovery in their own names, or by one in behalf of others, might be to aid them in deceiving the public, and defrauding credit-

Where such companies are organized under local statutes, it is usually provided by law that the company shall sue or be sued in its own name, or in the name of one of its officers.¹

ors. The society in question may be, and not improbably is, a joint stock company, organized as such under a general or special act of parliament, and if so, it is very doubtful whether it would not be treated as a corporation in our own courts, and still more so, whether the right to institute a suit on behalf of the society would not be limited to those to whom it may be exclusively given by the terms of the articles of agreement, or act of parliament, under which the society is organized. At any rate, these observations show not only the propriety, but necessity, of requiring that the contract or agreement by which the members are formed into and united as a society, shall be set forth in the complaint, as the only means of enabling the court to determine whether they have a legal title to maintain the suit. It is true, the complaint avers that the plaintiff is specially authorized to bring the suit for and on behalf of the society; but whether he has such an authority as can enable him to bring the suit in his own name is a question of law, which can only be determined when the nature and terms of his authority shall be set forth." Habich v. Pemberton, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 657.

In an action brought under the New York act of 1849, by an officer of a joint stock company, the allegation that the company is a joint stock company or association, consisting of more than seven shareholders or associates, is a material and issuable allegation. Tiffany v. Williams, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 204; see also Machinists' Bank v. Dean, 124 Mass. 81.

In proceedings against the individual members of a joint stock company in New York to fix them with liability for the debts of the association, it was held that the judgment recovered in the action brought by the plaintiff against Smith, as president of the joint stock association, does not preclude the defendants from contesting their liability for the debts of the association. Such a suit was necessary, in the first instance, by the express terms of the statute, before the present action could be maintained. But the judgment in it was only so far effective as to reach the property owned by the association itself. When that failed to secure satisfaction of the debt, then an action against the associates directly was proper, to enforce the payment of the debt out of their own individual property. At most, the judgment against the president of the association could be no more than prima facie evidence in the plaintiff's favor. Allen v. Clark, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 563.

No action can be brought against the individual partners upon any demand against the company, until one has been first brought against the company upon the same demand, is the clear declaration of the statute. The cause of action, therefore, on which the individual partners are to be sued, is the same as that on which the association was sued. The judgment against the association is not a judgment against the individuals, either in form or effect. It is a statutory judgment, and the statute declares what its effect shall be, that is, as regards the joint rights, property and effects of the joint stock company, the same as though it were a judgment obtained in an action brought against the company in the ordinary way. As against the individual partners it has no force as a judgment beyond the effect given it by the statute, and is not a substantive cause of action against them. Witherhead v. Allen, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 562.

Although the articles of association provide that all contracts with the company shall be in writing and shall be executed on behalf of the company by the president and treasurer, a person dealing with the association will still have a right to bring an action against all the associates upon a quantum meruit. Sullivan v. Campbell, 2 Hall (N. Y.) 271.

No action can be maintained by the treasurer of an unincorporated association upon a promise to pay a subscription, the same being payable to the treasurer only. Ewing v. Medlock, 5 Porter (Ala.) 82.

1. Actions Against Joint Stock Companies in New York.—Since the passage of the acts of 1849 and 1851 in the State of New York, an action may be maintained against the president or treasurer of an unincorporated association by the members thereof. Sander v. Edling, 13 Daly (N. Y.) 238; Wescott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 542; Waterbury v. Merchants' Union Express Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 157; Saltsman v. Shults, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 256; Brindenbeker v. Hoard, 32 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 289; Simonson v. Spencer, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 548; De Witt v. Chandler, 11 Abb. Pr. Rep. (N. Y.) 459; Oley v. Brown, 51 Howe. Pr. (N. Y.) 92.

Where it is alleged in a complaint that the defendant was a joint stock company or association duly formed and organized and then existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, but the number of associates is not stated, a stipulation signed by defendant's attorneys whereby it was admitted for the purposes of trial that the company was a joint stock association as alleged in the complaint and the defendant was its president, is a sufficient admission that the company consisted of the requisite number of members. Van Aernam v. Bleistein, 102 N. Y. 355. It is sufficient if the complaint avers that the association consists of seven associates and upwards. Tibbetts v. Blood, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 650.

An action for libel published by its authority may be maintained against a joint stock company in the name of its president. Van Aernam v. Bleistein, 102 N. Y. 355; Van Aernam v. McCune, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 316.

When the statute provides that joint stock companies may sue and be sued in the name of their president or treasurer, for this purpose the officer is regarded as a corporation sole; he is a representative of the company, distinguished from the individuals composing it, and a suit may be brought against him by other shareholders in the company. Maltz v. The American Express Co., 1 Flippin (U. S. C. C.) 611; Wescott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 542; Cross v. Jackson, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 478; Fargo v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 6 Fed. Rep. 787; Baltimore and Ohio R. Co. v. Adams Express Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 404.

The New York Code of Civil Procedure provides that an action may be maintained by the president of an unincorporated association, consisting of seven or more "persons" (§ 1919). The complaint in an action so brought averred that the association was composed of seven "members" and upward. Held, that the complaint did not place the qualifications of the members upon the fact that they were not natural persons, or legal persons, so that their legal capacity to sue could be questioned by demurrers; and, therefore, defendant had the right to aver in the answer the existence of facts which, if proved, would show that the association was not empowered to sue under the section. Such answer makes an issue of fact, and is not virtually a demurrer. Ruhl v. Ware, 22 N. Y. St. Rep. 423.

An averment in a bill in equity, filed in the United States circuit court of Pennsylvania, that the complainants "are a joint stock association, composed of more than seven shareholders, formed July 1st, 1854, in the State of New York, by certain written articles, a copy whereof is hereto annexed, marked A, and then duly executed by the parties thereto, under the laws of the State of New York, and having the legal entity, powers and immunities in said laws, provided," is no authoritative warrant for the presumption that the complainants are citizens of another State than the State of Pennsylvania. It does not import that they are a corporation of another State, nor that the members of the association are citizens of another State. Dinsmore v. Phila. & Reading R. Co., (U. S. C. C.) 11 Phila. (Pa.) 483.

Where an association becomes incorporated, and the incorporation accepts an assignment of all the property of the association, for the purpose of carrying out their object, they are primarily liable for their debts. Hazlett v. Wotherspoon, 1 Strob. (S. E.) Eq. 209.

A joint stock association is liable in trespass for removing coal, under an act imposing a penalty therefor upon "any person or corporation." Oak Ridge Coal Co. v. Rogers, 108 Pa. St. 147.

Suit by Members Against the Company.—In suits between a shareholder and the joint stock association to which he belongs, the analogies afforded by laws and jurisprudence in the case of corporations must be followed, instead of those derived from the law of simple partnership. Waterbury v. Merchants' Union Express Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 157; Fargo v. McVicker, 55 Barb. 437.

The court will not appoint a receiver for an unincorporated joint stock company, to sell the property and divide the proceeds among the members, on a bill brought by a minority of the company, in absence of equity sufficient to require

2. In Foreign Jurisdiction.—A joint stock company, if a mere voluntary association, and not organized under a local statute, is everywhere regarded as a mere partnership.¹ If, however, the company has been organized under a local statute, it may be regarded as a quasi corporation, and in some of the States such a company is recognized as having the essential attributes of a corporation.²

it. Hinkley v. Blethew, 78 Me. 221.

1. While acts of the English parliament, conferring privileges upon a joint stock company, may expressly declare that they shall not be held to constitute the body a corporation, yet, whatever may be the effect of such declaration in the courts of that country, it cannot alter the essential nature of a corporation or prevent the courts of another jurisdiction from enquiring into its true character whenever that comes into issue. The local policy of England, with respect to joint stock companies, can have no place here in determining whether an association, whose powers are ascertained and its privileges conferred by law, is an incorporated body. A joint stock company, in attempting to carry on its business in a manner which requires corporate powers under legislative sanction, cannot claim, in a jurisdiction foreign to the one which gave those powers, that it is only a partnership of individuals. Liverpool and London Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 566.

The original organization of a voluntary association, in the State of New York, which prescribes and defines its own powers, manifestly to be exercised in other States as well as in it, does not denote that State as its permanent and exclusive domicile. Such a body is not a judicial person, the averment of whose existence and of the place of its original formation however full, would furnish the basis of a conclusive presumption as to the citizenship of its constituent members. Dinsmore v. Phila. & Reading R. Co., (U. S.) 11 Phila. (Pa.) 483.

An action upon contract was brought in a Massachusetts court against A, B and C, "doing business at Boston, as a partnership or joint stock association, under the name and style of the 'Adams Express Company.'" The supreme court held that "the statutes of that State [New York], it is true, provide, in relation to actions against such companies, that suits shall be prosecuted, in the first instance, against the officers of the association only. But the common law liability of the individual members or stockholders as partners, after a judgment had against the company, which remains unsatisfied, is not removed; the statutes themselves expressly declaring that nothing therein contained shall be construed as conferring the rights or privileges of corporations, except as specified. By a familiar rule, the laws of another State, which have reference solely to the mode of pursuing a remedy, are not binding here, and the personal liability of the individual partners may be enforced according to the laws of this commonwealth. No objection by way of plea in abatement is raised in the answer, on account of the nonjoinder of the other members of the company." Gott v. Dinsmore, 111 Mass. 45; Taft v. Ward, 106 Mass. 518. See also Allen v. Sewall, 2 Wend (N. Y.) 327; Tappan v. Bailey, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 529; Bodwell v. Eastman, 106 Mass. 525; Boston and Albany R. Co. v. Pearson, 128 Mass. 445.

2. "Whether a corporation or not, a joint stock association is a distinct legal entity, and so long as this fact exists, and it possesses the attributes of perpetual succession, and the capacity of suing and being sued, it is a judicial person, a proper party in this court, and must be regarded as a citizen of the State which created it. I deem it wholly immaterial whether it be termed a corporation, joint stock association or guild." Maltz v. American Express Co., 1 Flippin (U. S. C. C.) 611. See also Fargo v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 6 Fed. Rep. 787; Fargo v. McVicker, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 437.

It seems to comport with reason, that when an association of persons assume a name, which implies a corporate body, and exercise corporate powers, they should not be heard to deny that they are a corporation. When they do act and contract they are estopped from denying their corporate liability. United States Express Co. v. Bedbury, 34 Ill. 459; Clarkson v. Erie and North Shore Despatch, 6 Bradw. (Ill.) 284. See also

VI. TRANSFER OF SHARES.—A stockholder may transfer his shares, but the transferee does not thereby become a member of the association without the consent of the other members;¹ nor does the transfer work a dissolution of the company.²

VII. DISSOLUTION—1. By Mutual Consent.—As in the case of partnerships, joint stock companies may dissolve by the mutual consent of their members.³

2. By Equitable Proceeding.—They may also be dissolved by the decree of a court of equity.⁴

Deems v. Albany Canal Line, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 474.

1. Transfer of Shares.—A stockholder may transfer his interest in any way that would be effectual at common law, whether in accordance with the rules of the association or not; but the transferee in such a case will not be a partner or associate, nor can he enforce a right to be recognized as such. Alvord v. Smith, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 232; Fox v. Clifton, 6 Bing. 726; Kingman v. Spurr, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 235; Harper v. Raymond, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 29; Marquand v. N. Y. Manufacturing Co., 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 525; Bray v. Fremont, 6 Madd. (Eng. Ch.) 5; Moddewell v. Keever, 8 Watts & Serg. (Pa.) 63. See Nicoll v. Mumford, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 522.

Upon a sale by a member of his interest in a joint stock association, and delivery of the certificate and power of attorney to transfer, the title passes to the purchaser as against creditors of the transferor, without regard to the fact that by a rule of the company the stock is transferable only on the books and in a particular manner. Tide Water Pipe Co. v. Kitchenman, 108 Pa. St. 630.

Where by the articles of association of a company it was provided that any holder of shares should have a right to sell his stock, but before doing so he should offer the same and give it the refusal for ten days, and that no "purchaser shall acquire any interest whatever in the profits of said papers till he shall receive a certificate or scrip for his said shares signed by all the parties hereto, and duly registered in a book to be kept for that purpose," which scrip should certify that the holder was "entitled to participate in proportion to his shares, only in that portion of the profits which may be assigned to the party selling to such purchaser, and shall not be entitled to any voice or agency whatever in the conduct, control, management or affairs of said company or of said newspapers:" it was held that a person who had bought shares in the association from a prior registered purchaser, was as between him and his vendor the owner thereof and entitled to profits declared while he was such owner, although such stock had not been offered to the association before it was bought by him. Harper v. Raymond, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 29.

2. Tenney v. Protective Union, 37 Vt. 64; Tyrrell v. Washburn, 6 Allen (Mass.) 466; Jones v. Clark, 42 Cal. 180; Taylor v. Castle, 42 Cal. 367.

3. The articles of association provided that within six years from the date thereof, the trustees should proceed to close the concerns of the association, and to that end should cause all effects and securities held by them or the association, to be collected or converted into money as fast as practicable, and should from time to time declare and pay to the shareholders dividends on the capital stock, until all the property and effects of the association should be divided among the shareholders. It was held that while it might not be for the interest of all the shareholders, or even a majority of them, to have the property and effects of the association converted into money and distributed at the time specified in the articles of association, yet, if any of the shareholders desired to have it done for their benefit they had a right to insist that the written contract should be carried into effect, according to its spirit and intent, without any unreasonable delay. Mann v. Butler, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 362. See also Penfield v. Skinner, 11 Vt. 296; Lake v. Munford, 12 Miss. 312.

4. A joint stock company was formed in New York for the purpose of carrying on business in California. The articles of association provided that the company was to continue business from January 1st, 1849, to October 1st, 1853, and contained a prohibition against dissolution within one year after the arrival of the company in California. It was held, on application for dissolution, that a portion of the company could not, contrary to the articles of association, dissolve the company at their will and pleasure; but, it being found impracticable to keep the company together, or to continue the business successfully under the articles, the court could decree a dissolution and the distribution of the effects of the company. Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 55.

3. Acts Amounting to Dissolution.—Abandonment of business and organization and sale of the property may also amount to a dissolution.¹

When the object and purposes of a voluntary association have been abandoned by general consent of the members, a decree of dissolution and distribution of the funds on hand among the contributors will be granted, upon proper showing, by a court of equity. Burke v. Roper, 72 Ala. 138.

The dissolution of a limited partnership association, five years prior to the bringing of a suit against it, is a good defence to the action, and it is no answer to say that one month before the bringing of the suit the court rescinded its final order of dissolution, unless special circumstances are shown warranting such rescission. Billington v. Gautier Steel Co., 9 Atl. Rep. 35.

1. When the organization of an association is abandoned, it ceases to exist, and whatever authority its trustees had ceased with it, as it could not continue beyond the life of the body that conferred it. It is like the death of a natural person, which revokes all authority given to his agent that is not coupled with an interest. The same is true of the death or dissolution of a corporation, and the reason is that there is no master to serve. Hewett v. Hatch, 57 Vt. 16; Allen v. Clark, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 563; Heath v. Sansom, 4 Barn. & Ad. 175; Grosvenor v. Lloyd, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 19.

Upon the dissolution of a joint stock company, it is the duty of the trustees to convert the assets into money, and distribute the proceeds among the stock holders. They have no right to exchange the assets, or any portion thereof, of the old association for the corporate stock of any corporation without the consent of all the stock holders. A stock holder not consenting to such exchange may recover the value of his stock so wrongfully disposed of. Frothingham v. Barney, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 366; Mann v. Butler, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 362.

The articles of agreement between members of an unincorporated company for the regulation of their business provided that the capital stock should be divided into shares, that the shares should be transferable, and that trustees should be appointed to manage the affairs and that all the property should be vested in such trustees. In accordance with these articles, trustees were appointed who bought real and personal estate and conducted the business of the association. By transferred shares from time to time, twenty-nine fortieths of them became vested in one man. On a sale by him, not of his shares, but of twenty-nine fortieths of all the land and property of the company, it was held that the association was dissolved, and that the parties who held shares at the time of such dissolution were entitled, in proportion to the number of their shares, to all the assets of the company, and liable to contribute to the debts of the company in the same proportion. Smith v. Virgin, 33 Me. 148.

A partnership was formed under a declaration of trust, by which it was provided, among other things, as follows: "The decease of a member of the association shall not work a dissolution of it, nor shall it entitle his legal representatives to an account, or to take any action in the courts or otherwise, against the association or the trustee, for such; but they shall simply succeed to the rights of the deceased to the certificate and the shares it represents, subject to this declaration of trust." Held, that a deceased share holder's estate was liable to contribute to the other partners for the payment of debts incurred after his decease, and before his executor had done any act by which he assumed the decedent's place in the association. Phillips v. Blatchford, 137 Mass. 510; Alvord v. Smith, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 232.

Where the articles of association of a joint stock company prohibited the merger of the company with any other organization without the authority of a majority of the stock holders, but it was also provided that the articles might be

JOINT TENANTS (And Tenants in Common)—(See CHATTELS; ESTATES; LEGACY AND DEVISE; WILLS).

- I. Definition, 1057.
 1. Joint Tenants, 1058.
 2. Tenants in Common, 1058.
- II. Creation of Tenancy, 1059.
 1. Joint Tenancy, 1059.
 - (a) What Words Create Joint Tenancy, 1059.
 - (b) In Personal, 1061.
 - (c) Conveyances to Trustees, [1062.]
 - (d) Disseisin, 1062. [1062.]
 2. Tenancies in Common, 1062.
 - (a) By Purchase, 1062.
 - (b) Conveyance of Undivided Parts, 1066.
 - (c) Other Modes, 1066.
- III. What May be Held in Common, 1068.
- IV. Who Are Joint Tenants and Tenants in Common, 1069.
 1. Joint Tenants, 1069.
 2. Tenants in Common, 1070.
- V. Nature and Incidents, 1076.
 1. Joint Tenancy, 1076.
 - (a) Survivorship, 1077.
 - (b) Entry and Possession of One for Benefit of All, 1078.
 2. Tenancy in Common, 1079.
 - (a) Purchase of Outstanding Title, 1082.
 - (b) Equality of Shares, 1086.
 3. Dower in Joint and Common Property, 1087.
- VI. Rights and Powers, 1087.
 1. To Occupy and Enjoy, 1087.
 2. Disposition of the Common Property, 1090.
 - (a) Conveyances of the Whole, 1090.
 - (b) Conveyance of Undivided Share, 1092.
 - (c) Conveyance by One of Specific Part, 1092.
- (d) Leasing the Common Property, 1094.
- (e) Licensing Acts Upon the Common Property, 1095.
3. Agreements Concerning the Common Property, 1095.
4. Other Rights and Powers, 1097.
- VII. Duties and Liabilities, 1098.
 1. As to Rents and Profits, 1098.
 2. As to Repairs and Improvements, 1104. [1107.]
 3. Sharing Burdens and Losses, 1109.
 4. As to Taxes and Encumbrances, 1109.
 5. As to Purchase Money, Care and Management, 1111.
- VIII. Adverse Possession and the Statute of Limitation, 1112.
 1. What Constitutes Adverse Possession, 1112.
 2. Ouster and Disseisin, 1113.
 - (a) What Constitutes Disseisin or Ouster, 1114.
 - (b) As to Personal Property, 1118.
 - (c) Proving Ouster, 1119.
 - (d) Effect of Ouster, 1119.
 3. Title by Adverse Possession, 1120.
- IX. Actions Between Cotenants, 1122.
 1. Actions at Law, 1122. [1122.]
 - (a) Procedure, 1130.
 2. Actions in Equity, 1130.
- X. Actions Between Tenants and Third Parties, 1135.
 1. Actions by Tenants, 1135.
 2. Actions Against Tenants, 1141.
- XI. Severance of the Relation, 1142.
 1. Severance by Agreement, 1143.
 2. By Acts of the Parties, 1143.
 3. By Action, 1144.

I. DEFINITION.—Joint tenants and tenants in common may be amended by a concurrent vote of two-thirds of the executive committee and a majority of the trustees, it was held that the authority to amend the articles of association did not take away from the stock holders the power to prohibit the merger with another company which they had expressly reserved. The authority to amend must be construed as intended for such amendments as were pertinent to the business and objects for which the association was organized. Blatchford v. Ross, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 42.

Authorities.—Lindley on Partnership (Wentworth's edition, 1888; Ewell's edition, 1888); Wait's Actions and Defences, vols. 4 and 5; Morawetz on Private Corporations (2nd ed.) *111; Central Law Journal, 81; Dos Passos on Stock Brokers and Stock Exchange; Bisbee and Simonds, Law of Produce Exchange; Taylor on Corporations (2nd ed. 1888); Abbott's General Digest of Corporations, 1869 and supplements; Addison on Contracts, vol. 2; 2 Lawson's Rights, Remedies and Practice, § 693.

defined to be two or more persons who have an estate in or a right to enjoy a subject of property, together, jointly or in common, both or all together having and exercising a single right or ownership, the right or estate of 'all being no greater or different from that which might be exercised or possessed by a single person holding in severalty, the whole uniting and forming one ownership.¹

1. Joint Tenants.—Joint tenants are two or more persons who, not being husband and wife, at the date of its acquisition, have any subject of property jointly between them in equal shares by purchase,² or by dissisin of the rightful owner to their own use,³ their interest being one and the same, having accrued by one and the same conveyance or act, having commenced at one and the same time, and being held by one and the same undivided possession.⁴

2. Tenants in Common.—Tenants in common are two or more persons who hold possession of any subject of property by several and distinct titles. The quantities of their estates need not be the same, their proportionate share of the property may be unequal, and the mode of acquiring these titles may be unlike. Either or all these may differ, the only unity required between them being that of possession.⁵

1. See 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.), 179; 1 Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 406; Wright v. Searles, 59 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 176.

Tenants in common altogether make but one party, and may exchange estates. Anon., Lofft (Eng.) 414.

2. Freem. Part., § 10. LITTLETON defines joint tenants as follows: "Joint tenants are as if a man be seised of certalne lands or tenements, etc., and infeoffeth two, three, four or more to have and to hold unto them for term of there lives, or for term of another's life, by force of which feoffment or lease they are seised, these are joyntenants." 3 Co. Lit., 180, a.

COKE, in his commentary on Littleton (book 3, 180 b), referring to the above, says: "There be also joyntenants by other conveyances than Littleton here mentioneth, as by fine, recovery, bargain and sale, release, confirmation, etc. So there be divers other limitations than Littleton here speaketh of; as if a rent charge of ten pounds be granted to A until he be married, and to B until he be advanced to a benefice, they be joyntenants in the meantime notwithstanding the several limitations, and if A die before marriage, the rent shall survive; but if A had married, the rent should have ceased for a moietie et sic e converso on the other side."

BLACKSTONE says (2 Black. Com., (Chase's ed.) 180), an estate in joint tenancy is where lands or tenements are granted to two or more persons, to hold in fee simple, fee tail, for life, for years, or at will.

American Definitions.—WASHBURN, in his work on Real Property (vol. 1 (5th ed.), page 406), says: "A joint tenancy is defined to be where several persons have any subject of property jointly between them, in equal shares, by purchase, each has the whole and every part with the benefit of survivorship unless the tenancy is severed."

And ABBOTT, in his "law dictionary," defines joint tenants to be persons who hold property which they acquired by purchase, at the same time, in virtue of the same title, interest and possession, and without anything to create a difference in their respective interests or possession.

3. 3 Co. Lit., 180 b.

4. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 180.

5. Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 415; Abb. L. Dict.; Bouv. L. Dict.

BLACKSTONE says: "Tenants in common are such as hold by several and distinct titles; but by unity of possession, because none knoweth his own severalty, and therefore they will oc-

II. CREATION OF TENANCY—1. Joint Tenancy.—The creation of an estate in joint tenancy depends upon the wording of the conveyance by which the tenants claim title, as such estate can only arise by purchase or act of the parties, and never by descent or act of law.¹

(a) What Words Create Joint Tenancy.—A conveyance to two or more and to their heirs and assigns, and to the heirs and assigns of the survivors of them forever, passes an estate in joint tenancy,² and a conveyance made to two or more as joint tenants and not as tenants in common creates a like estate.³ The common law rule seems to be that a devise or conveyance to one's wife with remainder over to one's children or other heirs creates a joint tenancy in such children or heirs,⁴ and a conveyance in mortgage to several persons in fee to secure the payment of a cupy promiscuously. This tenancy, therefore, happens where there is a unity of possession merely, but perhaps an entire disunion of interest of title and of time. For if there be two tenants in common of lands, one may hold his part in fee simple, the other in tail, or for life, so that there is no necessary unity of interest; one may hold by descent, the other by purchase; or the one by purchase from A, and the other by purchase from B; so that there is no unity of title; one's estate may have been vested fifty years, the other but yesterday; so there is no unity of time. The only unity there is is that of possession, and from this LITTLETON gives the true reason, because no man can certainly tell which part is his own: otherwise even this would be soon destroyed. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 191.

LITTLETON's definition is that "tenants in common are they which have lands or tenements in fee simple, fee tail or for terme of life, etc., and they have such lands or tenements by several titles, and not by a joynt title, and none of them know of this, his severall, but they ought by law to occupy these lands or tenements in common. Lit., § 292, and see 2 Cruise Dig. 399.

1. Broom & Had. Com. (Wait's ed.) 640.

2. Davidson v. Heydon, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 459.

3. Fladung v. Rose, 58 Md. 13.

4. Campbell v. Heron, 1 Tayl. (N. Car.) 199; Ive v. King, 16 Beav. (Eng.) 46; Hobgen v. Neale, 11 Eq. (Eng.) 48; and see Dott v. Willson, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 457.

A testator gave and bequeathed all his real and personal estate to his wife for the use and benefit of herself and all his children, whether born of his former wife or such as might be born of his then present wife. Held, that the wife was entitled to an estate for life, with remainder to the children as joint tenants. Nerrill v. Nerrill, 12 Eq. (Eng.) 432.

A gift in trust for all and every the child and children of A, and his, her and their executors, administrators and assigns, for his, and their own absolute use and benefit, held to create a joint tenancy. Morgan v. Butten, 13 Eq. (Eng.) 28.

Testator, by will, gave all his estate (which consisted wholly of personalty, or of real estate distributable as personalty) to his wife absolutely, "for the benefit of herself and children," and appointed her executrix of his will. The widow proved the will and died. During her lifetime one of the children, a daughter, married and died. Held, that the children took as joint tenants, and, semble, that the wife took only an estate for life. Held, further, that the daughter did not by her marriage sever the joint tenancy. Armstrong v. Armstrong, 7 Eq. (Eng.) 518.

Testator directed all her property at the death of A and B "to pass to my relatives in America." Held, that the class was to be ascertained at the death of the testatrix; and that all her next of kin in America then living were entitled as joint tenants. Eagles v. L. Breton, 15 Eq. (Eng.) 148.

A joint purchase by two, to them and their heirs, with equal payments, creates a joint tenancy, and there is therefore a survivorship between them. Aveling v. Knipe, 19 Ves. (Eng.) 441.

joint indebtedness creates a joint tenancy;¹ but upon a foreclosure of the mortgage and the absolute vesting of the estate in the mortgagees, they become tenants in common.² Usually any words in the conveyance or any circumstances which show an intention to vest a joint estate or to establish a survivorship will constitute a joint tenancy, the presumption being that a joint tenancy is intended unless a contrary intent appears.³

Joint tenants are not, however, favored in law or in equity; a joint tenancy will never be inferred when the testator meant division,⁴ and an estate will be considered a tenancy in common where it appears that the purchase was made for the purpose of making great improvements on the property, even though the deed, in form, creates a joint tenancy;⁵ and the legislatures of most of the United States have enacted laws directing that all conveyances to two or more persons shall be construed to pass estates in common, unless it shall manifestly appear from the exact words of the instruments that it was intended to create an estate in joint tenancy,⁶ and in such case the intention cannot be

1. Goodwin v. Richardson, 11 Mass. 469; Appleton v. Boyd, 7 Mass. 131, 134; Donnels v. Edwards, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 617.

2. Goodwin v. Richardson, 11 Mass. 469.

3. B F and his wife, "for the purpose of creating a joint tenancy in said B F and his wife in all their property," conveyed the same to L, who immediately reconveyed it to the husband and wife "as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common, the survivor of them and the heirs, personal representatives, and assigns of such survivor." On a creditor's bill seeking to subject the property of B to the payment of his debts, it was held that B F and wife became joint tenants of the property so conveyed to them, and the husband's interests therein was liable to be seized in execution, and sold by his creditors during the life of his wife. Fladung v. Rose, 58 Md. 13.

In Massachusetts a conveyance or devise to husband and wife creates a joint tenancy, and not a tenancy in common. Shaw v. Hearsey, 5 Mass. 521; Fox v. Fletcher, 8 Mass. 274; Varnum v. Abbot, 12 Mass. 474, 479; Draper v. Jackson, 16 Mass. 480.

A deed to two persons, and to the survivors of them, his heirs and assigns conveys an estate for life, and a contingent remainder in fee to the survivor, and neither can, during the life of the other, convey more than a moiety for life. Ewing v. Savary, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 235.

A farmer and his two sons obtained separate patents for 400 acres of land adjoining each other, and the father then obtained another patent for 400 acres. Afterwards the three took one inclusive patent for the whole tract, and another tract of 1162 acres. Held, that this destroyed the separate estates and created a joint tenancy in the whole 2762 acres. Jones v. Jones, 1 Call (Va.) 458.

A conveyance of an undivided interest in mining ground expressly conditioned to convey no other rights except a mining right, held, not to create any joint tenancy, tenancy in common, or coparcenery, but simply to convey the right to take ore or minerals from the land. Smith v. Cooley, 65 Cal. 46.

L conveyed land to N and P, in fee, provided they pay and discharge all the just debts of their grantor. Held, that this proviso created a condition, and not a trust; that therefore the grantees took as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and that the survivor of them could recover only half the premises in an action of ejectment. Lamb v. Clark, 29 Vt. 273.

4. Martin v. Smith, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 16.

5. Duncan v. Forrer, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 193.

6. Nicholson v. Caress, 45 Ind. 479. Massachusetts statutes, 1785, ch. 62, § 4, converts an estate, held in joint tenancy previously, into a tenancy in common, where the right of survivorship had not accrued, as the statute is retrospective. Annable v. Patch, 3 gathered from the circumstances attending the execution of the instrument, but must be actually expressed therein.¹

(b) In Personal Property.—A joint tenancy may also be created in personal property;² the general rule at common law would seem to be that unless something to the contrary is expressed in the instrument or by the act creating the tenancy, it will be construed as a joint tenancy rather than a tenancy in common;³ and

Pick. (Mass.) 360, 363; Miller v. Miller, 16 Mass. 59.

New Jersey statute, 1812, respecting joint tenancies and tenancies in common, does not apply to estates created before the passage of the statute. Berdan v. Van Riper, 16 N. J. L. (1 Har.) 7.

It is not sufficient that the words employed by parties would, but for statute 1822, ch. 162, be constructed to create a joint tenancy, unless the instrument expressly provides that the land shall be held in joint tenancy. Purdy v. Purdy, 3 Md. Ch. 547.

Code Mississippi, 1880, section 1197, "All conveyances or devises of lands made to husband and wife shall be construed to create estates in common, and not in joint tenancy or entirety, unless it appears from the tenor of the instrument that the intention was to create an estate in joint tenancy, with right to" survivorship, etc., has no retroactive effect. Gresham v. King, 4 So. Rep. (Miss.) 120.

In Vermont, a devise to two or more, without words to create a joint tenancy, is held a tenancy in common. Gillman v. Merrill, 8 Vt. 77.

Constitutionality of Such Laws.—A statute providing that all gifts, grants, etc., of lands which have been, or shall be, made to two or more, shall be taken to be estates in common, unless words are used showing clearly the intent to be that the grantees should take as joint tenants, is not unconstitutional, as its operation is to make the estate more valuable to the grantees. Haughabaugh v. Donald, 1 Treadw. (S. Car.) Const. 90; Miller v. Miller, 16 Mass. 59; Bambaugh v. Bambaugh, 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 191; Thornton v. Thornton, 3 Rand. (Va.) 188.

Grants of land, by the legislature, to two or more persons in fee, are to be construed as conveying to the grantees estates in common, unless a different tenure should be expressed in the grant. Higbee v. Rice, 5 Mass. 344.

The statutes of South Carolina relative to joint tenancy operate only where the interest is already vested and do not influence the creation of such a tenancy. Herbement v. Thomas, 1 Cheves (S. Car.) 21, 2nd part.

Under a devise of an estate "to my three daughters, Margaret, Elizabeth and Mary" (Mary's children to take their mother's share), held there was a tenancy in common between the two daughters and the children of the third, not a joint tenancy. Martin v. Smith, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 16.

1. Nicholson v. Caress, 45 Md. 479; Purdy v. Purdy, 3 Md. Ch. 547; Gresham v. King (Miss.) S. 120.

2. Dott v. Willson, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 457; Gilbert v. Richards, 7 Vt. 203; Lowe v. Miller, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 205.

3. In Vermont, a bequest or gift of personal property to two or more is prima facie a joint tenancy. Gilbert v. Richards, 7 Vt. 203.

In South Carolina, a devise of personal estate to a married daughter, and at her death "to the heirs of her body, and their heirs and assigns forever," constitutes a joint tenancy in the grandchildren of the devisor, who take as purchasers after the daughter's death. Dott v. Willson, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 457.

A depositor had his bank account changed into an account with him and his mother "order of either of them," she signing the signature book at the time. Afterwards speaking of the account and showing her the book, he said: "This is yours." He retained the pass book about a month, but on the day before his death sent it to his mother, with directions to tell her to keep it for him. Held, sufficient to create a joint tenancy in the fund, and that upon his death it vested in the mother as a survivor. Mack v. Mechanics etc. Savgs. Bank et al., 3 N. Y. S. 441.

Farming on Shares.—A, being in possession of land to which he had no title, but which he was authorized to rent out for his own benefit, made a written contract with B to let him the land for a year, upon the terms that A should find the tools to work the land, and the

it has been held that a legacy given to two or more persons will pass a joint tenancy unless the will contained words to show that the testator intended a severance of the interest, and to take away the right of survivorship;¹ but joint tenancy has been much reduced in extent in the United States, and the incident of survivorship almost entirely destroyed by statutes, except in case of trustees, executors and others, in whom such a tenancy is necessary for the execution of their trusts.²

(c) Conveyances to Trustees.—The laws limiting estates in joint tenancy to those expressly declared to be such in the instruments creating them, are usually held not to apply to conveyances to trustees,³ trust estates being usually considered joint.⁴ The courts inclining to hold trustees joint tenants rather than tenants in common, in order to avoid inconvenience in administering the trust.⁵

(d) Disseisin.—A joint tenancy may be created as well by disseisin as by deed or devise,⁶ and the right of one disseisor on his abandonment will not revert to the former owner, but will vest in the cotenant as if he had been sole disseisor.⁷

2. Tenancies in Common—(a) By Purchase.—Words in a deed or conveyance to two or more parties which direct or purport to direct a division, whether equal or otherwise, of the premises conveyed will be construed to pass a tenancy in common,⁸ and it seed to sow it, and B should board himself and family, work the crop, and when it was gathered give one-half of it to A. Held, that this was not to be considered a lease, rendering rent in kind, but that the contract constituted the parties joint tenants of the crop raised. Lowe v. Miller, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 205.

1. Campbell v. Campbell, 4 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 15, and see Putnam v. Putnam, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 308; Morgan v. Britten, L. R., 13 Eq. (Eng.) 28; Mayn v. Mayn, L. R., 5 Eq. 150; Crooke v. De Vandes, 9 Ves. (Eng.) 197; 2 Kent's Com. (13th ed.) 351.

2. See Perry on Trusts, § 136.

3. Boston etc. Co. v. Condit, 19 N. J. Eq. 394; and see 4 Kent's Com. (13th ed.) 361.

4. The assignment of a mortgage to two persons, as trustees of an unincorporated society, vests the title in them as joint tenants. Webster v. Vandeventer, 6 Gray (Mass.) 428.

Conveyance by deed to A, B and C in trust, for them "or other the trustees hereunder for the time being, to take charge and possession of said trust estate, and to hold the same for the sole use" of the cestuis, with power to them "or the survivors or survivor of them, or other the trustees or trustee hereunder for the time being, at any time and from time to time, in their or his discretion, and as soon as reasonably and profitably may be, to sell, let or lease the same," and in further trust for them "or the survivors or survivor of them, or other the trustees or trustee hereunder for the time being, to receive the proceeds of all sales or leases," to pay taxes, etc., "and the surplus to pay whenever and so often as it can conveniently be done to" the cestuis. Held, that A, B and C took as joint tenants. Franklin Inst. etc. v. The People's Savings Bank, 14 R. I. 632.

Contra, a conveyance to three grantees for specified trusts made the grantees tenants in common, under Massachusetts Stat. 1785, ch. 62, and if the grantees had been joint tenants, the conveyance, by one of his shares to a third person, would have been a severance of the joint tenancy. Robinson v. Codman, 1 Sum. (U. S.) 121.

5. Franklin Inst. etc. v. People's Savings Bank, 14 R. I. 632.

6. Putney v. Dresser, 2 Met. (Mass.) 583, 586; Ward v. Ward, 6 Ch. (Eng.) 789; 3 Co. Lit. 180 b.

7. Allen v. Holton, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 458; Bigelow v. Jones, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 61.

8. Briscoe v. McGee, 2 J. J. Marsh.

may be generally stated that in the United States, under the statutes of the several States, whenever two or more persons acquire the same estate by the same act, deed or devise, and there is no indication therein of a contrary intention, they will acquire a tenancy in common.¹ When a mortgage is given to two or more persons to secure debts due to them severally, they take as ten-(Ky.) 370; Goodtitle d. Hood v. Stokes, 1 Wils. (Eng.) 341.

A farm included in a testator's residuary devise to his wife and children to be divided among them according to law. Held, to pass to the wife and children as tenants in common of the fee, there being no indication of intent contrary to the grammatical construction. Pruden v. Paxton, 79 N. Car. 446.

Equal Division.—Under a devise to "Joseph and David of all the residue of testator's estate, to them and each of them, share and share alike, their heirs and assigns forever, and if they die without heirs, their shares are to be equally divided." etc., held, that Joseph and David were tenants in common tail, with a vested remainder to other legatees in case of their death. Irwin v. Dunwoody, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 61.

A devise of land to several brothers, "according to quantity and quality, each to take possession of his part when he comes of age; but if one or more of them should die before they come of age, then their part to be equally divided among the survivors," was held to create an estate in common. Harrison v. Botts, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 420.

Unequal Division.—A devise of several tracts of land "to be equally divided in quantity, without having any regard to quality," was held to be a tenancy in common. Partridge v. Colegate, 3 Har. & M. (Md.) 339.

A testator devised all the residue of his estate "to be divided amongst all his children in equal shares and portions to them, their heirs and assignees forever," and died leaving several children. Held, that this gave to the devisees a tenancy in common, and that their estates not being the same in quality and quantity that they would have taken as heirs at law, they take by purchase under the will and not by descent. Gilpin v. Hollingsworth, 3 Md. 190.

Designation of Particular Part.—A devised to B and C, his sons, a tract of land lying easterly of a certain brook, "to be equally divided between them, for quality and quantity, and B to have the part next the brook." Held, that such devise vested in the devisees a tenancy in common. Griswold v. Johnson, 5 Conn. 363; and see Walker v. Dewing, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 520; Burghardt v. Turner, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 534; Elliot v. Carter, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 436; Emerson v. Cutler, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 108.

Devise as Joint Stock.—A devise of land to "three children to be kept as joint stock until the youngest shall arrive at the age of twenty-one years, and then the whole property and its increase to be divided equally between them, to each one-third part," creates a tenancy in common, and not a joint tenancy. Weir v. Humphries, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 264.

Gift per Stirpes.—Under a gift in a will to such of the nephews and nieces of A and the children of A's deceased niece B thereafter named (then followed the names of the nephews and nieces and children of the deceased niece) as should be living at the time of the decease of the testatrix, to be divided between and among them, the children of B taking between them only the equal share to which B would have been entitled if named in that bequest instead of her children, and living at the time of the decease of the testatrix: Held, that the children of B took as tenants in common. Attorney General v. Fletcher, 13 Eq. (Eng.) 128.

1. 1 Washb. Real Property (5th ed.); and see Miller v. Miller, 16 Mass. 59; Bambaugh v. Bambaugh, 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 191; Evans v. Brittain, 3 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 135; Wiswill v. Wilkins, 5 Vt. 87.

Under a deed to the grantees, or any of them, or any of their heirs and assigns, "habendum to them, their heirs and assigns forever," the grantees are tenants in common. Galbraith v. Galbraith, 3 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 392.

By a devise of the income of one third part of a farm, the devisee becomes a tenant in common of that porants in common,¹ and would continue such if the estate should become absolute by foreclosure.² Where real estate is purchased tion of the land itself. Andrews v. Boyd, 5 Me. (5 Greene) 199.

A devise of a tract of land to the two sons of the devisor, and their heirs and assigns, until a third son personally appears and demands the land, makes the two sons tenants in common. McPherson v. McPherson, Addis. (Pa.) 327.

Reservation of Dower Right.—P held an estate in right of his wife, subject to right of dower in his wife's mother, but which had never been demanded or assigned. P conveyed the estate to another, his wife signing the deed, which, after a general description, contained the following: "Meaning to convey all the right and interest which E. A. B, now my wife, E. A. P. has or ever had in said land, except the right to her mother's thirds, which I reserve a right to claim at the decease of the mother of said E." Held, that the exception must be construed to be of the reversion of the dower, and not of the dower itself, and that no dower having been assigned by metes and bounds, the grantee took by his deed two thirds of the estate in common and undivided. Payne v. Parker, 10 Me. (1 Fairf.) 178.

An admission in an answer, that two persons jointly purchased a slave, does not prove that they were joint tenants. The presumption is that each paid one half of the purchase money and that they are tenants in common, and in such case where one of the purchasers dies the other is not entitled to the whole survivorship, but the executor of the deceased must account for the moiety of his testator as of other portions of his personal estate. Gibbons v. Riley, 7 Gill (Md.) 81.

Right of Common Appurtenant.—Two tenants in common making partition of their lands, the one granted to the other "free liberty of carrying away gravel and sea weed of the beach belonging to his part of said farm, and also stones below high water mark and liberty to tip the sea weed on the bank of his part of said farm." Held, that this grant created a right of common appurtenant to the land of the grantee, and that said right was not unlimited, but a right in common with the grantor. Hall v. Lawrence, 2 R. I. 218.

Estate to Mother and Children.—By a conveyance of land by deed to "M S in trust for herself and her children, their heirs and assigns," M S and her children become tenants in common in fee in the land in equal shares. Shirlock v. Shirlock, 5 Pa. St. 367.

Condition Subsequent.—A testator, after giving pecuniary legacies to right of his children in full of their portions of his estate devised to two others, C and R, all his real estate in fee, upon condition that neither of them should make any claim upon his estate upon a forfeiture of his right under the will. C made a claim upon the estate, which was paid by the executor. Held, that C and R took the real estate as tenants in common, upon a condition subsequent, by breach of which C forfeited his moiety thereof under the will and the same descended to the heirs at law. Sackett v. Mallory, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 355.

Grant by State.—An act of the Illinois legislature, granting to certain persons, their heirs and assigns the right to run a ferry, with certain other privileges, makes them tenants in common both of these franchises, and of boats, tackle, etc., owned by them. Haven v. Muhlgarten, 19 Ill. 91.

Evidence of Title.—A deed by C, a tenant in common of E, to A, of C's interest in an estate whereon were certain mine hills with the right to raise ore "for such time only as said furnace can be carried on by charcoal," held to convey a limited privilege and not the corporeal estate in the mine hills; and in an action of partition by the heirs of E against A, a recital in the deed that C held the land in common with E, held to be prima facie evidence of the title of E's heirs. Grubb v. Grubb, 74 Pa. St. 25.

A patent to two persons as tenants in common of a quarter section of land, clothes each with an undivided half of the entire quarter. It does not give to either an undivided half of any specific part of the entire quarter nor the right to have partition of any specific part, except in case of a sale of the residue by both tenants, or by some act of the parties, or by proceedings at law. Markoe v. Wakeman et al., 107 Ill. 251.

1. Brown v. Bates, 55 Me. 520.

2. Goodwin v. Richardson, 11 Mass.

for partnership purposes by deeds conveying to the partners as tenants in common, the status of the property as to creditors is fixed by such deeds,¹ and a purchase by or a gift to several persons as ship owners creates a tenancy in common in the property so purchased or received, and not a partnership;² and the same rule applies where one claiming the whole of a parcel of land joins with other claimants in a trust deed providing that each shall have such interest in a stock company as they had in the property.³

The conveyance of a given number of acres to one person and another number to another, thus conveying the whole right to both, there being nothing to show that the land was intended to be conveyed in severalty, will create a tenancy in common, each party taking in common in proportion to the number of acres specified in his deed;⁴ so also where the whole is conveyed to each by simultaneous conveyance, each having knowledge of the other's conveyance.⁵

This rule is applicable also to personal property.⁶

A contract under seal to convey to husband and wife makes them tenants in common in Ohio;⁷ so devise of land to four persons giving a part of the profits to another for life vests a

1. Appeal of Second Natl. Bk. of Titusville, 83 Pa. St. 203.

2. French v. Price, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 13; Thorndike v. De Wolf, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 120.

Where several persons purchase a parcel of land they become tenants in common, and are not partners; and notice to one, in respect to the land, is not notice to the other. Wiswall v. McGown, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 270.

3. Hungerford v. Cushing, 8 Wis. 332.

4. Preston v. Robinson, 24 Vt. 583.

A testator devised a small tract to one, and to another devised a larger tract, which includes the small one. The devisees are tenants in common of the small tract, and the first devisee cannot dispute the title of the second devisee. Seckel v. Engle, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 68.

A deed of land to two persons by one common boundary, but stating the particular interest conveyed to each, constitutes them tenants in common and not joint tenants. Craig v. Taylor, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 457.

Uncertainty of Description.—Conveyance of one certain parcel of land, viz., "the lots of A, B and twenty-eight acres off from the lot of C adjoining," does not create a tenancy in common of the grantee with C in his whole lot, for want of certainty of location. Clapp v. Beardsley, 1 Vt. 151.

5. Wright v. Searles, 59 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 176.

Where there are two several grants of the same land bearing the same date upon surveys recorded and certified the same day, and purporting to have been made upon warrants issued the same day, the grantees take as tenants in common. Young v. De Bruhl, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) L. 638.

Two or more taking out a warrant, paying in equal proportions and obtaining a survey, hold as tenants in common; and there is no right of survivorship. Caines v. Grant, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 119.

Where one of two tenants in common conveys to a third person a ditch crossing the land owned in common and the other subsequently conveys the same ditch to another third person, neither of the grantors can afterward question the act of the other; and the respective grantees become tenants in common of the ditch. Ried v. Spicer, 27 Cal. 57.

6. The simultaneous delivery of absolute bills of sale of the same property, one to each of two vendees, each vendee having knowledge of the transactions with the other, renders the vendees tenants in common of the property. Welch v. Sackett, 12 Wis. 243.

7. Wilson v. Fleming, 13 Ohio 68.

tenancy in common in the four,¹ and a gift of chattels to one, he covenanting to convey one half thereof to another on the happening of a certain contingency, vests a tenancy in common in them to take effect in the happening of the contingency.²

(b) Conveyance of Undivided Part.—A conveyance of an undivided part of a tract of land creates a tenancy in common between the grantor and the grantee,³ but if the part conveyed is so described that a surveyor could designate it, the grantees will take in severalty.⁴ A reservation in a deed of an undivided part will have a like effect,⁵ and one in possession under a tenant in dower holding over after her death, and purchasing the shares of some of the reversioners becomes a tenant in common with the other reversioners.⁶ When a feme couverte joined with her husband and other tenants in common in conveying the common estate by a deed which was ineffectual to convey more than a mere color of title, a tenancy in common was created between her and the grantee.⁷

(c) Other Modes.—Where several parties redeem land, they are tenants in common, the several interest being in proportion to the amount of redemption money paid by each,⁸ and where executions are levied upon land by two creditors at the same time, each acquires title to an undivided moiety of the land and a tenancy in common of the whole is created between them.⁹ Any act which destroys an estate in joint tenancy or coparcenary without destroying the unity of possession will create a tenancy in common,¹⁰ as a sale by

1. Allison v. Kurtz, 2 Watts. (Pa.) 185.

2. Parker v. Vick, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) L. 195.

3. Adams v. Frothingham, 3 Mass. 352; Andrews v. Boyd, 5 Me. 199.

When a deed conveys a certain number of acres without describing the land conveyed, to be taken out of a larger tract described, the grantee becomes, by his deed, a tenant in common having a fractional interest represented by a fraction having for its denominator a number equal to the number of acres in the larger tract described, and for its numerator a number equal to the number of acres conveyed. The grantee acquires such fractional interest in every acre of the larger tract. Wallace v. Miller, 52 Cal. 655.

4. Wheeler v. Ladd, 40 Ark. 108.

5. Wheeler v. Carpenter, 107 Pa. St. 271.

6. Liscomb v. Root, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 376.

7. Cloud v. Webb, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 317, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 290.

8. Hoffman v. Lyons, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 377.

When land belonging equally to two tenants in common is bought under partition proceedings by one of them, on their joint account, no consideration passing, and the expenses of partition being made by both, the other has in equity an equal right with the purchaser in the land. Paul v. Fulton, 25 Mo. 156.

9. Shove v. Dow, 13 Mass. 529; Cutting v. Richwood, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 443; Wiswell v. Wilkin, 5 Vt. 87.

When a firm sued on notes given for property sold to two persons one of whom was adjudged bankrupt pending suit, and judgment was had against the other, and the proceeds of the property sold under a f. fa. were, by agreement, to be distributed just as the property would have been divided had the proper steps been taken to arrest the sale,—held, that the judgment creditors should take one half, and the assignee of the bankrupt the other. Jenkins v. Atwater, 61 Ga. 291.

10. See 1 Brown & Had. Com. (Wait's ed.) 651.

one of his share,¹ or an exchange of the subject of the tenancy.²

In cases of contracts between the owner and cultivator of the land for a division of the crops, a tenancy in common therein is created, at least until their shares are separated and severed,³ and a mortgage executed by one of them on his share of the crop creates a tenancy in common between the owner, the culti-

1. Coleman v. Lane, 26 Ga. 515.

2. Where joint owners of a mill sold the same, receiving a slave as the consideration,—held, that they became tenants in common of the slave, the community of interests being dissolved by the sale. Cheek v. Wheatley, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 484.

A, B and C were interested as the principal cestuis que trust in a deed of trust of slaves, for the payment of debts in which A was the trustee; and, by an agreement between the three, B, at a public sale, bid off the slaves, for the benefit of the three. Held, that by this sale the legal title vested in all, as tenants in common. Pitt v. Petway, 12 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 69.

Dissolution of Partnership.—A and B were tenants in common of lands, carrying on the farming business in partnership, and A sold and transferred his moiety of the lands. Held, that the partnership was dissolved by such transfer, and that the grantee became a tenant in common with B, in the partnership property, taking the undivided share of his grantor, subject to all the rights of A, and to the account to be taken between the original parties. Mumford v. McKay, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 442.

Parol Agreement.—A grant of land was made by the State of Virginia in 1782, to A and B, as joint tenants. A died before the patent issued. Held, that the whole estate is vested in B, but that the devisee of A was entitled to a division on proving a parol agreement between A and B to divide the land, and two surveys of each half of the land made in pursuance of the agreement, one of which was assigned to A, as such agreement was made before the passage of the statute of frauds. Overton v. Lacy, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 13.

3. Williams v. Nolen, 34 Ala. 167; Strother v. Butler, 17 Ala. 733; Knox v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 617; Bernal v. Hovious, 17 Cal. 541; Walker v. Fitts, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 191; Carr v. Dodge, 40 N. H. 403; Putnam v. Wise, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 234; Hurd v. Darling, 14 W. 214; Beezley v. Crossen, 14 Oreg. 473.

Where one who rents land on shares agrees with a third person that if the latter will help sow and harvest the grain he shall have one half of the tenant's portion, they thereby become tenants in common of the grain, and not partners. Sims v. Dame, (Ind.) 15 N. E. Rep. 217.

Defendant let a farm on shares to plaintiff, who was authorized to make sales of the crops for the benefit of both parties. Held, that they were tenants in common of the crops, and plaintiff could not recover from defendant, who had taken less than his share of a quantity of oats and appropriated it to his own use. Connell v. Richmond (Conn.), 11 Atl. Rep. 852.

T agreed to let a farm to H "to work on shares" for one year. T was to furnish three working teams, the farming utensils, etc., one half the seed and to stock the farm, and H was to cultivate the land. T also agreed to account to and to pay H "the value of the one half of all the grain, butter and net proceeds of the sheep, hogs and cattle that might be produced from the premises." Held, that the parties were tenants in common of a crop of corn raised by H under this agreement. Tanner v. Hills, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 428.

But in Minnesota, the owner of a farm employed another to till and carry on his farm, and for compensation agreed to allow him one half of all the grain raised, deducting advances and other claims. Held, a contract of hiring, and that the employee was not a part owner of such grain. Porter v. Chandler, 27 Minn. 301; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 293.

Assignment of Interest in Farming Contract.—A rented a farm from B upon the following terms: A was to give B one half of everything that was made; A was to carry all the crops to market and to pay B one half the proceeds after sale. Under this contract A made a crop of tobacco and assigned in writing all his interest therein to C, who was to have the crop prepared for market and sold, and to pay over to B one half of the net proceeds. The to-vator and the mortgagee.¹ This rule applies also to agreements whereby one party furnishes money to another for any construction or manufacture upon the understanding that he is to have a share in the completed article.²

Where a steam engine is erected as a fixture upon the land of one at the joint expense of himself and others under an agreement to use the same as a common source of power without limitation as to time, the ownership is held to be in common.³

When goods of different owners become by accident or by agreement so mixed together as to be undistinguishable, a tenancy in common is created between the several owners, in the whole of the goods, each owning in proportion to the amount contributed by him;⁴ but where the commingling of the goods is caused by the fault of one the parties, as when a special agent mingles his own property with that of his principal, a tenancy in common will not result.⁵

III. WHAT MAY BE HELD IN COMMON.—Joint tenancies and tenancies in common are usually treated in the books as applicable to lands and tenements, but there may be such tenancies of chattels personal as well as real.⁶ And there may be a tenancy in common of an inchoate as well as of a perfect right.⁷ As to lands, there may be a joint tenancy whether the estate be in fee for life, for years, at will or in remainder;⁸ but while there may be a tenancy in common in a right or title to land, there can be none in a mere actual possession unless all the cotenants are actually occupying the land.⁹

All kinds of chattels of whatever nature may be held by two or more persons in joint tenancy.¹⁰ Thus there may be a joint tenancy continues, although the identity of the entire mass in store may be changed by continued additions and subtractions. [ROTHROCK and BECK, JJ., dissenting]. Sexton v. Graham, 53 Iowa 181.

bacco was left in possession of B's agent, and A retained possession of no part thereof after the execution of his agreement with C. Held, that the contract between A and B created the relation of landlord and tenant; that it vested in each a joint interest in the crop; that the sale of C if effectual, could only constitute him a tenant in common with A, and that C could not maintain replevin against A. Ferrall v. Kent, 4 Gill (Md.) 209.

1. Smith v. Rice, 56 Ala. 417.

2. White v. Brooks, 43 N. H. 402; Beaumont v. Crane, 14 Mass. 400.

3. Hill v. Hill, 43 Pa. St. 521.

4. Spence v. Union M. Ins. Co., 3 L. R., C. P. (Eng.) 427; 18 L. T. 632; 16 W. R. 1010.

Storing in Warehouses.—Where several parties store grain in a warehouse, with the understanding that it may be mixed with grain of like quality, they become tenants in common of the entire amount so mixed, though it may occupy a number of separate bins, and such tenancy continues, although the identity of the entire mass in store may be changed by continued additions and subtractions. [ROTHROCK and BECK, JJ., dissenting]. Sexton v. Graham, 53 Iowa 181.

Where a warehouseman without special agreement, but according to custom, mixed the grain of several depositors in a common mass, held, that they became tenants in common of the entire amount of like quality, and for the negligent destruction of the same could each recover the value of his grain. Arthur v. Chicago R. I. etc. R. Co., 61 Iowa 648.

5. Hall v. Page, 4 Ga. 428.

6. 4 Wait's Act. and Def. 173.

7. Wilkins v. Burton, 5 Vt. 76; and see Lillianskyoldt v. Goss, 2 Utah 292.

8. Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 407.

9. Lillianskyoldt v. Goss, 2 Utah 292.

10. 2 Wait's Act. & Def. 246; Litt. § 281, 282; Sessions v. Peay, 19 Ark. 269; Trammell v. Harrell, 4 Ark. 602.

tenancy in stock,¹ in farm and other produce,² in patent rights,³ in a promissory note,⁴ in a lease for years,⁵ or in a legacy,⁶ and in general every species of chattels capable of being held in joint tenancy, may be owned in common.⁷ Whatever may be subject to undivided dominion by virtue of the law of sole ownership is likewise susceptible of being made subject to joint dominion.⁸

IV. WHO ARE JOINT TENANTS OR TENANTS IN COMMON—1. Joint Tenants.—The well known distinctive characteristic of joint tenancy is the right of survivorship, by which, though the estate is limited to the tenants and their heirs, the survivor or survivors take the entire estate to the exclusion of the heirs or representatives of a deceased cotenant.⁹ Two corporations, therefore, cannot hold lands or other property as joint tenants, for, being each perpetual, there can be no survivorship between them;¹⁰ nor can a corporation be a joint tenant with a natural person, since there is no reciprocity of survivorship between them,¹¹ but all natural persons may, of course, be joint tenants with each other.¹²

As a general rule, cotrustees are joint tenants,¹³ and are always so where their joint action is contemplated, or where such a tenancy is necessary for the execution of their trust.¹⁴

Where an estate vests in a husband and wife either by conveyance or descent, they do not stand as ordinary joint tenants to each other owing to their legal unity, but are seised of the estate by entireties and not by moieties,¹⁵ and, therefore, though the

1. 2 Kent's Com. (13th ed.) 350.

2. Lowe v. Miller, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 205.

3. Pitts v. Hall, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 201.

4. People's Bank v. Keech, 26 Md. 521.

5. Taylor's L. & T., § 114. Gilbert v. Richards, 7 Vt. 203.

6. Armstrong v. Armstrong, L. R., 7 Eq. (Eng.) 518; Campbell v. Campbell, 4 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 15. And see Crocker v. Carson, 33 Me. 436; Ward v. Ward, 6 Ch. (Eng.) 789; Ive v. King, 16 Beav. (Eng.) 46.

7. 2 Wait's Act. & Def. 247.

8. Freem. Part., § 16.

9. Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 407.

The interest of two joint tenants is not only equal or similar, but also is one and the same. One has not originally a distinct moiety from the other; but, if by any subsequent act (as by alienation or forfeiture of either) the interest becomes separate and distinct, the joint tenancy instantly ceases. But while it continues each of two joint tenants has a concurrent interest in the whole; and thereupon, on the death of his companion, the sole interest in the whole remains to the survivor. For the interest which the survivor originally had is clearly not divested by the death of his companion; and no other person can now claim to have a joint estate with him, for no one can now have an interest in the whole, accruing by the same title, and taking effect at the same time with his own; neither can anyone claim a separate interest in any part of the tenements, for that would be to deprive the survivor of the right which he had in all and every part, as therefore, the survivor's original interest in the whole still remains; and as no one can now be admitted, either jointly or severally, to any share with him therein, it follows that his own interest must now be entire and several, and that he shall alone be entitled to the whole estate (whatever it may be) that was created by the original grant. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 183.

10. De Witt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 289.

11. De Witt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 289; Aug. & Ames on Corp., § 185.

12. 4 Wait's Act. and Def. 170.

13. Franklin Savings Trust v. People's Savings Bank, 14 R. I. 632.

14. Perry on Trusts, section 136.

15. Gillan v. Dixon, 65 Pa. St. 395.

husband is entitled to rents and profits during coverture, he cannot dispose of the inheritance or any part thereof without his wife's concurrence,¹ and, on the death of either, the whole goes to the survivor.² But a properly worded conveyance to a husband and wife made for that express purpose will vest in them a joint tenancy,³ and in Connecticut, where land is given to husband and wife, they take as joint tenants, and a conveyance by the husband of his interest alone is valid and effectual.⁴ It would seem that the statutes declaring all estate tenancies in common unless a different intention is expressly set forth in the deed creating the estate, does not apply to an estate granted to husband and wife,⁵ or to estates by the entirety.⁶ Nor does it apply to personal property.⁷

Infants may be joint tenants,⁸ and a child becomes at its birth a joint tenant with its mother of lands which the latter holds in special tail.⁹

2. Tenants in Common.—All natural persons capable of holding property may, of course, be tenants in common, and corporations may hold as such either with other corporations,¹⁰ or with natural persons,¹¹ while the officers or stockholders of a corporation may be construed to be tenants in common of lands which the corporation itself is not authorized by law to hold.¹² A deed to two

1. Wales v. Coffin, 13 Allen (Mass.) 213; Hemingway v. Scales, 42 Miss. 1; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 586; Thomas v. De Baum, 1 McCart. (N. J.) 37; Beach v. Hollister, 5 Mt. S. (T. & C.) 568; s. c., 3 Hun 519; Bates v. Seely, 46 Pa. St. 248; Stuckey v. Keefe's Exrs., 26 Pa. St. 397.

2. Stuckey v. Keefe's Exrs., 26 Pa. St. 397.

3. A and wife conveyed to B, "for the purpose of creating a joint tenancy in A and his wife in all their property." B immediately reconveyed to A and wife "as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common, the survivor of them, and the heirs, personal representatives and assigns of such survivor." Held, that A and wife were joint tenants, and the husband's interest could be seized and sold on execution during the wife's life. Fladung v. Rose, 58 Md. 13.

4. Benedict v. Gaylord, 11 Conn. 332.

5. Den. v. Hardenburgh, 10 N. J. L. (5 Halst.) 42.

6. Thomas v. De Baum, 14 N. J. Eq. (1 McCart.) 37.

7. Putnam v. Putnam, 4 Bradf. (N. J.) 308.

8. Bac. Abr. (Joint Tenants, B.)

9. Powell v. Powell, 5 Bush (Ky.) 619.

Evidence of Joint Tenancy.—Upon an issue whether the occupants of land are or are not joint tenants of the premises, conveyances of the same to them under which they claim, are competent evidence as having a tendency to show the character and extent of the occupation. Tappan v. Tappan, 31 N. H. (11 Frost) 41.

10. DeWitt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 289. And see New York etc. Canal Co. v. Fulton Bank, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 412.

11. Telfair v. Howe, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 235; Aug. & Ames on Corp., § 185.

12. A deed of land to a voluntary unincorporated association, which is well known, and all the members of which may be ascertained, but which is not one of the class authorized by Massachusetts Gen. Stat., ch. 30, § 24, to take and hold real estate, may be construed as a grant to those who are properly described by the title used in the deed; and such persons are tenants in common of the land conveyed. Bamy v. Bickford, 140 Mass. 31.

The stockholders in the North River Steamboat Co. are tenants in common, and not copartners. Livingston v. Lynch, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 573.

In the case of the lands in Vermont, held under the New Hampshire charters, so called, the rights in such lands, or more as tenants in common, of course, makes them such,¹ And under the statutes of most of the United States any conveyance to two or more persons will make them tenants in common unless a contrary intuition is expressed therein.²

Tenants in common of a mortgage term joining in the purchase of the equity of redemption in fee become tenants in common of the inheritance.³ So where several persons acquire rights in reserved by the charters to the governor of New Hampshire, are holden in severalty, and not in common with the charter proprietors. Wentworth v. Strong, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 191.

1. See Johnson v. Hart, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 319; Preston v. Robinson, 24 Vt. 583.

Where a feme couverte, an infant, and a tenant in common, joined with her husband and the other tenants in common, in conveying the common estate, by a deed which was inefficient except to convey a color of title, she and the vendee became tenants in common. Cloud v. Webb, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 317; 4 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 290.

One claiming the whole of certain land joined with other claimants in a trust deed, providing that each should have such interest in a stock company as they had in the property. Held, that at most this made them tenants in common, not partners. Hungerford v. Cushing, 8 Wis. 332.

A reservation in a deed of land of "all the pine timber fit for sawing" makes the grantor a tenant in common with the grantees, and gives him a right to select the timber and judge of its fitness for that purpose. Wheeler v. Carpenter, 107 Pa. St. 271.

A and B contracted in writing to purchase a piece of land and erect a steam saw mill thereon, to hold the property jointly, to share equally in the expense and profits, "whether by sale or leasing the same." Held, that they were tenants in common, and not partners. Farrand v. Gleason, 56 Vt. 633.

Bequest.—A bequest directing that the proceeds of the sale of lands, etc., should be equally divided between testator's brother A and his brother B's children. Held, that A took as tenant in common, and no more, with each of the children of B. Maddox v. State, 4 Har. & J. (Md.) 436.

Where a testator devised a portion of his land to each of two sons, and directed the residue to be sold and the proceeds divided between others. Held, that the two sons might be regarded as tenants in common with those claiming the residue; and that the court might properly call to its aid commissioners to make partition of the testator's lands. Harvey v. Harvey, 72 N. Car. 570.

Right of Selection.—A clause added to a devise of a fractional part of a certain tract of land, that is to be taken by the devisee, when he shall choose or select, at its just or proportionate value, does not constitute a condition precedent to the vesting of the estate devised, but the devisee, on the death of the devisor, becomes tenant in common, with a right of selection, to be exercised or not at his will. Brown v. Bailey, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 254.

A testator, by his will, appointed A and B his executors and trustees, and after providing a fund for the payment of his debts and legacies, and all legacy duties, gave his residuary estate to his trustees for their absolute use and benefit. By a codicil he appointed C an additional executor and trustee of his will, and declared that the residuary bequest should be read as if the names of A, B and C were inserted instead of the names of A and B, "so that C should participate in such bequest, free from legacy duty, with A and B." A died before the testator. Held (affirming the decision of STUART, V. C.), that the effect of the codicil was to make A, B and C tenants in common of the residue, and that A's share lapsed to the next of kin. Robertson v. Fraser, 6 Ch. (Eng.) 696.

2. Nicholson v. Caress, 45 Ind. 479; Stevenson v. Cofferin, 20 N. H. 150; Boston etc. Co. v. Condit, 19 N. J. Eq. 394; Thomas v. DeBaum, 14 N. J. Eq. (1 McCart.) 37; Den v. Hardenburg, 10 N. J. L. (5 Halst.) 42.

3. Aveling v. Knipe, 19 Ves. (Eng.) 441.

Redemption of Lands.—Where several parties redeem land they are tenants in common, the interest of each being in proportion to the amount of purchase money paid by him. Hoffman v. Lyons, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 377.

Levy Under Execution.—Where exea property from different sources they will likewise become tenants in common,¹ and where a stranger purchases the interest of one tenant he becomes a tenant in common with the rest,² but not so where his purchase was of the whole property.³ Likewise cutions were levied upon land by two creditors at the same time, each acquired by levy, a title to an undivided moiety of the land, which they could hold as tenants in common. Shove v. Dorr, 13 Mass. 529; Cutting v. Rockwood, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 443.

Levy of extents, each on an undivided moiety, creates a tenancy in common of the whole. Wiswell v. Wilkins, 5 Vt. 87.

1. Coleman v. Lane, 26 Ga. 515.

A tenant of land claiming under a tenant in common, adversely to other tenants in common, will, in respect to rents and profits, be treated as a tenant in common with the latter. Ruffners' v. Lewis, 7 Leigh (Va.) 720.

Where a widow executed a mortgage upon the homestead and other property which was a lien upon the share inherited by her from a deceased child, and the mortgage was foreclosed, the purchaser at the mortgage sale thereby became a tenant in common with the other heirs, and could not thereafter acquire a tax title to the prejudice of his cotenants, and an intervenor who held such interests by a quit claim deed would have no greater rights, and could not complain of the order allowing the heirs to redeem from the tax title by paying the amount necessary therefor with six per cent. interest thereon. Conn v. Conn, 58 Iowa 747.

Where one was tenant for years of a spring under a lease not recorded, and another purchased one half of the land in which the spring was, with notice of the encumbrance, and subsequently purchased the other half with notice, they were held to be tenants in common of the spring while the term continued. Herbert v. Odlin, 40 N. H. 267.

2. G and S, tenants in common, made a perpetual lease to W. S conveyed his interest to A and W assigned his interest in one undivided moiety to A. Held, that A became a tenant in common with G, with all the right of property vested in him that was vested in S at the date of the lease. Spencer v. Austin, 38 Vt. 258.

Where a town was originally laid out in lots, all except eight of which were allotted to individual proprietors, who owned the remainder in common, those who have succeeded to their rights are tenants in common of the lands which were unappropriated; and one of such owners cannot maintain trespass q. c. or trover against his cotenant for entering on and removing timber from such lands. Kane's Admr. v. Garfield's Admr. (Vt.), 13 Atl. Rep. 800.

P and W owned certain property as tenants in common. They jointly executed a mortgage thereon to N to secure the payment of eleven bonds of $2,000 and one of $4,000. N assigned nine of the $2,000 bonds to C and guaranteed their payment. About the same time N borrowed money of D and gave the $4,000 bond as collateral security. N failed to pay D and the latter transferred the $4,000 bond to E. After the obligors had paid and taken up two of the $2,000 bonds, W conveyed his undivided one half of the property to N. The deed contained a covenant of N by which he agreed to assume and pay the balance due on said mortgage and to save harmless W, his heirs, executors and administrators from the payment of the same or any part thereof. Afterwards N procured a reassignment of the seven bonds from C and transferred them to other parties. Held, that by the conveyance by W of his interest in the land to N, the latter became a tenant in common with P, and when N paid and took up the bonds secured by the mortgage, which he and P were jointly obligated to pay, he thereby acquired the right to collect one half thereof out of the estate of P, and was entitled to all the securities and all the remedies given by the mortgage, and that by the assignments of the bonds these remedies passed to his assignees. Watson's Appeal, 90 Pa. St. 426.

3. If one tenant in common sells and conveys to a stranger, without the knowledge and consent of his cotenant, the entirety or undivided moiety of a portion of the land defined by boundaries, such sale and conveyance does not make such stranger a cotenant in the lot purchased with the other cotenant in the entire tract, so as to give an absolute right to have a portion of it assigned to any occupation of land by two or more persons as a general rule constitutes such persons tenants in common,¹ as well as any rights in or growing out of any lands or tenements be the same corporeal or incorporeal.²

Ship owners are tenants in common of the vessel,³ and they may also be such of the cargo;⁴ so two or more persons may him. Bogges v. Meredith, 16 W. Va. 1.

1. Persons occupying vacant land in mixed possession prior to the Delaware act, 1843, become tenants in common under that act. Tubbs v. Lynch, 4 Harr. (Del.) 521.

The lease of a church pew in perpetuity makes the lessees tenants in common of realty. St. Paul's Church v. Ford, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 16.

Evidence of Possession.—On the question of whether one is in fact a tenant in common of land, the fact that he cultivated it as long as it was fit for cultivation, and then grazed cattle on it and let it out for shooting purpose; held, evidence of possession. Baum v. Currituck Shooting Club, 96 N. Car. 310.

2. Water Rights.—Different persons appropriating waters of a stream for purposes of irrigation and domestic uses under certain general regulations prescribed by the water commissioners, as to the time and manner of appropriation, held tenants in common, so that each might maintain an action to enjoin a trespasser from diverting any of the water so appropriated. Lytle Creek Water Co. v. Perdew, 65 Cal. 447.

Mining Right.—Two persons owned together real estate, including certain coal banks. They chose parties to part and allot the real estate, agreeing that the ore banks should remain together and undivided as a tenancy in common for the reason that the extent and limit of the ore could not be ascertained, and partition could not be made without working injustice to some of the parties. In amicable actions to carry out the partition, the court adjudged that the "ore banks do still remain undivided, to be held by" the parties "as tenants in common, according to their respective shares." Held, that the parties and their successors were tenants in common of the ore banks; and that the plaintiffs were not concluded from asserting this because of a judgment in a county court on a plea of non tenent insimul in action of partition between the same parties for the same ore banks. Coleman's Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 252.

3. Ship owners are tenants in common of the vessel and not joint tenants or partners, and the share of one owner is not subject to a general balance of accounts between the owners. Nicoll v. Mumford, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 522.

Where several signed a contract agreeing to take an interest in a voyage, and a vessel was purchased and fitted out by their agents, the associate signers of the contract were tenants in common, and not partners. French v. Price, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 13.

Part owners of a steamboat are generally to be considered as tenants in common, and not as joint owners or special partners; and an action on the case will lie against one owner, by the other, to recover his proportion of the damages assessed by a verdict, in an action of trespass brought by the owners against the sheriff for a tortious taking and detaining of the boat, where the judgment on the verdict has been arrested in consequence of one of the owners having executed a release of damages after verdict. Knox v. Campbell, 1 Pa. St. 366.

4. The firm of A and B owned one fourth of a ship; and the firm of C and D owned the remaining three fourths. The ship was sent with a cargo owned in like proportions, and instructions, signed by all the owners, were given to the master to sell the cargo, to remit the balance in the proportions owned by the parties on their several accounts. The sales fell short, and the master drew on C and D for the amount of the deficiency and consigned the return cargo to them; and, in compliance with their request, it was shipped to the port where C and D resided and received by them. The assignees of A and B brought a bill against C and D. Held, that the master had no right to consign the return cargo to C and D and that C and D had no lien thereon for other demands against A and B nor against a new firm formed between A, B and C. Nor could such debts be set off against the be tenants in common of live stock and farming utensils,¹ of a slave,² or of a right to compensation for services.³

Where, however, the interests of several persons in the same piece of property are so distinct as to be distinguishable and separable, they are not tenants in common,⁴ and where one person owns or occupies or possesses a distinct right or privilege in the land of another, he is not a tenant in common of the land with that other, the title to the land remaining in the original owner.⁵ So where two applicants for surveys have their lands returned in a body without division lines, they are not tenants in common, as to each other, their rights are merely suspended until the division line is run,⁶ and parties whose title has proved plaintiff's claim. Jackson v. Robinson, 3 Mass. 138.

Property given to two as owners of a ship, belongs to them as tenants in common, and not as partners. Thorn-dike v. De Wolf, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 120.

1. Abernathy v. Smith, 57 Ala. 359.

2. Tibbons v. Riley, 7 Gill (Md.) 81.

If two persons buy a horse, each paying one half of the purchase money, under an agreement that either of them having possession of the horse shall provide for his keeping without cost to the other, and that each shall offer the horse for sale and endeavor to procure a purchaser at a profit over his cost, but that neither shall sell the horse without the concurrence of the other, they are tenants in common of the horse, and not partners; and if a third person sells the horse by authority of one of them and without the knowledge or consent of the other, paying to the one who authorized the sale, and not accounting to the other, it is a conversion of the latter's interest, for which an action will lie against both wrongdoers. Goell v. Morse, 126 Mass. 480.

3. Swampland commissioners, appointed to locate the swamp land, to procure from the State patents for the same and to receive for their services twenty per cent. of the amount realized by the State on a subsequent sale of the lands, held not to be partners inter se in reference to their compensation, but rather tenants in common. Powell v. Jones, 72 Ala. 392.

4. Where land bounded on a river is willed in distinct tracts to three, and each takes a separate portion as described, they are not tenants in common. Fleming v. Kerr, 10 Watts (Pa.) 444.

A deed for one third of a tract of land, describing the part conveyed so that a surveyor could designate it, does not make the grantee a tenant in common with the grantor. Wheeler v. Ladd, 40 Ark. 108.

Where the directors of the Fire Land Company in Ohio made separate and successive allotments of sections of lands to satisfy claims annexing to each to equalize their value, a certain number of acres, whose location was pointed out in a fraction supposed to contain a certain quantity equal to the sum of the annexations with the intention of giving claimants distinct rights, held, that they were not tenants in common so as to be entitled to claim a portion and share of a surplus on the fraction over the supposed quantity. Lockwood v. Mills, 3 Ohio 21.

5. If it is agreed that one of two persons shall furnish land upon which certain works shall be erected, to be owned by them in common, both do not thereby become tenants in common of the land. Hurd v. Cushing, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 169.

A privilege reserved to a person, in a dwelling house for a particular purpose, and for a limited time, does not constitute him tenant in common of the estate. Abbott v. Wood, 13 Me. 115.

House on Another's Land.—If the owner of land build a house partly on his own land and partly on land adjoining under an agreement between the owners that he shall repay himself the cost of the rent, they are not tenants in common of the house, but the title follows the title to the land. McAdam v. Orr, 4 Watts & S. (Pa.) 550.

Renting Rooms.—Where certain rooms in a house are assigned to a tenant for life, and the reversion in these belongs, with the rest of the house, to another, the parties are not tenants in common. Wiggins v. Wiggins, 43 N. H. 561.

6. Ross v. M'Junkin, 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 364.

worthless are not so far tenants in common as to prevent either from acquiring an outstanding title to the whole property.¹

A husband and wife may both together be one tenant in common;² but in Maryland children are not tenants in common, but coparceners.³

An agreement on the part of a person to cultivate land belonging to another for a specific portion of the crops thereof constitutes the owner and the cultivator tenants in common of the crops, and either party may sell or mortgage his portion thereof;⁴ and where the owner of sheep leases them, the lessee to deliver the wool to the lessor, who is to sell it, paying one half the proceeds to the lessee, they are tenants in common of the wool, and the lessee's interest is attachable.⁵ So the accidental mixture of goods in such manner as to be undistinguishable makes their owners tenants in common.⁶

A widow entitled to dower is not a tenant in common with the children of the deceased owner of the land until the assignment

1. Roberts v. Thorn, 25 Tex. 728.

2. Johnson v. Hart, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 319.

3. Hoffer v. Dement, 5 Gill (Md.) 132.

4. Smith v. Rice, 56 Ala. 417; Williams v. Nolen, 34 Ala. 167; Gafford v. Stearns, 51 Ala. 434; Strother v. Butler, 17 Ala. 733; Knox v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 617; Hall v. Page, 4 Ga. 428; Walker v. Fitts, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 191; Carr v. Dodge, 40 N. H. 403; Putnam v. Wise, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 234; Hurd v. Darling, 14 Vt. 214; Bernal v. Hovious, 17 Cal. 541. But see Paimer v. Hills, 48 N. Y. 662. Though in North Carolina they are held to be joint tenants. Moore v. Spruill, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 55.

The Alabama code, §§ 3474, 3475, giving persons farming on shares each a lien on the share of the other in the crops jointly raised, held not to abolish the relation of tenants in common in such cases. Collier v. Faulk, 69 Ala. 58; Holcombe v. State, 69 Ala. 218; McCall v. State, 69 Ala. 227.

Two or more persons hiring land by an instrument under seal and agreeing to pay rent in a certain proportion of the crop are held to be tenants in common, not partners of the crop, until a division is made. Putnam v. Wise, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 234.

The defendant entered into a contract with A in writing, not under seal, by which he agreed "to let" to A, a certain farm, to commence on the 1st of April, 1842, and continue from year to year for the term of five years, or so long as the parties should agree and be satisfied, reserving to either party the right to terminate the contract by giving one month's notice in writing, the produce of the farm "to be equally divided by weight and measure between the parties. Held, that, although this gave to A an interest in the land, and a right to occupy it without molestation from the defendant, while he continued in the performance of the contract, yet that it did not constitute a lease of the farm, but that A was quasi tenant at will while the contract continued in force, and that the defendant and A were tenants in common of the growing crops, and of the produce of the farm before severance. Aiken v. Smith, 21 Vt. 172.

But in North Carolina it was held that where A raised a certain quantity of tobacco on the land of B, and for his labor in relation to it he was to have one sixth, and A, as the agent of B, made a contract for the sale of the tobacco to C, A was not a tenant in common with B, as to one sixth of the tobacco, and had no property in it, or lien on it, and, therefore that C could not maintain an action against A, as principal, for a breach of the contract, even as to one sixth. Cole v. Hester, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 23.

5. Beezley v. Crossen, 14 Oreg. 473.

6. Arthur v. Chicago R. I. etc. R. Co., 61 Iowa 648; Sexton v. Graham, 53 Iowa 181; Spruce v. Union Marine Ins. Co., 3 L. R., C. P. (Eng.) 427; 37 L. J., C. P. 169; 18 L. T. 632; 16 W. R. 1010.

to her;¹ but under the Indiana statute she would be tenant in common until objection was made by them;² and her possession as dowress and guardian in socage for the minor heirs makes her a tenant in common.³ Where she has by partition obtained her one fifth of her husband's estate in severalty, she still remains a tenant in common with the heirs of the remaining four fifths, subject to the husband's debts.⁴

V. NATURE AND INCIDENTS—1. Joint Tenancy.—In a joint tenancy there must be a unity of interest, of title, of time, and of possession, or, in other words, joint tenants have one and the same interest accruing by one and the same conveyance commencing at one and the same time and held by one and the same undivided possession.⁵

By unity of interest it is meant that one tenant cannot hold in fee while another holds for life, or that one cannot hold for years and another at will, etc., but that the estate of each must be alike.⁶ By unity of title is meant that the estate of each must have been created by the same act, be the same lawful, as by conveyance, or unlawful, as by disseisin.⁷ By unity of time it is meant that their estates must have vested at one and the same period,⁸ but in cases of uses and devises there is an exception to this rule, two or more joint tenants being permitted to take their shares at different times;⁹ and by unity of possession it is meant that each must be seised per my et per tout, by the half or moiety

1. Grossman v. Lauber, 29 Ind. 618; Jackson v. O'Donaghy, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 249; Ex parte Burgess, 1 Del. Ch. 233.

2. Cent. & Abing. Turnpike Co. v. Jarrett, 4 Ind. 213.

3. Knolls v. Barnhart, 71 N. Y. 474. An intestate left a widow and eight children. The widow had possession of the farm as guardian of her minor children, and let it on shares to the plaintiff. Afterwards all the heirs' interest was conveyed to the defendant. Held, that he was a tenant in common of the crops with the plaintiff, and not liable in trespass to him for carrying them away. Otis v. Thompson, Hill & D. (N. Y.) Supp. 131.

One in possession under a tenant in dower, holding over after her death, and purchasing the shares of some of the reversioners, is a tenant in common and entitled to partition. Liscomb v. Root, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 376.

4. Kidwell v. Kidwell, 84 Ind. 224.

5. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 180.

6. See 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 181.

If land be granted to A and B for their lives and to the heirs of A, here

A and B are joint tenants of the freehold during their respective lives and A has the remainder of the fee in severalty; and if land be given to A and B, and the heirs of the body of A, here both have a joint estate for life, and A hath a several remainder in tail. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 181.

7. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 181; and see Sechel v. Engle, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 68; Craig v. Tavior, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 457; Young v. De Bruhl, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) L. 638; Reed v. Spicer, 27 Cal. 57; Welch v. Sackett, 12 Wis. 243; Adams v. Frothingham, 3 Mass. 352.

8. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 181.

9. 1 Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 407.

Where a feoffment was made to the use of a man and such wife as he should afterwards marry, for the time of their lives, and he afterwards married; in this case it seems to have been held that the husband and wife had a joint estate, though vested at different times; because the use of the wife's estate was in abeyance and dormant until the intermarriage; and being then awakened had relation back and took effect from the original time of creation. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 182.

and by all; that is, each of them has the entire possession, as well of every parcel as of the whole.¹

From these unities arises the doctrine of survivorship, and that the entry and possession of one is the entry and possession of all.

(a) Survivorship.—Where two or more persons have an estate in joint tenancy in any subject of property, each having a concurrent interest and title in and to the whole, and each being in possession of the whole, if one or more of them dies, the entire tenancy remains to the survivor or survivors, and he is, or they are, thereupon entitled to the whole estate.²

This right of survivorship is not, however, favored in equity,³ and the policy of American law is opposed to it, the rule of survivorship having been abolished except in cases of joint trustees in many of the States;⁴ though it would seem that even though

1. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 182.

They have not one of them a seisin or moiety and the other of the other moiety; neither can one be exclusively seized of one acre and his companion of another; but each has an undivided moiety of the whole, and not the whole of an undivided moiety. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 182.

2. See Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 183.

The survivor in a joint tenancy takes the whole, unless there was a severance, and a partition fence run through the middle of land held by joint tenant will not make a severance. Haughbaugh v. Honald, Treadw. (S. Car.) Const. 90.

In South Carolina, where, by the terms of a will, an estate in joint tenancy at common law is created, and one or more of the tenants die in the lifetime of the testator, the survivors take the whole estate, as at common law. Bell v. Deas, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) Eq. 24.

Where a sale was made to three persons, and to the survivor of them, and two of the vendees living died, the survivor claimed the ownership. Held, that there being no forced heirs of the deceased owners, and no creditors having an adverse interest, the title is vested in the survivor. Pope v. Anderson, 13 La. Ann. 538.

Where the joint tenant died before the jus accrescendi was abolished in Kentucky in 1787, the other took by survivorship. Barclay v. Hendrick, 3 Dana (Ky.) 378.

Deeds to Each Other.—Tenants in common may vest each other with the right of survivorship by deed inter par- tes; but they cannot convert their holding into a technical joint tenancy, so as to divest themselves of the right of partition as tenants in common. Truesdell v. White, 13 Bush (Ky.) 616.

Deed of Whole from One to the Other.

—A joint tenant's deed of his share of the estate to his cotenant in fee simple, reciting an intention to vest the whole of the fee in the grantee, will carry the grantor's title, subsequently acquired, by survivorship. Apgar v. Christophers, 33 Fla. 201.

3. See Rigden v. Vallier, 3 Aik. (Eng.) 734.

4. 1 Wash. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 408; see Phelps v. Jepson, 1 Root (Conn.) 48; Lowe v. Brooks, 23 Ga. 325; Nichols v. Denny, 37 Miss. 59; Sergeant v. Steinberger, 2 Ohio 305; Miles v. Fisher, 10 Ohio 1; Jones v. Cable (Va.), 7 A. 791.

Under a North Carolina Stat. 1784, abolishing the right of survivorship, and providing that the share of a joint tenant should go to his heirs, the heirs of a joint tenant take by inheritance, and the right of dower is incident to the estate. Weir v. Tate, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 264.

Life Estate.—The act of 1874 does not abolish joint tenancies. It only takes away the right of survivorship from joint tenancies in fee, but has no application to joint tenancies for life. Rowland v. Rowland, 93 N. Car. 214.

Partnership Property.—When partners purchase lands jointly, for the purpose of trade, in Virginia, where the jus accrescendi is abolished, it is considered, both at law and in equity, as a tenancy in common; and in the case of abolished, yet survivorship may be expressly given by will or deed.¹

(b) Entry and Possession of One for Benefit of All.—The entry and possession of one joint tenant enures to the benefit of all,² each holding in trust for all the others, and the possession of one being the possession of all,³ so the general principle that equity prohibits a purchase by trustees of the trust property has been applied to purchases of outstanding titles and encumbrances by the death of one of the partners the surviving partner will have no superior or other right to claim the interest of the deceased partner in the land, as his creditor, than other creditors of the deceased partner have. Deloney v. Hutcheson, 2 Rand. (Va.) 183.

Husband and Wife.—The statute of Kentucky abolishing the jus accrescendi does not apply to the case of a conveyance of an estate to husband and wife; the whole estate belongs to the survivor, whose remedy for the recovery of the estate is complete at law. Rogers v. Grider, 1 Dana (Ky.) 242.

Trustees.—The statute of Alabama which abolishes the right of survivorship between joint tenants (Clay's Dig. 169), applies only to those who hold the absolute property in their own right, and not to those who hold as trustee merely, or in autre droit. Parsons v. Boyd, 20 Ala. 112.

Constitutionality.—In California it was held, that a state legislature has not competent authority to deprive joint tenants of one of the essential elements of their tenure,—the right of survivorship. Green v. Blanchard, 40 Cal. 194.

1. While the Pennsylvania act of March 31st, 1812 (Purd. Dig. 939) abolishes survivorship as incident to joint tenancy, yet survivorship may be expressly given by will or deed. Jones v. Cable (Pa.), 7 Atl. Rep. 791.

2. Small v. Clifford, 38 Me. 213; Wiswell v. Wilkins, 5 Vt. 87; Terrell v. Martin, 64 Tex. 121.

3. The possession of one joint tenant for 20 years is the possession of all. Taylor v. Cox, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 429.

The possession of one coheir or cotenant is the possession of the other coheirs, and is in trust for their benefit. But such possession may become adverse, and may be shown to be such by acts or declarations which repel the presumption that the possession is in the character of coheir. Alexander v. Kennedy, 19 Tex. 488.

Where a deed is made to run to two grantees jointly, and one only enters into actual possession, such possession is not to be deemed adverse to the other joint owner or his heirs, until an ouster or the assertion of some hostile claim denoting an intention to hold adversely. Lindley v. Groff (Minn.), 34 N. W. Rep. 26.

A and B purchased jointly at a sale under a deed of trust. Subsequently, in order to induce the grantor in the deed of trust to vacate, A paid her money, B refusing to join, and obtained exclusive possession. Held, that the possession thus granted enured to both A and B. Davis v. Givens, 71 Mo. 94.

Where a father puts one of his children into possession of land, and he holds it as the tenant of his father and by his possession, his subsequent possession after the death of his father must be regarded as having been for the benefit of himself and his coheirs, as joint owners, unless it is proven that he held adversely; and the statute of limitations will not commence running in his favor as against them until he does some act amounting to an ouster or disseisin of his cotenant. Blakeney v. Ferguson, 20 Ark. 547.

Entry Under Licence of One.—An entry upon common land under a licence from one of the cotenants will be presumed not to be unlawful or adverse to the other tenants. Berthold v. Fox, 13 Minn. 501.

Husband and Wife.—Where a wife is entitled to a large tract of land, and the husband enters thereon in the right of his wife, his possession enures to the benefit of his cotenants, and is not adverse unless there is an actual ouster or something equivalent thereto. Young v. Adams, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 127.

The purchase by the husband of a coparcener of an encumbrance on the joint estate, enures to the benefit of the joint tenants,¹ and one acquiring such title will be deemed to have taken it for the benefit of the rest.²

The payment of taxes by one joint tenant enures to the benefit of both,³ and where one cotenant buys in a tax title to the whole property, the purchase will be for the benefit of all.⁴

2. Tenancy in Common.—Tenants in common take by distinct moieties, and have no entirety of interest; therefore, there is no others, on their electing to pay their proportion of the purchase money. Lee v. Fox, 6 Dana (Ky.) 171.

Coparceners.—The possession of one coparcener eo nomine as coparceners, is the possession of the others. Manchester v. Doddridge, 3 Ind. 360.

1. Brittin v. Handy, 20 Ark. 381.

2. Thurston v. Masterson, 7 Dana (Ky.) 228; Lloyd v. Lynch, 28 Pa. St. 419; Page v. Webster, 8 Mich. 263; Goosom v. Donaldson, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 230.

Where one of several cotenants acquires an outstanding title before he has claimed to hold adversely to his cotenants, he will take for the benefit of all the cotenants, subject to their liability to contribute to the cost. Burgett v. Taliaferro (Ill.), 9 N. E. 334.

Where one joint tenant, tenant in common, joint devisee, etc., purchases in an adverse title, such title will enure to all the joint owners, etc., they bearing the expense and cost according to their respective shares. Picot v. Page, 26 Mo. 398.

The purchaser at a sheriff's sale of the interest of one of two joint tenants cannot secure a title superior to that of the other. Wilson v. Peelle, 78 Ind. 384.

But where part of the land held in joint tenancy is lost by paramount claim, and one of the joint tenants buys the lost land, the purchase does not enure to the benefit of the other. Coleman v. Coleman, 3 Dana (Ky.) 398.

Where two or more persons have a joint interest in property, they are under mutual obligations not to injure one another; but where one party denies a joint interest, and is in possession under color of title in fee in himself, he can quiet his title by procuring an adverse claim of title, without abandoning his own, even from one who claims to be a joint tenant with the purchaser. Burhaus v. Van Zandt, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 91.

And a recovery of an undivided portion of a tract of land against one who has long been in possession under a recorded deed, of the whole, and an entry under the judgment, give the demandant a rightful seisin of such share in his own right, and does not enure to the benefit of one having a similar claim to the remainder of the tract, or prevent its being barred by the statute of limitations. Gilman v. Stetson, 18 Me. 428.

Joint Purchase Made by Mistake.—Plaintiff, a joint owner of lands with defendant, claimed an interest in a portion which defendant alleged he had purchased on his own account prior to the agreement with plaintiff to purchase jointly. Defendant pleaded a general denial of plaintiff's interest and the court admitted evidence thereunder, but on finding that plaintiff had by mistake purchased the land in question for the joint account, and for a larger sum than that given by defendant, divided the interest in the land between them in proportion to the sums paid. Held, that though the court might have excluded the question, yet plaintiff having received the larger sum, could not complain. Anderson v. Clanch (Tex.), 6 S. W. Rep. 760.

3. Chickering v. Faile, 38 Ill. 342; Williams v. Gray, 3 Me. (Greenl.) 207; Halsey v. Blood, 29 Pa. St. 319.

4. Smith v. Smith, 68 Iowa 608; Handy v. Gregg (Miss.), 2 So. Rep. 358.

If one cotenant redeems the property from a tax sale, the redemption enures to the benefit of all. Minter v. Durham, 13 Ore. 470.

So, also, where, instead of redeeming directly from a tax sale, he agrees with the holder of the tax certificate that the latter shall take out a tax deed and then convey to him. Lomax v. Gindele, 117 Ill. 527.

Presumption.—The purchase at tax sale of land held in joint tenancy, by one of the holders, is presumed to have been made in trust for his cotenants, until the presumption is repelled by their refusal to contribute pro rata to reimburse him for the money advanced. Weare v. Van Meter, 42 Iowa 128.

survivorship between them.¹ A unity of possession, however, is an essential attribute of a tenancy in common,² and the incidents of a tenancy in common are only such as arise from this unity.³ Thus the entry and possession of one tenant in common is ordinarily deemed the entry and possession of all, and such entry and possession will enure to the benefit of all and is coextensive with their common right.⁴ Such entry and possession of one tenant in

1. 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 194.

Lands may be held in common, though one tenant holds by a feudal tenure, and the other in pure allodium. Putnam v. Ritchie, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 390.

A grant of land by the state of Kentucky to two persons as tenants in common, issued after the death of one of them, passed the moiety only to the survivor; and the other moiety remained in the state till the act of 1792, when it was vested in the heirs of the deceased grantee. Currie v. Tibbs, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 440.

2. Blessing v. House, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 290; Brown v. Graham, 24 Ill. 628; Knox v. Silloway, 10 Me. (1 Fairf.) 201; Bernecker v. Miller, 40 Mo. 473; Story v. Saunders, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 663; Wiswell v. Wilkins, 5 Vt. 87.

3. See 2 Black. Com. (Chase's ed.) 194.

4. Clymer v. Dawkins, 3 How. (U. S.) 674; Coleman v. Clements, 23 Cal. 245; Abercombie v. Baldwin, 15 Ala. 363; Bowen v. Preston, 48 Ind. 367; Gill v. Fauntleroy, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 177; Poage v. Chunn, 4 Dana (Ky.) 50; Brown v. Wood, 17 Mass. 68; Barnard v. Pope, 14 Mass. 434; Shumway v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 114; Strong v. Cotter, 13 Minn. 82; Long v. McDow, 87 Mo. 197; German v. Matchin, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 288; Zamhill Bridge Co. v. Newby, 1 Oreg. 173; Baily v. Trammell, 27 Tex. 317; Buckmaster v. Needham, 22 Vt. 617; Thomas v. Hatch, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 170.

A tenant in common has the right to assume that the possession of his cotenant is his possession, until informed to the contrary, either by express notice, or by acts and declarations, which may be equivalent to notice. Aguirre v. Alexander, 58 Cal. 21.

As a grantee is entitled to possession of the whole property in common with the tenant to whom his grantor has conveyed, held, that a demand for the whole would not be too large. Whiting v. Dewey, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 428; Shumway v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 114.

The relinquishment and yielding up to one of several tenants by the disseisor, after a disseisin of five years, all of the right, seisin, possession and betterments which the disseisor had in and to the proportion of that tenant in common in the premises, has the effect to put all the tenants in common in the seisin and possession of their shares respectively, and to prevent the operation of the statute of limitations against any of them prior to that time. Vaughan v. Bacon, 15 Me. 455.

Where one of several cestuis que trust entitled to a beneficial interest in certain land, as tenants in common, takes possession, such possession will not be held to be adverse to the trustee or the common title. Marr v. Gilliam, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 488.

A person entered upon land owned by tenants in common, by licence of one of them, and erecting and occupying a building therein, must be considered as holding in submission to their title until the contrary is shown. Buckman v. Buckman, 30 Me. 494.

One of three tenants in common sold his share on condition that in the division of the land he should have the northern end, and upon that end the purchaser settled, without designated boundary, other than that of the whole tract. Upon the division, he failed to obtain that end, by consent, as he expected. Another portion was allotted to him, and the purchaser, dissatisfied, left it. Held, as to the possession taken by the purchaser, that its effect was the same as though it had been taken by the vendor himself; and an entry by him, though upon one end of the tract, in the expectation that that end would be allotted to him, would have given him possession of the whole, enuring to the common benefit of himself and cotenants, which would have had the effect of preventing any acquisition of possession by an entry under a junior grant, beyond the actual enclosure of the party who made it. Chiles v. Jones, 7 Dana (Ky.) 528.

Where the owner of a mortgage on common will not, prima facie, be presumed adverse to his cotenants,¹ and will become so only when some notorious act of ouster or adverse possession by him is brought to the knowledge or notice of the others;² so the payment of taxes by one tenant will operate as payment by all and will be for the benefit of all.³ Payment of an encumbrance on or a redemption of property by one enures to all,⁴ and a tender by one on behalf of all is good in a subsequent bill to enforce the equity of redemption,⁵ the relation between them being in principle very similar to that between lessor and lessee, the possession of one being the posses-an undivided interest in land is at the same time the owner in fee of another undivided interest in the same land, a possession of the land wholly consistent with his right as a tenant in common cannot, in an action of ejectment, be considered the possession of the mortgagee, unless the fact be shown that the possession had been previously acquired, and was afterwards retained as such. Mellon v. Reed (Pa.), 8 Atl. Rep. 227.

1. Long v. McDow, 87 Mo. 197.

2. Clymer v. Dawkins, 3 How. (U. S.) 674; Abercombie v. Baldwin, 15 Ala. 363.

The entry of one tenant in common, or parcener, will enure to the benefit of his cotenant or parcener, unless it be adverse, or by claiming the whole, in which latter case it will be presumed adverse. Gill v. Fauntleroy, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 177.

The possession of one of several cotenants in common is in law the possession of all, and the statute of limitations does not run in favor of the tenant in actual possession; but the rule is otherwise when the latter disclaims the tenancy in common, and asserts a different claim and an exclusive right. Bowen v. Preston, 48 Ind. 367.

The possession of a cotenant, or tenant in common, will be presumed to be in right of the common title, and he cannot claim the protection of the statute of limitations unless it clearly appears that he repudiated the title of his cotenant and is holding adversely to it, and his acts and declarations will be construed much more strongly against him than when there is no privity of title. Baily v. Trammell, 27 Tex. 317.

A tenant in common in possession of the common estate cannot acquire title to the whole of the estate by adverse possession, unless there be such an ouster of his cotenants as to entitle them to bring ejectment against him. Day v. Davis, 64 Miss. 253.

What Notice Is Sufficient.—Notice to one cotenant is not binding upon all the other cotenants under the same purchase. Parker v. Kane, 4 Wis. 1.

3. McConnel v. Konepel, 46 Ill. 519.

Each cotenant is equally bound to keep the taxes paid, and one who pays all the taxes can only claim to be reimbursed with interest. Morgan v. Her- rick, 21 Ill. 481.

One who as cotenant would avail himself of the possession of and payment of taxes by his cotenant, need not show, to establish the fact of cotenancy, that the conveyance under which he claims passed the absolute title. West Chicago Park Commrs. v. Coleman, 108 Ill. 591.

4. Where a tenant in common redeems a mortgage after foreclosure the cotenants are restored to their former title, and the tenant redeeming has an equitable lien on the share of his cotenants. Calkins v. Steinbach, 66 Cal. 117.

Where a widow occupied lands held by her husband at his decease under a contract of sale, received the rents and profits, and paid up the amount due on the contract, or where she has paid a mortgage thereon, the payment is presumed to have been made from the rents and profits. Such mortgage is presumed thereby to have become extinguished, and to be only available to her upon an accounting. Knolls v. Barnhart, 71 N. Y. 474.

Where, in such case, the widow paid a mortgage, had it assigned to herself, foreclosed it, bid in the premises in her own name and then conveyed them to one of the heirs, who occupied them with her, held, that the interests of the other heirs were not thereby cut off, and that the title acquired by her was not strengthened by the transfer. Knoll v. Barnhart, 71 N. Y. 274.

5. Gentry v. Gentry, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 87.

sion of the others, but if one ousts the other or denies his tenure, his possession becomes adverse; so of a trustee or a mortgagee.¹ But tenants in common of a vessel may deal with each other like owners of separate property,² and a tenant in common who is a tenant for years may set up a claim against his cotenant.³

(a) Purchase of Outstanding Title.—The general rule is that a cotenant's purchase of an outstanding title enures to the benefit of all, whether the several interests of the different tenants accrue under the same instrument, under different instruments, or by act of law,⁴ and in some States this rule seems to apply, however the tenancy may have been formed, whatever the relation of the cotenants with each other may have been, and from whatever source the outstanding title may have been acquired.⁵ But in

1. Willison v. Watkins, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 44.

2. If tenants in common of a vessel are not engaged jointly in purchasing or building ships for sale, they do not stand in such relation of mutual trust and confidence toward each other in respect to the sale of such vessel, that each is bound to communicate all his knowledge to the other which may affect the price or value, but they may deal with each other like owners of separate property. Matthews v. Bliss, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 48.

3. Longwell v. Bentley, 3 Grant (Pa.) Cas. 177.

4. Clement v. Cates (Ark.), 4 S. W. Rep. 776; Brittin v. Handy, 20 Ark. 381; Olney v. Sawyer, 54 Cal. 379; Montague v. Selb, 106 Ill. 49; Bracken v. Cooper, 80 Ill. 221; Wilson v. Peelle, 78 Ind. 384; Rothwell v. Dewees, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 613; Gossom v. Donaldson, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 230; Jones v. Stanton, 11 Mo. 433; Brown v. Homan, 1 Neb. 448; Van Horn v. Fonda, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 386; Boskowitz v. Davis, 12 Nev. 446; Grimm v. Wicker, 80 N. C. 343; Threadgill v. Redwine, 97 N. Car. 241; Page v. Branch (N. Car.), 1 S. E. 625; Leslie v. Northington, Wright (Ohio) 628; Weaver v. Wible, 25 Pa. St. 270; Lloyd v. Lynch, 28 Pa. St. 419; Gibson v. Winslow, 46 Pa. St. 380; Tisdell v. Tisdell, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 596; Braintree v. Battles, 6 Vt. 395; Rountree v. Deuson, 59 Wis. 522.

5. Any title which a tenant in common purchases from any other than one of his cotenants enures to the benefit of all. Lloyd v. Lynch, 28 Pa. St. 419; Gossom v. Donaldson, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 230.

The widow's possession, as dowress and as guardian in socage of minor heirs, is as tenant in common with all the heirs; and her fiduciary relation to them prevents her purchasing an outstanding title or mortgage for her individual benefit. Knolls v. Barnhart, 71 N. Y. 474.

One of two tenants in common cannot, by the purchase of an outstanding title, or of an encumbrance, acquire title to the whole against his cotenant; but such purchase will operate to the benefit of both, and the purchaser is entitled to claim contribution from his cotenant. Montague v. Selb, 106 Ill. 49; Jones v. Stanton, 11 Mo. 433; Van Horne v. Fonda, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 388; Weaver v. Wible, 25 Pa. St. 270; Tisdale v. Tisdale, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 596; Brown v. Homan, 1 Neb. 448; Rothwell v. Dewees, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 613.

The rule that a cotenant's purchase of an outstanding title enures to all, applies whether the several interests accrue under the same instrument or act of the law or not. Montague v. Selb, 106 Ill. 49.

In an action by one tenant in common against others, to be let into possession, held, that the defendants could not justify an ouster of the plaintiff by setting up an outstanding title purchased by them while in possession under the common title; and this although the title so purchased was the true one. They might, however, assert their new title in an appropriate action, after letting the plaintiff into possession. Olney v. Sawyer, 54 Cal. 379.

Applied to Title by Descent.—Where one of several tenants in common by descent purchases an outstanding title, the fact that the common ancestor of all the cotenants had no title, or a de-other States this rule applies only when the tenants stand in some confidential relation in regard to one another's interest, so that it would be inequitable to permit one to acquire a title solely for his own benefit, in which case he will be treated as a trustee for the share of his cotenant, but persons acquiring unconnected interests in the same subject are not, it appears, bound to any greater protection of one another's interests than would be required of strangers;¹ so the tenants desiring to participate in the benefits of a purchase of an outstanding title by their cotenant must ex-fective title, will not shield him from liability to account to his cotenants as trustees of the property purchased, and the rule that where a person who occupies such a relation to another, by the act or consent of that other, or the act of a third person, or of the law, becomes interested for him in a subject of property or business, he is prohibited from acquiring rights in that subject antagonistic to the person with whose interest he has become associated, and if he does so, he holds as trustee for the benefit of that person to the extent of the prohibition, applies to tenants in common by descent with the same force and reason as to persons standing in a direct fiduciary relation to others. Clement v. Cates (Ark.), 4 S. W. Rep. 776.

Personal Property.—Where a tenant in common of personalty has assigned his share, and after such assignment the sheriff, under an execution against the assignor, sells the common property and delivers the same to the other original tenant, who had become the purchaser at such sale, the assignee cannot sue the sheriff for a conversion. Grim v. Wicker, 80 N. C. 343.

1. Roberts v. Thorn, 25 Tex. 728; Brittin v. Handy, 20 Ark. 381; King v. Rowan, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 675; Frentz v. Klotzsch, 28 Wis. 312; Buchanan v. King, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 414.

One tenant in common of a defective title, whose cotenant's interest is derived from him by quit claim deed, is under no such obligation to his cotenant as will constitute him a trustee for the latter of a superior outstanding title purchased by him. Smith v. Washington, 11 Mo. App. 519.

An executor of the will of one tenant in common may purchase the estate of another tenant in common and hold it for his own benefit. Toward such an interest he does not stand in that relation of trust and confidence which would bring him within the well known doctrine of equity jurisprudence. Alexander v. Kennedy, 3 Grant (Pa.) Cas. 379.

Tenants in common, or partners, may well acquire their cotenant's or co-partner's interest at an execution sale by a third party. Gunter v. Laffan, 7 Cal. 588.

Title Acquired by Different Means.—One who has acquired his title to parts of a tract of land through other instruments, at other times and independently of his cotenants, is not prevented from buying in an outstanding encumbrance thereon. Rippetor v. Dwyer, 49 Tex. 498.

F purchases of S an undivided half of a tract of vacant land, and afterwards R purchased the other undivided half of S. Held, that as there was no privity between F and R the acquisition of a superior outstanding title to the whole tract by R did not enure to the benefit of F. Roberts v. Thorn, 25 Tex. 728.

Purchase to Protect Possession.—A person in possession of land claiming title may purchase in an outstanding title to protect that possession. Jackson v. Smith, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 406.

Purchase Under Judicial Sale.—A, who was one of several heirs and tenants in common of certain premises, became the purchaser of the premises at a master's sale, and before she received her deed a house on the premises, upon which there was insurance, was burned down. Held, that A was the legal owner of the house and must bear the loss, but that she was entitled to the benefit of the policy. Gates v. Smith, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) 702.

Where two tenants in common owned certain lands, subject to a mortgage, and after long litigation the joint interest of the tenants was sold to a stranger, and one of the joint tenants purchased the existing mortgage at a great discount. Held, that he could hold it exclusively and enforce it to the full amount. Wells.

ercise reasonable diligence in making their election to do so, or they will be deemed to have repudiated the transaction and abandoned its benefits.¹

The general rule that the purchase of an outstanding title enures to the benefit of all applies to the purchase of the premises at a judicial sale,² and also to a case where the cotenants join in a sale or other disposition of the common property, and one of them either directly or indirectly becomes the purchaser,³ as well as when the outstanding title is obtained from an outside source.⁴

v. Chapman, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) Ch. 312.

Acquisition Under United States Laws.

—The rule that a cotenant acquiring an outstanding title holds it in trust for his cotenant does not apply where a cotenant of land, the fee of which is in the United States, acquires title under Colorado Rev. Stat. 619, et seq. Thus, where one of two cotenants of land subject to entry as a town site dies before the entry, leaving heirs, and the survivor conveys an undivided half of the land to another, who with him acquires title from the government, the heirs of the decedent having taken no steps therefor, have no claim on the purchaser's moiety. Gillett v. Gaffney, 3 Col. 351.

The fact that a party in possession of land is a tenant in common does not estop him from buying in and setting up a distinct and adverse title under an entry, survey or patent, and in such case he may avail himself of the limitation of the Kentucky act of 1809 to sustain his possession. Larman v. Huey, 13 Mon. (Ky.) 436.

Question for Jury.—Two brothers purchased two adjoining tracts of land together, but occupied them separately, each making improvements upon the tract upon which he resided. One of them purchased the interest of the other in the tract occupied by himself at a sheriff's sale and made a lease of the mining privileges, stipulating for a royalty and collecting it. Held, that whether the brother purchasing at the sheriff's sale paid a portion of the royalties to the other and his heirs within the period of limitations, and, if he did so, whether it was as a charity or in recognition of a right in them as owners, was properly submitted to the jury. McCloskey v. McCloskey (Pa.), 16 Atl. Rep. 30.

1. Mandeville v. Solomon, 39 Cal. 125, 133.

2. Two claimants of the same land agreed to become tenants in common, and to sell it and divide the proceeds. One of them purchased the other's interest at an execution sale. Held, that this did not affect the execution debtor's rights under the agreement. Threadgill v. Redwine, 97 N. C. 241.

Where land owned jointly by three is purchased by one, at a sheriff's sale on an execution against them, he cannot set up his purchase adversely to them; at most he can only hold the former interest of his cotenants as their trustee. Gibson v. Winslow, 46 Pa. St. 380.

Where a deed was made to C and H, and the interest of C was sold and conveyed by the sheriff, the purchaser did not thereby acquire a title superior to that of H, nor could C's title by lapse of time have become superior to that of his co-owner. Wilson v. Peele, 78 Ind. 384.

3. Austin v. Barrett, 44 Iowa 488.

Where a tenant in common has sold the land held by him, with authority from his cotenant, and the latter afterwards acquires the legal title and conveys to a third party with notice, such third party takes in trust for the former vendee. Leslie v. Worthington, Wright (Ohio) 628.

A tenant in common who, after conveying his interest to a third person, makes partition with his cotenant as though he still retained such interest by the execution of mutual conveyances with covenants of warranty, is estopped to set up against such cotenant a title to the part conveyed to him acquired by a subsequent reconveyance from such third person. The title acquired by such reconveyance enures to the benefit of the cotenant. Rountree v. Denson, 59 Wis. 522.

4. The possessory title to land was purchased by five tenants in common, and afterwards one of the cotenants purchased the title in fee, and it was sought by four of the cotenants to ex-neither can an outstanding title be set up in a stranger.¹

The same rule applies with equal or greater force to the purchase of land at a tax sale, and if one of several tenants in common purchase the land at such sale, either by himself or through a third person, the title thus acquired enures to the benefit of his cotenants.² The reason for the rule seems to be that as a part of the taxes for which the land is sold is a claim upon the purchaser's share, the sale is based in part upon his own default and it would be inequitable to permit him to profit by his own clue R, the other cotenant, who owned one sixth of the possessory title from the proceeds derived from the sale of lands. Held, that the law raised a resulting trust in favor of R to the extent of a one-sixth interest, independent of the intention of the parties, and forced it upon the conscience of his associates by operation of law. Boskowitz v. Davis, 12 Nev. 446.

A tenant in possession cannot make his possession adverse to his cotenant by taking a deed from a stranger, and thus reducing the period of limitation to the seven years prescribed in Code Civil Proc., North Carolina, § 141, in cases of adverse possession under color of title; but by common law if the possession has continued twenty years, the presumption of his sole title arises. Page v. Branch (N. Car.), 1 S. E. Rep. 625.

1. Braintree v. Battles, 6 Vt. 395.

2. Moore v. Woodall, 40 Ark. 42; Conn v. Conn, 58 Iowa 747; Austin v. Barrett, 44 Iowa 488; Flinn v. McKinley, 44 Iowa 68; Muthersbaugh v. Burke, 33 Kan. 260; Butler v. Porter, 13 Mich. 292; Page v. Webster, 8 Mich. 263; Allen v. Poole, 54 Miss. 323; Dubois v. Campau, 24 Mich. 360; Davis v. King, 87 Pa. St. 261; Battin v. Woods, 27 W. Va. 58.

When a tenant in common takes a deed of the whole property from a purchaser at a tax sale, by paying the exact amount required to redeem, he must be presumed, in the absence of rebutting evidence, to have done so in the exercise of a legal right, and the whole property will be redeemed from the sale. Hurley v. Hurley et al., (Mass.) 19 N. E. Rep. 545.

One tenant in common applied the rents and profits in his hands to the purchase of an outstanding tax certificate, and took a deed to himself thereunder. Held, that as against his cotenant and those claiming under him he could not invoke the protection of the statute of limitations applicable to tax sales. Bender v. Stewart, 75 Ind. 88.

One seeking as tenant in common to avail himself of the possession and payment of taxes by his cotenant, under the Illinois Limitation act of 1839, is not required to first show that the conveyance or conveyances under which they claim passed the absolute title. The transfer of the paramount title is not essential to a cotenancy or tenancy in common. West Chicago Park Commrs. v. Coleman, 108 Ill. 591.

A tax deed acquired by a tenant in common is not sufficient in equity to divest the interest of a cotenant, notwithstanding the holder of the deed may have acquired the tax certificate before he became tenant in common. Following Flinn v. McKinley, 44 Iowa 68; Tice v. Derby, 59 Iowa 312.

After a partition between J and R, tenants in common, the whole land was sold for taxes assessed upon it before partition and the tax title was assigned to R. Held, that he could acquire no title under the tax deed against J. Maul v. Rider, 51 Pa. St. 377.

Purchase, How Treated.—A tenant in common cannot acquire the interest of his co-tenant in land by allowing the taxes thereon to become delinquent and purchasing at tax sale, and a tax deed thus obtained is void and the purchase is treated as a payment of the taxes only which stand as a charge against the common property. Delashmutt v. Parrent (Kan.), 18 Pac. Rep. 712; Brown v. Hogle, 30 Ill. 119.

Tenancy Subject to Life Estate.—If one of several cotenants of land subject to the life estate of a dowress buys in a tax title to the land he will obtain an absolute title to the life estate, but will hold the fee in trust for his cotenants. Fox v. Coon (Miss.), 1 So. Rep. 629.

The tax title of a cotenant enures to the common benefit of himself and his wrong.¹ But this rule does not apply to a purchase by one tenant in common after the period of redemption has fully passed:² and in Iowa it is held that where one tenant in common is not in possession, and his title, therefore, does not of itself amount to an ouster and eviction, his cotenant may strengthen his title by purchase at a tax sale and it will not enure to the benefit of his cotenant.³

But a tenant in common purchasing an outstanding or tax title to the common property is entitled to contribution from his cotenants for the amount paid therefor,⁴ and in cases of the payment of taxes, will have a lien on his cotenant's interest for the amount so paid.⁵

(b) Equality of Shares.—Ordinarily, there is no presumption that the interests of tenants in common are equal,⁶ but where they have acquired their interests under the same instrument, as by a deed, which does not state their respective interests,⁷ or by cotenants; but the common property is chargeable with the purchase money expended by him at the tax sale; and this, though the sale occurred in the lifetime of the tenant of the particular estate. Harrison v. Harrison, 56 Miss. 174.

Evidence of Purchase.—A tenant in common of real estate cannot, by a tax deed, acquire title to the interest of a cotenant. Where such cotenancy is alleged to set aside the deed, the evidence, if only indirect, must be clear and satisfactory. Sheean v. Shaw, 47 Iowa 411; Shell v. Walker, 54 Iowa 386.

Acquisition Through Third Party.—If a tenant in common in possession of and using the whole estate fails to pay the taxes and a stranger purchases the property at a tax sale in such a manner as to be himself entitled to assert his tax title against all the owners, he cannot by the purchase of the stranger's tax title entitle himself to set it up against his cotenants. The purchase by him only operates as a payment of the tax and corrects the wrong he had before committed. Dubois v. Campau, 24 Mich. 360. See also Battin v. Woods, 27 W. Va. 58; Lomax v. Gindele, 47 Ill. 527.

1. Dubois v. Campau, 24 Mich. 360.

2. Kirkpatrick v. Mathiot, 4 Watts & S. (Pa.) 251; Lewis v. Robinson, 10 Watts (Pa.) 354; Reinboth v. Zerbe R. I. Co., 29 Pa. St. 139.

3. Alexander v. Sully, 50 Iowa 92; and see Jackson v. Smith, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 406.

4. Moore v. Woodall, 40 Ark. 42;

Mandeville v. Solomon, 39 Cal. 125, 133; Montague v. Selt, 106 Ill. 49; Lomax v. Gindele, 117 Ill. 527; Morgan v. Herrick, 21 Ill. 481; Rothwell v. Dewees, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 613; Flinn v. McKinley, 44 Iowa 68; Austin v. Barrett, 44 Iowa 488; Delashmutt v. Parrent (Kan.), 18 Pac. Rep. 712; Dubois v. Campau, 24 Mich. 360; Jones v. Stanton, 11 Mo. 433; Brown v. Homan, 1 Neb. 448; Van Horne v. Fonda, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 388; Weaver v. Wible, 25 Pa. St. 270; Tisdale v. Tisdale, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 596.

5. Moore v. Woodall, 40 Ark. 42.

While the purchase of a tax title discharges the lien in the sense that it cannot ripen into a legal title as against the other tenants, yet it remains a lien for the benefit of the tenant who made the payment to compel contribution; and, in the meantime, the other tenants are not entitled to possession of any part of the land. Pub. Stat. Massachusetts, ch. 12, §§ 63-65, providing that a tenant "who pays the whole amount of taxes assessed" against the land shall have a lien as against the other tenants by filing with the register of deeds a certificate showing the facts, etc., apply only to the payment in the first instance, and it is not necessary to file such certificate in case of redemption after sale. Hurley v. Hurley et al. (Mass.), 19 N. E. Rep. 545.

6. Campau v. Campau, 44 Mich. 31.

7. Campau v. Campau, 44 Mich. 31.

A sale to two persons is presumed to enure to them equally in the absence of a contrary showing, and anyone who knows of such an interest must know a patent as tenants in common,¹ they will each take title to an equal undivided share.

3. Dower in Joint and Common Property.—Owing to the principle of survivorship in joint tenancies, the survivor taking the whole, no right of dower attaches in favor of either of the tenants which his wife can enforce unless her husband survives the others, in which case she would be entitled to dower in the whole. But in those States in which survivorship has been abolished by statute, the wife of each tenant would be entitled to dower in his share of the joint property.²

The estate of a tenant in common is subject to dower as if held in severalty,³ but it will be set off in common unless partition be made during the life of the husband between the tenants, in which case the dower of the wife of each tenant is limited to the portion set apart to him.⁴

VI. RIGHTS AND POWERS—1. To Occupy and Enjoy.—Where property belongs to several joint tenants,⁵ or tenants in common,⁶ each has an equal right to its possession. But the possession of one being the possession of all, one tenant cannot eject another whose possession is not inconsistent with his own,⁷ and while that it can only be transferred by its owner or by some one acting by the owner's authority. Keates v. Christie, 47 Mich. 594.

1. Markoe v. Wakeman, 107 Ill. 251.

2. See 1 Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 157.

3. 1 Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 158.

Under the Code of Tennessee, §§ 3244, 3249, providing that a widow shall be endowed of one third of the land whereof her husband died seised, and that dower need not be assigned in each tract when there are more than one, but the assignment shall be according to quality and quantity, so as to give the widow one third of the estate in value. A widow is entitled to dower in land whereof her husband was tenant in common, and in a decree appointing commissioners to assign dower it is proper to direct that dower be assigned in other lands, having regard to the value of lands held in common. So a widow is entitled to one third of the profits in lands on which her husband executed a lease for mining purposes for 99 years at a certain royalty per ton of the product, and which were being mined at the time of his death for her lifetime or until the mineral is exhausted, after which time she should have the use of one third of her husband's interest in the land itself, and this right begins at the husband's death. Clift v. Clift (Tenn.) 9 S. W. Rep. 360.

4. Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 158.

5. See Jamison v. Graham, 57 Ill. 94.

6. Bulger v. Woods, 3 Pinn. (Wis.) 460; Richardson v. Richardson, 72 Me. 403; Southworth v. Smith, 27 Conn. 355; and see Osborn v. Schenck, 83 N. Y. 201; Volentine v. Johnson, 1 Hill (S. Car.) Ch. 49.

Where the possession of land has descended to the possessor's heirs as tenants in common, one of them, who is also executor of the will, cannot hold the land against his cotenants, although he has bought it from a third person claiming to hold a perfect title. Keller v. Auble, 58 Pa. St. 410.

A purchase made by two jointly from a father having no title, it being in his minor children, on the purchase being confirmed by the children to one of the purchasers, the other will be entitled to one half of the land and one half of the rents and profits. Owings v. McClain, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 230.

Where a lot with a dwelling house thereon is owned by two persons as tenants in common and one dies in possession of the whole, leaving a widow residing therein, she will not be entitled, under Missouri Dower act of 1845, as against the surviving tenant in common to remain in possession of the whole lot until dower is assigned her. Collins v. Warren, 29 Mo. 236.

7. Erwin v. Olmsted, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 229; Gower v. Quinlan, 40 Mich. 572;

thus in possession the tenant may, as a general rule, manage the common property in any way he pleases, provided he does not injure his cotenants.¹ But one who is debarred by his cotenants from enjoying the common property has a right to take peaceable possession thereof, even though such possession is acquired by Warren v. Henshaw, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 141.

When personal property is owned by several persons in common, one of them in the actual possession has a right to maintain that possession against the others. In an ordinary case the only remedy of an owner out of possession is to take possession when a fit opportunity presents itself. Southworth v. Smith, 27 Conn. 355.

One joint tenant cannot recover the exclusive possession of the premises against his cotenant. Jamison v. Graham, 57 Ill. 94.

One tenant in common cannot seize to his own use ores mined by a lessee of his cotenant. Blewett v. Coleman, 40 Pa. St. 45.

It is trespass for a tenant in common to eject a person who is on the premises by the permission of the cotenant. McGarrell v. Murphy, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 132.

But a tenant in common, at the request of his adult cotenants and with the acquiescence of the mother of minor cotenants who had no legal guardian, made necessary and valuable repairs on a mill. Held, that he was not, therefore, entitled to possession of the mill until he should be reimbursed for his expenditures. Young v. Gammel, 4 Greene (Iowa) 207.

The objection that a tenant in common of lands cannot recover possession without showing an actual ouster, can only be taken by the cotenant or by one claiming under him. Arnot v. Beadle, Hill & D. Supp. (N. Y.) 181.

1. Peabody v. Minot, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 329.

One of two joint lessors has the right, as against the lessee, to collect the entire rent and receipt therefor, and also to apply the same to the payment of the joint mortgage of such lessors on the leased property; but he has no right without authority to apply rent so collected to the payment of an indebtedness of his joint lessor to the lessee, a company in which both are stockholders; and such application having been made by a charge on the books of the company and the entire rent receipted for, he must account for the same as actually received. Miner v.

Lorman (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 18.

Insurance of One's Interest.—A joint owner of property in common may separately insure his interest against fire, and in case of loss, recover and retain the insurance. The rule against taking title or advantage to the prejudice of one's cotenants does not apply. Harvey v. Cherry, 76 N. Y. 436.

A tenant out of possession has no interest in the proceeds of a policy of fire insurance taken out by the tenant in possession to cover improvements made by him, although the fire which ensued destroyed improvements on the property at the time the insuring tenant went in. This is especially so where the insurance money, when received, was used in restoring the improvements. Anneby v. DeSaussure (S. Car.), 2 S. E. 490.

Flowing Land.—One tenant in common has no right, by means of a dam erected on other lands of which he is solely seized to flow land owned in common without consent of his cotenants; nor can he, by grant of land of which he is solely seized, convey such right of flowage to his grantee. Hutchinson v. Chase, 39 Me. 508; Great Falls Co. v. Worcester, 15 N. H. 412.

Improving Property.—A tenant in common of a well has a right to send his servant down into it for the purpose of cleaning it out, if he has reason to believe that the bottom is filthy. Newton v. Newton, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 201.

Where one of two tenants in common of a ledge of rocks which bounds a water flume, carrying water in which both are interested, improves the flume and enlarges it on the ledge at his own expense, thereby putting the ledge to its only beneficial use, he is not liable to the other for trespass. Johnson v. Conant (N. H.), 7 Atl. Rep. 116.

Acquiring Right of Way.—A cotenant acquires no prescriptive right by use of a private way over the property, so long as all the tenants had an undisputed use of the premises. And where they all unite in conveying the fee without reserving the way, he cannot tack such use pending his joint ownership to his use since the sale to comstealth, but without tumult, breach of peace, or force,¹ and where one cotenant excludes another under a claim of exclusive right, the cotenant excluded is entitled to his pro rata share of the rents and profits received by the other.²

A joint tenant or tenant in common is, however, entitled to the possession of the entire premises as against all persons other than his cotenants, and can maintain suit for its recovery,³ but if a stranger claim under one of the tenants, a cotenant can recover only his undivided interest.⁴

In some of the States a homestead right may attach to an estate in cotenancy,⁵ while in others it is thought that such a plete his prescriptive right. Boyd v. Hand, 65 Ga. 468.

A unity of possession or right that extinguishes a prescriptive right must be such that the party should have an estate in the land a qua and in the land in qua, equal in duration, quality and all other circumstances of right. Thus a title to one undivided third part of a lot as tenant in common does not authorize the holder thereof to set apart any portion of the lot for a private way for himself as if he were sole owner. Reed v. West, 82 Mass. (16 Gray) 283.

A chattel cannot, as a general rule, be replevied by one part owner from another part owner. But if it is attached as the property of one of them it may be delivered to the owner by the officer, after an appraisal had and bond given, as prescribed by Maine Rev. Stat., ch. 114, §§ 65, 66. And after such delivery to him he may replevy it even from his cotenant if it is taken or detained by him. Hardy v. Sprowle, 32 Me. 322.

Removal of Timber.—Pennsylvania act of March 29th, 1824, provided treble damages for the cutting and conversion of "timber trees growing on the lands of another," and Pennsylvania act of May 4th, 1869, provided that if a tenant in common cut or removed any timber without the written consent of his cotenant the injured person should have every remedy that he would have against an entire stranger. Held, that the penalty under the first act was not extended by the second to an action by a cotenant. Wheeler v. Carpenter, 107 Pa. St. 271.

If a minor occupying land in common with his mother and sister, without their knowledge or consent, permits a third person to remove wood the mother and sister may maintain trespass against such third person. Richey v. Brown, 58 Mich. 435.

Married Women.—Code Mississippi, 1880, § 1167, removing the common law disabilities of women does not affect the limitation to their power over estates held in joint tenancy. Gresham v. King (Miss.), 4 So. Rep. 120.

1. Wood v. Phillips, 43 N. Y. 152; Southworth v. Smith, 27 Conn. 355.

2. Richardson v. Richardson, 72 Me. 403; Osborn v. Osborn, 62 Tex. 495.

Where an adventure in the purchase of real estate is joint, each is entitled to participate equally in profit or loss, irrespective of equality of payment; but equity will hold the common property bound for an excess in the sum paid by one over that paid by another. Rankin v. Black, 1 Head (Tenn.) 650.

The Alabama act of February 9th, which is now partially embraced in §§ 3474 and 3475 of the Code, did not totally abrogate or abolish the relation of tenants in common in the cases coming within the purview of the act, but only modified it so as to give to each tenant in common a lien on the share of the other in crops jointly raised, with the remedy of enforcing it by attachment (BRICKELL, C. J., dissenting). Collier v. Faulk, 69 Ala. 58; and see Holcombe v. State, 69 Ala. 218; McCall v. State, 59 Ala. 227.

3. Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150; Knox v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 617; Hart v. Robertson, 21 Cal. 346.

4. Carpenter v. Small, 35 Cal. 346.

5. Snedecor v. Freeman, 71 Ala. 140; McGuire v. Van Pelt, 55 Ala. 344; Greenwood v. Maddox, 27 Ark. 648; Ward v. Mayfield, 41 Ark. 94; Thorn v. Thorn, 14 Iowa 49; Hewitt v. Rankin, 41 Iowa 35; Tarrant v. Swain, 15 Kan. 146; Sherrid v. Southwick, 43 Mich. 515; Lozo v. Sutherland, 38 Mich. 168; Kaser v. Haas, 27 Minn. 406; McGrath v. Sinclair, 55 Miss. 89; Horn v. Tufts, 39 N. H. 478; Jenkins v.

right can exist only where the property is susceptible of several and exclusive enjoyment.¹

Tenants in common, being severally seised of distinct freeholds, neither can bind the estate or person of the other.²

2. Disposition of the Common Property.—(a) Conveyance of the Whole.—Joint tenants or tenants in common may, of course, join in a conveyance of the common property,³ but one cotenant not being permitted to do any act which will prejudice the rights of another, a sale made by one will not divest another of his interest in the common property,⁴ unless he has been duly authorized to Volz, 54 Tex. 636; Brown v. McLennan, 60 Tex. 43; Clements v. Lacy, 51 Tex. 150; Danforth v. Beattie, 43 Vt. 138; McClary v. Bixby, 36 Vt. 254.

1. First Nat'l Bank v. De LaGuerra, 61 Cal. 109; Bishop v. Hubbard, 23 Cal. 514; Elias v. Verdugo, 27 Cal. 418; Wolf v. Fleischacker, 5 Cal. 244; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 121; Borron v. Sollibellos, 28 La. Ann. 355; Bemis v. Driscoll, 101 Mass. 418, Bates v. Bates, 97 Mass. 392; Silloway v. Brown, 12 Allen (Mass.) 30; Terry v. Berry, 13 Nev. 514; Avans v. Everett, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 76; West v. Ward, 26 Wis. 579.

2. St. Paul's Church v. Ford, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 16.

One part owner of a steamboat has not the power to charge another part owner by contracting debts in his name. Brooks v. Harris, 12 Ala. 555.

3. Massie v. Long, 2 Ohio 287; Doe v. Fleming, 2 Ohio 301.

4. People v. Marshall, 8 Cal. 51; Carlyle v. Patterson, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 93; Sneed v. Warning, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 522; White v. Brooks, 43 N. H. 402; Bigelow v. Topliff, 25 Vt. 273.

Conveyance by Deed.—Where a will gave a certain fund "for the benefit of J and her children," and the same was invested in land which was conveyed to "J and her children," held, that J could convey nothing more than her undivided share. Allen v. Claybrook, 58 Mo 124.

One cotenant cannot grant such possession to a third person as to bar or postpone the other's right to maintain a bill to assign dower and set off a homestead to such grantee. Stookey v. Carter, 92 Ill. 129.

Where A and B, having an interest in common with three others, executed a deed of lands in their own names, professing in said deed to act as well for themselves as their cotenants, acknowledging the payment of the purchase money, transferring the title and warranting it "as attorneys aforesaid," held, that neither the title of the cotenants nor that of A and B passed by the deed. Locke v. Alexander, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 155.

Where one of two tenants in common, by will, devised her interest to the other for life, remainder to his heirs, and the other, remaining in possession after her decease, undertook to convey the whole of the estate to one of his heirs only, held, that such heir, or those claiming under him, could not, in equity, be allowed to hold adversely to the other heirs. Hicks v. Bullock (N. Car.), 1 S. E. Rep. 629.

Dedication of Common Property.—The acts of one tenant in common cannot amount to the dedication of part of the common property as a public highway against the other cotenant. Scott v. State, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 629; St. Louis v. Laclade Gas Light Co. (Mo.), 9 S. W. Rep. 581.

An agreement made between one of several cotenants and the county commissioners in regard to the location of a way over the land held in common for the assessment of damages is not binding on the cotenants. Merrill v. Berkshire, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 269.

Acts Not Binding on Cotenants.—Tehants in common of land are not bound by the acts of a cotenant in accepting the balance of the purchase money and promising a deed after the right thereto had become forfeited. Pearis v. Covilland, 6 Cal. 617.

A minor son occupying land as tenant in common with his mother and sister, has no right in himself without their authority, to give, sell or otherwise transfer the timber on the land to a stranger, or assent to his entry on the land to remove it, and for such entry the tenants in common can maintain trespass. Richey et al. v. Brown, 58 Mich. 435.

Employment of Agent.—One of sev-make such sale,¹ or unless the sale was duly ratified by the other tenants. But such a sale is not, as a general rule, void; the purchaser's title attaching to such interest, and only such, as the tenant of whom he purchased was possessed.²

In cases of a common ownership of personal property, where the seller is in possession, a different rule perhaps applies,³ but a sale by one joint owner to himself is open to suspicion of fraud.⁴

eral heirs has no authority to employ an agent to locate a land certificate belonging to all the heirs, and to bind the heirs to give him a certain portion of the land. Keen v. Casey, 22 Tex. 412.

Representations.—The representation of one tenant in common as to the extent of the subject of a joint conveyance by him and his cotenants, cannot estop his cotenants from claiming according to their rights; nor can the representation estop him, unless acted upon by the purchaser. The Dexter Co. v. Dexter, 6 R. I. 353.

1. Sewell v. Holland, 61 Ga. 608.

The acts of one tenant in common in locating land under a deed, will not affect his cotenants, unless it appears that they sanctioned his acts. Jackson v. Moore, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 706.

But where lands were devised to five children, three sons to have an absolute estate, and two daughters a life interest, and a power of sale as to all the lands was given to the executors, who were the widow and the three sons, and the widow and two sons joined in an absolute conveyance, with individual covenants of warranty, the daughters cannot sue for possession, where defendants do not claim the whole title under their deed, and deny ouster, and there is no proof of defendants' possession outside the pleadings, since it becomes a case of tenancy in common, and under Code New York, § 1515, one tenant cannot recover possession without proof of ouster by the other. Earnshaw v. Myers, 1 N. Y. S. 901.

Ratification of Sale.—Where a tenant in common of an equitable title authorizes his cotenant, by parol, to sell his interest in the land, and the cotenant makes the sale, and the former ratifies it, and the purchaser receives the legal title from the vendor, enters into possession, and continues for ten years, making improvements on the land, the tenant in common cannot disaffirm the sale. Workman v. Guthrie, 29 Pa. St. 495.

Deeds executed by tenants in common, and placed in the hands of a third person for delivery, ratify a previous contract made by one of them, on the terms and to the parties named in the deed, and are not a mere offer of sale which may be revoked before acceptance. Johnston v. Jones (Ala.), So. Rep. 748.

2. Sewell v. Holland, 61 Ga. 608.

One who assumes to purchase from one of two tenants in common the entire interest of both, the other, not sanctioning the sale, acquires only the interest of the one from whom he purchased, and becomes himself a tenant in common with the other, to whom he is liable, if he converts the whole to his exclusive use. Sims v. Dame (Ind.), 15 N. E. Rep. 217.

C conveyed land to S and B as joint tenants, and took a mortgage upon it from S, without notice that it was the property of the firm of S and B, which in fact it was. Held, that the mortgage bound an undivided half of the land. Vandike's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 9.

Where two owned a tract of land in undivided moieties, and a conveyance of an undivided two thirds of the tract was made by one in his own name and as the attorney in fact for his cotenant, held, that as the authority to act as attorney in fact did not exist, the deed would be regarded only as the sole deed of, and as passing the undivided half interest held by, the party executing the conveyance. Hager v. Spect, 52 Cal. 579.

3. See Benj. Sales (4th Am. ed.), § 19.

A and B agreed that one should furnish materials, the other labor; that A should fix the price of the product, and that either might sell it. Held, that the death of B did not prevent A from selling and giving a good title. Jackson v. Paxson, 25 Ga. 35.

If one of two tenants in common of chattel sells them, and the other approves and adopts the sale when notified of it by the purchaser, he ratifies it. Musser v. Hill, 17 Mo. App. 169.

4. Smith v. Robinson, 16 N. Y. Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

(b) Conveyance of Undivided Share.—One of several joint tenants or tenants in common may convey his undivided interest in the common property either to a cotenant or to a stranger and either in the whole property or a distinct and separate parcel,¹ and this even though he is not actually in possession, the property being in possession of a cotenant; as in law, the possession of one being the possession of all, the statutory rule making void conveyances by persons against whom adverse possession is held does not apply.²

A tenant in common cannot, however, by a reservation in a deed conveying his undivided interest, create an easement or servitude on the common property as against his cotenants.³

In conveying his interest to a stranger, a joint tenant or tenant in common must do so by deed of grant with words of inheritance, if it is intended to pass an estate in fee; whereas, in conveying to his cotenant, a release by a joint tenant is not only sufficient, but proper, though such conveyance by a tenant in common should be by deed,⁴ but there can be no valid parol sale of land amongst tenants in common in possession.⁵

A conveyance by devise by one joint tenant of his share in those States in which survivorship has not been abolished will be inoperative, the right of survivorship taking precedence.⁶

(c) Conveyance by One of Specific Part.—The general rule is that a conveyance by one joint tenant or tenant in common of a

1. See Rector v. Waugh, 17 Mo. 13; Shepardson v. Rowland, 28 Wis. 108; Elliot v. Frakes, 90 Ind. 389.

Although one tenant in common cannot convey by metes and bounds a distinct portion of the whole tract held in common with others, so as to prejudice his cotenants or assignees; yet where several persons are tenants in common of separate or distinct parcels of land, one of them may convey all his undivided interest in the whole of any one of the distinct parcels, and his deed will be valid and effectual against his cotenants. Primm v. Walker, 38 Mo. 94.

Where a cotenant conveyed his undivided interest to secure his note, he to remain in possession until the note was overdue and unpaid, when he was to surrender possession to his grantee to dispose of the property in satisfaction of the note, and upon the note's becoming due he conveyed to his cotenant, who refused possession to said grantee. Held, that the grantee was entitled to immediate possession upon the expiration of the limitation. Walker v. Teale, 7 Sawyer (U. S.) 39.

One purchasing the interest of coparceners before partition takes only an inchoate title to the lot afterwards acquired by partition; he takes subject to equities existing at the time between the heirs whose interest he has purchased and third parties. Flynn v. Herye, 4 Mo. App. 360.

2. Elliot v. Frakes, 90 Ind. 389.

3. Pfeiffer v. University of California (Cal.), 15 Pac. Rep. 622.

In a conveyance by one tenant in common of his estate in the land held in common, a reservation of his interests in the mines in and upon the land granted is void. Adams v. Briggs Iron Co., 7 Cush. (Mass.) 361.

A and B were tenants in common of a piece of land; A conveyed his interest to a stranger, reserving to himself the right to pass and repass over the land to a wood house standing upon an adjoining lot owned by him. Held, that aside from the question whether such a use of the land would be proper, the reservation was void, as an attempt to create a several limited interest in the land held in common. Marshall v. Trumbull, 28 Conn. 183.

4. Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 412.

5. Spencer's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 317.

6. Wash. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 412.

specific part of the property by metes and bounds to a stranger can have no legal effect or operation to the prejudice of a cotenant,¹ but such a conveyance is valid as between the parties to it, although it will not bind the cotenants not joining in it to whose interests it is prejudicial,² and it will be sufficient to pass all the title of the person making such conveyance to the common property within the boundaries described in the deed,³ the

1. Bartlet v. Harlow, 12 Mass. 348; Varnum v. Abbott, 12 Mass. 474; Porter v. Hill, 9 Mass. 34; Perkins v. Pitts, 11 Mass. 125; Baldwin v. Whitting, 13 Mass. 57; Rising v. Stannard, 17 Mass. 282; Griswold v. Johnson, 5 Conn. 363; Duncan v. Sylvester, 24 Me. 482; Blossom v. Brightman, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 285; Peabody v. Minot, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 329; Jeffers v. Radcliff, 10 N. H. 242; Jewett v. Stockton, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 492; Whitton v. Whitton, 38 N. H. 127; Ballow v. Hale, 47 N. H. 347; Holcomb v. Coryell, 11 N. J. Eq. (3 Stockt.) 548; Boston etc. Co. v. Condit, 19 N. J. Eq. 394; Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; McKey v. Welch, 22 Tex. 390; Dorn v. Dunham, 24 Tex. 366; Good v. Coombs, 28 Tex. 34; Hartford etc. Co. v. Miller, 41 Conn. 112; Marsh v. Holly, 42 Conn. 453.

One joint tenant cannot convey a part of the land held in joint tenancy by metes and bounds to a stranger; nor can one entering under such a conveyance be disseisor of the other joint tenants. Porter v. Hill, 9 Mass. 34.

One tenant in common, owning an undivided interest in real estate, cannot convey to a stranger a certain portion of the tract in common, and put the purchaser in possession of the portion conveyed. Mattox v. Hightshire, 39 Ind. 95; Shepardson v. Rowland, 28 Wis. 108.

The purchaser from a tenant in common of his share, defined by metes and bounds, cannot require cotenants, whose title was acquired after such purchase, to take their share in the remainder of the land. Dennison v. Foster, 9 Ohio 126.

An undivided interest in a specific part of a single tract of land, held by cotenants as an integer, cannot be granted by the mere deed of one cotenant so as to entitle the grantee to partition of that specific part against the other cotenant. Markoe v. Wakeman, 107 Ill. 251.

No Presumption of Separation.—Where one tenant in common sold a portion of the common land, of which he had never been in possession, and over which he had exercised no act of ownership prior to the sale, the court refused, in the absence of evidence of a partition, to presume that the land sold had been allotted to him as his share. Holt v. Robertson, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) Ch. 475.

Purchaser Not a Tenant in Common.—The conveyance by a tenant in common of a portion of the common estate by metes and bounds cannot operate, contrary to the expressed declarations and intentions of the parties, to convey an estate in common, instead of an estate in severalty; and a creditor of the grantee, who levies his execution upon an undivided share of the whole common estate, acquires no title as tenant in common by virtue of such levy. Soutter v. Porter, 27 Me. 405.

2. Crocker v. Tiffany, 9 R. I. 505.
The deed of one tenant in common to a specific portion of the common property is not void, and the grantee thereunder is, upon partition, entitled to the portion conveyed, if the interests of the other cotenants are not thereby prejudiced. Camron v. Thurmond, 56 Tex. 22.

Although a tenant in common cannot impair or vary the rights of his cotenants, yet if he convey a specific portion of the land held in common, or make a contract in regard to it, and on subsequent partition such portion falls to him in severalty, he will be bound by his act. Cox v. McMullin, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 82.

In Maryland, a tenant in common may dispose of his interest in any particular separate portion of real estate which has descended to him in common under the act to direct descents. Reinicker v. Smith, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 421.

3. Crook v. Vandevoort, 13 Neb. 505.
A conveyance by one cotenant give the grantee no greater rights than those held by the grantor. Markoe v. Wakeman, 107 Ill. 251.

grantee taking subject to the contingency of loss of the premises if, on partition, the parcel in question should not be allotted to his grantor.¹

It is held in Missouri, however, that such a conveyance is valid even as to the cotenants not joining.²

Such conveyance by one tenant of a portion of the common property by metes and bounds is, however, valid if co-operated in or confirmed by the other cotenants,³ and such co-operation or confirmation may be inferred from any act which shows an acquiescence in the title of the purchaser.⁴ So where the property consists of several distinct freeholds, a tenant in common may convey his undivided interest in one or more of them and it may be sold on execution, without reference to any of the other parcels.⁵

The above general rule has no application to a common right to the use of water,⁶ nor to a proceeding in rem for the acquisition of property for public use.⁷

(d) Leasing Common Property.—The same rule applies to the leasing of premises owned in common, and one tenant in common not being empowered by his cotenant cannot execute a lease that will bind them,⁸ but a party who is in possession of an estate by the consent of the joint owners is liable to the survivors of them for rent, although he entered under a lease signed by only one of

1. Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 361.

2. Barnhart v. Campbell, 50 Mo. 597.

3. Hartford etc. Co. v. Miller, 41 Conn. 112.

If all the tenants in common of a tract of land give conveyances at different times, by metes and bounds, to the same person, of the same part of the land, the conveyances taken together pass the title. And the same principle where the several interests of tenants in common in a part of the land held in common are taken, at different times, by compulsory proceedings, for public use. Stevens v. Norfolk, 46 Conn. 227.

The conveyance, by a tenant in common, of his interest by metes and bounds, is good with the assent of the other cotenants. Goodwin v. Keney, 49 Conn. 563.

4. Doubtless such an assent would be inferred from a silence of thirty years, during which the interests of the original cotenants had been conveyed. Certainly in case of a mortgage by a cotenant, one acquiring his title from the mortgagor could not deny the validity thereof. Goodwin v. Keney, 49 Conn. 563.

5. Butler v. Roys, 25 Mich. 53.

Where a property consists of separate city lots which have been platted, each lot is presumed in the absence of any showing to the contrary, to be a separate holding. Butler v. Roys, 25 Mich. 53.

6. Adams v. Manning, 51 Conn. 5.

7. Where a town took proceedings to condemn land for a burying ground, but, through mistake, against only one of two tenants in common, held, that the principle that the interest of a tenant in common cannot be acquired by metes and bounds did not apply to such a proceeding in rem, and that, if the town took possession, supposing it had a full title, it was not liable for trespass. Stevens v. Battell, 49 Conn. 156.

8. Mussey v. Holt, 24 N. H. (4 Frost) 248.

A lease by some tenants in common is invalid as to the others who do not join therein. Painter v. Cole, 120 Mass. 162.

Where a tenant in common, without any authority from his cotenant, either written or verbal, enters into an agreement with another to lease the coal under their land, which agreement is never ratified by the cotenant, and the party with whom the agreement is made enters upon the land and makes them,¹ and one tenant in common before distress and avowry may receive the whole rent and discharge the lessee.² Tenants in common who make a joint lease may join in a distress for rent,³ but they cannot recover in ejectment on a joint demise.⁴

(e) Licencing Acts Upon the Common Property.—One joint tenant or tenant in common cannot give a licence to perform any act upon or about the common property which will be detrimental to the interests of his cotenants;⁵ but when the relations of the tenant are such that one may be presumed to have acted upon authority conferred by the other, or when the co-operation and consent of that other may be inferred, the licence will be lawful and binding.⁶

3. Agreements Concerning the Common Property.—Tenants in common may contract with each other concerning the use of the property so held, and the violation of such an agreement gives a good cause of action at law to the persons injured,⁷ and it would permanent improvements on it, and is afterwards forcibly dispossessed by the party with whom he made the agreement, he cannot recover in an action against both tenants for damages for his improvements.

One tenant in common has no power to bind his cotenant by an agreement with another to lease their land. McKinley v. Peters et al., 111 Pa. St. 283.

On the several demise of one tenant in common, the plaintiff in ejectment may recover his term in the undivided share of that tenant, but the lessors of the plaintiff must at their peril take out a writ of possession only for land to which they have title. Godfrey v. Cartwright, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 487.

1. Codman v. Hall, 9 Allen (Mass.) 335.

2. Decker v. Livingston, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 479.

3. Jones v. Gundrim, 3 Watts & S. (Pa.) 531; Nixon v. Potts, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) L. 469; Hoyle v. Stowe, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 318.

4. Harrison v. Botts, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 420; Taylor v. Perkins, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 253; Innis v. Crawford, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 241.

5. In trespass by several tenants in common of land, a plea that the defendants entered, etc., under the licence of the plaintiffs is not sustained by proof of a licence from but one of the tenants in common. Tenants in common are seised of each and every part of the estate, but it is not in the power of one to convey the whole of the estate, or the whole of a distinct portion, or to give a valid release for injuries done thereto, or to give a licence to do any act which will work a permanent injury to the inheritance, or lessen the value of the estate. Murray v. Haverty, 70 Ill. 318.

A licence to mine upon lands given by one tenant in common will not bind the other tenants. Tipping v. Robins, 64 Wis. 546.

6. A licence by one of two tenants in common, who are also partners in the lumber business, to a third person, to cut timber on the lands held in common, from which they procure lumber to carry on their business, is good, and confers title to timber cut by such persons; especially where the licence is in satisfaction of a demand due from both tenants in common. Baker v. Wheeler, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 505.

7. Bond v. Hilton, Busb (N. Car.) L. 308.

Joint tenants may make a subdivision of time for the exclusive occupancy of the whole of a tract of land. Curtis v. Swearingen, 1 Ill. (Breese) 160.

Under an agreement that tenants in common of a mill should occupy in severalty, successive periods of time proportioned to their respective interests in the mill, and that each should make all repairs necessary during his term, not exceeding $3 in amount, and that all repairs upon the mill exceeding $3 in amount should be made at their joint charge. Held, that all repairs at any one time, not exceeding $3 in amount, were at the sole charge of the tenant then occupying; and that when the repairs made at one time exceeded $3, the seem that any contracts or agreements which may be made between strangers will be valid as between tenants in common concerning the common property;¹ but an oral agreement between whole expense, and not simply the excess, must be considered as made at their joint charge. Kidder v. Rixford, 16 Vt. 169.

An agreement by one tenant in common to pay the other for the use of the common property for his own benefit is valid and enforceable at law. Davies v. Skinner, 58 Wis. 638; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 665.

One employed as an agent concerning lands is not prevented from enforcing his claim for compensation under his agreement by the fact that he was himself an owner in the land. Thompson v. Salmon, 18 Cal. 632.

One tenant in common, who has leased to his cotenant may distrain for the rent. Luther v. Arnold, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 24.

As to Possession.—Where one tenant agrees that if the others will furnish supplies for a manufacture, they shall have the exclusive control of the sale of the manufactured article, the right to exclusive possession will follow as an incident of the power to sell. Corbett v. Lewis, 53 Pa. St. 322.

As to Sales.—Where tenants in common agree in writing to sell their land and divide the proceeds equally, and one dies before the sale, the proceeds are considered real estate. Halfenstine v. Waggoner, 13 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 307.

A contract provides that one of several joint owners of land should have a commission on sales which he "effected," means sales of which he was the procuring cause, since he could not complete a sale without the concurrence of the others. McCreery v. Green, 38 Mich. 172.

Mere authority given by one tenant in common to another to sell the joint property, does not divest the former of the right to its possession, nor exempt it from levy and sale under execution against him. Thompson v. Mawhinney, 17 Ala. 262.

Assignment of Agreement.—In an action to recover real estate upon which was a hotel, it appeared that the premises were sold to P, who sold to C and W as tenants in common; that W transferred his interest and a half interest in the hotel furniture to defendant, who agreed to perform the original contract; that W assigned to C his interest in his assignment to defendant and in the original contract, but had failed to pay for the furniture assigned by W to him. Held, that he was rightfully in possession under the original contract, by virtue of W's assignment, and that he had never forfeited his right. Woods v. Burke (Mich.), 35 N. W. Rep. 798.

As to Separate Possession.—If there be two tenants in common of a dwelling house, severally furnishing and occupying different apartments, one cotenant has no right to disturb the other's occupation by removing his furniture. Keay v. Goodwin, 16 Mass. 1.

And if one cotenant lease his share in the common property, the lessee, on entry, will have the same right in relation to the other cotenant which the lessor had. Proctor v. Newhall, 17 Mass. 81.

1. J and D were tenants in common of premises held by them under a lease in fee, subject to a rent reserved, the landlord having a right of forfeiture and re-entry for nonpayment. D, by parol, sold his interest to J, who thereupon took possession, claiming to own the whole. A contract was afterwards made between the landlord and J, in the ordinary form of an executory contract for the sale of lands, by which the former agreed to sell and the latter to purchase the premises at a price specified, to be paid in instalments, and, upon payment, a deed to be executed. In case of default of payment, it was provided that the vendor might re-enter, and that the purchaser should become a tenant in sufferance. The consideration expressed was not the value of the premises, but was made up of rent in arrear and the estimated value of the future rent reserved; the contract was not made with intent to disturb the title under the lease, which was not surrendered or agreed to be surrendered. Held, that such contract did not affect the prior relations between the parties, or change the legal title of J to an equitable one; that there was no surrender of the lease in law, as such a surrender could only be made to a reversioner or remainder man, neither of which positions was held by the landlord; nor was there a merger tenants in common of mortgaged land that the interest of one should be relieved from, and that of the other changed with the entire mortgage debt, is invalid.¹

4. Other Rights and Powers.—One tenant in common of land has authority to settle with a trespasser upon the common property and release him from liability.² And one tenant can mortgage his interest in the common real estate to secure his individual indebtedness, unless it is partnership property.³ Likewise one may redeem the common property sold for the nonpayment of taxes,⁴ or from a mortgage upon the whole,⁵ but in such case he must pay the whole mortgage debt.⁶

of the prior estate, as a greater could not be merged into a lesser estate; nor did the doctrine of estoppel apply to prevent J from claiming under the lease. Millard v. McMullin, 68 N. Y. 345.

An advertisement for the sale of a joint estate, although signed by all the joint tenants, will not operate to bind one of the joint tenants upon a contract for the sale of the land, who does not also sign the contract. Hanks v. Enloe, 33 Tex. 624.

Where one of two joint grantees of land consents that the joint deed may be surrendered, and that the grantor may convey the premises to the other party alone, the party so assenting must abide by what may be done in the way of changing the title, and can have no equitable right to the interposition of a court of equity to enable him to retract, no matter whether the arrangement was because the land before really belonged to the party receiving the new deed, or the interest of the other party yielding up the title was disposed of to him, or it was done in order to shield the land from apprehended pecuniary liability. Dinwiddie v. Bell, 95 Ill. 360.

1. Porter v. Muller, 65 Cal. 512.

2. Hodges v. Healy (Me.), 14 A. 11.

One tenant in common of land has authority to release a trespasser upon the lands from his liability, and the settlement and release will be binding upon his cotenants. And, as a settlement and release of a trespass necessarily operates as a transfer of the property severed from the freehold to the trespasser, they will have the same effect when made by one tenant in common, as it discharges the cause of action. Bradley v. Boynton, 22 Me. 287.

But in New Hampshire, where one tenant in common commences an action to recover damages for a trespass, and another gives a release, it is no bar to the maintenance of a suit, but the plaintiff is entitled to damages only to the extent of his interest. Wilson v. Gamble, 9 N. H. 74.

3. Rupps v. Steinbach, 48 Mich. 465.

C and B, tenants in common in fee, in equal shares, of a message and premises, entered into partnership and it was agreed by the articles that this property should be partnership assets; and it became the place where the business of the firm was carried on. After this B made a legal mortgage in fee of one moiety to secure his private debt to a person who knew that the property was the place of business of the firm. Some years afterwards B absconded, and C was obliged to pay the debt of the firm, all of which had been contracted since the mortgage, and a large balance thus became due to him. Held, that as the mortgagee, when he took his security, knew that the firm was in possession of the property, he had constructive notice of the title of the partnership, and that his claim must be postponed to that of C; and that the circumstances of the debts paid by C having been incurred since the mortgage did not affect the case. Cavendar v. Bulteel, 9 Ch. (Eng.) 79.

4. Watkins v. Eaton, 30 Me. 529.

5. Crafts v. Crafts, 13 Gray (Mass. 360.

6. One tenant in common, of real estate conveyed to two, paid his half of the purchase money, and joined with his cotenant in a note and mortgage to secure the payment of the other half, and afterwards released his interest in the land to the mortgagee. Held, that his cotenant, or one claiming under him with notice of the facts, could not redeem the estate without paying the whole amount of the mortgage. Crafts v. Crafts, 13 Gray (Mass.) 360.

One tenant in common can compel another who withholds the deed under which they claim to have it recorded,¹ and one who claims to be the sole owner under a conveyance from a hostile source and who denies his cotenant possession in common is not entitled to notice to quit.²

VII. DUTIES AND LIABILITIES—1. As to Rents and Profits.—A joint tenant or tenant in common is liable to account to his cotenant for rents actually received,³ but he is chargeable only with what

1. Smith v. Cole, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 248.

2. Clark v. Crego, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 599.

3. Gayle v. Johnston, 80 Ala. 395; Pope v. Harkins, 16 Ala. 321; Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461; Muller v. Boggs, 25 Cal. 175; Austin v. Barrett, 44 Iowa 488; Burch v. Burch, 82 Ky. 622; Cutter v. Currier, 54 Me. 81; Majew v. Durfee, 138 Mass. 584; Dyer v. Wilbur, 48 Me. 287; Buck v. Spofford, 31 Me. 34; Medford v. Frazier, 58 Miss. 241; Hannan v. Osborn, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 336; Irvine v. Hanlin, 10 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 219; Jones v. Massey, 14 S. Car. 292; Pearson v. Carlton, 18 S. Car. 47; Holmes v. Best, 58 Vt. 547.

One who is tenant in common with minors is equally liable to them for the proportion of the rents derived from the common property as if they were of age. Linch v. Broad (Tex.), 6 S. W. Rep. 751.

Where pending a suit for partition, brought by several heirs, one of them had collected all the rent, held, that he was liable therefor, and an assignee for the benefit of his creditors was in no better position. Bridgford v. Barbour, 80 Ky. 529.

M and L, owners of certain premises, leased the same, and thereafter M conveyed a portion of his interest to S. Held, that until agreement between M and L, the lessee and S, as to what share of the rent shall be paid the latter, M and L may collect the whole amount; and when L has received the rent he must account to M for half, it not appearing that S has laid claim to his portion. Miner v. Lorman (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 18.

A and B were tenants in common of a tract of grazing land. A took possession of the land—not, however, excluding B—and erected small houses, corrals and dairy appointments, and permitted owners of herds to bring and graze their herds upon the land, and to use the corrals, etc., A exercising no care over the herds except that he employed a man to keep them separated. The owners of the herds paid to A a certain proportion of the number of their cattle by way of compensation. Held, in an action brought by B against A for an accounting, that A was bound to account and was liable for one half the value of the cattle so received by A and that A was not entitled to anything by way of allowance for his services. Howard v. Throckmorton, 59 Cal. 79.

The complainant and his brother and sister were tenants of certain lands and were each entitled to an equal third part of the same. The lands having been in possession of tenants had run to waste. In this state of the premises the brother (the defendant) went into possession of the lands and improved them; the sister then conveyed her interest to the complainant; a division was made between the complainant and defendant and mutual releases given. Held, that the complainant was entitled to one third of the rents and profits from the time the defendant entered into possession till the sister made the conveyance, and from that time till the defendant delivered up possession, to two thirds of the rent, and that the defendant should be allowed a proper amount for his improvements. Cooper v. Cooper, 9 N. J. Eq. (1 Stockt.) 566.

Where one tenant in common applied the rents and profits of the common property to the purchase of an outstanding tax certificate, and on such certificate procured a deed to himself, and by such deed claimed to be the owner of the interest of his cotenant, or to have such color of title that he could invoke the protection of the statute of limitations applicable to tax sales, a demurrer to a paragraph of answer pleading such statute was correctly sustained. Bender v. Stewart, 75 Ind. 88.

Under Vermont Rev. Laws, § 1202, one tenant in common must account to he has received in excess of his just share.¹ This applies only to such moneys as he has actually received, and not, as in the case of a bailiff at common law, to what he might have made;² and this is subject to proper deductions for sums paid for taxes, necessary repairs, and other necessary expenses incurred for the preservation of the premises.³ This liability to account for rents received in excess of his share is a personal charge upon the tenant who receives them,⁴ and gives the other no lien upon his share of the common property.⁵ Though in New York it would seem that the contrary rule has been adopted.⁶

Many of the United States have adopted the English and common law rule that one joint tenant or tenant in common is not liable to his cotenants for the use and occupation of the common property where he has received no rent from third persons, in the absence of an ouster, an agreement with them to pay rent, or a demand from them to surrender possession;⁷ but if he exclude the other for one half of the rent received from a lessee of the whole property, although the lessee did not use it to exceed one half of its capacity. Holmes v. Best, 58 Vt. 547.

1. Irvine v. Hanlin, 10 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 219; Jones v. Massey, 14 S. Car. 292.

Where one tenant in common takes more than his share of the income, without the consent of his cotenant, he will be liable to the latter in assumpsit for the excess. Dyer v. Wilbur, 48 Me. 287.

A bill for partition may claim an account for rents received by a cotenant in possession of the common property; but only where he has occupied more than his rightful share of the estate and then only for the rent of the excess. Mcdford v. Frazier, 58 Miss. 241.

2. Irvine v. Hanlin, 10 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 219.

A and B owned a building on C's land. A took a lease in his own name and compromised with C for the rent due by paying ten cents on the dollar. Held, that for one half of the amount due him B was liable to A. Mayhew v. Durfee, 138 Mass. 584.

3. Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461.

For rents actually received, one tenant in common is liable to account to his cotenant; but, if the rents were received from a tenant to whom necessary advances to make a crop were supplied, such advances and other necessary costs and expenses incurred, must be deducted from the gross amount received. Gayle v. Johnston, 80 Ala. 395.

4. Hannan v. Osborn, 4 Paige (N.Y.) 336; Burch v. Burch, 82 Ky. 622.

5. Burch v. Burch, 82 Ky. 662.

6. Scott v. Guernsey, 60 Barb. (N.Y.) 163; Hannan v. Osborn, 4 Paige (N.Y.) 336.

7. Wilkinson v. Stuart, 74 Ala. 198; Hamby v. Wall (Ark.), 2 S. W. Rep. 705; Carver v. Coffman (Ind.), 10 N. E. Rep. 567; Reynolds v. Wilmeth, 45 Iowa 693; Israel v. Israel, 30 Md. 120; Kites v. Church, 142 Mass. 586; Sargent v. Parsons, 12 Mass. 149; Hause v. Hause, 29 Minn. 252; Kean v. Connelly, 25 Minn. 222; Webster v. Calef, 47 N. H. 289; Edsall v. Merrill, 37 N. J. Eq. 114; Woolever v. Knapp, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 265; Tyner v. Fenner, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 469; Kline v. Jacobs, 68 Pa. St. 57; Keisel v. Earnest, 21 Pa. St. 90; Neil v. Shackelford, 45 Tex. 119; Osborn v. Osborn, 62 Tex. 495; Graham v. Pierce, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 28; McCrillis v. Banks, 19 Vt. 442; Dodson v. Hays (W. Va.), 2 S. E. Rep. 415.

Tenants in common are seized per my et per tout, and each has an equal right to occupy the premises, and unless the one in actual possession denies the other the right to enter or agree to pay rent, nothing can be claimed for such occupation. Newbold v. Smart, 67 Ala. 326.

New York Code Civil Proc., § 1589, providing for the settlement in an action for partition of the rights of cotenants where one has received more than his proportion of the rents, and § 1666, allowing one tenant to recover his just proportion from his cotenant, do not render a tenant in common liable to account for the rent of the joint prop-his cotenant under a claim of exclusive right or otherwise, the erty occupied by himself. Rich v. Rich, 2 N. Y. S. 770.

One who occupies a farm in right of his wife, she being a tenant in common with the other devisees under a will, is not liable to account to the other tenant in common, either for rent or for a share of the profits, unless there be an express agreement that he shall do so. Wilcox v. Wilcox, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 327.

A tenant in common having hired the share of his cotenant and continuing in possession after the term, and having offered possession of his half to his cotenant, and done nothing at variance with that offer, is not liable to pay double rent under New York Rev. Laws 440, § 21, though notice to quit was given. Mumford v. Brown, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 53.

A tenant in common who uses his estate only to an extent less than his share, and not to the extent of an ouster or denial of the right of his cotenant, is not liable to account to his cotenant; and such use cannot be offset against the excessive use by said cotenant. Almy v. Daniels (R. I.), 10 Atl. Rep. 654.

The joint proprietor of a plantation who cultivates half of it for his own account without preventing his coproprietor from occupying and cultivating the other half is not liable to the latter for rent of the common property. Balfour v. Balfour, 33 La. An. 297.

Leased Premises.—The lessee of the interest of one tenant in common does not, by occupying the whole estate, render himself liable for use and occupation to another tenant in common, to whom he has not attorned, and to whose occupation of his share of the estate he has never objected. Badger v. Holmes, 6 Gray (Mass.) 118.

A tenant in common who takes possession of the common property which has been leased by his cotenant is not liable to the lessee for such possession. Hoopes v. Meyer, 1 Nev. 433.

Where one tenant in common takes a lease from his cotenant of the premises held in common for a term and continues in possession after the expiration of the term, without any new express agreement between the parties or any claim by the defendant to be exclusively entitled to the possession, the lessor cannot recover for use and occupation after the expiration of the term. Dresser v. Dresser, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 300.

A tenant in common of realty who merely occupies the common property without obstructing the rights of other tenants, and who sets up no claim for repairs or other claim for disbursements is not chargeable upon a bill for partition with an occupation rent. Schneider v. Taylor, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 304.

Where a widow as guardian of her children received rents from a lease of property held in common with a cotenant and applied them to the use of herself and children. Held, that the latter could not be made jointly liable to the cotenant for half the money so received if the heirs are liable to such cotenant, they are only liable separately, each for such part of the cotenant's money as was expended for his own benefit. Crocker v. Tiffany, 9 R. I. 505.

Refusal to Occupy.—A father voluntarily conveyed to a daughter a half interest in a house, reserving for himself the possession and control, and providing that she might live in the house. On his remarriage she refused to live there. Held, that she could not charge him rent for one half the house while he lived there and she would not. Crockett v. Crockett, 75 Ga. 202.

But if one tenant in common in working a gold mine receives all the proceeds in gold, he is liable as bailiff for such portion as belongs to his cotenant, together with the actual profit on it. Huff v. McDonald, 22 Ga. 131.

Waste.—One tenant in common of a mine who does not exclude his cotenants may work the mine in the usual way, and cannot be made to account in an action for damages as for waste, nor will he be enjoined at the instance of his cotenants. McCord v. Oakland etc. Co., 64 Cal. 134; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 686.

Mistake as to Extent of Interest.—

That a tenant in common was mistaken as to the extent of his interest when he took possession of the premises, and during his subsequent occupation, is not sufficient to require him to account to his cotenants for his use thereof, where it does not appear that he ever excluded any of them, or that they ever made any claim or demand upon him in the assertion of their rights. Sallie v. Sailer, 41 N. J. Eq. 398.

cotenant is entitled to compensation to the extent of the use of which he has been improperly deprived,¹ and if a tenant occupies the whole estate under an agreement, oral or written, to pay his cotenants for the occupation, the latter may recover for the same.² Where one tenant uses what another cannot use, the consent to such use will be presumed.³

Where one tenant uses the common property or occupies and uses more than his just proportion, to the exclusion of his cotenants, as a general rule the measure of his accountability to them is their share of a fair rent of the property so occupied and used by him. But there may be peculiar circumstances in a case making it proper to resort to an account of issues, profits, etc., as a mode of adjustment between them.⁴

In many of the other States this rule has been rejected, and one tenant in the possession and sole enjoyment of the common property is held bound to account to his cotenant for the income of so much of the property as was productive at the time he

1. Crane v. Waggoner, 27 Ind. 52; Osborn v. Osborn, 62 Tex. 495; Barrell v. Barrell, 25 N. J. Eq. 173.

A tenant in common who prevents his cotenants from obtaining from the premises held in common their just shares of the income the premises are capable of yielding, or who takes possession of the whole and uses them as his own and thereby makes a profit is bound to account to his cotenants, either for the rental value of the premises or the profit he has made. Edsall v. Merrill, 37 N. J. Eq. 114.

Ordinarily one cotenant is not liable for rent while he remains in possession of the common property, all the time denying the title and right of his cotenant and keeping such cotenant from making an entry or receiving any part of the annual income or rents; he is bound to account for what he has received over and above his proportionate share of the annual income or rents and profits. Carver v. Coffman (Ind.), 10 N. E. Rep. 567.

A tenant in common who has the entire and exclusive occupation of the whole or any part of the estate is liable to account therefor; and one who has the income or profit of more than his share is liable to account for the excess to his cotenant. Almy v. Daniels (R. I.), 10 Atl. Rep. 654.

A mortgage made by a tenant in common is not chargeable to his cotenant for the latter's share of the rental value of the premises which are equally open to, and may be occupied by both. But where he cultivates the land and receives the entire proceeds he is chargeable to his cotenant for his share of the profits. Buckelew v. Snedeker, 27 N. J. Eq. 82.

A tenant in common who has occupied and taken the profits of the joint estate is not liable to his cotenant for a share thereof unless he has received money for the proceeds of the crops beyond the amount of his own share. Peck v. Carpenter, 7 Gray (Mass.) 283.

2. Kites v. Church, 142 Mass. 586.

An express agreement by one tenant in common or partner to pay his cotenants or copartners for the use of the joint property for his own individual benefit is valid and may be enforced in an action at law. Davies v. Skinner, 58 Wis. 638; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 665.

A tenant in common of land who makes an agreement with the wife of his cotenant that the cotenant shall have the sole occupation of the land and pay him a certain sum therefor, cannot maintain an action for such occupation if he does not prove that the cotenant had actual knowledge of such agreement or that he authorized his wife to make it. Wilbur v. Wilbur, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 404.

3. Howe Scale Co. v. Terry, 47 Vt. 109.

4. Graham v. Pierce, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 28.

In estimating the value of that portion of the joint property occupied by one of the cotenants with a view to the assessment of rent it is immaterial what the element may be which contributes went into possession ;¹ but he will not be charged for the occupation of such land as was rendered productive by the application of his skill, labor or capital,² except, perhaps, from the time to increase the value. Shiels v. Stark, 14 Ga. 429.

In the case of a tenancy in common, in lead mines, in settling the accounts of the operating tenants, they should not be charged a certain sum per ton for the ore raised from the mine, or credited with an estimated sum per ton for raising the ore and manufacturing; but each so operating should be charged with all his receipts and credited with an estimated sum per ton for raising the ore and manufacturing, and each so operating should be charged with all his receipts and credited with all his expenses on account of the operation of the mine. Graham v. Pierce, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 28.

1. Sconce v. Sconce, 15 Ill. App. 169; Hancock v. Day, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) Ch. 298; Thompson v. Bostick, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) Ch. 75; Jones v. Massey, 14 S. Car. 292; Holt v. Robertson, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) Ch. 475; Jolly v. Bryan, 86 N. Car. 457; White v. Stuart, 76 Va. 546.

Under the statute of this State, which is materially different from the English statute, one of several tenants in common, who has taken the "use" and "benefits" of the interests of his cotenants, is required to account to them for their just proportion of the same, or for their share of the reasonable rental value of the premises. Woolley v. Schrader, 116 Ill. 29.

A tenant in common may recover mesne profits of his cotenant only for a reasonable time after judgment. Hare v. Fury, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 13.

Rev. Stat., ch. 95, § 16, of Maine, which modifies the common law as to the remedy of one tenant in common against his cotenant, applies both to cases of personal occupancy and to cases where a tenant receives rent from a subtenant. Cutler v. Currier, 54 Me. 81.

Under Rev. Stat. Ohio, § 5774, providing that one tenant in common may recover from another his share of the rents and profits secured from the estate, according to the justice and equity of the case; a tenant in common who uses the estate simply to pasture his cattle is liable to account to his cotenants for their share of the value of such use as for rents and profits received. West

v. Weyer (Ohio), 18 N. E. Rep. 537.

Where two tenants in common recovered land in ejectment against a third tenant in common, held, that they were also entitled to their joint action for mesne profits. Camp v. Homesley, 11 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 211.

Where one of two tenants in common receives from the other a lease of the latter's share of the common estate, agreeing to pay rent, and so take possession of the estate under the lease, and then holds over after its expiration, he will not be presumed, as in other cases, to be continuing his possession under the lease, but to be holding by virtue of his original right as tenant in common, subject to his liability to account to his cotenant in the manner prescribed by law; but if, after the expiration, he permits his cotenant to retain and apply on the lease moneys which, being due to them both, have been collected by such cotenant, this is evidence that he still holds under the lease, and is bound to pay rent according to its terms. Rockwell v. Luck, 32 Wis. 70.

2. Hancock v. Day, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) Ch. 298; Holt v. Robertson, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) Ch. 475; Thompson v. Bostick, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) Ch. 75; White v. Stuart, 76 Va. 546.

When one tenant in common occupies and uses more than his share of the common property, he is liable to account to his cotenant for the rents and profits of so much of the common property as he has occupied and used in excess of his share. Pearson v. Carlton, 18 S. Car. 47.

But even if he is in exclusive possession of the land, he is not liable to account if he has actually used no more than his share of the land, and there has been no ouster of the common owner. Lyles v. Lyles, 1 Hill (S. Car.) Ch. 76.

Where a wife's name was signed to a conveyance of her husband's land without her consent, and pending an action by her after her husband's death, in which a decree establishing her title and right of possession to an undivided third was rendered, one holding in good faith a part of the land, under the conveyance, and denying the wife's right to any interest in it, made valuable improvements; the wife, though entitled to her proportion of the rents of such part, of a demand and refusal to give up possession,¹ and he can be charged only with what he has actually received, not what he could have realized by prudent management.²

He is also chargeable with interest from the date of demand or suit brought,³ and being regarded as the agent of his cotenants, the statute of limitations will begin to run against him only from demand and refusal to account.⁴ The measure of damages is a reasonable amount based upon the condition of the property at the time of taking possession and a destruction of the property without fault ends the liability.⁵ A debt from one cotenant to another for unequal use and occupation of the property is a simple contract debt and creates no lien therein.⁶

Crops grown upon the common estate by one tenant become the property of the occupying tenant, and where there is a liability to account it is only for what he has received of the proceeds in excess of his share.⁷

So in case of any dealing or transaction with or concerning the common property whereby a profit accrues to one of the tenants, he will, as a general rule, be held accountable to his cotenants for their just share of such profits.⁸

under Rev. Stat. Indiana, 1881, § 288, declaring that a tenant in common may sue a cotenant for receiving more than his proportion, is not entitled to share in the enhanced rental value resulting from the improvements. Carver v. Fenimore (Ind.), 19 N. E. Rep. 103.

A died intestate, leaving a widow and eleven children him surviving. At the time of his death he was seized of a contract of land containing about 500 acres, in which the widow was entitled to dower, which was assigned to her; several of the children, before the death of their father, built cabins, cleared and occupied small pieces of the tract, and continued to occupy them after his death, no one occupying more than his proportion of the whole. A few years after the death of the intestate a son returned from abroad and called on his brothers to account for the rents and profits of the cabins and land they had occupied. Held, that he was not entitled to recover. Roberts v. Roberts, 2 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 128.

1. Holt v. Robertson, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) Ch. 475.

2. Sconce v. Sconce, 15 Ill. App. 169.

A tenant in common, in possession of all of the land, but who has not ousted his cotenants, is liable only for rents actually received, and for the profits in excess of his share upon lands actually cultivated. Jones v. Massey, 14 S. Car. 292.

3. Jolly v. Bryan, 86 N. Car. 457; Tarlton v. Goldwaite, 23 Ala. 346; Scott v. Guernsey, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 163.

Where no demand has been made upon a tenant in possession, either for possession of the premises or for the value of their use, he is not liable to his cotenants for interest upon the amount found due for such use. West v. Weyer (Ohio), 18 N. E. Rep. 537.

4. Jolly v. Bryan, 86 N. Car. 457.

5. White v. Stewart, 76 Va. 546.

6. Newbold v. Smart, 67 Ala. 326; Bird v. Bird, 15 Fla. 424.

7. Bird v. Bird, 15 Fla. 424; Roseboom v. Roseboom, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 309; Alney v. Daniels (R.I.), 10 Atl. Rep. 654; Peck v. Carpenter, 7 Gray (Mass.) 283; Pearson v. Carlton, 18 S. Car. 47; Lyles v. Lyles, 1 Hill (S. Car.) Ch. 76.

A tenant in common who has received in money more than his share of the profits of the estate is liable to his cotenant in an action at law for the surplus. But in order to support such an action, it must appear that the defendant has received more than his share, not merely of a single article of produce, but of the entire profits of the estate, after deducting all reasonable charges; and that the balance is due to the plaintiff, and not to the other cotenant. Shepard v. Richards, 2 Gray (Mass.) 424.

8. Sales.—If a tenant in common takes money for the common property

2. As to Repairs and Improvements.—Where one joint tenant or tenant in common has made necessary repairs upon the common property, he can recover of his cotenants their share of the expense.¹

In some States this rule is confined to cases in which the repairs are absolutely necessary to the enjoyment of the property, or to prevent it from going to ruin,² and in others such contribution cannot be enforced by action at law unless such repairs were made at the request or with the consent of the cotenants, neither cotenant being more in default than the other for failure to repair.³

One tenant in common of a chattel, in Massachusetts, may recover from another any money expended on it beyond his due whether by design or mistake, he is answerable in assumpsit to his cotenant. Miller v. Miller, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 34.

If a tenant in common sells trees growing on the land, and receives payment in money goods or real estate, he will be liable to his cotenant in an action for money had and received, provided no question is made as to title to the land. Miller v. Miller, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 133.

Plaintiff and defendant agreed to purchase the shares of heirs in lands, each to hold in proportion to the number of shares he purchased, at the value of the property as appraised in the inventory. Plaintiff purchased a share at less than the appraised value. Held, in a suit for an accounting, that defendant was entitled to half the profit so made. Anderson v. Clanch (Tex.), 6 S. W. Rep. 760.

Buying at Foreclosure Sale.—If one cotenant of mortgaged property arranges with the mortgagee to foreclose, to bid in the property, and, after the expiration of the time for redemption, to convey it to such cotenant for the amount of the mortgage and the expense of foreclosure, the other cotenants are entitled to share in the profits of the transaction. Oliver v. Hedderly, 32 Minn. 455.

A and B, being cotenants of real estate subject to sundry mechanics' and other liens, agreed that B should purchase A's interest in the property in the following manner, namely, that they should allow the property to be sold under a judicial decree for the enforcement of said liens, and that B should be entitled as a credit to "one half of the full amount of the principal, interest and costs." Held, that B had no right to purchase said liens for his own benefit at a reduced rate, and that, if he did so purchase them, he was accountable to A for half the abatement so obtained. Phelps v. Reeder, 39 Ill. 172.

1. Fowler v. Fowler, 50 Com. 256; Davis v. Chapman (Md.), 36 F. 42; Alexander v. Ellison, 79 Ky. 148; Swinneth v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 31; Peyton v. Smith, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) Eq. 325; Dech's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 467; Farrand v. Gleason, 56 Vt. 633; Galusha v. Sinclear, 3 Vt. 394.

A tenant in common is liable to his cotenant for repairs that are absolutely necessary to houses and mills already erected and in being which fall into decay, but the rule does not apply to woodland or arable land. Beaty v. Boedwell, 91 Pa. St. 438.

A and B were tenants in common of a mill property, which was run down and nearly useless for want of repairs. A owned a one-half interest and was in possession. B's interest was sold on a judgment and bid in by A, who then made necessary repairs and improvements, restoring the usefulness of the property. A judgment creditor of B redeemed, and brought an action for partition, and the property was sold. Held, that A was entitled, from the proceeds, to be reimbursed for the repairs and improvements made by him. [Reversing s. c., 31 Hun (N. Y.) 522.] Ford v. Knapp, 102 N. Y. 135; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 782.

2. Dech's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 467; Lehigh v. Dickerson, 12 Q. B. D. (Eng.) 194.

3. Calvert v. Aldrich, 99 Mass. 74.

Certain houses were the joint property of deceased and claimant's husband. No express authority was shown from deceased to claimant's husband to repair, or to request claimant to repair, these buildings. Held, that she could not recover from the estate proportion.¹ But there must be a previous request to join in making the repairs, unless there is some prescription or agreement binding either party exclusively to make them.²

This right to contribution for repairs may be enforced by a lien upon the share of the tenant failing or refusing to contribute,³ and a claim for repairs and one for use and occupation may be set off against each other, even where neither the claim for contribution for repairs nor the one for use and occupation is, in the absence of an agreement, the subject of an action between cotenants.⁴

One coproprietor of property held jointly or in common cannot, however, be judicially compelled to incur a debt for improvements in accordance with the views and wishes of the other on the common property,⁵ and the one is not ordinarily entitled to contribution from the other for permanent improvements.⁶

of deceased for these payments. Stackpole v. Stackpole (Mich.), 32 N. W. Rep. 808.

One tenant in common is not liable in assumption to his cotenant for the expense of repairs on joint estate, incurred by the latter without the request of the former. Wiggins v. Wiggins, 43 N. H. 561.

1. Gardner v. Cleveland, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 334; Loring v. Bacon, 4 Mass. 575; Doane v. Badger, 12 Mass. 65; Converse v. Ferre, 11 Mass. 325.

2. Doane v. Badger, 12 Mass. 65; Carver v. Miller, 4 Mass. 559; Converse v. Ferre, 11 Mass. 325.

3. Where houses upon land held in joint tenancy are falling to decay, the joint tenant repairing is entitled to contribution to be enforced by lien, and especially is this the case if his cotenants are unable or refuse to contribute to the cost of the repairs. Alexander v. Ellison, 79 Ky. 148.

A levy against a tenant in common should be upon such an undivided part of the whole premises as the amount of the execution bore to the whole. A tenant in common has no lien for repairs on the common property, as against the levy of the creditor of the other tenant. Galusha v. Sinclair, 3 Vt. 394.

4. Davis v. Chapman, 36 Fed. Rep. 42; and see Austin v. Barrett, 44 Iowa 488.

5. Morgan v. Morgan, 23 La. Ann. 502.

6. Bazemore v. Davis, 55 Ga. 504; Austin v. Barrett, 44 Iowa 488; Stevens v. Thompson, 17 N. H. 103; Ford v. Knapp, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 522; Coakley v. Mahar, 36 Hun (N. Y.) 157; Taylor

v. Baldwin, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 582; Crest v. Jack, 3 Watts. (Pa.) 238; Dech's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 467; Thurston v. Dickinson, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 317; Farrand v. Gleason, 56 Vt. 633.

Where one tenant in common cleared a portion of the common land, and it did not appear that it was done with the assent or knowledge of the other tenant, or that the common land had been substantially benefited thereby, it was held that the other tenant was not liable for any portion of the expenses of such clearing. Kidder v. Rixford, 16 Vt. 169.

Improvements by Lessee.—A and B were tenants in common of land. A leased the land without authority from B, and the lessee made permanent improvements. A dispossessed the lessee. Held, that the lessee had no claim against B. McKinley v. Peters, 111 Pa. St. 283.

A tenant in common of land applied for a decree, and that his cotenants should render an account of the profits of the property, etc. The decree was granted in accordance with the prayer. Held, erroneous, because the court did not direct that an account of the permanent improvements made and paid for should not be included. Nelson v. Leake, 25 Miss. 199.

Plaintiff occupied, under a void lease, land owned by defendant and others in common. He contracted with defendant alone to make certain improvements, for which he was paid in the product of the land used for mining purposes. Afterwards, he was allowed to dig in a certain pit which the defendant had opened, but went on with-

But if the improvements are made at the instance or upon the request or with the consent of the cotenant, he will be liable to contribute his just share,¹ with interest,² but he will not be liable for a further sum as damages,³ and where the cotenant makes different improvements from those intended and agreed upon, he cannot recover for them.⁴

A claim for contribution for improvements gives no lien upon the share of the cotenant failing or refusing to contribute, but a special agreement for a lien may be made,⁵ though in Texas it would seem that the lien would exist independent of an agree-out authority and against the defendant's wishes, and did the work in another place, for which he now claimed compensation. Held, that the contract, whatever it was, was only binding on the defendant, and not on his cotenants. Vaughan v. Cravens, 1 Head (Tenn.) 108.

Life Estate with Remainder in Common.—The sole owner of a life estate, who is also tenant in common in remainder of the fee, will be allowed, on partition with his cotenants, compensation for improvements made during the continuance of the life estate. It is otherwise where the life tenant has no interest in the remainder. Broyles v. Waddel, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 32.

Division Among Heirs.—Land devised by will was sold at judicial sale, and the interest of the purchaser was subsequently acquired by H, who disposed of a part of the tract by making leases for ninety-nine years, and by special warranty deeds. The part disposed of was improved by the lessees and purchasers, and the unimproved portion was retained by H, which upon his death, he devised by will. Upon action brought by certain heirs of the original owner and devisor, they were adjudged to be owners of seven thirty-sixths of the whole tract, and, in a suit for partition, it was held that the entire tract should contribute to make up the value of the portion taken from the unimproved tract of H's devisees, and that, to make up this contribution, the value of the land must be estimated without regard to the improvements, and that every portion of the tract must be charged with a sum proportioned to its value. Glittings v. Worthington (Md.), 9 Atl. Rep. 228.

Doctrine of Accountability.—Neither the statutory doctrine of "betterments," nor the act of Leg. South Carolina 1885, relating to actions for the recovery of land, authorizing defendants to set up claims for betterments or improvements by answer, applies to an action for partition between tenants in common, which is governed by the equitable doctrine of the accountability of one tenant in common with his cotenants when he has increased the value of the common property by improvements, and 'is at the same time liable for rents and profits. McGee v. Hall (S. Car.), 6 S. E. Rep. 566.

1. Taylor v. Baldwin, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 582; Sears v. Munson, 23 Iowa 380; Houston v. McCluney, 8 W. Va. 135; and see Bazemore v. Davis, 55 Ga. 504; Young v. Polack, 3 Cal. 208; Bayley v. Denny, 26 La. Ann. 255; Walter v. Greenwood, 29 Minn. 87; Stevens v. Thompson, 17 N. H. 103; Coakley v. Mahar, 36 Hun (N. Y.) 157; Ford v. Knapp, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 522; Dech's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 467.

2. Sears v. Munson, 23 Iowa 280; Young v. Polack, 3 Cal. 208.

3. Young v. Polack, 3 Cal. 208.

4. Conrad v. Starr, 50 Iowa 470.

5. If advances are made by one tenant in common, at the request of his cotenant, and upon the promise of repayment, for the purpose of making permanent improvements upon the premises held in common, he has only the personal security of his cotenant for repayment, and no lien upon the property thereof unless by special agreement. Taylor v. Baldwin, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 582.

When two joint tenants of real estate agree with each other that one shall, with his own money, erect improvements on the real estate jointly held, and have a lien on the interest of the other, for the money so expended, the agreement with the actual erection of the improvements by one, and the acquiescence of the other constitutes such a lien as will be recognized and enforced in a court of equity. Houston v. McCluney, 8 W. Va. 135.

ment therefor,¹ but such lien will not take precedence over a levy or attachment by a creditor of the tenant failing to contribute, whether such creditor had notice of it or not.²

A joint tenant or tenant in common who has made improvements upon the common property is entitled to an equitable partition thereof, the only good faith required being that they must have been made honestly for the purpose of improving the property,³ and, as a general rule, the improvements made by a tenant will be offset against the rents and profits which have accrued to him in excess of his share.⁴

Such claim for contribution for improvements is assignable, but will not pass by a quit claim deed of the premises.⁵

3. Sharing Burdens and Losses.—It is a general rule that a joint tenant or tenant in common claiming an equality of benefit must submit to an equality of burden,⁶ and even where the loss is

1. The appellee and one L leased land contiguous to certain tracts owned by them and enclosed and used in common all said lands. Appellee, at the request of L, paid all the rent of the leased land and expense of fencing. With the consent of the appellee, L sold his interest to T, who contracted to pay to the appellee such sum as was due him from L on account of the matters aforesaid and gave his note for an amount which included said sum. T subsequently conveyed his interest to his wife. Held, that appellee is entitled to a lien on said leased lands for the money expended in making improvements thereon at the request of his cotenant, and that such lien binds the land in the hands of Mrs. T, because she had notice of the terms of the contract between her husband and L. Torrey v. Martin (Tex.). 4 S. W. Rep. 642.

2. Houston v. McCluney, 8 W. Va. 135.

3. Pall v. Piddock, 21 N. J. Eq. 311; Allen v. Hall, 50 Me. 253.

It is no bar to equitable partition that the tenant who made the improvements knew, at the time, that an undivided share in the land was held by another. Hall v. Piddock, 21 N. J. Eq. 311.

4. See Gayle v. Johnston, 80 Ala. 395.

Where a tenant in common improves the property while in possession and claiming to be sole owner, without permission or request from the cotenant, the latter is not chargeable with the value of the improvements, beyond her share of the rents chargeable to the former. Bazemore v. Davis, 55 Ga. 504.

A joint tenant or tenant in common, who has made improvements on land before partition, cannot be compelled by his cotenant to pay rent for such improvements which fall to his share on partition being made. Nelson v. Clay, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 138.

Effect of Dissolain.—The rule that a tenant in common is not liable to his cotenants for rents and profits of the land received by him, unless he has received more than his share, does not apply where he disseises his cotenants; nor in such case is he entitled to contribution from his cotenants for any improvements he may have put upon the land. Austin v. Barrett, 44 Iowa 488.

Improvements Capable of Removal.—

One could not be allowed for double boarding the mill or putting in tank, inspirator, platform, or new boiler; but for such additions as could not be removed without substantial injury to the common property the other should be charged at the sum they enhance the value of the common property. No allowance can be made for insurance. Neither could he be charged for the use of the property when unoccupied without the fault of the other. Farrand v. Gleason, 56 Vt. 633.

But in Alabama a tenant in common asking for equitable partition and an allowance for his improvements is not bound to pay for his use and occupation. Wilkinson v. Stuart, 74 Ala. 198.

5. Curtis v. Poland, 66 Tex. 511.

6. Wilton v. Tazewell, 86 Ill. 29.

Where two own a tract of land as tenants in common, and a third person caused by the errors in judgment, carelessness or inattention of the tenant in charge of the property, it will still fall upon them equally.¹ But when the act by which the loss is caused amounts to more than mere negligence or error in judgment and consists of a positive wrong or a nuisance, the loss must remain with the party whose act causes it,² whether the injury thus inflicted falls on a cotenant or on a third party.³ acquires title to a portion thereof by adverse possession under the statute of limitations, the portion thus lost will be the common loss of the two estates held in common, and will be distributed between them according to their respective interests. Pipkin v. Allen, 29 Mo. 229.

A and B were tenants in common of a tract of land. A, with the assent of B, employed a surveyor to run the boundaries of their land, and in doing so A, accompanied by the surveying party, committed a trespass on an adjoining tract. Held, that B was equally liable for such trespass. Elliott v. McCay, 4 Jones (N. Car.) L. 59.

Land held in common by heirs was ordered sold to pay the ancestor's debts, and all but one of the tenants joined in making up the sum necessary to avoid a sale. Held, that the share of the tenant not contributing was chargeable with a pro rata part of the amount so paid. Griffith v. Robinson, 14 Ill. App. 377.

Where a tenant in common procures at a reasonable price a widow's right of dower and homestead in the land, his cotenant must contribute to the cost. Wilton v. Tazewell, 86 Ill. 29.

But a co-owner of a ram is not liable to one injured by the ram which has escaped from the other co-owner, who alone has possession of him. Marsh v. Hand, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 339.

Two out of three tenants in common executed a lease for years of the whole estate, by which the lessee covenanted to insure for the benefit of the lessors. A policy was obtained accordingly, and assigned to one of the two cotenants, who recovered the whole amount of a loss from the insurers. Held, that he was liable to an action by the third cotenant for his proportion of the amount, and that the admission in evidence of a conversation between the defendant and a third person before the assignment of the policy, for the purpose of showing that the assignment was to be for the benefit of all the owners of the property, was no ground for a new trial. Starks v. Sikes, 8 Gray (Mass.), 609.

1. Where one of two joint owners of a vessel took upon himself the management, direction and control of the whole vessel, and, by his carelessness, inattention, and negligent and improper conduct, the vessel took fire and was consumed, held, that he was not liable to the other joint owner, even though he assumed the management, etc., without the licence or consent of the other. Moody v. Buck, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 304.

If one tenant in common, authorized to improve the property, act prudently and in good faith, he is not to be held responsible to the other for errors of judgment, either as to the character or construction of the improvements, but will be entitled to contribution from his cotenant. Reed v. Jones, 8 Wis. 421.

2. If one of two tenants in common of a mill use it to the nuisance of a stranger, the other owner, not actually participating in the wrong, is not liable. Simpson v. Seavey, 8 Me. (Greenl.) 138.

3. Where certain hay belonging to A and B was deposited in the barn of B, with the consent of A, held, that A had no right to break and enter the barn for the purpose of carrying away the hay or any part of it, and that such breaking and entering was a trespass. Crocker v. Carson, 33 Me. 436.

But one making bricks on land, with permission from one of the joint owners, is not liable to the other for a trespass. Shepherd v. Young, 2 La. Ann. 238.

A tenant in common, who removes a structure from the land without injuring it unnecessarily, is not liable in trespass nor for waste to his cotenant, the structure having been placed there by plaintiff without defendant's assent, and its maintenance excluding defendant from that portion of the land. Byam v. Bickford, 140 Mass. 31.

Under certain acts of the State, and of the United States, payment was to be made by a city to those claimants of certain lands who should file plats and

So damages recovered by one of two or more cotenants for injuries to the common property will enure to the benefit of all.¹

4. Taxes and Encumbrances.—A joint tenant or tenant in common who has paid the taxes upon the whole of the common property, or who has purchased at a tax sale is entitled to be reimbursed for his advances with interest from the date of payment,² and he will have a lien upon the common property to secure such reimbursement.³ The interest of one tenant may be sold to meet his taxes, even though those of the other have been paid.⁴

pay taxes. A was a claimant, and, having done that which was required, he paid accordingly. Before the legislation aforesaid, A had conveyed to B an undivided interest in a parcel of the land so claimed. B sued A for a part of the money received by A from the city. B had neither filed a plat nor paid taxes, and could have recovered nothing from the city. Held, that his action against A could not be maintained. Howard v. Donahue, 60 Cal. 264.

Conversion.—A tenant of personal property who, without the consent of his cotenant, sells the property as his own, is liable for conversion of his cotenant's share. Trees cut by one cotenant of land without the consent of the other belong, after the severance, to the cotenants of the land; and if the wrongdoer sells the logs as his own without the consent of his cotenant, he is liable to him for converting his share. Shepard v. Pettit, 30 Minn. 119; Sullivan v. Lawler, 72 Ala. 74.

The cotenant who has wrongfully sold timber from the land cannot set up as a defence that the other had previously done so. That the present defendant took his proportion of the price of the previous sale does not tend to show that such sale was authorized by him. Dwinell v. Larrabee, 38 Me. 464.

Assault and Battery.—If two persons agree to cultivate land on shares, each has a right to go upon the premises, by himself, and his authorized agents, to remove his share of the crops; and if the agent of one of them goes upon the premises for this purpose, and is endeavoring to take the share of his principal from a cart in which the other has deposited crops gathered by him, a servant of the latter, who forcibly removes such agent from the land by his master's orders, is guilty of an assault and battery. Com. v. Rigney, 4 Allen (Mass.) 316.

1. Becuel v. Wagnespach (La.), 3 S. 536.

2. Oliver v. Montgomery, 39 Iowa 601; Paine v. Slocum, 56 Vt. 504; Kites v. Church, 142 Mass. 586.

Where one of two tenants in common of land paid all the taxes thereon, held, that he could not recover the amount paid in excess of his own share from a purchaser of his cotenant's interest without notice of the claim, nor make it a charge upon the land. Stover v. Cory, 53 Iowa 708.

Life Estate and Remainder.—The fact that a remainder man paying taxes to prevent a sale of the property resided with the tenant thereof does not deprive the former of the right of contribution from his cotenants. Harrison v. Harrison, 56 Miss. 174.

A tenant in common for life of one-third part of real estate is bound by law to pay one third of the taxes assessed thereon and one third of the expenses of the necessary repairs of the premises, made for the common benefit. Anderson v. Greble, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 136.

Offsetting Against Rents.—Where one cotenant recovers from another for receiving more than his just proportion of rents and profits of the common property, the latter is entitled to be allowed to offset, in reduction of the amount recovered, all sums paid by him, within six years, for taxes upon the former's share of the estate. Kean v. Connelly, 25 Minn. 222.

Naming Owners.—Land was listed for taxation in the name of "B E's heirs." Held that the taxes were not invalidated by this method of naming the owners, so as to prevent a cotenant, who has paid such taxes, from recovering a proportionate share from the other cotenants. Eads v. Retherford (Ind.), 16 N. E. Rep. 587.

3. Oliver v. Montgomery, 42 Iowa 36.

4. Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 349.

So one joint tenant or tenant in common having advanced money to pay off an encumbrance, the others should be required to pay to him their proportionate shares.¹ One of several mortgagors of land owned by all in common cannot, after payment of his proportionate share of the mortgage, compel the mortgagee upon foreclosure first to resort to the interest of his cotenants,² but one tenant who has removed an encumbrance from the common estate has an equitable lien upon the shares of his cotenants for the repayment to him of their proportionate shares,³ and a

1. Carter v. Penn, 99 Ill. 390; Furman v. McMillan, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 121; Newbold v. Smart, 67 Ala. 326; Titsworth v. Stout, 49 Ill. 78.

Where one of six tenants in common, it not being shown which, is estopped to dispute an encumbrance, it is good as to one sixth of the title, against subsequent purchasers, after possession under the encumbrance by one claiming the benefit of it. Bryan v. Ramirez, 8 Cal. 461.

C, the widow, and T and H, the adult sons of J, who died intestate, borrowed of B $2,000 to pay the debts of the estate, securing the loan on land of which J died seized, by trust deed to E. A bill for partition was filed, in which F, a minor son, and E, the trustee, were made parties, but B was not joined. The court decreed that the land be divided into five lots; that lot 1 be sold to pay the encumbrance, lot 2 be assigned to H, lot 3 to F, lot 4 to C, and lot 5 to T. T conveyed lot 5 to H, who conveyed separate parts thereof to S, M and V. H paid to E his portion of the incumbrance, and receiving a release of lot 2, and the widow paid $450 as her portion of the encumbrance due. Lot 1 had been sold by the master, and a balance of $930 left due on the encumbrance, and E, as trustee, sold the part of lot 5 which had been conveyed to S, and it was bid in by S for the balance due on the trust deed, which was paid to E, who executed a release of the trust deed. Held, that B, not being a party to the partition suit, was not bound thereby, and could not be compelled to refund the money, but that S was entitled to contribution, and that the encumbrance should be apportioned upon the several interests, so that each should pay its ratable share. Vogel v. Brown (Ill.), 11 N. E. Rep. 327.

A and B being tenants in common, B mortgaged his interest to A for a sum certain, and also for future advances, and subsequently they both brought suit for a trespass to the common property. During the suit, B conveyed his title to the defendant wife, but not his interest in the action. On a bill to foreclose, and for accounting between tenants in common, held, that after the conveyance only the taxes and reasonable expenses in paying them could be allowed, and nothing for the litigation. But one half the disbursements on account of the litigation incurred before the conveyance should be allowed under the accruing clause in the mortgage. Paine v. Slocum, 56 Vt. 504.

Where two bought a mill jointly, and not as partners, and gave joint notes for the purchase money, the funds of the firm afterwards received were held not to be applicable to the share each one was bound to pay; and the court below was right in refusing to charge that the possession of the notes by one of the partners created no liability for contribution. Wall v. Fife, 37 Pa. St. 394.

2. Schoenewald v. Dreden, 8 Ill. App. 389.

Where one of two tenants in common has paid his share of a joint mortgage, and the other has mortgaged his portion a second time, the former is entitled to a discharge, and the later mortgage cannot have the first mortgage satisfied from the joint property, or postponed to his own on the ground that the release is in fraud of his rights. Southworth v. Parker, 41 Mich. 108.

Mortgage of Undivided Interest.—

Where an owner of an undivided interest in goods mortgages them, an agreement by the other owner to pay the mortgage, or an actual part payment, will not of itself bring his own interest within the mortgage. Keatles v. Christie, 47 Mich. 594.

3. Where, under Alabama Code, § 2191, A and B, purchasers, having taken the title in their joint names, are cotenants, and jointly mortgage the land homestead right cannot be set up by one of his cotenants against such lien.¹

5. As to Purchase Money, Care and Management.—Where a joint tenant or tenant in common has paid all or more than his share of the purchase price of the common property, his cotenants must contribute their proportionate share of the expense,² and the cotenant paying more than his share has a lien upon the common property for its repayment.³

Joint or common owners are not entitled to charge each other for services rendered in the care and management of the common property unless there is a special agreement or a mutual understanding to that effect,⁴ and such agreement will not be extended beyond its terms.⁵

to indemnify their surety on the purchase money note, A paying more than his proportion of the debt, has an equitable lien on B's interest for the excess. Newbold v. Smart, 67 Ala. 326.

The rule that a tenant in common who has removed an encumbrance from the common estate has an equitable lien for contributing to the extent of his cotenant's respective interests, enforced under the provisions of the Illinois Partition act of 1861 for the apportionment of encumbrances; although after foreclosure of the encumbering mortgage the cotenant had demanded and received all (instead of half) the redemption money from the master, and instead of cancelling had treated the certificate as in force against the cotenant. Titsworth v. Stout, 49 Ill. 78.

One of two joint purchasers of land, who pays more than his share, has a right to be reimbursed out of the land, and to have debts which were created by money jointly borrowed to pay on the land, paid before an attaching creditor of the other can take any proceeds. Furman v. McMillan, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 121.

1. Newbold v. Smart, 67 Ala. 326.

2. See Leitch v. Little, 14 Pa. St. 250.

A tenant in common who has paid the entire purchase price, and is in possession, collecting the rents and profits and not accounting therefor, is under no obligations to pay the taxes assessed to his cotenant. Oglesby v. Hollister (Cal.), 18 Pac. Rep. 146.

3. Newbold v. Smart, 67 Ala. 326; Millard v. McMullin, 18 N. Y. 345.

A and B were tenants in common of an estate, for which B had paid his share of the purchase money, and which they divided by partition. A died and his heirs agreed that his widow should retain possession of A's part, which B afterward leased from her. The former owner brought ejectment against B to recover A's part of the purchase money, which B paid. Held, that he could hold the land as security for the repayment to him of the purchase money, but for no other debt against the heirs of his cotenants. Leitch v. Little, 14 Pa. St. 250.

Title in One Cotenant.—If two persons are the joint owners of lands, but the legal title is in one of them, and the other, who has a mere equity in the land, is indebted to the one who has the legal title, the latter will not be forced to part with the legal title until the discharge of his indebtedness to him, and until he is freed from liability for him, and his representatives, heirs and devisees have the same rights. Williams v. Love, 2 Head (Tenn.) 80.

4. Fuller v. Fuller (Fla.), 2 So. Rep. 426; Hamilton v. Conine, 28 Md. 635; Franklyn v. Robinson, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 157; and see Anderson v. Clanch (Tex.), 6 S. W. Rep. 760.

A and B were the owners of three-fourths of a certain oil lease, and C was the owner of the remaining fourth. A and B agreed that B was to work the well in place of a former employe hired by C, but C would not assent to this arrangement. B, however, did work the well, and then brought an action against C to recover his one fourth of the expenses of working the well. C had received his share of the product of the well. Held, that C was not liable to B, whom he had not employed. Thompson v. Newton (Pa.), 7 Atl. Rep. 64.

5. Plaintiff and defendant agreed that the latter should manage lands jointly purchased, and deduct reasonable com-

VIII. ADVERSE POSSESSION AND THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS—

1. What Constitutes Adverse Possession.—The entry and possession of one joint tenant or tenant in common being, prima facie, in support of his cotenant's title, to constitute an adverse possession there must be some notorious and unequivocal act indicating an intention to hold adversely,¹ or an actual disseisin or ouster.² The silent and peaceable possession of one tenant, with no act which can amount to an ouster of his cotenants, is not adverse,³ so either actual notice of the adverse claim must be brought home to the latter, or there must have been unequivocal acts, open and public, making the possession so visible, hostile, exclusive and notorious that notice may fairly be presumed,⁴ and the pendent and expenses from the rents. Defendant did not agree to contribute any sum for rent. Held, in accounting, that plaintiff could not charge defendant with use and occupation. Anderson v. Clanch (Tex.), 6 S. W. Rep. 760.

1. Warfield v. Lindell, 30 Mo. 272; Peeler v. Guilkey, 27 Tex. 355; Purcell v. Wilson, 4 Gratt. (Va.) 16; Allen v. Hall, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 131.

2. Purcell v. Wilson, 4 Gratt. (Va.) 16; Holley v. Hawley, 39 Vt. 525; Gray v. Givens, 2 Hill (S. Car.) Ch. 511.

Possession by one tenant in common will not per se constitute an adverse possession against his cotenant. But where, by some notorious act, he claims an exclusive right, though it be under a title which is void, the statute of limitations shall run from the time of such claim. Jackson v. Tibbets, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 241; Clapp v. Bromagham, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 530.

Although a tenant in common of land has been in the sole reception of the profits for more than seven years, yet, if there is not evidence to the contrary, it will be presumed that his original entry was permissive, and, under an assertion of both his own claim and that of his cotenant, a subsequent claim cannot make his possession adverse without proof of actual ouster. Linker v. Benson, 67 N. Car. 150.

One of a number of heirs to realty cannot obtain title by adverse possession, as against the others, without rebutting the presumption that he holds for the benefit of all, and without showing that he has done some notorious, hostile act inconsistent with their rights. Berg v. McLafferty (Pa.), 12 Atl. Rep. 460.

Possession of a tenant in common is prima facie not adverse to his cotenant; and prerenancy of profits, especially for a time short of the statute of limitations, does not make it otherwise. Tenant of a tenant in common may well purchase the title of a cotenant. Catlin v. Kidder, 7 Vt. 12.

3. Challefoux v. Ducharme, 8 Wis. 287; s. c., 4 Wis. 554.

A tenant in common in possession of the common estate cannot acquire title to the whole of the estate by adverse possession, unless there be such an ouster of his cotenants as to entitle them to bring ejectment against him. Day v. Davis, 64 Miss. 253.

If one tenant in common sues a writ of entry against his cotenant, who pleads nul disseisin, proof of the defendant's title as tenant in common will not now entitle him to judgment, Maine Stat. 1826, ch. 344, having rendered it necessary that he should also prove an actual ouster. Cutts v. King, 5 Me. (5 Greenl.) 482.

It appeared from the plaintiff's testimony that the defendant entered upon the land in controversy some years before he acquired his title, and continued ever afterwards to occupy it for a residence and for cultivation; but there was no evidence of any adverse claim on his part. Held, that the evidence did not show an adverse possession. Greer v. Tripp, 56 Cal. 209.

Though, in South Carolina, a purchaser from one of several cotenants of a part of a tract of land, without reference to the title of the others, does not necessarily become a tenant in common, so as to prevent him from perfecting his title by adverse possession, under the statute of limitations, it being only necessary in order to constitute adverse possession, that the land should be held as one's own. Gray v. Bates, 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 498.

4. Culow v. Rhodes, 87 N. Y. 348; Gray v. Givens, 2 Hill (S. Car.) Ch.

statute of limitations will begin to run only from the time of such notice.¹

Exclusive possession is not necessarily adverse;² it must appear that the common property has been used in some manner otherwise than in the usual and legitimate exercise of the right of enjoyment.³

An infant is not chargeable with notice,⁴ and a husband and wife cannot hold adversely to each other.⁵

2. Ouster and Disseisin.—One joint tenant or tenant in common may oust or disseise his cotenant,⁶ and such ouster is of the same

511; Northrop v. Marquam (Oreg.), 18 Pac. Rep. 449.

The adverse possession of a tenant in common may be demonstrated by circumstances; actual notice need not be given. Lodge v. Patterson, 3 Watts (Pa.) 74.

One tenant in common can oust his cotenant and hold in severalty; but a silent possession, accompanied by no act which can amount to an ouster, or give notice to his cotenant that his possession is adverse, is not an adverse possession. McClung v. Ross, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 116.

A father who is a tenant in common with his children of slaves, for a part of whom he is guardian, will be presumed to hold the slaves under the joint title, and to make out a case of adverse holding, he must show clearly that he held solely for himself, adversely to the others, and that they had knowledge of such claim and holding. Gannaway v. Tarp-ley, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 572.

A declaration of an intention to hold adversely made to a stranger is not sufficient unless brought to the knowledge of the cotenant. Warfield v. Lindell, 30 Mo. 272.

The lessee of one tenant in common told the son of the other, while the father was living, that he (the lessee) had more right on the premises than the son had. Held, that this had no tendency to prove that the tenant in common, under whom he occupied the premises, held adversely to the other. Campau v. Campau, 45 Mich. 367.

1. Northrop v. Marquam (Oreg.), 18 Pac. Rep. 449.

2. Owen v. Morton, 24 Cal. 373.

3. Dodd v. Watson, 4 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 48.

A purchaser from a tenant in common, who takes possession and occupies the land without acknowledging the title of the other tenants in common, holds adversely, and may protect his possession by the statute of limitations. Elliot v. Morriss, 1 Harp. (S. Car.) Ch. 281.

Evidence that the land was forest, and the occupation consisted of an occasional cutting of a few trees for shingles, or peeling a few loads of bark, is not enough, as to acts of possession, nor is proof of notice to a former agent of the cotenant enough as respects knowledge. Chandler v. Ricker, 49 Vt. 128; Squires v. Clark, 17 Kan. 84; Ball v. Palmer, 81 Ill. 370.

Where a tenant in common holds over, after a partition, his possession will not be considered adverse until a demand is made by the other tenants, unless he does some act amounting to an actual exclusive possession, which would give notice that he intended to keep out all others or some act amounting to a disclaimer of the rights of the other tenants. Anders v. Anders, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 214.

In a suit to foreclose a mortgage of one undivided half of land against one who had been in possession more than twenty years as the tenant of the owner of the other half, the fact that the tenant had made permanent improvements on the premises without any acts of interference on the part of the mortgagor or the mortgagee is not sufficient evidence of adverse possession as against the plaintiff. Perkins v. Eaton (N. H.), 10 Atl. Rep. 704.

Payment of rents by the collector to one tenant in common is not evidence that the latter holds adversely to his cotenant. Rodney v. McLaughlin (Mo.), 9 S. W. Rep. 726.

4. Northrop v. Marquam (Oreg.), 18 Pac. Rep. 449.

5. Springer v. Young (Oreg.), 12 Pac. Rep. 400.

6. Hoffstetter v. Blattner, 8 Mo. 276; Parker v. Locks & Canals, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 91.

nature as an ouster by a stranger, though acts which, if done by a stranger, would amount to a disseisin are not necessarily so if performed by a cotenant, the effect in such case being governed largely by the notoriety and intent of the act.¹ An ouster will not be presumed.²

(a) What Constitutes Disseisin or Ouster.—The conveyance by one joint tenant or tenant in common of the whole property to a third person who enters under the conveyance constitutes a disseisin or ouster of the other tenants,³ and the purchase by one

1. Stronger evidence is required to show an adverse holding by a tenant in common than by a stranger. Barret v. Coburn, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 510.

One tenant in common may disseise another. The only difference between that and the other cases is that acts which, if done by a stranger, would be per se a disseisin, are, in the case of tenancy in common, susceptible of explanation consistently with the real title. Acts of ownership in tenancies in common are not necessarily acts of disseisin; it depends upon the intent with which they are done and their notoriety. Parker v. Locks & Canals, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 91.

An ouster by a tenant in common of his cotenant does not differ in its nature from any other ouster and in no respect except in the degree of evidence required. Acts which are decisive in one case are equivocal in the other. An actual intent to exclude the cotenant from the enjoyment of the property must be shown, and no evidence on this point is so satisfactory as a refusal to admit him to possession or to account for profits received on a demand made. Newell v. Woodruff, 30 Conn. 492.

2. Odum v. Weathersbee (S. Car.), 1 S. E. Rep. 890.

3. Burgett v. Taliaferro (Ill.), 9 N. E. 334; Kinney v. Slatery, 51 Iowa 353; Rutter v. Small (Md.), 11 Atl. Rep. 698; Bogardus v. Trinity Church, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 178; Town v. Needham, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 546; Jackson v. Smith, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 406; Burton v. Murphy, 2 Tayl. (N. Car.) 259.

Where one tenant in common of land conveys the whole estate in fee, with covenants of seisin and warranty, and the grantee enters and holds exclusive possession thereof, such entry and possession is a disseisin of the cotenants. Kittredge v. Locks & Canals, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 246.

A deed of warranty given by one tenant in common in possession to a stranger whose deed is recorded and who enters and occupies a part thereof, the residue remaining vacant, ousts the cotenant of the grantor and puts the grantee in possession of the whole. Thomas v. Pickering, 13 Me. 337.

Possession of one tenant in common is the possession of all. So where one is in possession of land, claiming only three sevenths, and recognizing the title of others as tenants in common to the remaining four sevenths, his possession is not to be regarded as adverse. But where he subsequently conveys the entire tract and his vendee enters, claiming openly and continuously under the deed, the vendee's possession becomes adverse to the other tenants in common from the date of his entry, although they may have no actual notice that he is claiming adversely to them. Greenhill v. Briggs (Ky.), 2 S. W. Rep. 774.

Quit Claim Deed.—The execution by some tenants in common of quit claim deeds of their interest in certain land, and by one of their grantees of a warranty deed of a small portion thereof, will not constitute an ouster of their cotenants who are not in possession. Hume v. Long, 53 Iowa 299.

Purchase and Use.—Where a piece of land is owned in common by five different persons and S, a stranger to the title, purchases the entire estate from four of such owners, taking a deed from them purporting to convey the entire estate and takes immediate possession of the entire estate, and takes all the rents and profits of the entire estate for several years, and twice mortgages the entire estate and makes alterations and improvements upon the land without consulting A, the other tenant in common, and without his consent, held, that such action by S is an ouster of A, the other tenant in common. Scantlin v. Allison, 32 Kan. 376.

Levy by Creditor.—Where the owners of an undivided part of a parcel of land tenant of an outstanding title, while it ordinarily enures to the benefit of all, will be an ouster when accompanied by a hostile claim, and acts of possession inconsistent with the rights of the cotenants, of which they have knowledge,¹ but it cannot be presumed from the mere fact of sole possession or exclusive receipt gave a deed of the whole parcel and the grantee entered under the deed, and afterwards a creditor of the grantee levied upon the whole parcel and entered under his levy, claiming to be sole owner of the land, it was held that the cotenant of the maker of the deed was disseised. Bigelow v. Jones, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 161.

Where the owner of an undivided part of a parcel of land gave a deed of the whole parcel and the grantee entered under the deed, and afterwards a creditor of the grantee levied upon the whole parcel and entered under his levy, claiming to be the sole owner of the land, the cotenant of the maker of the deed was thereby disseised. Nichols v. Smith, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 316.

Coparceners.—A feoffment by one parcener, who occupies alone under a general entry, operates as a conveyance of her own purpart and as a defeasement of her coparceners. Dord. Read, or Reed v. Taylor, 2 N. & M. (Eng.) 508; 5 B. & Ad. 575.

Conveyance of One's Interest by Motes and Bounds.—A conveyance by one joint tenant or tenant in common of all his interest in real estate, though the land is described in such a manner as to pass the whole under the deed, if the grantor has owned the whole, is not notice of itself to the other joint owner or tenant in common of any such exclusive claim to the land on the part of the grantor as to oust the other tenant of his legal seisin in the land. Roberts v. Morgan, 30 Vt. 319.

Refusal to Give Up Moiety.—Where one of two tenants in common of land conveyed the whole estate to A by a deed with warranty and A entered, claiming title to the whole, and on being requested by the cotenant to give up a moiety thereof, refused to do so, and declared that he would stand a law suit before he would give it up, it was held that there was an ouster of the cotenant, which entitled him to maintain a writ of entry against A. Marcy v. Marcy, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 360.

1. Holley v. Hawley, 39 Vt. 525; Cook v. Clinton (Mich.), 31 N. W. Rep. 317.

Where land was demised to certain persons as tenants in common and it was agreed verbally between them that one should give up his share for an agreed compensation to the others, who thereupon entered on it and excluded him from the possession, this was held a disseisin of such devisee. Leonard v. Leonard, 10 Mass. 281.

Where one of several remainder men who was living with the tenant for life upon the land accepted a deed of a portion thereof without warranty and for a nominal consideration and thereafter occupied, claiming to hold the premises conveyed adversely under the deed, but there was no apparent change of possession or occupation and no notice of a hostile claim given to the cotenants, held, that the giving and receiving of the deed was not in itself an act hostile to the rights of the cotenants, but that both the deed and the possession under it were consistent therewith, as the grantor could convey the life estate so that it gave no notice or intimation of a hostile claim; and that, therefore, there was no adverse possession, such as would defeat an action for partition. Culver v. Rhodes, 87 N. Y. 348.

One tenant may oust his cotenants and, by long continued exclusive possession, with claim of title under a recorded deed, may bar the claims of his cotenants. Dexter v. Arnold, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 152; Harpending v. Dutch Church, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 455.

A tenant in common of land, after demand and possession in common by a cotenant, took a conveyance of the entire premises from a hostile source and claimed under it as sole owner. Held, that these facts were sufficient to warrant a jury in finding an ouster. Clark v. Crego, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 599.

Failure to Record Deeds.—Defendant in a bill for partition was in possession of the land in question, claiming that he had held it adversely to his cotenant, under a deed from the deceased owner's widow, during the statutory period, but it appeared that such deed had never been recorded, and there was no proof of rents and profits,¹ unless they are accompanied by some notorious and unequivocal act of exclusion,² or continued for a that plaintiff ever had notice of it. Held, that the defendant's possession was not adverse to plaintiff, and partition should be decreed. Hignite v. Hignite (Miss.), 4 So. Rep. 345.

Knowledge of Dispossessed Tenant.—A tenant in common is ousted by his cotenant only when he is aware that his cotenant in possession claims the land as exclusively his own, or when, as a prudent man reasonably attentive to his own interests, he ought to have known that his cotenant asserted an exclusive right to the land. Packard v. Johnson, 57 Cal. 180.

Defective Title.—One tenant in common may disseise another, and if a person enter into possession claiming title which turns out to be defective as to a moiety, it is a disseisin of the parties entitled to that moiety. Prescott v. Nevers, 4 Mass. (U. S.) 326.

1. Johnson v. Toulmin, 18 Ala. 50; Hudson v. Coe (Me.), 8 Atl. Rep. 249; Colburn v. Mason, 25 Me. 434; Parker v. Locks and Canals, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 91; Ward v. Farmer, 92 N. Car. 93; Caldwell v. Neely, 81 N. Car. 114; Higbie v. Rice, 5 Mass. 344; Bolton v. Hamilton, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 294; Morris v. Vanderen, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 64.

The exclusive enjoyment by a tenant in common of the possession and of the rents and profits of lands for sixteen years is not sufficient evidence of ouster. McGee v. Hall (S. Car.), 1 S. E. Rep. 711.

In an action of ejectment brought by a tenant in common against a cotenant, a finding of a demand to be let into possession, and a refusal, does not amount to a finding of an ouster. Carpentier v. Mendenhall, 28 Cal. 484.

A tenant in common having mortgaged his interest, and being permitted by the mortgagee to remain in possession, has a right to occupy in common with his cotenants, or in severalty; and his occupation in severalty will not amount to a disseisin of the mortgagee. Colton v. Smith, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 311.

2. Hudson v. Coe (Me.), 8 Atl. Rep. 249; Colburn v. Mason, 25 Me. 434.

Where one of two tenants in common of land obtained the actual exclusive possession of the whole tract, claiming it as his own, and denying any right of his cotenant in the premises, and upon ejectment being brought against his cotenant to recover his interest, the defendant, instead of entering a disclaimer as to the plaintiff's interest in the land, pleaded not guilty and set up the statute of limitations. Held, that these acts on the part of the defendant constituted an ouster, and relieved the plaintiff from the necessity of proving it by any other evidence. Noble v. McFarland, 51 Ill. 226.

If a tenant enters into the actual and exclusive possession of lands, takes the rents and profits, and makes valuable improvements, denying the title of his cotenants, it will be considered an adverse possession to and ouster of them. Cummings v. Wyman, 10 Mass. 464, 468; Bigelow v. Jones, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 161.

To effect an ouster of a cotenant there must be an actual, continued, visible, notorious, distinct and hostile possession, such that knowledge thereof is brought home to the cotenant. So held where a remainder man accepted a deed without warranty for part of the land and continued to occupy with the life tenants without giving any intimations of hostile claim. Culver v. Rhodes, 87 N. Y. 348.

Where the common property is a wharf, the possession of one tenant of the entire wharf necessarily excludes the other tenants, and amounts to an ouster by reason of the fact that such property is suited for only one purpose, and is essentially a unit and incapable of separate occupancy. Annelly v. DeSaussure (S. Car.), 2 S. E. Rep. 490.

Adverse possession by a joint tenant, from the commencement of the other's claim, is a disseisin. Brock v. Eastman, 28 Vt. 658.

Evidence of Ouster.—Where one cotenant had allowed another to be in possession, and to receive the rents and profits to his own use, without accounting for a long time, held, that the jury might presume an actual ouster. Robidoux v. Cassilegi, 10 Mo. App. 516.

A denial of the title of a tenant in common by a cotenant who is in possession of the land is a fact from which an ouster may be inferred. Carpentier v. Gardiner, 29 Cal. 160.

An ouster or disseisin is not to be presumed from the mere fact of sole great length of time,¹ and, in general, any acts in relation to the common property inconsistent with and in exclusion of the rights of a cotenant with knowledge of such acts on his part will constitute an ouster.²

possession, but it may be proved by such possession, accompanied by a notorious claim of an exclusive right. Parker v. Locks and Canals, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 91.

Refusal to Allow Cotenant to Occupy.

—A tenant in common is ousted by a cotenant when the latter will not suffer him to enter and occupy. In such case he can maintain ejectment against the cotenant. Norris v. Sullivan, 47 Conn. 474.

A refusal after a proper demand by a tenant in common, in possession, to admit his cotenant is itself an ouster and dispenses with further proof on that point. Held, accordingly, in an action by a tenant in common against a cotenant to be let into possession, that an answer of the defendant, denying the plaintiff's title, filed in a former suit by the plaintiff against him, to be let into possession of the same land, was equivalent to an ouster. Greer v. Tripp, 56 Cal. 209.

In an action of trespass quare clausum between tenants in common, it was held that it is not necessary, to constitute ouster, that there should be a forcible ejectment of the plaintiff, or a forcible hindrance of his entry. Refusal of his right, attended by circumstances showing the determination of the disseisor to resort to physical force if necessary, is sufficient proof of ouster. Jeacoat v. Knotts, 13 Rich. (S. Car.) L. 50.

1. An ouster may be presumed in favor of a cotenant who, for many years, held the whole of the land exclusively and adversely, and who finally conveyed it. Burns v. Headerick, 85 Tenn. 102.

Thirty-six years' sole and uninterrupted possession by one tenant in common, without any account to, or demand made, or claim set up by his companion, is a sufficient ground for a jury to presume an actual ouster of the cotenant. Doe d. Fisher v. Prosser, Cowp. (Eng.) 217.

The perception of the entire profits by one tenant in common is not of itself sufficient to divest the position of his cotenant, nor are acts of ownership by one tenant in common necessarily to be construed into acts of disseisin, but an undisturbed and peaceable occupancy of the premises by one for near thirty years, under an exclusive and notorious claim of title, without any rents and profits, or any acknowledgment of the right of the other, is sufficient. Johnson v. Toulmin, 18 Ala. 50.

The mere exclusive receipt of profits by one tenant in common for a period exceeding twenty-one years, is not sufficient evidence upon which to found a legal presumption of actual ouster of his cotenant, but it is evidence to go to the jury upon that point. Bolton v. Hamilton, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 294.

The North Carolina Rule.—Where B, a tenant in common, assumes to convey the entire estate to A, and A enters an ouster of the other tenant in common will not be presumed from the exclusive use of a purchaser of the interest of one tenant in common at an execution sale. Ward v. Farmer, 92 N. Car. 93.

The ouster of one tenant in common by another will not be presumed from an exclusive use of the common property and appropriation of its profits to himself for a less period than twenty years, and the result is not changed when one enters to whom a tenant in common has by deed attempted to convey the entire tract. Caldwell v. Neely, 81 N. Car. 114.

But in Massachusetts, cutting timber for fences by one tenant in common from time to time, for more than twenty years, in a cedar swamp, surrounded by cultivated lands, is no disseisin of his cotenant. Ewer v. Lovell, 9 Gray (Mass.) 276.

2. Ball v. Palmer, 81 Ill. 370; Squires v. Clark, 17 Kan. 84; Chandler v. Ricker, 49 Vt. 128.

Acts Amounting to Ouster.—As to what acts of one cotenant will amount to an ouster of the other, in view of the particular facts of each case, see Carpentier v. Webster, 27 Cal. 524; Seaton v. Son, 32 Cal. 481; Cross v. Robinson, 21 Conn. 379; Goewey v. Urig, 18 Ill. 238; Larman v. Huey, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 436; Bracket v. Norcross, 1 Me. (1 Greenl.) 89; Thomas v. Pickering, 13 Me. 337; Small v. Clifford, 38 Me. 213; Thornton v. York Bank, 45 Me. 158; Lloyd v. Gordon, 2 Har. & M. (Md.) 254; Bennett v. Clemence, 6 Allen

Acts which would amount to an ouster between landlord and tenant will have the same effect between cotenants.¹

(b) As to Personal Property.—As to personal property, a conversion takes place when one cotenant appropriates it altogether to his own use under a claim of exclusive right, and under circumstances which render a division practically impossible,² or when he sells or otherwise disposes of the common property as his own,³ but a refusal to make immediate partition does not constitute a conversion when it is made on the ground that such (Mass.) 10; Warfield v. Lindell, 38 Mo. 561; Hodgdon v. Shannon, 44 N. H. 572; Wood v. Griffin, 46 N. H. 230; Izard v. Bodine, 11 N. J. Eq. (3 Stockt.) 403; Jackson v. Whitbeck, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 632; Wright v. Saddler, 20 N. Y. 320; Cloud v. Webb, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 290; Meredith v. Andres, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 5; Frederick v. Gray, 10 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 182; McHaffy v. Dobbs, 9 Watts (Pa.) 363; Phillips v. Gregg, 10 Watts (Pa.) 158; Law v. Patterson, 1 Watts & S. (Pa.) 184; Moore v. Collishaw, 10 Pa. St. 224; Peck v. Ward, 18 Pa. St. 506; Keyser v. Evans, 30 Pa. St. 507; Forward v. Deetz, 32 Pa. St. 69; Jones v. Weathersbee, 4 Strobb. (S. Car.) 50; Gray v. Givens, 2 Hill (S. Car.) Ch. 511; Cunningham v. Roberson, 1 Swan (Tenn.), 138; Hilton v. Duncan, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 313; Marr v. Gilliam, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 488; Leach v. Beattie, 33 Vt. 195; Hannon v. Hannah, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 146.

A disseisin of one tenant in common by another may be shown by a long continued series of acts indicating a decisive intent and purpose to occupy the premises, to the exclusion and in denial of the right of the former, and such disseisin may be inferred from circumstances. Lefavour v. Homan, 3 Allen (Mass.), 354.

When two persons are tenants in common of a field, the merely putting a lock upon the gate by one of them, not shown to be kept locked, will not constitute an ouster so as to enable the cotenant in common to maintain trespass against the other. There must, for such a purpose, be other circumstances attending the act. Jacobs v. Seward, 5 L. R., H. L. (Eng.) 464; 41 L. J., C. P. 221; 27 L. T. 185.

One tenant in common of land on the sea shore enclosed a portion, and placed on it a fish house susceptible of easy removal, and a pump. He let the fish house, and paid taxes on it. The other tenants used it as convenient. The pump was used by the neighborhood, and the land as a place of common resort. Held, that such use and occupation, even if continued for twenty-nine years, would not amount to an ouster of the cotenants. Ingalls v. Newhall, 139 Mass. 268.

In an action of ejectment against a husband and wife to recover an undivided two-thirds of a lot of land, the testimony of the husband in a trespass suit by the same plaintiff against him alone, that he entered and built a fence thereon, as agent of the wife, was held not proof of an ouster, so long as the wife might be presumed, from possession or otherwise, to own the other third. Yager v. Larsen, 22 Wis. 184.

1. Squires v. Clark, 17 Kan. 84; Chandler v. Ricker, 49 Vt. 128; Ball v. Palmer, 81 Ill. 370.

2. Ripley v. Davis, 15 Mich. 75; Symonds v. Harris, 51 Me. 14; Agnew v. Johnson, 17 Pa. St. 373; Benedict v. Howard, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 569; Lewis v. Clark (Vt.), 8 Atl. Rep. 158; Osborn v. Schneck, 83 N. Y. 201.

A agreed to plant tobacco on B's land on shares. After the tobacco was ready for market, B locked it and refused to let A have any of it. Held, that the parties were tenants in common of the tobacco, and that the facts showed a sufficient demand and refusal to render B liable as for a conversion. Burhs v. Winchell, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 261.

3. Weld v. Oliver, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 559; Williams v. Nolen, 34 Ala. 167; Van Doren v. Balty, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 239; Cowles v. Garrett, 30 Ala. 341; Smith v. Tankersley, 20 Ala. 212; Rains v. McNairy, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 356.

As respects third persons, if one tenant in common of a chattel, as here, a steamboat, sell it, it is an ouster and conversion, and his cotenant may follow it in the hands of a purchaser, or division would be then injurious, and no claim is made to the cotenant's share.¹

(c) Proving Ouster.—The burden of proof rests with the tenant alleging an ouster,² and whether or not the acts of the parties amount to an ouster is a question of fact for the jury.³

(d) Effect of Ouster.—The rule that a conveyance of property in the adverse possession of another is inoperative and void applies between joint tenants and tenants in common after an ouster;⁴ but in Indiana such conveyance will not be considered recover its value from the wrongdoer, but the proceeds of sale of a chattel by one tenant in common cannot be followed by a cotenant into any business into which the wrongdoer may invest them, and hold him to account for the profits. Coursins' Appeal, 79 Pa. St. 220.

1. Shearin v. Rigsbee, 97 N. C. 216.

Wool from a whole flock not shown to be of one grade is not property such as is readily divisible in portions absolutely alike in quality and value, and its retention, therefore, by one of two joint owners of it does not necessarily constitute a conversion. Dear v. Reed, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 594.

2. An ouster of one tenant in common by his cotenant is not to be presumed, but must be evidenced by some unequivocal act or acts irreconcilable with joint tenure. White v. Williamson, 2 Grant (Pa.) Cas. 249.

The possession of one tenant in common is the possession of both; and although the unity of possession may be destroyed by an actual ouster, that ouster must be positively proved or such circumstances must be proved as would support the presumption of an ouster. Allen v. Hall, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 131.

3. Whether one tenant in common entered upon the estate in hostility to and ousted his cotenant is a question of fact for the jury. Blackmore v. Gregg, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 182.

Where a cotenant has been in possession, receiving rents to his own use, which has been long acquiesced in by the other, it is for the jury to say whether, under all the circumstances, there has been an ouster and adverse possession. Robidoux v. Cassilegi, 10 Mo. App. 516.

Whether an entry accrues to the benefit of or is an actual ouster of the others is a question of fact, and the province of the jury to determine. Parker v. Locks and Canals, 3 Metc.

(Mass.) 91; Cummings v. Wyman, 10 Mass. 464.

4. Possession of land by a purchaser, under a deed for the entire lot, given without right in the grantees, is adverse to the rightful owners, though tenants in common with the grantor, and a subsequent deed executed by them, during such adverse possession, is inoperative and void, and subsequent releases by them to the grantor of the defendant, or the person under whom the defendant claims, enure to the benefit of the defendant. Jackson v. Smith, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 406.

Where two persons entered as tenants in common into lands, under a deed which, being defectively executed, did not pass the estate, their occupancy, being open and actual, operated a disseisin of the grantor; so that a creditor of one of them, having extended his execution on a moiety of the land, the original owner could not convey the whole land by deed to the other, to defeat the extent, without first avoiding the disseisin by a re-entry or by judgment of law. Gookin v. Whittier, 4 Me. (4 Greenl.) 16.

A being a tenant in common of land conveyed his title to B, his cotenant, who afterwards conveyed to C, who sued to recover possession of the premises from D, who was in by disseisin, but failed to maintain the action, by reason of proof that B was disseised at the time of making the conveyance. A and B thereupon sued D; but it appeared that A had conveyed to B before D's disseisin commenced, and, on this ground, the action was defeated. B thereupon sued alone. Held, that the former judgments, and the grounds on which they were given, were admissible against D to show that his disseisin commenced after the conveyance from B to C, and that the action might therefore be maintained by B. Barry v. Adams, 14 Allen (Mass.) 208.

Personal Property.—Where one of

champertous unless the party in possession entered believing in good faith that he had title.¹

An adverse possession will not take away a right of entry between cotenants.²

3. Title by Adverse Possession.—The statute of limitations operates in favor of the adverse possession of one tenant against another after an ouster,³ and it begins to run from the time of such ouster.⁴

Where such adverse possession has been continued for the period prescribed by the statutes of limitations of the different several tenants in common of personal chattels, has the actual adverse possession, claiming the whole title to be in himself, the rule applicable to the case of real estate, that the other claimants must recover their shares by a suit at law before they can come into a court of equity for partition, does not apply, because one tenant in common of a personal chattel cannot recover from his cotenant at law, except for the destruction of the thing, or its disposition in such way that it cannot be had for the purpose of partition. Weeks v. Weeks, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 111.

1. Elliot v. Frakes, 90 Ind. 389.

2. Midford v. Hardison, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 164.

3. Odom v. Weathersbee (S. Car.), 1 S. E. 890, 104; Terrill v. Murry, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 104; Gray v. Givens, 2 Hill (S. Car.) Ch. 511; Bogardus v. Trinity Church, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 178.

Adverse possession as joint tenants is as effectual for the three years, limitation as if in severalty. Burleson v. Burleson, 28 Tex. 383.

If one tenant in common has sole possession for twenty years, without any acknowledgment on his part of title in his cotenants, and without any demand or claim on their part, they being under no disability, the law raises a presumption that such sole possession is rightful; and in such case it was held that their entry was tolled, and that they could not recover. Black v. Lindsay, Busb. (N. Car.) L. 467.

A joint owner, holding possession adversely to his co-owners, and in such a manner as to apprise them of the adverse nature of his possession, by lapse of twenty years, acquires a separate right, available against them, and sufficient to maintain an action for possession in his own name. Russell v. Marks, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 37.

4. Northrop v. Marquam, (Oreg.) 18 P. Pac. Rep. 449.

The deed of a cotenant purporting to convey the entire title to the tract of land recorded, and followed by the exclusive possession of the grantee, is, from the time of such recording and transfer of possession, a disseisin of the other cotenants, and the statute of limitations will begin to run against their right of action from that time. Burgett v. Taliaferro (Ill.), 9 N. E. Rep. 334.

Where one tenant in common enters upon land with intent to hold in severalty, the limitation of adverse possession runs against the cotenant who is out of possession. Gillaspie v. Osburn, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 77.

The statute of limitations will not run against the one not in possession, unless there has been an open, notorious, exclusive, adverse possession of the other cotenant; but direct notice of the adverse possession need not be brought home to the party. The jury may presume notice from facts and circumstances. Peeler v. Guilkey, 27 Tex. 355.

A and B were joint owners of a chattel. C, knowing this, bought the chattel from A. C held it for five years and then sold it. Held, that the statute of limitations did not begin to run against B's right of action against C, to recover one half the price received by C from the time of the sale from A to C, because, until C sold the chattel, B's right was that of a co-owner. Browning v. Cover, 108 Pa. St. 495.

Estoppel by Recognition of Claim.—In ejectment for undivided half of certain lands, where defendants showed no documentary title, but had been put in possession by plaintiff's grantor, held, that if defendants lived on the land recognizing the claim of plaintiff's grantor up to the time he made deed to plaintiff of the half interest he claimed, they would be estopped from claiming the whole as against plaintiff. Steed v. Knowles (Ala.), 3 So. Rep. 897.

States, the other cotenants being under no disability, it will bar their right of entry and perfect the title of the tenant in possession,¹ but a husband and wife cannot ordinarily thus acquire title

1. Black v. Lindsay, Bush. (N. Car.) L. 467; Russell v. Marks, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 37.

The North Carolina Doctrine.—Under the settled law of North Carolina, one tenant in common of real property cannot, as against his cotenant, acquire title by adverse possession, unless such possession is continued for at least twenty years. Hicks v. Bullock (N. Car.), 1 S. E. Rep. 629.

A delay of two years and a few months by a married woman after the death of her husband, and of seven years after the falling in of the life estate of her father, to commence an action for the possession of lands, will not raise a presumption of an ouster by her cotenants. Day v. Howard, 73 N. Car. 1.

Possession for seven years under color of title by a tenant in common claiming to hold adversely to his cotenants, and applying the rents and profits to his own use, does not render his title perfect as against his cotenants. Hampton v. Wheeler (N. Car.) 6 S. E. Rep. 236.

Where one of several tenants in common of a tract of land conveys the whole tract, and his alienee and those claiming under him remain in possession for seven years (the adverse claimants not being under any disability), this gives a perfect title to the whole tract. Burton v. Murphy, 2 Tayl. (N. Car.) 259.

Texas.—A claiming half a lot under deed recorded, as tenant in common, but holding adversely to all others, afterwards purchased B's interest, continuing his possession as before of the entire lot. Held, that his possession, as against a third party claiming an adverse title to the half interest last purchased, was as much the possession of B as of himself, and he could add the period of possession from his entry up to the date of the deed to him from B, in an issue of limitation, registry and payment of taxes by B being shown. Terrell v. Martin, 64 Tex. 121.

In Iowa.—A cotenant's conveyance of the entire estate to a third person operates as a disseisin of his cotenant; and the grantee, entering and holding adversely thereunder for more than ten years, will have acquired a title barring the cotenant of his grantor from asserting any right therein. Kinney v. Slattery, 51 Iowa 353.

In Georgia, where a tenant in common conveys the whole lot to a third person, who takes possession claiming the entire lot as his own, the disseisin bars the other tenants in common from asserting their right to the property after the expiration of seven years. Horne v. Howell, 46 Ga. 9.

In Indiana.—The possession by one as a tenant in common of lands for twenty years was held to be a bar to an action by a cotenant who was also in possession to recover the whole premises. Dumont v. Dufore, 27 Ind. 263.

In Maryland, where the owner of a fractional part of the reversionary interest in a life estate, conveyed the whole of the estate by metes and bounds to another in fee, under a general warranty, and the grantee and his successors had remained in exclusive possession for more than twenty years when the joint owner of the reversionary estate sought to recover his interest in them, it was held that the possession of the defendants under the deed of the whole estate in fee was adverse to the title and possession of the cotenant, and amounted to a disseisin. Rutter v. Small (Md.), 11 Atl. Rep. 698.

In New York, if one tenant in common, claiming title to the whole land, conveys the whole to a third person, who enters under the conveyance, such conveyance and entry are such an ouster of the other tenants in common, as to bar their right of entry after twenty years' possession under the conveyance. Town v. Needham, 3 Paige (N.Y.) 545.

Undivided Interest.—Deeds vesting merely an undivided interest in land will not support a plea of the statute of limitations of three and five years against the title of the owner of the other undivided interest thereof. Kelly v. Medlin, 26 Tex. 48.

Twelve Years' Possession in North Carolina.—One tenant had been in uninterrupted possession for twelve years, and there was nothing to show any assertion of rights by the petitioners until their suit. Defendant asked an instruction that, if he took and held possession under his deed openly, con-against each other, as they cannot hold adversely to each other.¹

An adverse possession against two cotenants, one of whom is excepted from the operation of the statute, will operate against the other;² but in a joint demise to several persons, if the right of entry is tolled as to some, all are barred.³

IX. ACTIONS BETWEEN COTENANTS.—The fact that two or more persons are cotenants imposes no restraints upon their dealing with one another; nor does it affect their legal or equitable remedies, based upon any dealings between them independent of the subject matter of the cotenancy. They are, like copartners, at liberty to transact business with one another as individuals, and each in his individual capacity, to pursue the ordinary legal or equitable means of redress for any violation of his individual engagements with the others,⁴ but the rule is different in matters pertaining to the subject matter of the cotenancy.

1. Actions at Law.—It is the general rule that one joint tenant or tenant in common cannot maintain an action at law against his cotenant unless he has been disseised or ousted from the property to which each has the same and an equal right, or unless there has been an actual conversion or destruction of it.⁵

tinuously and adversely for twelve years without paying rent and disclaiming the right of any other person to share therein, the jury should find for him. Held, that under the law of North Carolina, one tenant in common cannot, as against a cotenant, acquire title by adverse possession, unless such possession is continuous for at least twenty years following. Hicks v. Bullock (N. Car.), 1 S. E. Rep. 629; Breeden v. McLaurin (N. Car.), 4 S. E. Rep. 136.

Personal Claim.—Where one of two tenants in common pays taxes on the shares of both, his claim to reimbursement is a mere personal claim, which, like other personal claims, is barred by the statute of limitations. Sturgis v. Holliday, 4 MacArthur (D. C.) 385.

1. Where land was purchased by a husband with the proceeds of other land, in which he and his wife owned an interest of one half each, and the deed was taken in his name, but they occupied the same together up to the time of the husband's death, held, that as neither husband nor wife can hold adversely to each other premises of which they are in joint occupancy as a family, the statute of limitations (Civil Code of Oregon) did not apply to bar her claim, nor was she prevented by lapse of time from attempting to enforce the same. Springer v. Young (Oreg.), 12 Pac. Rep. 400.

2. Doolittle v. Blakesly, 4 Day (Conn.) 265.

Disabilities.—The disability of one parcener does not save the right of entry to such as labored under no disability when the right accrued. Griffith v. Huston, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 385.

In a joint action of ejectment against heirs, the statute may run against one heir, and not against another who is under disability, though the property has never been divided, as their rights are several, to some extent, and the destruction of the rights of some does not affect the legal title of the others. Root v. McFerrin, 37 Miss. 17.

3. Dickey v. Armstrong, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 39.

4. Freeman Part 268.

5. Jones v. Cohen, 82 N. Car. 75; Bishop v. Blair, 36 Ala. 80; Hartford v. Tethersow, 2 Jones (N. Car.) L. 393; Strong v. Colter, 13 Minn. 82; Gambhill Bridge Co. v. Newby, 1 Oreg. 173.

A tenant in common can recover damages for an ouster by a cotenant. Carpentier v. Mitchell, 29 Cal. 330.

Common Law.—One tenant in common of real property cannot maintain an action against his cotenants, his remedy being by an action of account. Thomas v. Thomas, 5 Ex. (Eng.) 28; 1 L., M. & P. 229; 19 L. & J., Ex. 175; 14 Jur. 180.

Under the Missouri new code of 1849, one tenant in common may sue another

Thus one cotenant cannot maintain ejectment against another who has done no act inconsistent with the rights of the former in the premises,¹ but if he is ousted or wrongfully ejected he can maintain the action for his undivided share,² and if the ouster or eviction was accomplished by actual force he may maintain forcible entry and detainer.³ Nor can one of two or more joint tenants or tenants in common of a chattel maintain replevin or an action for the recovery of a specific chattel or his interest therein against his cotenant;⁴ but in North Carolina the action can be maintained if the chattel has been destroyed or carried out of in the ordinary form of action. It is not necessary to resort to the action of account. Rogers v. Penniston, 16 Mo. 432.

The devisee of a certain number of acres of a large described tract of land may recover a judgment for the same before partition has been made. Young v. Adams, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 127.

1. Lawton v. Adams, 29 Ga. 273; House v. Fuller, 13 Vt. 165.

2. Frakes v. Elliott, 102 Ind. 47; Johnson v. Swain, Bush. (N. Car.) L. 335; Bethell v. McCool, 46 Ind. 303; Morris v. Sullivan, 47 Conn. 474; Warren v. Hurshaw, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 141.

One tenant in common can recover his portion, in an action of ejectment, from a cotenant upon evidence from which the jury can infer an actual ouster by such cotenant. Corbin v. Cannon, 31 Miss. 570.

In ejectment by one tenant in common against his cotenant, under a petition under the Missouri statute, a recovery may be had where the proof shows an ouster or an act amounting to a total denial of plaintiff's rights. Falconer v. Roberts, 88 Mo. 574.

Plaintiffs in ejectment, having failed to prove an actual ouster or a total denial of their rights, are not entitled to recover. As the New York Code Civil Proc., § 1515, requires such proof in ejectment between tenants in common and a general denial in the answer does not aid plaintiff's case. Gilman v. Gilman (N. Y.), 18 N. E. Rep. 849.

Alleging Ouster.—A tenant in common may maintain an action in ejectment against his cotenant for an undivided interest in land where there has been an actual ouster; but it is not necessary, under the Florida Laws, ch. 999, to allege the ouster in the declaration. Gale v. Hines, 17 Fla. 773.

Judgment for Common Possession.—One tenant in common may maintain ejectment against another who has deprived him wholly of the use and enjoyment of the premises owned in common, but judgment must be for possession subject to the rights of the other tenant. Jones v. De Lassus, 84 Mo. 541.

Cotenants as Witnesses.—Where tenants in common have made partition of land, they are not competent witnesses in ejectment brought by the one against the other for a part of the same land. Patterson v. Lanning, 10 Watts. (Pa.) 135. See Rogers v. Mabe, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 180.

3. Eads v. Rucker, 2 Dana (Ky.) 111; Mason v. Finch, 2 Ill. (1 Scam.) 495.

A tenant in common may maintain an action against his cotenant under Massachusetts Gen. Stat., ch. 137, for forcible entry and detainer. Presbrey v. Presbrey, 13 Allen (Mass.) 281.

But in California one of two tenants in common, who is possessed of "one undivided half," cannot maintain an action of forcible entry and detainer against the other before their dividing line has been determined. Lick v. O'Donnell, 3 Cal. 59.

4. Pulliam v. Burlingame, 81 Mo. 111; Balch v. Jones, 61 Cal. 234; Ellis v. Culver, 2 Harr. (Del.) 129; Bown v. Roach, 78 Ind. 361; Alford v. Bardeen, 1 Nev. 228; Hill v. Seager, 3 Utah 379; Strauss v. Crawford, 89 N. Car. 149.

The purchaser of an undivided interest in land who acquires the right to cut timber only with the assent of cotenant cannot maintain replevin for timber cut and removed by him and taken possession of by his cotenant. The cotenancy precludes the suit. Nor does anything in the Pennsylvania act of May 15, 1871, relating to replevin affect the case, that act having no application to cotenants. Bohlen v. Arthurs, 115 U. S. 482.

On a bill to recover a one-third interest in certain property alleged to have the State.¹ Neither can one tenant maintain trespass quare clausum fregit against his cotenant,² unless the act complained of amounts to an expulsion from, a hindrance in the enjoyment of or a destruction of the common property,³ nor trespass to try been illegally sold at sheriff's sale for taxes and bought in by a cotenant or joint owner with complaint, the bill failing to show title, either legal or equitable in complaint, a demurrer was properly sustained. The Carver Cotton Gin Co. v. Barrett, 66 Ga. 526.

1. Strauss v. Crawford, 89 N. Car. Bonner v. Latham, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 271; Grim v. Wicker, 80 N. Car. 343; Campbell v. Campbell, 2 Mur. (N. Car.) 65; Pitt v. Petway, 12 Ired. (N. Car.) 69.

2. Jones v. Chiles, 8 Dana (Ky.) 163; Roberts v. McGraw, 11 Bush (Ky.) 26; Anders v. Meredith, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 199.

One tenant in common cannot maintain an action of trespass against his cotenant for the removal of a fixture from land held in common. Gibson v. Vaughn, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 389.

Tenants in common cannot maintain trespass against each other, even after they have made a partition by parol. McPherson v. Segguine, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 153.

Where one tenant in common of a field leased the whole of it, and the other tenant ploughed up the crop of the lessee which was growing on the part of the field he had cultivated the year before, held, the lessee had no right of action for this trespass. Harman v. Gartman, Harp. (S. Car.) 430.

Trespass quare clausum fregit cannot be maintained by one tenant in common of land against another, for entering upon the common property under a claim of exclusive ownership of the whole, and cutting and carrying away all the timber thereon. Wait v. Richardson, 33 Vt. 190.

Whether or not the possession of the plaintiff under a tax deed was sufficient to maintain trespass against a stranger, he could not recover against the defendant, who was a tenant in common, having the legal title to an undivided interest, and hence entitled to possession. Todd v. Lunt (Mass.), 19 N. E. Rep. 522.

A tenant in common of land who removes, without doing any unnecessary damage thereto, a structure placed upon the land by his cotenant without his assent, which excludes him from that portion of the land, is not liable to an action in the nature of trespass by his cotenant; nor can an action be maintained against him under the Massachusetts Pub. Stat., ch. 179, §§ 6, 7; Byan v. Bickford, 140 Mass. 31.

3. Maddox v. Goddard, 15 Me. 218; McClure v. Thrope (Mich.), 35 N. W. 829; Erwin v. Olmsted, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 229; Filbert v. Hoff, 42 Pa. St. 97; McGill v. Ash, 7 Pa. St. 397; Booth v. Adams, 11 Vt. 156; Murray v. Hall, 7 C. B. (Eng.) 441; 18 L. J., C. P. 161.

One tenant in common cannot maintain an action of trespass against his cotenant, except where mesne profits are sued for, or there has been a total destruction of the property. Bennett v. Bullock, 35 Pa. St. 364; Critchfield v. Humbert, 39 Pa. St. 427.

The dis severance and removal of machinery from a mill, which was attached to it by spokes, bolts and screws, and worked by belts running from the permanent shafting driven by the water wheel and its incorporation with another mill, by one of the cotenants without the assent of the other, is such a practical destruction of the common property, that an action of trespass may be maintained by the latter against the former. Symonds v. Harris, 51 Me. 14.

Trespass quare clausum fregit may be maintained by a cotenant in possession, for an injury to the freehold. Jewett v. Whitney, 43 Me. 242.

Where the members of two societies occupied a field of land adjoining their common house of worship, for the fastening of their horses, during seventy years, and a member of one society directed his executors to sell all the land, of which he was "lawfully seised at his death," the societies having been then in possession for more than twenty years, under which power a part of the common land was sold, and the purchaser erected a wall, cutting it off, held, that the long possession had given the societies a good title to the land occupied, as tenants in common, and that one of them had a right to bring an action of trespass after there had been an ouster, which was the case here, as the testator was not lawfully title to the land unless disseised or dispossessed,¹ and detinue will not lie.²

But one tenant may usually maintain an action upon the case against his cotenant for an injury to or deprivation or destruction of his rights in the common property,³ and waste will lie for a seised of the part which had been sold. As it was claimed that this was sold for a graveyard, the plaintiffs in trespass were allowed to prove that they had offered to give a lot of land for that purpose, to show that there was no necessity for the encroachment. Trauger v. Sassaman, 14 Pa. St. 514.

After Partition.—One of two equal tenants in common, who has been ousted by the other, may, after obtaining judgment for partition, and for the possession of the half of the premises set off to him in severalty, recover from his cotenant the value of the use and occupation of his undivided half of the premises for the period that the latter has occupied the entire premises and has excluded him therefrom; the action being in the nature of the common law action of trespass for mesne profits. Cook v. Webb, 21 Minn. 428.

1. Lord v. Tyler, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 156; Martin v. Quattlebam, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 205.

Trespass to try title will not lie by a cotenant, against one claiming under the other cotenant. Taylor v. Stockdale, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 302.

A purchaser of the wife's land from the husband is, after her death, a tenant in common with her distributees; and where the latter have not been in possession they cannot maintain an action of trespass to try title, either against such purchaser, or one holding under him by a conveyance of part of the land in dispute. Harvin v. Hodge, Dudley (S. Car.) 23.

California.—But under section 254 of the Practice act, one tenant in common of real estate in the actual possession thereof, may maintain an action to determine the validity of an adverse claim of title by a cotenant. Ross v. Heintzen, 36 Cal. 313.

Texas.—One tenant in common may maintain trespass to try title without joining his cotenant. May v. Slade, 24 Tex. 205; Croft v. Rains, 10 Tex. 520.

2. Carlyle v. Patterson, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 93; Lewis v. Night, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 223; Chinn v. Respass, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 25.

3. Anders v. Meredith, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) L. 199.

Where the plaintiff and defendant were tenants in common of a salmon fishery, held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover damages in an action on the case for a continued deprivation of the enjoyment of his rights in being kept out of the occupation of any part of the fishery after he was deprived of it by the defendant without having first regained possession by entry or otherwise. Duncan v. Sylvester, 24 Me. 482.

Where five were seized of a mill as tenants in common and the mill was burned through the negligence of one of them, held, that the other four might jointly maintain an action on the case against the one by whose negligence the mill was burned. Chesley v. Thompson, 3 N. H. 9.

If one tenant in common of land upon which a mill is situated erects a dam below on the same stream upon his several estate and thereby flows the common property to the injury of his cotenant, the latter may maintain an action on the case against him. Odiorne v. Lyford, 9 N. H. 502.

Tenants in common constructed a basin communicating with a public canal and laid out lots facing upon one side of the basin. They then, by a partition deed, divided the lots between them, giving to each proprietor the privilege of erecting warehouses upon his lots extending the same to the basin, and declaring that the basin "should be the common property of the parties, their heirs and assigns forever." Held, that the grantee of one of the proprietors, who built a pier in the basin in front of his own lot, on the line between it and the lot of a grantee of another original proprietor, whereby the latter was obstructed in the convenient use of the waters of the basin, was liable to an action on the case for such obstruction. Beach v. Child, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 343.

The remedy of one tenant in common against another for allowing animals to run at large and damage crops is by an action on the case and not by trespass misuse of it,¹ while trover cannot be maintained for the mere detention or exclusive use of the common property,² if it is destroyed or so converted and appropriated as to render any future enjoyment impossible, trover,³ or an action for damages for its quare clausum fregit. McGehee v. Peterson, 57 Ala. 333.

Rents and Profits.—If one tenant in common in lands take the whole profits thereof, the other cannot maintain case for his part. Chambers v. Chambers, 3 Hawks (N. Car.) 232.

1. An action on the case sounding in tort may be maintained by one tenant in common against his cotenant for a misuse of the common property; as for wasting the water of an aqueduct over and above his proper share, though not amounting to a total destruction thereof. McLellan v. Jenness, 43 Vt. 183.

A tenant in common of unimproved timber lands, who cuts and removes timber and converts it to his own use, is liable for waste to his cotenant under the statute giving the action of waste to one tenant in common against another. Elwell v. Burnside, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 447.

Where an action is brought by one tenant in common of premises against another for damages resulting from an overflow of water caused by leaving open a faucet in a water closet, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to show that the mischief was caused by the defendant's negligence, as there is no presumption that it was so caused, the defendant's possession not being exclusive. Moore v. Goedel, 34 N. Y. 527.

Defence.—In an action under the Maine Stat. 1821, ch. 35, to prevent tenants in common, etc., from committing waste brought by one heir against another as tenant in common to recover damages for injury to land descended from the intestate, it is no defence that the whole of the land will be required to satisfy the claims of the creditors of the intestate. Moody v. Moody, 15 Me. 205.

Proof as to Who Cotenants Are.—In an action for cutting timber brought by a tenant in common against a cotenant under the Maine Stat. 1821, to prevent tenants in common, etc., from committing waste, the plaintiff need not prove who the other cotenants are. Hubbard v. Hubbard, 15 Me. 198.

2. Webb v. Danforth, 1 Day (Conn.) 301; Leonard v. Scarborough, 2 Ga. 73; Fightmaster v. Beasley, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 410; Hinds v. Terry, 1 Miss. (Walk.) 80; Ballou v. Hale, 47 N. H.

347; Tyler v. Taylor, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 585; Farr v. Smith, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 338; Gilbert v. Dickerson, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 449; Campbell v. Campbell, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 65; Heller v. Hufsmith, 102 Pa. St. 533.

The owner farming with the tenant on shares cannot maintain trover for his share of the products against the former without proof that the latter has sold or destroyed them. Williams v. Nolen, 34 Ala. 167.

A tenant in common of a chattel cannot maintain trover against his cotenant or his vender, claiming sole ownership, so long as he remains in possession of the chattel. Dain v. Cowing, 22 Me. 347.

In Vermont one tenant in common cannot maintain trover against his cotenant of the same, for any act less than the destruction of his interest therein. Hurd v. Darling, 14 Vt. 214; Tubbs v. Richardson, 6 Vt. 442.

Before Severance.—One tenant in common cannot maintain trover against his cotenant for crops in which they have a joint interest until a separation or severance by the parties, or until such a conversion shall exist as goes to the destruction of the crop or the entire exclusion of the cotenant from the enjoyment of his right and interest therein. Carr v. Dodge, 40 N. H. 403.

Common Law.—Although by the common law one tenant in common of a chattel cannot maintain trover against a cotenant, even though the latter obtains possession of the article and excludes the former from all participation in its use, the statute has so far modified this rule as to allow one tenant in common to maintain trover against a cotenant who assumes exclusive control over the property. Benjamin v. Stremple, 13 Ill. 466.

But the sale of an entire chattel by one tenant in common will not support trover by his cotenant. Barton v. Burton, 27 Vt. 93; Sanborn v. Morrill, 15 Vt. 700.

3. Russell v. Russell, 62 Ala. 48; Needham v. Hill, 127 Mass. 133; Weld v. Oliver, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 559; Perry v. Granger, 21 Neb. 579; Hyde v. Stone, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 354; s. c. 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 230.

conversion or destruction may be maintained,¹ but a conversion to sustain such action must amount to a total destruction of the

A tenant in commor. may maintain trover against his cotenant for using hay owned by them as such tenants, but not for selling it. Lewis v. Clark, 59 Vt. 363.

Trover lies by one tenant in common of a personal chattel against his cotenant, for the appropriation of the chattel to his exclusive use, where the chattel is of such a nature as to be necessarily destroyed by the use thereof. Lowe v. Miller, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 205.

Where one of two joint owners of personal property misuse the joint property by appropriating it to uses for which it was not designed, and refuses to apply it to the purposes for which it was held by both, or if one delivers the property wrongfully to a stranger, for purposes inconsistent with the uses for which it was designed, and such stranger denies the title of the other, and claims exclusive possession and ownership, trover may be maintained. Agnew v. Johnson, 17 Pa. St. 373.

In order to enable one tenant in common to maintain trover against another there must not merely be a carrying away of the property, but such a carrying away of it as will disable the party complaining from having the lawful use or benefit of the property; or there must be the destruction of it. Jacobs v. Seward, 5 L. R., H. L. (Eng.) 464; 41 L. J., C. P. 221; 27 L. T. 185.

If a tenant in common wrongfully sells and converts the common property, and the purchaser again sells it for money, the other tenant in common may bring his sole action of trover against such first purchaser, for the conversion, or he may waive the tort, and bring his action for money had and received, for the money received by such first purchaser from his vendee for the plaintiff's interest in such property. White v. Brooks, 43 N. H. 402.

The Recovery.—One tenant in common of a chattel may recover in trover or trespass from another tenant in common his aliquot share of such chattel. Dailey v. Grimes, 27 Md. 440.

One tenant in common of personal property may maintain trover against his cotenant for his undivided half of such property. Potter v. Neal, 62 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 158.

1. Guyther v. Pettijohn, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 388; Grim v. Wicker, 80 N. Car. 343; Alderson v. Schulze, 64 Wis. 460; Benedict v. Howard, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 569.

A tenant in common of a mill may maintain an action against his cotenant for diverting the water from the mill for his separate use. Pillsbury v. Moore, 44 Me. 154.

Trees cut by one cotenant of land without the consent of the other belong, after being cut, to both; and if the one cutting them sells them as his own without the consent of the other, the latter may maintain an action for the conversion. Shepard v. Pettit, 30 Minn. 119.

One tenant of a personal chattel may maintain an action against his cotenant for the loss or destruction of the chattel, while in the possession of such cotenant as a common carrier, through his negligence or carelessness. Herrin v. Eaton, 13 Me. 193.

Taking Possession with Notice.—Where the holder of a chattel mortgage on the interest of one tenant in common sells the whole chattel at a public sale under his mortgage, a purchaser at such sale who takes possession with notice of the rights of the other tenant in common, is liable to the latter in an action for the conversion of his interest in the chattel. Van Doren v. Baety, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 239.

Measure of Damages.—One who has an undivided interest in a stock of goods seized and sold under a mortgage given by the other owner is damaged by the conversion to the extent of his interest, for he is not bound to take back what is left after the mortgagees have sold as much as they see fit. Keables v. Christie, 47 Mich. 594.

Where a joint owner assumes, without authority, to sell the interest of his cotenant, the latter may repudiate the sale and sue for the conversion of the property, or he may ratify it and sue for his share of the money received. Perry v. Granger, 21 Neb. 579.

Where, in such case, the crop was subsequently destroyed while wrongfully detained, but without negligence on the part of the tenant in possession, the cotenant is entitled to some, if no more than nominal, damages, but not to the full extent of the value of his common property, or something equivalent to it, through the fault of the cotenant thus converting it.¹

Assumpsit is a proper action for a joint tenant or tenant in common to bring against his cotenant for his share of the proceeds of the common property sold by them.²

It may also be maintained by one against another when the latter has received the whole, or a greater part of the rents and profits,³ and such share. Shearins v. Rigsbee (N. Car.), 1 S. E. Rep. 770.

1. Alderson v. Schulze, 64 Wis. 460.

One tenant in common of a chattel cannot sue another for a conversion, unless the common property is destroyed, carried beyond the limits of the State; or, when perishable, so disposed of as to prevent the other from recovering it. Grim v. Wicker, 80 N. C. 343.

Where a tenant in common of shingle machines, and other like personal property, removes it to a building of his own in another town, and uses it there to manufacture his own lumber, this is such a destruction of the property as will support an action by the cotenant for the conversion. Benedict v. Howard, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 569.

Plaintiff and P. owned a planing machine, which, with the building in which it stood, they leased for a term of years. P. being indebted to defendants, gave them as security a chattel mortgage upon the whole machine; he informed them, however, at the time, that he owned only half and plaintiff the other half. The payments stipulated in the mortgage were fixed so as to correspond in amount and dates with the rents reserved in the lease, which was looked to to discharge the mortgage debt. In an action for conversion of plaintiff's interest, held, that the taking of the mortgage did not amount to a conversion by defendants, conceding that the giving of it was a conversion by P.; that the effect of the mortgage was simply to vest the interest of P. upon default in defendants. Osborn v. Schenck, 83 N. Y. 201.

Sales.—If personal property held in common is sold by one of the tenants as exclusively his own, such a sale is a conversion, and the cotenant may maintain trover therefor against him. Weld v. Oliver, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 559.

Where one joint owner of a chattel sells the entire chattel and delivers possession to the purchaser, it is conversion for which trover lies. Rains v. McNairy, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 356.

Evidence.—In an action to recover damages for the conversion of a chattel, if the plaintiff is the several owner, he would be entitled to recover upon proof of a demand or refusal; but if his interest had never been separated, he could not recover against a co-owner without proving also that the conversion went to the destruction of the chattel or the exclusion of his right. Allen v. Harper, 26 Ala. 686.

2. Cowles v. Garrett, 30 Ala. 341; Smith v. Tankersley, 20 Ala. 212; Richmond v. Connell (Conn.), 11 A. 852; Haven v. Foster, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 112; Dickinson v. Williams, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 258; Brinkerhoff v. Wemple, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 470; Wright v. Searles, 59 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 176.

If one tenant in common of a chattel converts it wholly to his own use by a sale, his companion may maintain trover against him; and one tenant by agreement, express or implied, with the other, may be entitled to contribution for services rendered or expenditures made; and the share which the other tenant ought to contribute would be recoverable in assumpsit, and would be matter of set-off in an action ex contractu, but not in defence to trover which is in tort. Russell v. Russell, 62 Ala. 48.

Joinder of Parties.—The share of a tenant in common of property separable by weight or measure may be demanded of his cotenant having possession of the whole, and, on refusal, or conversion by the latter, the former may sue in his own name without joining all the other cotenants. Stall v. Wilbur, 77 N. Y. 158.

Tenants in common cannot join in actions of assumpsit brought under New Hampshire Revised Statutes for a share of the value of timber cut by a cotenant. Mooers v. Bunker, 29 N. H. (9 Fost.) 420.

3. Abel v. Love, 17 Cal. 233; Scant- action will not bar his right to an equitable adjustment and lien.¹

This is also the proper form of action for one cotenant to recover a contributive share from another when the former has incurred expense for repairs or improvements,² or has made advances to remove a joint encumbrance,³ or to recover for waste,⁴ lin et al. v. Allison, 32 Kan. 376; Gowen v. Shaw, 40 Me. 56; Brinley v. Kupfer, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 179; Johnson v. Ames, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 330; Haskell v. Adams, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 59; Fanning v. Chadwick, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 420; Haven v. Foster, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 112; Lazell v. Miller, 15 Mass. 207; Thayer v. Brewer, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 217; Brigham v. Eveleth, 9 Mass. 538; Jones v. Harraden, 9 Mass. 540; Sargent v. Parsons, 12 Mass. 149; Chapman v. Gray, 15 Mass. 439; Hudson v. Coe (Me.), 8 Atl. Rep. 249; Wright v. Searles, 59 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 176; Cochran v. Carrington, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 409; Borrell v. Borrell, 33 Pa. St. 492.

A tenant in common may maintain assumpsit, independently of Maine, Rev. St. ch. 95, § 16, against a cotenant who has received from subtenants more than his share of the rents and profits of the common estate, unless plaintiff had been disseised by such cotenant when the rents and profits were received. By said section this right of recovery in assumpsit is extended to cases of personal occupancy by the cotenant of the whole, or more than his proportion of the common estate. Richardson v. Richardson, 72 Me. 403.

Under Maine Stat. 1848, ch. 61, § 1, an action of special assumpsit against a cotenant, for a share of the profits of the joint estate, cannot be sustained unless the plaintiff proves that the estate has yielded "rents, profits or income," and allege in his declaration that the defendant has taken more than his share of such rents, profits, or income, "without the consent of his cotenant." Moses v. Ross, 41 Me. 360.

Use and Occupation.—A tenant in common who uses the property of his cotenant may be held liable to him for rent in an action for use and occupation, where the conduct of the tenants towards each other in relation to the occupancy of the premises has been such that an agreement to use each a particular part of the premises can be reasonably implied. Boley v. Barutio, 120 Ill. 192.

Such action will not be defeated on account of a dispute raised by the defendant concerning the title, provided the plaintiff was owner of the estate, and was not disseised at the date when the income was received in money by the defendant. Hudson v. Coe (Me.), 8 Atl. Rep. 249.

1. Wright v. Searles, 59 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 176.

2. Jordan v. Soule (Me.), 12 Atl. Rep. 786.

If tenants in common of a mill-dam repair it together, and one pays more than his proportion of the expense, he may recover the excess from his cotenant by an action of assumpsit. Gwineth v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 31.

Any one of certain parties, tenants in common by virtue of an act of the legislature granting them the right to run a ferry, etc., being on the spot where the property is situated, may maintain indebitatus assumpsit against another or his heirs, for repairs to the common property. Haven v. Mehlgarten, 19 Ill. 91.

Previous to the adoption of the practice act, assumpsit would have lain for his share where a tenant in common had made necessary repairs upon the common property, and a recovery can now be had in an ordinary civil action under that act. Fowler v. Fowler, 55 Conn. 256.

3. Dickinson v. Williams, 11 Cush (Mass.) 258.

A and B owned and occupied, as tenants in common, land subject to the payment of annual rent, and divided the payments between them from year to year. Subsequently they sold the land and divided the avails between them, and promised the vendee that they would pay all rent in arrear. A, being subsequently, called upon to pay such rent, paid it, and B afterwards died. Held, that A might recover one half the amount so paid against his estate in indebitatus assumpsit for money paid. Fisher v. Kinaston, 18 Vt. 489.

4. A tenant of land may maintain an action of assumpsit against a cotenant, under New Hampshire St. July 5th, 1834 (entitled "an act relating to copartners," etc.) for his proportion of or for a balance due from one cotenant to another after the joint interest is determined.¹

(a) Procedure.—The procedure in actions at law between joint tenants and tenants in common differs from that in ordinary action only as affected by the peculiar relations of the parties to each other.²

2. Actions in Equity.—When the several interests of cotenants have become complicated and incapable of being definitely ascertained and set apart at law, equity will entertain jurisdiction to damage caused by cutting timber, although, the plaintiff has alienated his interest in the land after the cutting, but before the action was commenced. Blake v. Milliken, 14 N. H. 213.

1. Though a tenant in common may now have relief in equity against his cotenant, under Massachusetts St. 1823, ch. 140, yet if the joint interest is determined, all accounts and liabilities being settled and discharged, and a balance remains due from one cotenant to another, it may be recovered in an action of assumpsit, and without any express promise. Fanning v. Chadwick, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 420.

2. Joinder of Causes of Action.—In an action by one tenant in common against another, a cause of action arising from contract cannot be joined with another arising from injuries to property and for torts; nor causes of action arising from negligence, with a claim for an account of profits of real estate. Hall v. Fisher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 441.

Pleading.—Where one tenant in common sues his cotenant to recover land, if the defendant controvert the plaintiff's title he thereby admits the ouster. If he does not dispute the title, he should admit it in the pleadings and deny the ouster. Withrow v. Biggerstaff, 82 N. C. 82.

Where three defendants are sued as joint tenants in a writ of entry, and two of them plead severally sole tenure of the whole demanded premises, the third pleads sole tenure of all but forty acres, and as to the forty acres says nothing; if issue is joined on all the pleas and found for the defendants, the plaintiff cannot have judgment against the third defendant for the forty acres. Tappan v. Tappan, 36 N. H. 98.

In a real action by one of two cotenants against the other, if the latter plead nul disseisin, the defendant shall prevail, if he show title to an individual part of the land. Lyford v. Thurston, 16 N. H. 399.

Evidence.—Where a tenant in common, having possession of the joint property, makes an entry in a book, indicating that he no longer holds for his cotenant, such entry is admissible in his favor, on a plea of the statute of limitations, if notice of it be brought home to the cotenants; but without such notice it is not admissible. Haral v. Wright, 57 Ga. 484.

In an action by a tenant in common against his cotenant to be let into possession, plaintiff offered in evidence to prove an ouster, defendant's answer in a former suit by plaintiff to be let into possession of the same land. Held admissible. Greer v. Tripp, 56 Cal. 209.

In an action of disseisin by one tenant in common, who grounds his claim on the common title, his cotenants are incompetent witnesses for him. Barrett v. French, 1 Conn. 354.

Verdict.—If the title be admitted in a controversy and can be seen with reasonable certainty, the verdict should set forth the undivided share to which the title is apparent, and the effect of a judgment thereon would be to put plaintiff in possession with defendant. Withrow v. Biggerstaff, 82 N. Car. 82.

Measure of Recovery.—One of five tenants in common, in an action for partition, and to recover for rents and profits, may recover the value of one fifth of the rents and profits, less a proportionate share of the value of necessary improvements made and taxes paid by the occupying tenant. Scantlin v. Allison, 32 Kan. 376.

Double and Treble Damages.—Under Maine Rev. Stat., ch. 95, § 5, a tenant in common of a life estate cannot recover treble damages for an injury to the common property. Richardson v. Richardson, 64 Me. 62.

Pub. St. Massachusetts, ch. 179, §§ 6, 7, giving a right of action with threefold damages to a tenant in common or joint tenant, against his cotenant, who, with adjust, by one decree, the rights of all.¹ Thus an action in equity for an accounting is a proper remedy where one tenant has taken the rents and profits or had the use and occupation of the common property to the exclusion of the others,² and to enforce notice, cuts timber, commits waste, etc., applies only to cases of known and recognized tenancies in common or joint tenancies, and not to those where a party enters on land and cuts timber under an honest claim that he owns the whole of the land in fee; whereas, in fact, he has title to an undivided portion only. Jenkins v. Wood, (Mass.) 14 N. H. Rep. 512.

In England, one tenant in common may bring an action for the double value of his moiety, under 4 Geo. II, ch. 28. Cutling v. Derby, 2 W. Bl. (Eng.) 1075.

1. Smith v. King, 50 Ga. 192.

Where one tenant in common has purchased title under encumbrance, and prays decree for transfer, etc., the others will be allowed on cross bill to protect their interests, by contributing their share of the purchase money. Smith v. Osborne, 86 Ill. 606.

If a tenant in common convey, with covenant of general warranty, a part of the common subject by metes and bounds, and, upon partition afterwards made, a material part of the land so conveyed is allotted to other tenants in common, so that the purchaser does not obtain the substantial inducement to his contract of purchase, a court of equity will, upon the prayer of such purchaser, cancel and annul such deeds and place the parties in statu quo. Worthington v. Staunton, 16 W. Va., 208.

2. One tenant in common of realty cannot maintain an action of assumpsit against his cotenant in Illinois for his proportion of the rents, the latter having had exclusive possession. His only remedy is by an action of account under the statute, or by a bill in chancery. Crow v. Mark, 52 Ill. 332.

There can be no ouster between tenants in common in possession; and, therefore, if one takes more than his share of the rents, the only remedy is account, either by action under the 4 Anne, ch. 16, § 27, or by a bill in equity. Dens v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & C. (Eng.) 42; 5 Jur. 21.

One tenant in common may maintain a bill in equity against his cotenants, some of whom are infants, who have occupied the whole of the common property for an account of rents and profits. Early v. Friend, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 21.

Where there are more than two tenants in common, one cannot recover rents and profits in an action of account against another. It is a case for chancery. Wiswell v. Wilkins, 4 Vt. 137.

One tenant in common has no remedy against his cotenant; or a guardian for a portion of the rents received by either, or for repairs, except an action of account, or bill in equity. Sherman v. Ballou, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 304; DeMott v. Hagerman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 220.

A court of chancery has jurisdiction to take the account between tenants in common, when one of them is a married woman, notwithstanding the statute of Vermont, R. L. § 1202, allowing the action of account between such tenants. Paine v. Slocum, 56 Vt. 504.

Where one of two tenants of common land, being in the sole possession, proceeded to clear all the arable land, and by a succession of crops wore it out, and left no timber to repair fences, held, that these injuries were not such as the law would remedy by an action on the case in the nature of waste, but that the proper mode of redress was by an action of account, or a bill in equity for an account. Darden v. Cowper, 7 Jones (N. Car.), L. 210.

Where one's estate in lands was, by the terms of his father's will, which gave him a certain life estate, determined by his death without issue, held, that a conveyance from the son to his wife was no bar to her will against cotenants to account for rents and profit. Swallow v. Swallow, 31 N. J. Eq. 390.

An action of account is in its nature equitable, although given by statute. It involves the idea of agency and an implied trust, and whatever remedy is appropriate to such an idea can be invoked by one devisee against another to recover an excess of rents received. Wright v. Searles, 59 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 176.

Evidence.—In an action of account between the administrator of a tenant contribution for repairs, improvements, or the payment of a common charge.¹

Equity may also decree a partition of the common property, or a sale and distribution of the proceeds in case it cannot be divided,² and both a partition of the land and an accounting may be decreed.³

On such accounting a just proportion of expenses disbursed for the estate will be allowed,⁴ and any increase of the rents and pro-in common and his cotenant, brought under Illinois Rev. St. 1874, ch. 2, § 3, as the issue is whether there should be an account, the adjusting of balances being left to auditors, evidence that one of the cotenants had made no profit is inadmissible. Hawley v. Burd, 6 Ill. App. 454.

Patent Rights.—One joint owner of a patent right is not bound to account to the other for its use, but if both agree to divide equally all moneys received by either for licence fees, a bill for an account and contribution can be maintained. Gates v. Fraser, 9 Ill. App. 634.

Estoppel.—In an action for an account, the tenant must allege that the defendant excluded him, or else agreed to act as agent as to the plaintiff's interest; for if one tenant lie by and suffer his cotenant to work and improve and enjoy the premises, as he would not be liable for any losses, so he is not entitled to any of the profits. Pico v. Columbet, 12 Cal. 414.

1. McDearman v. McClure, 31 Ark. 559.

A complaint in action by one cotenant against the other, alleging that plaintiff has been compelled to pay all the taxes on a tract of land owned in common, and to redeem it from tax sales, and asking that plaintiff have a lien on the land for such taxes and interest, and that his lien be foreclosed, states a cause of action; a tenant who pays an encumbrance having the right to compel contribution from cotenants. Eads v. Retherford, 114 Ind. 273.

2. Tenants in common of personal property cannot have partition at law; equity, therefore, has jurisdiction for that purpose. Smith v. Smith, 4 Rand. (Va.) 95.

In Kentucky equity has no power to decree a sale under doctrine of partitions, but must decree alternate holding between tenants in common. Coleman v. Hutchenson, 3 Bibb. (Ky.) 209.

The act which authorizes the superior court as a court of equity to order a sale of any real estate, and of any rights existing in or issuing out of the same, held in joint tenancy, tenancy in common, or coparcenary, and to distribute the proceeds (Connecticut Stat. 1853, ch. 58), is a constitutional act. Richardson v. Monson, 23 Conn. 94.

A tenant in common having a right to improve the land without the consent and against the will of his cotenant, but having no lien upon it for his improvements, can only be indemnified therefor by partition in equity, so as to have the improvements allowed to him, or to have compensation for them, if thrown into the common mass. Drennen v. Walker, 21 Ark. 539.

After G had conveyed land to D and D's father jointly, D becoming desirous on account of a certain bastardy proceeding, to quit the State, consented to a surrender of the joint deed, and to a conveyance by G to D's father alone, which was accordingly done. Many years afterwards D filed a bill against the coheirs of his father, claiming a half interest in the land, but not praying a partition. Held, that the bill was properly dismissed, even if D was a tenant in common, the bill could not be retained for a partition. Dinwiddie v. Bell, 95 Ill. 360.

3. Where matter of account against an insolvent cotenant for past profits of the land is involved, and where partition of the premises cannot be made without a sale, equity has jurisdiction to decree partition and account. Lowe v. Burke (Ga.), 3 S. E. Rep. 449.

4. Anderson v. Greble, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 136.

On a suit for an accounting brought by a tenant in common against his cotenant in possession, the expense of necessary repairs made by the latter which have materially increased the value of the property, may be allowed him. Pickering v. Pickering, 63 N. H. 468.

Where one tenant in common ex-fits caused by improvements is, as a general rule, allowed to the tenant making the improvements.¹ The amount he has actually received beyond his just proportionate share of the net amount being usually the measure of the accountability of one cotenant to another.²

A court of equity has power also, upon application of one tenant, to enjoin acts injurious to the common property on the part pende money in making improvements upon land, although such expenditures do not strictly constitute a lien upon the land, yet a court of equity, in making partition, will first direct an account and suitable compensation, or assign to such tenants the portion on which the improvements have been made. Green v. Putman, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 500.

1. Annelly v. DeSaus. (S. Car.), 2 S. E. Rep. 490; Green v. Putman, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 500.

In an action for mesne profits by one cotenant against another, rent paid in permanent improvements on the land is not chargeable as profits received by the cotenant. Improvements may be defalked against a claim for mesne profits. Walker v. Humbert, 55 Pa. St. 407.

In an action in Pennsylvania by one cotenant against the others for the value of oil produced and sold by the latter while in the possession of the common property, by which they had deprived the former of wrongful means, defendants cannot set off the costs of producing the oil. Foster v. Weaver (Pa.), 12 Atl. Rep. 313.

2. Joslyn v. Joslyn, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 388; and see Newman v. Newman, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 714.

In an account between tenants in common of land used for getting timber, the value of the timber while growing is to be taken as the rule of valuation. Walling v. Burroughs, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 60.

A was indebted to B for his share of the price of land conveyed to them jointly, and B took exclusive possession. Held, that in accounting for the income it would be treated as payments by A, and would be first applied to the interest of his debt. Valentine v. Johnson, 1 Hill (S. Car.) ch. 49.

Period Covered By Accounting.—The cotenancy of a purchaser at a sale on foreclosure of the interest of a tenant in common commences, for the purpose of an accounting between them, from the date of the deed, and does not relate back to the date of the mortgage, and the accounting should embrace no charge for repairs or improvements made or taxes paid by either tenant before the date of the deed. Davis v. Chapman, 36 Fed. Rep. 42.

Where one tenant in common is in possession of the premises, the right of his cotenant to an account of the rents and profits is barred by the statute of limitations, except for the last four years before the filing of the bill. Corbett v. Laurens, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 301.

A and B held a lease, fixtures, stock, etc., in common, and A carried on the business of a refectory. C and D held mortgages on A's interest, and, not feeling secure, agreed to pay the arrears of rent if immediate possession were given, which was done, and they also agreed to protect the interests of B. They did not pay the rent, but suffered a sale under a distress, purchased the fixtures, stock, etc., at the sale, and continued the business. It having been arranged that C should procure a renewal of the case, for the common benefit of B, C and D, C procured the renewal in his own name, and then he and D separately sold their interests in the whole and kept B out of possession. Held, in a suit by B, that C and D were bound to account to him for his share of the profits previous to the sale to E, and for his share of the purchase money, deducting his share of what they had paid. Bunell v. Bull, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) ch. 15.

In an action to set aside deeds for plaintiff's interest in realty, of which she and defendant were tenants in common, on the ground of fraud and undue influence, plaintiff may recover rent from the time of delivery of the deeds, she having then left the premises in defendant's possession, and defendant cannot charge plaintiff with taxes on the property paid by him during the continuance of a precedent life estate for the benefit of the life tenant. Zapp v. Miller, 109 N. Y. 51.

What May Be Shown.—Where one of another,¹ or to appoint a receiver,² but this jurisdiction is sparingly used,³ and will, as a general rule, be exercised only in cases of waste and when the acts practically amount to a destruction of cotenant's interest in the property.⁴

The general rule, however, that an equitable action cannot be maintained where the remedy at law is adequate and complete, tenant in common of a vessel, after having bargained for the sale of the whole vessel at a fixed price, purchased of one of his cotenants his share at a less rate, and the cotenant brought an action to recover damages, alleging false representations, held, that the tenant might show that he gave his cotenant as much for his share as it was worth. Matthews v. Bliss, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 48.

The cotenant in possession of land rented a portion of it, and occupied the remainder himself. Held, that it rested upon the plaintiff to show the net amount of rent received by defendant from his tenant, and, in the absence of proof on the subject, no presumption arose that the amount was equal to the whole annual value of the premises held in common. Joslyn v. Joslyn, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 388.

1. See Hihn v. Peck, 18 Cal. 640; Obert v. Obert, 5 N. J. Eq. (1 Hals.) 397; Bailey v. Hobson, 5 Ch. (Eng.) 180.

A tenant in common out of possession may maintain an injunction against his cotenant who is in possession to restrain him from committing waste by cutting down growing timber, where it is shown that the tenant in possession is insolvent, and where it appears that the growing timber constitutes the chief value of the land. Stout v. Curry, 110 Ind. 514.

Where a tenant in common has mortgaged the entire estate, and the mortgage is foreclosed, equity may enjoin a sale before partition, especially where the mortgagor is insolvent. A claim against the cotenant for profits arising from the exclusive use will enter into the decree for partition and account, and will take precedence of the mortgage made by him. Arnett v. Munnerlyn, 71 Ga. 14.

A and B owned a building in severalty, A having the north half and B the south half. It has a common entrance and stairway to the second floor; but above the first story a partition wall divided it. A having leased his portion to B for a term of years, cut doors for lessee's convenience through the partition, and ran a stairway from the second to the third floor on his own premises. The only hallway on the second floor was on B's side. When the lease expired B plastered up the doors in the partition wall and refused to allow A to use the hallway on his side. There was no satisfactory showing that the arrangements made for B's convenience were intended to survive the lease, or that B had estopped himself from objecting to A's use of his part of the premises thereafter. Held, that A could not claim any easement in B's premises after the termination of the lease, and could maintain a bill for injunction to restrain B from obstructing his use of the hallway. Weinmeister v. Ingersoll, 47 Mich. 31.

2. Williams v. Jenkins, 11 Ga. 595.

3. Obert v. Obert, 5 N. J. Eq. (1 Hals.) 397.

Bill for partition and injunction against cutting timber trees by defendants on land owned by plaintiffs and defendants as tenants in common. Held, that without an averment of the insolvency of defendants, or that they had cut or disposed of timber to an extent exceeding their share of the estate, the bill showed no ground for the relief asked. Hihn v. Peck, 18 Cal. 640.

4. Billinghurst ex parte, Amb. (Eng.) 104; Radcliffe ex parte, Jac. & W. (Eng.) 619.

After a decree has been made in a partition suit, the court has jurisdiction to grant an injunction to restrain a defendant from destroying or wasting the property.

But where, after a decree for sale in a partition suit, a defendant who was in the occupation of the property, but bound by no contract of tenancy, proposed to sell the hay and turnips from off the land, contrary to the custom of the country, as between landlord and tenant, held (reversing the decision of STUART, V. C.), that this was not such a destruction of the property as the court would restrain, and a motion for an injunction was refused. Bailey v. Hobson, 5 Ch. Eng. 180.

applies to cases of joint tenancy and tenancy in common.¹ All parties in interest must be joined in an equitable action between the cotenants,² and the rule in ordinary cases applies to the joinder of causes of action.³ The bill or complaint must allege facts, showing title either legal or equitable in the complainant, and clearly set forth all the facts upon which his recovery depends.⁴

X. ACTIONS BETWEEN TENANTS AND THIRD PARTIES—1. Actions by Tenants.—Joint tenants must, as a general rule, join in an action for the possession of land jointly held, and a failure to do so is fatal to a recovery,⁵ so they must join in actions for the recovery of a chattel or for its value,⁶ or for the rental of real

1. An action at law, praying for relief in equity, under Massachusetts Stat. 1853, ch. 371, cannot be maintained by one tenant in common against another for rent of the common land, and for cutting off the trees; the remedy at law, with the right to apply for an injunction pending the action, being adequate and complete. Adams v. Palmer, 6 Gray (Mass.) 336.

2. Where a tenant in common mortgages his interest to secure a debt, the mortgagee is a necessary party as well as the mortgagor, to an action between the cotenants for an accounting. Howard v. Throckmorton, 59 Cal. 79.

Where one of several tenants in common is in the use and occupation of land, all his cotenants must join in an action against him to recover rent; one cannot sue alone for his interest. Blanton v. Van Zant, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 276.

Benefit of One Only.—B, a tenant in common of land, agreed with the other tenants that, if they would join in a sale of the land, he would pay them certain amounts out of the proceeds, and retain only the surplus. A purchaser at the sale, who had made an overpayment, brought a bill in equity against B to recover the amount thereof. Held, that if such amount, by increasing the surplus, enured only to the benefit of B, the other tenants in common were not necessary parties. Tarbell v. Bowman, 103 Mass. 341.

3. In an action of account, by two tenants in common against a third, for receiving more than his share of the common property, it is improper to join a claim for loss sustained by the two, by their cotenant having, by false pretences, obtained an injunction against them, that not being matter of account, even if the injunction related to the common property. Hall v. Fisher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 441.

4. Carver etc. Co. v. Barrett, 66 Ga. 526.

To a bill charging that the defendant is cotenant with the plaintiffs, and praying an account, a plea that the land is situated in a foreign country, and that the title can be tried there only, and suggesting exclusive title in himself, must show what that title is. Livingston v. Columbian Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 51.

A petition, under code Alabama, 1886, section 3263 et seq., for partition of crops, alleged that cotton, corn and cotton seed, grown and cultivated on petitioner's land, in 1887, was in the actual possession of, and owned jointly by, petitioner and defendant; that part of the crops had been gathered, and that petitioner had a lien, by law or contract, on defendant's share. Held, that a demurrer to the petition should be sustained, the facts, showing that the crop was raised under a contract constituting the parties tenants in common, not being stated. Mooney v. Hough (Ala.), 4 So. Rep. 19.

5. Dewey v. Lambier, 7 Cal. 347; 4 Wait's Act. & Def. (1885 ed.) 481.

One having joint interest in personal property may proceed alone to recover possession from a mere trespasser. Lannes v. Courege, 3 La. An. 74.

6. Little v. Harrington, 71 Mo. 390; Haskell v. Jones, 24 Me. 222; Smoot v. Wathen, 8 Mo. 522; Hill v. Gibbs, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 56.

If two or more tenants in common of a chattel unite in the sale of it, their right of action for the consideration money is joint, and they cannot sue the purchaser in separate actions for their respective portions of the money, unless it be upon an agreement by the purchaser to pay each of them his particular share. Suydam v. Combs, 15 N. J. L. (3 Green) 133.

property.¹ But in South Carolina one joint tenant may recover that portion of the common property to which he may show himself entitled.²

The possession of one, however, being the possession of all, one joint tenant may alone maintain a merely possessory action for the land owned jointly.³

As to tenants in common, the general rule is that they must join in actions to recover damages for an injury to the common property, but where there is no joint injury, and they are not jointly interested in the damages, the remedy may be by a several action.⁴ In real actions, their interests being several, separate

But where two joint owners of merchandise consigned it to a merchant for sale, and informed him that each owned a moiety, and gave separate instructions each for his own moiety, held, that one of the consignors might alone maintain a separate action against the consignee for a violation of his separate instructions. Hall v. Leigh, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 50.

1. Weinsteine v. Harrison, 66 Tex. 546.

A parcener is not entitled to a decree for rents, unless his coparceners are before the court. Webb v. Conn., 1 Litt. (Ky.) 83.

2. Boyleston v. Cordes, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 144; Watson v. Hill, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 161.

3. Rabe v. Fayler, 18 Miss. (10 Smeed & M.) 440.

4. Lothorp v. Arnold, 25 Me. 136; Lee v. Turner (Tex.), 9 S. W. 149.

Damages for Injuries.—Tenants in common must join in all actions for injuries to the common estate. Merrill v. Berkshire, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 269; Gilmore v. Wilbur, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 120; May v. Parker, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 34; Daniels v. Daniels, 7 Mass. 135; Tucker v. Campbell, 36 Me. 346; Bullock v. Hayward, 10 Allen (Mass.) 460; Lane v. Dobyns, 11 Mo. 105; De Puy v. Strong, 37 N. Y. 372; Winters v. McGhee, 3 Smeed (Tenn.) 128.

In an action for a nuisance to land, all the cotenants must join as plaintiffs. Low v. Mumford, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 426.

Diversion of water from ditches is in the nature of a nuisance, and tenants in common may join in an action concerning it. Parke v. Kilham, 8 Cal. 77.

One proprietor of common lands cannot maintain an action in his own name for an injury to the common property, nor can he discharge the claim of the proprietary. Allen v. Woodward, 22 N. H. (2 Fost.) 544.

Waiver of Tort.—The agent of three tenants in common of a tract of wood land, wrongfully cut down and sold the timber, and applied the proceeds to his own use. Held, that one of the owners could not waive this tort and maintain a separate action of assumpsit for a share of the proceeds; the wrongdoer's legal liability being to all the tenants in common jointly, their action must be a joint one, whether sounding in tort or in contract. Irwin v. Brown, 35 Pa. St. 331.

Refusal to Join.—One tenant in common of personal property may separately maintain an action against a stranger for a wrong done to it, if his cotenants refuse to join with him as plaintiffs, and they are nonresidents of, and are out of, the estate. Peck v. McLean (Minn.), 30 N. W. Rep. 759.

Agreement for Several Occupation.—If, by agreement between tenants in common, one is permitted to have the exclusive use and possession of a tract of the land which they together own, while the other has such use and possession of other lands so owned, then each may recover for any injury done to that tract which he has the right exclusively to use or possess. Gulf C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wheat (Tex.), 3 S. W. 455.

Several Interests.—Where the interests of each is separate and distinct, each party can only recover his undivided moiety. Throckmorton v. Burr, 5 Cal. 400; De Johnson v. Sepulbeda, 5 Cal. 149; Covilland v. Tanner, 7 Cal. 38.

Tenants in common of land cannot bring a joint action of account rendered, to recover the proceeds of it from one who is liable on an implied contract to account with them; each must sue for himself. McCreary v. Ross, 7 Watts (Pa.) 483.

actions should be brought by each for their recovery,¹ and in such case each is entitled to recover his undivided share or interest in the common property,² though in some States the rule is that one tenant may recover the whole property against a tres-

A tenant in common, without joining his cotenant in the action, may recover of a purchaser the price of his undivided part of the common property. Lyman v. Boston & M. R. Co., 58 N. H. 384.

Under Massachusetts Rev. Stat., ch. 24, § 48, one tenant in common of land, over which the county commissioners have laid out a highway, may apply for a jury to assess his damages without the joinder of his cotenants. Dwight v. Hampden, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 533.

One joint owner of a vessel may sue alone for his share of the surplus proceeds of a sale on execution against him and the other owners. Hopkins v. Forsyth, 14 Pa. St. 34.

1. French v. Edwards, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 266; Covillard v. Tanner, 7 Cal. 38; Edwards v. Mix, 1 Root (Conn.) 246; Daniel v. Bratton, 1 Dana (Ky.) 209; May v. Parker, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 34; Brown v. Warren, 16 Nev. 228; Stevenson v. Cofferin, 20 N. H. 150; Rand v. Dodge, 12 N. H. 67; Overcash v. Ritchie, 89 N. Car. 384; Dawson v. Mills, 32 Pa. St. 302; McFadden v. Haley, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 457; Perry v. Walker, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 461; Perry v. Middleton, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 462; Middleton v. Perry, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 539; Watson v. Hill, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 161; Contreras v. Haynes, 61 Tex. 103; McFarland v. Stone, 17 Vt. 165.

Tenants in common cannot maintain a joint action in Kentucky. Briscoe v. McGee, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 370.

In Tennessee, each tenant in common, as heir, may sue for his own share. Johnson v. Harris, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 113.

One tenant in common may sue one in possession by adverse claim, and recover the premises if the plaintiff represents the better title. Collier v. Corbett, 15 Cal. 183.

Towns, claiming as tenants in common, cannot join in a writ of entry. Rehoboth v. Hunt, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 224.

Against a Trespasser.—One tenant in common can recover the entire premises as against a mere trespasser, without joining his cotenants as plaintiffs. Treat v. Reilley, 35 Cal. 129; Sharon v. Davidson, 4 Nev. 416.

One tenant in common may bring a writ of unlawful detainer, under Virginia St., 1814, for the whole land, against a party having no right whatever, without joining his cotenant. Allen v. Gibson, 4 Rand. (Va.) 468.

The Common Title.—Any one of several joint tenants or tenants in common may, unless the others prohibit it, maintain an ejectment for all, and the exhibition of the common title is prima facie a sufficient answer to the rule on him to show his authority for prosecuting the suit. King v. Bullock, 9 Dana (Ky.) 41.

Summary Proceedings.—Where two owners let jointly, and one buys out the other's interest in the property and the rent, he may demand the whole rent, and, upon refusal to pay, may obtain possession by summary process in his own name. Griffin v. Clark, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 46.

Competency as Witnesses.—A tenant in common is a competent witness for his cotenant in ejectment brought by the latter. Bennett v. Hethington, 16 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 193.

Tenants in common may sue separately in ejectment, and be witnesses for each other, as a judgment in favor of one cannot be used by the other. Hammitt v. Blount, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 385.

2. Edwards v. Mix, 1 Root (Conn.) 246; Overcash v. Ritchie, 89 N. Car. 384; Watson v. Hill, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 161; Johnson v. Harris, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 113.

A tenant in common who, when in sole possession, is ousted by a trespasser, can recover only his individual share or interest in the land. Dawson v. Mills, 32 Pa. St. 302.

Lessees of tenants in common, suing for the whole tract, may recover for as much as they show title in, and demises by any of the cotenants. But a judgment for the whole, when there are cotenants on whose title there is no demise, is erroneous. Daniel v. Bratton, 1 Dana (Ky.) 209.

Where a joint tenant or tenant in common, sues for the whole of a tract of land, he shall not be nonsuited on that account, but shall have judgment passer.¹ But in most of the States tenants in common are not compelled to sue separately, and may bring a joint action if they so elect.² Such an action by one tenant in common is not affected by the running of the statute of limitations against the rights of a cotenant.³

So tenants in common may maintain separate actions of trespass to try titles for their respective interests,⁴ and one may recover the whole as against a mere stranger who does not connect himself with the title.⁵

In actions for the recovery of personal property, all tenants in common must join,⁶ and this is the general rule in regard to ac-for that part to which he is entitled. M'Fadden v. Haley, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 457; Perry v. Walker, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 461; Perry v. Middleton, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 462; Middleton v. Perry, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 539.

1. Contreras v. Haynes, 61 Tex. 103; French v. Edwards, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 266; Brown v. Warren, 16 Nev. 228; Sharon v. Davidson, 4 Nev. 416; Allen v. Gibson, 4 Rand. (Va.) 468.

2. Edwards v. Mix, 1 Root (Conn.) 246; Alford v. Deewin, 1 Nev. 207.

Under Mississippi St., 1850, for regulating the forms of pleading, tenants in common may sue jointly for the recovery of land. Corbin v. Cannon, 31 Miss. 570.

Tenants in common in a mine, acquiring their undivided interests at different times, may sue jointly under California St., 1857, to recover the whole of such interests. Goller v. Fett, 30 Cal. 481.

Joint owners of a single tract of land cannot be required to bring separate actions for the recovery of possession against each person in possession, where there are several of them, merely because they hold and claim separate parcels thereof, and have no joint possession but may bring an action against them all jointly. Woolfolk v. Ashby, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 288.

Where the children and certain grandchildren of a devisee under a will passing certain land to the devisee for life, and at her death to her children, bring ejectment, as tenants in common, to recover the land, there is misjoinder, as the grandchildren took by inheritance from their parents, and not by purchase under the will, and are not tenants in common with the children of the devisee, their coplaintiffs. Echols v. Sparks (Ga.), 5 S. E. Rep. 132.

3. McFarland v. Stone, 17 Vt. 165.

4. Hines v. Trantham, 27 Ala. 359; Grassmeyer v. Beeson, 18 Tex. 753.

A tenant in common with others of a meeting house may maintain trespass for injuring one of the pews, against a person having no title either in the pew or in the house. Murray v. Cargill, 32 Me. 517.

Several tenants in common brought a joint action of trespass to try title; one of them died. Held, to be unnecessary to make his heirs parties; the right of the survivors was not affected by his death. Watrous v. McGrew, 16 Tex. 506.

Where one of two tenants in common deeded the right of way through their premises to a railroad company upon certain conditions, and the company entered, but without observing the conditions, held, that the granting tenant could recover for breach of contract, and the other, the entry being without his consent, for trespass. Rush v. Burlington etc. Ry. Co., 57 Iowa 201.

But one tenant in common will not be allowed to maintain in his own name an action of trespass to try title for the benefit of all, if it appear that the action is speculative merely. Cromwell v. Holliday, 34 Tex. 463.

5. Moore v. Stewart (Tex.), 7 S. W. Rep. 771.

A tenant in common, not being in actual exclusive possession of land, who sets forth in his petition the extent of his interest, may, in trespass to try title, recover, as against a naked trespasser, the entire property. Nor does a different rule prevail since the adoption of Texas Rev. St. Sowers v. Peterson, 59 Tex. 216.

6. Ellis v. Culver, 2 Harr. (Del.) 129; Haskell v. Jones, 24 Me. 222; Smoot v. Wathen, 8 Mo. 522; Hill v. Gibbs, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 56.

tions for the recovery of its value for its conversion or appropriation;¹ but this rule does not seem to apply where the property was seized and sold under execution or other encumbrance,² or where the tenant suing was entitled to sole possession,³ and such tenants must be legal owners of the goods, and entitled to the possession of them in order to maintain the action.⁴ They must also join in trespass quare clausum fregit,⁵ but if one is entitled

1. Haskell v. Jones, 24 Me. 222; Little v. Harrington, 71 Mo. 390.

When certain heirs, claiming as tenants in common, bring an action of detinue, and it appears on the trial that one of the plaintiffs has been divested of his interest before suit, no recovery can be had. Lewis v. Night, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 223.

If one, having no interest in, or possession or control of a chattel, owned by two others in common, sell an undivided half of it to one of the owners, who thereupon carries it out of the state, the other tenant in common cannot maintain trover against such third person in consequence of such sale. Bates v. Marsh, 33 Vt. 122.

Surplus Moneys.—One tenant in common cannot sue separately from his cotenants for his separate share of the surplus in the hands of a mortgagee, after a sale by him, under a power in the mortgage. Clapp v. Pawtucket Institution (R. I.) 8 Atl. Rep. 697.

Release of Action.—Where two tenants in common of chattels join in an action for the conversion of the property, one cannot release or settle the action so as to deprive his cotenant of his remedy for the action. Gock v. Keneda, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 120.

2. One tenant in common of personal property may maintain trover against an officer for his undivided moiety of the property, when the officer has sold the whole property upon execution against the cotenant. White v. Morton, 22 Vt. 15; and see Keatles v. Christie, 47 Mich. 594.

3. The joint owner of a chattel entitled to the sole possession, which a stranger obtains, may maintain detinue for it, without his coproprietors joining in the action. Kirk v. Kirk, 3 Dana (Ky.) 53.

If two persons own chattels as tenants in common, one of them may maintain an action against a third person who appropriates the whole. Boobier v. Boobier, 39 Me. 406.

The bailee of property delivered to him by a joint owner rightfully in possession, will recover the whole value of the property, where the other joint owner has taken the whole property from him in an action of replevin. Russell v. Allen, 13 N. Y. 173.

Damages.—A tenant in common of a chattel, who sues for a conversion of the same, is entitled to recover damages for his share or interest only. Rolette v. Parker, 1 Ill. (Breese) 275.

One who has an undivided interest in a stock of goods seized and sold under a mortgage given by the other owner is damaged by the conversion to the extent of his interest. Keatles v. Christie, 47 Mich. 594.

It being by statute unlawful for an owner of an undivided interest in timber land to cut down or remove from the land any timber trees, without having first obtained consent of his cotenants, and, as against his non-consenting cotenants, his sale of lumber manufactured out of timber so cut or removed, passing no title to his vendee, held, in an action of trover against such vendee by a nonconsenting part owner, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the value of his interest in the lumber, as of the date of the defendant's conversion, with no allowance for the expense and labor of the trespassing vendor. Duff v. Bindley, 16 Fed. Rep. 178.

Defences.—Where a person bought standing grass from a tenant in common of the land who was in occupation of it, and cut and harvested the grass, held, that the fact that the co-tenant had forbidden payment was no defence for not paying the full contract price of the grass. Brown v. Wellington, 106 Mass. 318.

4. Haskill v. Jones, 24 Me. 222.

5. Austin v. Hall, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 286; Decker v. Livingston, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 479.

A and B were tenants in common of a horse, and while it was in possession of B it was attached by the creditors of B as his sole property, and while in the keeping of the agent of the officer who served the writ it was again at-to sole possession by agreement or otherwise, he may sue alone.¹

One joint tenant or tenant in common cannot maintain a suit for the recovery of the rent of the common property where the contract of rental was joint, unless his cotenants are joined with him,² but in New York and Minnesota the rule seems to be different;³ a tenant in common in possession may, however, let his share of the common property and bring an action for the recovery of the rent without joining his cotenant,⁴ and a lease of the tached by the same officer at the suit of C, who was also a creditor of B, by his express direction. Held, that A was not thereby enabled to maintain trespass against C. Welch v. Clark, 12 Vt. 681.

A separate possession by several tenants in common of the common property, but without the intention of entirely severing the tenancy, will not prevent their joining in an action for a trespass upon one divided portion. Johnson v. Goodwin, 27 Vt. 288.

1. A part owner of goods in possession of them, may recover all the damages resulting from a trespass upon the goods committed by a stranger. Hasbrouck v. Winkler, 48 N. J. L. 431.

One of several tenants in common of real estate, who is in exclusive possession, under an agreement by which the others release their interests and agree to convey to him, may maintain an action against a trespasser on the premises and recover for the whole of the damages done. Sparks v. Leavy, 1 Robt. (N. Y.) 530; 19 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 364.

Where the agents of the plaintiffs, who were tenants in common with others of certain lands, having no authority from the other tenants, sold to the defendant a quantity of timber standing upon the lands, which he cut and converted to his use, it was held, that an action of general indebitatus assumpsit would lie to recover the value of their interest in the timber. Kenniston v. Ham, 29 N. H. (9 Fost.) 501.

A coparcener holds per my and per tout; and any entry by a stranger is a trespass for which a coparcener may recover damages and costs. Roach v. Williams, 2 Treadw. (S. Car.) Const. 202.

2. Weinsteine v. Harrison, 66 Tex. 546; Gaines v. Buford, 1 Dana (Ky.) 481.

Tenants in common of land may sue jointly in assumpsit for money had and received to recover the rents. Price v. Pickett, 21 Ala. 741.

Where there is no express demise of land by tenants in common, they may join an action for use and occupation, and on the death of one of them after suit brought, the survivor may recover the entire damages for the use. Cobb v. Kidd, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 560.

Tenants in common may maintain a joint action for the rent due under a sealed lease of the joint estate, all the covenants in which are with them jointly, although by an agreement annexed to the lease, and made part thereof, it is stipulated that half of the rent shall be paid to each. Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray (Mass.) 256.

To a declaration for arrears of rent, stating that the plaintiff and S, deceased were seised in fee and demised to the defendant from year to year, rendering a certain rent to the plaintiff and S, which had fallen into arrears since the death of S, it is a good plea that the plaintiff and S were tenants in common. Burn v. Cambridge, 1 M. & Rob. (Eng.) 539.

Earnings of Vessel.—Where one of several tenants in common is bankrupt, his assignee must be joined with the other tenants in an action to recover the earnings of their vessel. If the assignee has not been appointed, the action may be in the name of the bankrupt and other owners till the assignee comes in. Stinson v. Fernald, 77 Me. 576.

3. In an avowry for rent which savors of the realty tenants in common ought not to join. Decker v. Livingston, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 479.

Tenants in common should distrain severally, but their joinder is a mere irregularity. Dutcher v. Culver, 24 Minn. 584.

4. Hayden v. Patterson, 51 Pa. St. 261.

The owner of an undivided portion of whole from one tenant in common who is in possession and payment of the rent to him is a bar to an action for the rent by the other tenants.¹

A misjoinder can usually be cured by amendment.² Such misjoinder or nonjoinder should be taken advantage of by a plea in abatement,³ and if not so pleaded the tenant may recover,⁴ but he can have judgment only for his share.⁵

2. Actions Against Tenants.—It is the rule of the common law that for matters respecting the common property, joint tenants and tenants in common should be sued jointly in trespass, trover or case, and if only one be sued he may plead the cotenancy in abatement;⁶ but it would be otherwise in a mere personal action of tort,⁷ or an action for a personal claim,⁸ and proceedings to a ground rent may maintain a separate action of covenant for his portion of the arrears. Cook v. Brightly, 46 Pa. St. 439.

Possession Under a Co-tenant.—A party put in possession or allowed to occupy a portion of premises by one tenant in common cannot be sued as a trespasser by another tenant in common without notice to quit or other act showing the termination of the licence or tenancy. Ord v. Chester, 18 Cal. 77.

In a suit by a joint owner of a flume to recover damages to it caused by opening a ditch above it, evidence of the consent of another joint owner to the opening of the ditch is relevant, and it is error to reject it. Crary v. Campbell, 24 Cal. 634.

1. Grossman v. Lauber, 29 Ind. 618.

2. See Weinsteine v. Harrison, 66 Tex. 546.

3. If a defendant neglects to avail himself of the nonjoinder of one or more joint tenants in an action of tort he cannot give it in evidence in reduction of damages. Zabriskie v. Smith, 13 N. Y. 322.

One of several tenants in common may sue separately in trover and the defendant may plead the nonjoinder in abatement; but if he fail so to plead he cannot take advantage of it on the trial nor by motion in arrest, but will be confined to giving in evidence the interest of the other tenants in common in mitigation of damages, and the plaintiff may proceed to recover his proportion or an aliquot interest in the common property. Starnes v. Quin, 6 Ga. 84.

4. Tripp v. Riley, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 333; Holmes v. Sprowl, 31 Me. 73.

But in North Carolina an action of detinue cannot be maintained by one of several tenants in common of a chattel, even though the defendant should fail to plead the nonjoinder of the others in abatement. The objection may be taken on the general issue or by demurrer or by motion in arrest of judgment. Cain v. Wright, 5 Jones (N. Car.) L. 282.

5. Tripp v. Riley, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 333.

If one joint tenant or tenant in common sues alone for a chattel and the defendant does not plead in abatement, the plaintiff may have judgment for his part, but not for the whole. Frazier v. Spear, 2 Bibb. (Ky.) 385.

If one tenant in common sue alone in trespass quare clausum fregit, and the defendant, instead of pleading the nonjoinder of the other tenant in abatement, plead to the action, the plaintiff will recover for his share of the damages. Webber v. Merrill, 34 N. H. 202.

In an action of tort by a tenant in common of personal property, when the injury is joint, unless the nonjoinder of the cotenants is pleaded in abatement, the objections can be taken only by way of an apportionment of damages. Holmes v. Sprowl, 31 Me. 73.

While all the tenants in common should be plaintiffs in an action for injuries to real estate, the non-joinder of one will not require a dismissal of the action, as the damages may be apportioned according to the respective interests of the plaintiffs and judgment rendered accordingly. Lee v. Turner (Tex.) 9 S. W. Rep. 149.

6. 4 Wait's Act. & Def. 182.

7. 4 Wait's Act. & Def. 182; Mitchell v. Tarbutt, 5 Term R. (Eng.) 649, 651.

8. Joint purchasers cannot be con-acquire the lands of cotenants for public use must be against them severally, and personal notice must be given to each.¹

Costs upon a judgment rendered in an action ex contractu against tenants in common are to be apportioned among the several judgment debtors in proportion to the shares which as amongst themselves they are respectively bound to contribute towards the debt,² and the joint or common property may, of course, be sold under an execution against all of the cotenants,³ but such a sale of the interest of one tenant does not divest the estate of the others.⁴

The property of joint tenants and tenants in common is, as a general rule, subject to levy under execution against one cotenant and the share of the execution debtor may be sold;⁵ but in Massachusetts and New Hampshire a different rule seems to have been adopted;⁶ a levy, however, by metes and bounds upon lands owned by the execution debtor as tenant in common with others, is void as to his cotenant,⁷ but is held good as to his undivided interest within such boundaries.⁸

XI. SEVERANCE OF THE RELATION.—The relation of joint tenants or tenants in common may be severed by the agreement of the cotenants, by acts on the part of the cotenants which amount to a destruction of the common ownership whether or not such acts may have been performed with an intent to sever the relation, and by the court in an action brought for that purpose.

demned in solido for the payment of the price of real estate. Lallande v. Wentz, 18 La. Ann. 289.

No action by firm creditors will lie against the representatives of a deceased tenant in common until the inability of the survivor to pay has been legally ascertained or clearly shown. Tracy v. Snyder, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 110.

1. Dyckman v. New York, 5 N. Y. (Seld.) 434.

2. Hayes v. Morrison, 38 N. H. 90.

3. See Southerland v. Cox, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 394.

4. Southerland v. Cox, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 394.

5. Blevins v. Baker, 11 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 291.

The sheriff has a right to seize and levy on personal property in which the debtor has a joint interest. Waldman v. Broder, 10 Cal. 378.

Levy How Made.—A levy against a tenant in common should be upon such an undivided part of the whole premises as the amount of the execution bore to the whole. Galusha v. Sinclear, 3 Vt. 394.

A and B, tenants in common of a lot of land, mortgaged the same to C to secure two promissory notes. Upon a judgment of foreclosure against B a fieri facias issued commanding the proper officers to levy on "the undivided half of the interest of B" in said land. Held, that this was sufficient although it did not show what the interest of B was as the presumption of law was that the shares of A and B were equal. Baker v. Shepherd, 37 Ga. 12.

6. A levy of execution on the undivided interest of a tenant in common in part of the land held in common is invalid. Melville v. Brown, 15 Mass. 82; Bartlet v. Harlow, 12 Mass. 348; Baldwin v. Whiting, 13 Mass. 57; Atkins v. Bean, 14 Mass. 404; Blossom v. Brightman, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 283; Peabody v. Minot, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 329.

As against his cotenant a levy upon the interest of a tenant in common in a part of the land held in common is void. Whitton v. Whitton, 38 N. H. 127.

7. Stamford v. Fullerton, 18 Me. 229.

An execution against a tenant in common cannot be extended upon the land so held by metes and bounds. Smith v. Knight, 20 N. H. 9.

8. Treon v. Emerick, 6 Ohio 391.

1. Severance by Agreement.—Cotenants may, of course, sever the relations existing between them by agreement at any time, and such severance is effected in cases of joint tenancy by mutual releases between them, while in cases of tenancy in common, words of inheritance are necessary to pass a fee,¹ a verbal division of lands cannot produce a severance of a joint tenancy created by grant,² but such a partition by tenants in common followed by possession in accordance with it and acts of exclusive ownership is, in some States, valid and binding.³

2. By Acts of the Parties.—A covenant to sell by a joint tenant severs the tenancy in equity, though not in law,⁴ and it is severed by a mortgage executed by a part of the cotenants,⁵ so a tenancy in common is severed by a sale by the one to the other,⁶ or by exclusive possession by one tenant of a part for the period fixed by the statute of limitations,⁷ and generally any acts or circumstances which evince an intention to abandon, or which effect a destruction of the common ownership will constitute a severance either of a joint tenancy or a tenancy in common.⁸

1. Rector v. Waugh, 17 Mo. 13.

A release to a tenant in common from his cotenants of their interests in a specific part of the land held in common confirms a conveyance previously made by him of that part of the land. Johnson v. Stevens, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 431.

2. Lacy v. Overton, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 440.

3. Wood v. Fleet, 36 N. Y. 499; Conklin v. Brown, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 265; s. c., 8 Abb. Pr. (U. S.) 345.

Where one tenant in common occupies a particular part of the common property by the agreement of the other tenants in common. It is so far a severance in fact as to permit him to maintain trespass against them for the same acts which would constitute trespass in a stranger, even though the length of such occupation would be insufficient to mature an absolute legal title in severalty. O'Hear v. De Goesbriand, 33 Vt. 593.

Words of Conveyance.—An agreement between tenants in common that each "shall have, collect, receive and enjoy" the ground rents of certain lots held in common "to him, his heirs and assigns forever, and clear from the other," was held not to sever the tenancy in common, there being no words of conveyance. Burton v. Morris, 3 Harr. (Del.) 269.

4. Hinds v. Terry, 1 Miss. (Walk.) 80; Brown v. Raindle, 3 Ves. Jr. (Eng.) 256.

5. Simpson v. Ammons, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 175.

6. See Earles v. Meaders, 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 248.

Where it was held that the sale by a tenant in common of one half of a tract of land by metes and bounds to the cotenant operates as a partition of the land, but does not divest the party so conveying of interest in the remaining half and a levy of an execution against one tenant in common upon the whole tract, so held, and a sale thereunder conveys to the purchaser a good title to the undivided interest of the execution debtor.

7. Gregg v. Blackmore, 10 Watts (Pa.) 192.

Where there is a severance in fact of a joint tenancy, and possession held for twenty years under it, the title will be a title of severalty to the extent of such separate possession. Drane v. Gregory, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 619.

8. See Gillett v. Gaffney, 3 Colo. 351; Davidson v. Heydon, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 459.

A last will does not, under the Pennsylvania act of 1705, sever a joint tenancy. Duncan v. Foorer, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 193.

Where two tenants in common together used the common property as a landing place for steamboats, and one made a deed of quitclaim of his interest therein to the other, "saving and excepting" to himself, his wife and their descendants, the use and privileges in

3. By Action.—At common law no common owner of property, except parceners, had a right to have partition thereof made against the will of his cotenant, and the right to have partition in that case gave rise to the name of parcenary,¹ but through the medium of equity, and by means of statutory enactment, the right to have partition made has become an incident to ownership in joint tenancy and tenancy in common in all of the United States and in England.² Such actions are local in their nature, the land which they then enjoyed, so long as the same should remain a steamboat landing. The fee was thereby conveyed to the grantee, and he could maintain ejectment, but the grantor and his descendants are entitled to the use of the property in common with the grantee and those holding under him for the purposes reserved in the deed. Jones v. De Lassus, 84 Mo. 541.

Recovery in trover by one joint tenant against the other has the effect of a partition of the whole of the joint property, if the defendant so desire; and in that case, if the plaintiff has exclusive possession of more than his share of the property, he cannot recover; though the defendant has exclusive possession of another portion amounts to an ouster of his cotenant and a conversion. Roddy v. Cox, 29 Ga. 298.

By the marriage settlement the intended husband and wife each covenanted to settle any personal estate which should, during the coverture, vest in the wife or in the husband in her right. At that time the wife was entitled, as one of two joint tenants, to personal estate in the expectancy on the death of a person who died during the coverture. Held, that the marriage and the covenant to settle each operated to sever the joint tenancy. Baillie v. Treharne, 17 Ch. D. (Eng.) 388; 50 L. J. Ch. 295; 44 (N. S.) L. T. 247; 29 W. R. 729.

Leasehold property was given by will to two sisters as joint tenants, and they mutually agreed to bequeath it in trust for each other for life, and for their nieces after the death of the survivor. One sister having died, the survivor made a will giving the property in a different manner. Held, that the agreement between the sisters, carried out by the making of the wills, severed the joint tenancy, and that the property must be administered on the footing of a tenancy in common. Wilford's Estate, in re Taylor v. Taylor, 11 Ch.

D. (Eng.) 267; 48 L. J., Ch. 243; 27 W. R. 455.

Personal Property—Sale.—The sale of the share of a joint owner of a cargo severs the tenancy, and the vendee may maintain trover against the other partners. Selden v. Hickock, 2 Cal. (N. Y.) 166.

The share of a tenant in common of chattels naturally severable, as grain, may be severed and seized by his creditor on attachment or execution, but if the property is exempt the debtor may recover the possession, or the value, as in other cases. [Following 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 333]. Newton v. Howe, 29 Wis. 531.

Income.—A joint tenancy in income is severed as to each instalment as it becomes payable, without actual payment. Walmsley v. Foxhall, 40 L. J., Ch. (Eng.) 28.

Division Between Tenants.—Tenants in common of a growing crop may make a partial division of it among themselves as it is gathered; and, when this is done, each holds in severalty the part allotted to him, while they remain tenants in common of the undivided residue. Gafford v. Stearns, 51 Ala. 434. Compare McKeithen v. Pratt, 53 Ala. 116.

Where personal property, severable in nature, in common bulk of the same quality, is owned by several as tenants in common, each tenant may sever and appropriate his share, if it can be determined by measurement or weight without the consent of the others, and sell or destroy it without being liable to them in an action for the conversion of the common property. Fobes v. Shatlock, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 568.

1. 1 Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 426.

2. The statute 31 Hen. VIII., ch. 1, and 32 Hen. VIII., ch. 32, provided for a compulsory process of partition by a writ or action at common law. This form of proceeding continued in England to be one of the forms by which partition could be affected until and must be brought in the county in which the land lies,¹ and can ordinarily be maintained only by a cotenant in possession or entitled to immediate possession,² who owns a freehold interest in his own right;³ and where the property cannot be divided it the statute of 3 & 4 Wm. IV, ch. 27, by which it was abolished and the statutes by which it was created have been re-enacted in most of the States. But in England and this country it has become practically obsolete many years ago. But there still is a power to compel partition which may be readily applied in both countries. In England it is done through chancery, and in some form or other the right of having partition made is incident to an ownership in joint tenancy as well as to estates in common. 1 Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 426.

For a compilation of the statutes or the several States relating to partition of joint estates and estates in common, see 1 Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 433, note.

A joint tenancy is severed by an order from the court for a division. Postell v. Skirving, 1 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 158.

Where there were several tenants in common, and one died leaving a will which was contested by his heirs, an act of assembly authorizing partition to be made, and directing all persons and corporations claiming under him, whether as heirs or devisees, to be made parties, and their purparks to be set out and conveyed to trustees, or such of them as may be entitled, or the proceeds, if sold, paid to such trustee giving security, was held to be constitutional; and the adverse claimants under the deceased cotenant were properly joined in the proceedings. Biddle v. Starr, 9 Pa. St. 461.

1. 1 Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 426.

2. 1 Washb. Real Prop. (5th ed.) 428.

A tenant in common in reversion cannot maintain a suit for partition. If a plaintiff has no title to maintain his suit at the time when the bill is filed he cannot carry on the suit by subsequently acquiring a title and amending the bill accordingly. Decree of the master of rolls affirmed. Evans v. Bageshaw, 8 Eq. 469; (Eng.) 5 Ch. 340.

A tenant in common, who has not been actually ousted, can maintain a petition for partition, although he may, for the sake of a remedy, have elected to consider himself disseised, and brought a writ of entry against his co-tenants, counting on a disseisin by him. Fisher v. Dewerson, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 544.

Where a tenant in common devised his half interest in the land to his son, appointed the cotenant executor, and directed that the personal property should remain on the land until the son became of age, to be used by the executor as before. Held, that this did not prevent the executor, as a cotenant, from selling his half of the land, or from obtaining a partition. Hunter v. Stoneburner, 92 Ill. 75.

By Purchaser at Execution Sale.—If one, shown to be owner of one ninth part of certain real estate, as tenant in common, be in possession, claiming also an additional eighteenth part, and his claim be acquiesced in by the other tenants in common, those facts are evidence that he was seised as tenant in common of three-eighteenths part; and a levy of execution on a judgment against him upon those three-eighteenths parts, will vest the seisin thereon in the judgment creditor, so as to entitle him to maintain a petition for partition, as against a tenant in common who has so admitted his interest. Smith v. Knight, 20 N. H. 9.

3. A father devised to his three sons certain lands as tenants in common during their natural lives, and after the death of either of them his share to go to his lawful issue, and if any of said sons should die without issue his share to go to the survivor of them, or if any of them have deceased, their lawful issue to have the share that would have gone to their father if living. Held, that no partition could be made among the sons except of their present interest or estate in the lands. Reeves v. Reeves, 6 N. J. Eq. (2 Hals.) 156.

Illegal Consideration.—Where one of two tenants in common conveyed his interest, and his vendee filed a petition for partition, held, that the cotenant could not resist on the ground that the consideration of the deed was in part an agreement to compound a felony, Sewell v. Holland, 61 Ga. 608.

Trust Estates.—Land purchased for the purpose of a parsonage and glebe, for the joint benefit of five congregations, is devoted to a charitable use may be sold under direction of the court and a division made of the proceeds.¹

and one of the congregations cannot sue for partition without the consent of the others, especially where the property is vested in trustees for the benefit of the "ministerial charge," such a trust being an active one. Appeal of Latshaw et al. (Pa.), 15 Atl. Rep. 676.

Personal Property.—The relation of joint purchasers of plantation, live stock and farming utensils, whereon the vendor retains a lien for unpaid instalments, is that of tenants in common rather than partners; but each is not entitled to a partition for his portion in severalty until completion of the contract of purchase. Abernathy v. Smith, 57 Ala. 359.

But in Illinois one tenant in common may sue out a writ of partition, even though there be a subsisting life estate in another in the premises, notwithstanding the objection of the owner of the life estate; and in case partition cannot be made, he may obtain an order for the sale of the whole of the premises, subject to the life estate. Hilliard v. Scoville, 52 Ill. 449.

1. Where a joint tenancy in a tract of land has been created by deed, the ordinary has the power, under the South Carolina act of 1824, to order the sale of the share of the deceased tenant for the purpose of division among those interested. Brennan v. Hill, Dudley (S. Car.) 342.

Whenever the estate of tenants in common is practically incapable of division by assigning to each owner thereof his equal portion in severalty, he cannot be compelled by force of the provisions of § 25, ch. 228, Gen. Stat. New Hampshire, either to sell his own share or purchase that of his cotenant; but, in such a case, resort may be had to a court of equity, which has power to compel a sale of the entire estate, and order distribution of its proceeds upon equitable principles. Barney v. Leeds, 54 N. H. 128.

Under Virginia Stat. 1819, authorizing the sale of lands jointly, held, where the interest of each owner is less than $300, if the value of each interest in the land divided is less than that sum, the court may order a sale thereof, though the estimated value of the whole land would give to each joint owner more than $300. Parker v. McCoy, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 594.

INDEX.

Inns and Inn Keepers, 3

- Acts of parties within the inn, 56
- Acts of parties without the inn, 57
- Animals, injuries to, 64
- Baggage of guest, 68
- Bailees, inn keepers as, 99
- Ball at inn, party attending, 21
- Boarders distinguished from guests, 18
- Boarding house, 6
- Boarding house, is not, 10
- Boarding house, keeper of, 8
- Boarding house keepers, liability of, 100
- Callers upon guests, 36
- Compensation, 37
- Contributory negligence of guest, 63, 80
- Dead property left by guest, 68
- Definition, 4
- Dining room, slipping into, 28
- Disorderly guests, 38
- Distinguished from similar establishments, 6
- Door, failure to lock, 83
- Duties in general, 32
- Duty to receive guests, 32
- English inn keepers' act, 95
- Fire, enactments concerning loss by, 92
- Fire, loss by accidental, 63
- Guests, disorderly, 38
- Guests distinguished from boarders, 18
- Guests, fixed residence, 17
- Guests, personal presence of, 23
- Guests, scope of term, 13
- Guests, term restricted to travellers, 15
- Guests, who are, 12
- Goods, assuming special custody of, 86
- Goods for sale, enactments concerning, 93
- Goods for sale, showing of, 23.
- Goods kept for show and sale, 71
- Goods, knowledge of ownership, 43
- Goods, obligation to receive, 45
- Goods, ordering to particular room, 87
- Horse, leaving at inn, 23, 24
- Hotel bill of another, 37
- Hotel, definition of, 5
- Inn keeper, definition of, 7
- Inn precincts, 72
- Insufficiency of merely leaving, 26

Inns and Inn Keepers—Continued.

- Liability compared with common carrier, 52
- Liability, duration of, 75
- Liability, exoneration by showing extreme care, 62
- Liability, extraordinary, of inn keeper, 51
- Liability for baggage, 68
- Liability for fire, 63
- Liability for goods kept for show and sale, 71
- Liability for goods of departing guest, 76
- Liability for injuries to animals, 64
- Liability for valuables, 68
- Liability, limitation by contract, 87
- Liability, limitation by custom or usage, 89
- Liability, limitation by statute, 89
- Liability limited to guests, 12
- Liability of inn keeper, 49
- Liability of inn keepers as insurers, 58
- Liability of inn keepers, prima facie, 60
- Liability, scope of, 53
- Liability, statutory notice limiting, 93
- Liability, to what articles attaches, 66
- Liability, valuables covered by statutes limiting, 96
- Lien, 37
- Lien, articles recovered by, 45
- Lien, enforcement of, 46
- Lien, general and special, 46
- Lien limited to guests, 12
- Lien of boarding house keeper, 49
- Lien of inn keeper, 38
- Lien on third person's goods, 41
- Lien, waiver of, 47
- Liquor, purchasing, 20
- Lodging house is not, 10
- Lodging house, keeper of, 8
- Negligence of inn keeper, 77
- Notice, actual, 94
- Notice limiting liability, 93
- Obnoxious person, removal of, 35
- Obnoxious visitors, 35
- Personal injuries, 50
- Position or location, change of, 17
- Price, fixing, 13
- Property of guest on premises, 31

Inns and Inn Keepers—Continued.

- Refreshment room, entering, 20
- Relation, continuance of, 28
- Relation of host and guest, creation of, 27
- Relation, termination of, 30
- Remedies concerning inn keepers, 101
- Rights of inn keeper, 37
- Room, posting notice in, 88
- Special capacity, acting in, 9
- Stay, length of, 13
- Stay, length of, immaterial, 19
- Stay, object of, 22
- Taverns, definition of, 5
- Temporary refreshment, 19
- Tender of price, 37
- Theft by fellow guest, 83
- Travellers, occasionally entertaining, 8
- Travellers, who are, 17
- Unreasonable demands, 35
- Valuables covered by statutes limiting liability, 96
- Valuables, responsibility for, 68
- Visitors, 20
- Who are not, 9

Insanity, 105

- Accounts, 130
- Actions against lunatics or their committees, 127
- Actions by lunatics or their committees, 124
- Committees, 120
- Confinement of persons, 112
- Contract of insurance, insanity as effecting, 137
- Contracts of insane persons, 132
- Crime, insanity as defence, 167
- Deeds of insane grantors, 146
- Definition, 105.
- Delusions, 107
- Estate, management of, 121
- Evidence, 158
- Expert witness, 163
- Guardians, 120
- Idiots, 105
- Imbecility, 111
- Inquisition, 115
- Insane persons as, 144
- Insurance, insanity as effecting contract, 137
- Jurisdiction over, 114
- Lucid interval, 112
- Lunatics, 105
- Marriage, insanity as effecting, 140
- Moral insanity, 112
- Non compos mentis, 106
- Notice of inquisition, 115
- Partnership, insanity as effecting, 142
- Poor district, power of insane person to choose settlement, 166
- Promissory notes made by insane persons, 143

Insanity—Continued.

- Testamentary capacity, 151
- Torts of insane persons, 144
- Insolvency, 167
 - Assets, distribution of, 218
 - Assignees, 184
 - Assignment, 177
 - Assignments, void, 209
 - Assignor, 200
 - Attachments existing, 180
 - Business of assignor continuing, 193
 - Claims that may be proved, 205
 - Commissioners, 184
 - Composition of creditors, 200
 - Congress, power to pass insolvent laws, 173
 - Constitutionality of State insolvent laws, 173
 - Corporations, 204
 - Creditors, rights of, 196
 - Definition, 168
 - Discharge, 224
 - Exemptions, 233
 - Fraudulent conveyances, 208
 - Insolvent, the, 200
 - Nonresident, 200
 - Partnership, 202
 - Petition for, 182
 - Preference, 212
 - State insolvency laws, extra-territorial effect of, 176
 - Taxes and debts due State, 220
 - Trustees, 184
 - U. S. bankrupt laws effect upon State laws, 176
 - What constitutes generally, 171
- Instructions, 236
 - Charge, elements of the, 247
 - Definition, 237
 - Duty of judge in instructing, 251
 - Evidence, admissibility of, 240
 - Exceptions to instructions, 265
 - Law must be upon the, 238
 - Misdirection, 266
 - Negligence, 242
 - New trial, when misdirection grounds for, 266
 - Parol contracts, construction of, 242
 - Pleadings, construction of, 240
 - Specific instructions, 258
 - Verdict, when instructions may be given to return, 243
 - Words and phrases, definition of, 242
 - Written instructions, 261
 - Written instruments, construction of,
241
 - Written laws, construction of, 242
- Insurable interest. See Insurance.
- Insurance, 278
 - Agents, 320
 - Concealment, 302
 - Contracts of, 280
 - Definitions, 280

Insurance—Continued.

- Estoppel, 336
- Fraud, 347
- Instruction, 286
- Insurable interest, 312
- Loss and its adjustment, 345
- Mistakes and omissions of agent, 331
- Premium, 304
- Reinsurance, 343
- Remedies, 345
- Representations, 296
- Risk, 343
- Waiver, 336
- Warranties, 290
- Warranty of correct and temperate habit, 296

Insurrection, 356

- Commercial intercourse, restraint of, 361
- Confiscation of property, 359
- Courts of justice, denial of, 363
- Definition, 356
- Insurgents, status of, 356
- Legislative acts held void, 364
- Means employed to protect and enforce rights, 365
- Means employed to suppress, 358
- Military power, 358.

Intent, 366

- Contract, intention of parties, 368
- Criminal intent, 372
- Definition, 366
- Domicil animus manendi, 372
- Fixtures, intent as to, 376
- Legislative intent, 366
- Presumption of, 377
- Proof of, 376
- Testator, intention of, 372

Interest, 379

- Accounts, 384
- Annuities, 387
- Application of payments, 410
- Compound interest, 407
- Computation, 402
- Contracts for, 380
- Damages for default in payment of debt, 383
- Damages for use or benefit of another's money, 395
- Debt, damages for default in payment, 383
- Decrees, 391
- Definition, 379
- Funds held in trust, 398
- General principles, 379
- Judgments, 391
- Law of place, 417
- Legacies, 387
- Maturity, after, 415
- Money paid by mistake, 398
- Money wrongfully withheld, 397
- Municipal warrants, 388

Interest—Continued.

- Purchase money, 389
- Rate, 411
- Rents in arrears, 387
- Rewards, 391
- Taxes, 388
- Verdicts, 391
- Writing, obligations in, 390
- Interfering patents. See Patents.
- Interlineations. See Alteration of Instruments; Ambiguity.
- Internal Improvements. See Improvements.
- Internal Revenue. See Revenue Laws.
- International law, 431
 - Blockades, 468
 - Captures by public vessels, 484
 - Captures on navigable waters, 478
 - Communications between belligerents, 474
 - Contraband of war, 476
 - Declaration of war, 455
 - Definition, 431
 - Division, 432
 - Embargo laws, 450
 - International intercourse, 442
 - Neutral nations in war, 466
 - Neutrality laws, 449
 - Nonintercourse laws, 452
 - Offences against nations, 491
 - Piracy, 491
 - Prize, 484
 - Right of search, 467
 - Slave trading, 492
 - Sources of, 438
 - Sovereignty, 439
 - Trade licence, 453
 - Treaties, 445
 - Treaty of peace, 490
- Interpleader, 494
 - Bill in nature of interpleader, 506
 - Circumstances, 499
 - Definition, 494
 - Jurisdiction, 494
 - Parties, 496
 - Practice, 502
- Interpretation, 507
 - Admissibility, effect of, 509
 - Condition of parties, 512
 - Court, province of, 518
 - Definition, 507
 - Domicil, 520
 - Evidence, 508
 - Intention of parties, 511
 - Interpretation put upon instrument by parties themselves, 518
 - Jury, province of, 518
 - Law of the land, 510
 - Place of contract, 520
 - Place of performance, 520
 - Place of trial, 520
 - Punctuation, 521
 - Rules of, 522

Interpretation—Continued.

- Whole writing to be considered, 513
- Words are to be as understood, 515
- Words construed against party using, 517
- Words requiring special meaning, 515
- Written words control printed, 516

Interpreter, 523

- Appointment, 523
- Character may be impeached, 525
- Competency, 525
- Definition, 523
- Judicial power, has not, 526
- Oath, translation must be under, 524
- Privileged communications, 526
- Witness, not agent of 525

Interrogatories, 526

- Amendment of bill, 530
- Averments necessary as basis, 528
- Bad in part, 536
- Compelling answers, 535
- Default, 535
- Definition, 526
- Demurrer in cases of, 530
- Equity, 527
- Evasive answer, 537
- Filing and serving, 531
- Law, at 534
- Matter relating to offence, 534
- Subject matter, 534
- Substantial answer, 537
- Vague or irrelevant, 536
- Who may be interrogated, 532

Interstate commerce, 539

- Congress, power of, 540
- Definition, 539
- Interstate commerce acts, 559
- States, restriction upon power, 548

Intestate laws. See Statutes of Distribution.

Intervention. See Interpleader.

Intimidations. See Duress; Elections; Threats.

Intoxicating Drinks. See Intoxicating Liquors.

Intoxicating liquors, 567

- Action, right to be informed as to nature, 598
- Adulteration, 739
- Alcohol, 579
- Ale, 578
- Appeal, 772
- Articles of food, 578
- Bar by former prosecution, 758
- Beer, 579
- Bill of particulars, 770
- Bitters, 574
- Cider, 581
- Civil damages, 772
- Commerce, relation of, 603
- Compensation, 602
- Complaint, 756

Intoxicating Liquors—Continued.

- Cordials, 573
- Decoctions, 572
- Definition, 571
- Devices and evasions, 687
- Discrimination, illegal, 605
- Disorderly conduct, 750
- Due process of law, 595
- Drug clerks, 717
- Druggist, sale by, 732
- Essences, 573
- Evidence, 770
- Evidence, statutes relating to, 599
- Examination before committing magistrate, 947
- Exporting, 740
- Ex post facto laws, 593
- Federal supervision and control, 587
- Gin, 581
- Giving away, 752
- Importing, 740
- Indictment, 756
- Indictment, description of liquors and place of sale, 765
- Indictment, form and requisites, 758
- Informers, sale to, 753
- Judgment, 770
- Jurisdiction, 756
- Jury, right to trial by, 597
- Label, 754
- Licence, 634
- Licence, action on bond, 679
- Licence, authority to sell by agent, 647
- Licence by county and town, 635
- Licence, designation of place or building, 639
- Licence fee in taxes, 667
- Licence, form and condition, 638
- Licence granted to partners and third persons, 646
- Licence, granting of, 648
- Licence, inability to obtain, 636
- Licence, necessity of obtaining, 635
- Licence, number of, 635
- Licence, place of sale authorized by, 644
- Licence, refusal of, 636
- Licence, revocation of 674
- Licence, rights or privileges included in, 643
- Licence, right to sell before payment of money or giving bond or issuance of, 637
- Licence, sale without, 683
- Licence taking out, 641
- Licence, term of duration, 643
- Licence to sell near school, 647
- Licence, validity and effect of, 639
- Licence, validity and effect of assignment and transfer, 647
- Licence, written and parol, 638
- Licencing, regulation as to, 591

Intoxicating Liquors—Continued.

Limitation, 758
 Liquors, what are, 572
 Local option, 614
 Manufacture, keeping statement and making report of, 755
 Medicines, 574
 Minors, power to prohibit sales to, 590
 Minors, sale to, 718
 Municipal control, 614
 Nuisance, 747
 Nuisance, power to authorize abatement, 591
 Offences and proceedings, 683
 Ownership, power to prohibit, 590
 Pop, 582
 Porter, 582
 Presumptions, 599
 Prohibited times and hours, 752
 Property rights, 602
 Prosecutor, 758
 Punishment, 771
 Retrospective laws, 593
 Right and property in liquors, 585
 Rum, 582
 Sale by agent or servant, 711
 Sale by and liability of particular persons, 711
 Sale in particular place, 708
 Sale, joint and several, 685
 Sale, keeping for unlawful, 746
 Sale, keeping place for illegal, 747
 Sale, keeping statement and making report of, 755
 Sale on prohibited days, 689
 Sale, power to prohibit, 590
 Sale to be drank on premises contrary to licence, 750
 Sale to informer, 753
 Sale to prohibited persons, 694
 Sale, what constitutes, 684
 Sales, number of, or violations necessary to constitute offence, 686
 Screen law, 753
 Search and seizure, 601
 Sentence, 771
 Search and seizure, 772
 Social clubs, 727
 State regulation and control, 587
 Statutes, constitutionality of, 592
 Statutes, construction of, 610
 Statutes, defective title, 593
 Statutes, entitling, 593
 Statutes, operation and effect of, 611
 Statutes prescribing remedy, 594
 Statutes relating to evidence, 599
 Statutes, requirements as to meaning, 594
 Statutes, repeal of, 612
 Statutes violative of constitutional prohibitions, 609
 Sunday, power to prohibit sales on, 590

Intoxicating Liquors—Continued.

Supervision and control of manufacture and sale, 583
 Taxation, 607
 Taxing, regulation as to, 591
 Tinctures, 573
 Transportation, illegal, 740
 Trial, 756, 770
 U. S. licence does not protect seller, 755
 Venue, 758
 Verdict, 770
 Whisky, 582
 Wines, 582
 Intoxication as a defence to contracts, 773
 Express contracts, 773
 Equity, when will give relief, 778
 Implied contracts, 777
 Invention, 780
 Amount of invention employed in contriving device unimportant, 805
 Definition, 781
 Evidence of invention, result as, 801
 Joint invention, 809
 Mechanic constructing machine not inventor, 811
 Mechanical skill, 781
 Mechanical skill, means of distinguishing, 783
 Mechanical skill not patentable, 782
 Mechanical skill, test to distinguish invention from, 781
 Patentable discovery, distinction between invention and, 806
 Suggestion, 810
 Investment, 813
 Changing investments, 823
 Definition, 814
 Public funds, 821
 Real securities, 822
 Trustees, liabilities of, 833
 Trust funds, 814
 Trust funds as effected by trust instrument, 830
 Trust funds regulated by court, 826
 Trust funds regulated by statute, 824
 Irrigation, 846
 American doctrine, 851
 Coproprietor, rights of, 846
 Definition, 846
 English doctrine, 849
 French law, 851
 Injurious diminution, 854
 Natural and artificial wants, 857
 Pacific coast doctrine, 852
 Present law of, 847
 Reasonable use, 858
 Riparian proprietors and appropriators, 861
 Surplus, return of, 861
 Total consumption, 860

Islands, 865

Minerals under island, 867

Statutes, 866

Title to, 865

U. S., belonging to, 866

Unnavigable waters, 868

Issue, 868

Appointment, effect of power of, 917

Before he has any, 902

Before marriage and without issue,

Children, 872 [909]

Default, after, 894

Definition, 868

Direction to pay money, 915

Dying under twenty-one and without issue, 909

Dying without, 891, 899

Dying without issue in lifetime of person living at testator's decease, 912

Dying without issue referred to death in lifetime of testator, 919

Failure of testator's own, 917

Failure, where it is definite, 924

Gift over, 906, 911, 912, 915, 916

Issue alive, surviving or who shall attain twenty-one, 902Limitation, effect of over upon preceding limitation, 921

Limitations, effect of alternative, 918

Parent, correlative with, 875

Peculiar expressions, force of, 872

Perishable goods, bequest of, 916

Personal trust, 915

Purchase or limitation, whether a word of, 876

Statutory charges, 918

Then, effect of the word, 908

Unmarried, 909

Will, 877

Without children, 902

Without having issue, 902

Without leaving issue, 904

Without leaving issue at time of death, 906

Without leaving issue behind him, 904

Jail. See PrisonsJail liberties. See Prisons.

Jeopardy, 926

Codefendant, jeopardy by, 957

Court of competent jurisdiction, 928

Defence, how made, 964

Definition, 926

Demurrer to indictment, 948

Essential elements, 928

Examination before committee and magistrate, 947

Examination before grand jury, 948

Indictment or information, sufficient, 930

Issue joined, 932

Jurisdiction, offences against different, 958Jeopardy—Continued.

Jury charged with a prisoner, 933

Jury, consent to discharge, 959

Jury, discharge of, 950

Jury, illegal, 933

Jury, legal, 933

Nolle prosequi, entry of, 949

Plea of guilty, 949

Plea, where sustained, 947

Same offence, 934

To what it applies, 927

Verdict, rendition of, 956

Waiver, 959

Jettison, 970

Consultation, 976

Deck cargo, 976

Definition, 970

General average as a basis of, 976

Kinds of, 970

Order, 976

Ownership of property, 976

When justifiable, 972

Who may jettison, 975

Joinder, 986

Action in same right, 987

Actions against executors or administrators, 1015^pActions at law and in equity, 1015^dActions by and against assignees, guardians, partners, etc., 1015^wActions by and against husband and wife, 1015^sActions by executor or administrators, 1015^mActions ex contractu and ex delicto, 1015^cActions in different rights, 1015^mActions on bonds and recognizances, 1015^kCode provisions, effect of, 1015^x

Codes, 1000

Consolidation of actions, 1015^yCounties, 1015^{z12}

Definition, 986

Demurrer, 1015^{z12}

Different causes of action, 990

Foreclosure of liens, 1010

Issue, 1015^{z12}Louisiana, practice in, 1015^{z8}Misjoinder, remedy for, 1015^{z3}Misjoinder under the codes, 1015^{z4}

Parties, by and against different, 1014

Personal actions at common law, 990

Personalty, recovery of, 1008

Pleas, 1015^{z3}

Same cause in different counts, 987

Separate statements, 1015^kStatutory and common law actions, 1015^lStatutory changes in forms of action,
996When compulsory, 1015^yWhen permitted, 1015^y

Joint executors and administrators. 1016
 Actions by and against, 1033
 Act of one is act of all, 1016
 Co-executors not liable to each other, 1022.
 Commissions, division of, 1035
 Constitute but one person, 1016
 Survivorship, 1035
 Joint stock companies, 1036
 Actions by and against, 1051
 Common law, 1041
 Corporation distinguished from, 1039.
 Definition, 1036
 Dissolution, 1055
 Dissolution, acts amounting to, 1056.
 English statutes, 1042
 Jurisdiction, foreign, 1054
 Liability of members, 1048
 Officers, 1050
 Officers, responsibility of company for, 1050
 Officers, responsibility of company to, 1051
 Partnership, distinguished from, 1038
 Powers of members, 1048
 Rights of members, 1048
 Shares, transfer of, 1055
 Statutes in U. S., 1043
 Tenants in common, 1059
 Joint tenants, 1057
 Actions, 1122
 Actions against tenants, 1141
 Actions between tenants and third parties, 1135
 Adverse possession, 1112
 Agreements concerning common property, 1095
 Conveyance by one of specific parts, 1092
 Creation of tenancy, 1059
 Disseisin, 1113.
 Dower, 1087
 Duties, 1098
 Entry of one, 1078
 Equitable actions, 1130
 Improvements, 1104
 Incidents, 1076
 Incumbrances, 1109
 Leasing common property, 1094
 Liabilities, 1098
 Licencing acts upon common property, 1095
 Limitations, statute of, 1112
 Nature, 1076
 Ouster, 1113
 Possession of one, 1078
 Power, 1087
 Purchase money, 1111
 Rents and profits, 1098
 Repairs, 1104
 Rights, 1087
 Severance by action, 1144

Joint Tenants—Continued.
 Severance by acts of parties, 1143
 Severance by agreement, 1143
 Severance of the relation, 1142
 Shares, equality of, 1086
 Sharing burdens and losses, 1107
 Survivorship, 1077
 Taxes, 1109
 Tenants in common, 1058, 1062
 Title by adverse possession, 1120
 Title, purchase of outstanding, 1082.
 What may be held in common, 1068.
 Who are, 1069
 Words and Phrases.
 And, 366
 Bequest, 374
 Cattle, 370
 Children, 374
 Corn, 370
 Devise, 374
 Dower, 374
 Each, 370
 Family, 374
 Heirs, 374
 Heirs at law, 373
 Injury, 1
 Inland, 1
 Inland navigation, 1
 Inland waters, 2
 Inlet, 2
 Inmate, 2
 Innocent conveyances, 3
 Innuendo, 104
 Inquest of office, 104
 Inspection, 234
 Inspection laws, 234
 Instant, 236
 Instantly, 236
 Instead of, 236
 Institution, 236
 Instrument, 275
 Insufficiency, 276
 Insufficient, 276
 Insufficient evidence, 277
 Insulting, 277
 Insulting language, 277
 Insured, 355
 Insurgent, 355
 Intemperance, 365
 Intemperate, 365
 Intent, 365
 Intention, 378
 Intentionally, 378
 Intercourse, 379
 Interdiction, 379
 Interested, 422
 Interfere, 425
 Interim, 426
 Interior, 426
 Interlocutory, 427
 Intermeddle, 429
 Intermediate, 430
 Intermediate orders, 430

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Intermediate tolls, 430
 Internal, 430
 Interpose, 506
 Interpret, 507
 Interpretation of voters, 566
 Interrupt, 538
 Interruption, 538
 Intersect, 538
 Interval, 565
 Intervene, 565
 Intervening damages, 565
 Intestate, 565
 Intimate, 565
 Into, 566
 Intoxicated, 566
 Intrinsic, 779
 Intrusion, 779
 Intrude, 779
 Intrusion, 779
 Invalid, 780
 Invasion, 780
 Inveigle, 780
 Inventory, 812
 Investigate, 812
 Investigation, 812
 Investiture, 812
 Invoice, 104

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Involuntary, 843
 Involve, 843
 I O U, 843
 Irregularity, 843
 Irrelevant, 845
 Irreparable injury, 845
 Irresistible violence, 845
 Item, 925
 Jeofails, 926
 Jewel, 984
 Jewelry, 984
 Jetsam, 970
 Job, 985
 Jobber, 986
 Jockey, 986
 Legal heirs, 374
 May, 366
 Next of kin, 374
 North, 373
 Or, 366
 Patterns, 370
 Person, 366
 Property, 373
 Raise, 370
 Require, 370
 Sound order, 370
 Support, 370

Exc. 1154
✓

